Further, hence I gather, that pardon and reſtitution, is not to be denied to them that fall, after their conuerſion, as though there were no place for repentance, or hope of ſaluation. For Paul would haue ſuch to be reſtored, as are ouertaken by any ſin, except they be incorrigible, and incurable. Therefore the Nouatians, doe erre, in teaching, that ſinnes committed after a mans conuerſion, are vnpardonable, conſidering there is hope in ſtore, for great & hainous ſinners. For though a man in perſecution denie Chriſt, and renounce his religion, yet hee may be reſtored, and repent as Peter did. Luk.22.32. (for that ſaying of Chriſt, Whoſoeuer ſhall denie me before men, him will I denie before my Father which is in heauen, Matth.10.33. is meant onely of a totall, and finall deniall.) Though a man be a grieuous Idolater, a ſorcerer, and giuen to witchcraft, yet he may be reſtored and finde mercie as Manaſſes did, 2.Chron.33. Though a man bee defiled and polluted with ſinnes againſt nature, yet hee may bee cleanſed and waſhed from them. Some among the Corinthians were fornicators, adulterers, wantons, buggerers, but yet were waſhed, ſanctified, iuſtified. 1.Cor.6.9.11. It may be ſaid, that it is impoſſible, that they which once haue beene inlightned, and taſted of the heauenly gift, &c. if they fall away, ſhould bee renewed againe by repentance. Heb.6.4.5.6. Anſw. That text is to be vnderſtood of a vniuerſall, totall, and finall apoſtaſie. And that text, Heb. 10.26. If we ſinne willingly, after we haue receiued the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more ſacrifice for ſinne, is to be vnderſtood, of a wilfull, and malitious renouncing of the knowne truth, as the circumſtances of the place, and collation of it with others, doe manifeſtly euict. Againe, if all ſinne committed voluntarily and willingly were ſimply inexpiable, euery mans caſe were damnable. And though the word ἑκουσίως ſignifie willingly as Ariſtotle takes it, Eth. lib. 3. cap. 2. yet ſometime it ſignifieth, ſpitefully and malitiouſly, as it is vſed by the Seuenty, Exod. 21.13,14. Obiect. παραπτώματα, or delicta, may be reſtored, not ἁμαρτήματα, or peccata. Anſw. They are vſed indifferently one for the other; as might be ſhewed, if it were needfull. But it is a confeſſed truth, auouched by Anſelme, and others, vpon this text. Laſtly, whereas the Apoſtle ſpeaketh indefinitely; if any man be ouertaken, reſtore him. I gather, that the gifts and graces of God, beſtowed vpon vs, ought to bee vſed in reſtoring thoſe that are fallen, without reſpect of perſons: for herein ſpirituall men are debters, to the wiſe, and fooliſh, as the Apoſtle ſaith of himſelfe, Rom.1.14.

The third thing to bee conſidered, is, the perſons that are to reſtore their brethren, laid downe in theſe words, ye that are ſpirituall.

Spirituall men are oppoſed to carnall, as 1. Cor.3.1. I could not ſpeake vnto you brethren, as vnto ſpirituall men, but as vnto carnall: and naturall men, 1.Cor.2.14.15. The naturall man perceiueth not the things of the ſpirit of God: but hee that is ſpirituall diſcerneth all things. Now carnall and naturall men, are of two ſorts: either they are ſuch as are altogether fleſhly, deſtitute of grace and godlineſſe, beeing in their pure (or rather corrupt) naturals, of whome S. Paul ſaith, They that are of the fleſh, ſauour the things of the fleſh. Rom. 8.5. and verſe the 8. They that are in the fleſh cannot pleaſe God. Or ſuch as are regenerate, yet are weake, as being but babes in Chriſt, the fleſh beeing farre ſtronger in them, then the ſpirit: ſuch were moſt in the Church of Corinth: for Paul ſaith, he could not ſpeake vnto them, as vnto ſpirituall men, but as vnto carnall, 1.Cor.3.1. for yet ye are carnall, for when there is among you enuying, are ye not carnall? verſ.4. So Spirituall men, oppoſed to carnall, are of two ſorts. Firſt, thoſe that haue receiued the ſpirit of regeneration, and doe beginne to ſauour the thinges of the ſpirit, Rom.8. Secondly, thoſe that haue receiued a greater portion of the ſpirit, and a greater meaſure of ſpirituall graces, of whome Paul ſpeakes, 1.Corinth.14.37. If any thinke himſelfe to be a Prophet or ſpirituall---. Of the latter, the wordes are to bee vnderſtood, and by them hee meaneth thoſe, whome hee called perfect men, Philip.3.13. Heb.5.4. Now ſpirituall men are more fitte to reſtore thoſe that are fallen, then any other. Firſt, becauſe they are leſſe tainted with ſinne then others, and ſo may more freely reproue. Secondly, becauſe they haue more knowledge & loue, both knowing how to reſtore, and willing to do it with greater compaſſion, and fellow-feeling. He that muſt ſpeake in ſeaſon a word to the wearie, muſt haue a tongue of the learned, Iſa.50.4. When Peter is conuerted, he muſt ſtrengthen his brethren, Luk.22.32. Hence it follows, the more excellent gifts any man hath receiued, the more hee is bound to bee ſeruiceable vnto others. For if ſpirituall men muſt reſtore them that are fallen, the more a man is indued with ſpirituall graces, the more hee ought to reſtore. For the Apoſtle ſaith, As euery man hath receiued a gift, ſo let him miniſter it vnto others, 1.Pet.4.10. This duty was practiſed by our Sauior Chriſt, Ioh.13.12. And it meetes with the ſinne of many, who hauing receiued great gifts and graces of the Spirit, are ſo farre from reſtoring thoſe that ſinne againſt them, that they ſcorne and diſdaine to ſpeake vnto them: for if they be at variance with any, the common ſaying is, I am as good a man as hee, why ſhould I goe to him? let him come to mee, &c. Theſe men are farre vnlike Abraham, who though hee exceeded Lot, as well in outward giftes, as in inward graces; yet ſtood not vpon his priuiledge, but was the firſt man in making the league of vnitie, Geneſis 13.8. Further, in that ſpirituall men muſt reſtore their brethren, wee learne that we haue not the gifts of God beſtowed vpon vs, for our ſelues alone, but for the good of others: the poſſeſſion of them belongs to vs, the vſe of them to others. Laſtly, in that ſpirituall men, eſpecially the holy men of God, and miniſters of his word, are the Lords ſurgeons, to bind vp the broken, and raiſe thoſe that are fallen: as alſo his phyſitians, to reſtore thoſe that are in a ſpirituall conſumption of grace: we ought to make great account of them, and haue them in ſingular loue, for their worke ſake, 1.Theſſ.5.19. For if we muſt honour the bodily phyſitian (as Syracides ſaith) Eccl.38.1. who cureth but the diſeaſes of the body: how much more ought we to honour ſpirituall Phyſitians, which cure the ſpirituall maladies of our ſoules?

The fourth and laſt point is, the manner how wee muſt reſtore, laid downe in theſe

A words, in the ſpirit of meekeneſſe.

Meekneſſe is, the ſetling, or quieting of the minde, freeing it from perturbation, eſpecially in repreſſing the reuengefull affection. A meeke and quiet ſpirit are ioyned together, 1.Pet.3.4. A notable example hereof we haue in Moſes, who beeing prouoked, in ſtead of anger, ſhewed meekneſſe. It further makes a man to yeeld of his right, and not to proſecute the matter in rigour and extremity, and ſo it is oppoſed to ſeueritie, 1.Cor.4.21. Shall I come vnto you with a rodde, or in loue, and the ſpirit of meekeneſſe? Hence ariſeth another property; it bridleth the tongue, and the outward man, either by ſilence, as Chriſt beeing prouoked, was dumbe and opened not his mouth, B Iſa.53.7. was ſilent, and anſwered not a word, Luke 23.9. or by a ſoft and gentle anſwer, which aſſwageth wrath, Prou.15.1. There is great reaſon why men ſhould reſtore their brethren in all meekeneſſe: for without it there is nothing but ſwelling, and faction, but troubles, and tragedies. Againe, as meekenes is neceſſary for euery Chriſtian, Coloſſ.3.12. Tit.3.2. ſo it is moſt neceſſary for him that would fruitfully and effectually reproue. Hence it is, that the Apoſtle commaunds vs, to instruct them in meekneſſe, that are contrary minded, 2.Tim.2.25.

Ariſt. Rhet. ad Theod. lib.2.cap.3.

3.12

Motiues to enforce this duty, are theſe:

Firſt, the exhortation & example of Chriſt, to be followers of him, 1.Cor.11.1. who was C lowly & meeke, Mat.11.29. for he was led as a ſheep to the ſlaughter, and like a lambe dumbe before his ſhearer; ſo opened he not his mouth, Iſa.53.7. When he was reuiled, he reuiled not againe; when he ſuffered, he threatned not, 1.Pet.2.23. as it may appeare by that meeke anſwer; If I haue euill ſpoken, beare witneſſe of the euill: but if I haue well ſpoken, why ſmiteſt thou me? Ioh.18.23. Paul hath no ſtronger argument to exhort the Corinthians, then by the meekneſſe, and gentleneſſe of Chriſt, 2.Cor.10.1.

Secondly, it is a vertue which God doth make great account of, 1.Pet.3.4. A meeke and quiet ſpirit, is before God, a thing much ſet D by.

Thirdly, God hath made excellent promiſes to them that are of a meeke and humble ſpirit, that he will guide them in iudgement, and teach them his waies, Pſal.25.9. That they ſhall be hid in the day of the Lords wrath, Zep.2.3. That they ſhall inherit the earth, Mat.5.5.

Fourthly, conſider the comfortable effects, and the good that comes thereby. A ſoft, meeke, and milde anſwer, turneth away wrath, Prou.15.1. Meeke, and gentle behauiour heapeth coles of fire vpon our enemies head, Rom.12.20. A ſoft tongue breaketh the bones, Prou.25.15. See the example of Gideon appeaſing the Midianites, Iudg.8.1, &c. and Abigail pacifying David, 1.Sam.25.

Fiftly, without meekneſſe, wee cannot ſauingly heare the word, either read, or preached, Iam.1.21.

ἐν πνεύματι πραΰτητος, ἐν πραότητι· ὅτι ἐστὶ χάρισμα τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος. Oecumen.

It is further ſaid, wee muſt reſtore in the ſpirit of meekeneſſe, The word ſpirit is added, becauſe it proceedes from the Spirit of God, who is both the worker and continuer thereof: as on the contrarie, the ſpirit of iealouſie, Numb. 5. 14. the ſpirit of errour, 1. Ioh. 4. 6. the ſpirit of vncleanneſſe, Zach. 13. 2. the ſpirit of giddineſſe, Iſa. 19. 14. the ſpirit of ſlumber, Iſay 29. 19. are ſo tearmed, becauſe they proceede from a wicked ſpirit. So quicke motions, ſudden perturbations, ſtrong affections, proceeding either from the Spirit of God, or of Satan, are tearmed by the name of ſpirit. Hence we learne, that the holy Ghoſt is author, not onely of meekeneſſe, but of all ſanctifying graces, and therfore is called the ſpirit of wiſedome, & vnderſtanding; the ſpirit of counſel & ſtrength; the ſpirit of knowledge, & of the feare of the Lord, Iſa. 11. 2. Secondly, this teacheth vs, that all true vertues are wrought only by the operation of Gods Spirit in vs: for though there be diuerſities of gifts, yet it is the ſame ſpirit, 1. Cor. 12. 4 and therefore the vertues of the Heathen are but glittering ſinnes.

Thirdly, that when we ſee the gifts or graces of God in our ſelues or others, we returne all the praiſe and glorie to God, from whom they proceede, aſcribing nothing to our ſelues.

Fourthly, this ſhewes to whome wee muſt haue recourſe in our need, namely, not to the virgine Marie, nor any Saint (who ſtand in as great need of the fauor of God, as our ſelues) but to God alone, who is the fountaine of grace, Ier. 2. 13.

Laſtly, in that the ſpirit is ſet before meekneſſe, it ſhewes that the Spirit of God is preſent with his graces, to inſpire them, to cheriſh, and increaſe them. Therefore the commaundement, Quench not the ſpirit, 1. Theſſ. 5. 19. is to bee obeyed, if wee will retaine the graces of God.

Thus much of the duty. The reaſons vſed by the Apoſtle, to enforce this duty, follow to be conſidered, and they are two. The firſt is implyed in the word Brethren] which is of great force to perſwade vs to vſe moderation, lenity, and gentlenes. Abraham could vſe no ſtronger argument to pacifie Lot, then this, Let there be no ſtriſe betweene thee and me, for we are brethren, Gen. 13. 8. Moſes vſed it as a motiue to accord two Ebrewes: Sirs, ye are brethren; why doe you wrong one to another? Act. 7. 26. For it is a ſhame that thoſe whome nature hath ſo neerely conioyned, ſhould bee ſo farre disioyned in affection. But the reaſon beeing taken from ſpirituall brethren, ſuch as are not onely brethren in the fleſh, but alſo in the Lord, hauing the ſame God for their Father, the ſame Church for their mother, Christ for their elder brother, beeing begotten by the ſame immortall ſeede, waſhed by the lauer of one new birth, conglutinate by the ſinewes of the ſame faith, nouriſhed by the milke of the ſame word; is ſo much the A ſtronger, by how much grace is a ſtraiter bond, then nature: therefore Paul would haue vs reſtore one another in the ſpirit of meekneſſe, becauſe we are brethren. Nay, perſons excommunicate, are not to bee accounted as enemies, but to be admoniſhed as brethren, 2. Theſſ. 3. 15. The reaſon why men vſe no more mildeneſſe in their reproofes, is, becauſe they forget themſelues to bee brethren, or conſider not that they haue to deale with their brethren: as Ioſephs brethren, who conſidering him as an enemy, ſaid one to another, Beholde, this dreamer comes, come therefore let vs kill him, Gen. 37. v. 19, 20. But when they conſider him as their brother, they ſay, Come, and let vs ſell him to the Iſhmaelites, B and let not our hands bee vpon him, for hee is our brother, and our fleſh, v. 27.

The ſecond reaſon, is in theſe words, Conſidering thy ſelfe, leſt thou alſo be tempted. And it is taken from the conſideration of our owne eſtate, that we are ſubiect to fall into, and to fall into temptation, as well as others: and therfore we ought to deale with them in all meekenes, as we would be dealt withall in the like caſe. The words are laide downe by way of admonition or aduice, and they carry a double ſenſe: eyther thus, Conſidering thy ſelfe, that is, looking to thy ſelfe: leſt thou alſo be tempted, that is, leſt thou offend, and ſinne, in beeing too ſeuere a cenſurer of thy brother, in reproouing ſin with ſinne. Or thus, C Conſider thy ſelfe: that is, thine owne frailtie, how thou maiſt eaſily be ouertaken with the ſame, the like, or a greater ſinne, ſeeing thou maiſt be taken in the Diuells ſnare, and deceiued with his pleaſant baites, as well as he was: therefore deale as mildely with him, as thou wouldeſt others ſhould deale mercifully with thee. Here Paul forbiddeth vs not to conſider the actions of our brethren, for we are to conſider one an other; Firſt, that wee may auoyde the contagion of euill example: Marke them diligently which cauſe diuiſion, and offences, and auoyde them, Rom. 16. 17. Secondly, that we may be able to reproue & cenſure them. Conſider the matter, conſult, and giue ſentence, Iudg. 19. 30. Thirdly, that wee D may follow their good example, looke on them which walke ſo, as ye haue vs for example, Phil. 3. 17. Let vs conſider one another, to prouoke vnto loue, and to good workes, Hebr. 10. 24. But hee would haue vs eſpecially to conſider our ſelues, that by the conſideration of our owne weakenes, we might learne more mildnes towards others in our reproofes: for ſeeing we ſtand in need of mercy, wee ought to deale mercifully: and ſeeing God forgiueth vs innumerable ſinnes, we ought to forgiue ſeauen times, yea ſeauentie times ſeauen times: ſeeing he forgiueth vs ten thouſand talents, we ought to forgiue a hundred pence, Math. 18. 32, 33. Obiect. The Phariſie conſidered himſelfe, when as he ſaid, Lord, I thanke thee, that I am not as other men, thus, and thus, or like this Publicane, Luk. 18. 11. and yet hee is reprooued by our Sauiour Chriſt. Anſ. True it is: for he onely conſidered his owne ſuppoſed vertues, which he ſhould not haue conſidered but forgotten, though they had bin true vertues indeede, according to Chriſts precept, Matth. 6. 3. Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doth: and Pauls practiſe, Philip. 3. 13. I forget that which is behind: and neuer ſo much as lightly conſidered his owne ſinnes, which Paul heere would haue vs to conſider, and therefore he is reprooued.

Paul would haue vs to conſider our ſelues, becauſe the ſerious conſideration of our owne weakeneſſe, will mooue vs to practiſe this duty of meekeneſſe: for as wee helpe vp thoſe that are fallen, relieue the diſtreſſed, pity the afflicted, bury the dead, &c. becauſe we conſider our ſelues in them, that their caſe may be ours: So wee ought to reſtore thoſe that are fallen, in all meekeneſſe; becauſe we may fall, and be ouertaken as well as they: the rather, becauſe God himſelfe in correcting and reproouing vs, doth deſcend to our weakeneſſe, and conſiders that wee are but fleſh, and a wind that paſſeth, and commeth not againe. Pſalme 78. 39. and Chriſt became like vnto vs in all things, (and was tempted in like ſort (yet without ſinne) that hee might be mercifull, and a faithfull high Prieſt, and might bee touched with a ſenſe of our infirmities. Heb. 2. 17, 18, and 4. 15. Obiect. He therfore that knows aſſuredly he cã not be ouercome by temptation, is not to reproue in the ſpirit of meeknes. Anſ. No man is ſure, & therfore no man can be ſecure. Againe, though a man know hee can not totally nor finally fall away, yet ſeeing he doth finde by experience, that hee can not ouercome without much adoe, without much ſtriuing and wraſtling, nay oftentimes not without reſiſting vnto blood: he ought to vſe more meekenes and mildeneſſe, conſidering with what difficulty he ouercame: our Sauior Chriſt learned by experience how hard a thing it was to ouercome temptations, that he might haue a fellow-feeling of our infirmities. Therfore ſpirituall men muſt remember, that they were once carnall, euen babes in Chriſt: thoſe that are ſtrong, muſt conſider that they were once weake: old men that are graue and ſtaied, muſt call to mind, that once they were in the heat of their youth, and what difficulties encountred them, and with what contention they paſſed the vanitie of that age: and ſo they ſhall the better reproue others in the ſpirit of meekeneſſe, if they looke themſelues in the glaſſe of their example: this is Paules reaſon, why we ſhould ſhew all meekeneſſe to all men, becauſe wee our ſelues were in times paſt, vnwiſe, diſobedient, &c. Tit. 3. 2, 3.

Laſtly, marke here how Paul changes the number: for hauing ſaid, Ye that are ſpirituall, reſtore &c. in the plurall number, here he ſaith, conſidering thy ſelfe, in the ſingular, and not your ſelues: leſt thou alſo be tempted, and not you: which hee doeth not through rudeneſſe of ſpeach, as ſome of the auncient Diuines haue thought: but with great iudgement he vſeth a familiar Hebraiſme, changing the number. Firſt, to giue the greater force, and to ſet the ſharper edge vpon his admonition. For that which is ſpoken to all, is ſpoken to none. Secondly, to ſhew how hard a thing it is for a man to conſider himſelfe. It is naturall for men to ſpie motes in other mens eies, and not to perceiue beames in their owne. Matth. 7. 3. to looke outward at others, not inward at themſelues. Like Plutarchs Lamia, or Fayries, which carried their eies in their heads when they went abroad, but when they came home, put them vp in a boxe. In doing good and being beneficiall, wee muſt not ſo much conſider our ſelues, Phil. 2. ver. 4. but in iudging and reproouing, we ought to beginne with our ſelues.

Hieron in hunc locum.

For the better vnderſtanding of the doctrine of brotherly correction, and Chriſtian reproofe, I will handle theſe foure queſtions: I. who are to be reprooued? II. for what? III. by whom? IIII. in what manner?

I. Who are to be reprooued?

Anſ. All that are brethren: for ſo our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, If thy brother ſinne againſt thee, reproue him, Matth. 18. 16. And Saint Paul ſaith, Brethren, if any man &c. The name Brethren, is taken foure wayes in Scripture, as Ierome hath well obſerued againſt Heluidius. I. for thoſe that are brethren by nature, as Iacob and Eſau; the twelue Patriarks, Andrew and Peter; Iames and Iohn. II. for thoſe that are of affinitie. Thus the kinſmen of Chriſt are called his Brethren: which the Heluidians not obſeruing, thought they had beene his naturall brethren, by the Virgine Marie: thus Abraham and Lot are called brethren, Geneſis 13. 8, 14. though Lot was but his brothers ſonne, Gen. 14. 12. Thus Iacob the nephew of Laban, called himſelfe his brother, Gen. 29. 12. and ſo Laban calleth him, ver. 15. III. for men of the ſame countrey. Thus all the Iewes are called brethren one to another Deu. 17. 15. From among thy brethren ſhalt thou make a King ouer thee: and Deu. 23. 19. Thou ſhalt not giue to vſurie to thy brother: and, Roman. 9. 1. Paul ſaith, hee could wiſh himſelfe anathema, or accurſed, for his brethren, that is, the Iewes. IV. for thoſe of the ſame religion, 1. Iohn 3. 16. Wee muſt lay downe our liues for our brethren. Matthew 23. 8. One is your Doctour, to wit, Chriſt, and all ye are brethren. 1. Corinth. 5. 11. If any that is called a brother bee a fornicatour, with ſuch an one eate not. To theſe wee may adde a fift acception: for all thoſe that are confederate, or otherwiſe ioyned together, by the bond of nature, humanity, ſociety, or friendſhip. Thus Ahab cals Benhadad his brother, that is, his friend, 1. Kin. 20. 32, 33. thus Simeon and Leui are called brethren in

Gen 49. 5

A wickedneſſe, that is, confederate in euill. Thus all men are called brethren one to an other, by reaſon of the bond of nature, Geneſ. 9.5. at the hand of a mans brother; will I require the life of man. In all Countries thoſe that aſſociate themſelues together in warre, after a ſpeciall manner, are called Sworne brethren. Now we muſt not reſtraine the word Brethren, to thoſe that are brethren by nature, or by affinity, or by countrey: neither enlarge it to all thoſe that are brethren by the bond of nature: but onely to thoſe that are brethren in the fourth acception, that is to ſay, brethren in religion, or brethren in the Lord, (though they be falſe brethren) if they be brethren at leaſt in outward profeſſion: for reproofe being a B part of Eccleſiaſticall diſcipline, belongeth not to thoſe that are out of the viſible Church, as to Iewes, Turkes, Pagans; becauſe our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, If hee heare them not, tell the Church: and if hee will not heare the Church, let him bee vnto thee as an heathen man, and a publican. Which cannot bee vnderſtoode of him that is a heathen or Pagan already. And Paul ſaith, 1.Corinth. 5.11. If any that is called a brother, that is, a Chriſtian, be a fornicatour, &c. and then he addes in the next verſe, what haue I to doe, to iudge them that are without? that is, ſuch as are no members of the Church, to whome Eccleſiaſticall Diſcipline reacheth not; doe not ye iudge them that are within? that is, ſuch as are of the viſible C Church, ſuch as do ſubiect themſelues to the cenſure and diſcipline of the Church. It belongeth therefore to thoſe that are of the Church, at leaſt in ſhew; but ſpecially to thoſe that are of the ſame particular Church, liuing vnder the ſame particular gouernment. Albeit, the caſe may ſo fall out, that thoſe of another Church, profeſſing the ſame religion with vs, may be reprooued and cenſured: yea one Church may admoniſh another; for they beeing members one of another, are to procure the good one of another, as Paul teacheth by the ſimilitude of the head and the members of the ſame body, 1.Cor. 12. There D fore al that are in the boſome of the Church, euen the mighty Princes and Potentates of the earth, are ſubiect to reproofe, if they doe offend: thus Nathan the Prophet reprooued Dauid, 2.Sam. 12. and Azarias the prieſt, rebuked Vzziah, 2.Chron. 26.18. and Paul reprooued Peter to his face, Gal. 2.11. Therfore thoſe men, yea thoſe Magiſtrates or Monarchs, that cannot indure the leaſt reproofe, and will not yeeld their neckes to Chriſt his yoke, and their backes to the rod of Eccleſiaſticall cenſure, are greatly to be cenſured: for herein they contemne Gods ordinance. Let them conſider, that they are not better then king Dauid, who hauing ſinned, patiently endured reproof by Nathan. Let them remember how king Vzziah was ſtricken with leproſie for reſiſting God in the miniſtery. And here the popiſh ſort come to bee taxed, who exempt their cleargy men (as they call them) from all reproofes and eccleſiaſticall proceedings, in thruſting them into ſome one monaſtery or other, leſt their exēplary puniſhment ſhould bee a blemiſh or diſparagement to their order and profeſſion: whereas Paul would haue the Miniſters and Elders, yea all ſuperiours, to be reprooued as well as others; ſo it be done in order, and with due reſpect (as after I will ſhew.) Thus Paul bids the Coloſſians, that they ſhould ſay to Archippus, Take heede to thy miniſtery, that thou haſt receiued in the Lord, that thou fulfill it, Col. 4.17.

II. We are bound to reproou all that are in the church, to whom we owe duty of loue, but we are to loue our ſuperiours as much, if not more thē others: therfore we are bound to reproou them aſwel as others. III. There is greater reaſon wee ſhould reproou them then others. 1. Becauſe they being in higher place, are in greater danger of falling then others, and therefore haue more need of admonitions & reproofs. 2. Becauſe they haue many that will flatter them, but few or none that will, or dare reproou them.

It will be ſaid, all are not to be reprooued which liue in the Church, for ſome be ſcorners, who (as Salomon ſaith) muſt not be reprooued. And our Sauiour Chriſt forbiddeth vs, to caſt pearles before ſwine, Mathew 7.6. I anſwer, that only open ſcorners, contemners, perſecuters of the word, are to bee excepted: otherwiſe all wicked men are to be cenſured and rebuked. For 1. Chriſt ſpeakes of manifeſt contemners of religion, when he ſaith, that they are like ſwine, which trample precious pearles vnder their feete: and of perſecuters, when he ſaith, that like dogges they returne againe, and all to rend them. 2. Chriſt beeing here vpon earth, did not hinder the Phariſes, Sadduces, Publicans, and harlots, from comming to his Sermons: much leſſe would he debar them of this cenſure of the church. 3. The woman of Syropheniſſa (though called a dogge) yet eateth of the crummes that fall from the childrens table, Matt. 15.27. 4. Paul did often admoniſh and rebuke the Corinthians, though they were carnall and fleſhly minded: therefore all men, though neuer ſo publike and notorious offenders, (if they be not open ſcorners or perſecuters of the knowne truth) are to be reprooued.

Obiect. Prophane men which notoriouſly offend and ſcandalize the Church by their wicked liues, haue no fellowſhip with Chriſt, but are to be accounted as dogges, out of the church.

I anſwer 1. They are not to bee counted dogges, which doe acknowledge their faults, the greatneſſe of their ſinne, and the merite of Chriſt: for ſuch a dogge was the Cananitiſh woman, who was a true beleeuer. 2. This is agreeable to Saint Pauls practiſe, who did admoniſh thoſe amongſt the Corinthians, that were carnall, and did not at the verie firſt excommunicate them, or yet ſuſpend them: and ſo anſwerably, he commaundeth Titus, that hee ſhould rebuke the Cretians ſharpely, or preciſely, for their notable lying and idleneſſe, Titus 1.12. 3. Chriſt denieth not pardon to them that fall by recidiuation, but would haue them forgiuen, not only till ſeauen times, but till ſeauentie times ſeauen times; and Paul ſpeakes indefinitely in this place, that we ſhould reſtore him that falleth by occaſion into any offence, not ſpecifying how often we ſhould forgiue. 4. Wee muſt diſtinguiſh betwixt the Magiſtrates ſword, and the keyes of the Church: notorious offendours when they repent, are to be receiued into the boſome of the Church, as ſonnes of the Church: yet for all that, they may, nay they ought to be puniſhed by the magiſtrate: as the good thiefe (albeit a member of Chriſt) yet iuſtly puniſhed for his offence.

II. For what faults men are iuſtly to be reprooued?

Men are to be reproued for euery knowne ſinne: This is manifeſt from the end of reproofes, which is, the gaining of our brother, that he periſh not in his ſinne: but euery ſin is of this nature and quality, that it bringeth death, beeing not repented of: therefore for euery ſin a man is to be reprooued. Secondly, our Sauior doth not reſtraine this precept to priuate iniuries, becauſe in that caſe we are to follow another rule. Reſiſt not euill. Bleſſe and curſe not. Do good to them that hate you, &c. Thirdly, it is extended to euery ſin, becauſe he which ſinneth againſt God, or the whole Church, ſinneth alſo againſt thee, and euerie particular member of the church. For euery Chriſtian ought more to be affected for the ſins committed againſt God, or the bodie of the church, then for thoſe that are perſonally and directly intended or done againſt him ſelfe: therefore Chriſt ſpeaketh not onely of ſinnes, as they are priuate wrongs, iniuries, or damages: but as they are diſhonorable to the maieſtie of God, ſcandalous to the Church, pernitious to him that committed them; not onely as they offend him againſt whom they are committed. It will bee obiected, that Chriſts commaundement is to bee vnderſtood of thoſe that wrong vs, when he ſaith, Mat. 18.15 If thy brother ſinne againſt thee. I anſwer, that phraſe and forme of ſpeech (againſt thee) is not meant onely of priuate wrongs offered vs, (as I haue ſaide) but of any ſinne committed againſt GOD: for in euery knowne ſinne, we are in a ſort wronged: firſt, becauſe wee ought to bee ſo zealous of the glorie of God, that we ought to be more grieued when men ſinne againſt GOD, then when they ſinne againſt vs: yea, wee muſt make Gods quarrell, our owne quarrell. Secondly, becauſe he which ſinneth in our preſence, doth, or at the leaſt ought to offend vs. As Hezechiah was offended when hee heard the blaſphemies of Rabſhekah, 2. Kings 15.1. and A Dauid, whoſe eyes powred out riuers of waters, becauſe men kept not Gods Lawe, Pſalme 119. verſe 136. and Lot, who vexed his righteous ſoule, in ſeeing and hearing the abhominations of the Sodomites, 2. Peter 2. verſe 8. For to expound theſe words (againſt thee) thou being priuie to it, is farre from the meaning of the Text, neither can the phraſe be ſhewed in that ſenſe.

Now that men are to bee reprooued for knowne ſinnes committed againſt God, of what nature, qualitie, and condition ſoeuer they bee, beſides the former reaſons, it is manifeſt, Leuiticus 19.17. Thou ſhalt not hate thy brother in thine heart, but thou ſhalt plainly rebuke him, and ſhalt not ſuffer ſinne to reſt vpon B him. Therefore a man is to bee rebuked for euery ſinne. The Apoſtle whereſoeuer hee ſpeaketh of reproofes, neuer reſtraines it to one kinde, but extends it to all knowne ſinnes, 1. Corinth. 5. hee reprooues the inceſtuous perſon for his inceſt, and excommunicateth him beeing impenitent. So in this place, if a man be fallen by occaſion into anie offence, he ſaith not, this or that offence, but in generall, into any offence, whether in life or doctrine, by euill example, or otherwiſe, againſt the firſt or ſecond Table. Yet this is ſo to bee vnderſtoode, as that iniuries and wrongs offered vs, are not to bee excluded: for euen for them alſo, are men to be reprooued. It is the purpoſe of our Sauiour Chriſt, C Mathew 18. to teach this very point, for hauing taught, Matth. 18. verſe 6. that none ſhould offend or ſcandalize his brother; in the tenth verſe, he ſhewes what is to be done, if any man did offend his brother, by iniuring or wronging him: to wit, that he is to reproue him. II. He maketh him that ſuffered the wrong a witneſſe, not an accuſer, when he ſaith, If he heare thee not, take yet with thee one or two, that by the mouth of two or three witneſſes, euery word may be confirmed, Mat. 18. 16. Hee biddeth him take one or two, that ſo it may be confirmed by the teſtimonie, not of one or two, but of two or three: therefore D the partie offended is one of the witneſſes. III. If it were vnlawfull to reproue men for iniuries offered vs, what courſe ſhould hee take, that is ſecretly wronged, none beeing priuie to the wrong but himſelfe, and the partie offending? Thus men would bee imboldened to ſinne, ſeeing they could by no meanes bee controlled, and ſo men might fruſtrate the Commaundement of Chriſt. I adde further, that he which is iniured, is fitter to reproue him that offered the iniurie then any other. I. Becauſe the offence, both for ſubſtance and circumſtance is better knowne vnto him, then to anie other. II. Becauſe the reproofe (in all likelihood) will take the better place, when as the offender ſhall haue coales of fire heaped vpon his head, when he ſhall ſee, that the party wronged is deſirous of his good, and readie to requite good for euill; in ſeeking his amendment, whereas he ſought his hurt. And whereas it may ſeeme that it ſauoureth of reuenge, to reprooue thoſe that wrong vs, I anſwer, though many in reproouing reuenge themſelues, yet the one may be done without the other; & the right vſe of a thing is not to be neglected, becauſe of the abuſe thereof.

Obiect. Authors of hereſies, ſchiſmes, diſſentions, are to be auoyded, Rom. 16. 17. therfore not to be reprooued. Anſw. Generall places of Scripture, are to be expounded, according to particular limitation in other places: now that generall text, Rom. 16. 17. is reſtrained and limited, Tit. 3. 10. Auoide an heretike after once or twice admonition.

Obiect. Paul commaunds the Corinthians, that without anie more adoe, they ſhould proceede forthwith to publique cenſure of Excommunication againſt the inceſtuous perſon: and as it may ſeeme, without any former reproofe, 2. Corint. 5. beſides, he commaunds that we ſhould not eate, that is, familiarly conuerſe with notorious perſons of ſcandalous life, 1. Corinth. 5. 11. and that wee ſhould withdraw our ſelues from euery brother that walketh inordinately. 2. Theſſalonians 3. 6. Anſw. Pauls practiſe is not contrarie to Chriſts precept. He purpoſed indeede to excommunicate the inceſtuous perſon, if he perſiſted in his ſin, yet marke how; in the name, and by the power of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, 1. Cor. 5. 4. in which words the forme of proceeding againſt him is limited, and that according to Chriſts inſtitution, Matth. 18. the name and power of Chriſt, ſignifying the word and inſtitution of Chriſt. 2. Paul doth plainly expound himſelfe in other places, what his practiſe was, in that behalfe, as 2. Cor. 13. 1, 2. where he ſignifieth, that hee did not excommunicate vncleane perſons, fornicators, wantons, (mentioned chapter 12. 21.) before the third admonition; making his third comming vnto them, in ſtead of three admonitions, or witneſſes againſt them.

It will be ſaid, that Paul threatneth when he commeth he will not ſpare the reſt. 2. Corin. 13. 2. therefore it ſeemeth he was reſolued to excommunicate them without anie former proceeding againſt them. Anſ. When Paul ſaith, I write to them which haue ſinned, and to all others, that if I come againe, I will not ſpare. By all others, hee meaneth not ſome which he purpoſed to excommunicate without former admonition, (for in writing this Epiſtle to them, he admoniſheth them all to repent, leſt when he came he would vſe ſeueritie) but thoſe which liued ſecurely in the open breach of the Law, to whom he threatned to come with a rodde, if they did not amend. 1. Cor. 4. 21. and whom he now againe admoniſheth, threatening, that if hee come the third time, he will not ſpare. Beſides this, Paul ſhould bee vnconſtant and vnlike himſelfe, if he ſhould admoniſh vnclean perſons, fornicatours, wantons, and that three times before excommunication: and ſhould at the firſt excommunicate certen others, without any precedent admonition.

3. The * word there vſed, ſignifieth reproofe in word, as it is taken, Luk. 17. If thy brother ſinne againſt thee, rebuke him: therefore the reproofe by many, or of many mentioned, 2. Cor. 2. 6. may ſignifie as well the graue, ſerious, and effectuall reproofe of the Church, by which the inceſtuous perſon was reclaimed from his ſinne, and ſo preuented the thunderbolt of excommunication, as the reall eiection out of the Church: and thoſe words v. 10. If you forgiue any thing, may as well ſignifie receiuing into fauour and familiarity before excommunication, vpon his repentance, as reſtitution after excommunication.

* ἐπιτιμία.

4. Be it graunted, he were indeed excommunicate (as it is moſt probable hee was) yet hence it cannot bee inferred, that they did proceede againſt him without precedent admonition. The Scripture is ſilent in this point. Therefore the reaſon is not good; It is not recorded, therefore it was not practiſed.

5. Though the Apoſtle commaund wee ſhould haue no familiaritie with inordinate liuers, 2. Theſſ. 3. 6. but that we withdraw our ſelues from them, yet he addes withall, that if there were any amongſt them that would not obey his ſayings, they ſhould note him by a letter, verſ. 14. and he expreſly commandeth that they ſhould admoniſh the inordinate, 1. Theſ. 5. 14. for that was his practiſe, as it may appeare, 2. Theſſ. 3. Thoſe that are ſuch, that is, inordinate liuers, we exhort and command by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, that they worke with quietneſſe, and eate their owne bread.

III. Who are to reprooue.

It is a duty which concerneth all men, our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, If thy brother ſinne againſt thee, reprooue him: and the commandement is generall, Leuit. 19. 17. Thou ſhalt not hate thy brother in thy heart, but ſhalt rebuke him plainely. Now all Chriſtians are brethren, (as I haue ſhewed) therefore all men are bound to reprooue their brethren, as occaſion ſhal ſerue. Secondly, all Chriſtians are members of the ſame bodie whereof Chriſt is the head, therefore they are to helpe and further one another, as members of the naturall bodie doe: and this is done by admonition and reprehenſion. Thirdly, the bond of charitie tyeth all men to helpe their brethren in what they can for their good, and therfore (if need be) to reprooue them. And albeit ſome may ſeeme to be vnfit or vnworthie reproouers of others, beeing tainted with as great, or greater ſinnes themſelues, and ſo cannot caſt out motes out of other mens eyes, they hauing beames in their owne, yet we muſt know that ſinne freeth none from this dutie: indeede none ought to reprooue, either with ſcandall to others, or with hurt and hinderance of him that is reprooued; yet no man is exempted from this duty. For euery man ought to be cleare and blameleſſe, ſpecially of open crimes, that ſo hee may more freely and fruitfully reprooue his neighbour; but though hee be not, yet hee remaineth ſtill bound to the performance of this duty. Our Sauiour ſaith not, that he which hath a beame in his eye, is therefore freed from pulling forth the mote out of his brothers eye: but, firſt caſt out the beame out of thine owne eye, and then thou ſhalt ſee to pull out the mote out of thy brothers eye. They therefore are ſeuerely to be cenſured, nay deepely to be condemned, who ſay with Cain, Am I my brothers keeper? as though it concerned them not a whit whether hee ſinke or ſwimme; as though euery man were to looke to himſelfe alone, for his owne behoofe and benefit, and not vpon the things of his brethren, for their good? or as though God had not made euery man a gardian to his brother? The dim candlelight of corrupt nature, cōdemneth theſe men, which teacheth, that hee which may ſaue and doth not, doth in effect as much as kill or deſtroy. The dutie therfore lieth vpon all, but chiefly vpon the Paſtours and Miniſters of the word: for they are to enquire into the liues of men, ſpecially of thoſe that are committed and commended to their charge: for which cauſe they are called the Lords ouerſeers, or watchmen, Ezech. 33. and 34. And if they doe not ſtrengthen the weake, heale the ſicke, bind vp the broken, bring againe that which was driuen away, nor ſeeke that which is loſt, &c. He will require his ſheepe at their hands. Ezech. 34. v. 4. 10. Paul inioynes the Paſtours of the Church of Epheſus, that they ſhould take heed to themſelues, and to the flockes whereof the holy Ghoſt had made them ouerſeers, Act. 20. 28. and hee commaundeth Timothie, that he ſhould bee inſtant in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon; that he ſhould improoue, rebuke, exhort, with all long-ſuffering and doctrine, 2. Tim. 4. 2. and Titus, that he rebuke and exhort with all authoritie, Tit. 2. 15.

Gen. 4. 9.

Phil. 2. 4.

Further, it is to be obſerued, that though all men are bound to reprooue their neighbours if they offend, yet in fiue caſes they are not bound.

I. If a man bee ignorant of the offence. For a man that reproou eth another, muſt be certen of the fault, otherwiſe hee doth purchaſe to himſelfe a blot: and priuate perſons are not to prie into other mens actions, that ſo they may haue matter to reprooue, Prou. 24. 15. For we are bound to reprooue, as we are bound to giue almes: now wee are not bound in giuing almes to ſeeke ſome, to whome wee may giue; if wee giue to thoſe whome wee meete, that ſtand in neede of our almes, we haue done our duty. The like is in reprooſes. And although reproofe be a debt which wee owe our neighbour; yet it is no debt due to any priuate perſon (for then wee were bound to ſearch out the partie, and diſcharge the debt) but it is a publike debt, which wee owe to all: and therefore it is not neceſſary we ſhould ſeeke them out. If we diſcharge it to thoſe we meete withal, it is ſufficient. S. Auguſtine ſaith well, Admonet Dominus non negligere inuicem peccata noſtra non querendo quod reprehendas, ſed videndo quid corrigas.

De verb. dom. ſerm. 16.

II. If he haue repented of his fact, he is not to be reprooued, for the end of reproofe is to reclaime him; therefore if he be reclaimed alreadie, there is no place left for reproofe: although the Magiſtrate may puniſh & correct him in regard of the common good.

III. A man is not to reprooue, if hee be certaine his reproofe will doe no good: for when the end ceaſeth, all things tending to the end doe likewiſe ceaſe; therefore if there be no hope of amendment (which is the end of reproofe) reproofe is to be omitted; ſpecially if it be ſo farre from bettering the partie, that it make him much worſe. Salomon ſaith, Hee which inſtructeth a ſcorner, getteth himſelfe reproach, and he that reprooueth a wicked man, purchaſeth to himſelfe a blot, Prou. 9. 7. And thē he addes in the next verſ. Rebuke not a ſcorner, leſt he hate thee, rebuke a wiſe man & he will loue thee. And verily it were a great folly to ſpend labour in vaine, in telling them of their faults, when our ſchooling will not better them, but incenſe them more and more: It were better to be ſilent, or to ſeparate from them, then to ſtirre vp hornets, or to thruſt our hands into a waſpes neaſt. It is well ſaid of one, that he which ſhall beſtow the ſeedes of wholeſome admonitions on ſuch curſed and vnprofitable ground, ſhall reape nothing for his paines, but the thornes of mockes and reproches.

Muffet.

It will bee ſaid, the Iudge ceaſeth not to puniſh malefactours, though they bee not bettered by the puniſhment; therefore ſeeing brotherly correction is commanded, it muſt not be omitted, though the party reprooued be not bettered, but offended thereby, and made worſe. I anſwer, The reaſon is nothing like, for the Iudge in puniſhing, doth principally intend the good of the cōmon wealth, which commeth by chaſtiſing, or by cutting off malefactours, though they themſelues be nothing bettered: but the end of reproofe, is the amendment and good of him that is reprooued: therefore a man may not be reprooued, except it be for his priuate good, though the magiſtrate may puniſh him, in regard of the common good.

IV. Reproofe may be omitted, if it bee certaine that the partie will either preſently redreſſe his fault without reproofe: or that ſome others will admoniſh him therof, whom it doth more neerely concerne. As the giuing of almes may bee omitted, if it be certaine that the partie that is in want will prouide for himſelfe, or that he will be ſufficiently releeued by others.

V. If it may be done more conueniently and profitably another time, it may be omitted for the time. Except in theſe fiue caſes, he that doth not reprooue his brother, is guiltie of his ſinne, Leuit. 5. 1.

IV. Point. In what manner are men to be reprooued?

The manner to be obſerued in reprouing I will lay downe in tenne rules.

I. A man muſt ſo reprooue his brother, as that it may be moſt for the aduancement of Gods glorie, beſt for the winning of him to God, & leaſt to the defaming of him abroad to the world: and that it may appeare vnto him, that hee doth it of loue (aiming at nothing but his good) not of any malicious humour, or ſiniſter affection of reuenge, or vaine glorie, &c. and that this may be done, two things muſt be practiſed. Firſt, he that reprooueth another, muſt pray that God would ſo guide his tongue, and mooue the others heart, that his reproofe may be profitable vnto him: for without Gods bleſſing our admonitions are but words ſpoken in the winde, 1. Ioh. 5. 16. If any ſee his brother ſinne a ſinne that is not vnto death, let him pray, &c. Secondly, we may not traduce him to others, either before or after our reproofe, 1. Pet. 4. 8. This rule is generall: the reſt following are more ſpeciall.

II. Euery reproofe muſt bee grounded vpon a certaine knowledge of the fault committed. For wee may not goe vpon priuate ſurmiſes and ſuppoſes; or flying reports and rumours blazed abroad: no nor vpon vehement ſuſpitions, or ſtrong preſumptiōs, Deut. 13. verſ. 14. for in ſo doing we ſhall but offend the partie, who knowes himſelfe to be innocent of the crime obiected, and purchaſe to our ſelues a blot of indiſcretion, in being zealous without knowledge. Therefore for ſecret ſinnes, men are not to be reproued. Secret I call thoſe that are knowne only to God, and the conſcience of the doer: or onely to others, but not to vs. This was practiſed by S. Paul, Gal. 2. 14. who reprooued not Peter, till hee was throughly informed of his offence: which condemnes the common practiſe of the multitude, who cenſure and reprooue others, ſpecially publike perſons, as Magiſtrates and Miniſters, vpon falſe reports, or wicked ſurmiſes, when as no accuſation may be admitted againſt ſuch, vnder two or three witneſſes, 1. Tim. 5. 20. Yet a man may reprooue vpon credible information, as Paul did the Corinthians for their contentions, grounding his reproofe vpon the report of the houſe of Cloe, 1. Cor. 1. 11. which he beleeued to be true in part, 1. Cor. 11. 18. If the report be not certaine, we muſt onely reprooue hypothetically, and not peremptorily.

III. In reprouing others, we muſt conſider our ſelues, ſpecially our owne weaknes, and beginne the reproofe in our ſelues, if not for the ſame fault we reprooue in our neigh- A bour, yet for as great as that (if not a greater) in another kind: this manner of reproouing is inioyned by S. Paul, when he ſaith, conſidering thy ſelfe, leſt thou alſo be tempted: and a man is to conſider himſelfe in three reſpects: in regard of the time paſt, preſent, and to come: in regard of the time paſt, that hee was as wicked, prophane, and graceleſſe as another: yea that he was (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) darkeneſſe, and the childe of wrath as well as others: Paul ſhewes the force of this conſideration, when he perſwades men to be ſoft and gentle, ſhewing all meekneſſe to all men: a reaſon taken from the conſideration of our owne frailties and ſinnes in time paſt: For (ſaith he) we our B ſelues alſo were in times paſt vnwiſe, diſobedient, deceiued, ſeruing the luſts and diuers pleaſures, liuing in maliciouſneſſe and enuie, hatefull, and hating one another, Tit. 3. v. 2. 3. In regard of the time preſent, that he is but a fraile man, readie to fall euery moment, that he is not able of himſelfe to thinke the leaſt good thought, much leſſe to reſiſt the leſt temptation, and that whatſoeuer he is, he is out of himſelfe, by grace in Chriſt, as Paul ſaith; By the grace of God I am that I am. So that were it not for this preuenting and cooperating grace, he would fall into as great enormities as other men. In regard of the time to come; Conſider thy ſelfe, leſt thou alſo be tempted: remember Pauls Item, 1. Cor. 10. 12. Let him that thinketh hee C ſtandeth, take heed leſt he fall: for if thou haſt not bin ouertaken with the like ſin, yet thou maiſt be hereafter: therefore as thou wouldeſt haue others to bee compaſſionate towards thee, if thou were in the like caſe, ſo bee thou to them. The not obſeruance of this rule, is the cauſe that there are ſo many cenſorious Catoes, ſo many ſeuere Ariſtarchi of other mens actions, ſo many that are ſharpe-ſighted and Eagle-eyde, in ſpying motes in other mens eyes; and as blind as moles, or beetles, in diſcerning the great beames that are in their owne eyes.

Aut ſumus, aut fuimus, vel poſſumus eſſe quod hic eſt.

IV. It is very requiſite and expedient, that the reproouer bee not tainted with the ſame, or the like fault which he reprooueth in another, D leſt it be ſaid vnto him, Phyſitian cure thy ſelfe, Luk. 4. 23. In that thou iudgeſt another, thou condemneſt thy ſelfe, Rom. 2. v. 1. Therefore Dauid ſaith not, Let the wicked ſmite me, or let him that is as deepe in fault as my ſelfe reprooue me: but Let the righteous ſmite me, for that is a benefit, and let him reprooue me, that ſhall be as a precious oyle: that ſhall not bee wanting to my head, Pſal. 141. v. 5. For albeit in regard of the reproofe it ſelfe, it be not greatly materiall, yet it is not ſo expedient, nor ſo profitable in regard of the reproouer, 1. becauſe he ſeemeth vnworthie to reprooue another, who is to be reprooued himſelfe, being as deepe in fault as any: 2. becauſe it will bee thought, that hee which maketh no conſcience to redreſſe himſelfe, will not be ſo ready to reclaime others, of loue to their perſons, or

A hatred of their ſinnes, or zeale of Gods glorie; but for pride, or buſineſſe in other mens matters, or vanitie, or ſome ſuch ſiniſter ends.

V. All reproofes muſt ſo be miniſtred, as that the partie reprooued may bee brought to a true ſight of his ſinne: as alſo to a liuely ſenſe and feeling therof, and ſo to a compunction of heart, by reaſon of it, & of the wrath of God, which attendeth vpon him for his ſinne; For the performance of this rule, wee haue the example of God himſelfe, Pſal. 50. verſ. 21. I will reprooue thee, and ſet thy ſinnes in order before thee: as alſo of the Prophet Nathan, who by the parable conuicted Dauids conſcience; and ſo made him condemne him-
B ſelfe, 2. Sam. 12. And the precept of Saint Paul, commanding Timothie, that he ſhould ſo reproue, as that he conuict the conſcience of the ſinner, when he ſaith, Reprooue, rebuke, exhort with all long-ſuffering & DOCTRINE: now this is done by ſhewing the true meaning of the law, and the curſe of God annexed to euery breach thereof, and ſo by vnfolding the horrible greatneſſe of ſinne, to the conſcience of him whome we doe reprooue. For reproofes which are not thus qualified, are but cold & perfunctorie, ſuch as was that of Eli, in reproouing his lewd ſonnes, Why doe ye ſuch things? for of all this people I heare euill reports of you: doe no more, my ſonnes; for it is no good report that I heare, 1. Sam. 2. 23 24. beeing a
C meanes rather to cheriſh ſinne in them, then to reclaime them from it. Theſe kinds of reproofes, not vnfitly may bee compared to hotte and haſtie healing ſalues, which draw a faire skinne ouer a foule wound; which becauſe it is not ſoundly cured from the bottome, but ouerly healed vp, doth afterward apoſtemate or fiſtulate, & becommeth more dangerous and deſperate then euer before.

VI. The vineger of ſharpe reprehenſion, muſt be allaied and tempered with the oyle of milde and gentle exhortation; we may not onely vſe the corraſiues of the law, but withall we muſt apply the cordialls of the Goſpell: bitter pilles of reproofe, muſt bee ſugred ouer with louing and affectionate perſwaſion, leſt the D patient abhorre the phyſicke: euery man in this caſe is to follow the skilfull Chirurgion, who doth not alway vſe ſection and vſtion in launcing the wound with ſharpe inſtruments, but mollifying ointments, and mundifying waters, to clenſe and ſupple the wound, and heale the ſore. Paul ſaith, That the ſeruant of the Lord muſt be gentle toward all men: & that he muſt inſtruct with meekeneſſe them that are contrarie minded, 2. Tim. 2. 25. 26. and in this place he commands the Galatians that they ſhould reſtore their brethren with the ſpirit of meekeneſſe. The word tranſlated [reſtore] is very emphaticall: for it ſignifieth to ſet a bone that is broken, or any member of the bodie that is out of ioynt: and therefore we are to deale with a man that is fallen, and by his fall hath diſioynted ſome member of the new man, as the Chirurgion doth with an arme or a legge that is broken, or out of ioynt, to handle it tenderly and gently, ſo as it may be moſt for his good, and leaſt for his paine. More particularly, this may bee done foure waies.

1. When a man doth propound the reproofe in his owne perſon, as Paul did, 1. Cor. 4. 6. Now theſe things, brethren, I haue figuratiuely applied vnto mine owne ſelfe and Apollos, for your ſakes; that ye might learne by vs, that no man preſume aboue that which is written, &c.

2. When a man doth not directly reproue another in plaine tearmes, but cloſely ſhewes a miſlike of the fact, & conuaieth a reproofe in an exhortation, and ſo lappeth vp pils (as it were) in ſugar: as when a man ſweares; not alwaies to ſay, thou, &c. but yea and nay ſhall ſerue betwixt vs: what needes this vehemency betwixt vs two? I will as ſoone take your word, as your oath, &c.

3. When the reproofe is propounded in a parable: as Nathan dealt with Dauid. 2. Sam. 12. and as our Sauiour Chriſt by the parable of the two ſonnes reproued the Phariſies. Matth. 12. 28.

4. When we reprooue a man directly (as at the length Nathan did Dauid, Thou art the man, 2. Sam. 12. 7.) wee muſt ſo carrie our ſelues, as that the partie may ſee himſelfe rather reprooued by God, then by vs: and not to proceede bluntly to worke, to rebuke and cenſure at the very firſt: but to vſe ſome preface before hand; as, that we doe that which we doe in loue of his perſon, for his good, wiſhing him well, both temporally, the reputation of his name, and eternally the ſaluation of his ſoule; & that wee conſider our ſelues herein, how that we may eaſily be ouertaken, as he was. Theſe cautions obſerued, the inferiour may reprooue his ſuperiour, as 2. King. 5. 13.

VII. Euery reproofe muſt be fitted to the qualitie and condition of him whome we reprooue, and to the nature of the offence for which he is reprooued; wee ſhall fitte the reproofe to the perſon reprooued, if we conſider that a man may reprooue another foure waies. Firſt, by friendly admonition: and thus one equall is to reprooue another. Secondly, by reuerent and ſubmiſſe exhortation: thus the yonger muſt reprooue the elder, the inferiour their ſuperiours. It is Gods commandement that we ſhould not rebuke an Elder, but exhort him as a father. 1. Tim. 5. 1. And thus Kings and great Potentates are to be reprooued, they beeing patres Patriæ. That ſaying of the Philoſopher, [illegible] hath a place in this caſe. Thirdly, by ſharpe reprehenſion: thus Elders or ſuperiours are to reprooue their inferiours, ſpecially, if the fact bee notorious, ſcandalous, or dangerous. Paul commandeth Titus that he ſhould rebuke the Grecians ἀποτόμως, ſharpely, that they might bee ſound in faith, Tit. 1. 13. Fourthly, by due chaſtiſement and correction: thus the ſuperiours muſt reprooue their inferiours ouer whom they are ſet, as the father the child, the maſter the ſeruant, the magiſtrate the ſubiect, &c. and thus the inferiour cannot reprooue his ſuperiour, nor one equall another, though he doe it with neuer ſo great mildeneſſe.

Secondly, we ſhall fit our reproofe to the offence committed, if in ſpirituall wiſedome and diſcretion wee put a difference betwixt ſinne and ſinne, as the Apoſtle teacheth vs, Iud.v.22.23. Haue compaſſion on ſome in putting difference: and other ſaue with feare, pulling them out of the fire. Sinnes committed of humane frailtie, or through ignorance, muſt be diſtinguiſhed from thoſe of malice, of pride, and preſumption; both muſt be reprooued, yet after a different manner: for the one muſt be wonne with gentleneſſe, the other with ſharpneſſe: the one with lenity, the other with ſeueritie: to the one we muſt come with the pleaſant pipe of Chriſt, to the other with the lamentation of Iohn Baptiſt. To the one in the ſpirit of Elias: to the other in the ſpirit of Moſes. When gentle admonition would take no place, Chriſt thundreth out threats againſt Corazin and Bethſaida. And Paul threatens ſeueritie, when lenitie will doe no good, 2. Cor.13.

VIII. Euery reproofe muſt be adminiſtred in fitte time when we may doe the moſt good: therefore if in wiſedome we ſhall foreſee fitter opportunitie to winne our brother, we are to take that time, and to omit the preſent: not to tell him of his fault being drunke, or in the heate of his paſſion, but after, when hee commeth to himſelfe, as Abigail dealt with Nabal, 1.Sam.25. For the commaundement of God touching reproofe, being affirmatiue, bindeth not to all times, but onely to that which in ſpirituall diſcretion wee ſhall judge the fitteſt, both to reclaime him, and ſaue his credit. Salomon ſaith, That a word ſpoken in due time, is like apples of gold, with pictures of ſiluer, Prou.25.11. Now if this be true of a word ſpoken in due time, it is much more true of a reproofe deliuered in due ſeaſon. There is a time for all things. Eccleſ.3.1. And ſurely if euery thing that commeth to paſſe in the world haue his ſet time, and opportunitie, reproofe muſt needs haue his time and ſeaſon.

IX. Secret ſinnes knowne onely to thee, or to a few, muſt bee reprooued ſecretly, betwixt thee and the party alone: they muſt not be divulged, but concealed in loue, which couereth a multitude of ſinnes. For if thou haſt offended, or if thy brother hath ought againſt thee, goe thy way, and be reconciled to thy brother, Matth.5.23,24. If he haue treſpaſſed againſt thee, or thou haſt ought againſt him, goe and tell him his fault betweene him and thee alone, Matth.18.15. And albeit Salomon ſay, That open rebuke is better then ſecret loue, Prou.27.5. yet it makes nothing againſt this rule, for he vnderſtandeth not that reproofe which is vttered before witneſſes, but that priuate reproofe which is giuen to his face, and not behind his backe, betwixt them two alone. But open ſinnes are to be reprooued openly, 1. Tim.5.20. Them that ſinne rebuke openly, that the reſt alſo may feare. Which text of Scripture muſt rightly be conceiued: for it is not a generall commaundement giuen to all, (as ſome haue thought, in alleadging it to proue that they may lawfully reproue open ſwearers, and offenders, and that openly;) but it is a ſpeciall commaundement, giuen to the Paſtours, or gouernours of the Church, that they ſhould reproue thoſe Elders, and ſo conſequently all ſuch as were conuicted of any crime, by witneſſes, and that before all men, that is, before the whole Church, and not before all men, in euery place, and aſſembly, where they offend. For we haue no warrant in Scripture ſo to do. Secondly, this open diſgracefull rebuking of men, will rather harden them in their ſinnes, then any way reclaime them from ſinne. Auguſtine ſaith well, Præ pudore incipiet defendere peccatum ſuum, & quem vis correctiorem, facis peiorem. Thirdly, they might as well ſay, a man is to be reproued for euery ſinne, and that openly before all men, as for open ſinnes, becauſe Paul ſaith not, Them that ſinne openly, rebuke before all men, but, them that ſinne, rebuke openly. Fourthly, the words depend vpon the former verſe, where it is ſaid, Receiue not an accuſation againſt an Elder, vnder two or three witneſſes, and then it followes, Thoſe that ſinne, rebuke openly: that is, thoſe Elders that ſinne, and haue beene firſt priuately admoniſhed, and after that before witneſſes, if they bee accuſed by two or three witneſſes; then reprooue them openly, before al men: that is, before the whole Church.

De verb. Dom. ſerm. 16.

X. We muſt carefully obſerue the order ſet downe by our Sauiour Chriſt, Matth. 18. 15. Firſt, we muſt trie whether by priuate reproofe our brother will be reclaimed or not; if he be, wee muſt proceede no further, for then we haue attained the maine end of all reproofes, If he heare thee, thou haſt wonne thy brother: if not, wee muſt take one or two, which may witneſſe the fact, and that for ſundrie cauſes: the firſt is giuen by Saint Hierome, vpon the place, That they may witneſſe that to be a ſinne, for which he is reprooued, and that he is worthily reprooued for the ſame. The ſecond is laid downe by S. Auguſtine, Epiſt. 109. to conuince the partie offending, of the act committed, if he ſhould iterate the ſame againe. The third, by Chryſoſtome, Hom.6. in Matth. to witneſſe that hee which reprooues, hath diſcharged his duty, and done what in him lay to winne his brother. If he be reclaimed at the ſecond reproofe before witneſſes, we muſt proceede no further, but reſt there, as before: if not, wee muſt relate it to the Church: if he heare the Church, there is no further proceedings to be vſed: if he heare not the Church, he is to be excommunicated and holden as a heathen. Offenders therefore are not to bee excommunicated at the very firſt, but orderly to be proceeded againſt, and louingly to be dealt withall, and patiently to be endured, according as the Apoſtle commandeth, 2. Tim. 4. 2. Reprooue with all long-ſuffering. It may be obiected, that Paul biddeth Titus hee ſhould auoid an hereticke after once or twiſe admonition. Tit. 3. 10. Therefore we are not to proceede againſt offenders according to Chriſts commandement. Anſw. That text makes nothing againſt this orderly proceeding commended vnto vs by our Sauiour Chriſt. For firſt, this commaundement is not giuen to all, but onely to the Paſtours (as here to Titus) or Biſhops, who repreſenting the whole Church, are to giue ſentence of excommunication. Secondly, it is to be vnderſtood of publike admonition in the face of the Church, after that the partie hath beene priuately dealt withal; and if after this admonition, he doe not recant his errours, and reforme himſelfe, then is he to be reiected as an hereticke, that is, αὐτοκατάκριτος, condemned of his owne ſelfe, Tit. 3, 11.

Neuertheleſſe, there be certaine caſes, in which we are not bound to follow this order or manner of proceeding in our reproofes, and they are principally three.

I. When the ſinne committed tendeth to the hurt of the Church, or common-wealth, and there be danger in delay; as alſo danger to the partie that is priuie to it, and doth not detect it; and ſmall hope of hindering of it, (as when a man doth plot treaſon, or intermedleth in treaſonable practiſes;) in this caſe the partie offending is not firſt priuately to bee reprooued, but publikely to bee detected, and ſo to bee dealt withall of the Magiſtrate, according to the nature and quality of his offence: for the common good is to bee preferred before any one mans priuate good: Better it is that one man periſh, then that the bond of vnitie ſhould be broken.

Melius eſt vt pereat vnus quàm vnitas, Hieron.

II. When the fault is greater if it be committed, then the loſſe of his credit that committed it, though it be publiſhed. For example, if one intend to ſlay another, and lie in waite for him; in this caſe, we are not bound priuately to admoniſh the partie intending murther, or bloodſhed, but to detect him to the magiſtrate: for his life is to be preferred before the mans credit that ſought his life. When Pauls kinſman (to wit his ſiſters ſonne) heard that aboue 40. men, had conſpired together, and bound themſelues with an oath, that they would neither eate nor drinke, till they had killed Paul, he doth not goe and reprooue thē for this fact, but relates it to Paul: and Paul hearing of it, doth not counſell him to goe and reprooue them firſt, and if they would not hearken to him, to take two or three witneſſes, &c. but ſent him ſtraight, to the chiefe captaine, that he might take order to preuent their bloody attempt.

Act. 24. 16. 17.

III. When a man is aſſured priuate reproofe will doe no good, and that the partie offending will not brooke it, nor take reproofe at his hand, he is not to follow that order and manner of reproofe, but to acquaint them with it, that can and wil redreſſe it. Thus Ioſeph (as it may ſeeme,) did not reprooue his brethren, becauſe he knew well they would not be bettered by him (ſeeing they hated him) but he brought vnto his father their euill ſayings, Gen. 38. 2. Albeit others ſay, that their ſinne was publike, and therefore needed no priuate admonition: and others: that he did admoniſh them ſecretly, before he did relate it to his father, (although it bee not expreſſely ſet downe in the text.) Howſoeuer this example be vnderſtood, the rule is certaine, that priuate reproofe is to be omitted, when it will either doe hurt, or no good.

2. Beare ye one anothers burdens, and ſo fulfill the law of Chriſt.

In this verſe the Apoſtle propounds another rule, touching brotherly loue, and it dependeth vpon the former, as an anſwer to a ſecret obiection, which might be made vpon the former doctrine, in the 1. verſe, in this manner: Thou enioyneſt vs wee ſhould reſtore our brother, if he fall by occaſion into any ſinne, in the ſpirit of meekeneſſe: but there are ſome infirmities in our brethren which cannot bee amended nor redreſſed by brotherly correction, what is to be done in ſuch a caſe? The Apoſtle anſwereth, ſuch infirmities muſt bee borne and tolerated, in theſe words. Beare ye one anothers burdens: And this rule is enforced by an argument taken from the excellencie thereof, in that the practiſing of it, is the keeping and fulfilling of the whole law, in theſe words, And ſo fulfill the law of Chriſt.

Firſt, for the rule: The Apoſtle calleth ſlippes, infirmities, and ſinnes, by the name of burdens, taking his metaphor from trauellers, who vſe to eaſe one another, by carrying one anothers burden, either wholly, or in part: that ſo they may more cheerefully, and ſpeedily goe on in their iourney. Mens burdens are of two ſorts: either ſuch as euery man is to beare by himſelfe alone, without ſhifting them off his owne ſhoulder, and laying them vpon other men (of which we are to intreat, when wee come to the fift verſe.) Or ſuch as may bee borne of others, as well as of our ſelues: of theſe the Apoſtle ſpeaketh in this place, when he ſaith, Beare ye one anothers burdens: and there are foure ſorts of them: Firſt, thoſe whereof our brethren may either bee wholly diſburdened, or in part eaſed; ſuch is the heauie burden of pouertie, ſickneſſe, nakedneſſe, hunger, thirſt, baniſhment, impriſonment, &c. Secondly, the outward and bodily wants, that are in ſundrie perſons, as blindneſſe, deafeneſſe, maimedneſſe, lameneſſe,&c. Thirdly, perſonall or actuall ſinnes of men, as anger, hatred, iealouſie, enuie, &c. Laſtly, outward frailties, in the actions of mens liues, (which are not felt oftentimes of thoſe that are ſubiect vnto them, but are heauie burdens to others with whome they conuerſe) as curiouſneſſe, niceneſſe, ſlowneſſe, ſelfe-conceitedneſſe, frowardneſſe, haſtineſſe, and ſuch like. The two firſt ſorts, are to bee borne three waies. Firſt, by hauing a holy ſympathie, and fellow-feeling of them, in weeping with thoſe that weepe: and in remembring thoſe that are in bonds, as though we were bound with them, thoſe that are in affliction, as if we were alſo afflicted in the bodie, Heb. 13. 3. This was Pauls practiſe, 2. Cor. 11. 29. Who is weake, and I am not weake? who is offended, and I burne not? Secondly, by bearing with them in their wants and infirmities, according to that of the Apoſtle, Beare with the weake, 1. Theſſ. 5. 14. Thirdly, by putting vnder our ſhoulders, and bearing part of the burden with them; in helping and eaſing of them in their neceſſities. Rom. 12. verſ. 13. Diſtributing vnto the neceſſities of the Saints. The two latter ſorts (beeing principally meant in this place) are not to be borne by diſſembling of them, or yeelding to them, much leſſe by bolſtering men vp in them, or by partaking with them; For albeit the adulterer and vncleane perſon would gladly make Chriſt a baud, the thiefe would make him his receiuer: and many there are who would bee content to ſhift off their ſins, in whole, or in part, and lay them vpon the ſhoulders of others: yet in Gods cauſe and quarrell, in matters of faith, we are not to yeeld a haires breadth; Moſes told Pharaoh, that hee would not leaue ſo much as a hoofe behind him, Exod. 10. 26. And Paul would not giue place to Peter and them that were with him, no not for a moment, that the truth of the Goſpell might continue with them, Gal. 2. 5.

Rom. 14. 1. and 15. 1.

They muſt therefore be borne by diſburdening them of them, by gentle and mild admonition; or if they cannot be redreſſed, by bearing and tollerating of them, in paſſing by thē, as though wee did not perceiue them: for as Salomon ſaith,

Prou. 19. 11.

It is the glorie of a man to paſſe by infirmitie: or laſtly, by praying for them. For if we ſhall breake the bond of brotherly loue, & Chriſtian ſocietie, by reaſon of theſe or ſuch like infirmities, which wee ſee to be in our brethren; we walke not in loue, in that we beare not their burdens, as the Apoſtle commaundeth in this place, and Eph. 4. 2. Support one another, through loue. And ſurely, this is a moſt neceſſarie precept, of great vſe and conſequence, in the life of man: for except wee beare and tolerate the frailties of men, in paſſing by them in ſuch ſort, as I haue ſaid, it is impoſſible we ſhold leade a quiet, or comfortable life in any ſocietie. We muſt ſeeke for a new world, or leauing the fellowſhip of men, betake our ſelues to ſome ſolitarie deſert, as ſundrie Eremites, and Anchorites haue done, becauſe they could not (by reaſon of their froward & wayward natures) digeſt the manifold inconueniences which they ſaw to be amongſt men in publike ſocieties. This duty therefore of bearing one anothers burdens, albeit it be difficult, yet it muſt be practiſed, eſpecially of thoſe that are ſtrong men in Chriſt: for as in architecture, all ſtones are not fit to be laide in euery place of the building, but ſome below, as the fundamentall and chiefe corner ſtones, to beare vp the weight and burden of the building; others aboue in the wall, that ſo the whole building may be firme and compact in it ſelfe: So in the Church, which is the houſe of GOD, (where all beleeuers are liuely ſtones, built vpon Chriſt Ieſus the chiefe corner ſtone, bearing vp the whole burden, euen all the infirmities of the Church:) thoſe that are ſtrong muſt ſupport the infirmities of the weake, that ſo the whole building beeing compact and knit together, may grow vp to a holy temple in the Lord.

1. Pet. 2, 5.

For otherwiſe the whole frame of the building muſt needes be diſſolued, and come to a ruine. It is a common prouerbe amongſt the Italians, that Hard with hard, neuer makes a good wall:

Duro con duro non fà bon muro.

By which is ſignified, that as ſtones cobbled vp one vpon another, without morter to combine them, make but a tottering wall that may eaſily be ſhaken; but if there be morter betwixt them, yeelding to the hardneſſe of the ſtones, it makes the whole like a ſolide continued body, ſtrong and ſtable; able to endure the ſhocke of the ramme, or the ſhot of the canon: So that ſocietie, where all are as ſtiffe as ſtones, which will not yeelde a haire one vnto an other, one being as faſt, as froward, as haſtie as another; cannot bee firme and durable. But where men are of a ſoft, a yeelding, and relenting nature, giuing place to the ſtiffeneſſe of others, and yeelding to the tempeſt for a time, that ſocietie is compact in it ſelfe, and ſo cannot but continue, becauſe one doth beare the infirmities of an other. Doeſt thou therefore ſee thy brother to be ouertaken with ſome ſinne, or to be ouer curious, very froward, too ſelfe-conceited, abounding in his owne ſenſe, exceeding haſtie, &c. beare this infirmitie now; and ſo hee (perhaps) may beare with thee in the like caſe, an other time: or beare thou with his curiouſneſſe, he will beare with thy dulneſſe: beare with his ficklenes, he wil beare with thy frowardnes: beare with his haſtines, he will beare with thy ſelfe-conceitednes. For it is to be obſerued, that the Apoſtle ſaith not, that thoſe onely which are ſtrong, ſhould beare the frailties of the weake, but that both ſtrong and weake ſhould beare one anothers burdens, it beeing a mutuall and reciprocall duty impoſed vpon all, becauſe there is none ſo ſtrong, but one time or other he may ſlip, and fall, and ſo may ſtand in need to be ſupported euen of the weake: the palſie man being ſicke, had his burden (to wit, his bed) A borne, but beeing reſtored, could helpe to beare another mans burden: ſo if thou beare another mans burden that is weak, when he is ſtrong, he will be ready to beare thine, if need require. God commaunds, that if we finde our neighbors beaſt lying vnder his burden, we muſt liſt him vp: how much more ought we to help our brethren lying vnder the burden of ſinne? Therefore the ſtrong are to ſupport the weake, and the weake muſt (vpon occaſion) ſupport the ſtrong: as in the arch of a building, one ſtone doth beare mutually, though not equally, the burden of the reſt: or as Harts ſwimming ouer a great water, do eaſe one another, in laying their heads one vpon the backe of another, the foremoſt that B hath none to ſupport him, chãging his place, and reſting his head vpon the hindermoſt. Thus in a family, the husband muſt beare with the nicenes, and frowardnes of his wife: the wife with the faſtneſſe, or haſtineſſe of her husband. Thoſe Magiſtrates, and Miniſters, which are too colde and backward in good things, muſt beare with the ouer great heate, and frowardnes of their fellow-magiſtrates, or fellow-miniſters: and thoſe muſt beare with them againe, ſeeing both aime at the ſame ende, the edification of the Church, and the good of the Common-wealth. Thus in Gods prouidence Luther and Melancthon were happily ioyned together, and did beare with one another, Luther with his ſoftneſſe, C Melancthon with his haſtineſſe; hee with his boldneſſe, hee with his timorouſneſſe: Melancthon did well temper the heate and zeale of Luther with his mildeneſſe, beeing as oyle to his vineger; and Luther on the other ſide, did warme his coldneſſe, beeing as fire to his froſenneſſe. Thus the Apoſtle commaundeth, that we ſhould beare with the infirmities of thoſe that are weake, and not ſufficiently catechized in the doctrine of our ſpirituall liberty purchaſed vnto vs by Chriſt, and not to pleaſe our ſelues too much, but rather to pleaſe our neighbour in that which is good to edification, Rom. 15. 1, 2. For amongſt other D properties of loue reckoned vp by S. Paul, 1. Cor. 13. this is not the leaſt, that it ſuffereth al things, v. 7. that is, all ſuch things as may be borne & ſuffered with good conſcience, for the good of our brother. For looke as a louer doth ſuffer all things in regard of his loue, in three reſpects: Firſt, in vndergoing any labour that may be for her good, as Hercules did for the loue of Omphale. Secondly, in bearing patiently al hard meaſure that is offered him for her ſake, as Iacob did for the loue of Rachel. Thirdly, in induring any thing that is impoſed vpon him: and putting vp what wrong ſoeuer is done vnto him by her, as Sampſon did for the loue of Dalilah. So Chriſtian charity cauſeth vs to ſuffer all thinges. Firſt, pro fratribus, to indure any labour, coſt, or trauell, for their good. Secondly, propter fratres, to beare all afflictions for their ſakes, as Paul ſaith he did for the Church, 2. Tim. 2. 10. Thirdly, à fratribus, to beare wrongs, and put vp iniuries at their hands, as hee did, beeing ſhamefully entreated, at Philippi, ſtoned, ſcourged, &c. This muſt bee conſidered of vs all, but ſpecially of ſuch as will giue a man as good as hee bringeth, who are but a word, and a blow: a lie, and a ſtabbe: a word and a writ: ſuch as cannot beare coales, (as they ſay) nor brooke any little wrong, nor indure any ſmall frailty in their brethren. Theſe men muſt remember, that in bearing coales, that is, in ſuffering, and forbearing, they heape vp coales of fire vpon their heads, (as Paul ſpeaketh, Rom. 12. 20.) as alſo that God doth beare with them in greater matters, euen when they wound him with their oathes, Leuiticus 24. 11. and giue him the lie through vnbeleefe, 1. Ioh. 5. 10. as hee bare the manners of the Iſraelites in the wilderneſſe. That Chriſt, whoſe example we are to follow, hath borne our infirmities, Eſa. 53. and doth eaſe them that trauell, and are heauie laden, Matth. 11. 28. and therefore wee treading in his ſteps, muſt forbeare one another, and forgiue one another, if any man haue a quarrell againſt another, euen as Chriſt forgaue vs, Coloſſ. 3. 13. Thus, if when we ſee any ſin in our brother, we reclaim him from it, by reproofes, exhortations, admonitions, we are Gods inſtruments, to ſaue a ſoule from death, and ſo do couer a multitude of ſinnes, euen before God, Iam. 5. 20. And if when wee perceiue common frailties in our brethren, we ſhalll not ſtand too much vpon our right, but ſhall yeeld vnto them in bearing, forbearing, and forgiuing, wee ſhall couer a multitude of ſinnes, 1. Pet. 4. 8.

August. ſer. 21. de verbis Apoſt. Beda in hunc locum ex Auguſt.

ἐτροποφόρησεν. Act. 13. 18.

Thus much touching the rule. Now I proceede to the reaſon, whereby the Apoſtle vrgeth the practiſe of this precept, in theſe words, And ſo fulfill the Law of Chriſt. The reaſon ſtandeth thus: That which is the fulfilling of the Law of Chriſt, muſt be practiſed of vs: but the bearing of one anothers burdens, is the fulfilling of the Law of Chriſt: therefore wee ought to beare one anothers burdens. For the clearing of this text, ſundry things are to be conſidered.

I. It may bee demaunded, what the Apoſtle vnderſtandeth by the Law of Chriſt? Anſ. Nothing elſe but the doctrine, precept, or commaundement of Chriſt, enioyning the loue of our brethren. Ioh. 13. 34, 35. A new commaundement giue I vnto you, that ye loue one another, as I haue loued you, &c. And it is all one, as if he had ſaid, Beare ye one anothers burdens, and ſo fulfill the commaundement of Chriſt, who hath after a ſpeciall manner commanded the loue of your brethren. Now the Apoſtle rather vſeth the word Law, then Commandement, becauſe he would make a clearer antitheſis betwixt the Law of Chriſt, & the law of Moſes, ſo vehemently vrged by the falſe apoſtles: as if he ſhould haue ſaid, You Galatians are taught to obſerue the law of Moſes, circumciſion, daies, and times, moneths, and yeares. Well, if ye will needes be obſeruing of Lawes, here is a Law for you to obſerue, beare with the frailties one of another, and ſo you ſhall fulfill the moſt excellent Law that euer was, the Law of Chriſt, which is neceſſarie to be kept, whereas the keeping of the Ceremoniall law, is but in vaine.

II. Queſt. Why doth Paul call the loue of our brethren, the law of Chriſt, rather then the law of nature, or the Law of God, or the law of Moſes? ſeeing it was written in the minde of man in the creation, was giuen by God himſelfe in Mount Sinai, was written by Moſes, the reliques whereof are yet remaining in the minde of man? Anſ. It is ſo called, becauſe it is a new commaundement giuen by Chriſt himſelfe, after a ſpeciall manner. But it is hereupon further demaunded, why this commandement of louing our brethren, ſhould bee called a new commaundement? To which ſome make anſwer, that it is ſo called, only becauſe it ſhewes a new manner of louing our brethren, after the example of Chriſt; as hee hath loued vs. Now this manner of louing our brethren (as Chryſoſtome expounds it) is this: that as Chriſt loued vs freely, not mooued by any profit that ſhould redound vnto himſelfe thereby: ſo we ſhould freely loue one another, not for any benefit receiued, or expected. But as Cyril of Alexand. vpon Iohn, expounds it, it ſtands in this, that as Chriſt loued vs more then himſelfe, ſo wee ſhould loue our brethren more then our ſelues. But this cannot bee the meaning. For S. Iohn in his 1. Epiſt. 2. & Epiſt. 2. repeating this new commandement, ſaith onely, this is a new commaundement, that ye loue one another, and neuer addes, as Chriſt loued vs: the which hee ſhould haue done, if theſe words [as I haue loued you] be an eſſentiall part of the new commandement, which he enioyneth vs to obſerue.

Beſides, our Sauiour himſelfe ſaith, a little after, By this ſhall all men know, that ye are my Diſciples, if ye loue one another, not adding; as I haue loued you: therefore the new commaundement is laid downe in theſe words, Loue one another, not reſpecting thoſe that follow, as a modification or limitation, as I haue loued you. Beſides, this expoſition takes it for graunted, that the morall law, Loue thy neighbour as thy ſelfe, is a certaine rule, by which we are to ſquare our loue, viz. that wee muſt begin at our ſelues, and looke how much wee loue our ſelues, ſo much wee ought to loue our neighbour, and no more, and that therefore Chriſt ſhould giue a new commaundement of greater perfection, then that in the law, to wit, that we loue one another as he loued vs, that is, more then our ſelues. But this is a flatte miſtaking of the Scripture: for the commaundement, Loue thy neighbour as thy

A ſelfe, is no exact rule whereby wee are to trie & examine our loue, (as the Popiſh doctors, and ſome others teach.) For then Paul and diuers of the Saints of God, ſhould haue done workes of ſupererogation, more then the law requires, in louing their neighbours more then themſelues, Rom. 9. 1. And if it were a rule, it were but a leaden and falſe rule: for wee are in ſome caſes bound to loue our neighbour more then our ſelues, eſpecially if hee be a greater inſtrument of Gods glorie, in procuring the good of the Church or common wealth: as to loue our godly King more then our ſelues, and preferre his ſafetie and life before our owne, as the Iſraelites did Dauids: Thou art worth tenne thouſands of vs,

B 2. Sam. 18. 3. for ὡς, is a note of ſimilitude, and not of equalitie, ſignifying, that as wee loue our ſelues heartily, and earneſtly, and inwardly, wiſhing all good to our ſelues: with the like ſincerity of affection we ſhould loue our brethren. So that Chriſt hath added nothing to the law, in commaunding to loue one another, as he loued vs. Others ſay: it is called a new commaundement, becauſe it ought to be kept with as great a care, and diligence, as though it were new, and had beene now firſt giuen: for new lawes (we know) are commonly preciſely kept at the firſt, but after a while, they begin to bee neglected: and men do (as it were) antiquate them, accounting them as though they were not.

ὡς ὁμοιότητος, ἰσότητος.

Theophylactus.

Sic Hugo de S. Victor. li. quæſt. in Epiſt. ad Rom. q. 308

C Others, by a new commaundement, vnderſtand another diuers or different commaundement; for Chriſt in the beginning of the Chapter, had giuen them a commaundement to flie pride, to bee humble, to liue at peace, and concord one with another: and then he ſaith, But I giue you a new commaundement, a commaundement differing from the former, that ye loue one another.

The word New, is often taken in Scripture in this ſenſe, as Exod. 1. 18 There aroſe vp a new king which knew not Ioſeph: that is, (as the 70 interpreters, and Saint Luke, Act. 7. 18. tranſlate it) another king. Mark 16. 17. they ſhall ſpeake with new tongues, that is, other, diuers, or different languages, from their vſuall tongue:

D for the meaning is not, that they inuented a new language, which was neuer ſpoken before, but that they ſpake in a language diuers from that which they vſed before: for ſo it is ſaid, Act. 2. 4. They began to ſpeake with other tongues: Thus our Sauiour Chriſt telleth his Apoſtles, that hee will not drinke any more of the fruit of the vine, till hee drinke it new with them in the kingdome of God, Mat. 26. 29. Where by new wine, hee meaneth not the liquor or iuyce of the grape, to preſerue animall life, but another different drinke, wherewith hee would entertaine all that were inuited, and came vnto his table. But theſe expoſitions are not ſo fitte.

γλώσσαις καιναῖς.

ἑτέραις γλώσσαις.

I take it therefore to be called a new commandement, either in reſpect of Chriſt, or of vs:

A vs: In reſpect of Chriſt two waies: 1. Becauſe he renued it, not onely by freeing it from the falſe gloſſes & interpretations of the Scribes and Phariſes, the Iewiſh Rabbins: but alſo in fulfilling it moſt perfectly, whereas it was obliterated, and almoſt antiquated, by the great corruption of man: for none did euer ſo perfectly obſerue and keepe the law, as he did. Therefore in regard of the new manner of fulfilling it, it is called a new commaundement. 2. Becauſe he abrogating the ceremoniall law, and many iudicials, onely renued this precept of the morall law, in commaunding it as his law to the Church, Ioh. 15. This is my commaundement, that ye loue one another:
B as if hee ſhould ſay, Though I haue abrogated the ceremoniall law, and antiquated the iudiciall, yet this commaundement ſhall neuer bee abrogated: and this I commend vnto you againe and againe, as my commaundement, which aboue all others, I would haue you carefully to obſerue, as that whereby ye ſhall bee knowne to bee my Diſciples. In regard of vs it is called a new commaundement, and that in two reſpects: 1. Becauſe it beeing defaced, and almoſt cleane blotted out of the minde of man by originall ſinne, is renued againe in the hearts of beleeuers, by the powerfull operation of the Spirit of God, both in their mindes and affections: In their mindes, becauſe they are daily enlightened with the true knowledge thereof,
C in beeing taught whome they ought to loue, viz. not onely their friends, but euen their enemies: with what kinde of loue, to wit, with a feruent loue, not in word or tongue onely, but in deede and truth: and that with free, ſincere, and conſtant loue: in their wils and affections: in that they are perſwaded by the inward working of the Spirit, to loue: and are inclined thereto, being renued by grace. 2. Becauſe it doth after a peculiar manner belong vnto vs, who are vnder the new Teſtament, in the kingdome of grace, ſeeing that this commaundement onely is renued by Chriſt, as his owne proper commaunde-
D ment, many others beeing abrogated: as alſo becauſe it is daily written by the Spirit of Chriſt, after a new manner, in the hearts of new conuerts: ſo that they haue not onely a new, that is, a true knowledge thereof; but alſo a new, that is, a true ſenſe and feeling of the power of it in their hearts: in that they are become new creatures in Chriſt Ieſus. For in him all old things paſſe away, and all things become new, 2. Corinth. 4. For to them, the law is no killing letter, written in tables of ſtone: but a quickening ſpirit, as being written in the fleſhy tables of their hearts. This ſeemeth to bee the true, full, and proper meaning of theſe places; for thus Saint Iohn 1. Epiſt. 2.8. doth expound it, when he ſaith, that it is true in him and in you, in the ſenſe before ſpecified: both in regard of Chriſt, and the beleeuers in Chriſt.

III. Queſtion. Seeing the commaundement of louing our brethren, is called the law of Chriſt, and a new commaundement, is not the Goſpel a new Law? Anſwer. In no wiſe: for albeit the law and the Goſpell agree in ſundry things, as firſt, in the Author, God beeing the Authour of them both, of the Goſpell, Romanes 1.1. of the Law, Romanes 7.22. Secondly, in that both of them were preached, knowne, and vnderſtood in both Teſtaments: the law beeing written in the heart of man in the creation: the Goſpell preached to our firſt parents in Paradiſe, immediately after the fall, and repeated againe and againe to the Patriarkes and Prophets, from time to time. Thirdly, in the generall matter and ende of them both, in that both the law and the Goſpell require righteouſneſſe in him that would come to life eternall. Fourthly, in this, that they confirme and eſtabliſh one another, in that the law commaunding iuſtice, and iuſtifying none, ſheweth that a man is iuſtified by the free gift and grace of God, and that Chriſt is the ende of the law to euery one that beleeueth. In that the Goſpell iuſtifieth not by workes, but by faith, and yet ſo, as that wee doe not by our faith abrogate the law, or make it of none effect, but rather eſtabliſh it, and that in two reſpects. 1. Becauſe by faith wee apprehend the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, and ſo in him (who hath fulfilled the law for vs) wee fulfill it, and ſo eſtabliſh it. 2. Becauſe hauing our hearts purified by faith, we liue no more according to the fleſh, but according to the ſpirit, and ſo by inchoate obedience we fulfill the law.

Laſtly, in the end, in that both the law and the Goſpel tend directly to the manifeſtation of the glory of God.

Yet they differ in fiue things. Firſt, in the manner of reuealing: the law before was perfectly knowne by nature, and ſince the fall in part, Rom. 2.15. The Goſpel is not knowne by nature, neither was it euer written in mans heart, before, or after the fall, as Paul ſaith, 1. Corinth. 2.9. Thoſe things which the eye hath not ſeene, nor the eare heard, or the heart of man conceiued, are they which God hath prepared for them that loue him; therefore the Goſpell is called a myſterie, Rom. 16. v. 25. 26. Firſt, becauſe the doctrine of the Goſpell was made known to men and Angels by the reuelation of God, Epheſ. 3.5. & 9. Secondly, becauſe there is required a ſpeciall reuelation, and worke of Gods Spirit, before a man can yeeld aſſent vnto it. Therefore Paul ſaith, Wee haue not receiued the ſpirit of the world, but the Spirit of God, that wee might know the things that are giuen to vs of God, 1. Corinth. 2.12. Secondly, in the ſubiect or doctrine it ſelfe, and that in two reſpects. Firſt, the law preacheth nothing but abſolute iuſtice, to the tranſgreſſours thereof: the Goſpell ſheweth how iuſtice is qualified with mercie:

from all things from which ye could not bee abſolued by the law of Moſes, by him euery one that beleeueth is iuſtified, Act. 13. verſ. 39. Secondly, the law teacheth what manner of men wee ought to be, and what wee ought to doe, that we may come to eternall life, but ſhewes not how wee may become ſuch indeed; the Goſpell teacheth, that by faith in Chriſt, we may be ſuch as the law requires. God hath made him to be ſinne for vs, who knew no ſinne, that we might be made the righteouſneſſe of God in him, 2. Cor. 5. 21.

Thirdly, in the obiect. The law is giuen to the vniuſt and lawleſſe, vngodly and prophane, 1. Tim. 1. 9, 10. that it may ſhew them their ſinnes, and the puniſhment thereby deſerued, and ſo may accuſe and condemne them: the Goſpel is to be publiſhed and diſpenſed only to the penitent, which are contrite and broken in heart, and mourne for their ſinnes, Mat. 11. Eſa. 57. Luk. 4.

IV. The law promiſeth eternall life vpon condition of works: Do this and liue: If thou wilt enter into life, keepe the commandements. The Goſpell promiſeth eternall life freely without any condition of works, Rom. 4. 5. To him that worketh not, but beleeueth in him that iuſtifieth the vngodly, his faith is counted to him for righteouſnes. Rom. 3. 21, 22. The righteouſnes of God is made manifeſt without the law, by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt, vnto all, and vpon all that beleeue.

V. In the effects. The law is no inſtrumentall cauſe of faith, repentance, or any ſauing grace: it is the miniſter of death, 2 Cor. 3. 7. cauſing wrath, Rom. 3. 15. But the Goſpel cauſeth it: it is the grace of God which bringeth ſaluation, Tit. 2. 11. for this cauſe Paul calleth the law a dead, or killing letter: the Goſpel, a quickening ſpirit, 2. Cor. 3.

Fourthly, it may be demaunded, whether any man bee able to fulfill the law, conſidering that Paul biddeth vs beare one anothers burdens, and ſo fulfill the law of Chriſt? Anſw. No meere man can perfectly fulfill the Law in this life. This concluſion Saint Paul prooueth in ſundry of his Epiſtles, ſpecially by theſe arguments:

Firſt, by the great and generall deprauation of nature, which remaineth in part euen in the regenerate, ſtayning their beſt actions, and making them like a menſtruous cloth: confeſſing withal, that his beſt works are not anſwerable to the law, by reaſon of the remainders of originall corruption, Rom. 7. Now perfect fulfilling of the law, cannot ſtand with corruption of nature, and tranſgreſſion in life. For a corrupt fountaine cannot ſend forth ſweete waters: neither can a corrupt tree beare good fruit. S. Iames ſaith, He that offendeth in one, is guilty of all: and the Scripture pronounceth him accurſed, that abideth not in all things written in the booke of the law, to do them. Popiſh Doctors anſwer, firſt, that originall corruption (which they cal the fewell of ſinne) and the firſt motions to euill, preuenting all conſent of will, are indeede in the regenerate; but they are no ſinnes properly. But it is falſe which they teach. For euery tranſgreſſion of the law, is a ſinne, as S. Iohn defines it, 1. Ioh. 3. 4. but theſe are tranſgreſſions of the tenth commandement: for it either forbiddeth theſe firſt motions, whether they be primò primæ, or ſecundò primæ, (as Schoole-men ſpeake) or it forbiddeth nothing but the motions, which are with conſent of will, which were forbidden in the former commandements, and ſo in effect there are but nine commandements, the tenth forbidding no ſpeciall ſinne.

Fomes peccati.

Againe, Paul teacheth, that theſe motions preuenting all conſent of will, are formally oppoſed to the law, I ſee another law in my members, rebelling againſt the law of my minde. Secondly, they anſwer, that Paul, Romanes 7. ſpeakes not of himſelfe, but in the perſon of the vnregenerate, according to the opinion of Saint Auguſtine. Anſwer. Auguſtine indeede was once of that iudgement, but hee after retracted that opinion, (as it is manifeſt out of his booke of Retractations, and the ſixt booke againſt Iulian the Pelagian) and that for theſe reaſons: Firſt, becauſe Paul ſaith, To will is preſent with me: and I doe not the good I would; and, I delight in the Law of God concerning the inward man: all which are proper to the regenerate, & cannot be affirmed of the wicked. Secondly, becauſe he makes mention of the inward man, which is all one with the new man, or the new creature: which agreeth only to the regenerate. Thirdly, becauſe he ſaith, he is led captiue to ſinne, verſ. 23. whereas the wicked are not drawne to ſinne by force, againſt their wils, but runne riot of their owne accord into all wickednes, as the horſe ruſheth into the battell, Ieremie 8. 6. Laſtly, in that he cries out in a ſenſe and ſorrow for his ſinnes, O wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliuer me from the body of this death? verſ. 24. which cannot be the voice of the vnregenerate, for they feele not the burden of their ſinne, nor deſire to bee eaſed of it, but take delight and pleaſure in it. His ſecond reaſon is this: ſuch as our knowledge is, ſuch is our loue of God and man: but our knowledge is onely in part: therefore our loue is but in part: and ſo conſequently our obedience is but in part, and therefore there is no perfect fulfilling of the law. The aduocates of the Romiſh church anſwer, that our knowledge, loue, and obedience, are perfect for the condition and eſtate of this life, as we are viatores, which is ſufficient: though they be not perfect for the condition of the life to come, when wee ſhall bee comprehenſores, which is not required at our hands in this life: for they make a double perfect fulfilling of the law: One, for the tearme of this life, which is to loue God aboue all things, and our neighbour as our ſelues. The other after this life; and that is to loue God with all the ſoule, with all the powers and faculties of the ſoule, with all the ſtrength and vigour of all theſe powers.

Rom. 7. 23.

And this diſtinction they make to bee the ground of their opinion, touching the fulfilling of the law, and iuſtification by workes, &c. But it is a ſandie foundation, and therefore that which is built vpon it, cannot ſtand. For beſides that, it is a fond and friuolous diſtinction forged by the Schoole-men, without warrant of Scripture, or conſent of Antiquitie; it is manifeſtly falſe. For there is one onely rule of righteouſnes, and not two: one onely generall ſentence of the law, more vnchangeable then the lawes of the Medes and Perſians, euen as vnchangeable, as God himſelfe; which is, that, He which continueth not in al things written in the law, to doe them, is accurſed. So that hee which loues not God with all his ſoule, minde, and might, with all his valdè ſuo, that is, with all the faculties of his ſoule, and all the powers of theſe faculties, and that in this life, is accurſed. And it is abſurd which they teach, that a man is not bound for the tearme of this life, thus to loue God, but onely in the life to come. For looke what man could doe by creation, in the ſtate of innocencie; the ſame & ſo much the law requires at his hands in the ſtate of apoſtaſie. But Adam by creation could loue God with all his ſoule, with al the faculties of his ſoule, and all the powers of theſe faculties: therefore the ſame perfect, abſolute, and entire obedience is now required at his hands. For the ſentence of the law, Curſed is hee that continueth not in all things, &c. is not onely giuen to men glorified, but to thoſe that are in the ſtate of grace. And Saint Paul doth ſo apply this ſentence to men euen in this life, that hee pronounceth all that are of the workes of the law, to be vnder the curſe. Againe, if this were ſo, the Iewes had no cauſe to feare the ſeuerity and ſtrictneſſe of the law, as they did: when they ſaid, If we heare the voice of the Lord any more, wee ſhall die: conſidering they were able to keepe and fulfill it, according to this popiſh opinion. Neither would God haue promiſed them a Meſſias or Mediatour to redeeme them from the curſe of the law: but would rather haue comforted them in that their ſo great feare and aſtoniſhment, by giuing them to vnderſtand, that they were not bound to the full and perfect fulfilling of the law for the time of this life.

Exod. 20. 19.
Deut. 18. 16

Deut. 18. 18

Beſides, the patheticall exclamation of Paul, O miſerable man that I am, &c. Rom. 7. 24. and that ſaying of Peter, in calling the Law a yoke, which neither we nor our fathers were able to beare, Act. 15. ſhould be childiſh, and ridiculous, if that which is impoſſible in the law (as Paul ſpeakes, Rom. 8. 3.) did not appertaine vnto vs.

The third argument. If a man could fulfill the Law, he ſhould not ſtand in neede of a Mediatour. For if righteouſnes be by the Law, A Chriſt died in vaine, Galat. 2. 21. It is anſwered, that Chriſt died in vaine, if men by the ſtrength of nature could fulfill the Law: but the fulfilling of the Law is by grace, and ſo his death is not in vaine: for by vertue of the obedience of Chriſt, wee are enabled to fulfill the Law. But this were to make Chriſt no Sauiour, but onely an inſtrument, whereby wee fulfill the Law, and are our owne Sauiours; wheras the Scripture ſaith, that he is made vnto vs righteouſnes, 1. Cor. 1. 30. not that we are made righteouſnes by him. That we are made the righteouſnes of him, 2. Cor. 5. 21. not by him, as an inſtrument. That we are complete in him, Coloſſ. 2. 10. and not complete of our ſelues, B by him.

Laſtly, the Scripture ſhutteth vp all men vnder ſinne, euen the moſt ſanctified, Prou. 20. 9. Ioh. 1. 9. Iob confeſſeth hee cannot anſwer one of a thouſand, Iob 9. 3. and Dauid ſaith, If thou, Lord, ſhalt marke what is done amiſſe, who can abide it? Pſal. 130. 3. and Paul ſaith of himſelfe, that he found no meanes to performe that which is good, Rom. 7. 18. He ſaith further, that it is impoſſible to be kept, by reaſon of originall corruption, Rom. 8. 3. It is anſwered, that all theſe places and examples muſt be vnderſtood of veniall ſinnes, which make men ſinners indeed, yet are not againſt, but beſide the law; and therefore though a man committe them, yet hee may fulfill the law for all that. Anſwer. The common C receiued opinion in Schooles, that ſome ſinnes are mortall, others veniall of their owne nature, is a witleſſe diſtinction. For if all ſinnes deſerue death, as Paul teacheth, Rom. 6. 23. either veniall ſinnes are no ſinnes, or they muſt needes deſerue death. Moſes ſaith, that he that abideth not in all things written in this law, is accurſed, Deut. 27 29. where the words, this Law, may not be reſtrained onely to the Catalogue of great and hainous ſinnes, which are there reckoned vp, but extended to all ſinnes, as Paul applies it, Galat. 3. 10. pronouncing him accurſed, that continueth not in all thinges, written in the law, not this law. So D that euery ſinne, euen the leaſt ſinne in thought, makes a man ſubiect to the curſe, and ſo in rigour of diuine iuſtice deſerues eternall death. And it is but a poore ſhift, to ſay that ſome ſinnes are againſt the Law, as all mortall ſinnes, and others beſides the Law, as veniall. For the doing of that which God forbiddeth, is a ſinne not beſide, but againſt the Law. But idle words, ieſting, and gibing, &c. (which the Popiſh Doctours account veniall ſinnes,) are expreſſely forbidden in the word: Mat. 12. 36. Of euery idle word that men ſhall ſpeake, they ſhall giue account at the day of iudgement. And Paul forbids all fooliſh talking, and ieſting, as thinges vncomely, Epheſ. 5. 4. Therefore they are not beſide, but flat againſt the law. Secondly, they anſwer, that theſe places and the like, are to be vnderſtood of ſeuerall workes & actions of the Saints, whereof ſome were good, as Dauids ſparing of Saul, &c. ſome euill, as his adultery, murther, and numbring of the people: and not of the ſame particular workes. Anſw. It is falſe. For Paul ſpeaking of the ſame indiuiduall worke, ſaith, that it is partly good, and partly euill, I finde when I would doe good, that euill is preſent with me, Rom. 7. 21. In my minde I ſerue the law of God, in my body the law of ſinne, v. 25. And the Prophet ſaith, that all our righteouſnes is as a menſtruous cloath, Iſa. 64. 4. Therefore euery good worke is ſtained with ſinne.

Thus much ſhall ſuffice to ſhew, that it is impoſſible for any man in the time of this life to fulfill the law: The reaſons alleadged to the contrary, are ſufficiently anſwered before, Pag. 164. &c. To which place I referre the reader.

It may further be ſaid, if we cannot perfectly fulfill the law, why doth Paul command vs to beare one anothers burdens, and ſo to fulfill the law of Chriſt?

Anſw. The law is ſaid to be fulfilled three waies. Firſt, by perſonall obedience, and thus Chriſt onely fulfilled it. Secondly, by imputed obedience, thus the regenerate fulfill it in Chriſt, hee beeing their righteouſneſſe, 1. Cor. 1. 30. and they complete in him, Coloſſ. 2. 10. Thirdly, by inchoate obedience, thus Zacharie and Elizabeth are ſaid to haue walked in all the commaundements of the Lord, without reproofe, Luk. 1. 6. And thus all the faithfull fulfill the law, in labouring to obey God in all his commaundements; according to the meaſure of grace receiued: and thus wee are ſaid to fulfill the law in this place, God accepting the will for the deede. Wee are further to conſider, that fulfilling of the law is ſometime oppoſed to the tranſgreſſion of the law, as Iam. 2. 10. in which ſenſe, no man euer did, or can fulfill it, except Chriſt, God and man, who for this cauſe is ſaid to be the ende of the law for righteouſneſſe, to euery one that beleeueth, Romanes 10. 4. Sometime it is oppoſed to hypocriſie, and diſſimulation, as 1. Ioh. 2. 4, 5. and thus all the Saints fulfill it, in that they endeauour to mortifie their corruptions, & in all things to approoue their hearts, and liues to God, in keeping faith and a good conſcience. In which ſenſe Paul here biddeth vs to fulfill the law of Chriſt, in performing duties of loue, and bearing one anothers burdens. It will bee ſaid, if the law can no otherwiſe bee fulfilled, then by inchoate obedience, to what ende ſerueth it? Anſwer. It hath a three-folde vſe euen ſince the fall. Firſt, it ſerues to reſtraine the outward man, by keeping men in order, through feare of puniſhment, of which vſe Paul ſpeakes, when hee ſaith, that the law is not giuen to a righteous man, but to the lawleſſe and diſobedient, &c. 1. Timothie 1. 9. Secondly, to arowſe the drouſie conſcience: and this it doth many waies. 1. By reuealing ſinne, for by the law commeth the knowledge of ſinne, Rom. 3. 20. 2. By reuealing the wrath and anger of God for ſinne, for the law cauſeth wrath, Rom. 4. 15. 3. By conuicting the conſcience. When the commandement came, ſinne reuiued, Rom. 7. 9. 4. By arraigning and condemning vs for ſin, for the law is the miniſter of death, 2. Corinthians 3. 7. and ſo putting vs out of all heart in our ſelues, it cauſeth vs to flie to the throne of grace, and ſo is our ſchoole-maſter to bring vs to Chriſt, Galat. 3. 24. Thirdly, it ſerues as a rule of good life: Dauid ſaith, that the word of God (ſpecially the law) is a lanterne to his feet, and a light to his paths, Pſal. 119. 105. So that though a regenerate man bee not vnder the law, in regard of iuſtification, or accuſation, or coaction, or condemnation: yet he is vnder it, in regard of direction, and inſtruction, for it ſhewes what is good, what is euill, what we ought to doe, and what to leaue vndone. Laſtly, wheras Paul ſaith, Beare ye one anothers burden, and ſo fulfill the law of Chriſt: the word SO hath great Emphaſis; for it implies the manner how the Galatians, and all men are to fulfill the law, not by obſeruing circumciſion, daies, or times, moneths, or yeares, as the falſe apoſtles taught: but by bearing and tollerating the infirmities of their brethren. It may not vnfitly bee applied to the religious order of Franciſcans, Dominicans, Carthuſians, &c. Let them not thinke that they keepe the law by abſtaining from fleſh, by whipping themſelues, by ſingle life, counterfeit faſts, voluntary pouerty, regular obedience, &c. But let them comfort the afflicted, releeue the diſtreſſed, beare with the weake, ſupport one another in loue, and SO they ſhall fulfill the law of Chriſt.

3 For if any man ſeeme to himſelfe, that he is ſomewhat, when he is nothing, he deceiueth himſelfe in his imagination.

In this verſe the Apoſtle remooues an impediment, which hindereth moſt from performing the former dutie, of bearing other mens burdens, and that is, a vaine conceit and imagination they haue of their owne excellencie, farre aboue their brethren: in thinking themſelues too good to do any duty or ſeruice vnto them, to be their packhorſes to beare their burdens. This vaine imagination and ſwelling conceipt (which puffeth vp the moſt) the Apoſtle laboureth to purge in this place, when he ſaith, He that ſeemeth to himſelfe, &c. where by the way wee may obſerue the method of the Apoſtle, firſt, to giue rules of direction; after, to remooue impediments which may hinder our obedience. 2. We ſee here the force of the word, which ſearcheth the ſecrets of the heart, Hebr. 4. 12. in that it caſteth downe the imagination, and euery high thing that is exalted againſt the knowledge of God: and bringeth into captiuity euery thought to the obedience of Chriſt, 2. Corinthians 10. 4. In the wordes wee may obſerue theſe foure things: I. That men are nothing of themſelues. II. That though they be nothing, yet they ſeeme to themſelues to bee ſomewhat, and that of themſelues. III. That in ſo doing they deceiue themſelues. IV. The remedies againſt the ouerweening of our ſelues.

For the firſt, it may be demaunded how it can be truly ſaid, that men are of themſelues meere nothing? Is he nothing that is created after the image of God, in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe? Are Princes and Potentates nothing that are called Gods in Scripture? Are they nothing that prophecie, and worke miracles? Anſ. Paul ſpeaketh not of the gifts of God, beſtowed vpon men; but of the men themſelues: and of them, not as they were in the ſtate of innocencie before the fall, but as they are now in the ſtate of corruption and apoſtaſie; or in the ſtate of grace, as they are conſidered of, in, and by themſelues. Thus euen ſpirituall men, are nothing of themſelues: (for of them eſpecially the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, as it may appeare out of the firſt verſe.)

For firſt, all are by nature the children of wrath, and firebrands of hell. 2. the gifts of God beſtowed vpon vs whether of nature or of grace, are not ours, but Gods, the giuer of them. Therefore no man may arrogate more vnto himſelfe, then an other in regard of them, ſeeing all of vs are but ſtewards, & the things we haue are but talents, left vs to imploy to our maſters aduantage. If thou haſt receiued them (ſaith Paul) why boaſteſt thou thy ſelfe, as though thou hadſt not receiued them? 3. Be it that a man bee in Chriſt and ſanctified, yet he hath no greater right to the merits of Chriſt, nor greater part in them, then hee which is leſſe ſanctified: for though ſanctification hath degrees, and a certaine latitude, yet iuſtification hath none. So that a man is in truth nothing of himſelfe. 1. Becauſe he hath his beeing and beginning of nothing, and tendeth of his own nature to corruption, and nothing. 2. In that he is not that which he imagineth himſelfe to be. 3. Though he haue ſome gifts and graces of God, yet is hee nothing, becauſe he is farre ſhort of that which he ought to be. 1. Cor. 8. 2. Vpon theſe conſiderations Abraham acknowledgeth himſelfe to be but duſt and aſhes, Gen. 18. 27. Dauid comparing himſelfe with the magnificence of Saul, ſaith, What am I, or, what is my fathers houſe? 1. Sam. 18. 18. Nay, whether we conſider man abſolutely in himſelfe, or relatiuely in reſpect of other creatures, as thoſe glorious bodies, the Sunne, Moone, ſtarres, we may ſay with the Prophet Dauid, Lord what is man, that thou art mindfull of him, or the ſonne of man, that thou regardeſt him? Pſal. 8. 4.

πᾶν κτιστὸν, τρεπτόν. Damaſcenus.

Paul confeſſeth himſelfe to be nothing, in, of, or by himſelfe: but by the grace of God (ſaith he) I am that I am, 1. Cor. 15. 10. And againe, I was nothing inferiour to the very chiefe Apoſtles, although I am nothing. 2. Cor. 12. 11. The Apoſtle affirmeth of euery man, which thinketh he knoweth ſome thing, that he knoweth nothing as he ought to know. 1. Cor. 8. 2. and of many, that they are puffed vp and know nothing. 1. Tim. 6. 4. For a ſwelling conceit, and emptineſſe vſually goe together.

The ſecond generall thing to be obſerued in the words, is this; That it is naturall for men to thinke too wel of themſelues, to magnifie themſelues aboue others in their conceits, and in a manner to deifie themſelues; & to nullifie others in compariſon of themſelues: and this ouerweaning of a mans ſelfe, is a branch of pride. For a man looking vpon himſelfe through the ſpectacles of ſelfe-loue, doth thinke euery ſmall gift of God, which he ſeeth to be in himſelfe, to be farre greater then in truth it is: imagining meere ſhadowes, to be ſubſtances; or molehilles to be as bigge as mountaines. For as a man that is in loue, doth thinke the blemiſhes and deformities in his loue, to be ornaments, which make her more beautifull: So thoſe which with Narciſſus are in loue with themſelues, and dote vpon their owne gifts, iudge the vices which they ſee to be in themſelues, to be vertues. Simon Magus though a wicked wretch, a limme of the diuell, a ſorcerer, &c. yet had this conceit of himſelfe, and gaue it out alſo, that he was ſome great man. Act. 8. 9. to wit, the great power of God, verſ. 10. The Church of Laodicea, thought ſhee was rich, and increaſed with goods, and had neede of nothing: whereas ſhee was wretched, and miſerable, and poore, and blind, and naked, Apoc. 3. 17. And ſo the skarlet ſtrumpet thought her ſelfe a Queene, and that ſhee was out of all danger of downfall, when ſhe was alreadie fallen. Apoc. 18. 2. 7. Yea this corruption is ſo natural, that euen the regenerate themſelues, who, are in part ſanctified, are tainted therewith: and generally, they that haue receiued greater gifts of knowledge, of ſanctification, &c. are moſt readie to ouerweene their own gifts except God giue them grace to reſiſt this temptation: for knowledge puffeth vp. 1. Cor. 8. 1. The Apoſtles themſelues contended which of them ſhould ſeeme to be the greateſt. Luk. 22. 24. Yea in all ages there haue beene ſome in the Church ouerweening themſelues, as in Chriſts time the Iuſticiarie Phariſies: after them, the Catharists, or Puritanes, who both proudly and odiouſly called themſelues by that name, thinking themſelues without ſinne: the Donatiſts, that they were a Church without ſpot or wrinkle: the Iouinianiſts, that a man cannot ſinne after the lauer of regeneration: The Pelagians, that the life of a iuſt man in this world hath no ſinne in it at all: and of later times the Semi-Pelagian hereticke, who will be ſomething of himſelfe, and will haue ſome ſtroke in his firſt conuerſion, and will concurre with Chriſt in the worke of Iuſtification. It will be ſaid, Papiſts aſcribe all the praiſe to God. Anſw. So did the Phariſie, Luk. 18. verſ. 11.

and yet a wicked Iuſticiarie for all that. Now all this ariſeth from ſundrie cauſes: the firſt is, the bitter roote of pride, that was in our firſt parents, when as they affected a higher place, in deſiring (through diſcontentment of their owne eſtate) to deifie themſelues, and become equall to the higheſt Maieſtie, in knowing good and euill.

The ſecond is, the ouermuch conſidering the good things we haue; as when the Phariſie conſidered that he gaue tithe of all that hee poſſeſſed, that hee faſted twiſe a weeke, that he was not thus and thus, as other men. Luk. 18.

The third is, the comparing of our ſelues with the infirmities that wee ſee to bee in others: the Phariſie was puffed vp, by comparing himſelfe with extortioners, vniuſt men, adulterers, and with the Publican.

The fourth is, the falſe flattering, and applauſe of men, which ſooth vs vp in our humours, in perſwading vs to be that which in truth we are not; as the people flattered Herod, when they gaue a ſhoute, and ſaid, The voice of God, and not of man. Act. 12.22.

The third point is, that they which thus ouerweene their gifts, in thinking themſelues ſomewhat when they are nothing, doe notably deceiue themſelues: as thoſe that thinke they haue the ſubſtance, when they haue but the ſhadow, as thoſe that dreame they are Kings or Princes, beeing in truth but baſe perſons: or to vſe the Prophets ſimilitude, Eſa. 29.8. Like as an hungry man dreameth, and behold he eateth, and when he awaketh his ſoule is emptie: or like as a thirſtie man dreameth, and lo he is drinking, and when he awaketh behold he is faint: and his ſoule longeth. Men are deceiued two waies, either by others, or by themſelues: by others, as by flatterers, they are deceiued occaſionally; by themſelues cauſally, or properly. For he that doth iudge himſelfe to bee that which indeede he is not, he may haply pleaſe himſelfe, but he doth but pleaſe himſelfe in an errour: for in truth he deceiueth himſelfe in his imagination: the Apoſtle Iames ſaith, If any man ſeeme (ſpecially to himſelfe) to be religious, and yet refraineth not his tongue, he deceiueth his owne heart, his religion is vaine, Iam. 1.26. So likewiſe, they that are only hearers of the word (and therefore thinke that all is well enough with them) though they be not doers thereof) deceiue their owne ſelues, Iam. 1.22. And verily this corruption is ſo great, that as men can be content to be deluded by flatterers & clawebackes, which pleaſe them in their itching humours: ſo they willingly ſuffer themſelues to bee deceiued, euen by themſelues, to the end that they may appeare to others, to be that which in truth they are not: that ſo they may aduance and magnifie themſelues in the account of the world. For as Alexander the great, beeing in India, cauſed his ſouldiers, to make & leaue behind them bittes and horſe ſhoes, of an extraordinary greatnes; hudge ſpeares, maſſie ſhields, big helmets, long ſwords, and other furniture for horſe and man, fitting rather Hippocentaurs, or Giants, then men of ordinarie ſtature; and all to the end, it might be ſaid in future time, that Alexander was a mightie Monarch indeede: So many there be, who (ſetting the faire ſide outward) make goodly glorious ſhewes in the eies of men; and ſo would haue others to thinke of them according, (farre aboue their deſert,) that poſterity might iudge them to bee that which indeede they are not: and ſo with Alexander in deceiuing others, they wittingly deceiue themſelues. Which ſpirituall guile of deceiuing our ſelues in matters touching our ſaluation, is moſt dangerous, when men delude themſelues, in perſwading themſelues falſely, that they know ſufficient, that God is to be loued aboue all, our neighbour as our ſelues, (which is as much as all the preachers in the earth can ſay:) that they beleeue; when in ſtead of faith, there is nothing but damnable pride, and preſumption: that they repent, when it is nothing but deceitfull counterfeiting, and hypocriſie. Beſides the danger, conſider the indignitie of it: men can abide nothing leſſe, then to be deceiued and circumuented by others, and yet behold, they are deluders and deceiuers of themſelues: and that which doth more aggrauate the indignitie of it, in ſuch things as ought to be beſt knowne and moſt familiar vnto them, wherin it is a ſhame they ſhould be deceiued, viz. in the knowledge of themſelues, and that which is yet more, in a matter of greateſt moment, in the ſaluation of their ſoules. What maruaile therefore is it, that men ſhould be deceiued by the ſeducer of all ſeducers, the diuell, who are ſo eaſily deceiued of themſelues, or rather willing to deceiue themſelues.

ρεναπατᾶ.

ἀπατῶν καρδί-αν αὐτοῦ.

παραλογιζόμενοι ἑαυτούς.

Plutarch. in Alexandro.

Further obſerue, that proud conceited perſons, ſuch as haue an ouerweening of themſelues and their gifts, and of all men thinke fowle ſcorne to be deceiued, euen they are eaſilieſt deceiued, yea and that of themſelues: for ſo the Apoſtle ſaith, He that thinketh he is ſomewhat, &c. deceiueth himſelfe in his imagination.

Againe, marke hence, that no men, be their gifts neuer ſo rare, their callings neuer ſo high, their places neuer ſo great, are too good to beare other mens burdens; for they that think themſelues to be ſomewhat, ſome great men, that is: too good to put vnder their ſhoulders to beare the frailties, and infirmities of their brethren, doe nothing herein but deceiue themſelues. Princes and Potentates of the earth are prophecied by Eſay, chap. 49. verſ. 23. to be nourcing fathers, and nourcing mothers vnto the Church, not onely by nouriſhing and defending it, (as the nource her child) but alſo by bearing with the frailties and wants which are therein.

Laſtly, conſider that this ſelfe-conceitedneſſe, and ouerweening of a mans ſelfe, is the very bane and poyſon of loue; for it maketh proud men thinke themſelues too good to become packe horſes or drudges to beare other mens burdens, to become ſeruiceable vnto them in any duty of loue, or to tollerate their frailties, or to yeeld of their right, or to ſuffer iniuries at their hands, or to put vp any little indignitie, without ſtomacke and diſcontent: becauſe they imagine themſelues euery way better then their brethren, & therefore ought to be tollerated, but not ſo bound to tollerate and beare with others; So that where ſelfe-loue is, there is no true brotherly loue; It was well ſaid of the Poet, Non benè conueniunt, &c. maieſtas & amor. It may be ſaid, may not he that is priuie to his owne vertues, in conſcience of his owne worth, iudge himſelfe to be ſomewhat, that is, to be that which indeede he is, or to haue a greater meaſure of knowledge, grace, and other gifts, then they that haue leſſe.

Anſ. He may. For humilitie is not ſottiſh: the maſter in humilitie cannot thinke his ſcholler more learned then himſelfe, except he ſhall thinke againſt his conſcience. For that ſaying, Phil. 2. 3. Let euery man thinke better of another, then of himſelfe, muſt bee reſtrained onely to equalles, and not extended to ſuperiours in regard of their inferiours. Secondly, I anſwer, that the Apoſtle in that place, ſpeaketh not of the gifts and graces beſtowed vpon men, but of the perſons themſelues, and of them, not ſo much as they are in the account of men, as in the account of God. For he ſaith not, Let euery man thinke another more learned, wiſe, diſcreete, ſober, then himſelfe (for ſo he may thinke againſt his conſcience) but, Let euery man thinke another (that is, any other that is his brother in the Lord) better then himſelfe, to wit, before God. And this euery man may do with good conſcience; for albeit another ſhall outwardly ſeeme more ignorant, negligent, backward, in matters of religion then himſelfe, yet for any thing hee knoweth, he may be higher in the fauour of God, then he: And therefore though a man erre in thinking of another, better then of himſelfe, yet he ſhall not do any thing againſt his conſcience. Thus the Publican accounted the proud Phariſie better then himſelfe. For he held him as iuſt, himſelfe not worthie to looke vp to heauen: yet herein he ſinned not, nay he is commended for it, though he erred in his iudgement of the Phariſie. And ſo if the Phariſie had reputed the Publican better then himſelfe, that is, higher in Gods fauour then himſelfe, he had not ſinned, nor done againſt his conſcience. For though hee might iudge himſelfe more iuſt then the Publican, in regard of his life paſt, yet for his preſent eſtate before God hee could not. Though Dauid knew in the particular quarrell betwixt Saul and him, that Saul was vniuſt, and he innocent, yet if he ſhould haue thought better of Saul in generall, then of himſelfe, he ſhould but haue done his duty.

The fourth and laſt point, containeth the remedies of this euill, which are the rather to be conſidered, becauſe it is a great ſinne, one of thoſe ſeauen which the Lord doth moſt of all deteſt, Prou. 6. 17. a dangerous ſinne, hauing a heauie woe attending vpon it, Woe to them that are prudent in their own eyes. Iſa. 5. 21. a ſinne almoſt incurable, Seeſt thou a man that is wiſe in his owne eyes? there is more hope of a foole then of him, therefore the remedies are more carefully to be knowne, and applied. The remedies are ſpecially fiue.

Prou. 26. 12

The firſt is, to looke our ſelues in the glaſſe of the Law, which will ſhew what we are without flatterie, or partialitie: and by it we ſhall ſee nothing in our ſelues but the vgly ſhape of Satan, cleane defacing the image of God, and that in vs there dwelleth no good thing (as Paul ſaith of himſelfe, Rom. 7. 18.) that there is nothing but vanitie in our minds, rebellion in our wils, a confuſed ataxie in all our affections, tranſgreſſion in our liues. The viewing of our hearts and liues in the Law, and the conſidering of our wretched eſtate, in that we are vnder the fearefull curſe, which is a thunderbolt annexed to euery breach thereof, will driue vs out of all conceit of our ſelues, from our ſelfe-loue, and ſelfe-liking: nay, it will make vs goe out of our ſelues, not onely to denie our ſelues, as Chriſt commands, but euen to abhorre our ſelues, repenting in duſt and aſhes, as Iob did, chap. 42. 6. cauſing vs to become flat nothing in our ſelues, that wee may be ſomething in Chriſt, as Paul ſaith. Let no man deceiue himſelfe: If any man among you ſeeme to be wiſe in this world, let him be a foole, that he may be wiſe.

1. Cor. 3. 18

Secondly, when wee feele our ſelues to be tickled with the itching humour of ſelfe-loue, and ſelfe-liking, ariſing from our hidden corruption, either in regard of outward gifts, or inward graces: we muſt make our owne euils, ſins, blemiſhes, imperfections (for there is no man but hath one or other) a ſoueraigne remedie againſt it, and ſo (as it were) driue away one poyſon with another. As to call to minde ſome great deformitie that is in our bodies, ſome great infirmitie that is in our minde, ſome croſſe or miſerie in our outward eſtate, ſome vile and abominable ſinne which we haue committed, and the horrible puniſhment, to the which we are lyable by reaſon thereof; and no doubt but the ſerious conſideration of theſe, or any of theſe, will be auaileable, to nippe pride in the bud, and kill the ſerpent in the ſhell: and in ſo doing we ſhall with the Peacocke, now and then caſt our eyes downeward, to our feete, the fowleſt and vglieſt things we haue: and not alway ſtand in admiration of our gay feathers and glorious traine.

Thirdly, we muſt conſider that the things for which we looke ſo high, and ſwell ſo in our

A our owne conceits, are not our owne, but lent vs for a time. For what is there, that thou haſt not receiued? whether in gifts of bodie, or graces of minde? nay, whether thou ſpeake of ſoule, or bodie it ſelfe? and if thou haſt receiued it, why boaſteſt thou thy ſelfe as though thou hadeſt not receiued it? what vanitie is it, for a man to be proud of another mans garment? or for a woman to boaſt of her borrowed haire? The wicked perſecutors of the Church are reprooued for ſacrificing to their nets, and burning incenſe to their yarne. Hab. 1.16. Further, we muſt conſider we haue not onely receiued them, but that we haue ſo receiued them, as that they are not our owne, with which we B may doe what we liſt, but talents lent vs for a time, & left with vs to employ, ouer which we are but ſtewards and bayliffes, not lords or maſters; and that we muſt bee countable for the ſmalleſt gift, euen the leaſt farthing, how we haue got it, kept it, beſtowed it: the time will come when it ſhall be ſaid vnto thee, Giue an account of thy ſtewardſhip, Luk. 16.2. Therefore we ought not ſo much to bee puffed vp with the greatneſſe of our talents, as to bee humbled with the conſideration of the ſtrict reckning that God will require at our hands, ſeeing that of him, to whome much is committed, much ſhall be required.

Fourthly, to the end we may auoid this ouerweening of our ſelues, let vs compare our C ſelues with the maieſtie of God, in whoſe ſight, we are but as ſilly wormes, crawling vpon the ground, nay in compariſon of whom, we are leſſe then nothing, and vanity it ſelfe. Conſider, that to him euery knee doth bowe, of Phil. 2.10. things in heauen, in earth, and vnder the earth, and thou wilt not be ſo conceited of thy ſelfe, that a ſilly man doth crouch vnto thee: that to him euery tongue doth confeſſe, ver. 11. and ſing his praiſes, the bleſſed Angels crying continually Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God of Sabbath, heauen and earth are full of thy glorie: and then a ſhort blaſt of winde, or popular applauſe, ſhall not ſo eaſily puffe thee vp, like an emptie bladder, or carrie thee away, as it did Herod, Act. 12. But to omit this odious D compariſon, betwixt a fraile mortall man, and the glorious euerliuing God (there being no compariſon betwixt finite and infinite) let vs neuer compare our ſelues with our inferiours, but with our ſuperiours & betters, who are eminently aboue vs, in euery gift and bleſſing of God, in regard of whoſe honours and preferments wee are but baſe, and contemptible: in regard of whoſe knowledge, we are but children, and know nothing: in regard of whoſe riches, we are but beggars, and haue nothing. For as Dauid, when he beheld the wonderfull frame of the heauens, thoſe glorious creatures, the Sunne, the Moone, and the ſtarres, by and by made this vſe of it to himſelfe, to conſider his owne vileneſſe in regard of them, What is man that thou art Pſal. 8. 4. mindfull of him? or the ſonne of man, that thou viſiteſt him? So when we compare our ſelues with others, that are as farre aboue vs, as the heauens are aboue the earth, whoſe gifts and graces doe as farre excell ours, as the bright ſunneſhine the dimme candle light: we cannot chuſe, but be abaſhed, and confounded in our ſelues; acknowledging, that there is no ſuch cauſe why wee ſhould ſo magnifie our ſelues aboue others, and nullifie others in compariſon of our ſelues.

4. But let euery man prooue his owne worke, and then ſhall he haue reioycing in himſelfe onely, and not in another.

Here the Apoſtle laieth downe another remedie againſt ſelfe-loue and ouerweening of our ſelues, and it is the fift and the laſt of which I purpoſe to entreate, and it ſtands in proouing and examining of a mans owne worke by it ſelfe, without comparing it with an other mans worke, and withall in the approouing of it vnto God. Let euery man approoue his owne worke. And hee giues two reaſons, why euery man ought to approoue his owne workes vnto God, and to conſider them abſolutely in themſelues, and not relatiuely in reſpect of others: the firſt reaſon is in this verſe, then ſhall he haue reioycing in himſelfe only, and not in another: the ſecond, in the next verſe, For euery man ſhall beare his owne burden.

Touching the remedie. Let euery man prooue his owne worke. The word tranſlated prooue,* ſignifieth alſo to approoue, as Rom. 14. ver. 22. Bleſſed is he that condemneth not himſelfe in the thing that he approoueth. 1. Cor. 16. 3. Whoſoeuer ye ſhall approoue or allow of by letters. And ſo the word is vſed in Engliſh, when we ſay ſuch a one is to prooue a will, that is, approoue it.

* δοκιμάζειν.

ἐν ᾧ δοκιμάζει

οὓς ἐὰν δοκιμάσητε.

The word in this place (I take it) may bee vnderſtood in both ſenſes, to prooue our workes, and to approoue them. How we are to prooue our workes by taking triall and examination of them, I haue already ſhewed in the former verſe. But we are further to approoue them to God, according to Pauls commandement: ſtudie to ſhew thy ſelfe approoued vnto God, 2. Tim. 2.15. and his practiſe, in coueting alway to be acceptable vnto him. 2. Cor. 5.9. This approouing of our workes is a ſoueraigne remedie againſt ouerweening of our ſelues: for he that alwaies ſtands vpon his triall, and Gods approbation, cannot bee puffed vp with ſelfeloue of himſelfe, or ſelfe-liking of his owne workes: but rather humbled with the conſideration of Gods abſolute iuſtice, and his owne imperfections, and ſo ſtirred vp with greater diligence to worke out his ſaluation with feare and trembling.

Now we ſhall approoue our workes vnto God, if we obſerue theſe three things. Firſt, that all our actions (ſpecially in the worſhip & ſeruice of God) be grounded vpon the will and word of God; and not vpon will-worſhip, or humane inuentions: otherwiſe it will be ſaid, Who required theſe things at your hands?

Secondly, that we performe all our actions ſincerely & vprightly, as in the preſence of God, with an honeſt heart, and a good conſcience: as Abimelech proteſteth of himſelfe, Gen.20.5 and Hezekiah, Iſay 38 3. and Paul, Act.23.1.

Thirdly, that they alway tend to a good end, as the glorie of God, Whether ye eate, or drinke, or whatſoeuer ye doe, doe all to the glorie of God. 1.Cor.10.30. and the good of our brethren, Let all things be done to edification, 1. Cor.14.26.

It may here be demanded, whether we may not approoue our ſelues, and our actions to men? To which I anſwer that we may, and ought. For although we may not bee men-pleaſers, that is, ſuch as frame and temper our actions, and our ſpeeches, ſo, as they may alway be pleaſing to the corrupt humours and wicked affections of men (for then we were not the ſeruants of God,) Gal. 1.10. Yet we are to pleaſe them in that which is good to edification, Rom.15.2. 1.Cor.10.33. And Chriſt commandeth that our light ſhould ſo ſhine before men, that they may ſee our good works. Math.5.16. And Paul biddeth vs to procure honeſt things in the ſight of all men. Rom.12,17 And whatſoeuer things are true, and honeſt, and iuſt, and pure; whatſoeuer appertaine to loue, and are of good report, we muſt thinke on them, and practiſe them. Phil.4.8. Yet wee muſt ſeeke for the approbation of men, with theſe cautions.

First, we muſt ſo ſeeke for the approbation of men, as that we doe not ſeeke it, nor reſt in it alone, but withall ſeeke to be approoued of God. For hee that praiſeth himſelfe (and ſo conſequently, he that is praiſed of others) is not approoued, but he whome the Lord praiſeth. 2. Cor.10.18. How can ye beleeue (ſaith our Sauiour Chriſt) which receiue honour one of another, and ſeeke not the honour that commeth of God alone? Ioh.5.44.

Secondly, we muſt ſeeke for the approbation of God in the firſt place; and in the ſecond place, to be approoued of men, as Chriſt did: for he grew in fauour firſt with God, and after with men, Luk.2.52. and the Elders, who by faith obtained a good report, Heb.11.2. reade Rom.14.18.

Thirdly, we muſt neuer looke for the approbation of the multitude, or acclamation of the moſt: for that cannot be done without ambition, and vaine-glorie, in ſeeking popular applauſe, VVoe be to you, when all men ſpeake well of you, Luk.6.26. Thus Chriſt ſaith, He ſought not praiſe of men. Ioh.5.41. For thoſe that are addicted to popular applauſe, and are ouer curious of their credit, immoderately ſeeking to get and keepe a good name with all ſorts of men, while they ſeeke for fame, they loſe a good name, in ſeeking fame from the wicked, which is but a ſhadow, and loſing a good name in the opinion of the godly, which is the ſubſtance.

Fourthly, we muſt ſo farre ſeeke for the approbation A of the wicked, that we miniſter no not the leaſt occaſion of offence vnto them. 1.Cor.10.32. Giue no offence, neither to the Iew, nor to the Gentile: but to conuict their conſciences, and to ſtop their mouthes by our godly & vnblameable conuerſation, which may be a preparatiue for them againſt the day of their viſitation. 1.Pet.2.12. Haue your conuerſation honeſt among the Gentiles, that they which ſpeake euill of you, as of euill doers, may by your good workes which they ſhall ſee, glorifie God in the day of the viſitation.

Fiftly, in doing our duties, we muſt not reſpect the iudgement of the world, neither fearing the faces, nor the cenſures of men. This was Pauls practiſe. 1.Cor.4.3. I paſſe very little B to be iudged of you, or of mans iudgement: we muſt goe through good report, and euill report. 2. Cor. 6.8.

Laſtly, we muſt ſeeke to be approoued of men, not ſo much in regard of our ſelues, as that, by this meanes Gods glorie may bee more and more aduanced: for our light muſt ſo ſhine before men, that they may ſee our good works, and glorifie our father, which is in heauen. Math. 5.16. If we obſerue theſe ſixe cautions, we may with good cõſcience ſeeke to get a good name, which will bee vnto vs as a precious oyntment, refreſhing vs with the comfort of a godly life. Prou.22.1. Eccl.7.3.

Thus much of the Remedie. The reaſon followeth, And then ſhall he haue whereof to re- C ioyce in himſelfe, and not in another. The words tranſlated to *_reioyce_, ſignifie, to _glorie:_ which is more then to reioyce. καύχημα ἔχειν. There is a double ground of glorying: one, out of a mans ſelfe: another in himſelfe. Out of himſelfe, in God alone, Let not the wiſe man glorie in his wiſedome, nor the ſtrong man in his ſtrength, nor the rich man in his riches. But let him that glorieth, glorie in this, that he vnderſtandeth and knoweth me. Ier.9.23,24. 1.Cor.1.31. In himſelfe, in the comfortable teſtimonie of a good conſcience. Our glorying is this, the teſtimonie of our conſcience, that in ſimplicitie, and godly pureneſſe, we haue had our conuerſation in the world. 2. Cor. 1.12. The one, is glorying before God, the other before men. The one, of iuſtification, the D other, of holy conuerſation for time paſt, and conſtant reſolution for time to come. The one in the teſtimonie of our conſcience, the other in the teſtimonie of Gods Spirit, witneſſing to our ſpirits, that we are the ſonnes of God. Rom.8.16. 2.Cor 1.12. The firſt is not meant in this place, but onely the ſecond. For no fleſh can glorie in his preſence. 1.Cor.1.29.

It will bee ſaid, This glorying in a mans ſelfe, is vaine glorie, and a branch of pride. Anſw. It differs from vaine glorie: firſt, in the foundation: for vaine glory hath for his ground our owne vertues and gifts, conſidered as comming from our ſelues, & not from God: whereas this true glorying is grounded vpon them, as they are fruits of regeneration, proceeding from our iuſtification by Chriſt, and reconciliation with God. Secondly, in the end: Vaine glorie tendeth to the aduancing of our ſelues, in an opinion of our proper iuſtice, and deſert. This true glorying aimeth at the glorie of God alone.

Obiect. Paul reprooues thoſe that conſider their owne gifts onely, neuer comparing themſelues with others. 2. Cor. 10, 12. They vnderſtand not that they meaſure themſelues with themſelues, and compare themſelues with themſelues. Therefore it ſeemes that a man, by comparing himſelfe with others, may haue whereof to reioyce. Anſw. He reprooues the falſe Apoſtles in that place for glorying in the gifts which they had, and the number of Proſelytes which they had wonne, neuer comparing themſelues with himſelfe, or any other Apoſtle, which was the cauſe they were ſo puffed vp with pride. For to compare our ſelues with thoſe that are eminently aboue vs, is a notable meanes to abate pride: as I haue already ſhewed. Whereas the meaſuring of our ſelues by our ſelues, with our inferiours, is the onely way to encreaſe it. And this is it which the Apoſtle reprooues in this place.

Further, we may reioyce, or glorie in the teſtimonie of a good conſcience, if we obſerue theſe rules.

I. In our beſt deſires, endeauours, actions, we muſt labour to feele our owne defects: that we doe not the good wee ſhould, nor in that manner we ought.

II. We muſt labour to haue euen our beſt workes, (our almes, praiers, &c.) couered with the righteouſnes of Chriſt: for it is the ſweete odour of his ſacrifice, that doth perfume all our actions, that they may be acceptable to God, being offered with the praiers of the Saints vpon the golden altar, Reuel. 8. 3.

III. We muſt acknowledge all the good things we haue, the will and the worke, the purpoſe and the power, to proceede from God alone. Phil. 2. 13. Iam. 1. 17.

IV. We muſt reioyce in them, not as cauſes, but as fruits of iuſtification: ſo that if the queſtion be whether we be iuſtified by them, or not? we muſt renounce them, tread them vnder our feete, and account them as doung, as Paul did. Phil. 3. 8.

Hence we learne ſundry things.

I. That if we would haue a light heart, and paſſe our time merrily with comfort and content, we muſt looke to approue our hearts to God in all our actions.

II. It confutes the opinion of the multitude, who iudge thoſe that make conſcience of ſinne, and leade a more ſtrict life then the common ſort, endeauouring with Paul to haue alwaies a cleare cōſcience toward God, and toward men, of all others to lead a moſt melancholike, ſadde, and vncomfortable life. For the truth is, this is the onely true ioy, all other ioy is but counterfeit in compariſon: it is radicall, proceeding from the heart: the other but ſuperficiall, from the teeth outward: it comforts a man in the middeſt of afflictions: whereas a man may haue the other, and yet in the middeſt of mirth his heart will be ſorrowfull: this is permanent and during, the other tranſitorie and fading. It is like the ioy in harueſt. Pſal. 4. verſ. 7. and which they haue that deuide a ſpoyle. Eſa. 9. 3. therefore Salomon ſaith it is a continuall feaſt. Prou. 15. 15. and Peter calles it ioy vnſpeakeable, and glorious. 1. Pet. 1. 8.

Act. 24. 16.

III. This ſhewes, that there is much falſe ioy in the world, conſiſting wholly in honours, profits, pleaſures: none of which haue their ground in a mans ſelfe: and therefore beeing out of a mans ſelfe, they are not true & durable, but falſe and vaniſhing ioyes. Now thoſe which haue no comfort but out of themſelues, are of foure ſorts. Firſt, ſuch as reioyce and glorie in the opinion that the world hath of them, and not in the teſtimony of their owne conſcience. Secondly, ſuch as reioyce not in their reconciliation with God, but in their blameleſſe conuerſation, in that they haue not beene open offenders, or men of ſcandalous life. Luk. 18. 11. Thirdly, ſuch as reioyce in the vertues of their anceſtours, as the Iewes bragged they were the ſeede of Abraham. Ioh. 8. 33. which vaine glorying of other mens vertues, Iohn Baptiſt reprooueth, when he ſaith, Thinke not to ſay with your ſelues, we haue Abraham for our father, &c. Matth. 3. 9. Fourthly, ſuch as reioyce and thinke themſelues in a good caſe, becauſe they ſee others worſe then themſelues: this is right the Phariſies ioy, O God I thanke thee, I am not thus, and thus, or like this Publican. Luk. 18. 11. This is it which the Apoſtle directly aimeth at in this place: when men thinke themſelues iuſt, becauſe others are more wretched then thē ſelues: and pure, becauſe others are more defiled. Whereas other mens hainous ſinnes ſhall not iuſtifie vs and our leſſer ſinnes, ſaue only as Ieruſalem iuſtified her ſiſters, Sodome, and Samaria. Ezek. 16. 51. But ſo a man may be iuſtified, and yet condemned.

5. For euery one ſhall beare his owne burden.

Here Paul laies downe a ſecond reaſon of his aſſertion, in the former verſe, why euery man ought to prooue his owne worke, rather then to be curious in ſearching into the liues, and ſkanning the actions of other men, becauſe euery man ſhall beare his owne burden, which is all one with that Gal. 5. 10. To beare a mans owne iudgement: and that Rom. 14. 12. To giue an account to God for himſelfe. It is a prouerbiall ſpeech, the meaning whereof is expreſſed by the like. Ier. 31. 30. Euery man that eateth the ſower grape, his teeth ſhal be ſet on edge. And by that which is common amongſt vs, Euery veſſell ſhall ſtand vpon it owne bottome: that is, euery man ſhall beare the puniſhment of his owne ſinne. For as the Indian is not therfore white, becauſe the Morian is more blacke, or as the ſand blinde is not therefore ſharpe-ſighted, becauſe ſome other is ſtone blinde. So no man is therefore acquit of his ſinnes, becauſe others are greater ſinners: or exempt from puniſhment, becauſe others ſhall vndergoe a deeper condemnation. Therefore conſidering that euery man muſt beare the guilt and puniſhment of his owne ſinne, he ought more narrowly to looke to himſelfe, then to others; and to bee a more ſeuere cenſurer of himſelfe, then of another.

For the better vnderſtanding of the words, ſundry queſtions are to be diſcuſſed.

Onus rationis reddendæ: onus infirmitatis participandæ. Auguſt. contra ſcript. Petil. lib.3. Beda & Lub. in hunc locum. Hugo de S. Victor. in Gal. quæſt. 58.

Firſt, it may bee demaunded, how euery man ſhould beare his owne burden, ſeeing we are commaunded to beare one anothers burdens? Anſwer. There are two ſorts of burdens. The firſt is, of giuing an account to God: thus euery man ſhall beare his owne burden, for euery man muſt giue an account for himſelfe vnto God, Romanes 14. 12. The ſecond is, of bearing one anothers infirmities, of which Paul ſpeakes, verſ. 2. In this ſenſe a man is not to beare his owne burden: but euery man his brothers. For the Apoſtle (to croſſe the opinion of thoſe which thought a man was polluted with other mens ſinnes,) ſaith, Euery man ſhal beare his own burden, And to meete with the careleſneſſe of others, who reſpect themſelues alone, neuer minding the good of their brethren: he ſaith, Beare ye one anothers burdens.

II. Obiect. By bearing of our owne burdens, is vnderſtood giuing an account for our ſelues vnto God. Now euery man is not to giue account for himſelf alone, but for thoſe alſo that are committed to his charge, as the father for his childe, the maſter for his ſeruant, the magiſtrate for the ſubiect, the ſheepheard for the ſheepe, Ezech. 34. His blood will I require at thy hand, Hebrewes 13. 17. They watch ouer your ſoules, as they that muſt giue account. Anſwer. Gouernours and ſuperiours are not to giue account for the ſinnes of thoſe that are committed vnto them: but for the ſinnes which themſelues commit, in not looking vnto them, not admoniſhing them, not reſtraining them, not taking condigne puniſhment of them for their offences. This is plainely taught, Ezechiel 33. 8, 9. If thou doeſt not admoniſh the wicked of his way, hee ſhall die for his iniquity, but his blood will I require at thy hand. Neuertheleſſe, if thou warne the wicked of his way, to turne from it, if he doe not turne from his way, he ſhall die for his iniquity, but thou haſt deliuered thy ſoule.

III. Obiect. Infants which haue not ſinned after the manner of the tranſgreſſion of Adam, do beare the burden of Adams ſinne: therefore all doe not beare their owne burden. Anſwer. Firſt, the words are properly to bee vnderſtood of perſonall or actuall ſinnes, which are proper to euery man in particular, and not of originall ſinne, or the ſinne of our nature, which is common to all mankinde, beeing propagated together with nature. Secondly, I anſwer, that Adams ſinne was our ſinne: and therefore ſeeing infants partake with him in the ſinne, it is iuſt with God they ſhould partake with him in the puniſhment, and ſo beare their owne burden. For albeit the tranſgreſſion of Adam was his actuall and perſonall ſinne: yet it is ours by imputation and propagation of nature together with corruption. For as Leui was in the loines of Abraham, when Melchizedech met him, and payed tythes in Abraham, Hebrewes 7. 9, 10. So all mankinde was in the loines of Adam when he ſinned, as the branches are in the roote, or in the ſeed. And therefore when hee ſinned, wee alſo ſinned, as the Apoſtle ſaith, In whome all ſinned, Rom. 5. 12. For ſo the words are in the originall, and not as it is commonly tranſlated, for as much as all men haue ſinned.

In ſeminali principio.

ἐφ' ᾧ πάντες ἥμαρτον.

IV. Obiect. In the ſecond commaundement, the Lord threatneth to viſit the ſinnes of the fathers vpon the children to the third and fourth generation. Therefore they beare not their owne burden, but part of their parents burden: and parents doe not beare their whole and entire burden, but their children for them. Anſwer. The clauſe in the ſecond commaundement of viſiting the ſinnes of the fathers vpon the children, doth not contradict that of Ezechiel 18. 19. The ſonne ſhall not beare the iniquitie of the father, neither ſhall the father beare the iniquitie of the ſonne; the ſame ſoule that ſinneth, that ſhall die. For they are reconciled, verſe 14. 17. If he (that is, a wicked man) beget a ſonne that ſeeth all his fathers ſinnes, which hee hath done, and feareth, neither doth the like—he ſhall not die in the iniquitie of his father, but ſhall ſurely liue. Therefore the threatning in the ſecond commaundment, is not to bee vnderſtood abſolutely, as though God would alway plague the children for the fathers ſin, but conditionally, if they perſiſt and continue in their ſinnes, walking in their waies, and treading in their ſteppes. And the ſame anſwer is giuen in the ſecond commandement, that God will not viſit the ſinne of the fathers vpon the children, ſaue vpon thoſe that hate him. It may bee ſaid, The ſinnes of the parents are not vindicated vpon the children, becauſe the puniſhment inflicted vpon their poſterity, is not felt of the parents. Anſ. Firſt, children are (as it were) a part of their parents, and therefore they beeing puniſhed, their parents are puniſhed with them. Secondly, it is a corraſiue and a torment to parents, to know that their children ſhall be ſeuerely puniſhed and afflicted. Thirdly, the puniſhment of poſterity hath a relation to the parent, ſeeing God hath threatned hee will puniſh the children which walke in the wicked waies of their fore-fathers, that ſo he may teſtifie how extreamely hee abhorreth both their ſinne, and the ſinne of their progenitors. Fourthly, the parents ſinne is often a cauſe of the childrens ſinne, ſeeing that God in his laſt iudgement, curſeth a wicked mans poſterity, by leauing them to themſelues, to blindneſſe of minde, and hardneſſe of heart, that ſo they may fulfill the meaſure of their fathers, as our Sauiour Chriſt ſpeaketh, Mat. 23. 32. and by their owne ſinnes, may iuſtly pull vpon them condigne puniſhment. Laſtly, God doth more manifeſt his wrath againſt the ſinne of the parent by puniſhing the childe.

Obiect. V. Num. 25. 4. The chiefeſt of the Iſraelites were hanged vp before the Lord, for the fornication and idolatry of the people: therefore they did not beare the burden of their owne ſinne. Anſw. They were puniſhed for their owne ſinne, for they conſented to worſhippe the idoll, and commit folly with the daughters of Moab: or rather were principall ring-leaders, and firſt actors in this Comick-tragedy, as may appeare by the practiſe of Zimri, Prince of the familie of the Simeonites, verſe 6. in bringing Cosbie a Madianitiſh woman, into his tent, in the ſight of Moſes, and the whole congregation Therfore becauſe they did not hinder them from committing this fact, as they might, beeing in this place of gouernment, but did partake with them in the ſinne, they are firſt puniſhed, and that more ſeuerely: for a thouſand of them were hanged vp the ſame day, verſe 4. the reſt of people, to the number of 23. thouſand, were ſlaine by the ſword, at the commandement of God: verſe 5. to which Paul had an eye, when hee ſaid, that there fell in one day 23. thouſand. 1. Cor. 10. 8. meaning of the common ſort, excluding thoſe that were hanged vp: for in all there were 24. thouſand, Numb. 25. 9. Thus the contrariety which ſeemes to be betwixt thoſe two place, may be better accorded, then to ſay (as ſome do) that the pen-men, or ſcribes, failed in copying out the bookes. Or (as others) that it was ἁμάρτημα μνημονικὸν in Paul: or as others, that Paul is not cōtrary to Moſes, ſeeing that if there were 24 thouſand, (as Moſes ſaith,) there were 23. thouſand: for there is no reaſon why the Apoſtle ſhould vſe the leſſe number rather then the greater, (except that which I haue ſaid) conſidering the greater, is as round a number as the leſſe.

Obiect. VI. Dauid ſinned in numbring the people, and they were puniſhed for his ſinne: Achan ſinned, & the people fell ſlaine before the men of Ai: therfore euery man doth not beare his owne entire burden. The like may be ſaid of the children of the Sodomites, and of the firſt borne of the Egyptians, who bare the burden of their parents ſinne. Anſ. The people were puniſhed for their owne ſinnes: and ſo was Dauid, albeit not in his own, but in their perſons: for God puniſhed him in his kind, in deſtroying the people with that fearfull plague, in whoſe great multitude hee had gloried ſo much. Indeede their puniſhment was occaſioned by his ſinne: but cauſed by their owne: for no man, though neuer ſo holy, is without ſinne, and therefore none but deſerue puniſhment: nay, it is Gods mercy that we are not conſumed, Lam. 3. 22.

And albeit all the infants periſhed in the Deluge, and in the ouerthrow of Sodome & Gomorrha, which could neither imitate, nor approoue the actions of their fore-fathers: yet their death was deſerued. For though infants be truely called innocents, in regard of actuall ſinne: yet they are not innocents in regard of originall: for from the wombe they carry a woluiſh nature, which prepares them to the ſpoile, though they neuer did hurt: the Scorpion hath his ſting within him, though he doe not alway ſtrike; and though a Serpent may be handled whileſt the colde hath benummed him; yet when hee is warmed, hee will hiſſe out his venemous poiſon. Mans practiſe doth cleare God of vniuſtice in this behalfe, in killing the young cubbes, as well as the olde foxe: the wolues whelpes, as well as the damme. Albeit if wee ſpeake of their finall eſtate, and come to particulars, wee are to leaue ſecret iudgements to God. The example of Achan is more difficult, ſeeing that for his ſinne, 36. of the people were ſlaine, Ioſhua 7. 5. and his whole familie rooted out, verſe 25. who were not conſenting to his fact, nor guiltie of his ſinne. Yet ſomething may probably be ſaid in this caſe. Firſt, that they were guiltie of this his ſinne in part, in not puniſhing theft ſo ſeuerely as they ought to haue done, which was a meanes to embolden Achan to ſteale the execrable thing. Secondly, that priuate good muſt yeeld to the publike; as the life of euery particular perſon to the generall good of the whole Common-wealth: thus ſouldiers in the warres, redeeme the publike peace by the loſſe of their owne liues: now the manifeſtation of the glorie, of the wiſedome, power, and iuſtice of God, is the publike good of the whole Church: therefore mens priuate good, euen their liues, muſt giue place to it: eſpecially conſidering hee neuer inflicts temporall puniſhment for the publike good of his Elect, whome hee corrects in iudgement, not in iniurie. Thirdly, howſoeuer Achan did beare the burden of his owne ſinne; this iudgement might bee inflicted vpon them for their good: for temporall puniſhment, yea death it ſelfe, is ſometimes inflicted for the good of thoſe that are puniſhed, as we ſee in the children of the Sodomites, many whereof (no doubt) were taken away in mercie, leſt malice ſhould haue changed and corrupted their mindes: and ſometime for the terrour of others, to bee a warning-peece to make them take heede; and ſometime for both: as it may bee it was in this particular. Fourthly, ſinne committed by a particular man, that is a member of a politike bodie, doth after a ſort belong to the whole bodie:

thus the Lord ſaith, that blood defileth the land, which cannot bee clenſed of the blood that was ſhedde therein, but by the blood of him that ſhedde it, Numb. 35. 33. And thus Achans ſinne, though not knowne to the people, made the whole land guilty before God, till hee was put to death, Ioſh. 7. 11, 12. Laſtly, if the tything of an armie, for the offence of ſome fewe, haue beene thought lawfull and iuſt: why ſhould the death of 36 men ſeeme vniuſt for the ſinne of Achan, eſpecially conſidering it was to make the people more prouident to preuent and take heede of the like euill? If theſe reaſons ſatisfie not, yet let vs reſt in this, that Gods iudgements are often ſecret, but alway iuſt. See August. lib. quaeſt. in Ioſue. and Calvin in 7. cap. Ioſu.

Decimatio exercitus.

Object. V. 5. If euery man muſt beare his owne burden, Dauid ſhall as well beare the burden of his murthering Vriah, by the ſword of the children of Ammon, as Saul the murthering of himſelfe with his owne ſword: Peter his denying Chriſt, as Iudas his betraying him, &c. Anſ. By the ſentence of the Law, euery one is to beare his owne burden, and to ſatisfie for his owne ſinne, in his owne perſon: but the Goſpell, (the ſecond part of Gods word,) makes an exception: which is, that they which haue their ſinnes ſet vpon Chriſts reckoning, ſhall not giue account for them againe: and thoſe that haue the burden of them laid vpon his ſhoulders (who hath borne our ſinne in his body vpon the croſſe, 1. Pet. 2. 23.) ſhall not beare the burden of them themſelues at the laſt iudgement. Therefore true beleeuers, which haue Chriſt their ſurety, ſatisfying the rigour of Gods iuſtice for them, ſhall not anſwer or ſatiſfie for them themſelues: for they are freed by him from a three-fold burden. Firſt, from the burden of ceremonies (and ſo conſequently of humane lawes and ordinances) which were a yoke (as Peter ſaith) which neither we, nor our fathers, were able to beare, Acts 15. Secondly, from the burden of miſeries, and croſſes, which befall men in this life. He doth eaſe vs of this burden, by his word and Spirit, either in remoouing them away, Pſal. 81. 7. or in giuing ſtrength and patience to beare them, 2. Cor. 12. 9. or in mitigating and proportionating them to our ſtrength, 1. Corin. 10. 13. Thirdly, from the burden of ſinne, as well originall, as actuall, in beeing made ſinne, that is, accounted a ſinner, and made a ſacrifice for ſinne, for vs: as alſo by eaſing them that are heauy laden, in pacifying the perplexed conſcience, Mat. 11. 28. It will be ſaid, if Chriſt beare the burden of our ſinnes, euery man ſhall not beare his owne burden. Anſ. Both be true & may well ſtand together: for Legally, euery man is to beare his own burden, the Law requiring perſonall obedience, or ſatisfaction, or both. Euangelically, Chriſt our ſurety doth beare the burden of them, & ſatisfie Gods iuſtice for them. 1. Pet. 2. 23.

2. Cor. 5.

Vſe. Hence we learne, firſt, that no man can pay a ranſome for his brother, or redeeme his ſoule from death, or ſatiſfie the iuſtice of God for his ſinne, ſeeing that euery man by the tenour of the Law, is to beare his owne burden: and by the Goſpell, none can be our ſurety but Chriſt.

Secondly, here we ſee the nature of ſinne, that it is a burden to the ſoule: for it is heauier then the grauell of the earth, and the ſand of the ſea. It is a burden to the wicked angels, for it waighed them from the higheſt heauen, and made them fall like thunderbolts into the loweſt hell. To man: for as Dauid ſaith, it is a grieuous burden, too heauie for him to beare, Pſal. 38. 4. To God: for the hypocriticall and ceremoniall ſeruice of the Iewes, was ſuch a burden vnto him, that hee was wearied to beare it; Iſa. 1. 14. Beholde, I am preſſed vnder you, as a cart is preſſed that is full of ſheaues, Amos 2. 13. To the creatures, who groane vnder this burden, beeing by mans ſinne ſubiect to vanity, and corruption, Rom. 8. 20, 21. Hence it followeth then, that thoſe which feele not the waight and burden of their ſinnes, are dead beeing aliue, as Paul ſpeakes in another caſe, 1. Tim. 5. 6.

Thirdly, wee are not to wonder, that ſinne beeing ſo heauy a burden, ſhould be made ſo light a matter, by carnall men: for it is a ſpirituall burden, and therefore no maruell though it bee not felt of them that are all fleſh, and no ſpirit.

Fourthly, this ſhewes that the more a man doth feele the burden of his ſinnes, the greater meaſure of grace and ſpirituall life hee hath: and the leſſe he feeleth it, the more he is to ſuſpect himſelfe, that the graces of God doe waine, and decay in him. For corruption is not felt by corruption, but by grace: and therefore the more a man doth feele the burden of his owne corruptions, the more grace he hath.

Fiftly, by this wee ſee, that the greateſt part of the world are dead in their ſinnes, in that they haue no ſenſe nor feeling of this heauie burden. There is indeede great crying out of the ſtone in the reynes, becauſe it is felt to be a great torment to the body: but there is little or no complaining of the ſtone in the heart, becauſe men want ſpirituall life and ſenſe to diſcerne it. All men can take pittie vpon a beaſt, if hee lie vnder his burden, and will bee ready to helpe him vp againe. But all haue not the like ſight and ſenſe of the ſpirituall burden of ſinne, nor ſympathy of the miſery of their brethren, groaning vnder it.

Sixtly, whereas Paul ſaith, Euery man muſt beare his own burden, he meeteth with the prophaneneſſe and Atheiſme of our time, when men make a mocke at the day of iudgement, and the ſtrict account that euery man is to giue for himſelfe. The Iewes were woont to ieaſt at the threatnings of God, denounced by the Prophets, and to call the viſions of the Prophets, maſſa Iehoua, the burden of the Lord, in a merriment, vſing it as a by-word, Ierem. 23. 34. 36. 38. Thereby ſignifying that the threats of God, were but vaine bugs, or ſcarre-crowes, which might perhaps terrifie children, but could not hurt them. The like prophaneneſſe, infidelitie, atheiſme, hath crept into the mindes of many, who otherwiſe profeſſe the Goſpel, which they teſtifie by their ſpeeches, in ſaying they are ſure ſin is nothing ſo ougly, hell is not halfe ſo hotte, nor the diuell halfe ſo blacke, as preachers ſay they are: or if they be, they are ſure they ſhall not goe laden alone, with the burden of their ſinnes, but ſhall haue company, & ſhall perhaps abide the brunt as well as their fellowes. But alas, they know not that the burden of ſinne is intollerable, that it will eternally preſſe them downe to the gulfe of hell, and that they ſhall neuer be able to bee ridde or eaſed of it.

Seuenthly, we are here admoniſhed to take heede of euery ſinne, for there is no ſinne ſo ſmall but hath his waight, and ſuch a waight, as will preſſe downe to the bottomleſſe pitte, Rom. 6. 23. And though ſome bee greater then others, and ſinke a man deeper into condemnation, yet many ſmall ſinnes will as eaſily condemne, as a few great. Like as ſands, though but ſmall in quantity, yet beeing many in number, will as ſoone ſinke the ſhippe, as if it were laden with the greateſt burden.

Eightly, ſeeing the guilt and puniſhment of ſinne, is ſo heauy a burden, we are to eaſe and disburden our ſelues thereof. And that wee may doe this, wee muſt labour to feele the intollerable waight of it, preſſing, and oppreſſing the conſcience. Therefore as thoſe, who in their ſleepe are troubled with the Ephialtes or mare, feeling (as it were) a great mountaine lying vpon them, and preſſing them downe, would giue all the world the waight might be remooued: So we feeling the waight and burden of our ſinnes, are to labour to bee disburdened and eaſed thereof: and this wee ſhall doe by our repentance toward God, and faith in Chriſt, Matth. 11. 28. Come vnto mee all ye that are wearie and laden, and I will eaſe you.

Verſe 6. Let him that is taught in the word, make him that hath taught him partaker of all his goods.

In theſe words the Apoſtle laieth downe another rule, touching the maintenance of the miniſtery, and competency of allowance, for the Miniſters of the word: for it ſeemeth that the miniſtery among the Galatians, was at that time much neglected, at leaſt not ſo reſpected as it ought.

In handling of the rule, I will firſt ſhew the meaning of the words: ſecondly, the reaſons of the rule: thirdly, the obiections againſt it: laſtly, the doctrine and vſes, that are to be gathered from it.

The meaning.

Let him that is taught] The word tranſlated taught, ſignifieth him that is catechized, or taught familiarly, by word of mouth, or liuely voice, as when children are taught the firſt principles of religion. But here it hath a larger ſignification (as Oecumenius hath well obſerued) for him that is any way taught and inſtructed, whether it bee in the firſt principles, and rudiments, or in points of greater difficultie, whether plainely, and familiarly, (as catechizers vſe to doe:) or more profoundly, for the inſtruction of the learned.

κατηχούμενος.

κατηχούμενος, id eſt ὁ κατηχούμενος.

Taught in the word] What needes this addition (may ſome ſay,) is there any catechizing without the word? Anſwer. The Apoſtle addeth in the word, to ſhew that hee meaneth not ſo much the doctrine of Chriſtian religion, contained in the Scriptures, as the doctrine of the Goſpell, which by an exoche, or peculiar excellency, is called the word. Act. 16. 6. They were forbidden of the holy Ghoſt to preach the word in Aſia: which is expounded, verſe 10. to be the preaching of the Goſpel: Thus it is vſed, Act. 14. 25. When they had preached the word in Perga. The ſower ſoweth the word. And ſo in ſundry other places. And it is further called the word of the kingdome, Mat. 13. 19. becauſe it teacheth what is the kingdome of grace and glorie: and becauſe it being beleeued, or (as the Apoſtle ſpeakes, Heb. 4. 2.) being mingled with faith in our hearts, doth make vs free-denizens of the kingdom of grace in this life; and doth aduance vs to the kingdome of glory, in the life to come. Secondly, it is called the word of God, becauſe hee is the Author of it, & no creature, man, or Angell, 1. Theſſal. 3. 13. Thirdly, the word of ſaluation, Act. 13. 26. becauſe it ſhewes the way and meanes of attaining ſaluation. Laſtly, the word of life; Act. 5. 20. becauſe it doth not oney ſhew the narrow way, that leadeth to eternall life; but is in it ſelfe a liuely word, and mightie in operation, Hebrewes 4. 12. For as the powerful word of God in the beginning, did giue beeing to things that were not; ſo the Goſpel (beeing the power of God to ſaluation, to euery one that beleeueth) doth make new creatures, by the immortall ſeede of the word.

Make him that taught him] q.d. catechized him. Yet as before it muſt be taken generally for any kinde of teaching or inſtruction; for ſo the word is vſed elſwhere in Scripture, as Luke 1. 4. Act. 18. 25. Rom. 2. 18. 1. Cor. 14. 19. ſo that this text giues vs no iuſt occaſion to ſpeake of the originall, manner, vſe, and profit of catechizing.

Partaker of his goods] By goods hee* vnderſtandeth foode, rayment, lodging, bookes, and other neceſſaries, without the which, a Miniſter of the word cannot follow his calling: for Paul calleth theſe goods, according to the common opinion, which ſo iudgeth

* τροφὰς ἐνταῦ-αν τιμήν. Oecumen.

of them. Luk.12.19. Soule, thou haſt much goods laid vp for many yeares. Luk, 16.25. Sonne, remember that thou in thy life time receiuedſt thy good things.

Make them partaker] That is, communicate, affoord, giue vnto them theſe temporall things, ſeeing they giue you ſpirituall.

Of all his goods] Not in giuing all away, but imparting to their teachers what they ſtand in neede of: accounting nothing too deare for them. The Papiſts vpon this ground take tythe of all, as the Prieſts did in the Leuiticall Law: whereas Paul ſpeakes nothing of tythes.

There are foure principall duties, which the people are to performe to their Paſtor, three of them are recorded elſwhere in ſcripture. The firſt is, to heare them as Embaſſadours ſent of God, with reuererence. 1.Theſ.5.13. The ſecond is, to obey them, and ſubmit themſelues vnto them in the Lord. Heb.13.17. The third, to 1.Theſ.5.13 loue and honour them for their worke ſake. The fourth, the Apoſtle ſpeakes of in this place, to giue them not onely countenance, but alſo maintenance.

The reaſons of this rule are many and waighty.

We are bound (euen by the bond of nature) to maintaine our parents if they bee in want; becauſe they maintained vs, and gaue vnto vs our beeing: Paul ſaith, It is an honeſt thing, and acceptable before God, for children to recompence their parents and progenitors, 1. Timothie 5.4. Now if this be ſo, men are bound by the ſame right to maintaine their ſpirituall fathers in Chriſt, that haue begotten them anew by the preaching of the word: as Paul ſaith, Hee trauelled in paine of the Galatians, till 19 Chriſt was formed in them. Galat.4. and that hee begat Oneſimus in his bonds, Philem. verſ. 10. And 1. Corinth. 4. 15. In Chriſt Ieſus I haue begotten you through the Goſpell. Hence Paul commendeth the Galatians, Gal. 4 15. for that if it had beene poſſible, they would haue plucked out their eyes, and haue giuen them him. And ſurely we owe vnto our ſpirituall parents, and fathers in Chriſt, not onely this temporall traſh, but euen our ſelues, as Paul ſaith to Philemon, verſ. 19. Albeit I do not ſay vnto thee that thou oweſt vnto me, euen thine owne ſelfe.

II. It is a law of nations, and a concluſion grounded vpon common equitie, that thoſe that watch, labour, and ſpend themſelues, as a candle, to giue light to others, and that for the common good of all, ſhould bee maintained of the common ſtocke by all. And the Lord chargeth all the twelue tribes, euen all Iſrael, Deuteronom. 12. 19. Beware that thou forſakeſt not the Leuite, ſo long as thou liueſt on the earth.

III. Euery trade, calling, and condition of life, is able to maintaine them that liue therein (as experience ſhewes:) therefore we may not thinke, that the miniſtery, beeing A the higheſt calling, ſhould be ſo baſe, or barren, as that it cannot competently maintaine them that attend thereupon.

IV. The miniſters are the Lords ſouldiers, his captaines, and ſtandard-bearers, and therefore are not to goe a warfarre at 1.Cor. 9.7. their owne coſte: the Lords labourers in his vineyard, and therefore are worthie of their wages, and ought to eate of the fruite of the vineyard: the Lords ſhepheards, ſet ouer the flocke of Chriſt to feed his ſheep, & therfore ought to eate of the milke of the flocke. And ſeeing it was forbidden that no man ſhould Deut. 25.4. muzzle the mouth of the oxe, that treadeth out the corne: ſhall we think that God would B haue thoſe that threſh in his floore, and ſeparate the wheate from the chaffe, 1.Cor. 9.9, 10. the pretious from the vile, to be muzzled, or not to liue vpon their labours? for they are worthy double honour, that is, all honour, reuerence, help, and furtherance, which labour in the word and doctrine, 1.Tim.5.17.

V. The Miniſters are to giue themſelues wholly to reading, exhortation, doctrine, and to continue therein, 2.Tim.4. 13. 15,16. they are wholly to deuote themſelues to the building of the Church, and to the fighting of the Lords battels: and therefore not to bee entangled with the cares of this life, 2.Tim.2.4. therefore they are to haue their pay, and their allowance, that ſo they may attend vpon their callings, without diſtraction.

C VI. It is the ordinance of God (as Paul ſaith, 1. Cor. 9. 14.) that they which preach the Goſpel, ſhould liue of the Goſpel: therefore thoſe that doe not their endeauour, and enlarge not their liberalitie to vpholde and maintaine the Miniſtery in good eſtate, they withſtand (as much as in them lieth) the ordinance of God: beſides, they waſte & make hauocke of the Church of God: and are guilty of the blood of all that periſh for want of inſtruction.

I adde further, it is the will of God, that the Miniſters which labour in the word and doctrine, ſhould be plentifully and liberally D prouided for: (yet with moderation, that they draw not all mens wealth into their purſes, as the Pope and Church of Rome haue done into their coffers, of whome it is truely verified, Religio peperit diuitias, ſed filia deuorauit matrem.) which I prooue from the Leuiticall law: for the whole land of promiſe, beeing no bigger in compaſſe then Wales, or the fourth part of England: yet yeelded vnto the Leuites, at the appointment of God, beſides the ſhare which they had out of the ſacrifices, beſides tenths, firſt fruits, &c. 48. Cities, with their ſuburbes.

It may here bee demaunded, whether the Miniſters of the word are now to bee maintained by common contribution, and liberality of the people, or not?

Anſw. We muſt conſider, that if the Miniſters bee ſufficiently prouided for, by ſet ſtipends, as by ſome foundation, or by the reuenewes of the Church, men are not bound to contribute vnto them, and make them partakers of all their goods; although in regard of thankefulneſſe, they owe vnto them euen themſelues, as Paul telleth Philemon; but onely ſuch as haue not elſe wherewith to maintaine themſelues. And wee muſt conſider the reaſon why Paul commaundeth all that are inſtructed in the word, to make them that inſtructed them partakers of their goods, to wit, becauſe in Pauls time, and long after, the Church was not endowed with lands or goods, whereby the Miniſtery might bee vpholden, neither had it publike Chriſtian Magiſtrates, but was vnder cruell tyrants in perſecution: and therefore thoſe that were taught in the word, were to maintaine their teachers by liberall contribution, otherwiſe they might ſtarue: but now the Church beeing greatly enriched, they may without contribution be ſufficiently maintained of the Church goods.

And that it is much more conuenient for the Miniſters to bee maintained by ſette ſtipends, ariſing from goods proper to the Church, then by voluntary contribution, it may appeare by this, in that it cuts off ſundry inconueniences which in voluntary contributions either cannot bee, or are hardly auoided. Firſt, flatterie and ſuſpition of flatterie, in beeing thought to haue ſome perſons in admiration, becauſe of aduantage. Secondly, the poorer ſort are no way diſgraced by this meanes, as they ſhould be in contributions, except they did giue ratably as the reſt. Thirdly; diſſembling and deceit, in making as though they receiued little, when as they haue much, is cutte off in a ſette ſtipend. Fourthly, the euill diſpoſed would not ſo eaſily caſt off their miniſter, and ſeeke a new that would teach for leſſe; or would giue nothing at all, if they were touched to the quicke, and galled for their ſinnes. Fiftly, oſtentation in ſome in giuing much, and diſdaining thoſe that giue leſſe. Sixtly, ſuſpition of couetouſneſſe and filthy lucre in the miniſters in ſeeming to take of thoſe to whome they ought to giue. Seauenthly, diſgrace of the miniſtery, in gathering themſelues, or ſending others to gather the peoples liberality from dore to dore. Laſtly, a ſette ſtipend comes nearer the order appointed by God, in maintaining the Prieſthood vnder the Leuiticall law.

In the next place, I wil anſwer the common obiections that are made to the contrarie, by ſuch as thinke it is as eaſie a matter to ſay ſeruice in the Church, as to doe ſeruice in the houſe: to ſtand at the altar of God, as to follow their maſters plough; to preach in the pulpit, as to talke in the tauerne.

I. Obiection. 2. Theſſal. 3. 10. They which will not worke, muſt not eate. But Miniſters neuer plough, nor ſowe, nor hedge, nor ditch, nor vſe any painefull labour: for of all men they haue the eaſieſt liues: their greateſt paines is to reade ouer a fewe bookes, or to ſpeake a fewe wordes, once or twiſe a weeke. Therefore they are not to bee maintained. Anſwer. There is a two-folde labour, one of the body, another of the minde: now albeit the miniſters doe not wearie themſelues in bodily labour, yet they are not therefore idle: for the labours of the minde, doe farre exceede the labours of the body: they are more painefull, they ſpend the ſpirits more, they conſume naturall moiſture, and bring olde age ſooner. The holy Ghoſt calleth the miniſtery, the worke of the miniſterie. Epheſ. 4. 12. nay, a worthie worke, 1. Tim. 3. 1. therefore Paul ſaith, that thoſe Elders are worthy double honour that labour in the word and doctrine, 1. Tim. 5. 17. and hee exhorts the Theſſalonians, that they would know them that labour among them; and that they haue them in ſingular loue for their workes ſake, 1. Theſſ. 5. 12, 13. Hence it is that the Scripture doth vſually compare the worke of the miniſtery, to the moſt toylſome labour that may bee, as to the worke of the husbandman, to ſetting, to plowing, to ſowing, to reaping, to the labour in the vineyard: and the miniſter, to a builder: to a ſhepheard that watcheth his flocke; to a ſouldier that fights in the warres, &c. Againe, we may not iudge of the painefulnes of the calling, by the outward appearance: for ſo a man would thinke a King had the eaſieſt life of all; when as the truth is, the toyle which he takes, and the cares wherwith he is poſſeſſed, do exceede all other cares: if a man knew the trauaile that is required to the weilding of a ſcepter, and the paine that is taken in wearing of a heauy crowne, hee would hardly ſtoope downe to take the one into his hands, or to ſet the other vpon his head. The maſter builder doth not hewe the ſtones, nor worke the morter, nor carrie the rubbiſh, nor any ſuch like drudgerie; but onely ſtandeth by, and directeth the workemen; and yet his labour is double to any of theirs. The maſter of the Ship (a man would thinke) were idle, & did nothing: he ſtands not to the tackling, he ſtirreth not the pumpe, hee driueth not the oares, hee ſoundeth not the deepe, hee rideth not the ropes; but onely ſitteth ſtill at the ſterne, and looketh to the pole-ſtarre, & guideth the compaſſe; yet his labour paſſeth all the reſt: were it not for him, the ſhippe would run her ſelfe vnder the water, or ſtrike vpon the rockes, or ſplit vpon the ſands, or fall foule with another (as marriners ſpeake.) Euen ſo for all the world fareth it with the Miniſters of the word: they ſeeme to ſit ſtill, to be at eaſe, to do nothing; and yet their labour is double and treble to other mens bodily labour, except they be vnfaithfull, and doe the worke of the Lord negligently.

II. Obiect. Paul laboured with his hands in making of Tents, Act. 18. 3. that he might not bee chargeable to any, Act. 20.verſ.34. 2.Theſſ.3.8. Therfore Preachers are to maintaine themſelues, by their handie labour, and not be chargeable to the Church. Anſ. Pauls example prooueth not, that the Miniſter ought to liue by the labour of his hands: for firſt, himſelfe receiued a contribution of the Philippians, when he was abſent from them, Phil.4. 16. VVhen I was in Theſſalonica ye ſent once, and afterward againe for my neceſſity. Therfore if Paul receiued exhibition from other Churches, where he did not labour, it is lawfull for the Miniſters to receiue of thoſe whome they doe inſtruct. Secondly, conſider the reaſons why Paul would not take wages of the Church of Corinth, and ſome others. I. Leſt he ſhould be a burden vnto them, 2. Theſſ.3.8. VVe wrought with labour and trauell, day and night, becauſe we would not bee chargeable to any of you. 2.Cor.11.9. In all things I kept and will keepe my ſelfe, that I ſhould not be grieuous vnto you. II. That he might giue a preſident or example to others to treade in his ſteppes, 2.Theſſ.3.9. Not but that we had authoritie, but that we might make our ſelues an example to them to follow vs. III. That he might manifeſt what his end was in teaching the Goſpel, not to ſeeke himſelfe, but the ſaluation of his hearers. 2. Cor. 11. 14. I ſeeke not yours, but you. And verſ. 19. VVe doe all things for your edification. Phil.4.17. Not that I deſire a gift, but the fruit which may further your reckening. IV. That he might confound the falſe Apoſtles, which taught not freely, but receiued wages for their labour, whereas he receiued none: or leſt they ſhould ſlaunder him and his miniſterie, if he ſhould receiue wages: that he did it for filthy lucre. 2. Cor. 11. 12. But what I do, that will I doe, that I may cut away occaſion from them which deſire occaſion, that they might be found like vnto vs in that wherein they reioyce. Therefore Pauls example is altogether impertinent, and prooues nothing. For 1. hee himſelfe tooke wages: 2. when as he refuſed it, it was vpon ſpeciall conſideration: 3. he did not onely permit, but alſo command that the Miniſters ſhould be maintained.

III. Obiect. Matth. 10. 8. Freely ye haue receiued, freely giue: therefore as it was vnlawfull for the Apoſtles to take any reward for their labour, ſo is it for preachers at this day. Anſw. I. This text is ſpecially to be vnderſtood of the extraordinarie gift of working miracles, which Chriſt hauing freely beſtowed vpon them, he would haue them to vſe freely, not ſeeking thereby to enrich themſelues by exacting or taking any thing, or to winne reputation and glory among men. II. If we vnderſtand it of the whole miniſterie, as well of preaching, as of working miracles, it is to be taken as a precept forbidding onely filthy lucre, that they ſhould not make merchandize of the word of God ſetting it to ſale, in preaching the word with purpoſe to A benefit themſelues, to feede their bellies, or to get a name and reputation in the world, which is forbidden in other places, as 1.Tim. 3.3. Tit. 1. 7. but for the glorie of God, the diſcharge of their duties, and the ſaluation of their hearers. Great reaſon there is of this precept. 1. Becauſe the graces of God exhibited vnto vs in the preaching of the word, are ſo pretious, that they cannot be valued at any price, all earthly things a man can deſire, are not to be compared to them, as the wiſe man ſaith: therefore Peter ſaid to Simon Magus, Thy money periſh with thee, becauſe thou thinkeſt that the gift of God may be obtained by money, Act.8.20. 2. Becauſe it is not in mans power to ſell them, ſeeing he is not Lord ouer B them, but ſteward and diſpenſer of them, 1. Cor. 4. verſ. 1. 3. Becauſe that which God hath giuen freely, ought not to be ſold baſely: ſeeing by that meanes, that is made ſaleable, which God would haue free, which kinde of merchandize is vſed in the Church of Rome at this day, in their Indulgences, wherein they ſell pardons for remiſſion of ſinnes, and ſet euen heauen it ſelfe to ſale, for a ſmall ſumme of money. III. This text muſt ſo be expounded, as that it croſſe not other precepts in this commiſſion, and that Chriſt bee not contrary to himſelfe, which he ſhould be, if it were vnlawfull for preachers to take any thing for their paines: for in the 10. verſe, he ſaith, The workeman is worthie of his meate: C therefore he may receiue it: and verſ. 11. he enioynes them to enquire in euery towne where they came, who is worthy, and there abide. Therefore they were not vtterly barred from taking all neceſſaries, for they might take their lodging, their foode, their raiment; with this they were to be content, and more then this they might not take, though it were offered them, or forced vpon them. Thus Elizeus refuſed the gift offered him by Naaman, for curing his leproſie, leſt Gods gifts ſhould be made a gain, or leſt that which was giuen to ſet forth Gods glorie immediately, ſhould bee an occaſion of ſatisfying mens greedie deſires.

IV. Obiect. Matth. 10. 9. The Apoſtles are D forbidden by Chriſt, to poſſeſſe gold, or ſiluer, &c. Anſ. We may not preciſely vrge the letter of the text, for ſo we ſhall make the Apoſtles practiſe contrarie to Chriſts precept: and ſo he ſhould condemne himſelfe, for he had his bagge, which Iudas bare. He had beſides his vpper garment, Ioh. 13.4. and coate without ſeame, Ioh. 19.23. Luk. 22. 36. Peter had ſandalls, Act. 12. Paul had a cloake, 2. *Tim.*4. Yea Chriſt afterwards ſaith vnto thē, But now he that hath a bagge let him take it, and likewiſe a ſcrip, &c. II. It was a temporarie precept, giuen them in commiſſion only for that preſent, and their going without gold, ſiluer, a ſcrip, two coates, ſhooes, a ſtaffe, ſignifies, that they ſhould goe in haſt, committing themſelues wholly to the prouidence of God, not caring for prouiſion or victuals, which is ſignified by a ſcrip, by ſiluer & gold: nor of change of raiment, ſignified by two coates: nor of defending themſelues againſt violence, by the ſtaffe.

Vſe. Here we ſee that there are two ſorts of men in the Church, ſome teachers, others to be taught, called in Scripture teachers and hearers. The ground of this diſtinction, is taken from the good pleaſure of God, who hath ordained that man ſhould be taught by man, partly becauſe of mans weakenes, who could not endure the glorie and maieſtie of God, ſpeaking vnto him: partly, that nothing might bee aſcribed to the excellencie of the inſtrument, in the conuerſion of men, but that God might haue al the glorie of it, as the Apoſtle ſpeakes, 2. Cor. 4. 7. We haue this treaſure in earthen veſſels, that the excellencie of that power, might be of God, and not of man. There is ſet downe, Deut. 5. 23. &c. a notable ground for the inſtitution of the holy miniſterie by man, in ſtead of Gods liuely voice from heauen. And it was one of the ends which God had in giuing his law in ſo great maieſtie, to teach vs, that it is for our good, that he doth not inſtruct vs with his owne liuely voice from heauen, and ſpeake vnto vs in his owne perſon: and that therefore we ſhould be content, nay deſirous rather to bee taught by man. For when the people deſired that they might not heare the voice of the Lord any more, but that Moſes might ſpeake vnto thē, the Lord anſwered, They haue done well to ſay ſo, I will raiſe them vp a Prophet from among their brethren, like vnto thee, and I will put my words in his mouth, and he ſhall ſpeake vnto them all that I command him. Deut. 18. 17. 18. This croſſeth the curioſity of thoſe, who not contenting themſelues with the word of God deliuered by the miniſterie of man, deſire that God would ſpeake vnto them with his own mouth from heauen. For the Iſraelites found it by experience, that it was a fearefull thing, full of horrour and aſtoniſhment to heare the voice of God, therefore they deſire they may heare it no more, leſt they die. Deut. 18. 16. But the Anabaptiſts obiect that vnder the New Teſtament, all ſhall be taught of God. Ioh. 6. 45. and they ſhall not teach euery man his neighbour, and euery man his brother, ſaying, Know the Lord. Therfore the publike miniſterie is now needleſſe. Anſw. The words muſt not be vnderſtood ſimply, but comparatiuely, and ſynecdochically. Comparatiuely, that there ſhall be farre greater knowledge vnder the New Teſtament, then was vnder the Old. Iſa. 11. 9. The Apoſtle ſaith not, that there ſhall be no teaching at all, (for Chriſt hath giuen ſome to be Prophets, others Paſtors and Teachers, for the worke of the miniſterie, and the edification of the bodie of Chriſt. Eph. 4. 11. 12.) But that there ſhall be no neede of this kinde of teaching, to catechize them in the firſt rudiments, as to teach them what God is. Synecdochically, not of perfect & abſolute knowledge, for we all know but in part, 2. Cor. 13. 12. But of initiate or inchoate knowledge, which ſhall be conſummate in the life to come.

Ier. 31. 34.
Heb. 8. 11.

Further, vpon this diſtinction it followeth, that hearers are not to intermeddle with the publike duties of the miniſterie; for euery man is to abide in the calling wherein God hath placed him, and therein to liue contented. 1. Cor. 7. For no man may take vnto himſelfe this honour, but he that is called, as was Aaron, Heb. 5. 4. For albeit it bee true which Ambroſe writeth, that in the beginning of the preaching of the Goſpell, and founding of the Church of the New Teſtament, all Chriſtians did teach and baptize indifferently: yet afterward, when the Churches were founded, it was not lawfull, neither is it now. And though there be neither male nor female in Chriſt, but we are all one in him, Gal. 3. 28. namely, in receiuing of the Goſpel: yet in diſpenſing of it, there is great difference: it beeing vnlawfull for a woman to preach, or publikely to teach, I permit not a woman to teach, 1. Tim. 2. 12. Let women keepe ſilence in the Churches, for it is not permitted vnto them to ſpeake, 1. Cor. 14. 34. Apoc. 2. 20. This condemneth the fantaſticall opinion of the Anabaptiſts, that all men may ſpeake publikely without any difference, according to the inſtinct of the ſpirit, and meaſure of his gifts.

In comment. in 4 ad Epheſ.

Againe, when Paul ſaith, He that is taught in the word, &c. him that taught him in the word, &c. he ſhewes what the duty of the Miniſter is, that lookes to liue by his miniſterie, namely, not to feede his auditorie with Philoſophie, or fables, or lying Legends: not to preach poetical fictiōs, Thalmudical dreams, Schoolemens quidditties, Popiſh decrees, or humane conſtitutions, or to tickle the itching eares of his auditory with the fine ringing ſentences of the Fathers (for what is the chaffe to the wheate?) But hee muſt preach the word of God: for there is no word nor writing in the world beſides, that hath a promiſe to be the power of God to ſaluation. Rom. 1. able to make men wiſe to ſaluation. 2. Tim. 3. 15. to giue an inheritance amongſt them that are ſanctified. Act. 20. To be liuely and mightie in operation, ſharper then any two edged ſword, entring through, euen to the deuiding aſunder of the ſoule and ſpirit, the ioynts and the marrow, and to be a diſcerner of the thoughts & intents of the heart, Heb. 4. 12. and that can make the man of God abſolute to euery good worke. 2. Tim. 3. 17. but onely this word giuen by diuine inſpiration. It beeing not onely the ſeede by which wee are begotten and borne anew, but the foode by which we are nouriſhed: both milke for the babe, that is, a nouice in religion, & ſtrong meate for him that is of yeares: and therefore beeing perfect nouriſhment, the bread of life for him that is hungrie, and the water of life for him that is thirſtie, what needes there any mote. Beſides no word nor writing hath the propertie of fire ſaue onely the word of God, to diſpell the darkneſſe of ignorance by enlightening the minde with the ſauing knowledge of the truth, and to heat, yea to enflame the affection with a zeale of Gods glorie, by burning vp the corruption of nature. Againe Diuinitie is the miſtris, all liberall arts, tongues, hiſtorie, &c. are but handmaids to attend vpon her: now when the miſtris is ſpeaking, it is good manners for the maide to hold her peace. To this word alone the Prophets were tyed by their commiſſion: What I ſhall command them, that ſhall they ſay. And the Apoſtles, You ſhall teach what I haue commanded you. Chriſt himſelfe taught nothing but that which he had heard and receiued of his Father. Ioh. 8.28. Paul deliuers nothing but that which he receiued of Chriſt, 1. Cor. 11. 23. and taught nothing but that which Moſes & the Prophets had writtē. Act. 26.22. Paul commands Timothie to charge the Paſtours of Epheſus, that they teach no diuers doctrine, either for matter or manner, for ſubſtance or circumſtance. Yet here wee muſt take heede of extremities, for in ſome caſes it is lawfull in preaching to vſe Philoſophie, the teſtimonie of prophane writers, and quotations of Fathers.

1. Tim. 1. 3. ἑτεροδιδασκαλεῖν. Nec aliud, vt Beza, nec aliter, vt vulg. editio.

I. When wee haue to deale with heathen men (who will not be ſo eaſily mooued with the authority of the Scriptures) we may conuict them by the teſtimonie of their owne writers, as Paul did the Athenians, Epicures, and Stoikes, by the teſtimony of Aratus, Act. 17.28. and the Grecians, by the teſtimony of Epimenides. Tit. 1. 12.

II. In preaching to a mixt congregation, where ſome are infected with Poperie, or ſome other hereſie, and will not receiue the doctrine deliuered, nor yeeld vnto the truth, except it haue the conſent of the Fathers of the Church.

III. In handling of ſome controuerſall point of diuinity, ſhewing that the doctrine we teach is no new doctrine, but that which was taught in the Primitiue Church, eſpecially in ſpeaking to the weake, who haue not as yet left their old ſuperſtition wherein they were nuzzeled.

IV. To cut off the calumniations of the malitious aduerſaries, who muſt needes haue their mouthes ſtopped by ſome other meanes then by the Scriptures.

V. In the neceſſarie vnfolding of the meaning of certaine places of Scripture, which without Philoſophie cannot bee conceiued. In ſuch a caſe we may vſe humanitie in deſcending to the reach and capacitie of the auditorie, and ſo teach heauenly things, by earthly things, as our Sauiour Chriſt taught regeneration by the ſimilitude of the winde, Ioh. 3. Yet all theſe muſt be vſed, firſt, ſparingly, ſecondly, when there is iuſt cauſe, thirdly, without oſtentation, fourthly, A deliuering nothing to the people, the ground whereof is not in the word.

This ſhewes, that the maine ſcope of the miniſterie, is, to preach the word purely, and to apply it powerfully to the conſciences of men: and it condemnes all deceitfull handling of the word, & all huckſter-like dealing, in mingling wine and water together, wheat and chaffe, gold and droſſe, in peruerting it with aguiſh and ſottiſh conceits, in wreſting it with allegories, tropologies, and anagogies, and in wringing the text they make it bleede, and ſo (as an auncient writer ſaith) preſſe the two dugges of the Scriptures, the old & new Teſtament, that in ſtead of milke they drinke nothing but blood. This B teacheth the hearers likewiſe to reſt contented with the bare word, without hungring after new doctrines, as the Athenians after newes, or beeing drawne away from the ſimplicitie that is in Chriſt, by the ſubtilty of ſeducers, or by deuices and quiddities of mans braine. Let thoſe therefore which loath Manna, and long for Quailes, remember that if God giue them their deſire, hee will alſo giue them their deſert. Let them take heede leſt he puniſh them with a famine, not of bread, nor a thirſt of water, but of hearing the word. Amos 8. 11. And let thoſe that haue itching eares, in heaping vp to themſelues a multitude of teachers, take heede alſo that they haue not tingling eares, when they ſhall heare C of the iudgements of God for the contempt of his word.

Voluſian. epiſt. ad Nichol. 1. Scripturarū mammillas dum durius preſſerunt, ſanguinem pro lacte biberunt.

2. Tim. 4. 3.

1. Sam. 3. 11

Further, whereas Paul ſaith; He that teacheth is to be maintained: it is a good Item for all idle drones that will not labour, and all dumme dogges that cannot bark, they may not expect the maintenance which is due vnto the Miniſters: for it is generally true of all men, and much more true of the Miniſter, that he which will not labour, muſt not eate. And great reaſon it is that he which looketh for his hire, ſhould doe his worke: he that would liue of the ſacrifice, ſhould miniſter at the altar: hee that lookes to be fed with corporall D bread, ſhould breake vnto his hearers the bread of life: hee that would reape carnall things, ſhould ſow ſpirituall things, hee that would not haue his mouth muzled, ſhould threſh out the corne: he that would drinke of the wine, ſhould plant the grape: he that lookes for milke, ſhould feede the flocke: that is, he that will liue of the Goſpel, ſhould teach the Goſpel. It is a maxime not onely of the Canon law, but grounded vpon the law of nature, that beneficium poſtulat officium, a benefit requireth a duty; or more plainely, a benefice requireth an office, and diligence in the office. They therefore that care not ſo much for the feeding of the ſheepe, as for the feeding of themſelues, & feare not ſo much the loſſe of the flocke, as the loſſe of the fleece, doe not onely violate the law of God, but euen the law of nations, and the law of nature.

2. Theſ. 3. 10

1. Cor. 5.

Againe, hence I gather, that thoſe that labour in the word and doctrine, may lawfully take wages, albeit they haue ſufficient of their owne to maintaine themſelues: it is the very equitie of this text. For if they that are inſtructed in the word, are to make thoſe that inſtructed them, partakers of their goods: then it is lawfull for them which inſtruct and teach, to receiue ſomething in recompence of their labour, ſeeing that the labourer is worthy of his wages. Yet this one caueat muſt bee remembred, that if receiuing of wages be a hinderance to the Goſpell (as it would haue beene in Paul) it is not lawfull: for we may not ſo vſe our libertie, as that we thereby hinder the free courſe of the Goſpell.

We may here further perceiue the great want of deuotion, which is in moſt men of theſe daies. For as the cry of the poore in the ſtreetes, and at our doores, is an argument that there is no mercie, no bowels of pitie and compaſſion: So, in that there are ſo many needy poore wandring Leuites, which would gladly ſerue for a morſell of bread, or a ſute of raiment, it is a pregnant proofe there is very ſmall deuotion in men for the maintenance of religion: eſpecially in thoſe which are ſo ſtraight laced, and ſhort ſleeued in beſtowing any thing for the good of the Miniſtery, and yet in keeping of hounds and hawkes, and worſe matters, in maintaining players, ieſters, fooles, and ſuch like, are very lauiſh and profuſe, to their great coſt. This hath bin the practiſe of the world, and the contemptible eſtate of the Miniſterie in former times. Foure hundred falſe Prophets were richly prouided for at Iezabels table, 1. King. 18. 19. whereas the true Prophets of God in the meane time were faine to hide their heads, hauing ſcarce bread and water, and that not without danger. Well, the practiſe ſhall condemne a number of profeſſours, nay, our forefathers zeale and forwardneſſe, (notwithſtanding they liued in blindneſſe) ſhall condemne our coldneſſe, in this behalfe: what ſpeak I of our forefathers? euen the ſtones in the ruinated Abbeyes, & other religious houſes, ſhall riſe vp in iudgement againſt vs: for thoſe places could maintaine thirtie or fourtie idle bellies, which did nothing but nuzzle men in ſuperſtitious idolatrie: wheras now the ſame place will not competently maintaine one or two to inſtruct them in the way to eternall life. And no maruell: for we take from the Church, as faſt as they gaue to it. In old time they were wont to ſay, What ſhall we giue the man of God? 1. Sam. 9. but now with the ſacrilegious church-robbers, they ſay, Come, and let vs take the houſes of God in poſſeſſion. Pſal. 83. 12. The Iewes were exceeding forward and liberall in their contributiō to the Tabernacle; ſome brought gold, others ſiluer, ſilke, precious ſtones; the meaner ſort, rams ſkins, goats haire, &c. ſo that more then enough was offered by them, in ſuch ſort that Moſes was forced to cauſe a proclamation to bee made to ſtay the people from offering, Exod. 36. 5. 6. This their example in beeing ſo forward to contribute to the materiall temple, ſhall condemne our backwardneſſe in conferring ſo little to the Miniſters, who are the liuing temples of God, and to the miniſterie which is in the place of the altar: for looke by how much God hath diminiſhed the coſt of the altar, and the charge of the ceremoniall worſhip vnder the old Teſtament; by ſo much more doth he require the Miniſtery to be maintained, & ſpirituall worſhip furthered in the New.

Laſtly, if they that doe not put to their helping hand to vphold the Miniſterie, are to be condemned; what condemnation trow we then, belongs to ſacrilegious perſons, that rob the Church of her reuenewes, and deuoure holy things?

7. Be not deceiued: God is not mocked: for whatſoeuer a man ſoweth, that ſhall he alſo reape.

Here the Apoſtle preuenteth ſundry ſecret obiections againſt the former precept, verſ. 6. For the Galatians might pleade for themſelues in this manner. Whereas thou enioyneſt vs, to make thoſe which inſtructed vs in the word, partakers of all our goods: alas, we cannot doe it: It is an vnreaſonable thing thou exacteſt of vs: for, as for ſome of vs, we haue a great family & charge to looke vnto, wife and children to prouide for: and for them we muſt prouide, otherwiſe we denie the faith, and are worſe then infidels, 1. Tim. 5. 8. others are poore & needy, fitter a great deale to receiue, then to giue: and thoſe that can giue are not ſo to giue, that others may bee eaſed, and they themſelues pinched, 2. Cor. 8. 13. And as for the Miniſters themſelues, many of them are couetous and inſatiable; and therfore it is euil ſpent that is beſtowed vpon them: ſome of them neede not, and therfore wee neede not to giue: and why doe not thoſe that are needy, follow Pauls example, who laboured with his hands and got his liuing by making of tents, becauſe he would not bee chargeable vnto any? or why doe they not lead a ſingle life (as in former times they did) that ſo they may be leſſe burdenſome to the Church, and more beneficiall to their brethren? Beſides all this, God hath promiſed he will bee the portion and inheritance of the Leuites, and therefore we neede not be ſo haſtie to ſhare with them in all our goods.

To theſe and all other vaine and friuolous excuſes of the ſame kinde, made by worldlings of corrupted minds, the Apoſtle anſwereth in theſe words, Be not deceiued, God is not mocked, as if he ſhould ſay, I know right well, you are very cunning in ſeeking out ſhiftes & pretending reaſons to excuſe your faults, and to exempt your ſelues from the performance of the former duty, and ſo to couer the curſed couetouſneſſe of your hearts with colourable excuſes: But, be not deceiued brethren, they are but figge-leaues, you doe but dance in a nette, you cannot bleare the all-ſeeing eyes of God: howſoeuer theſe reaſons may perſwade you, and goe for currant with men, yet they are but counterfeit in Gods eſtimate (with whome you haue to deale,) who is not mocked, nor can be deceiued, neither will be deluded with ſuch vaine excuſes: therefore take heede leſt in going about to deceiue them, you deceiue your ſelues: for looke how you deale with them, God will deale with you: and with what meaſure you mete vnto them, the ſame he will meaſure to you againe; for as you ſowe, ſo ſhall you reape. So that in theſe wordes the Apoſtle doth ſummarily compriſe theſe three things. Firſt, a diſſwaſion from this their vaine reaſoning, and wicked practiſe, laide downe by way of preuention, Be not deceiued. Secondly, a reaſon of the dehortation, ſhewing that theſe their excuſes are but friuolous and vaine, God is not mocked. Thirdly, a confirmation or proofe of his former reaſon, for whatſoeuer a man ſoweth, that ſhall be reape. The diſſwaſion is laide downe in theſe words, Be not deceiued. The like phraſe of ſpeech we haue in ſundry other places, as in that aduertiſement which Hezekiah giueth the Leuites, 2.Chro.29.11. Now my ſonnes be not deceiued: And Paul the Corinthians. 1.Cor.6.9. Be not deceiued; neither fornicators,&c. 1.Cor.15.33. Be not deceiued, euill ſpeeches corrupt good manners. Now men erre and are deceiued ſundrie waies, both in diuine and humane things (which appertaine not to this place.) Touching the deceit here mentioned, we are to know that a man may bee deceiued and that by himſelfe two waies. First, through ignorance, in judging that to be no ſinne, which is a ſinne, as Mal.2,17. when a man is perſwaded that God is to bee worſhipped in an image: that when he perſecutes the Saints of God, hee doth God good ſeruice. Secondly, when men are ſo wickedly wilfull, that they wittingly deceiue themſelues, in thinking they can deceiue God himſelfe, and ſo cunningly handle the matter, that hee ſhall not know their words, nor ſee their workes, nor vnderſtand their thoughts: that whether they doe good or euill, giue to the Miniſterie, or not; liue according to the fleſh, or according to the ſpirit, it is all one, ſeeing he conſidereth it not, and ſo promiſe to themſelues impunity, though they ſinne willingly, as Eue did in putting a peraduenture, where Gods threat was peremptorie. Both theſe ſorts of deceit are here vnderſtood, ſpecially the latter.

Vſe. Hence we may obſerue the deceitfulneſſe of ſinne, which maketh men thinke all is wel with them, and that there is no danger, &c. when the caſe is farre otherwiſe. This ſhewes that the heart of man is deceitfull aboue meaſure (as the Prophet ſaith) who can finde it out? or who can ſound the depth of the deceit of his owne heart? or who knowes the infinite windings and turnings which are in this intricate Labyrinth? Now this commeth to paſſe, partly by reaſon of originall corruption, which the Apoſtle ſaith is deceitful, Heb. 3.13. Take heede leſt any of you bee hardened through the deceitfulneſſe of ſinne: partly, by reaſon of long cuſtome in ſinne, whereby the heart is inured to deceit, Pſal. 32. 2. Bleſſed is the man—in whoſe Spirit there is no guile. For from this double ground it commeth to paſſe, that men are ſo wittie in defrauding the Miniſters of their due, in cutting them ſhort of their allowance, in embezeling and purloining from them what they can: and ſo ingenious in inuenting probable reaſons, and plauſible arguments, to deceiue themſelues withall, in accounting all to be gained that is thus gotten. This teacheth vs, firſt of all, to pray inſtantly that God would open our eies that we may ſee our hidden corruptions, and that he would annoint them with the eye-ſalue of his Spirit, that we may cleerely ſee, and rightly diſcerne of things that differ, conſidering that ſinne doth often apparell it ſelfe with the cloake of vertue. Secondly, we are to ſuſpect our ſelues of our ſecret ſinnes, and to aggrauate our knowne ſinnes by all circumſtances, ſeeing wee may ſo eaſily deceiue our ſelues, in flattering our ſelues to bee cleare of this or that ſin: or at leaſt not to be ſo grieuous ſinners as in truth we are. Thirdly, that it is the duty of the Miniſter to warne the people to take heede that they be not deceiued, as Paul doth, Eph.5,6. Let no man deceiue you with vaine words: for, for ſuch things commeth the wrath of God vpon the children of diſobedience.

Againe hence I gather, that in the prime of the Church, in the Apoſtles daies, when the Church of the New Teſtament was but in founding, the Miniſterie was in contempt: and (as it may appeare out of other places) the Miniſters were not onely neglected, or contemned, but reuiled, perſecuted, accounted as the filth of the world, and the off-skouring of all things, 1.Cor.4.13. or where they were better intreated, they were but abuſed, ſcorned, reputed braine-ſicke fellowes, as the Prophet was, 2.King.9.11. and Paul, Act.26.24. This hath beene, and is the account which the world maketh of the Miniſters of God, which muſt bee ſo farre from diſcouraging vs, that it ſhould Miniſter rather matter of ioy vnto vs, in that we are conformable by this meanes to Chriſt our head, who was not onely neglected of all, not hauing where to reſt his head, Luk.9.58. but laughed to skorne, accounted a pot-companion, a drunkard, and a glutton, a ſorcerer, one that had a diuell, and was madde, Ioh.10.20. For, if we ſuffer with him, we ſhall bee glorified with him. Rom.8.17.

Thus much of the dehortation: the reaſon followes to bee conſidered in the ſecond place, in theſe words, God is not mocked, where the Apoſtle ſhewes that their excuſes are but vaine, becauſe God is not mocked, nor will be deluded with ſuch pretences.

Firſt here the Apoſtles dealing is worthie to be obſerued, in that, reproouing them which neglected their duty to the Miniſters of the word, he bringeth in God himſelfe taking the matter into his owne hand, making the Miniſters quarrell, his own quarrell; and this he doth, to the end we might ſee whome we haue to deale withall, and whome we doe abuſe, when we abuſe the Miniſters of the word; to wit, that we abuſe not man, but God. For albeit, it bee true of all and euery ſinne, which Dauid confeſſeth of his owne particular murther and adulterie, that it is againſt God, yea againſt him alone, Pſal. 51. 4. yet in theſe and ſuch like caſes which tend to the vndermining of his Church, and the decay of his religion and worſhip, hee taketh himſelfe more directly aimed at, & more nearely touched. When the Iſraelites refuſed to haue Samuell and his ſonnes to rule ouer them, the Lord ſaith, They haue not caſt thee away, but they haue caſt me away, that I ſhould not reigne ouer them, 1. Sam. 8. 7. When the Leuites were defrauded of their due, the Lord by his Prophet telleth the people, Ye haue ſpoiled me in tithes and offerings, Mal. 3. 8. So, in this place, when the Galatians did wrongfully withhold and keepe backe that competent allowance, that was due to their teachers; he telleth them that it was a ſinne tending againſt God, who is not, nor will not, nor cannot be mocked: for what wrong ſoeuer is done to the meſſenger that is ſent, the ſame is done to his Lord that ſent him: and whatſoeuer diſgrace or indignitie is offered an Embaſſadour, the ſame redounds to the Prince, whoſe Embaſſadour he is. This ought to bee a Caueat vnto vs, to take heede how we contemne or neglect the Miniſters of God, ſeeing whatſoeuer wrong is done them, Chriſt takes it as done to himſelfe, Math. 25. 45. Act. 9. 4. This lets vs ſee the hainous ſinnes of many that profeſſe the Goſpell, ſpecially in this kinde, who, now at this day (if euer) are ingenious in defrauding, and eloquent in declaiming againſt the Miniſters of the word: in laughing them to skorne, as they did our Sauiour Chriſt, Mark. 5. 40. and abuſing them in tearmes & taunts, calling them bald prieſts, as young children called Elizeus bald pate, (no doubt following the example of their parents, of whome they learned it) aſcend thou balde pate, aſcend thou balde pate, 2 King. 2. 23. that they are too full of the ſpirit, as they derided the Apoſtles, in ſaying, They were full of new wine, Act. 2. 13. in making them their table-talke, making ſongs of them as the drunkards did of Dauid, and Ieremie. In ſcourging them with the whippe of the tongue, as the Stoicks called Paul a babler, Act. 17. 18. and Feſtus a madde man, Act. 26. Now in that they thus ſcornefully abuſe his Miniſters, and ſo indignely, and diſdainefully intreat his meſſengers, and Embaſſadours; what do they els but abuſe Chriſt Ieſus himſelf, & through their ſides, wound and crucifie him againe? When Senacherib, King of Aſhur reuiled Ieruſalem and Hezekiah the king, what ſaies the Lord? O virgin daughter of Sion, he hath deſpiſed thee, & laughed thee to skorne: O daughter of Ieruſalem, he hath ſhaken his head at thee. Whome haſt thou railed on, and blaſphemed? and againſt whome haſt thou exalted thy voice, and lifted vp thine eies on high? euen againſt the holy one of Iſrael, Eſay, 37. v. 22, 23.

The vſe. Hence we learne, that God hath an exact knowledge of all our actions, and cannot be deluded, Prou. 15. 11. Hell and deſtruction are before him, how much more, &c. Pſal. 11. verſ. 4. His eies conſider, his eye liddes trie the children of men. Pſal. 139. ver. 2. He knowes our thoughts long before they be. Heb. 4. verſ. 12. All things are naked and bare in his ſight. Reaſon it ſelfe ſhewes, that he which made the eye, cannot but ſee, he that made the heart and minde, cannot but vnderſtand the frame and motion thereof, Pſal. 94. v. 9. 10. &c.

II. This ſhewes the madneſſe of thoſe which ſay, God heareth not, ſeeth not, vnderſtandeth not; or which ſay in their hearts, How ſhould he heare? is there knowledge in the moſt high? or can hee ſee through the thicke cloud?

III. Hence we are taught in our praiers, to powre forth our hearts before the Lord, without concealing ſo much as the leaſt ſin, ſeeing we may eaſily delude men, and deceiue our ſelues, but God we cannot deceiue.

IV. It ought to be a bridle to vs to curbe and keepe in our corruptions, conſidering his eies pierce the darkneſſe, the moſt ſecret and hidden places, yea euen the ſecret cloſets and cabinets of our hearts.

Thus much of the reaſon: I proceed to the confirmation or proofe of his reaſon, in theſe words, For whatſoeuer a man ſoweth, that ſhall he alſo reape. Where the Apoſtle prooues, that God will not be mocked with vaine excuſes, ſeeing he will render to euery man, according to his workes, which is ſignified by this allegoricall ſpeech of ſowing and reaping, ſo often vſed in Scripture, as 1. Cor. 9. 11. 2. Cor. 9. 6. in which places, labour and coſt in doing good, and beeing beneficiall, ſpecially to the Miniſters of the word, is compared to ſeede; the workers to ſeedſmen; the Miniſters to whome this benefit is conferred, to the tilled ground: the gaine that accrewes vnto them thereby, to the harueſt, wherewith God will reward them, and that according to their workes, in the generall day of retribution. This metaphor of ſowing, doth elſewhere ſignifie all the morall actions of a mans life, whether they be good or euill. Of good actions, Salomon ſaith, He that ſoweth righteouſnes, hath

A hath a ſure recompenſe, Prou. 11.18. Of euill actions, he ſaith, Hee that ſoweth iniquitie, ſhall reape affliction, Prou. 22. 8. But here Paul reſtraines it, to thoſe good workes of liberality, which are performed in the maintenance of the Miniſtery. And he calleth that which is beſtowed vpon the Miniſters of the word, ſeede, which being ſowne, doth recompence the coſt, thirty, ſixty, and hundred folde: that ſo they might not thinke their labour loſt, nor their coſt beſtowed in vaine, ſeeing they were to receiue that which they laid forth, with aduantage.

But here it may be ſaid, This prouerbiall ſentence is not alway true: for ſometime men ſowe much, and gather but little, Deut. 28.38. B Agg. 1.6. nay ſometime they ſowe, and reap not, Mich. 6.15. Againe, experience ſhewes, that that which is ſowne, may degenerate into another kinde. Anſ. It is not neceſſary that prouerbiall ſentences ſhould bee true at all times, and in euery particular: if they be true for the moſt part, or in that for which they are brought, it is ſufficient, as that, Math. 13. 57. a Prophet is not accepted in his owne countrey, is for the moſt part true, though not alwaies. So, whatſoeuer a man ſoweth, the ſame commonly, and vſually, he doth reape.

But it will be ſaid, how can a man reap that which he ſoweth, ſeeing that Chriſt affirmeth it to bee a true ſaying, that one ſoweth, and another reapeth? C Ioh. 4.37. Anſ. In that one ſoweth, and another reapeth, it is not to be imputed to nature, but to the ſpeciall prouidence of God: the words are to be vnderſtood of the Prophets, who were the ſeedſmen, in ſowing the ſeedes of the Goſpell: and of the Apoſtles, who were the reapers, whoſe plaine and powerfull preaching of the Goſpell, did as farre exceede that of the Prophets, as the harueſt doth the ſeede time. Thus the time vnder the Law, is reſembled to childehood and infancie, that vnder the Goſpell, to mans eſtate, Galat. 4. 1, &c. Againe, it may be ſaid, the husbandman ſoweth not the bodie that ſhall bee, 1. Corinth. 15. 37. Therefore hee reapeth not that which he ſowed. Anſw. D Hee reapeth not the ſame indiuiduall, but yet the ſame ſpecificall bodie. It may further bee doubted of the truth of that which is ſignified by this prouerbiall ſentence, namely, whether euery man ſhall receiue according to his workes, for ſo euery man ſhould bee condemned. To which I anſwer, that it is not vniuerſally true, for if the righteous committe iniquitie, all his righteouſneſſe ſhall bee no more remembred: and, if a wicked man turne from his ſinne, none of his ſinnes that he hath committed ſhall be mentioned vnto him, Ezec. 33. 13. 16. It muſt therefore be reſtrained thus, He that doth wickedly, and perſeuereth therein to the ende: He that doth well, and continueth in well doing, ſhall receiue according to his workes, the ſeedes of his former ſinnes, ſhall not grow vp to the harueſt of condemnation. For it is the priuiledge, yea the happines of a righteous man, ſo to haue his ſinnes couered with the robes of Chriſt his righteouſnes, as that they ſhall neuer be vncouered to his ſhame, Pſal. 32. Eſa. 43.25. Againe, it may hence bee prooued, that ſanctification in death, is perfect, originall corruption being vtterly aboliſhed: and therfore though the booke of a regenerate mans conſcience be opened at the day of iudgement, yet nothing ſhall be found in it, but his good works, which follow him till the reſurrection, Apoc. 14.13. Beſides this, in the laſt ſentence pronounced by our Sauiour Chriſt, Mat. 25. only their good workes are mentioned, Come ye bleſſed of my Father, inherit the kingdome prepared for you, for I was hungry, and ye fedde me, &c. their ſins and imperfections, not ſo much as once named, but concealed and paſſed ouer.

II. Obiection. It may be ſaid, that neither the good nor the bad doe reape that which they haue ſowne: the godly for the ſeedes of good workes, reape nothing but affliction: the wicked for the curſed ſeedes of a damnable life, comfort and contentation. To which I anſwer, that it is not true, if wee reſtraine it to the tearme of this life, for ſo all men reape not as they haue ſowne. But it is vndoubtedly true of the life to come: for the iuſtice of God requires that all ſhould be rewarded according to their workes, Romanes 2. Hence therefore wee may gather, that ſeeing men muſt reape as they ſowe, and yet doe not reape, nor receiue their reward in this life: that there is another life after this, in which God will giue to euery one as his works ſhall be, and therefore there ſhall be a iudgement. And becauſe the body was partaker with the ſoule either in doing good or euill, it is iuſt likewiſe it ſhould be partaker either of miſery, or felicity: and therefore there ſhall bee a reſurrection.

III. Obiect. The whore of Babylon muſt be rewarded double. Apoc. 18.6 In the cuppe that ſhe hath filled to you, fill her the double. And the Saints pray thus to God, Render to our neighbours ſeauen folde into their boſome, Pſal. 79.12. Therefore it ſeemeth that ſome men ſhall not be iudged according to their works, becauſe they are puniſhed aboue their deſerts. Anſ. Shee is rewarded double, yet not aboue, but according to her deſerts, giue her double according to her workes, v. 6. the meaning is not: that ſhee ſhould bee puniſhed twiſe as much as ſhee had deſerued, (for it is the Law of God that the malefactour ſhould be beaten with a certaine number of ſtripes, not aboue, but according to his treſpaſſe, Deut. 25.2.) but that ſhee ſhould bee tormented twiſe as much as ſhee had tormented others. Againe, theſe phraſes and formes of ſpech, of rewarding double, or ſeauen folde, ſignifie, that God will pay wicked men home to the full (a definite number beeing put for an indefinite) as Gen. 4.15. Doubtles, whoſoeuer ſlaieth Cain, ſhal be puniſhed ſeauen folde. The meaning is not, that the murtherer of Cain ſhould bee puniſhed ſeauen folde more then hee was puniſhed for killing his brother Abel, (for it ſhould not haue beene ſo great a ſinne for a man to haue killed him, as it was for him to kill his brother) but that he ſhould be moſt ſeuerely and grieuouſly puniſhed.

IV. Obiection. Infants haue no workes whereby they may be iudged, ſeeing they do neither good nor euill, as the Scripture ſpeaketh of Iacob and Eſau, Romans 9.11. therefore all ſhall not bee iudged according to workes. Anſ. Theſe phraſes of Scripture, As a man ſowes, ſo ſhall he reape: euery one ſhall receiue according to his workes, &c. are not to be extended to all, but muſt bee reſtrained to ſuch as haue workes and knowledge to diſcerne betwixt good and euill, which infants haue not. For beſides that they are deſtitute of workes, they alſo want the vſe of reaſon: and therfore they ſhall not be iudged by the booke of conſcience, but by the booke of life. For to ſay as Hugo de S. Vict. doth vpon the Romanes, quæſt. 59. that they ſhall bee condemned for the ſinnes which their parents committed in their conception and natiuity, as though they themſelues had actually committed them, is contrary to that, Ezec. 18.20. The ſonne ſhall not beare the iniquity of the father.

V. Obiect. But how ſhall they be pronounced iuſt, who being come to yeares of diſcretion, yet haue no good workes, as Lazarus, & the theefe vpon the croſſe, who liuing leudly all his life long, was cōuerted at the laſt gaſpe? Anſw. That Lazarus had no good workes, whereby he might be declared iuſt, it cannot be prooued: the contrary rather may be gathered out of Scripture: and that the good theefe had no good workes, it is flatte againſt the text, Luk. 23. 40, 41. where hee maketh a notable confeſſion of Chriſt, and rebuketh his fellow, laboring to bring him to the faith, which was a memorable fact of Chriſtian charity. Secondly, though it were graunted that they had no good workes in action; yet they were full of good workes in affection, and by theſe they were to be iudged, God accepting in his children the will for the deed. Lazarus by reaſon of his extreame pouerty, and the theefe by reaſon of the ſhortneſſe of time which he had to liue in the world, could not bee plentifull in good workes, thereby to giue ſufficient teſtimonie of their vnfained faith: yet God accepteth a man according to that which hee hath, and not according to that which hee hath not, accepting the will for the deede, as hee accepted the willingnes of Abraham to ſacrifice his ſonne, as though hee had ſacrificed him indeede, Gen. 22.

VI. Obiect. God doth not proportionate the reward to the worke, becauſe he doth reward workes which are finite and temporall, A with infinite and eternall puniſhment. Anſw. Sinne beeing conſidered in reſpect of the act, as it is a tranſient action, is finite. But in a threefold cōſideration, it is infinite. Firſt, in reſpect of the obiect againſt whome it is committed: for beeing the offence of an infinite Maieſty, it doth deſerue infinite puniſhment: for if he that clippes the Kings coyne, or defaceth the Kings armes, or counterfeiteth the broad ſeale of England, or the Princes priuy ſeale, ought to die as a traytour, becauſe this diſgrace tendeth to the perſon of the Prince: much more ought hee that violates the Law of God, die the firſt and ſecond death, ſeeing the breach thereof doth not only tend to the B defacing of his owne Image in vs, but to the perſon of God himſelfe, who in euery ſinne is contemned, & diſhonoured. Secondly, ſinne is infinite in reſpect of the ſubiect. For ſeeing that the ſoule is immortall, and that the guilt of ſin & the blot togither, do ſtaine the ſoule, as the crimſin or ſkarlet die, the ſilke or the wooll; and can no more be ſeuered from the ſoule, then ſpots from the Leopard: it remaineth that ſinne is infinite in durance, and to deſerueth eternall puniſhment. Thirdly, it is infinite in reſpect of the minde, deſire, and intent of the ſinner, whoſe deſire is ſtill to walke on in his ſinnes, & except God ſhould cut off the line of his life, neuer to giue ouer ſinning, but to runne on in infinitum, commit- C ting of ſinne euen with greedineſſe.

Thus hauing the meaning of the words, let vs come to the doctrine and vſe. There be two principall reaſons which hinder men from beeing beneficiall and liberall to the Miniſterie. The firſt is, becauſe they thinke all is loſt that is beſtowed that way. The ſecond is, becauſe they are afraid leſt themſelues ſhould want. To both which the Apoſtle makes anſwer in this place, comparing our beneficence in the vpholding, maintaining, countenancing of the Miniſterie, to ſeede; to teach vs that as the husbādman doth ſowe his corne in the ground, neuer fearing the loſſe thereof, but hoping for a greater increaſe: not doubting his owne want, but aſſuring himſelfe of greater plentie: So wee D in ſowing the ſeedes of good workes, muſt neuer dreame of loſſe, or coſt, conſidering the more wee ſowe, the more wee ſhall reape: wee muſt neuer feare want, ſeeing wee ſhall receiue an hundred folde, Mark. 10.30. If men could bee perſwaded of this, that the time of this life is the ſeed-time; that the laſt iudgement is the harueſt; and that as certenly, as the husbandman which ſowes his ſeed, lookes for increaſe, ſo we for our good works, a recompence to the full, O how fruitfull ſhould wee bee, how plentifull, how full of good workes? But the curſed roote of infidelity, which is in euery man by nature, doth drie vp the ſappe of all Gods graces in vs, and make vs either badde, or barren trees, either to bring forth ſower fruites of ſinne, or no fruite at all, but to become vnprofitable both to our ſelues and others. For the reaſon why men are ſo colde in their liberality, ſo fruitleſſe, ſo vnprofitable, is, becauſe they doe not beleeue the promiſes of God, that hee is true of his word, that whatſoeuer they giue to the poore, or the Miniſters of his word, they lend vnto the Lord, and whatſoeuer they lay out, the Lord will reſtore to them againe, Pro. 19. 17. For if they were as well perſwaded of a recompence at the laſt day, as the husbandman is of a harueſt, they would be more frequent in duties of charity, and more plentifull in good workes, then commonly they be.

Further let it bee obſerued, that though theſe words bee but generally expounded in the verſe following, where the Apoſtle ſaith, Hee that ſoweth to the fleſh, ſhall of the fleſh reape corruption: hee that ſoweth to the ſpirit, ſhall of the ſpirit reape life euerlaſting: yet are they more particularly and diſtinctly ſet downe elſewhere in Scripture: as 2. Cor. 9. 6. He that ſoweth ſparingly, ſhall reape ſparingly, and hee that ſoweth liberally, ſhall reape liberally: that is, the harueſt ſhall not onely bee anſwerable to the ſeede, and the reward to the worke; but greater or leſſe according to the quantitie, and qualitie of the worke. For euery man ſhall receiue his reward according to his proper labour, 1. Corinth. 3. 8. For the more the husbandman ſowes, the more hee doth vſually reape (except God blowe vpon it, in curſing the land, as he did the Iſraelits, who ſowed much, and gathered but litle) and the leſſe he ſowes, the leſſe ſhall his croppe bee. Euen ſo, the more plentifull we are in ſowing the ſeedes of good workes, the more wee ſhall reape: and the more ſparing wee are, the leſſe ſhall our harueſt be. Hence I gather: Firſt, that there are ſeuerall degrees of puniſhments in hell, according to the greatneſſe and ſmalneſſe of ſinnes: for ſome ſinnes are but as motes, others as beames, Matth. 7. 4. ſome as gnats, others as camels, Matth. 23. 24. and therefore ſome ſhall be beaten with many ſtripes, ſome with fewe, and it ſhall bee eaſier for them of Sodome and Gomorrha at the day of iudgement, then for them of Capernaum. Secondly, that there are ſundry degrees of glory and felicity in heauen, proportionall to mens workes: for all men doe not ſowe alike, neither are their workes equall; but haue ſundry degrees of goodneſſe in them, and therefore there are anſwerable degrees of glory wherewith they are to bee crowned. This truth is taught elſwhere more plainely, as Dan. 12. 3. They that be wiſe, ſhall ſhine as the brightneſſe of the firmament: and they that turne many to righteouſneſſe, ſhall ſhine as the ſtarres for euermore. Therefore as there is a greater brightneſſe in the ſtarre, then in the firmament; ſo there ſhall be greater glory in one, then in another. 1. Cor. 3. 8. Euery man ſhall receiue his reward, according to his owne labour; therefore ſeeing all mens labours are not alike, their reward ſhall not be alike. This is further confirmed by the parable of the talents, Luk. 19. where the maſter of the ſeruants doth proportionate his wages to their workes, making him that had gained with his talent, fiue talents, ruler ouer fiue cities, him that had gained tenne, ruler ouer ten. And whereas it may bee ſaid, that all the labourers in the vineyard, receiued an equall reward, namely a penny; as well as thoſe that wrought but an houre, or thoſe that bare the burden, and heate of the day: I anſwer, it is true of eſſentiall glory, all the elect ſhall haue equall glory: but it is not true of accidentall glory, therein all ſhall not bee equall. Take ſundry veſſels of diuers bignes, & caſt them into the ſea, all will bee filled with water, though ſome receiue a greater quantity, others a leſſe: So all ſhall haue fulneſſe of glory, that is, the ſame eſſentiall glory: though in reſpect of accidentall glory, ſome ſhall haue more, and ſome leſſe. Secondly, the ſcope of the parable is not to ſhew the equalitie of glorie, in the world to come; but that they which are firſt called, ought not to inſult ouer their brethren, which are not as yet called, ſeeing they may bee preferred before them, or (at the leaſt) made equall with them. It remaines therefore for a concluſion, that there ſhall bee degrees of glory in heauen, as there are degrees of tormẽts in hel, & that as mens labours differ in goodneſſe, ſo their rewards ſhall be different in greatnes. Now mens labours differ in goodneſſe three waies; in the kinde, in the quantity, and in the quality. In the kinde; in that ſome are more noble in their kinde, ſome more baſe; as to cure the maladies of the ſoule, is a more excellent worke in it kinde, then to cure the diſeaſes of the body: and therefore it hath a greater degree of glory promiſed, They that turne many to righteouſnes, ſhall ſhine as the ſtarres for euermore. In the quality, or maner, in that ſome are done with greater loue, ſome with les: ſome with greater zeale, ſome with leſſe: ſome with greater care and conſcience to diſcharge our duties, ſome with leſſe: now, thoſe that are performed with greater loue, zeale, care, and conſcience, ſhall receiue a greater reward: thoſe that are done with leſſe, a leſſer: for ſo is the promiſe, Euery man ſhall receiue his wages according to his owne labour, 1. Corinth. 3. 8. In the quantity, in that ſome labour but an houre, others beare the burden & heate of the day, and ſo according to the greatnes and ſmalnes of their paines, they ſhall haue a greater or leſſer reward. He that had ſo carefully emploied his talent, that he had gained with it tenne others, was made ruler ouer ten cities: and hee that had taken leſſe paines, and gained but fiue, was made ruler but ouer fiue, that is, had his reward, yet a leſſe reward, ſutable to his worke.

Mat. 20. 12.

Dan. 12. 3.

Further, as God doth reward the good works of his ſeruants, according to the kinde, the quantitie, and qualitie: ſo hee rewardeth ſinnes not only according to their degree (as we haue heard) but alſo in the ſame manner, according to the nature and quality of the ſinne. 2. Theſſ. 1. 6. It is a iuſt thing with God to recompence tribulation to them that trouble you. Thus hee threatneth that to the froward he will ſhew himſelfe froward, Pſal. 18. 26. And, Hee that ſheddeth mans blood, by man ſhall his blood be ſhedde, Gen. 9. 6. And, All that take the ſword, ſhall periſh by the ſword, Matth. 26. 52. And, He that ſtoppeth his eares at the crie of the poore, ſhall crie vnto the Lord, and hee will not heare him, Prou. 21. 13. And, Iudgement mercileſſe ſhall bee to him that ſheweth no mercy. And, Woe bee to thee that ſpoileſt, and waſt not ſpoiled, and doeſt wickedly, and they did not wickedly againſt thee: for when thou ſhalt ceaſe to ſpoile, thou ſhalt bee ſpoiled: and when thou ſhalt make an ende of doing wickedly, they ſhall doe wickedly againſt thee. For with what iudgement men iudge, they ſhall bee iudged, and with what meaſure they mete, it ſhall bee meaſured to them againe. Neither doth God barely threaten this, but hee doth it in deede, in handling ſinners in their kinde, Gen. 2. 17. Becauſe thou haſt eaten of the tree, curſed is the earth for thy ſake, in ſorrow ſhalt thou eate of it all the daies of thy life. Thus God puniſhed the filthie Sodomites in their kinde, in that, for their burning luſt he rained vpon them fire and brimſtone from heauen, Gen. 19. 24. Nadab and Abihu cenſing with ſtrange fire, were conſumed with fire from heauen, Leuit. 10. 1, 2. The like may bee ſaid of Adonibezek, for as hee cauſed ſeuenty Kings hauing the thumbs of their hands, and of their feete cutte off, to gather crummes vnder his table, ſo the Lord rewarded him, Iudg. 1. 7. As Agags ſword made women childleſſe, ſo his mother was made childleſſe among other women, he being hewen in peeces before the Lord in Gilgal, 1. Sam. 15. 33. Thus God puniſhed the adultery and murther of Dauid: for as he defiled another mans wife, ſo his owne ſonne Abſolom defiled his wiues in the ſight of all Iſrael, 2. Samuel 16. 22. and his murther in ſlaying Vriah by the ſword of the children of Ammon, in that the ſword did neuer depart from his houſe, 2. Samuel 12. 10. Becauſe the Grecians accounted preaching fooliſhneſſe, it pleaſed God (as a fit and iuſt puniſhment of this their ſinne) by the fooliſhneſſe of preaching to ſaue them that beleeue, 1. Corinth. 1. 21. Thus as Chryſoſtome hath obſerued, the rich glutton was met with in his kinde, for whereas he would not giue Lazarus a crumme of bread to ſlake his hunger, God would not giue him a droppe of water to coole his thirſt, Luk. 16. and therefore hee ſaith, Hyeme non ſeminauit miſericordiam, venit æſtas et nihil meſſuit. Thus he puniſheth ſpiritual fornication, with bodily pollution, becauſe the Iſraelites went a whoring from God, therefore their daughters became harlots, and their ſpouſes whores, Hoſ. 4. 12, 13. And this is verified in the Church of Rome at this day: for as he gaue vp the heathen to reprobate mindes, by reaſon of their idolatry, ſo hath he giuen them vp, as we may ſee in their vncleane cloyſters, their Sodomiticall Stewes, their beaſtly brothelhouſes, and the like. So they that delight in looking at the redneſſe of the wine, ſhall haue redde eies, as a puniſhment of their ſinne, Prou. 23. 30. Thus God puniſhed the pride of the women of Ieruſalem: for in ſtead of a ſweete ſauour, there was a ſtinke; in ſtead of a girdle, a rent; in ſtead of dreſſing of the haire, baldneſſe; in ſtead of a ſtomacher, a girding of ſackcloth, and burning in ſtead of beautie, Eſa. 3. 24. And thus the Lord ſhutte vp euery wombe of the houſe of Abimelech, becauſe of Sara Abrahams wife, Gen. 20. 18. Thus the wiſe man ſaith, Becauſe the Iſraelites worſhipped ſerpents which had not the vſe of reaſon, and vile beaſts, the Lord ſent a multitude of vnreaſonable beaſts among them for a vengeance, that they might know, that wherewith a man ſinneth, by the ſame alſo ſhall hee bee puniſhed. And this manner of puniſhing ſinners in their kinde, Iob acknowledgeth to bee moſt iuſt, when he ſaith, If mine heart haue bin deceiued by a woman, or if I haue laid waite at the doore of my neighbour: let my wife grinde vnto another man, and let other men bow downe vpon her, Iob 31. 9, 10.

Iam. 2. 13.

Eſa. 33. 1.

Mat. 7. 2.

Epiſt 3. ad Cyriac. Micas cadentes de menſa non dedit, quid mirum ſi aquæ guttam non accepit?

Wiſ. 11. 13.

Vſe. Firſt, here we ſee the iuſtice of God in awarding the laſt ſentence, nay his bountie and ſeueritie: his bountie, in recompencing men aboue their deſerts; his ſeueritie, in puniſhing ſinners according to their deſerts. For as hee will denie any thing in iuſtice that denied to Diues a droppe of water to coole his tongue, Luk. 16. 24, 25. ſo he wil recompence any thing in mercie, that will recompence a cuppe of colde water, Matth. 10. 42. This integritie in iudgement without partialitie, is ſignified by the white throne, Reu. 20. 11. and it ſerues as a patterne and example for all Iudges and Magiſtrates to follow, in laying iudgment to the rule, and righteouſneſſe to the ballance, Eſay 28. 17. that is, in hearing cauſes indifferently, and determining equally, examining them (as it were) by line & ſquare, as the maſon or carpenter doth his worke. The Grecians placed iuſtice betwixt Leo and Libra, thereby ſignifying that there muſt not onely be courage in executing, but alſo indifferencie in determining. The Egyptians expreſſe the ſame by the hieroglyphicall figure of a man without hands, winking with his eyes; whereby is meant our vncorrupt Iudge, who hath no hands to receiue bribes, nor eyes to beholde the perſon of the poore, or reſpect the perſon of the rich. And before our tribunals wee commonly haue the picture of a man, holding a ballance in one hand, and a ſword in the other, ſignifying by the ballance iuſt iudgement, by the ſword, execution of iudgement. For as the ballance putteth no difference betweene golde and lead, but giueth an equal or vnequal poiſe to them both, not giuing a greater waight to the golde for the excellency of the mettall, becauſe it is golde, nor a leſſe to the lead for the baſeneſſe of it, becauſe it is lead. So they were with an euen hand to weigh the poore mans cauſe as well as the rich. But it is moſt notably ſet out by the throne of the houſe of Dauid, mentioned Pſal. 122. 5. which was placed in the gate of the city towards the Sun-riſing: in the gate, to ſignifie that all which came in and out by the gate of the city might indifferently be heard, the poore as well as the rich, and might haue acceſſe and regreſſe, too and from the iudgement ſeate. Towards the riſing of the Sunne, in token that their iudgement ſhould bee as cleare from corruption, as the Sunne is cleare in his chiefeſt brightneſſe.

Rom. 11. 21.

Secondly, this confutes the common opinion of the Schoole-men, who as they truly affirme that God rewardeth his Elect, ſupra meritum, aboue their deſert; ſo they erroniouſly teach, that hee puniſheth the reprobate, citra condignum, leſſe then they haue deſerued. For God powreth vpon the wicked, after this life, the full viols of his wrath, puniſhing them in the rigour of his iuſtice, without all mercie, not onely according to their workes, in regard of the nature and qualitie, but in reſpect of the meaſure and quantitie.

Laſtly, this doctrine ſeriouſly conſidered and thought vpon, that wee ſhall drinke ſuch as wee brew, reape ſuch as wee ſowe, and that men ſhall haue degrees of felicity, or miſerie anſwerable to their workes, anſwerable to the kinde of their worke, to the quantity and quality thereof, will make vs more carefull to auoide ſinne, and to bee more plentifull in good workes, then if, with the Papiſts, wee ſhould teach iuſtification by workes.

Againe, in that euery one ſhall reape as he ſoweth, that is, ſhall bee rewarded not according to the fruite and ſucceſſe of his labour, but according to his labour, bee it more, or leſſe, better or worſe: it ſerues (firſt of all) to comfort the Miniſters of the word, which are ſet ouer a blind ignorant people, who are alway learning, and neuer come to the knowledge of the truth: they muſt not be diſcouraged, though after long teaching, there bee little profiting, but rather a coldnes, a backewardneſſe, a declining in all ſorts & degrees. They muſt remember, that if their Goſpel being deliuered with ſuch ſimplicitie, with ſuch aſſiduitie, with ſuch euidence & demonſtration of the ſpirit, bee hid, it is hid to them that periſh, in whom the god of this world hath blinded the mindes of the infidels, that the glorious Goſpell of Chriſt ſhould not ſhine vnto them, 2. Cor. 4. 3, 4. Beſides, let them conſider, that though they ſeeme to labour in vaine, and to ſpend their ſtrength in vaine, and that their words take no more effect, then if they were ſpoken in the winde: yet, that their iudgement is with the Lord, and their worke with their God, Iſa. 49. 4. remembring that God will giue to euery man according to his work, according to the kinde, the quantity, the quality thereof and not according to the fruite, or ſucceſſe of his worke.

It may ſerue alſo as a cordiall to euery man that is painefull and faithfull in his calling, though neuer ſo baſe & ſeruile, as to a ſheepheard which watcheth his flocke, or a poore drudge that attends vpon his maſters buſines: hee is to comfort himſelfe with this, that though he ſee no great good that comes by his labour and trauel, yet if he be obedient to him that is his maſter according to the fleſh, in al things, not with eye-ſeruice, as men-pleaſers, but in ſinglenes of heart, ſeruing God, and whatſoeuer he doth, doing it heartily as to the Lord, and not to men: let him know, and aſſure himſelfe, that of the Lord he ſhall receiue the reward of inheritance, Col. 2. 22, 23, 24. And the promiſe is more generall, Eph. 6. 5. Know ye, that whatſoeuer good thing any man doth, the ſame ſhall hee receiue of the Lord, whether he be bond or free.

It ſerueth further, as a comfort againſt inequality, whereas the wicked flouriſh in all manner of proſperity, and the godly lie in contempt and miſerie; for the time ſhall come, when euery one ſhall reape euen as he hath ſowne. When God will puniſh the ſinnes of the reprobate with eternall torment according to their deſerts, and crowne the good workes of his ſeruants, with an eternall waight of glorie, aboue their deſert: for pietie ſhall not alway goe vnrewarded, neither ſhall impietie alway goe vnpuniſhed: for as the Pſalmiſt ſaith, Pſalm. 10. 18. The patient abiding of the righteous ſhall not periſh for euer. And againe, Pſal. 58. 11. Doubtles there is a reward for the righteous, doubtles there is a God that iudgeth the earth.

Againe, this condemneth the damnable opinion of Atheiſts, who thinke all things come to paſſe by nature, or fortune; and that doomes day is but a dreame: and that ſticke not to ſay, Mal. 3. 14. It is in vaine to ſerue God, and what profit is it, that wee haue kept his commandements, and that wee haue walked humbly before the Lord of hoſts? as though good workes ſhould neuer bee rewarded, nor ſinne puniſhed: albeit the Lord hath ſaid, Beholde I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to giue to euery one as his workes ſhall be.

Beſides, it meetes with the practiſe of thoſe men, which ſowe nothing but cockle, and yet expect a crop of wheate: and nothing but darnell, and yet looke to reape a barly harueſt: that is, ſuch as ſowe nothing but the curſed ſeeds of a damnable life, and yet looke to reape the harueſt of eternall life: for as a man ſoweth, ſo ſhall hee reape: ſuch as he brueth, ſuch ſhall hee drinke; Euery one ſhall eate the fruit of his owne waies, and be filled with his owne deuices, Prou. 1. 31.

It doth further detect the folly of thoſe which fraught the ſhippe of their ſoule, with nothing but faith, reſting (in carnal preſumption) vpon a vaine opinion of faith, and neuer caring for good workes: againſt whome Saint Iames writeth, chapter 2. verſe 14. What auaileth it, though a man ſay he hath faith, when he hath no workes? can the faith ſaue him? 20. Wilt thou vnderſtand, O thou vaine man, that faith which is without workes, is dead? Wee muſt therefore ſowe the ſeedes of good workes in this life, if after this life we looke to reape the harueſt of eternall life; and giue all diligence by good workes to make our calling and election ſure, that as it is ſure in it ſelfe in Gods vnchangeable decree, 2. Tim. 2. 19. ſo we may make it ſure to vs, 2. Pet. 1. 10. and ſo lay vp in ſtore a good foundation againſt the time to come, that we may obtaine eternall life, 2. Tim. 6. 19.

Laſtly, it croſſeth the wicked conceipt and imaginatiō of thoſe men, that ſing a requiem to their ſoules, in promiſing to themſelues an impunity for ſinne, and an immunity from all the iudgements of God, notwithſtanding they goe on in their bad practiſes; and all becauſe God doth not preſently take vengeance on them for their ſinnes. For they doe not conſider, that their ſinnes are as ſeedes, which muſt haue a time to growe in, before they come to maturity; but being once ripe and full-eared, let them aſſure themſelues, God will cut them downe with the ſickle of his iudgements, as wee reade, Geneſis 15. 16. They remember not what the Lord ſaith by Ieremie, Ier. 2. 24. that he will not weary himſelfe with following after thoſe wilde aſſes, vſed to the wilderneſſe, which ſnuffe vp the winde by occaſion at their pleaſure, and none can turne them backe, but will ſeeke for them, and finde them in their moneths, that is, when their iniquity ſhall be at the full, the Lord wil meete with them.

8 For he that ſoweth to the fleſh, ſhall of the fleſh reape corruption: but hee that ſoweth to the ſpirit, ſhall of the ſpirit reape life euerlaſting.

Here Saint Paul ſpecifieth that in particular, which before hee had deliuered in generall, viz. what hee meant by ſowing, and reaping. And this hee doth by a diſtribution, or enumeration of the kinds of ſowing and reaping; ſhewing that there are two ſorts of ſeedes which men ſowe in this life, good and euill. Two kindes of ſowers, ſpirituall men, and carnall men. Two ſorts of ground, in which this ſeede is ſowne; the fleſh, and the ſpirit. Two ſorts of harueſts, which men are to reape according to the ſeede; corruption, and life: as Paul ſaith, If ye liue after the fleſh, ye ſhall die: but if ye mortifie the deedes of the body by the ſpirit, ye ſhall liue, Rom. 8. 13. Theſe two ſorts of harueſts beeing anſwerable to the ſeede; corruption and death, beeing the harueſt of the ſeed ſowne to the fleſh: life and immortality, of that to the ſpirit.

Tacianus the hereticke, and author of the ſect of the Encratites, doth gather from this and the like places, that marriage is in it ſelfe ſimply euil, becauſe it is a ſowing to the fleſh. To him wee may adioyne the Popes holineſſe Syricius, who reaſoneth after the ſame manner, to prooue that Prieſts ought not to marrie, becauſe (ſaith hee) they that are in the fleſh, cannot pleaſe God, Romanes 8. 8. where hee condemneth all marriages as vncleane, both in the Cleargie, and the Laitie. Diſtinct. 82. (Vnderſtanding, as though Paul ſhould ſpeake properly of ſeede and of the fleſh.) But worthily was Tacianus his opinion confuted, and hee condemned for an hereticke: for the Apoſtle ſpeaketh not of the workes of nature, but of corrupt nature, which ouerturneth the diuine order which God ſet in nature, in the creation. Beſides, the Apoſtolike writer ſaith, Heb. 13. 3. that marriage is honourable among all men: (not the firſt onely, but alſo the ſecond, third, &c. and among Cleargie men, as well as others;) and therefore the marriage bed beeing vndefiled, that is, beeing vſed in holy maner, is no ſowing to the fleſh, but to the ſpirit, as popiſh (a) Doctours are enforced to confeſſe. Laſtly, Paul ſaith not, Hee that ſoweth to the fleſh, ſhall of the fleſh reape corruption; but, hee that ſoweth to his fleſh, &c. Now no man (except hee bee worſe then a bruite beaſt) doth abuſe himſelfe by ſowing to his owne fleſh (as Ierome ſaith vpon this place.) Others, by ſowing to the fleſh and ſpirit, vnderſtand the following after the fruites of the fleſh and of the ſpirit, mentioned in the former chapter, verſe 19. 22. But this expoſition cannot ſtand in this place; becauſe the illatiue particle [for] in the beginning of the verſe, ſheweth euidently, that theſe words depend vpon the former, as an exegeſis or expoſition thereof, where Paul ſpake not generally of all, but particularly of thoſe workes which ſerue directly to vphold the Miniſtery.

a Catharin. in comm. in hunc locum.

By ſowing to the fleſh therefore the Apoſtle meaneth nothing elſe, but to liue in the fleſh, to walke in it, to take pleaſure in it, to follow the deſires of it, and to fulfill the luſts thereof. More plainely, it is wholly to giue and addict a mans ſelfe to the pleaſures, profits, honours, and preferments of this life, and to ſpend himſelfe, his ſtrength, and wit, in compaſſing of them, hauing little or no reſpect of the life to come, how he may compaſſe the rich purchaſe of the kingdome of heauen: which who ſo doth, ſhall reape nothing at the harueſt, but corruption: that is, ſhall haue for his reward, eternall death; vnderſtanding by corruption, the corruption of good qualities, not of the ſubſtance. On the contrary, to ſowe to the ſpirit, is to liue in the ſpirit, and to walke according to the ſpirit, and to mortifie the deedes of the fleſh by the ſpirit, and to doe thoſe things which otherwiſe we would neuer doe, if wee were not mooued and led by the ſpirit, as to beſtow a mans goods, his labour, and trauell, his

A ſtrength, his wit, and all, in thoſe things that may further true religion and pietie, with relation to eternall life: which, whoſoeuer doth, ſhall reape life euerlaſting, as a iuſt recompence of his worke, according to the mercifull promiſe of God.

Catharinus ver.10. Rhemenſ. in verſ.9. Bellar. de Iuſtif. lib.5. cap.3.

Here ſundry obiections are to bee anſwered, for the clearing of this text. Firſt, the Papiſts reaſon thus. Workes are ſeedes: but ſeedes are the proper cauſe of the fruite: therefore good workes are the proper cauſe of eternall life, and not faith onely. So that as there is a hidden vertue in the ſeede, to bring forth fruite: ſo is there a dignitie in good workes to merit eternall life. Anſw. Firſt, as in a parable, ſo in a ſimilitude, whatſoeuer is B beſide the ſcope and drift thereof, (as this their diſpute is) prooueth nothing. The ſcope of the ſimilitude is this, that as he which ſoweth wheate, ſhall reape wheate: ſo he that ſoweth to the ſpirit, ſhall of the ſpirit reape life euerlaſting; and as he that ſoweth tares, ſhal reape nothing but tares: ſo he that ſoweth to the fleſh, the curſed ſeedes of a wicked life, ſhall of the fleſh reape nothing but corruption: and as hee that ſoweth plentifully either of theſe, ſhall reape a plentifull harueſt of either of them: ſo he that ſowes the ſeede of a godly, or wicked life, in plentifull manner, ſhall reape a plentifull increaſe, either of miſerie, or felicitie. When the Papiſts reaſon thus: Seedes are the cauſe of the fruite, and haue in C them a hidden vertue, whereby they grow, and bring forth fruite: therefore good works are the proper cauſe of life, and haue a dignitie and excellencie in them, whereby they are worthie of eternall life: they miſſe of the drift, and intent of the Apoſtle, and ſo conclude nothing. Beſides, this their collection and diſcourſe, is contrarie to their owne doctrine. For they teach, that good workes are meritorious by merit of condignitie: which may be vnderſtood 3. waies, either in regard of the dignitie of the worke alone: or in regard of the promiſe of God alone, and his diuine acceptation: or partly in regard of the dignitie and excellency of the worke, partly in regard D of the promiſe of God. Now albeit ſome of them hold, that good workes doe merit in reſpect only of Gods promiſe, and mercifull acceptation, as Scotus, Arminenſis, Durandus, Vega, Bunderius, Coſter, and the like: others, in reſpect partly of their owne worthines, partly of Gods promiſe and acceptance, as Bonauenture, Biel, Driedo, Clingius, Ianſenius, Bellarmine, &c. it beeing the common receiued opinion among the Schoolemen (as Binsfeldius witneſſeth:) yet none of them (excepting onely Caietan) affirme that they are meritorious onely in regard of the dignitie of the worke: which notwithſtanding the Rhemiſts and others, labour to proue out of this ſimilitude, vrging the analogy betwixt ſeede and good workes, contrarie to the current and ſtreame of their owne Doctors. Thirdly, I anſwer that good workes are ſeedes, yet faith is the roote of theſe ſeedes: and in that good workes are made the ſeedes of eternall life, it is to be aſcribed to Gods mercifull promiſe, not to the merit of the worke: for in that wee, or our workes, are worthie of the leaſt bleſſing, it is more of Gods mercie, then our merit. Fourthly, the Apoſtle ſheweth onely who they are that ſhall inherit eternall life, and the order how life is attained: but not the cauſe wherefore it is giuen. It will bee ſaid, not only the order, but the cauſe is ſet downe, as it may appeare by the antitheſis: for as ſowing to the fleſh, is the cauſe of deſtruction, ſo ſowing to the ſpirit, is the cauſe of eternall life. Anſwer. It is true in the one, but not in the other. For firſt, ſinnes or workes of the fleſh, are perfectly euill, as beeing abſolute breaches of the law, and deſerue infinite puniſhment, becauſe they offend an infinite Maieſtie: whereas workes of the ſpirit, are imperfectly good, hauing in them wants, and imperfections, (there beeing in euery good worke a ſinne of omiſſion) comming ſhort of that perfection that is required in the law: they beeing good and perfect, as they proceede from the Spirit of God; imperfect and vicious, as they come from vs. Euen as water is pure, as it proceedes from the fountaine: but troubled, as it runneth through a filthie channell; or as the writing is imperfect and faultie, as it comes from the young learner: but perfect and abſolute, as it proceedeth from the ſcriuener which guideth his hand. So that if God (ſetting aſide mercie) ſhould trie them by the touch-ſtone of the word, they would bee found to bee but counterfeit. And if hee ſhould weigh them in the ballance of his iuſtice, they would bee found too light. Secondly, there is a maine difference betwixt the workes of the fleſh, and the workes of the ſpirit, in this very point, in that the workes of the fleſh, are our owne workes, and not the workes of God in vs: and ſo we deſerue eternall death by reaſon of them, they beeing our owne wicked workes: whereas good workes proceede not from vs properly, ſeeing wee are not ſufficient of our ſelues to thinke any [good] thing as of our ſelues, 2. Cor. 3. verſ. 5. but from the Spirit of God, who worketh in vs both the will and the deede, and are his workes in vs: therefore beeing not ours, wee can merite nothing by them at the hands of God. Thirdly, obſerue that it is not ſaid, hee that ſoweth to the Spirit ſhall of that which he hath ſowne reape life euerlaſting, but, ſhall of the Spirit reape life euerlaſting. VVhere wee ſee the Apoſtle attributes nothing to our works but to the grace of Gods Spirit. Laſtly, Rom. 6. verſ. 23. the holy Ghoſt putteth manifeſt difference betweene the workes of the fleſh, and of the ſpirit, in reſpect of merite, when hee ſaith, The wages of ſinne is death: but eternall life is the gift of God. He ſaith not, that eternall life is the reward of good workes, but the gift of God: now in the reward of ſin, there is merit preſuppoſed: in the gift of eternall life, nothing but grace and fauour.

Obiect. II. God giueth eternall life according to the meaſure and proportion of the worke, v. 7. As a man ſoweth, ſo ſhall hee reape, 2. Cor. 9. 6. He that ſoweth ſparingly ſhall reape ſparingly, and he that ſoweth liberally, ſhall reape liberally. 1. Cor. 3. 8. Euery one ſhall receiue his proper wages according to his owne labour. Therefore in giuing eternall life he hath no reſpect of the promiſe or compact, but of the dignity and efficacie of the worke. Anſ. Fulneſſe of glory, called by ſchoolemen eſſentiall glorie, is giuen onely for the merits of Chriſt in the riches of Gods mercie, without all reſpect of workes. Accidentall glorie (when one hath a greater meaſure of glorie, another a leſſe, as when veſſels of vnequall quantitie caſt into the ſea, are all filled, yet ſome haue a greater meaſure of water, ſome a leſſe) is giuen, not without reſpect of workes: yet ſo as that it is not giuen for workes, but according to works: they beeing infallible teſtimonies of their vnfained faith in the merits of Chriſt. If it be ſaid, that eternall life is giuen as a reward, meritoriouſly deſerued by good workes, becauſe it is ſaid, Come ye bleſſed: for I was hungrie, and ye gaue me meate, Mat. 25. 34, 35. I anſwer, it is one thing to be iuſt, another thing to bee declared and knowne to be iuſt. We are iuſt by faith; but we are knowne to bee iuſt: by our workes: therefore men ſhall be iudged at the laſt day, not by their faith, but by their works. For the laſt iudgement ſerueth not to make men iuſt that are vniuſt, which is done by faith, but to manifeſt them to the world what they are indeede, which is done by workes. Men are often compared to trees in Scripture. Now a tree is not knowne what it is, by his ſappe, but by his fruite: neither are men knowne to be iuſt by their faith, but by their workes. Indeed a tree is therefore good becauſe his ſappe is good: but it is knowne to be good by his fruite. So, a man is iuſt, becauſe of his faith, but he is knowne to be iuſt by his good workes: therefore ſeeing that the laſt iudgement muſt proceede according to euidence that is vpon record, (for the bookes muſt be opened, and men muſt be iudged of thoſe things, that are written in the bookes) all muſt be iudged by their workes, which are euident and apparent to the view of all men; and not by their faith, which is not expoſed to the ſight of any. And hence it is that the Scripture ſaith, we ſhall be iudged according to our workes, but it is no where ſaid, for our good workes. Gregorie ſaith, God will giue euery one according to his workes: but it is one thing to giue according to workes, another thing for workes. For workes are no way the cauſe of reward, but onely the common meaſure, according to which God giueth a greater or leſſer reward. Take this

Pſal. 1. 3.
Ier. 17. 8.
Math. 3. 10.

Apoc. 20. 12.

In Pſal. 142.
Reddendū cuiq; ſecundum opera, ſed aliud eſt ſecundum, aliud propter opera reddere

A reſemblance. A king promiſeth vnequall rewards to runners, (the leaſt of which would equall the riches of a kingdome) vpon condition, that he which firſt commeth to the goale, ſhall haue the greateſt reward, the ſecond the next, and ſo in order. They hauing finiſhed their race, the king giueth them the reward according to their running. VVho would hence but childiſhly inferre, that therfore they merited this reward by their running? And whereas they vrge that text, Mat. 25. Come ye bleſſed—for I was hungrie, and ye fed me. I anſwer, firſt, that the word [for] doth not alway ſignifie a cauſe, but any argument or reaſon taken from any Topicke place: as

B Rom. 3. 22. 23. The righteouſneſſe of God is made manifeſt vnto all, and vpon all that beleeue. For there is no difference: for all haue ſinned, and are depriued of the glorie of God. VVhere ſinne is no cauſe of the righteouſneſſe of faith, but onely an antecedent, or adiunct, common to all men. So when we ſay, This is the true mother of the child; for ſhe will not haue it diuided. There [for] doth not imply the cauſe, as though her refuſing to haue it diuided, did make her the true mother of it: but onely the ſigne, that ſhee was the true mother indeed. Secondly, be it granted that it implieth the cauſe, yet not the meritorious cauſe: for good workes are ſaid to bee cauſes of eternall life, not as meriting, procuring, or deſeruing any thing

C at the hands of God, but as they are the kings high way to eternall life, God hauing prepared good workes, that wee ſhould walke in them. If a king promiſe his ſubiect a treaſure hid in the top of a ſteepe & high mountaine, vpon condition that he climbe & dig it out: his climbing & digging, is the efficient cauſe of enioying the treaſure, but no meritorious cauſe of obtaining it, ſeeing it was freely giuen. If it be further ſaid, that the word [for] doth here ſignifie the cauſe, as well as in the words following, Goe ye curſed, for I was hungry and ye gaue me no meate: ſeeing our Sauiour Chriſt ſpeaketh after the ſame manner of the reward of the godly, and puniſhment of the wicked? I anſwer. The paritie of the reaſon

D ſtands in this, that as by good workes wee come to eternall life, ſo by wicked workes, we runne headlong to perdition. The diſſimilitude is this, that euill workes are not onely the way, but alſo the cauſe of death: good workes are the way, but not the cauſe, as Bernard ſaith, they are via regni, non cauſa regnandi.

Obiect. III. Here God promiſeth eternall life to good workes: therefore good workes merit eternall life. Anſ. There is a double couenant, Legall and Euangelicall. In the legall couenant, the promiſe of eternall life is made vnto workes. Doe this and liue. If thou wilt enter into life, keepe the commandements. But thus no man can merit, because none can fulfill the law. In the Euangelicall couenant, the promiſe is not made to the worke, but to the

Ochaminus
ver. d. Rie-mand. in verd. 9.
Bellar. de
Iuſtif. lib. 5.
cap. 9.

worker; and to the worker, not for the merit of his worke, but for the merit of Chriſt, as Apoc. 2. 20. Be faithfull unto the end, and I will giue thee the crowne of life, the promiſe is not made to fidelity, but to the faithfull perſon, whoſe fidelitie is a ſigne that he is in Chriſt, In whome all the promiſes of God are yea, and Amen, that is, moſt certaine and infallible. Secondly, if any thing be due to workes, it is not of the merit of the worke, but of Gods mercifull promiſe. Auguſtine ſaith, God made himſelfe a debter, not by owing any thing, but by promiſing. Thirdly, no reward is due to workes of regeneration, vpon compact and promiſe: firſt, becauſe we are not vnder the couenant of workes in which God doth couenant with vs vpon condition of our obedience; but vnder the couenant of grace, the tenour of which couenant runneth vpon condition of the merits of Chriſt apprehended by faith. Secondly, though we were vnder the legall couenant, yet wee merite not, becauſe our workes are not anſwerable to the law. Laſtly, whereas the pillars of the Romiſh Church teach, that the promiſe made vpon condition of performing the worke, maketh the performer to merit, is very falſe. This is not ſufficient to make a meritorious worke: it is further required, that the worke be anſwerable and correſpondent in worth and value, to the reward: as if one ſhall promiſe a thouſand crownes to him that will fetch a litle water out of the next well; it is debt indeed in the promiſer, but no merit in the performer; becauſe there is no proportion betweene the worke and the reward.

2. Cor. 1. 20.

In Pſa. 131. Non debendo, ſed promittendo, Deus ſe fecit debitorem.

Bellarm. de Iuſtif. l. 5. c. 3.

Obiect. IV. Sowing to the ſpirit, is a good worke, and reaping eternall life, the reward: but reward preſuppoſeth merit: therefore ſowing to the ſpirit, doth merit eternall life. Anſ. There is a double reward, One of fauour, another of debt. Rom. 4. 4. To him that worketh, the wages is not counted by fauour, but by debt. So ſaith Ambroſe, There is one reward of liberalitie, and fauour: another reward, which is the ſtipend of vertue, and recompence of our labour. Therefore reward ſignifies generally any recompence, or any gift that is beſtowed vpon another, whether it be more or leſſe, whether anſwerable to the worke or not, whether vpon compact, or otherwiſe: for the Scripture maketh mention of reward, where there are no precedent workes, as Gen. 15. 1. Feare not Abraham, I am thine exceeding great reward, that is, thy full content and happineſſe. Pſal. 127. 3. The fruit of the wombe is a reward, that is, a bleſſing, and a free gift of God. In this ſenſe (I grant) eternall life is a reward. Yet it is no proper reward, but ſo called by a catachreſis, which yet is not an intollerable catachreſis (as Bellarmine either ignorantly or malitiouſly affirmeth) but eaſie and familiar; for in the phraſe of the Scripture, eternall life is called a reward, in a generall ſignification, when it is vſed abſolutely, and not reſtrictiuely, to ſignifie the heele, or end of any thing; and ſo the Hebrew word which ſignifieth a heele, ſignifieth alſo a reward, becauſe it is giuen when the worke is ended: And eternall life hath this reſemblance with a reward, in that it is giuen at the end of a mans life, after that his trauell and warfare is ended. Thus the Greeke words which ſignifie a reward and an end, are vſed indifferently one for the other, 1. Pet. 1. 9. Receiuing the end of your faith, the ſaluation of your ſoules, that is, (as Beza hath fitly tranſlated it,) the reward of your faith; for to tranſlate it, the end of your faith, cannot agree to the word receiuing, for we receiue not an end, but a reward. Thus reward ſignifieth a free gift, or free remuneration, as when the maſter giueth his ſeruant ſomething for his faithfull ſeruice (though done vpon dutie) when as he oweth him not thankes, much leſſe reward. Luk. 17. 9. Doth he thanke that ſeruant, becauſe he did that which was commanded unto him? I trowe not. Thus God giueth vs eternal life, not becauſe he is bound in iuſtice ſo to do, (for he oweth vs neither reward, nor thanks, for our labour, becauſe when we haue done what we can, we haue but done our duty, v. 10) but becauſe his goodneſſe, and mercifull promiſe made thereupon, doth excite him thereunto. And yet eternall life is called a reward, becauſe it doth as certainly follow good workes, as though it were due. And, good works are mentioned in the promiſe, becauſe they are tokens that the worker is in Chriſt, for whoſe merit, the promiſe ſhall be accompliſhed. And it is further called the reward or fruite of our faith, (as here the harueſt) becauſe it is the way and meanes of obtaining it.

μισθὸς κατὰ χάριν. μισθὸς κατ' ὀφείλημα.

Epiſt. 11. l. 1. Alia eſt merces liberalitatis & gratiæ: aliud virtutis ſtipendium, alia laboris remuneratio.

de Iuſtif. l. 5. c. 3.

hebeb. Pſal. 19. 12. acharith; Prou. 23. 18

μισθὸς τέλος.

τὸ τέλος τῆς πίστεως.

II. Eternall life is called a reward of good workes, not cauſally, as procured by them, but conſequently, as following them. For albeit it be giuen properly for the merite of Chriſt apprehended by faith: yet it is giuen conſequently as a recompence of our labours: as an inheritance is giuen to the heire, not for any dutie or ſeruice, but becauſe he is the heire: yet by conſequent it is giuen in recompence of his obedience. He that forſakes father and mother —ſhall receiue an hundred fold more in this life, and in the world to come eternall life, Mark. 10. 29, 30.

Non ἀιτιαλῶς vel cauſaliter: ſed ἑπομένως, ſiue conſequutiuè.

III. Reward doth not alway preſuppoſe debt, but is often free, for whereas it is ſaide, Matth. 5. 46. If you loue them that loue you, what reward ſhall ye haue? It is thus in Luk. 6. 34. What thanke ſhall ye haue? by which we ſee that reward doth not alway ſignifie due debt, but thankfull remembrance, and gracious acceptance.

IV. Coloſſ. 3. 24. Eternall life is called the reward of inheritance, whereby is ſignified, that it is not giuen, for our workes, but becauſe we are the ſonnes of God by adoption. Bellarmine anſwers; that it may be both a reward, and an inheritance: a reward, becauſe it is giuen to labourers vpon compact: an inheritance, ἀνταπόδοσιν τῆς κληρονομίας.

becauſe it is giuen to none, but thoſe that are children. But the word [illegible] tranſlated reward, ſignifieth a gift freely giuen without reſpect of deſert, it beeing all one with, [illegible], as Baſill teacheth vpon the 7. Pſalme.

V. The Scripture teacheth that God giueth rewards foure waies. Firſt, he giueth reward of due debt, in reſpect of merit: thus he giueth eternall life, as a reward due, not to our merits, but to the merits of Chriſt: for none can merit at the hands of God, but he which is God. Secondly, he giues a reward, in reſpect of his free and mercifull promiſe, and thus he rewards onely beleeuers. Thirdly, he giueth rewards to hypocrites, infidels, heathen, &c. beeing neither bound by his owne promiſe, nor by their merit, when they performe the outward workes of the law, and leade a ciuill life conformable thereto; as when Ahab humbled himſelfe before the Lord, 1. King. 21. And this God doth to the end he may preſerue humane ſocietie, and common honeſtie, and that hee may teſtifie what hee approoueth, and what he diſliketh. Laſtly, he giueth good ſucceſſe in enterpriſes & attempts, according to his owne decree, and the order of diuine prouidence: which metaphorically is called a reward, Ezech. 29. v. 19. 20. becauſe it hath a ſimilitude thereunto, as when wicked men through ignorance, doe that wickedly, which he hath iuſtly decreed ſhal come to paſſe, ſuffering them to fill their houſes with the ſpoile of the poore, which they haue for their worke, as a man hath wages for his honeſt labour. Thus the ſpoile of Iudea, is called the hire or reward giuen to Tiglath-Pelaſſar for his Syrian warre, Iſa. 7. 20. and thus the ſpoyle of Egypt is ſaid to bee wages giuen Nebuchodonoſar, for his ſeruice againſt Tyrus.

Further, let vs here obſerue the different manner of ſpeech which the Apoſtle vſeth, in ſpeaking of the fleſh & of the ſpirit. Of the former he ſaith, He that ſoweth to his fleſh, &c. Of the latter, He that ſoweth to the ſpirit, not to his ſpirit, by which is ſignified, that what good ſoeuer a man doth in beeing beneficiall to the Miniſterie, in furthering the Goſpel, &c. he doth it not by any goodnes that is in himſelfe, but by the Spirit of God, who in euery good motion works in vs the will, and in euery good action, the deede. Phil. 2. 13. Therefore no man ought to flatter himſelfe in this reſpect, or to thinke highly of himſelfe, as though hee had attained an extraordinarie meaſure of ſanctification, either for affecting, or effecting any thing that is good: ſeeing, whatſoeuer good thing is in vs, is the gift of God, as Ierome ſaith. On the contrarie, what euill ſoeuer a man doth, hee doth it of himſelfe, God beeing neither the author, the furtherer, nor the abetter thereof.

Et Primaſius in hunc locum. Dei dona ſunt quæcunque bona ſunt.

Againe, we hence learne that all the vnregenerate perſons, are ſowers to the fleſh, becauſe that before their conuerſion they doe nothing but thoſe things that are pleaſing to the fleſh: ſo that dying in that eſtate, they can reape nothing but corruption: therefore it hence followeth that Philoſophers, heathen, and all meere ciuill, and naturall men, beeing ſuch as neuer ſowed to the ſpirit, ſhall reape nothing but corruption, death, and condemnation, contrary to the opinion of ſome auncient, and moderne writers.

Further, obſerue here, that though there be ſome that are Neuters in religion, lukewarme goſpellers, halting betweene two opinions, ſuch as are neither fiſh nor fleſh; yet in morall duties, there are no Neuters, nor mediators: for all men are ranged into one of theſe two ranks, either they are ſowers to the fleſh, or to the ſpirit.

Here alſo wee ſee who are true worldlings indeede; to wit, ſuch as minde earthly things, in ſpending themſelues, their ſtrength, and wits, vpon the world, hauing all their care for it, and all their comfort in it: in the meane time, hauing little or no taſte of the ioyes of the world to come, becauſe they make their Paradiſe here vpon earth, and neuer looke for any heauen after this life. As alſo who are ſpirituall men, namely, ſuch as walke in the ſpirit, who though they liue in the world, in theſe houſes of clay, yet are not of the world, becauſe they ſet not their affections vpon it, but haue their conuerſation in heauen, where Chriſt ſitteth at Gods right hand.

Phil. 3. 19.

This ſerues firſt of all, to diſcouer vnto vs our own eſtate, whether we be indeed carnall, or ſpirituall: for if we ſow to the fleſh, that is, be alwaies poring and digging in the earth with the mole, ſetting our affections vpon it, not referring the bleſſings of God, to his glory, and the furtherance of the Goſpel; but to ſerue our owne corrupt deſires: we are fleſhly minded, (though we pretend this, and that, and proteſt neuer ſo much) and continuing in this eſtate, we can expect nothing but the harueſt of death and condemnation. Whereas on the contrary ſide, if we ſauour the things of the ſpirit, by ſetting our affections vpon them, & ſeeking thoſe things that are aboue, eftſoones lifting vp our hearts by ſecret grones and eiaculations, for the inioying of them, we are ſpiritual men, and ſhall vndoubtedly in due time reape the harueſt of eternal life.

Secondly, this bewraies the paucitie of ſpirituall men, euen where the Goſpel is profeſſed: and how the world ſwarmes with multitudes of carnall, and fleſhly minded men. For as in former times before the flood, they ate, they dranke, they bought, they ſold, they planted, they built, that is, wholly addicted and deuoted themſelues to theſe things: So in theſe latter daies (which our Sauiour Chriſt prophecied ſhould be a counterpaine of the former) the multitude generally in euery place doe wholly employ and ſpend themſelues, in thinking, in affecting, in talking, in ſeeking, in following of worldly things, ſeldome (God knowes) or neuer minding the kingdome of God, or the righteouſneſſe thereof, nor practiſing the Apoſtles rule, So to vſe the world as though they vſed it not, 1 Cor. 7.31.

Luk. 17. 27.

Againe, here we ſee how the wiſedome of God is counted folly, among worldly wiſe men: and how the wiſedome of the world is fooliſhneſſe before God. For if a man ſow to the ſpirit, in not following blind reaſon, nor corrupted affection, nor faſhioning himſelfe to the guiſe of the world, nor ſeeking his own good ſo much as the good of others, but denying himſelfe, forſaking all (in his affection) for the Goſpel of Chriſt, and contemning this temporall traſh, in regard of the heauenly treaſure; he is accounted in the world but a foole: whereas God accounts him truly wiſe: for he is the wiſe merchant man, who hauing found a pearle of great price, went and ſold all that he had, and bought it, Matth. 13.46. For the leſſe he laieth vp for himſelfe vpon earth, the more he treaſureth vp for himſelfe in heauen: and though he ſeeme to ſowe vpon the waters, yet after many daies he ſhall finde it againe. Whereas they that minde nothing but the world, in ſowing to the fleſh, are reputed wiſe and prouident men: when as God accounts Luk. 12.20. 21. them ſtarke fooles: Thou foole, this night ſhall they fetch away thy ſoule, & then whoſe ſhall thoſe things be which thou haſt prouided? and then it followeth, So is he that gathereth riches to himſelfe, and is not rich in God. For the more they treaſure vp riches, the more they treaſure vp to themſelues wrath againſt the day of wrath, Rom. 2.5. and fat themſelues againſt the day of ſlaughter, Iam. 5.5.

Laſtly, we are here warned to take heede of the diuels ſophiſtrie. It is a notable policy, one of the cunningeſt ſtratagemes the diuell hath, in good things commaunded, to ſeuer the meanes from the end: and in euill things forbidden, to ſeuer the end from the meanes. He laboureth to ſeuer the meanes from the end, by perſwading a man that he may come to the end though he neuer vſe the meanes, that hee may reape eternall life, though he neuer ſow the ſeedes of the ſpirit in this life. But we muſt know, that as he which runneth not at all, can neuer gaine the garland: hee which laboureth not in the vineyard, the labourers wages: he that neuer ſowes, can neuer reape: ſo he that runneth not in the race of Chriſtianitie, ſhall neuer attaine the crowne of happineſſe, and felicitie: he that laboureth not in the Lords vineyard, the recompence of reward: he that in this life ſoweth not to the ſpirit, ſhall neuer after this life reape life euerlaſting. For wee may not dreame of a good harueſt, without a good ſeede time, of ſowing nothing to reape ſomething; or ſowing tares to reape wheate. Againe, he ſeuereth the end from the meanes, by perſwading men that they may vſe the meanes & neuer come to the end, that though they ſow to the fleſh, A yet they ſhall not reape corruption. Thus he perſwaded Eue, that though ſhee did eate of the forbidden fruite, yet ſhee ſhould not die the death, nay, ſhee ſhould not die at all, but her eyes ſhould be opened, and ſhee ſhould be as God himſelfe, knowing good and euill. But we are to bee vndoubtedly reſolued of this, that God hath linked with an yron chaine, the pleaſure of ſinne, and the puniſhment thereof: that as he that followes a riuer, muſt needes at length come to the Sea: ſo he that followes the courſe and ſtreame of his ſins, muſt needs come at the length to the gulfe of eternall deſtruction.

9. Let vs not therefore be wearie of well doing: for in due ſeaſon we ſhall reape, if we faint not. B

In theſe words, the Apoſtle expoundes the fiſt generall rule appertaining to all ſorts of men: and in it he aſcendeth from the hypotheſis to the theſis, that is, from the particular, to the generall, ſhewing that we ought not to faint in any good courſe, either in doing good to them that labour amongſt vs, and are ouer vs in the Lord, and admoniſh vs; nor yet in beeing beneficiall vnto others. And this verſe dependeth vpon the former, (as the word therefore doth imply) by way of neceſſarie illation, and conſequence: for ſeeing that they which continue in well doing, in ſowing to the ſpirit, ſhall of the ſpirit reape life euerlaſting, verſ. 8. therefore no man ought to be C weary of wel doing. It conſiſteth of two parts: of a rule, or precept, in the former part of the verſe, Let vs not therefore be wearie of well doing: and a reaſon of the rule, or a motiue to incite vs to the performance thereof, in the latter part: for in due ſeaſon we ſhal reape, if we faint not. In the rule, the Apoſtle ſpeakes that plainely, which in the former verſes he had deliuered more obſcurely: for here he expounds himſelfe, what he meant by ſowing to the ſpirit, namely, doing of good, or (as it is in the next verſe) doing of good vnto all, which may alſo appeare by that which followeth, we ſhall reape, if we faint not, that is, we ſhall reape the fruite of that which we haue ſowne to the ſpirit, if we faint not: therefore to ſowe to the ſpirit, is D nothing elſe, but to doe good. Now, by well doing, the Apoſtle meaneth not onely the outward worke, whereby our neighbour is furthered, helped, releeued; but the doing of it alſo in a good manner, and to a good end; ſo, as it may be a good worke indeede, not onely profitable to our neighbours, and comfortable to our ſelues, but acceptable to God. This is a more neceſſarie precept: for moſt men are ſoone wearie of a good courſe, like to theſe Galatians, who beganne in the ſpirit, but beeing wearie of that walke, turned aſide, and made an end in the fleſh, Gal. 3.3. Like Ephraim and Iudah, whoſe goodneſſe was as a morning cloud, and as the morning dewe which vaniſheth away, Hoſ. 6.4. This weariſomneſſe in wel doing hath ſeazed vpon the moſt: euen vpon all drowſie profeſſours (which are the greateſt part,) as may appeare by this, in that ſome, if they bee held but a quarter of an houre too long, or aboue their ordinary time; are extreamely wearie of hearing the word. And as for duties of mercie, and liberalitie, putting vp iniuries, & tolerating wrongs, they are readie to make an end as ſoone as they beginne. And as for prayer and thankſgiuing, and other parts of the worſhippe of God, moſt men ſay in their hearts with the old Iewes, VVhat profit is it that wee keepe his commandements, and that we walke humbly before the Lord of hoſts? Malach. 3.14. Hence it is, that the holy Ghoſt is ſo frequent in ſtirring vs vp to the performance of all good duties, with alacrity, and chearefulneſſe, and ſo often in rouſing vs from that drowſineſſe and deadneſſe, wherewith we are ouerwhelmed, Luk. 18.1. Our Sauiour Chriſt propounds a parable to this end, to teach vs, That we ought alwaies to pray, and not to waxe faint. Eph. 3.13. I deſire (ſaith Paul) that ye faint not at my tribulations. 2. Theſſ. 3. 13. And ye, brethren, be not wearie in well doing. And ſo in this place, Let vs not therefore be wearie of well doing.

Now the reaſons which make men ſo wearie of well doing, are in generall theſe three. Firſt, the ſtrength of the fleſh, which euen in the regenerate is like the great gyant Goliah, in compariſon of poore Dauid. Secondly, the weakeneſſe of the ſpirit, and ſpirituall graces. Thirdly, the outward occurrences, and impediments of this life. In ſpeciall they be theſe. Firſt, men by nature are wolues one to another, Eſay, 11. verſ. 6. and ſo they continue, till this woluiſh nature bee mortified, and renued by grace: and are ſo farre from helping, furthering, releeuing, tollerating one another, or performing any other dutie of loue, that contrarily, they are readie to bite, and deuoure one another, Gal. 5. verſ. 15. Secondly, oftentimes it commeth to paſſe, that other mens coldneſſe doth coole our zeale, their backwardneſſe, ſlacketh our forwardneſſe. Thirdly, many thinke it a diſgrace and diſparagement vnto them, to ſtoope ſo lowe, as to become ſeruiceable vnto their inferiours. Fourthly, there are many things which diſcourage vs from well doing: either the partie is vnknowne vnto vs, as Dauid was to Naball 1. Sam. 25. 10. (for which cauſe hee would not releeue him in his neceſſitie:) or elſe ſeemeth vnworthie of our helpe, being ſuch as through riot, harlots, lewd companie, hath brought himſelfe to miſerie and beggerie: or ſuch as reward vs euill for good, hatred for our good will: or ſuch as are querulous, alwaies complaining, though neuer ſo well dealt withall: all which make men cold in the duties of loue. Fiftly, ſome there be which faine dangers and caſt perils, which hinder them from doing the good they ſhould: The ſlothfull perſon ſaith, a lyon is in the way, &c. Laſtly, the manifold occaſions and affaires of this life, doe ſo diſtract the minde, as that a man is ſoone wearied, yea in the beſt things. Beſides, many ſee no reaſon why they ſhould ſpend themſelues, in doing good vnto others.

Now to all theſe obſtacles, and pul-backs, we are to oppoſe the Apoſtles precept, Let vs not be wearie of well doing. For verily, if the conſideration of theſe ſmall occaſions, and rubbes that lie in our way, daunt and diſmay vs, and ſo ſtoppe our courſe, we ſhall neuer be plentifull in good workes: wee may haply put our hand to the plowe, but a thouſand to one we ſhall looke backe againe: Luk. 9. 62. with Lots wife caſt a long looke toward Sodome; Gen. 19. 29. and with the Iſraelites in our hearts turne againe into Egypt. For as hee that obſerueth the winde ſhall not ſowe, and as hee that regardeth the cloudes, ſhall neuer reape, Eccleſ. 11. verſ. 4. So he that regardeth the ingratitude of ſome, the euill example of others, the manifold diſtractions, and occurrences of this life; and ſhall caſt perils in carnall wiſedome, of this, and that trouble, or inconuenience, that may enſue, ſhall neuer doe his duty as he ought.

And aſſuredly, he that fainteth in a good courſe, and giueth it ouer before he come to the end, is like vnto the ſlothfull husbandman, who hauing plowed and tilled, and in part ſowed his ground, giueth ouer before hee haue finiſhed it; and ſo, either the parching heate doth wither it, or the nipping cold doth kill it, or the fowles of the aire deuoure it.

Now moſt men are ſicke of this diſeaſe, which ſhewes the greatneſſe of our corruptions, and that the beſt Chriſtians haue a huge maſſe or lumpe of ſinne in them, and but a ſparke of grace; in that they are ſeldome, or neuer wearie in ſcraping together of riches, in following their pleaſures, in purſuing honours, and hunting after preferments: and yet are quickly wearie in duties of pietie, iuſtice, and mercie, albeit they haue an vnſpeakable reward annexed vnto them.

Well, whatſoeuer the corrupt practiſes of men be, let vs learne our duty, to goe forward without wearineſſe, nay to doe good with chearefulneſſe, as Paul ſaith of himſelfe, Phil. 3. Forgetting that which is behind, and indeauouring himſelfe to that which is before. Let vs conſider that it is the property of a liberall mind, To deuiſe of liberall things, and to continue his liberalitie, Eſa. 32. verſ. 8. Neither is this all, not to be weary, or to perſiſt and continue, but we muſt proceede on from ſtrength to ſtrength, and bring forth more fruite in our age, Pſal. 92. 14. as the Church of Thiatyra, whoſe workes were more at the laſt, then at the firſt, for which ſhee is worthily praiſed by our Sauiour Chriſt, Reuel. 2. verſ. 19. It was the motto of Charles the fift, Plus vltra, and it ought to be euery Chriſtians motto to ſtriue to perfection, and as the Apoſtle exhorts vs, To be ſtead- faſt,

A faſt, immoueable, and not to make ſtay there, but to bee aboundant alwaies in the worke of the Lord, 1. Corinthians 15. 58. And that we may doe this indeede, we muſt ſet downe as a certaine concluſion, that wee will not recoile nor giue backe, come what will come: and withall wee muſt labour to quicken our dull and drowſie ſpirits, to gird vp the loynes of our mindes, to ſtrengthen our weake hands, and our feeble knees, by publike and priuate exerciſes of reading, prayer, meditation, conference, &c.

Thus much of the rule: now followeth the reaſon of the rule, or the motiue to encourage vs to the performance of this duty, B for in due ſeaſon we ſhall reape, if we faint not, as if hee ſhould ſay more fully, thus: Let vs be aſſured of this, that continuing and increaſing in well doing, our labour is not loſt, nor ſpent in vaine. 1. Corinth. 15. 58. for though wee imagine that wee labour in vaine, and ſpend our ſtrength in vaine (as the Prophet ſpeaketh) yet our worke is with the Lord, and our labour with our God, Eſay 49. 4. And albeit wee may ſeeme to our ſelues and others to caſt away our goods in beeing beneficiall vnto ſome, and (as the Wiſe-man ſpeaketh) to ſowe vpon the waters; yet after many daies wee ſhall finde them againe, Eccl. 11. 1. In the motiue there bee three things contained. Firſt, the reaſon it ſelfe, which is a promiſe of reC ward, we ſhal reap. Secondly, the circumſtance of time, when this harueſt ſhall be reaped, we ſhall reape in due ſeaſon. Thirdly, the condition that is required on our parts, that we may reape, if we faint not. Of theſe in order, and firſt of the reaſon or promiſe it ſelfe.

Whereas the Apoſtle (to the end we may not be weary of a good courſe) doth encourage vs to proceede on, by ſetting before our eyes the promiſed reward, I gather, that we may encourage, animate, & excite our ſelues to the performance of all good duties by the conſideration of the heauenly harueſt which wee are to reape, and the crowne of glory we are to receiue after this life: as the husbandman doth ſowe in hope that hee ſhall reape: D and though ſeede-time bee painefull and chargeable vnto him, yet hee giueth not ouer for all that, but comforteth himſelfe with the expectation of the harueſt, which will fully quit his coſt, and recompence his labour. That this is a truth, it may appeare by ſundry arguments: by precept, by promiſe, by practiſe, by reaſon. For precept. It is the commaundement of Chriſt wee ſhould make vs friends of vnrighteous mammon, or the riches of iniquity, that when wee ſhall want, they may receiue vs into euerlaſting tabernacles, Luk. 16. 9.

For promiſe, beſides this place (which is very pregnant to the purpoſe) Paul exhorts ſeruants, That whatſoeuer they doe, they would doe it heartily, as to the Lord, and not to men, knowing that of the Lord they ſhall receiue the reward of inheritance, Coloſſ. 3. 23. 24. And generally what good thing ſoeuer a man doth, the ſame ſhall he receiue of the Lord, whether he be bond or free. Eph. 6. 8. He that forſakes father & mother, &c. for Chriſts ſake, ſhal receiue an hundred fold more in this life, and in the world to come life euerlaſting, Mat. 19. 29. Theſe and the like promiſes were to no purpoſe, if it were not lawfull for vs to looke to the reward, and if we might not by conſidering of it, incite and ſtirre vp our ſelues to greater alacrity in the courſe of chriſtianity, in making vs more feruent and frequent in the duties of piety.

Thirdly, it may bee prooued by the practiſe of the Saints of God: Abraham was contented to forſake his natiue countrey at the commaund of God, and to dwell in a ſtrange land, yea & that in tents, becauſe he looked for a city hauing a foundation, whoſe builder and maker is God, Hebrewes 11. verſe 9, 10. Moſes eſteemed the rebuke of Chriſt greater riches, then the treaſures of Egypt, becauſe hee had reſpect vnto the recompence of reward, verſe 26. Chriſt (whoſe example is without all exceptiõ, being exemplum indeficiens as the Schoolmen ſpeake), did ſweeten the bitterneſſe of the croſſe, with the conſideration of the glory which a little after hee was to enioy: for ſo the Apoſtle ſaith, that for the ioy that was ſet before him, hee endured the croſſe, and deſpiſed the ſhame, Hebrewes 12. 2. The Coloſſians are commended by the Apoſtle, for that they continued & increaſed in faith to God, and loue to man, for the hopes ſake that was laid vp for them in heauen, Coloſſians 1. 5. And Paul ſhewes this to haue beene the practiſe, and to bee the duty of all the Saints of God, ſo to runne, that they may obtaine, 1. Corinthians 9. 24.

Laſtly, it may be prooued by reaſon. For firſt, that which is the ende of our actions, ought to be conſidered of vs, as a meanes to ſtirre vs vp to the attaining of this end: therefore ſeeing the end of our faith and hope is eternall life, Romanes 6. 22. Ye haue our fruite in holineſſe, and the end euerlaſting life, 1. Pet. 1. 9. Receiuing the reward of your faith, the ſaluation of your ſoules: Therefore we may, nay we ought to caſt our eyes vpon it, and to direct all our actions for the attaining of it. Secondly, if the labourer worke, not in regard of the common good only, but alſo with reſpect of his wages: hee that runneth a race to attaine the garland: if the husbandman ſet and ſowe, plant and plow, in hope to reape a harueſt, and to receiue ſome fruite of his labours: it is lawfull for Chriſtians alſo to doe good in regard of eternall reward: for that is the Apoſtles reaſon, 1. Corinth. 9. 25. They that trie maſteries abſtaine from all things, that they may obtaine a corruptible crowne: but wee for an vncorruptible. It is Saint Iames his reaſon, Iam. 5. 7, 8. as the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, vntill hee receiue the former

A and the latter raine; So muſt we be patient, and ſettle our hearts, for the comming of the Lord draweth neere, and he will recompence euery man according to his workes. Thirdly, if it bee lawfull for a man to abſtaine from ſinne, for feare of eternal puniſhment, and torment in hell, (as we know it is) Mat. 10. 28. then it is lawfull to doe good, in hope of eternall reward. It will be ſaid, that it is the property of a mercenary hireling to looke for reward. I anſwer, it is the propertie of a hireling to looke onely or principally for his hire, either not minding the glory and honour of God, or leſſe reſpecting it, then his owne priuate aduantage: ſo that when the hope of his gaine is gone, hee leaueth his charge, and flieth away: B like the Popiſh Monkes, who were right hirelings indeede: for they minded nothing but their owne commodity, according to the olde ſaying, No peny, no Pater noſter. But to looke to the recompence of reward in the ſecond place after the glory of God, the performance of our duty, and diſcharge of a good conſcience, is no property of a hireling; ſeeing God hath promiſed to giue to them which by continuance in well doing, ſeeke glorie, and honour, and immortalitie, eternall life, Rom. 2. 7.

By this that hath beene ſaid, wee may ſee the impudency of the Rhemiſts, who in their marginall notes vpon Luke 14. 1. Hebr. 11. 26. and Apoc. 3. 5. doe notably ſlaunder vs C and our doctrine, in auerring that wee teach, that no man ought to doe good in reſpect of reward: the like may be ſaid of Cardinal Bellarmine, Binsfeldius, and others. For this is our conſtant doctrine, that we may, and ought to ſtirre vp our dulneſſe to all chearefulneſſe, in the diſcharge of our duty, by ſetting before our eyes the reward which is promiſed. Yet ſo, as that we ought not onely, nor principally, to reſpect the reward: for the zeale of Gods glory, the care and conſcience wee haue to diſcharge our duty, ought rather to mooue vs to be plentifull in good workes, (in lue of thankfulneſſe vnto God for the riches of his mercie) then the greatneſſe of the reward; ſeeing wee ought to doe our duty, though D there were no heauen, no hell, no reward, no puniſhment, no diuell to torment, no conſcience to accuſe; the very loue of God ought to conſtraine vs, 2. Cor. 5. 14. And here we muſt with thankfulneſſe acknowledge the endleſſe loue and mercy of God towards vs, ſeeing that, when hee might exact ſtrict obediende without any pomiſe of recompence for our labour: nay, when hee might ſhiuer vs in peeces with his yron ſcepter, yet as Ahaſhuerosh did to Queene Eſther, he holdeth out his golden ſcepter vnto vs in the preaching of the word, that we might lay holde of it, and by it apprehend eternall life. Yea it pleaſeth him to winne vs by gifts, to incite vs by rewards, to allure vs by promiſes, in giuing his word, that if we giue, we may looke to receiue, (though not for our merits, yet through his mercy:) if wee beſtow tranſitory goods, wee ſhall receiue a durable ſubſtance: If a cup of colde water, Gods kingdome, Mat. 10. 42.

De iuſtific. lib 5 cap. 8. De Iuſtific & mer. Sec. 4. memb. 5. concl. 15.

The ſecond generall point, is the circumſtance of time, when we ſhall reape, to wit, in due time. This due time may be vnderſtood in part of this life: for godlines hath the promiſe of this life, as well as of the life to come, and the workes of mercy haue beene euen in this life recompenced to the full. The widowe of Zarepta for entertaining the Prophet Eliah, was miraculouſly ſuſtained in the dearth: the meale in her barrell did not waſte, and the oyle in her cruiſe did not diminiſh, 1. Kin. 17. 16. And ſo the Shunamite for the like kindneſſe ſhewed to the Prophet Elizeus, being barren, obtained a ſonne: and when hee was dead, ſhee obtained him to life againe, 2. King. 4. as the widow of Zarepta did hers at the prayer of Eliah, 1. King. 17. 23. For as God doth alwaies giue to his children in this life the firſt fruites of his ſpirit: ſo hee doth often giue them the firſt fruites of their labours, as a taſte of their future felicity, and an earneſt of that happines which after they ſhall fully enioy. Our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, hee will reward them an hundred fold in this life, Matth. 19. But this due time is properly meant of the life to come, which hath two degrees, the firſt is at the day of death, when the ſoule entreth into happines: the ſecond, at the day of iudgement, when both ſoule and body (beeing re-united) ſhall bee put in full poſſeſſion of eternall glory and felicity: for then they ſhall be rewarded according to their workes: not ſo much as a cup of colde water which they haue giuen to releeue the Saints of God, but ſhall be recompenced to the full, Mat. 10. 42.

Vſe. Seeing God hath ſet downe a ſet and certaine time when wee are to reape, it is our duty with patience to expect it, as the husbandman doth, who hauing ſowed his field, doth not looke for a croppe the next day, or weeke, or moneth: but patiently expecteth the harueſt, that hee may receiue the precious ſeede of the earth. For he is too vnreaſonable, who hauing ſowed in September, looketh for a croppe in October: hee muſt waite for the moneth of Auguſt, till the harueſt; and in the meane time indure ſtorme and tempeſt, winde and weather, ſnow and raine, haile and froſt. So we muſt ſowe our ſeed, and ſowe plentifully, ſtill expecting the fruite of our labour with patience, till the greateſt harueſt come, the great day of retribution, in which God wil ſeparate the wheate from the chaffe, gathering the one into his garners, & burning vp the other with vnquenchable fire, Math. 3. 12. Let vs conſider the example of God, who doth patiently expect, and (as I may ſay) waites our leiſure when we wil turne vnto him, that he might haue mercy vpõ vs, Eſa. 30. 8. he waites at the doore of our hearts, & ſtandeth knocking to be let in, Apocal. 3.20. A nay, hee calleth vnto vs ſtanding without, Open vnto mee my ſiſter, my loue, my doue, my vndefiled, for my head is full of dew, and my lockes with the droppes of the night. Cant. 5.2. Woe vnto thee Ieruſalem, wilt thou neuer be made cleane? when will it once be? Iere. 13.27. More particularly, Gods waiting and expecting is ſet downe in Scripture by ſundry degrees. Firſt, he waiteth all the day long, Eſay 65.2. I haue ſtretched out my hand all the day long, to a diſobedient and gainſaying people. Secondly, forty dayes together, Yet fortie dayes, and Niniuie ſhall bee deſtroyed. Ionas 3.4. Thirdly, all the yeare long, as the husbandman doth; I looked for grapes, and loe wilde grapes. Eſay 5.4. Fourthly, he B expecteth our amendment, many yeares together, Luke 13.7. Beholde, theſe three yeares haue I come and ſought fruit on this figge tree, and finde none. Fiftly, the Lord ſuffered the manners of the Iſraelites fortie yeares in the wildernes. Pſal. 95.10. Act. 13.18. Sixtly, the long ſufferance of God (as Peter ſaith, 1. Epiſt. 3.20.) did patiently expect the conuerſion of the olde world, all the while the Arke was in preparing for the ſpace of 120. yeares. Seuenthly, he expected the Canaanites, and Amorites, for the ſpace of foure hundred yeares, yea he ſuffered all Gentiles to wander in their owne waies, and in the vanity of their minde almoſt for three thouſand yeares together. Acts 14.16. Now if God be ſo patient C in expecting our amendment from day to day, from yeare to yeare; we ought to be patient in expecting the accompliſhment of his promiſes day after day, and yeare after yeare, as wee are commaunded, Habbac. 2.3. Though the viſion tarrie, yet wait for it, for it ſhall ſurely come, and ſhall not ſtay: and though it be long before we reape any fruit of our labours, yet let vs with patience expect it, for in due ſeaſon we ſhall reape, if wee faint not. For, if God wait vpon vs, not for his owne good, but for ours; what a ſhame is it, that wee will not waite vpon him, in tarrying his good leiſure, for our owne good? The dumbe and ſenſles D creatures may ſet vs to ſchoole in this point: for they expect with a feruent deſire to be deliuered from the bondage of corruption, into the glorious liberty of the ſonnes of God. Rom. 8.19, 20. and as the word ſignifieth, they expect with a longing deſire, euen with thruſting forth their heads, as the poore priſoner that is condemned doth, who eſtſoones putteth forth his head out of the window, in a continuall earneſt expectation of the gracious pardon of the Prince. It is our parts therefore to waite as Dauid did, who ſaith of himſelfe, Pſalme 69.3. I am wearie of my crying, my eyes faile me whileſt I waite for my God. For if we giue ouer our patient expecting, & faint in our mindes, ſeeking to anticipate this DVE TIME, this period which God hath prefixed in his vnchangeable will, (more immutable then the lawes of the Medes and Perſians) a thouſand to one but wee runne for helpe, either to the witch of Endor, as Saul did, 2. Samuel 28. or to the wizzard of Pethor, as Balack did, Numb. 22. or to the ſorcerer and figure-flinger of Babel, as Nebuchadnezzer did, Ezech. 21.21. or if all theſe faile, (as commonly they doe) we either breake out into open blaſphemy, as the King of Iſrael did, 2. King. 6.33. Beholde this euill commeth of the Lord, ſhould I attend on the Lord any longer? or in the depth of diſcontent, wee play the deſperate part of Razes, & lay violent hands vpon our ſelues, 2. Macchab. 14.41.

ἐτροποφόρησε, not ἐτροφοφόρησεν, as ſome would haue it.

ἀποκαραδοκία τῆς.

The third thing to bee conſidered, is the condition required on our part, that we may reape in due time; ſet downe in theſe words, If we faint not. The words in the originall are thus: wee ſhall reape in due time not fainting: which may be (and are of * ſome) taken in a double ſenſe: either as a promiſe: or as a condition. As a promiſe, thus, If we be not wearie of well doing, wee ſhall reape in due ſeaſon without all fainting and wearineſſe, either to the body, or minde, that is, we ſhall reape with all ioy and comfort, as it is Pſal. 126.5, 6. They that ſowe in teares, ſhall reape in ioy, and they that went weeping and carried precious ſeede, ſhall come againe with ioy, and bring their ſheaues with them. As a condition, that if we continue conſtant in well doing to the ende without fainting, we ſhall reape in the time that God hath appointed: and in this ſenſe it is to bee taken in this text, to wit conditionally, as it is wel tranſlated, If we faint not.

μὴ ἐκλυόμενοι.
* Oecumen. in hunc locũ, & alii.

VVe are further to conſider that there is a double fainting, one of the body, another of the minde. The bodily fainting which commeth by labour and toyling, is not here meant, ſeeing it doth nothing impeach the goodneſſe of the worke, (it is an argument rather of the ſoundnes and ſincerity thereof;) but the ſpirituall fainting is that which is to be feared, becauſe it maketh our labour all in vaine. And this ſpirituall fainting is two-fold: the firſt is, the ſlaking & remitting ſomewhat of our courſe, and this hath, and doth befall the Saints of God, as we may ſee in the example of the Church of Epheſus, which left her firſt loue, Apoc. 2.4. Yea all the Saints of God haue their turbida internalla, troubled and diſtempered fits, ſometime in the full, ſomtime in the wane, ſometime zealous and forward in the ſeruice of God, ſometime againe, heauy and backward, &c.

The ſecond is ſuch a fainting and languiſhing, that we cleane giue ouer our courſe, of which Paul ſpeakes, 2. Cor. 4.16. Therefore we faint not, but though our outward man periſh, yet the inward man is renewed daily. And the author to the Hebrewes, We muſt conſider Chriſt, who endured ſuch ſpeaking againſt of ſinners, leſt we ſhould be wearied, and faint in our ſoules, Heb. 12.3. And againe, v. 5. Deſpiſe not the chaſtening of the Lord, neither faint when thou art rebuked of him. This fainting is meant in this place.

Finis coronat opus.
Of all vertues it is onely constancie is crowned.
Non cœpisse, sed perfecisse virtutis eſt.

Whereas S. Paul ſaith we ſhall reape, if we faint not, he ſignifieth, that we muſt perſeuere and continue to the end, otherwiſe we cannot looke to reape the harueſt of eternall happineſſe. It is nothing but conſtancy and continuing in well doing, that doth crowne all our good workes. Be conſtant (ſaith our Sauiour Chriſt to the Church of Smyrna, Apoc. 2. 10.) and I will giue thee the crowne of life. Ierome ſaith, it is the property of true vertue not to begin well, but to end well. Paul blameth theſe Galatians for beginning in the ſpirit and ending in the fleſh: and Chriſt ſheweth what a ſhame it is to him that beginneth to build and cannot finiſh it: it is as good neuer a whit as neuer the better: nay his condition is better that neuer began, then that of Iudas, whoſe end was worſe then his beginning. Leuit. 3. 9. the taile of the ſacrifice was commanded to be offered vpon the altar, by which was ſignified, that in euery good worke we muſt not only begin, but continue in it to the end, and ſacrifice the end of it to God, as well as the beginning: otherwiſe we loſe our labour, and miſſe our reward: therefore S. Iohn bids vs looke to our ſelues, that we loſe not the things which we haue done, but that we may receiue a full reward, 2. Ioh. verſ. 8. The labourers in the vineyard came at ſundrie times, ſome in the morning, others at the third, others at the ſixt, and ninth, others at the twelfth houre of the day, yet none receiued the labourers wages, but thoſe that continued in the worke to the end, Matth. 20. God is Alpha and Omega, and therefore requireth a good end, as well as a good beginning: and it is our duty not onely to obey the commandement of Chriſt, venite ad me, come vnto me, Matth. 11. 28. but that alſo, manete in me, abide in me, Ioh. 15. 4. for he onely that continueth to the end, ſhall be ſaued, Matth. 24. 13.

Further, whereas the Apoſtle ſaith, we ſhall reape, if we faint not. It may bee demaunded, whether the Saints doe ſo faint at any time, that they finally fall away? To which demaund I anſwer in a word, that they doe not, nay they cannot totally and finally fall from grace. For firſt, if any thing ſhould make them fall away, it is ſinne, but they cannot ſinne, becauſe the ſeede of regeneration and grace remaineth in them, 1. Ioh. 3. 9. And though the Church ſleepe, yet her heart waketh, Cantic. 5. verſ. 2. And if any thing make them faint, it is affliction and perſecution, but theſe and all other croſſes worke together for the beſt vnto them that loue God, Rom. 8. 28 And therefore theſe are no hinderances, but furtherances rather to their ſaluation. Secondly, they are built and founded vpon the promiſe of God, I will put my ſpirit into their hearts, ſo that they ſhall not depart from me, Ier. 32. verſ. 40. Therefore Chriſt doth ſo preſerue them by his power, preuent them by his grace, guard and guide them by his ſpirit, that they ſhall neuer fall away, and that none ſhall plucke them out of his hand, Ioh. 10. I adde further, that they are built vpon the truth and fidelitie of his promiſe, God is faithfull, & will not ſuffer you to be tempted aboue that you be able, but will giue the iſſue with the temptation, that ye may be able to beare it, 1. Cor. 10. 13. Thirdly, vpon the prayer of Chriſt, who praied that they might be kept from euill. Ioh. 17. 15. that they might be one in the Trinity, as he in the Father, & the Father in him, v. 21. that they may be with him, and ſee his glorie. verſ. 24. Now Chriſt was alway heard in that which he prayed for, Ioh. 11. 42.

Laſtly, vpon the life of Chriſt, which is communicated to all his liuing members, Gal. 2. v. 20. When Chriſt which is their life ſhall appeare, then ſhall they alſo appeare with him in glorie. Col. 3. 4. Queſt. If they cannot altogether faint and fall away, why doth the holy Ghoſt make a doubt of it, as though they might? Anſ. It is the will of God to mooue vs to perſeuerance, and to ſtirre vp our dulneſſe by ſuch ſpeeches: that we ſhould not be wanting to our ſelues in the vſe of the meanes.

10. VVhile we haue therefore time let vs doe good vnto all men, but ſpecially to them which are of the houſhold of faith.

In theſe words the Apoſtle doth iterate the concluſion propounded in the ſixe verſe, as alſo in the ninth verſe immediately going before; that we ſhould doe the good we can, while we haue time; and withall he doth illuſtrate it both by the obiect to whome we muſt doe good, and by the circumſtance of time, how long we muſt continue therein. And herein he anſwereth a ſecret demand, which might be made vpon the former rule, for whereas it might bee thought that the Gentiles which profeſſe not the ſame religion with vs, were to be neglected, or at leaſt, not ſo reſpected (as we reade, Act. 6. verſ. 1. the Grecians were neglected of the Ebrewes in their daily miniſterie) the Apoſtle anſwereth, that we muſt not reſtraine our bountie and goodneſſe onely to thoſe that are of the ſame religion with vs, but enlarge it vnto all, VVe muſt doe good vnto all men, but ſpecially to them of the houſhold of faith.

In the words we may conſider three things. Firſt, the dutie it ſelfe, Let vs do good. Secondly, the obiect or perſons to whome we muſt doe good, which is laid downe comparatiuely, we muſt doe good to all, but ſpecially to thoſe that are of the houſhold of faith. Thirdly, the circumſtance of time, when and how long we are to doe good, whilſt we haue time; of theſe in order, and firſt of the dutie.

This generall dutie of doing good is recommended vnto vs by ſundrie arguments. The firſt may bee taken from the maine end and ſcope of a mans life in this world, which as Paul ſignifieth in this place, is nothing elſe but to doe good: & this doing of good ſtandeth in three things: the firſt concerneth God, in prayſing, magniſying, and adoring his holy name. Dauid had an eie to this end, whē he deſired to liue for no other end, but that he might praiſe God, O let my ſoule liue, and it ſhall praiſe thee. The ſecond concerneth our ſelues, in ſeeking the kingdome of God, and the righteouſneſſe thereof, by making our calling and election ſure by good works, *2.Pet.*1.10. This end of a mans life Salomon intimateth, when hee ſaith, Let vs heare the end of all: feare God and keepe his commandements, for this is the whole duetie of man, Eccleſ. 12.verſ. 13. The third concerneth our brethren, in doing good vnto them ſo far forth as poſſibly we can in the compaſſe of our calling: for it is the end of euery mans calling, in ſeruing of men to ſerue God; and this is that which Paul vrgeth in this place, to be beneficiall vnto all.

The ſecond may bee taken from the example of God himſelfe. Wee muſt doe good to them that hate vs, that wee may be the children of our heauenly Father, Matth. 5. verſ. 44.45 For wee are more conformable vnto GOD in doing good vnto others (it beeing an eſſentiall propertie in GOD to doe good to euery man, ſeeing that euery creature doth drinke, or at leaſt taſte of the ſweete cup of Gods goodneſſe. Pſal. 145. verſe 9.) then in receiuing good from them: for he receiueth nothing from vs, as Dauid ſaith, *My goodnes reacheth not to thee, Pſal.*16.verſe 2. To the example of God wee may adde the example of godly Kings. The chiefeſt praiſe and commendation of Hezekiah and Ioſiah, is noted by their goodneſſe. Concerning the reſt of the acts of Hezekiah and his GOODNES, they are written ----- 2.*Chronic.*32.32. Concerning the reſt of the acts of Ioſiah, and his GOODNES, doing as it was written in the Lawe of the Lord, beholde they are written ----- 2. Chron. 35. v. 26,27. And this excellent name of Goodneſſe or Bountifulneſſe, was (as it may ſeeme) by the Law of nations, aſcribed to Princes and Potentates, in that it beſt beſeemed them, as in name, ſo in the vertue it ſelfe, to expreſſe the diuine nature of God, and therefore they were called εὐεργέται, that is, bountifull Benefactors, or gracious Lords, Luke 23.25.

The third is drawne from teſtimonie, diuine, & humane. Our Sauior Chriſt ſaith, *It is a bleſſed thing to giue, rather then to receiue, Act.*20.35. that is, to do good, rather then to receiue good. a Nazian. ſaith, that a man reſembleth God in no propertie ſo much as in doing good. And the heathen Orator Demoſthenes could ſay, that (b) doing of good, and ſpeaking the truth, makes vs moſt like to God himſelfe.

But to conſider this more particularly, Goodneſſe is threefold. Preſeruing, Vniting, Communicating: in all which particulars we are to practiſe this dutie. And firſt, for the preſeruing goodneſſe: we muſt doe good not onely to our ſelues, but to others alſo, in labouring to A keepe and preſerue them from the contagion of ſinne, from falling from grace, or backſliding from their holy profeſſion, by all good meanes, as by good example, and by gracious ſpeeches ſeaſoned with ſalt, &c. as Barnabas did, who comming to Antioch, and ſeeing the grace of God that was giuen them, was glad, and confirmed them therein, exhorting them that with purpoſe of heart they would cleaue vnto the Lord, Act. 11. 22. and for this cauſe (as I take it) it is added, v.23. that he was a good man, and full of the holy Ghoſt, and faith.

The Vniting goodneſſe, is likewiſe to be practiſed, in ſetting men at vnitie, in reconciling thoſe that are at variance, in making peace B and amitie, where there is nothing but enmitie and diſſention: for, for this cauſe Chriſt calleth peace-makers, the children of God, Mat. 5. 10. becauſe herein they as liuely reſemble the goodnes of God their heauenly Father, as any ſonne doth reſemble any qualitie or propertie in his naturall father: for he maketh men to be of one minde in one houſe, Pſal.67.

The communicating goodnes (beeing ſpecially vnderſtood in this place) hath foure degrees. Firſt, for temporall things we muſt communicate to the neceſſities of the Saints, Rom.12.ver.13. And for ſpirituall bleſſings we muſt remember the ſaying of Peter, Let euery man as he hath receiued a gift; ſo miniſter the ſame vnto others as good diſpoſers of the manifold C grace of God, 1.Pet.4.10.

Secondly, wee muſt bee plentifull in the workes of mercie, not contenting our ſelues with this, that we are beneficiall to ſome in releeuing them in their wants and neceſſities: but we muſt be rich in good workes, 1. Tim. 6. 18. Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not high minded, that they doe good, and be rich in good workes, readie to diſtribute and to communicate. We muſt be like Tabitha (or Dorcas) who cloathed the poore with the garments which ſhee made at her owne proper coſt and charges, Act.9.39. and for this cauſe the holy Ghoſt giueth this teſtimonie of D her, That ſhee was rich or full of good workes and almes which ſhe did, v.36. like to the vertuous woman, Prou.31.20. who openeth the palme of her hands to the poore, and ſtretcheth out her hands to the needie: like Iob, of whom it is ſaid that the loines of the poore bleſſed him, Iob 31.20.

Thirdly, we muſt bee much in goodneſſe (as the Scripture ſpeaketh of God) that is, abundant in goodneſſe, in communicating vnto others aboundantly thoſe bleſſings which the Lord hath ſtored vs withall: not only in louing our brethren, for which the Theſſalonians are commended, that their loue one towards another did abound; but in a liberall ſupplying of their wants, as Paul exhorts the Corinthians, that as they did abound in faith and loue, ſo they would abound in rich liberalitie, 2. Cor.8.7. as good Obadiah did, in ſpending his liuing, and venturing his life, in hiding an hundred of the Lords Prophets, from the furious rage of wicked Ieſabel, 1 King. 18. 13.

---

[a] Orat. 27. de pauperũ amore, ἐν οὐδενὶ οὕτως τὸ εὐποιεῖν ἄνθρωπος ἔχει Θεοῦ. [b] τὸ εὐεργετεῖν καὶ ἀληθεύειν. Bonũ prophylacticũ vel conſeruatiuum: congregatiuum: communicatiuum.

Laſtly, we muſt be exceeding or ſuperabundant in goodneſſe, in exceeding meaſure (if it may be) in doing good: like the poore widdow who had rather want her ſelfe, then be altogether wanting in contribution to the treaſure of the Lords Temple: and therefore though it was but two mites which ſhee caſt into the Corban, yet Chriſt preferred it before all the rich mens offerings being put together, in that they gaue of their ſuperfluitie, but ſhee of her penurie, caſt in all that ſhe had, euen all her liuing, Luk. 21. 4. It is wel ſaid by S. Ambroſe: We muſt releeue the wants of other according as we are able, and ſometime euen aboue our abilitie: as Paul witneſſeth of the Corinthians to their great commendation, that to their power, and beyond their power, they were willing; 2. Cor. 8. 3.

Offic. l. 2. c. 28. Neceſſitates aliorum quantum poſſumus iuvare debemus, et plus interdum quam poſſumus.

Further, in doing good, we muſt obſerue theſe rules. I. We muſt do good of that onely which is our owne: for we may not cutte a large and liberal ſhiue of another mans loafe (as the common ſaying is) we may not ſteale from one, to giue to another: or deale vniuſtly with ſome, that we may be mercifull to others: or rob Peter, to cloath Paul. The Lord abhorreth euen burnt offering, if it be of that which is gotten of rapine and *ſpoile. Eſay 61. 8. And hence it is that Dauid would not offer burnt offering without coſt, of that which was not his owne, 1. Chron. 21. 24.

* holocauſtum de rapina.

II. We muſt doe good with chearefulnes and alacritie, for God loueth a chearefull giuer, 2. Corin. 9. Ambroſe ſaith fitly and finely to this purpoſe, Well-doing ought to proceede from well-willing: for ſuch as thine affection is, ſuch is thy action. Therefore if we giue, we muſt doe it freely, otherwiſe it is no gift: for what more free then the gift? therefore we may not play the huckſters in doing good, for that doth moſt blemiſh the excellencie of the gift: for as Lactantius ſaith, Danda beneficia, non fœneranda.

Offic. l. 1. c. 30. Beneficentia ex benevolentia manare debet, affectus tuus nomen imponit operi tuo. Inſtit. divin. l. 2. cap. 12.

III. VVe muſt ſo do good, as that we doe not diſable our ſelues for euer doing good; but may continue in well doing, and as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh, bring forth more fruite in our age. Salomon commands that the ſtreames of our wels ſhould flow to others, yet ſo, as that the fountaine be ſtill our owne. Pſal. 112. 5. A good man is mercifull, and lendeth, and will guide his affaires with iudgement, that is, he will ſo diſcreetly diſpoſe & order all his actions, as that he will keepe himſelfe within the compaſſe; ſo beginning to do good, as that he may continue: therfore the wiſe man ſaith, In the houſe of the wiſe there is a precious treaſure, and oyntment, but a fooliſh man deuoureth it. Prou. 21. 20. All the diſciples that were at Antioch, ſent ſuccour to the brethren which were in Iudea, in the great famine that was in the time of Claudius Cæſar, yet euery man according to his abilitie. Act. 11. 29. for according to Pauls rule, we muſt not ſo giue, that others be eaſed, and we our ſelues pinched, 2. Cor. 8. 13.

Pſal. 92. 14.

Prou. 5. 15.

IV. VVe muſt doe all the good we can poſſibly within the compaſſe of our callings, and hinder all the euill. It will be ſaid, God (whoſe example we are to follow) doth not al the good he can, neither doth he hinder all the euill. Therefore we are not bound to doe all the good, or preuent all the euill we can. I anſwer, in this particular we are not to imitate the example of God, and that for three cauſes. Firſt, becauſe we are ſubiect to the law: Thou ſhalt not doe euill that good may come of it. Rom. 3. 8. whereas God is not bound nor ſubiect to any Law, but is aboue it, and hath power to diſpenſe with it. Secondly, becauſe he is able to draw good out of euill, light out of darkneſſe, which we cannot doe. Thirdly, becauſe God is the Generall good, we particular. Now there is great difference betwixt theſe two, for it belongs to the nature of the particular good, to procure all the good that may be ſimply to euery one, and to hinder all euill: whereas to the nature of the generall or vniuerſall good, three things appertaine. Firſt, that all things ſhould be good in ſome meaſure of goodneſſe. Secondly, that ſome things ſhould be better then others. Thirdly, that thoſe things that are defectiue in goodneſſe, that is, euils, ſhould be ordained to the common good: as in a wel-ordered houſe, all the parts thereof are good in their kinde. Secondly, ſome better then others, as Paul ſaith, In a great houſe there are veſſels of gold and ſiluer, of wood and ſtone, ſome for honour, and ſome for diſhonour. 2. Tim. 2. verſ. 20. Thirdly, thoſe that are deſtitute of goodneſſe, as ſinkes, draughts, and other like places (ſeruing for baſe, though neceſſarie vſes) are ordained to the common good of the whole houſe, which it cannot want. And therefore if the maſter builder (to preuent theſe particular euils) ſhould leaue them out of his building, hee ſhould preiudice the common good of the whole houſe, which cannot be without them.

Thus much of the firſt part, namely the dutie: Now I proceede to proſecute the ſecond, which ſhewes firſt to whome we muſt doe good; & ſecondly the order to be obſerued therein. We muſt doe good vnto all, but ſpecially to thoſe which are of the houſhold of faith. Touching the firſt; It may ſeeme, that ſome among the Galatians were of the Phariſies mind, who thought they were bound to loue their friends, but not their enemies; or of this perſwaſion, that they were not bound in conſcience to doe good vnto the heathen amongſt whom they liued, as beeing profeſſed enemies of Chriſt, & open perſecutors of his Church. But Paul teacheth them and vs another leſſon, when he commands vs to do good vnto all, ſutable to that of our Sauiour Chriſt, loue your enemies, bleſſe them that curſe you, doe good to them that hate you, pray for them that hurt you and perſecute you. Matth. 5. 44. Let vs conſider the good Samaritans practiſe: Albeit there was mortall hatred betwixt the Iewes, and the Samaritans, Ioh. 4. 6. yet hee ſeeing his deadly enemy wounded & halfe dead, had compaſſion vpon him, powred wine and oyle into his ſoares, bound vp his wounds, ſet him on his owne beaſt, brought him to an Inne, and made prouiſion for him; the like ought we to doe, euen to our enemies, as occaſion ſhall ſerue. Luk. 10. 30. For if we muſt do good to our enemies beaſt, his oxe or aſſe going aſtray, in bringing him home againe; Exod. 23. 4. Much more ought we to doe good to our enemie himſelfe. For the more beneficiall and communicatiue we ſhew our ſelues to be, the greater goodneſſe we ſhew to be in vs, as the fountaine which powreth forth his ſtreames vnto all, and the candle which ſtandeth vpon a candleſticke ſhineth vnto all, and not to it ſelfe beeing couered with a buſhell.

The reaſons why wee ought to doe good vnto all, (euen to our enemies) are principally foure. The firſt may bee taken from the grounds of loue and beneficence, which are in all men, euen the wicked themſelues; now the grounds of loue are ſpecially three: the firſt is the image of God, which beeing in all men, yea euen in prophane perſons in part, ought to be the loadſtone of loue to draw our affection vnto it. The ſecond is communion and fellowſhip in the ſame nature, and therefore we ought to be beneficiall vnto men, becauſe they are men: and though we will not doe good homini, yet we muſt doe it humanitati, as the Philoſopher ſaid. The third is participation in the death of Chriſt, in that all men haue part in Chriſt as well as we (for any thing we know.) Secondly, God (whoſe example we are to follow, as hath beene ſaid) is good & bountifull vnto all, cauſing his ſunne to ſhine as well vpon the bad as the good, and Math. 5. 45. his raine to fall as well vpon the ground of the vniuſt, as of the iuſt, beeing kind vnto the vnkind, and to the wicked. Thirdly, we muſt doe to others as we would they ſhould doe to vs. Therefore if we beeing in diſtreſſe would be glad to receiue good at the hand of a wicked man, Math. 7. 11. we ought in the like caſe to do good vnto him. Fourthly, our profeſſion and the reward which wee looke for, require this at our hands, for if we do good vnto them only that doe good vnto vs, or if we be friendly to thoſe only that are friendly to vs, what ſingular thing doe we? for euen the Publicans doe the like: and ſo hauing our reward here in this life, we can expect none other after this life, Matth. 5. 47.

The ſecond point, (which containeth the order to bee obſerued in doing good,) is laid downe in theſe words: Let vs doe good to all, but ſpecially to thoſe that are of the houſhold of faith. By them of the houſhold of faith, we are to vnderſtand A thoſe which by faith are of the ſame family with vs, namely, of the ſame Catholike Church vpon earth: the houſe of God beeing often put to ſignifie the Church of God, as 1. Timoth. 3. verſ. 15. The houſe of God is called the Church of God, the ground and pillar of truth. Heb. 3. verſ. 2. Moſes was faithfull in all Gods houſe, that is, his Church: and thus this phraſe is expounded, Ephe. 2. 19. Ye are no more ſtrangers, but citizens with the Saints, and of the houſhold of God. So that by them of the houſhold of faith, we muſt vnderſtand onely the faithfull: Indeed among men, not onely children, but alſo men-ſeruants, and maid-ſeruants are counted to be of the family, but God accounts them onely to bee of his B houſe, that are Saints by calling, and ſonnes by faith. The reſt are baſtards and not ſonnes, they are (it may be) in the houſe, but not of the houſe: for true ſauing faith, doth characterize thoſe that are of the family of faith, euen as fanaticall dreames, fantaſticall opinions, allegorizing of the literall ſenſe of the Scripture, denying the reſurrection of the fleſh, doe characterize thoſe that are of the Family of loue.

Hauing the meaning, conſider the dutie, which is, to do good principally to the faithfull, the Saints and ſeruants of God, that is, we muſt doe good vnto them before others, and more then to others, which are not of the ſame family, as Dauid ſaith, My welldoing reacheth C not to thee, but to the Saints which are in earth, and them that excell in vertue, Pſal. 16. 2, 3. For it is all one as if the Apoſtle ſhould haue ſaid, As it is fit & conuenient, that they that are of the ſame family ſhould be helpfull and beneficiall one vnto another, rather then to thoſe that are of another family: So it is requiſite that thoſe which are members of the ſame bodie, nay ſonnes and daughters, brethren and ſiſters, hauing the ſame God for their Father, the ſame Church for their mother, Chriſt for their elder brother, begotten of the ſame immortall ſeede, nouriſhed with the ſame milke of the word, and looking for the ſame bleſſed inheritance: ſhould rather be beneficiall one to another, then to D thoſe that are forrainers and ſtraungers, no way linked vnto them by the bond of faith.

Now the reaſons why we ought eſpecially to do good to them of the houſhold of faith, may be theſe. Firſt, becauſe God loueth all his creatures, ſpecially mankind, moſt eſpecially the faithfull, vpon whome he doth beſtow the riches of his loue, yea himſelfe alſo: for though God be good vnto all, Pſal. 145. 9. yet in a ſpeciall ſort he is good to Iſrael, to them that are of a pure heart. Pſal. 73. verſ. 1. He is a Sauiour of all men, ſpecially of thoſe that beleeue. 1. Tim. 4. 10. Secondly, becauſe whatſoeuer is done to one of Gods Saints is done vnto him, Matth. 25. 44. Thirdly, in reſpect of the excellencie of their perſons, in that they are ſonnes of God, heires of his kingdome, members of Chriſt, Temples of the holy Ghoſt, &c.

Further, in that all the faithfull are called a houſhold and a family, this teacheth vs, that as we haue one bed and one board, one bread to feede vpon, and one cuppe whereof all drinke: ſo we ſhould haue one minde and one heart, we ſhould cleaue together, and hold together: for if they of the family of loue ioyne together, why ſhould not we which are of the family of faith hold together? If thoſe of the kingdome of darknes combine themſelues together, as it is Pſal. 2.2. The Kings of the earth band themſelues, and the Princes are aſſembled together, againſt the Lord, and againſt his Chriſt, Act.4.27. Doubtleſſe againſt thine holy Sonne Ieſus, whome thou haſt annointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and people of Iſrael gathered themſelues together, Pſal.83.5,6,7,8. They haue conſulted together in heart, and haue made a league againſt thee: The tabernacle of Edom, and the Iſmaelites, Moab, and the Agarims, Gabal, and Ammon, and Amalec, the Philiſtims, with the inhabitants of Tyrus: Aſhur alſo is ioyned with them: they haue bin an arme to the children of Lot. How much more therefore ought the children of light to company and conſort together? But the children of this world are wiſer in their generation then the children of light. Nay the bruite beaſts may condemne vs in this point: for cattell heard together, ſheepe flocke together, fiſhes ſhole together, and (as the prouerbe is) birds of a feather will flie together. What a ſhame is it therefore for vs that are of the ſame family of faith, to fall out, making a rent in the coat, and a diuiſion in the bodie of Chriſt, by ſeparating our ſelues one from another, in affection of heart, and practiſe of life?

Againe, this may miniſter comfort to all the faithfull beeing vnder the croſſe, to conſider that they are of Gods family; and therfore neede not doubt of the prouidence of God, but that he will prouide things neceſſarie for them; For he that prouideth not for his owne, and ſpecially for them of his family hath denied the faith, and is worſe then an infidel.

1.Tim.5.8

Laſtly, in that the faithfull are called a family, it ſhewes that they are but few, euen a handful in compariſon of the world; for what is a family to a countrie or a kingdome? Indeed I graunt, if thoſe of the family of faith, be conſidered by themſelues, they are many, Matth. 8.11. I ſay vnto you, that MANY ſhall come from the Eaſt, and from the Weſt, and ſhall ſit downe with Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob in the kingdome of heauen. Nay, they are innumerable, Apoc.7.9. After theſe things I beheld, and loe, a great multitude, which no man could number of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, ſtood before the throne, and before the lambe, cloathed with long white robes, & palmes in their hands. But beeing compared with infidels, which ſhalbe condemned, they are but few, Matth.7.13,14. Enter in at the ſtraight gate: for it is the wide gate and broad way that leadeth to deſtruction, and MANY there be which goe in thereat: Becauſe the gate is ſtraight, & the way narrow, that leadeth vnto life, and FEVV there be that finde it. MANIE are called, but FEVV choſen. Here they are called a family, and a little flocke, Luk.12.v.32. and a remnant, Rom 9.27. Let the Papiſts therefore bragge of their Vniuerſalitie and multitude, as much as they liſt, in the meane time let not vs feare to ioyne our ſelues to the little flocke of Chriſt, and with them to goe on in the ſtraite way to eternall life.

The order which we are to obſerue in doing good to others, is elſewhere more diſtinctly ſet downe in Scripture; and it ſtands in theſe degrees. Firſt, and principally, a man muſt doe good to thoſe of his family, as to his wife, children, ſeruants, 1.Tim.5.8. If there be any that prouideth not for his owne, and eſpecially for them of his houſhold, he hath denied the faith, and is worſe then an infidell. Secondly, after thoſe of our family, we muſt doe good to our parents and progenitors, 1.Tim.5.4. If any widow haue children or nephewes, let them (that is, thoſe children or nephewes) learne firſt to ſhew godlineſſe toward their owne houſe, and to recompence their parents. Marke, they muſt firſt doe good to their owne houſe, and then in the ſecond place to their parents, that is, their fathers and mothers, if they be children; their grandfathers & grandmothers if they be nephews. Thirdly, after the two former, we muſt doe good to our kindred, 1.Tim.5.8. If any prouide not for his owne—he hath denied the faith, &c. VVhere by owne, wee are chiefly to vnderſtand, thoſe poore widowes that are neere of blood, or kindred vnto vs; or generally all thoſe that are of our kindred in the fleſh, who are therefore called ours, becauſe they doe more neerely concerne vs, as beeing linked vnto vs, by the bond of nature. They that are of our kindred are to be reſpected and releeued of vs in the third place, if they be of the houſhold of faith; otherwiſe, the Saints of God, which are neither kith nor kinne vnto vs, are to be preferred before them. Fourthly, of ſtrangers and forreners, we are to doe good to the faithfull before others. Fiftly, and laſtly, we muſt be beneficiall to all, whether friends or foes, of our kindred, or ſtrangers, of the houſe of God or otherwiſe, as God in his prouidence ſhall offer them vnto vs: for ſo Paul ſaith, VVe muſt doe good vnto all men. It will be ſaid, we are to loue al men alike (ſeeing we muſt loue our neighbours as our ſelues:) and therefore we muſt doe good to all men alike, not reſpecting the faithfull more then others. I anſwer, our loue of our brethren, is leſſe or greater, either in reſpect of the obiect, in wiſhing a greater or a leſſe good vnto them: and thus we muſt loue all men alike, in wiſhing to them eternall life: or in reſpect of the intention of our loue, in hauing a μάλιστα, not wel tranſlated, Namely.

προγόνοις, not well tranſlated, Kinred.

greater deſire of the good of ſome, then of other ſome: and thus we are not bound to loue, or to doe good to all alike. For as S. Bernard ſaith, Meliori maior affectus; indigentiori maior effectus tribuendus.

This doctrine inueſted with the former examples, may ſhame the baſe, ſeruile, and beggerly liberalitie of the common ſort of men, which profeſſe the Goſpel, whoſe hands are tyed in their purſes, and their hearts locked to their cheſts, who are ſo extreamely miſerable, that they neither doe good to others, nor yet to themſelues. Secondly, it condemneth them which are ſo vnnaturall, that they forget all their dutie to their kindred and acquaintance in the fleſh. Thirdly, thoſe who will doe good to none, but to thoſe that haue done good to them: this is right the Phariſies righteouſneſſe, to loue our friends, and hate our enemies; the goodneſſe of the Publican, to lend to thoſe of whome they looke for the like. Laſtly, thoſe who are ſo full of the poyſon of malice and reuenge, that beeing once incenſed, they can neuer bee appeaſed, till they cry quittance with thoſe that offend them.

The third thing to bee conſidered in the words, is the circumſtance of time; we muſt doe good to all, while we haue time.

Here ſundry points are to be obſerued.

I. If we muſt do good while we haue time, wee muſt make a holy and profitable vſe of our time, (the rareſt iewell, and greateſt of all earthly treaſures) becauſe time will not alway laſt: and therefore we muſt take time while it is time, ſeeing time and tide will tarrie for no man. Let vs conſider what a ſhame it is, that the children of this world ſhould bee wiſer in their generation then we, who profeſſe our ſelues to be children of light. The marriner or ſea-faring man who obſerues winde and weather, taketh the opportunitie of the time: the traueller or way-faring man takes day before him, and trauelleth while it is light. The Smith ſtriketh the yron while it is hot, for when it is cold, it is too late to ſtrike. The Lawyer taketh his time, to wit, the Tearme time, for the intertaining of his Clients, and following of his ſuits: for when the tearme is ended, his time is gone. Now it is alway Tearme-time with Chriſtians, euery preſent day, euen this preſent time, is their Tearme-time: therefore if we will not ſhew our ſelues more careleſſe and negligent, nay, more abſurdly fooliſh, or deſperately madde then all men, we muſt take the opportunitie that is offered to do good, and vſe the precious time which God in mercie affordeth vs, to his glorie, our comfort, & the good of others. Time and opportunitie of doing good, is hieroglyphically reſembled by the head of a man that hath lockes of haire before, which a man may take hold of, but hath none behind: whereby is ſignified, that when opportunitie is paſt, there is no poſſibilitie left to do good. A We muſt not therefore let ſlippe any good occaſion, but take hold of it at the firſt, when it is offered. Hence it is that the Apoſtle, Heb. 3.13. biddeth vs exhort one another daily, while it is called to day. And the wiſe-man, Pro. 3.28. Say not to thy neighbour, goe, and come againe, and to morrow will I giue thee, if thou now haue it. For he may die, and ſo cannot come againe, or by thy delaying of him, may be diſcouraged from comming, or thou maiſt be hardened againſt him, or maiſt with the rich man in the Goſpel, be ſuddenly taken away from thy riches, or thy riches taken from thee. Our Sauiour biddeth vs walke in the light, while we haue light, Ioh. 12.35.

Fronte capillata eſt poſt eſt Occaſio calva.

II. If we muſt doe good while we haue B time, we muſt obſerue the Apoſtles golden rule, Eph. 5.16. Redeeme the time: which is nothing elſe, but ſo to employ it, and vſe the benefit of it, as that we ſuffer it not to ſlippe away from vs without fruite or profit, either for ſloth and idleneſſe, or by reaſon of vaine and tranſitorie pleaſures, or other occaſions of this life: but to gaine that time we formerly loſt by negligence, with double diligence, yea to redeeme it with the loſſe of our eaſe, our pleaſures, our profits. And we ſhall the better practiſe this dutie, if we conſider that time is ſhort, precious, irreuocable: it is ſhort, and therefore to be guided by diligence: it is precious, and therefore to be redeemed by an high eſtimate and account of it, in not beeing too C lauiſh of it: in beſtowing it vpon our friends, not vpon our enemies: in placing it as a iewell in our golden age, and wearing it in our new garments, the robes of Chriſt his righteouſneſſe, and not (as a pearle in a ſwines ſnowt) in the rotten rags of ſinne and wickedneſſe. Laſtly, it is irreuocable, and therefore it is to bee redeemed by taking the opportunitie thereof.

III. Paul commanding vs to doe good while wee haue time, would haue vs know times and ſeaſons; to obſerue the ſhortneſſe of time, to number our daies that we may apply our hearts to wiſdome. The not knowing D and obſeruing of time, is a ſin much inueighed againſt by our Sauiour Chriſt, Mat. 16.3. O hypocrites, you can diſcerne the face of the skie, and can ye not (a) diſcerne the ſignes of the times? Luk. 12.56. why (b) diſcerne ye not this time? The Lord doth prefer the very bruit beaſts before his people, becauſe they know their appointed times and ſeaſons, whereas his people knew not the time of mercie & grace, which was offered vnto them. Euen the ſtorke in the ayre knoweth her appointed times, the turtle, and the crane, and the ſwallow, obſerue the time of their comming, but my people knoweth not the iudgement of the Lord. Ierem. 8.7. And Chriſt threatneth Ieruſalem, that one ſtone ſhould not be left vpon another, Becauſe they knew not the time of their viſitation. Luk. 19.44. And verily of all follies and ignorances, this is the greateſt, not to know the day of our viſitation, a διακρίνειν.

b δοκιμάζετε

tion, the acceptable time, the day of ſaluation when God offereth mercie, by riſing early and calling vs by the miniſterie of his word, and ſtretching out his hands all the day long. Rom. 10. v. 21. For if he ſtand at the doore of our hearts, and knocke by the ſound of his word outwardly, by the motion of his Spirit inwardly, by his threatnings, by his promiſes, by his iudgements, by his mercies, by his tolerance and long ſuffering, and yet for all that we will not open nor liſten vnto him, we ſhall ſtand with the fiue fooliſh virgins, and knocke at his mercy gate, and ſay, Lord, Lord, open vnto vs, when it will be too late, when heauen ſhall be ſhut againſt vs. Matth. 25. 11, 12. For, for this cauſe among others, they are called fooliſh virgins, becauſe they conſidered not the time of the bridegroomes comming.

Here it will bee ſaid, obſeruing of time is forbidden, Gal. 4. 10. Ye obſerue daies & times, and moneths and yeares, I am afraid of you, leſt I haue ſpent on you labour in vaine. Anſw. There is a twofold obſeruing of time, good, and euill; lawfull, and vnlawfull. Vnlawfull and ſuperſtitious, is either Iewiſh, or Heatheniſh: the Iewiſh, and ſuperſtitious obſeruation of times, is, when religion is placed in the keeping of them, in an opinion that they binde the conſcience to the ſtrict obſeruing of them, as their Iubilies, feaſts of the Paſſeouer, of Weekes, of Tabernacles, Calends, newe Moones, &c. Heatheniſh, when times are obſerued in reſpect of good, or badde ſucceſſe: as when men make two (c) vnluckie daies in euery moneth, in regard of health: when they count leape-yeare ominous, as Valentinian did, who beeing newly created Emperour, would not come forth and ſhew himſelfe the biſſext of Februarie. Not (d) to marrie in the moneth of May. To obſerue Planetary houres, and Climactericall yeares, the Horoſcope or time of a mans birth, and the poſition of the heauens at that time. Both theſe kinds are forbidden. Paul was afraid of the Galatians, firſt, becauſe they obſerued daies and moneths, and yeares, that is, Iewiſh ceremonies, and beggerly rudiments. Secondly, becauſe they obſerued times, and ſeaſons, that is, heatheniſh ſuperſtitions mentioned before. And aſſuredly, beſides the vnlawfulneſſe of this practiſe, it is alſo vaine euen in the iudgement of the heathen themſelues. Alexander the great commanded the Macedonian ſouldiers (which had not beene accuſtomed to fight in Iune, becauſe it had beene ominous vnto them) that they ſhould call it Iuly, and ſo got the victorie ouer Darius. Lucullus being to fight with Tygranes vpon an vnlucky day, in which Cepio was ouercome of the Cimbrians: I will (ſaid he) make it fortunate to the Romanes, and got the victorie. And who knoweth not that the ſelfe ſame day hath bin fortunate or luckie to ſome (as they vſe to ſpeake,) vnfortunate and vnluckie to others? The ſame day was Craſſus ſlaine by the Parthians, and Pacher king of Parthia taken by Ventidius. The ſame day was vnto Pompey, the day of his birth, and the day of his death. The ſame day was to Fredericke the ſecond, his coronation day, and his funerall day.

c Egyptian daies.

d Menſe malum Maio nubere vulgus ait.

Ἀπαισίας.

μίαν τῶν ἀποφράδων.

The lawfull obſeruing of time is two-fold. Humane, Diuine. Humane is three-fold, Naturall, Ciuill, Eccleſiaſticall. Naturall is, the obſeruing of the motion of the Sun, the Moone, and the ſtarres, whoſe reuolutions make times and ſeaſons, daies, moneths, yeares: the obſeruing of the foure quarters or ſeaſons of the yeare, ſpring, ſummer, autumne, winter. The Ecclipſes of Sunne and Moone: the full Moone, the wane, the change. The time of cutting of timber, of planting, ſowing, &c. in obſeruing whereof, a great part of Aſtronomie, Philoſophie, and husbandrie is imployed.

Ciuill is, when times are obſerued in regard of pollicie, or of the good of the common wealth, as faire-times, market times, tearme-times, &c. the ſpring, as fit time for Kings to goe forth to warre, 2. Sam. 4. 11. The keeping of Lent, faſting daies, Ember weekes, are all in a ciuill reſpect, for the breed of cattell, the maintenance of nauigation, and the plenty of all things.

Eccleſiaſticall, when ſet times are obſerued in the Church for order ſake, without ſuperſtition, or opinion of worſhip: as among the Iewes the feaſt of Purim, Eſth. 9. 26. the feaſt of the Dedication. Ioh. 10. verſ. 22. Amongſt Chriſtians, feſtiuall daies: as the feaſt of the Natiuitie, of circumciſion, of the reſurrection, and aſcenſion of Chriſt: theſe and ſuch like ſolemnities, appointed for our thankſgiuing and humiliation, are not vnlawfull, if they be enioyned by lawfull authoritie, and kept in good manner.

Diuine is, when vpon the conſideration of the ſhortneſſe and vncertaintie of our liues, we prepare our ſelues againſt God ſhall call vs, and ſo number our daies that wee apply our hearts to wiſedome. Pſal. 90. Or, obſeruing the day of Gods mercifull viſitation, we take the opportunitie and vſe the meanes that is offered, for our conuerſion and ſaluation. Or, obſeruing the time of Gods viſitation in iudgement, and indignation, we hide our ſelues vnder the couert of his wings. Prou. 22. 3.

IV. Hence we learne, that there is no poſſibility of doing good, or beeing beneficiall vnto others after this life, for Paul biddeth vs doe good while we haue time, thereby inſinuating, that after death, all poſſibilitie of doing good is cleane cut off. The time allotted to doe good, being included within the limits of this life, The dead that die in the Lord reſt from their labours, Reu. 14. 13. Therefore no good workes are performed after this life. Paul being aged and readie to die, the tearme of his life beeing almoſt expired, ſaith, I haue finiſhed my courſe, 2. Tim. 4. 7. which could not bee truly ſaid, if he were to performe any good ἐν τῇ ζωῇ ταύτῃ ὁ καιρὸς ἐστὶ τῆς ἐργασίας: ἐκεῖ δὲ οὐκ ἔτι. Oecumen.

workes

A workes after his death. 2. Cor.3.10. VVe muſt giue account for all things we haue done in the bodie, that is, in this life. Where it is to be obſerued, that the Apoſtle ſpeaking of al the works whereof we are to giue account, doth confine them within the compaſſe of this life; therefore no workes can be done after this life bee ended. Let vs heare the teſtimony of the auncient. Cyprian to Demetr. Quando iſtinc exceſſum eſt, nullus locus pœnitentiæ eſt, nullus ſatisfactionis effectus. Ierome. Dum in præſenti ſæculo ſumus, ſiue orationibus, ſiue, conſiliis inuicem poſſe nos coadiuuari; cum autem ante Chriſti tribunal venerimus, non Iob, non Daniel, nec Noe rogare poſſe pro quoquam, ſed vnumquemq; portare onus ſuum. And againe, In hac vita, licet nobis B quod volumus ſeminare: quum tranſierit, operandi tempus aufertur, &c. Hence I gather two things. Firſt, that the doctrine of Purgatorie is a meere fable, becauſe there is no time after this life is ended, left to doe good, either to our ſelues or others, and therefore not to worke righteouſneſſe, to repent, or to ſatisfie the iuſtice of God, which the Popiſh ſort ſay is done in Purgatorie. But what ſhould I ſtand to batter the paper walles of Purgatorie, with the Canon of the Scripture, which were long agoe burnt to aſhes, by the fire of the word?

Secondly, ſeeing all opportunitie, nay all poſſibilitie of doing good is confined in the compaſſe of this life, euery man muſt follow C the counſell of the wiſe-man Salomon. All that thy hand ſhall finde to doe, doe it with all thy power; for there is neither worke, nor inuention, nor knowledge, nor wiſedome, in the graue whither thou goeſt. Eccleſ.9.10. Dauid ſaith, in the graue no man will or can praiſe God. And this is the cauſe wherefore Paul doth ſo inſtantly vrge al men to take the preſent opportunitie, Behold, now is the acceptable time: behold, now is the day of ſaluation, 2. Cor.6.2.

V. Hence we are taught to account euery day, euen this preſent day, as the day of death, or the day of iudgement: for we muſt doe all the good we can while we haue time; now our time is the inſtant, or preſent time, for we are vncertaine whether we ſhall liue till to mor- D row or no, Iam.4.14. Therefore looke what we would doe at the houre of death, if we were now at the laſt gaſpe panting for breath, or if we did ſee Chriſt comming in the cloudes to iudgement; the very ſame thing we ought to doe euery day, with like zeale and feruencie of ſpirit, to praiſe and magnifie the mercy and goodneſſe of God; with like feare and trembling, to worke out our owne ſaluation, and to ſeeke reconciliation; with like loue and ſinceritie of affection, to bee beneficiall vnto our brethren, &c.

VI. This doctrine meeteth with all miſerable minded men, who hauing great meanes and opportunitie of doing good, yet let ſlippe, or rather cut off all occaſions that might induce them thereto, who in a brutiſh A minde like to the ſwine, neuer doe good, nor profit any, till their dying day. I ſpeake not againſt the laudable cuſtome of bequeathing goods to godly vſes, by a mans laſt will and teſtament, but againſt thoſe that do little or no good all their life long, till the houre of death. Let theſe men conſider, that as late repentance of malefactours, a little before their death, is commonly but a ceremoniall repentance: ſo the funerall beneficence of thoſe who giue little or nothing in al their life, is vſually no free, but a formall, and extorted gift: formall, in doing as others doe: extorted, in that it is giuen to ſtoppe the mouth of an accuſing conſcience. The vital beneficence is that which God accounteth of, and by ſo much to B be preferred before the other, by how much it doth more euidently declare a more liuely faith in the prouidence of God, and a more vnfained loue of our brethren. Againe, they giue teſtimonie, that they truſt not in vncertaine riches, but in the liuing God. Laſtly, they haue the benefit of poore mens praiers, (to whome they are beneficiall,) which otherwiſe they ſhould want.

Who be men of good wils but badde deedes.

VII. The circumſtance of time hath here the force of an argument, for it inforceth the exhortation much, that we ſhould doe all the good we can, and take the benefite of the opportunitie, becauſe time will not alway laſt: the holy Ghoſt in ſundry places of Scripture, from the conſideration of the ſhortneſſe of C our time, enforceth the duties of faith, repentance, new obedience, as 1. Cor. 7. v. 29, 30, 31. And this I ſay brethren, becauſe the time is ſhort, here after that both they that haue wiues, be as though they had none: and they that weepe as though they wept not: and they that reioyce, as though they reioyced not. Heb.3.7,8. To day if ye will heare his voyce, harden not your hearts. and v.13. Exhort one another daily, while it is called to day. The godly in all ages haue practiſed this dutie. Peter knowing that the time was at hand, that he was to lay downe his tabernacle, ſtirres vp himſelfe to greater diligence in his calling, and ſaith, I will not be negligent to put you in remembrance of theſe things, ſo long as I am in this tabernacle; ſeeing I know the time is D at hand that I muſt lay it downe as our Lord Ieſus Chriſt hath ſhewed me, 2. Pet.1.12,13,14. The Church praieth thus to God, Teach vs to number our daies, that is, ſo to conſider the ſhortneſſe, vncertentie, and vanity of our life, That we may apply our hearts to wiſedome, Pſal.90.12. But wicked mens practiſe is cleane contrary, for they take occaſion vpon the ſhortneſſe of their time, to liue as they liſt, to take their pleaſures, and to follow the luſts of their hearts: therefore they ſay, Let vs eate and drinke, for to morrow we ſhall die. Eſa.22.13. Our life is ſhort and tedious, and our time is as a ſhaddow that paſſeth away---Come therefore and let vs enioy the pleaſures that are preſent. Wiſd.2.1.5,6. And hence it is that ſome ſpend their time in eating & drinking, and going gorgeouſly, and faring deliciouſly euery day; other in gaming, carding, dicing, rioting, reuelling, and (as the tearme is) in ſwaggering, wherein they follow their father the diuell, who is therefore more full of wrath, Knowing that he hath but a ſhort time. Apoc. 12. 12. To theſe we may adde all ſuch idle perſons, as follow no vocation, or trade of life, but day after day, and yeare after yeare, are ſtill deuiſing new paſtimes (as they call them) to trifle the time away. Theſe men haſten the iudgements of God, and pull it vpon them before God inflict it. It is a great iudgement of God for a man to be in that caſe that in the morning hee ſhall ſay, would God it were euening, and in the euening, would God it were morning, Deut. 28. 67. In this caſe is euery idle loiterer, who through idleneſſe is wearie of himſelfe, and grieued the time paſſeth away ſo ſlowly: and to theſe, qui nihil agunt, we may ioyne them qui male agunt, and thoſe alſo qui aliud agunt, all which are condemned in this text: and againſt them Titus the heathen Emperour ſhall riſe in iudgement, and ſhall condemne them, becauſe hee remembring on a time as he ſate at ſupper that he had trifled away the day in doing nothing, ſaid, Amici, hodie diem perdidi: Friends, I haue loſt this day.

11. Ye ſee how large a letter I haue written vnto you with mine owne hand.

Here beginneth the Concluſion, beeing the third generall part of this Epiſtle, conſiſting of two parts: an Inſinuation, in the 11. ver. and a Recapitulation, in the verſes following. He inſinuateth himſelfe into the mindes of the Galatians by a twofold argument. Firſt, from the largneſſe of his Epiſtle. Ye ſee how large a letter I haue written: ſecondly, from the inſtrumentall cauſe, in that he writ it with his owne hand, where he giues authoritie to it, and a kind of eminencie aboue his other letters. And in both, he commendeth his diligence, loue, and care which he had of them.

ἴδετε. The word tranſlated, ye ſee, is ambiguous, and may bee taken either as a commaundement, See how large a letter I haue written: or as an aſſertion, Ye ſee ---. The like ambiguitie is in the word φαίνεσθε, Phil. 2. 5. and may be read either thus, amongſt whome you doe ſhine: or, ſee that you ſhine as ſtarres. It is not materiall in whether acception it bee taken, ſeeing the ſenſe is all one.

The firſt argument to mooue the Galatians to attention, and acceptation of Pauls paines, and good affection, is taken from the largeneſſe of his Epiſtle. The word in the Originall tranſlated large, πηλίκοις. is ſtrangely wreſted by ſundrie interpreters, without cauſe: [a] Hilarie referring it to the loftineſſe of ſentences: Hyperius to the profunditie & depth of matter; Ierome to the greatneſſe of the character: Chryſoſtome and Theophylact, to the badneſſe of his hand, as not beeing able to write well: Haimo to the Hebrew character in which he wrote: whereas the word doeth not onely ſignifie quality, but as properly quantitie, as Heb. 7. 4. Conſider how great this man was. πηλίκος οὗτος, ἡλίκος. And the word that anſwereth vnto it, ſignifieth as well quantitie, as qualitie. Coloſſ. 2. 1. I would ye knew what great fight I haue ---. ἡλίκον ἀγῶνα. Iam. 3. 5. Behold, how great a thing a little fire kindleth? ἡλίκην ὕλην. The plaine and ſimple meaning therefore of Paul, is this, that he neuer wrote ſo long an Epiſtle with his owne hand, vnto any Church, as vnto them. He writ indeed the Epiſtle to Philemon with his owne hand, but that was ſhort in compariſon of this. And he wrote larger Epiſtles to other Churches, as to the Romanes, Corinthians, &c. but by his Scribes, not with his owne hand. Therefore ſeeing this is the longeſt, and largeſt letter that euer Paul writ with his owne hand, it ought to bee more regarded, and better accepted: So that as his paines were greater in writing, our diligence ſhould be greater in reading, and obſeruing the ſame.

This ſhewes Pauls great care of the Churches, not onely when hee was preſent, but when he was abſent. How paineful he was being among them to winne them to the Goſpell, how fearefull when he was abſent from them, leſt their minds ſhould be leauened by falſe teachers: how faithfull both preſent and abſent.

And it may ſerue as a preſident to all Paſtors hauing cure of ſoules, to vſe the like diligence, and conſcience, in their Miniſterie; that beeing abſent in body from their charge vpon neceſſarie occaſions (as Paul was) yet they would be preſent in ſpirit with them: and preſent by their letters: that ſo they may teſtifie to all the world, that they haue a greater care of the flocke then of the fleece.

It further teacheth vs, that if the Miniſter beeing carried with diſcreete zeale for the good of the Church, goe further either in word, or writing, then hee intended, or is thought fit by ſome: (as it ſeemes Paul did in this place, for what needs this large letter (may ſome ſay,) a ſhorter would haue done as well) that we are not to cenſure him, or limite and preſcribe him. It had bene a great fault in the Galatians, if they had found fault with Paul for this his large letter; and in the diſciples & Iewes if they ſhould haue blamed his long Sermon, which continued at one time, from morning, to night. Act. 28. 23. at another time, from the cloſing of the euening, til midnight. Act. 20. 7. And ſo it is in many hearers, who are too curious and ſtrict in preſcribing and limiting their teachers to the time, longer then which they cannot patiently indure. And in ſtinting them, in vrging of this or that point, in ſaying he miſſed his Rhetoricke, his Epimone was too long, hee was ouerſeene in dwelling ſo long vpon the point: it had beene better, a word and away, &c.

His ſecond argument is taken from the inſtrumentall cauſe, that he wrote it with his owne hand. (a) Haimo ſaith it is the opinion of the Doctours, that Paul wrote not this whole Epiſtle with his owne hand, but onely from hence to the ende: which opinion is confuted by the very text, You ſee how large a letter I HAVE written with mine owne hand: ſpeaking of the whole Epiſtle, in the time paſt: or if of any one part more then of another, of the former part rather then of the latter. Secondly, his aſſertion is not true, for (if we except Ierome) none of the Ancients (as I take it) are of that opinion. Not (b) Ambroſe, who ſaith, Where the whole writing is his owne hand, there can bee no falſhood. Not (c) Chryſoſtome, who ſaith, To the reſt of his Epiſtles he did ſubſcribe, but this whole Epiſtle hee writ himſelfe. Not Primaſius, vſing the word perſcripſit, that he writ it through with his owne hand. Not (d) Theodoret, affirming that it ſeems Paul writ the whole Epiſtle. Not (e) Theophylact, who brings in Paul ſpeaking to them in this manner; I am enforced to write this Epiſtle vnto you with mine owne hand. Not Oecumenius, who calleth it ἰδιόχειρον ἐπιστολήν, an Epiſtle written with his owne hand. Not (f) Anſelme, who paraphraſing the text, ſaith, it is all one as if hee had ſaid; This Epiſtle I writte with mine owne hand. And a little before, Not with the Scribes hand, but with mine owne hand: (albeit Anſelme cannot ſo preiudice his aſſertion, who liued long after him.) Not the Authour of the Commentarie vpon the Epiſtles aſcribed to Ierome, Tom. 8. for hee vpon the 2. Theſſalonians 3. v. 17. ſaith plainely, (g) With theſe words he ſubſcribes all his Epiſtles, excepting that to the Galatians, which hee writte from the beginning to the ende with his owne hand. And vpon theſe words which wee now intreate of (h) See how I am not afraid, which of late time haue written with mine owne hand. (VVhere by the way, we may obſerue, that Ierome is not the author of thoſe Commentaries, being ſo contrary to himſelfe.) This I confeſſe is a light matter, & not to bee ſtood vpon, were it not that ſome are too haſty to ſwallow whatſoeuer comes in their way, vnder the title of the Doctours. It muſt therefore be a caueat vnto vs, not to be too credulous in beleeuing euery one that ſhall auouch this or that to bee the opinion of the Fathers, no though it bee affirmed by a Father, eſpecially by ſuch a one as draweth neere the dregs, as Haimo doth.

---

[a] in Pſal. 118

(a) In hac Epiſtola ſicut tradunt Doctores, ab hoc loco vſq; ad finē, propria manu ſcripſit.

It is certen then, that Paul writ this whole Epiſtle with his owne hand: the reaſons are theſe: Firſt, that it might appeare vnder his hand, that he was no changling, but the ſame man that hee was before, in that he did not preach circumciſion, or the obſeruation of Iewiſh ceremonies, as the falſe apoſtles ſlandered him, Gal. 5. 11. Secondly, that this his letter was not counterfeited by another, and ſent in his name, as the falſe apoſtles might haue obiected, and the Galatians ſuſpected. Thirdly, that he might teſtifie his ſincere loue towards them, and how he did (as it were) trauaile in paine of them, till Chriſt were formed in them, ſhunning no labour that might further their ſaluation.

Wee may hence further obſerue a threefold difference of the bookes of Scripture in the new Teſtament. Some were neither written by an Apoſtle, nor ſubſcribed: as the Goſpell of Marke and Luke. Some ſubſcribed, but not written: as the Epiſtle to the Romans, and others. Some both written, and ſubſcribed: as this Epiſtle, and that to Philemon, verſe 19. I haue written it with mine owne hand: I will recompence it——. Now that Paul ſubſcribed euery Epiſtle with his owne hand, he himſelfe witneſſeth, 2. Theſſ. 3. 17. The ſalutation of me Paul with mine owne hand, which is a ſigne in euery Epiſtle (that it is mine, and not forged in my name by another) ſo I write, the grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt be with you all. In which place he warneth the Theſſalonians againſt falſe teachers, and forged letters: for 2. Theſ. 2. 2. he had beſought them they would not be troubled by ſpirit, nor by word, nor by letter, as though it came from him.—— And here hee ſhewes how they may know whether the Epiſtle bee his or not: if it haue this ſigne, it is mine, elſe it is counterfeit: for this note or marke is to be found in all and euery one of my Epiſtles. Now theſe words [which is a ſigne in euery Epiſtle] cannot be meant (as ſome are of opinion) of the former words onely, viz. The ſalutation of me Paul with mine owne hand. Firſt, becauſe he ſaith it is a ſigne in euery Epiſtle, whereas it is onely to be found, 1. Cor. 16. 21. Galat. 6. 11. Coloſſ. 4. 18. 2. Theſſal. 3. 17. Philemon, verſ. 19. and not in any other of his Epiſtles. Secondly, the words, ſo I write, ſhould be falſe, if they be referred only to the former words, becauſe that manner of ſalutation, is not to be found in euery Epiſtle, (as I haue already ſhewed.) And except they bee referred to the words following, The grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, &c. they haue either none, or a very hard conſtruction. Thirdly, if Pauls ſalutation (which he affirmeth to bee a certaine note of his Epiſtle) be vnderſtood of theſe words, The grace of our Lord I. Chriſt, &c. it agrees vnto all (as Anſelme confeſſeth) whereas beeing meant of the former words only, it doth not agree to all, but to a few: and yet Paul makes it a generall, infallible note, and ſigne of euery Epiſtle. Beſide Ambroſe, & Primaſius, in their Commentaries vpon the place, as alſo the Author of the Commentary which goeth vnder Ieromes name, affirme, the ſigne whereby wee may know Pauls Epiſtles from counterfeit and forged Epiſtles, to cõſiſt in theſe words: The grace of our Lord, &c. Chryſoſtom, & Theodoret likewiſe ſay, that Paul cals the ſalutation, a benediction, or bleſſing, which is in the end of the Epiſtle: and a litle after, Hence we learne, that hee was accuſtomed to write theſe words, The grace of our Lord, &c. in ſtead of adiew or farewell vnto them. And Haimo (long after) expounds theſe words, ſo I write, how? (ſaith he) euen thus as it followes, The grace of our

[b] Vbi holographa manus, falſum dici non poteſt.

[c] In cæteris ſubſcribebat quidẽ, hic verò totam ipſe ſcripſit.

[d] Totam (vt videtur) hanc ſcripſit Epiſtolã.

[e] Etſi ſum minime apprimè ſcribendi peritus: compulſus ſum tamen vel meâ manu hanc ad vos Epiſt. ſcribere.

[f] Epiſtolam iſtam ſcripſi ego propriâ manu. Non notarii manu, ſed meâ.

[g] His verbis omnes Epiſtolas ſubſcribebat: excepta Galatarum, quam ex integro manu propriâ perſcripſit.——

[h] Intelligite quàm non timeam, qui literas manu mea nuper ſcripſi.

Col. 4. 18.

1. Tim. 6. 21
Tit. 3. 15.

Salutationem appellauit benedictionem, quæ in fine ſita eſt. Hinc ergo diſcimus, quòd hoc, Gratia Domini, &c. pro eo quæ eſt vale ſcribere conſueuerat.

Lord, &c. I graunt it is probable that Paul writ his owne name in the ende of euery Epiſtle (whether in the Greeke tongue, and in the Hebrew characters (as Hunnius affirmeth) I leaue it as vncertaine, and that by the ſalutation or ſigne of his Epiſtle, this name written with his owne hand, is in part to bee vnderſtood: yet it is not onely nor principally meant. The certen ſigne therefore of his Epiſtles, is beſide the ſubſcription of his owne name, the farewell that he giues them in theſe words, The grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt bee with you all, or the like to the ſame effect. I ſay to the ſame effect, becauſe theſe very formall words, are not to bee found in euery of Pauls Epiſtles. Therefore Caietan is farre wide, who takes the entire and formall ſalutation, as it is literally ſet downe, 2. Theſſal. 3. 17. to bee a note that the Epiſtle is his, ſo that if it want any one word, either the Epiſtle is not Pauls, or there is ſome defect in the text: for hereupon hee concludes that the Epiſtle to the Coloſſians onely, hath ſomething wanting in the farewell or ſalutation, becauſe it is ſaid, Col. 4. 18. Grace be with you: and not the grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt be with you, as it is in all his other Epiſtles. But firſt, it is an vntruth, for they are not only wanting in the Epiſtle to the Coloſſians, but alſo in the 1. to Timothy, 1. Tim. 6. 21 Tit. 3. 15. and in that to Titus, where it is onely ſaid, Grace bee with thee. Grace be with you all. Secondly, it is a flat miſtaking of the text, for Pauls meaning was not in euery Epiſtle to tie himſelfe preciſely to ſo many words and ſillables: but to commend them to the grace of Chriſt: ſometime making expreſſe mention of Chriſt, ſometime concealing his name: yet ſo as that it is alway vnderſtood, though not expreſſed.

12 As many as make a faire ſhew in the fleſh, compell you to bee circumciſed, onely becauſe they would not ſuffer perſecution for the croſſe of Chriſt.

From hence to the ende, is laid downe the ſecond part of the concluſion, which I call a Recapitulation, wherein the Apoſtle doth very artificially (as Orators are accuſtomed) repeat thoſe things which he would haue ſpecially to be remembred, the maine points handled in the Epiſtle. Firſt, that neither circumciſion is neceſſary to iuſtification, nor the ceremoniall law to ſaluation. Secondly, that the falſe apoſtles vrging the obſeruation of the law as a thing neceſſary to ſaluation, ſought not herein Gods glory, or the edification of their hearers, but their owne eaſe, and freedome from the croſſe, and perſecution. Thirdly, that Chriſt crucified is the onely thing that iuſtifies a ſinner without the works of the Law. Fourthly, that true religion ſtandeth not in outward things, but in the renouation of the inward man.

In this verſe and the next following, Paul deſcribes the falſe apoſtles by fiue properties: three whereof are laid down in this verſe. The firſt is, that they make a faire ſhew. The ſe- A cond, that they compell them to the obſeruing of their deuiſed religion. The third, the ende and ſcope they aime at, that they may alway bee in the ſunne-ſhine, liuing at eaſe, and hauing the world at will: onely becauſe they would not ſuffer perſecution for the croſſe of Chriſt.

Firſt, the Apoſtle ſaith, that they make a faire ſhew in the fleſh: which is taken diuerſly, for it ſignifies ſundry things. Firſt, to make an outward glorious ſhew according to the fleſh, as that they were true Iſraelites, of the ſeede of Abraham, &c. Of which boaſting Paul ſpeaks, 2. Cor. 11. 18. Seeing that many glory after the fleſh, I will glory alſo. They are Iſraelites, ſo am I: they are the ſeede of Abraham, ſo am I. Secondly, to pleaſe the Iſraelites, which are after the B fleſh, and to approue themſelues vnto them, which held the keeping of the ceremoniall law. Thirdly, to vaunt themſelues to the Iewes and them of the circumciſion, of the Galatians, whome they had circumciſed in the fleſh, as beeing made proſelytes, & wonne to their profeſſion by their meanes. Laſtly, to pretend great zeale and religion in outward obſeruing of the law, ſtanding in carnall rites, and bodily exerciſes, as circumciſion, meates, purification, and the like: which carnall rites the Apoſtle oppoſeth to ſpirituall worſhip. Rom. 12. 1. and to the new creature, v. 16. of this chap. and bodily exerciſe (which profiteth little) to true piety, and the ſincere practiſe thereof, which is profitable for all C things, 1. Tim. 4. 8. The words may be taken in all theſe acceptions, though principally in the laſt.

Here wee haue a notable property of falſe teachers, which is, to ſet a faire face vpon the matter, to carry all before them with a ſmooth countenance, and in outward appearance to excell. For as Satan, though a black diuell, and angell of darkneſſe, doth change himſelfe into a white diuell, as though hee were an angell of light, ſo that a man can hardly diſtinguiſh his wicked ſuggeſtions, from the good motions of Gods Spirit, and therefore may ſay, as Ioſhua ſaid to the Angell, Art thou on our ſide, or on our aduerſaries? Ioſhua 5. 13. So his inſtruments transforme D themſelues, as though they were the Apoſtles of Chriſt, and miniſters of righteouſneſſe, 2. Corin. 11. 13, 15.

In the old Teſtament, falſe prophets were accuſtomed outwardly to conforme themſelues to the habite & attire of the holy men of God, in wearing of a rough garment, as Elias & the reſt of the Prophets did, Zach. 13. 4. Vnder the new Teſtament, in the time of Chriſt, the Phariſies in hypocriſie, vnder a ſhew of long prayer, deuoured widowes houſes, Mat. 23. 14. In the Apoſtles time, falſe teachers with their wil-worſhip, as touch not, taſte not, handle not, (which had a ſhew of wiſedome in voluntary religion, & humbleneſſe of mind, and not ſparing of the body) did vndermine the religion of God, Col. 2. 21, 22, 23.

A And after that, in the primitiue Church, the heretickes called Catharists, vnder a ſhew of holineſſe, faſting, prayer, &c. did ſowe moſt damnable hereſies in the Church.

And as in former times, the Iewes vnder the glorious titles of the children of Abraham, the ſchollers of Moſes, the temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord, made many proſelytes by deceiuing the ſoules of the ſimple: So, at this day, vnder the glorious titles of the Church, of Councels, Fathers, antiquity, conſent, vniuerſality; the pretended Romane Catholikes, haue enſnared many a ſimple ſoule: and no maruell, conſidering that theſe are the times of which Chriſt fore-tolde, that falſe prophets ſhould deceiue (if it were poſſible) B the very Elect, Math. 24.24. And of which S. Paul prophecied, that Antichriſt ſhould come through the efficacie of Sathan, with all power, and ſignes, and lying wonders, and in all deceiueableneſſe of vnrighteouſneſſe, among them that periſh, 2. Theſſalonians 2 9,10. And all this is done by outward ſhewes and ſemblances, which our Sauiour Chriſt tearmeth ſheepes cloathing, Mat. 7.15. and it ſtandeth in theſe foure particulars: Firſt, in great ſwelling titles, as the onely true Catholike Church, the Vicar of Chriſt, the Oecumenicall Biſhop: moſt profound, illuminate, Angelicall, Seraphicall Doctours: Ieſuits, the only true followers of the doctrine and example of Ieſus, &c. Secondly, in pretending zeale and C deuotion, wherby they would perſwade, that their religion is the onely true religion: all others, which ſwarue from it, are nothing but falſe, and fabulous: and this they doe three waies. First, θεολογία: by hauing God alwaies in their mouthes, crying in hypocriſie with the falſe prophets, Lord, Lord, Matthew 7.22. Or as the Ieſuiticall faction doe, Ieſu, Maria. Secondly, πιθανολογία, with inticing words, conſiſting in probable reaſons, and perſuaſiue arguments, Coloſſians 2.4. Thirdly, χρηστολογία, with faire and flattering words, to deceiue the hearts of the ſimple, Romanes 16.18. By which three means, the Ieſuites haue preuai- D led much in Princes courts, in theſe latter daies, Apoc. 16.14. Thirdly, in the glorious outſide of holineſſe of life and conuerſation, in not ſparing the body, by whipping of thẽſelues, as Baals prieſts lanced themſelues till the blood guſhed, 1. Kin. 18.28. in ſtrict faſts, canonicall houres, hard fare, bad lodging, courſe apparell, and ſuch like. Laſtly, in rare and excellent gifts of prophecy, tongues, eloquence, miracles, &c. And thus they make Pauls ſhew of godlines, 2. Tim. 3.5. to be Peters cloake of wickedneſſe. 1. Pet. 2.16. ſo that as the diuell with faire words put Eue into a fooles paradiſe, till at length he had driuen her out of the terreſtriall Paradiſe, and made her alſo hazard the celeſtiall. So, his miniſters falſe teachers, by faire and flattering ſpeeches, deceiue the mindes of the ſimple, & cauſe them to fall from their owne ſtability.

μόρφωσιν εὐσεβείας.
ἐπικάλυμμα κακίας.

A By this wee may ſee how hypocrites and falſe teachers, ſtand eſpecially vpon outward things, as externall rites and ceremonies, which are but deuices and doctrines of men, Mat. 15.9. The Phariſies made much adoe about waſhing the outſide of the cuppe, and of the platter, when as the inſide was full of rapine and all vncleaneneſſe, Mat. 23.25. very curious about waſhing of their hands before meat, Mat. 7.3. and yet careleſſe to waſh their hearts from wickedneſſe, Ier. 4.14. preciſe in ſmall matters, as in tything of mint, anniſe, & cummine; but profane in the practiſe of the waightier things of the law, as judgement, mercy, & fidelity. Mat. 23.23. whited tombes B faire without, and filthy within, v. 27. Thus the Popiſh worſhip conſiſteth eſpecially in outward things, which may pleaſe the ſenſes of carnall men, as in vocall, and inſtrumentall Muſicke, to pleaſe the eare: cenſings and perfumes, to delight the ſmell: guilding and painting, with other ſights and ſpectacles, to affect the eye. And at this day, in the Maſſe (which they account the very marrow of their Mattins) there is nothing but dumbe ſhewes, hiſtrionicall geſtures, and trickes fitter to mocke apes withall, then to edifie the people. For whereas in former time they were wont to ſay, Let vs goe heare a Maſſe: now the common ſaying in Italy, is this; Let vs goe ſee a Maſſe. Let vs therefore trie the ſpirits before wee truſt them, and eſpecially C in matters of religion, follow Chriſts precept, not to iudge by the outward appearance, Ioh. 7.24. But to iudge of Prophets, by the fruit of their doctrine, Matth. 7.16. and of their doctrine by the touchſtone of the word, Iſa. 8.20. ſo that though the diuell transforme himſelfe into an angell of light; nay, though an angel frõ heauen preach any other thing, beſide that we haue receiued from Chriſt, we muſt holde him accurſed: and in ſo doing we ſhall follow Chriſt his practiſe, who was prudent in the feare of the Lord, and did not iudge by the ſight of his eyes, nor reproone by the hearing of his eares, Iſa. 11.3.

D The ſecond note and marke of theſe falſe teachers, is, that they compell men to be circumciſed. The word compell, hath great emphaſis, for it ſignifieth, that they did not conuince the iudgement, or perſwade the will and affection of the Galatians, but enforced them againſt their wils: for though circumciſion be nothing of it ſelfe (as Paul ſaith) yet to be compelled to receiue circumciſion, and to place iuſtification in the vſe of it, and ſinne in the neglect of it, is the ready way to ouerturne Chriſt, the foundation of our ſaluation, Gal. 5.4.

Heere ſundry queſtions are to be anſwered. Firſt, it may bee demaunded, whether it bee lawfull to compell men to embrace religion, as the falſe apoſtles compelled the Galatians to circumciſion? Anſw. The magiſtrate may and ought to compell obſtinate Recuſants to profeſſe true religion: for he is cuſtos vtriuſque tabulæ, and therefore is to haue care that true religion be profeſſed, and the contemners thereof puniſhed. An example hereof wee haue in good King Ioſiah, who cauſed all that were found in Ieruſalem and Beniamin, (that is, all his ſubiects) to ſtand to the couenant which he made with the Lord, nay which is more, he compelled all that were found in Ieruſalem to ſerue the Lord their God, 2. Chr. 34. 32, 33. among which multitude many there were (no doubt) which did like better of idolatry, then of Gods worſhippe, as the word compelled, doth import. The King that made that great ſupper, commanded his ſeruants to compell the gueſts to come in vnto him. Luk. 14. 23. whence Auguſtine gathereth, that it is the Magiſtrates duty to compell recuſants, ſchiſmatikes, heretikes, and ſuch like, to the hearing and profeſſing of the word. But here three things are commonly obiected againſt this doctrine.

Obiect. I. To compell men to embrace true religion, is to make them goe againſt their cõſcience, which the Magiſtrate ought not to doe: as ſome Papiſts haue affirmed, that they would not for ten thouſand worlds compell a Iewe to ſweare that there were a bleſſed Trinitie, becauſe he ſhould bee damned for ſwearing againſt his conſcience, although the thing were neuer ſo true. Anſw. I. If it were ſo hainous a ſinne to compell any to embrace true religion, becauſe it is againſt their conſcience; why doe Popiſh Prelates, and Magiſtrates, compell Proteſtants (and that by exquiſite torments) to reconcile themſelues to the Church of Rome, to ſweare obedience to the Pope, to acknowledge Trãſubſtantiation, and to heare Maſſe; which they know are directly againſt their conſcience? II. If they will not compell men to doe any thing, (though neuer ſo good or godly,) becauſe it is againſt their conſcience: why ſhould they not bee as ſcrupulous in reſtraining them from doing that which is vnlawfull, becauſe they are perſwaded in conſcience they ought to doe it? For if they compell men to omit that which they beleeue to be good, becauſe they know it to be euill, (as their owne practiſe prooueth, in that they will not ſuffer Proteſtants to pray publikely in a knowne tongue, nor receiue the Sacrament in both kindes, &c.) why doe they not compell them alſo, to doe that which they knew to be good, though they thinke it to be euill? III. The Magiſtrate is to compell men to embrace true religion, or to puniſh them for their obſtinacy in not hearkening to the word; becauſe hee is to vſe the meanes to reclaime them, and to winne them to a loue and liking of the truth. Now ſo long as they are vrged to heare the word, there is hope they may be wonne againe, and experience ſhewes (as Auguſtine teſtifieth of the Donatiſts) that they which did profeſſe religion at the firſt meerely by compulſion, may afterwards (by the mercy of God) profeſſe it only for deuotion. And what though ſome come not to learne, but to carpe and cauill? yet God may caſt the nette of his mercy ſo far ouer them, that contrary to their purpoſe, they may bee caught. IV. If the Magiſtrate who may compell them, & ſo reclaime them, do ſuffer them to continue in their errours or hereſies, without controlement, he is guilty of their ſinne: but by compelling them he hath diſcharged his duty: for albeit they being compelled, do diſſemble and play the hypocrites, do lie, and forſweare themſelues, that is not the Magiſtrates ſinne, who intends nothing but their conuerſion and ſaluation, it is their own proper and perſonall ſinne.

Obiect. II. Men ought to bee perſwaded to embrace religion, and induced to beleeue, but not compelled: for the will cannot be compelled. Anſ. True it is, the will cannot bee compelled; and as true is it likewiſe, that the Magiſtrate doth not compell any to beleeue: for when a man doth beleeue, & from his heart imbrace true religion, he doth it willingly: notwithſtanding meanes are to bee vſed to make them willing, that are vnwilling, and the meanes is to compell them to come to our aſſemblies, to heare the word, and to learne the grounds of true religion: for it is Gods commandement men ſhould prooue the ſpirits, 1. Iohn 4. 1. that ſo they may know the truth, and cleaue vnto it. Auguſtine ſaith fitly, and finely to this purpoſe, Quod autem vobis videtur invitos ad veritatem non eſſe cogendos, erratis neſcientes Scripturas, neque virtutem Dei, qui eos volentes facit, dum coguntur inviti. Secondly, when Papiſts receiue the Sacrament, ſweare allegeance to their Prince, preſent themſelues in our cõgregations, who knowes that they doe theſe things againſt their conſcience? nay rather wee ought in charity to thinke that they are perſwaded in conſcience they may doe them, when by oath and proteſtation they confeſſe ſo much. But bee it they did all in hypocriſie, ſhall the execution of godly lawes therefore ceaſe, becauſe hypocrites will not obey but in diſſimulation?

Perſuaderi vult fides, non cogi.

Contra Gaudent. Epiſt. 2. lib. 2. c. 17.

Obiection III. The Magiſtrate by compelling Recuſants to the outward profeſſion of religion, maketh them to play the hypocrites, to counterfeit, and diſſemble. Anſ. The Magiſtrate in executing the lawes, hath no ſuch intent, but onely that they might heare the word, beleeue it, and bee ſaued. Againe, Proteſtant recuſants in other countries, are not allowed by Papiſts to alleadge their conſcience for their refuſall, but are compelled either to cõforme themſelues, or to vndergoe cruell torments: no more may ſuch pretence of conſcience excuſe the Papiſts, or other heretikes, but that they ſhould receiue the ſame meaſure which they mete to others.

A II. Queſt. How can it be truly ſaid, that the falſe apoſtles compelled men to receiue circumciſion, ſeeing Titus was not compelled to be circumciſed? Gal. 2. 3. Anſ. That place maketh nothing againſt the text in hand: the meaning is, that Paul for his part was ready to haue circumciſed Titus (as hee did Timothie, Act. 16. 3.) rather then offend the weake brethren. But when it came to this point, that they would needes vrge circumciſion, as a thing neceſſary to ſaluation, Paul refuſed to doe it, for all the falſe brethren that crept in, v. 4. that is, notwithſtanding they laboured by all meanes to bring it in vſe againe. Neither did the Apoſtles vrge it, or require it, as a thing neceſſary to ſaluation.

B III. It may be demaunded, whether that circumciſion being ſo vehemently vrged by the falſe apoſtles, might not haue beene vſed? Anſ. It might not. For albeit it be in it ſelfe a thing indifferent, and ſo it skilleth not, whether a man bee circumciſed or not, (as Paul ſaith) Circumciſion is nothing, and vncircumciſion is nothing: yet beeing vrged as a matter of abſolute neceſſity, as without which men could not bee ſaued, Act. 15. 1. it ought not to bee vſed. The like may be ſaid of all indifferent things, if they bee made eſſentiall parts of Gods worſhip, or neceſſary to ſaluation; as the vſe of meates and drinkes, obſeruing of times & ſeaſons, wearing this or that habite, or attire, forbidding of marriage to C ſome orders of men. For when things indifferent are made neceſſary, the nature of them is chaunged. Vpon this ground Ezekiah brake in peeces the braſen ſerpent, when the Iſraelites beganne to worſhip it, 2. King. 18. 4.

Firſt, let vs obſerue out of theſe wordes, they compell you to be circumciſed, that Paul doth not onely vſe Chriſtian policie, but dealeth very rhetorically, excuſing the Galatians, as though they were conſtrained againſt their wils, to doe as they did: and laying al the blame vpon the falſe apoſtles: and ſo doth cloſely alienate their affection from theſe ſeducers, who would haue them circumciſed, either by voluntary ſubmiſſion, or by violent compulſion: the like godly policie D wee ought to vſe in dealing againſt hereticks, and falſe teachers, that the peoples mindes may bee eſtranged from them, and take no loue of their doctrine, nor liking of their perſons.

Here wee haue a ſecond note of falſe teachers, which is, not onely to retaine ceremonies themſelues, but to vrge them vpon others, and conſtraine men to the obſeruing of them: for they were more earneſt and forward in vrging circumciſion (their owne deuice) then the keeping of the morall law: and ſo are all ſeducers. The Phariſies did vrge their owne ceremonies, as waſhing before meate, waſhing of pottes, cuppes, and platters, &c. more then the commaundement of God. And the Papiſts vrge the Lent faſt more ſtrictly, then faſting from ſinne, which is the onely true faſt, Eſay 58. verſe 6. And their owne ſtories doe ſhew, that men haue been more ſeuerely puniſhed, for eating fleſh vpon good friday, then for committing of ſimple fornication, or following of ſtrange fleſh. They ſtand more in vrging the outward worſhipping of an image, or a peece of bread, then the inward ſpirituall worſhippe. And as they haue made the Saints daies equall with the Sabboth daies, ſo haue they made the prophanation of them an equal ſin, and haue puniſhed it with equal puniſhment.

It is further to bee obſerued, how they abuſe circumciſion, for whereas by Gods ordinance it was but a ſeale of the righteouſneſſe of faith, Rom. 4. 11. they peruerting the ende of it, make it a meritorious cauſe of ſaluation; and therefore compell men to be circumciſed: it is Gods worke, they make it their owne worke, yea ſuch a worke as by which they hope to be ſaued. And this their dealing may fitly bee paralleled by the Popiſh practiſe at this day, in making baptiſme, which is but a ſigne and ſeale of grace, to bee the proper, immediate, and phyſicall cauſe of conferring grace, by the worke wrought. Almes, praier, and faſting (which are but ſignes and teſtimonies of iuſtification) to be cauſes thereof. Nay their owne deuices, of confeſſion, ſatisfaction, ſupererogation, to bee meritorious cauſes of iuſtification, and ſaluation.

Laſtly, ſee here how the peruerſeneſſe of the corrupt heart of man, doth thwart the ordinance of God. As long as circumciſion was commaunded by God, moſt abhorred it; for the heathen teſtifie ſo much, that the Iewes were odious for it. But now beeing aboliſhed, they take it vp againe, receiue it, and vrge it as a thing neceſſarie to bee obſerued vpon paine of damnation. VVhereas if God ſhould enioyne it againe, they would (no doubt) account it as a heauie yoke, which neither they nor their fathers were able to beare. This improouing of that which God commaundeth, and approouing that which hee forbiddeth, argues the great corruption of the heart, and that the wiſedome of the fleſh is not onely an enemy, but euen flatte enmity againſt God, Romanes 8. 7. It muſt therefore teach vs to captiuate our reaſon, and to ſubiect our wils to the will of God in all things.

Apella Iudæus.

The third propertie of theſe falſe apoſtles is, the teaching of circumciſion, that is, of falſe doctrine, becauſe they would not ſuffer perſecution for the croſſe of Chriſt, that is, for preaching the true doctrine of the Goſpell, concerning Chriſt crucified. It may be demaunded whether it was neceſſary that thoſe which taught not circumciſion, but ſpake againſt it, ſhould bee perſecuted? To which I anſwer, that it was neceſſary, according as Paul affirmeth, Gal. 5. 11. If I teach circumciſion, why doe I yet ſuffer perſecution? The reaſon was this:

Hieron. in Comment. in hunc locum.

The Romane Emperour had giuen liberty to the Iewes to liue according to their owne lawes, and that without moleſtation or diſturbance, in all places of the Romane Empire; ſo that if a Iewe became a Chriſtian, he had the priuiledge of a Iewe, ſo long as hee kept the ceremoniall law, and taught no departing from Moſes: whereas they which taught, that ceremonies were abrogated, and that men were iuſtified onely by faith in Chriſt, wanted this priuiledge, and ſo were perſecuted of no men more thē of the Iewes, either by themſelues, or by incenſing others againſt them, 1. Theſſalon. 2. 15, 16. The falſe apoſtles therefore to auoide perſecution, coyned a new Goſpell; in matter of ſaluation, ioyning Chriſt and Moſes, iuſtification by faith, and by workes. So that here wee haue another character and marke of falſe teachers, which is, to labour by al means to enioy the world, and to eſchew the croſſe, and rather then they will ſuffer perſecution, to make a hotchpotch of religion, as we may ſee, not onely by this particular, but by the courſe of the hiſtory of the Church, and in latter times, by the Interim vnder Charles the fift, and the ſixe articles vnder Henry the eight by our mediatours and reconciliatours, who either (as it is ſaid of olde Conſiliator) labour to accord fire and water: or elſe like huckſters mixe wine and water for their own aduantage: and by all neuters and mungrils in religion, who houer in the winde, becauſe they would ſtand ſure for all aſſaies, or winne the fauour of great men, that they might not ſtand in the way of their preferment. This is the ſinne of the multitude among vs, who deſire to haue Chriſt, but they will none of his croſſe: they would bee with him vpon mount Tabor, but not vpon mount Caluary, crowned with glory, but not crowned with thornes.

Further, wee may hence gather an eſſentiall difference of true and falſe teachers: the one ſeeke the good of the Church, the other ſeeke themſelues: the one the glory of God, the other their owne glory. It is obſerued by Popiſh prieſts and others, that though the Ieſuits pretend, they doe all things in ordine ad Deum, yet they intend themſelues, doing all things in ordine ad ſeipſos: it beeing the marke they ſhoote at in all their Machiavellian plots and pollicies, that they may haue cum dignitate ocium, a Lordly command, and a laſie life.

Againe, here wee ſee that the loue of the truth, and of the world, the feare of the face of men, and the feare of God can neuer ſtand together. As alſo how daungerous a thing it is to bee addicted to the loue of the world: for it hath beene alwaies the cauſe of reuolt, in that men neuer imbraced religion ſo, as that they could be contented to ſuffer perſecution for the profeſſion of it, nor lay downe their liues in the maintenance thereof. Mat. 13. 21. As ſoone as tribulation or perſecution commeth, by and by they are offended. Whereas we ought to haue the ſame minde that Paul had, who knowing that bonds and impriſonment aboad him, yet paſſed not for them, neither was his life deare vnto him, Acts 20. 23. and was not onely ready to bee bound, but to die alſo, for the name of the Lord Ieſus, Act. 21. 13. The reaſons which ſhould make vs willing to take vp our croſſe & follow Chriſt, are theſe: Firſt, it is a great mercy and fauour of God, that we are accounted worthy to ſuffer any thing for his ſake, Act. 5. 41. The Apoſtles departed from the Councell, reioycing that they were accounted worthie to ſuffer rebuke for his name. Secondly, it is a meanes (by the mercifull promiſe of God,) to procure and obtaine the bleſſings of this life, Marke 10. 30. Thirdly, it hath bleſſedneſſe annexed to it, with a promiſe of aſſiſtance and helpe of the Spirit of God, 1. Peter 4. 14. If ye be railed on for the name of Chriſt, bleſſed are ye, for the Spirit of glorie, and of God reſteth vpon you, which on their part is euill ſpoken of, but on your part is glorified. Laſtly, the ende of the croſſe, is glorie vnſpeakable, If wee ſuffer with him, we ſhall alſo be glorified with him, Rom. 8. 17.

Further, whereas Saint Paul linketh together perſecution, and the preaching of the croſſe, wee may ſee that the profeſſion of the Goſpell, and perſecution, do either goe hand in hand, or doe follow one another inſeparably; for as many as will liue godly in Chriſt Ieſus, muſt ſuffer perſecution, 2. Timothy 3. 12. Moſes is ſaid to haue choſen rather to ſuffer affliction with the people of God, then to enioy the pleaſures of ſinne for a ſeaſon, Heb. 11. 25. VVhere wee ſee that affliction is the lotte and portion of the godly. The reaſon hereof is two fold. The malice of the diuell, who is alway nibling at the heele, Gen. 3. 15. And the hatred of the malignant Church (the diuels ſeede) euer maligning the Church and people of God. The diuell maketh warre with the remnant of the womans ſeede, which keepe the commaundements of God, and haue the teſtimony of Ieſus, Apoc. 12. 17. The malignant Church perſecuteth the Church of God, as wee may ſee in their types, namely, in Cain hating and perſecuting Abel: Iſmael, Iſaac: Eſau, Iacob. VVhich they did onely becauſe they ſaw their owne workes to be euill, and theirs to be good, 1. Ioh. 3. 12. And if it bee demaunded, why thoſe that preach the word plainly and powerfully to the conſciences of men, in euidence of the ſpirit, are ſo extreamly hated and maligned? Anſ. It is for no other thing, but euen for the workes ſake, for which they ought to be reuerenced, 1. Theſſ. 5. 13. and becauſe they propheſie not good vnto them, but euill, 1. King. 22. 8. that is, preach not pleaſing things, by ſowing pillowes vnder their elbowes, and lulling them aſleepe in the bed of ſecuritie, but denounce the iudgements of God againſt them, and ſo diſquiet and trouble their guiltie conſciences. And what (I beſeech you) is the reaſon why thoſe that make conſcience of ſinne, are ſo maligned of the wicked world, & branded with the blacke names of Puritanes and Preciſians; but this, which our Sauiour Chriſt giueth, Ioh. 15. 9. Becauſe they are not of the world, therefore the world hateth them? Now all this commeth to paſſe, by reaſon of that enmity which God hath put betwixt the woman, and the ſerpent; his ſeede, and her ſeed. Gen. 3. 15.

This teacheth vs, firſt, that we ſhould ſuſpect our ſelues, that our hearts are not ſound, nor our practiſe ſincere, when all men ſpeake well of vs: for true profeſſion is alwaies accompanied with perſecution. VVoe be to you, when all men ſpeake well of you, Luk. 6. 26.

Secondly, that we muſt not be diſcouraged in our profeſſion, though there be neuer ſo many that make oppoſition, or ſo mightie that raiſe perſecution againſt vs. Though they tell vs as they did Paul, Act. 28. 22. Concerning this ſect, we know that euery where it is ſpoken againſt: or take vs vp with Nicodemus, Ioh. 7. 52. Art thou alſo of Galile? ſearch and looke, for out of Galile ariſeth no Prophet. In theſe blaſts and ſtormes of temptations, wee ought to make that ſaying of Chriſt our anker hold, Bleſſed is hee that is not offended in me. Matth. 11. 6.

Laſtly, that we thinke it not ſtrange when we find affliction, or meete with perſecution. 1. Pet. 4. 12, 13.

13. For they which are circumciſed, keepe not the Law, but deſire to haue you circumciſed, that they might glorie in your fleſh.

Here the Apoſtle preuenteth an obiection, which might be made againſt his former concluſion, v. 12. For it might be ſaid, Paul did them wrong in ſlandering them, to vrge circumciſion only becauſe they would auoid perſecution, when as they did it, as zealous obſeruers of the Law. To this he anſwereth negatiuely, that whatſoeuer they did pretend, they intended no ſuch thing. And he prooueth his former aſſertion, by two arguments, and withall deſcribeth the falſe Apoſtles by two other properties. His firſt reaſon may be framed thus: If they did vrge circumciſion as beeing zealous of the Law, and hauing conſcience of the obſeruing thereof, they would keepe it themſelues, as well as compell others to the keeping of it. But they keepe it not themſelues. Therefore they vrge it not in conſcience to haue it obayed, but for ſome ſiniſter end. The ſecond reaſon is this. They that propound no other end to themſelues in vrging circumciſion, but vaunting and boaſting in the fleſh: they ſeeke not the obſeruation of the Law: But theſe ſeducers vrge circumciſion and other ceremonies, that they might glory in the fleſh. Therfore they ſeeke not the obſeruation of the law. So that here wee haue two other properties of falſe teachers. A The firſt is, to compell men to the obſeruing of that, which they will not obſerue themſelues. For thus theſe ſeducers vrged the ceremoniall law. Reſembling herein the Scribes and Phariſies, who bound heauy burdens and grieuous to be borne, and laid them on mens ſhoulders, whereas they themſelues would not mooue them with one of their fingers. Matth. 23. 4. The Popes, and Prelates of the Romiſh Church, are notorious in this kind, in vrging men to make conſcience of that, which they themſelues will not keepe, to practiſe that, which they wil not performe, and to beleeue that, which they count falſe, and fabulous. For firſt, they ſtrictly require regular obedience to bee performed B of their nouices, and others, to their generals or gouernours, ſpecially to the Vicar of Chriſt, and See of Rome; whereas they will not be ſubiect to the higher powers as they ought, Rom. 13. ver. 1. nor obedient to gouernours, as it is required, 1. Pet. 2. 13, 14. Nay, their practiſe is notorious in theſe foure particulars. Firſt, in freeing children from obedience to their parẽts. Secondly, in exempting their ſhauelings from ſubiection to the ciuill Magiſtrate. Thirdly, in freeing ſubiects from their oath of alleageãce to their Soueraignes. And laſtly, by aduancing that man of ſinne aboue all that is called God, or worſhipped, and giuing him power to depoſe Princes, to diſpoſe of crownes and kingdomes, and to C impoſe lawes which ſhall properly binde the conſcience; yea to tread Kings and Emperours vnder his feete, and cauſe them like vaſſals to hold his ſtirrop. Againe, they compell others to faſt, eſpecially in Lent, when as they in the meane time feaſt; their faſt beeing to eate faſt, and drinke faſt, in mortifying the fleſh with their Indian capons, and peacocks, and that vpon good friday; whereas to eate white-meates vpon that day, ſhould be in others a mortall ſinne. Further, they beare the poore people in hand that Indulgences are meanes to remit ſins; and that thoſe that are excommunicated by the Pope are in a damnable eſtate: wheras many of thẽ, accoũt Popes bulls to be but bullæ, meere trifles, and D ſuch as buy them, ſtarke fooles; witneſſe the ſpeech of the Duke of Valence, baſtard to Pope Alexander the ſixt, who hauing loſt certaine thouſand crownes, at a throw at the dice, Tuſh (ſaid he) theſe are but the ſinnes of the Germans. And that of Charles the fift (though a fauourer and maintainer of the Romane religion) who, beeing menaced by Pope Paulus the third, with excommunication, if he would not yeeld vp Playſance into his hands, let him vnderſtand by his Embaſſadour, that he would thunder at S. Angelo with his canons and artillerie, if he would needes be thundering out his excommunications. Laſtly, they vrge confeſſion of Purgatorie, almoſt as an article of faith, whereas ſome of them are ſo farre from beleeuing it, as that they thinke there is neither heauen, nor hell,

5

O Bembe, quantum nobis profuit fabula iſta de Chriſto?

A witneſſe the ſpeech of Pope Leo the tenth, to Cardinall Bembus: O Bembus, what riches haue we gotten by this fine fable of Ieſus Chriſt? By this wee are contrarily admoniſhed, to practiſe that we profeſſe: the Miniſters of the word, eſpecially, ought verba vertere in opera, (as Ierome ſpeaketh) that is, to turne words into workes, that their liues may be reall Sermons to the people: for otherwiſe they pull downe with one hand, as faſt as they build with another. Let vs conſider how Peters bad example, is ſaid to haue compelled the Gentiles to liue as the Iewes. Gal. 2. 14. For actions abide, & are of force, when words paſſe as the winde.

Moreouer, vpon this dependeth another propertie of ſeducers, which is, to ſet a faire B gloſſe vpon the matter, & to make the world beleeue, they doe theſe and theſe things, for ſuch and ſuch endes (as theſe falſe teachers did, pretending religion and conſcience, but intending freedome from the croſſe, & their owne vaine glorie) whereas they meane nothing leſſe: like Herod, who made ſhew of worſhipping Chriſt, when his purpoſe was to haue deſtroyed him. Matth. 2. This property and practiſe is, and hath beene vſuall, ſpecially in the Church of Rome. For generally, they would haue the world beleeue, that the Popes triple crowne, and Hierarchie of that Sea, is for the maintenance and defence of the Goſpel: whereas all the world knowes, it is onely to keepe their kitchins hotte, to vp-C hold their Perſian pompe, and ambitious tyrannie. Particularly, there bee two politicke practiſes of theirs, which prooue the point in hand. Firſt, it is well knowne, that Popes haue neuer ceaſed from time to time, to ſollicite the Princes of Europe, to maintaine the holy warre (as they call it) pretending the recouerie of the holy land, out of the hand of the Turkes, and Saracins: when as (at leaſt in the beginning) they intended nothing leſſe, but that by this meanes they might ſet the Eaſt and Weſt together by the eares, whilſt they played their parts at home in Italy. The ſecond, is their Shrift, or auricular Confeſſion, which they practiſe for this end (as they ſay) that they may pacifie diſtreſſed Conſciences, D by abſoluing them of their ſinnes: when as the truth is, they firſt brought it into the Church, and doe ſtill continue it, in a politicke reſpect, as beeing the onely way in the world, to know all the ſecret purpoſes, plots, pollicies, and practiſes, that are either in Church, or Commonwealth.

VVe are therefore here admoniſhed to take heede of diſſembling, in making Chriſtianitie a cloake of impietie, or to pretend one thing, and intend another, like the heart pointing vpward, and poiſing downward; for that wil be a farre fowler ſolœciſme then that which the heathen committed with his hand, in pointing to heauen, when he ſpake of the earth. But let vs alway labour for ſincerity, to be at leaſt that which we pretend to be, or rather like Salomons temple, whoſe windowes were larger within then without, and not like the glow-worme, making a faire glittering ſhew of that which we haue not.

14. But God forbid that I ſhould glorie, ſaue in the croſſe of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, whereby the world is crucified to me, and I vnto the world.

In theſe words Paul comes to the Reddition of the diſſimilitude betwixt him and the falſe Apoſtles, his glorying and theirs. In them we may conſider two generall points. Firſt, wherein he would not glorie, in nothing ſaue in, &c. Secondly, the thing wherein he would glorie, In the croſſe of Chriſt, whereof he renders a reaſon in the words following, taken from the effects which the croſſe wrought in him. For, by it, the world was crucified to him, and he vnto the world.

For the firſt: To glorie: implies three things. Firſt, to reioyce, exult, and triumph in a mans ſelfe, in regard of ſome good thing, or ſome ſuppoſed good. Secondly, to bewray this great exultation, by ſpeech, or action, or both. Thirdly, by boaſting of it, to looke for praiſe and applauſe of men: which glorying (according to the nature of the obiect, & the end) is either good or euill. For if it haue a right obiect, namely, the croſſe of Chriſt: and a right end, the glory of God, it is good, otherwiſe it is euill: ſuch as was this glorying of the falſe Apoſtles, & all other carnall glorying, which is not in the Lord; for it is nothing els but vaine glorie: Vaine I ſay, firſt, in regard of the things wherein men glorie, which are either ſuch as are not, as when man boaſteth of that which he hath not, but would ſeeme to haue: or ſuch as he hath not of himſelfe, 1. Cor. 4. 7. or ſuch as haue no continuance, but are tranſitorie and fading, as all earthly things are, ſeeing man himſelfe is but as graſſe, and all the glorie of man, but as the floure of the field. Iſay 40. 6. Secondly, it is vaine in regard of man, from whome we looke for glorie, and admiration, ſeeing his iudgement is erroneous. Thirdly, in regard of the end, in not referring it to the maine and proper end, the glory of God, and the good of his Church. The Prophet reduceth all thoſe things, wherein we ought not to glorie, to three heads: wiſedome, ſtrength, riches: Ier. 9 23. all which we haue receiued, and therefore ought not to boaſt of them. In particular, wiſedome is not to bee gloried in, ſeeing it is very defectiue, whether we ſpeake of ſpeculatiue wiſedome, ſtanding in contemplation, or practicall, conſiſting in action: For in artes and ſciences, as alſo in the ſecrets of nature, our ignorance is greater thē our knowledge. He that knowes nothing in theſe things, let him reade the booke of Iob, chap. 28. and 37. and 38. And as for wiſedome in diuine things, VVe know nothing as we ought to know. 1. Cor. 8. 2. For we know but in part, and ſee but as in a glaſſe, darkely, 1. Cor. 13. 12. And as for practicall wiſedome, ſtanding in policie, it is not demonſtratiue, but meerely coniecturall, and therefore wee cannot build vpon it, conſidering in it there is the concurrence of ſo many cauſes that are caſuall, and of ſo many minds which are mutable. Salomon the great politician had experience hereof; for he thought that by ioyning affinitie with his neighbour Princes round about him, and taking their daughters to bee his wiues, hee ſhould eſtabliſh his owne houſe, ſtrengthen his kingdome, and draw the heatheniſh idolatours to the worſhip of the true God. But all things fell out contrarie to this his plot and proiect: for it was ſo farre from winning others to imbrace true religion, as that it drew him to idolatrie: and ſo far from ſtabliſhing his houſe, or ſtrengthening his kingdome, as that it was the cauſe of the rending of the one, and the ruinating of the other. Conſtantine the great, was perſwaded that by building the citie Conſtantinople in the confines of Europe and Aſia, and there placing one of his ſonnes, as his Lieutenant to keepe his court, he ſhould fortifie his Empire, as with a wall of braſſe: But he was deceiued, for the building of new Rome, was the decay of the old, and the diuiding of the Empire, was the deſtruction thereof: So that it is truly ſaid, policie is often the ouerthrow of policie.

Now if wiſedome may not bee gloried in, much leſſe may ſtrength, ſeeing that wiſedome is better then ſtrength, Eccleſ. 9. 16. ſeeing that the greateſt ſtrength of man, is not comparable to that of Behemoth, Iob 40. and other bruite beaſts: ſeeing it is but the ſtrength of fleſh: ſeeing no power, nor might, can deliuer from wrath in the day of wrath. Of all the puiſſant Princes, and plotting politicians, the Pſalmiſt ſaith, They are ſo vaine, that if they bee laid vpon the ballance, euen vanitie it ſelfe will waigh them downe, Pſal. 62. 9.

And as for riches, beſides that they make vs neuer a whitte the better, (nay oftentimes much worſe) they are alſo vncerten. Salomon ſaith, They make themſelues wings like an Eagle, and flie away. Prou. 23. 5. They may not vnfitly bee compared to Ionas his gourd, which flouriſhed in the morning, yeelding him content and delight, but ſhortly after (to his great griefe,) it was ſticken by a worme, and withered away. The like may be ſaid of honours, and pleaſures. For what more vaine then to glorie in honour, which is not in a mans power: ſeeing as the Philoſopher teacheth, Honour is not in him that is honoured, but in him that honoureth: and therefore Courtiers are compared to counters, which ſtand ſometime for poundes, ſometime for pence, beeing now aduanced, now debaſed, according to the pleaſure of the Prince. Haman to day highly honoured in the court at Shuſhan, the next day hanged vpon a tree. To omit the examples of Iob, and Nebuchodonoſor, (in whome we may ſee the mutabilitie of worldly dignitie,) Conſider it in the glaſſe of theſe examples. Firſt of Gelimar a puiſſant Prince of the Vandals, who was brought ſo low, that he was enforced to requeſt his friend to ſend him a loafe of bread, a ſponge, and a harpe: a loafe, to ſlake his hunger: a ſponge, to drie vp his teares: a harpe, to ſolace him in his miſerie. Of Belliſarius, (for prowes and honour, the onely man then liuing,) who came to that miſerable eſtate, that hauing his eies put out, he was led in a ſtring to begge by the high way ſide, crying, Date obolum Belliſario. And of the victorious Emperour Henrie the fourth, who had fought 52. pitched fields, and yet was driuen to that exigent, as that he became a ſuter for a poore Prebend in the Church of Spira, to maintaine himſelfe in his old age. And as for worldly pleaſures, leaſt cauſe is there that any man ſhould glorie in them, ſeeing they are more vaniſhing then the former: ſeeing they are common to vs with bruite beaſts: ſeeing they are mingled with much griefe and vexation; for in the midſt of laughter, the heart is ſorrowfull, Prou. 14. 13. And laſtly, ſeeing they leaue a ſting behinde them, for the end of pleaſure is nothing but paine, as Salomon ſaith, The end of reioycing is mourning. For feaſting and banquetting are often turned into ſurfetting and vomiting: drinking into palſies: luſts into goutes, &c. And if pleaſures were but onely painefull, the matter were the leſſe, but they are alſo ſinfull, Heb. 11. 25. and therefore in no wiſe to be gloried in.

Ethic. l. 1. c. 5.

Eſth 7.

Procopius.

Prou. 14. 13.

By this wee ſee that Paul had iuſt cauſe in this earneſt manner, to ſay, God forbid I ſhould glorie ſaue in the croſſe of Chriſt; conſidering that this boaſting in outward things, is not onely a fault of vanitie, but alſo of impietie, as may appeare by theſe reaſons. I. God hath expreſſely forbidden it, Ier. 9. 23. Gal. 5. 26. II. He hath alway ſeuerely puniſhed it, as in Dauid, for numbring the people in a vaineglorious minde, 2. Sam. 24. In Ezekias, for ſhewing his treaſures in a brauery to the Embaſſadours of the King of Babel. Iſay 39. In Herod, for aſcribing to himſelfe the glory proper to God alone, Act. 12. III. The Saints of God haue alway abhorred it, as Paul doth in this place, and 2. Cor. 11. 30. If I muſt needs glorie, I will glorie in mine infirmities, as if he ſhould ſay, I will be farre from carnall boaſting. IV. The heathen by the light of nature haue condemned it: the Grecian Orator cals it an odious and burdenſome thing. And the Romane Orator prooues it to bee moſt true by his owne practiſe, making his words which flowed from his mouth as ſweete as hony, to taſte as bitter as wormewood, by interlacing his owne praiſes.

φορτικόν τι, καὶ ἐπαχθές.
Demoſt. de Coron.

Obiect. I. Paul gloried in ſomething beſides the croſſe of Chriſt, when he ſaid, It were better for him to die, then that any ſhould make his glorying vaine, 1. Cor. 9. 15. Anſw. Paul in glorying doth diſtinguiſh his calling from his perſon, Of ſuch a one I will boaſt, of my ſelfe I will not boaſt: and, I was nothing inferiour to the very chiefe Apoſtles, although I am nothing, 2.Cor.12.5.11. Of his perſon or perſonall gifts he boaſteth not: but onely of his Apoſtolicall calling, and his faithful diſcharge thereof, to the end he may ſtoppe the mouthes of the falſe Apoſtles. Thus to confeſſe the good things we haue to the glorie of God, beeing vrged thereunto, is lawfull boaſting, nay it is ſometime neceſſarie, making much for the maintenance of the Goſpell, as Pauls boaſting made much for the good of the Church of Corinth. Againe, there is a twofold lawfull boaſting, one before God, another before men, Rom.4.2. Of the former the Apoſtle ſpeakes in this verſe: of the latter in the 2.Cor.12. He gloried not in the teſtimonie of a good conſcience, before God, but onely before men. Before God hee gloried in nothing, but in the ſauing knowledge of Chriſt, and him crucified. And whereas it may bee ſaid, that this his boaſting in regard of the falſe Apoſtles, as alſo his glorying in the teſtimonie of his conſcience, 2.Cor.1.12 and in his infirmities, 2.Cor.11.30. were not in the croſſe of Chriſt. I anſwer, they were: for his glorying ouer the falſe Apoſtles, in teaching freely, was in the good and proſperous ſucceſſe of the Goſpell, which is the doctrine of the croſſe, and his glorying in the teſtimonie of his conſcience; in that it was waſhed by the blood of the croſſe, as Paul ſpeakes, Coloſſ.1.20. In his afflictions, in that they were the afflictions of Chriſt, and hee by them made conformable to him.

But it will be ſaid, that he gloried in his reuelations, in his paines and trauell, in preaching the Goſpell, and in the multitude of Churches which he had planted. Anſw. Firſt, he did it beeing vrged thereunto; ſecondly, he did it to defend his calling, and the credit of the Goſpel: and therefore this boaſting was not vnlawfull; nay it was neceſſarie, and in the Lord. For when we are compelled, we may confeſſe the good things we haue, if we doe it ſparingly, and for the edification of others, that they may be bettered by our example: and that they ſeeing our good works, may glorifie God our heauenly Father, Mat.5.16.

Here we ſee what glorying is Vnlawfull; namely, when men aſcribe vnto themſelues either that which they haue not, or more thẽ they haue, or as proceeding from thẽſelues, their wiſedome, ſtrength, induſtrie, in ſacrificing to their owne nets, and burning incenſe to their owne yearne, Habac.1.16. or in boaſting of them without neceſſarie cauſe, either for their owne vaine glorie, as Nebuchodenoſar did, Dan.4. or not for Gods glorie, as Herod did, Act.12. And if this glorying bee ſo great a ſinne, ſurely boaſting in wickedneſſe (as Doeg did, Pſal.52.1.) muſt needs be moſt damnable: as when the greateſt ſwearers and ſwaggerers, count themſelues the beſt companions: the greateſt idolaters, and ſuperſtiti-A ous perſons, moſt religious: the greateſt oppreſſours, ſurfeters, drunkards, fighters, moſt valiant and couragious, &c. Now this may be done three waies, either ignorantly, as when Paul gloried in his cruell perſecuting of the Saints before his conuerſion, Act.26.11. or preſumptuouſly, when men glorie in wickedneſſe, notwithſtanding they be perſwaded in conſcience, that it is euill: and then it is the ſin of Sodom, Iſay.3.9. or malitiouſly, to deſpite God, and then it is the ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt.

The ſecond point to bee conſidered in the words, is, the thing wherein he will glory, called here the Croſſe of Chriſt: Saue in the Croſſe B of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. The words in the originall tranſlated ſaue, εἰ μὴ. are exceptiue: as if hee ſhould ſay, I will glorie in nothing except in the croſſe of Chriſt: and excluſiue, onely in the croſſe of Chriſt, and in nothing elſe. Albe it they are ſometime aduerſatiue, as *Gal.*2.16. and *Apoc.*21.27. There ſhall enter into it no vncleane thing, εἰ μὴ, but they that are written, &c. where the words are not excluſiue: (for then it would follow that ſome which worke abomination, ſhould enter into heauen:) but aduerſatiue, as Matth.12.4. and Luk.4.verſ.20. which may ſerue (by the way) to cleare the text. Ioh.17.12. Thoſe thou gaueſt me haue I kept; and none of them is loſt, but the child of perdition: εἰ μὴ ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀπωλείας, that is, but the child of perdition is loſt. For C the words, εἰ μὴ, (as I take it) are not ſo well tranſlated by the exceptiue coniunction niſi, as by the aduerſatiue ſed: ſeeing here is no exception made of Iudas, as though he had bin giuen to Chriſt, and afterward had fallen away: which expoſition muſt needs be made, if the words be read, niſi filius perditionis.

Further, by the Croſſe of Chriſt, the Apoſtle vnderſtandeth ſynecdochically, the allſufficient, expiatorie, and ſatisfactorie ſacrifice of Chriſt vpon the croſſe, with the whole work of our redemption: in the ſauing knowledge whereof hee profeſſeth he will glorie, and boaſt. For Chriſt is made vnto vs wiſedome, righteouſneſſe ---- that as it is written, He that glorieth, ſhould glorie in the Lord: 1.Cor.1.30.31. euen to make D boaſt of him all the day long, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh. And the reaſon way Paul profeſſeth that hee will glorie onely in the Croſſe of Chriſt, is, becauſe Chriſt crucified is the treaſurie, and ſtore-houſe of the Church: ſeeing that in him are hid, not onely the treaſures of wiſedome and knowledge, Coloſſ.2.3. but of bountie and grace, Ioh.1.16. and of all ſpirituall bleſſings, Eph.1.3. For firſt, by Chriſt crucified, we haue reconciliation with God, remiſſion of ſinnes, and acceptation to eternall life. Secondly, we haue the peace of God which paſſeth all vnderſtanding, peace with God, with Angels, with men, with our ſelues, with the creatures. Thirdly, we recouer the right and title which we had in the creation to all the creatures and bleſſings of God. 1.Cor.3.22. Fourthly, all afflictions and iudgements, ceaſe to bee curſes and puniſhments, and become either trials, or corrections. Laſtly, death it ſelfe, is no death, but a ſleepe: for all that die in the Lord, are ſaid to ſleepe, and to reſt vpon their beds. Iſa. 57. 2. Indeed, if we looke vpon death through the glaſſe of the Law, it is the very downefall to eternall deſtruction: but if we conſider it as it is changed by the death of Chriſt, it is but a paſſage from the tranſitorie life, to eternall life. Chriſt by his death hath taken away ſinne, the ſting of death: ſo that though it ſeaze vpon vs, yet (hauing loſt it ſting) it cannot hurt vs. So that in a word, in Chriſt crucified, are all things that a man can glorie of. If we would glorie in knowledge, and wiſedome, He is the wiſedome of the Father, ſeeing that all treaſures of wiſedome and knowledge are hid in him: and therefore Paul deſired to know nothing among the Corinthians, but Chriſt and him crucified, 1. Cor. 2. 2. for this knowledge is eternall life, Ioh. 17. 3. If in the loue and fauour of great men: by him we are highly aduanced into the loue and fauour of God, Eph. 1. 6. If in honours and riches; by him we are made Kings and Prieſts, Apoc. 1. 6. If in libertie; by him we are deliuered from the hands of our enemies, Sinne, Satan, &c. Luk. 1. 74. If in pleaſures, comfort, and content: he is our felicitie, in him we are complete, Coloſſ. 2. By him we haue right to thoſe things which eye hath not ſeene, eare hath not heard, neither can the heart of man conceiue. It may be ſaid, why doth Paul glorie in the ignominious death of Chriſt, rather then in his glorious reſurrection, triumphant aſcenſion, and imperiall iuriſdiction now ſitting at the right hand of the Father? Anſw. Theſe are not excluded, but included in the Croſſe: yet hee nameth the croſſe rather then them. Firſt of all, to ſhew that vpon the croſſe, Chriſt did fully finiſh the worke of our redemption: for beeing now readie to giue vp the ghoſt, he ſaid, It is finiſhed. Ioh. 19. 30. this made Paul to deſire to know nothing but Chriſt, and him crucified. For in his humiliation ſtands our exaltation, in his weakneſſe, ſtands our ſtrength, in his ignominie, our glorie, in his death, our life. Secondly, to ſhew that he was not aſhamed of the croſſe of Chriſt, though neuer ſo ignominious in the eyes of the world. It had beene no great thing for Paul to haue gloried in the reſurrection, aſcenſion, wiſedome, power, Maieſtie of Chriſt, wherein the world can and doth glorie. But to glorie in the ſhamefull, contemptible, accurſed death of the croſſe, was a matter of great difficulty, and the worke of faith, iudging that which the world counts ignominious, to be moſt glorious: that which the learned Philoſophers counted fooliſhnes, to be the wiſedome of God. 1. Cor. 1. 24.

1. Cor. 2.

Auguſt. de vero. Apoſt. Serm. 20.

The Popiſh ſort abuſe this text two waies. Firſt, in applying it to the tranſient croſſe. Secondly, to the permanent or materiall croſſe. To the tranſient croſſe, in that they glorie in it: Firſt, as hauing a vertue in it, (when it is made in the ayre,) to driue away diuels. Secondly, beeing made in the forehead, to bee as an amulet againſt charmes, blaſtings, and other ſuch like caſualties. To the materiall croſſe, when they adorne it with gold and Iewels, and ſo cauſe it to bee carried in great pompe before them. When the Cruciferi weare it in their hats in a white, redde, or greene colour. When they put their confidence in it, & pray vnto it, Holy Croſſe, ſaue vs. This is Popiſh and carnall glorying in the croſſe, and not ſpirituall, in the death of Chriſt vpon the croſſe, of which onely the Apoſtle ſpeaks in this place.

The reaſon why hee would glorie in nothing but in the croſſe of Chriſt, followeth to be conſidered, in theſe words, By which the world is crucified to me, and I vnto the world. It is taken from a double effect, which Chriſt, or the croſſe of Chriſt, wrought in him: (for the words, ei δι by which, may be referred to either indifferently.) The firſt, to be crucified to the world: the ſecond, the world to be crucified to him. By the world, we are not to vnderſtand the frame of heauen and earth, nor the creatures, nor mankind: but honour, riches, pleaſures, fauour, wiſedome, glorie, and whatſoeuer is oppoſed to the kingdome of Chriſt, and the new creature. To be crucified to the world, is to be dead vnto it, to deſpiſe and contemne it, to count all the glorie of it to be no better then doung, in reſpect of Chriſt and his righteouſneſſe, as Paul did, Phil. 3. 8. The world is ſaid to be crucified to vs, when it hates and perſecutes vs, and accounts vs the filth and offſcouring of all things. 1. Cor. 4. 13. Yet here obſerue that we are crucified to the world, and the world to vs, by the vertue of the death of Chriſt, after a different manner. We are crucified to the world, properly by the Spirit of Chriſt, weaning our affections from the loue of this world. The world is crucified to vs, by the death of Chriſt, improperly, and by accident, in that wee are made ſuch as the world cannot but hate and perſecute: for ſeeing we are made new creatures, and choſen out of the world, therefore the world hateth vs. Ioh. 15. 19.

Here we ſee who thoſe are that can truly glory in the croſſe of Chriſt, namely, thoſe that are dead to the world, and the world to them: ſuch as feele the power of the Spirit of Chriſt crucifying the fleſh in them, with the affections and luſts. Others can no more glory of the croſſe of Chriſt, then he that glories of the victorie which his Prince hath gotten ouer his enemies, himſelfe in the meane time beeing a vaſſall, and ſlaue vnto them.

Secondly, that it is not ſufficient for a Chriſtian, that the world is crucified to him, except he alſo be crucified to the world, neither louing the world, nor the things in the world.

Thirdly, that to be crucified to the world, is not to profeſſe monaſticall life, and to be ſhut vp in a Monaſterie; but to renounce the world, and the corruptions that are therein, both in affection of heart, & practiſe of life.

Fourthly, wee are taught to carrie our ſelues to the world, as crucified and dead men, not to loue nor like it, to ſeeke or affect it, but to renounce and forſake it, with all the vanities, delights, and pleaſures thereof: and to be as dead men to our owne wicked wils, and to our carnall reaſon, letting them lie dead in vs, and ſuffering our ſelues to bee ruled, ordered, and guided by the Spirit of God: making his will our will, his word our wiſedome.

Fiftly, by this we may examine our hearts; for if wee haue our affections glued to the world, and ſet vpon the honours, pleaſures, profits, and preferments thereof, wee are worldlings indeed; for they that are Chriſts are crucified with Chriſt, Gal. 2. 20. and haue crucified the fleſh, with the affections and luſts, Gal. 5. 24. and therefore muſt needs be crucified to the world. A man that is hanged vpon a gybbet, ceaſeth from his thefts and murthers: ſo all that are indeede crucified with Chriſt to the world, ceaſe from their old offences. For as the Apoſtle reaſoneth, if we be riſen with Chriſt, wee ought to ſeeke the things that are aboue, and not the things that are vpon the earth, Col. 3. 1. 2. So if we bee dead with Chriſt from the vanities of the world, wee ought as dead men to abſtaine from all worldly luſts, which fight againſt the ſoule, 1. Pet. 2. 11.

15. For in Chriſt Ieſus neither circumciſion auaileth any thing, nor vncircumciſion, but a new creature.

Here the Apoſtle prooues his former aſſertion, v. 14. that he neither did, nor ought to glorie in any thing, ſaue in the croſſe of Chriſt, becauſe nothing is of any account in the kingdome of God, but a new creature. And this he prooues by the remoouall of all thoſe things, that are either oppoſite to, or diuers from a new creature, ſignified by circumciſion and vncircumciſion: and withall hee laies downe two concluſions. The firſt is, that in Chriſt Ieſus, that is, in the kingdome of grace, neither circumciſion, nor vncircumciſion are any thing, that is, are neither acceptable to God, nor auaileable to ſaluation: Vnder theſe two, ſynecdochically comprehending all outward priuiledges, and prerogatiues, dignities and regalities, or whatſoeuer can be named: vnder circumciſion compriſing the preheminence of the Iew, and the profit of circumciſion, which was much euery way, Rom. 3. 1. ſeeing that to them appertained the adoption, and the glorie, and the couenants, and the giuing of the law, and the ſeruice of God, and the promiſes, Rom. 9. 4. Vnder vncircumciſion containing the Gentiles, with all their wealth, wiſedome, ſtrength, lawes, policie, and whatſoeuer is of high account, and glorious in the eyes of the world. All which he excludes and accounts as nothing in reſpect of regeneratiō. For that which is highly accounted of amongſt men, is abomination in the ſight of God, Luk. 16. 15. Therefore, wiſedome, wealth, nobilitie, ſtrength, are nothing, 1. Cor. 1. 26. Outward callings, as to be King, or Keſar, Prophet, or Apoſtle. Outward actions of faſting, almes, prayer. Nay, kindred and alliance, as to bee mother, or brother of Chriſt, is nothing; for if the bleſſed Virgin had not borne Chriſt in her heart, as ſhe did in her wombe, ſhe ſhould neuer haue beene ſaued, Luk. 11. 27. 28. and if his kinſmen had not beene his brethren by ſpirituall adoption, as well as by naturall propagation, they ſhould haue had no inheritance in the kingdome of God, Mark. 3. 33. 35. Nay, the outward element of baptiſme, without the inward grace, is of no force; for it is not the waſhing away of the filth of the fleſh (that is acceptable to God) but the ſtipulation of a good conſcience, which maketh requeſt vnto God, 1. Pet. 3. 21. And if the communicant at the Lords table, doe not eate panem Dominum, as well as panem Domini (as Auguſtine ſpeaketh) that is, if he doe not receiue Chriſt ſpiritually by the hand of his faith, as he doth corporally receiue the element by his bodily hand, he receiueth vnworthily, and ſo eateth and drinketh his owne iudgement, 1. Cor. 11. 29 Now the reaſon why theſe outward things are nothing auaileable, is, becauſe the things that are accounted of with God, are ſpirituall and eternall, not temporall and carnall, as theſe are: which as they ſhall vtterly ceaſe in the kingdome of glory, Matth. 22. 30. (for then Chriſt will put downe all rule, authoritie, and power, 1. Cor. 15. 24.) ſo are they not of any moment or account in the kingdome of grace, as Paul teacheth, 2. Cor. 5. 16. Gal. 3. 28. Coloſſ. 3. 11. It may be ſaid, theſe priuiledges and outward things, as Prince and people, maſter and ſeruant, bond & free, &c. haue place in the kingdome of grace, ſeeing Chriſtianitie doth not aboliſh nature, nor ciuill policie. To which I anſwer, that man muſt bee conſidered two waies, in reſpect of the outward, or inward man. Conſider him as he is a member in ciuil ſocietie, as of the family, church, or commonwealth: there are ſundrie differences of perſons, as bond, free; magiſtrate, ſubiect; poore, rich, &c. in which ſenſe the Apoſtles exhortation taketh place, Wiues, ſubmit your ſelues to your husbands, Coloſſ. 3. 18. Children, obey your parents, v. 20. Seruants, be obedient to your maſters, verſ. 22. But if man be conſidered in reſpect of his ſpirituall eſtate, as hee is a member of the inuiſible, or Catholike Church, vnder ſpirituall gouernment, conſiſting in righteouſneſſe, peace of conſcience, and ioy in the holy Ghoſt, Rom. 14. 17. there is no diſtinction of calling, condition, or ſexe, For we are all one in Chriſt, Gal. 3. 28. or, Chriſt is all and in all things, Coloſſ. 3. 11. in that though we be many, yet are we but one bodie in Chriſt, Rom. 12. 5. ſeeing we are quickned with one Spirit Epheſ. 4. 4. The Popiſh opinion therefore which teacheth that there bee ſome outward callings and actions which commend vs to God, as to leade a ſingle life, to faſt, to vowe voluntarie pouerty, to performe regular obedience, to profeſſe monkery, to be buried in a friers cowle, or to abſtaine from theſe & theſe meates, is here condemned, when Paul ſaith, that outward priuiledges will not ſerue the turne, and that meat commendeth vs not to God, 1. Cor. 8. 8.

Againe, neither this, nor the like places, Gal. 3. 28. Col. 3. 11. doe any thing fauour the Anabaptiſticall fancy, of bringing in an anarchie, that is, an ataxy into Chriſtian ſociety; by taking away Chriſtian magiſtrates, and diſtinction betwixt maſter and ſeruant: for by the ſame reaſon wee may confound the ſexe of man and woman, for Paul ſaith, There is neither male nor female, but wee are all one in Chriſt, the meaning thereof is this, that although in reſpect of our inward or ſpirituall eſtate before God, there bee no ſuch difference; yet that hindreth not but there may be in reſpect of our outward eſtate.

Further, wee learne from hence, that no man is to thinke highly of himſelfe in regard of outward priuiledges, as birth, honour, wealth, fauour, nor to glorie in them, Ier. 9. 23. Rich men muſt not be high minded, 1. Tim. 6. 17. Nay, the King may not lift vp his minde aboue his brethren, Deut. 17. 20. Pauls example is notable, who accounted all the priuiledges which he had before his conuerſion, whileſt he was a Iew, (as that he was a citizen of Rome, a Phariſe, a great Rabbin, inſtructed by Gamaliel, of the tribe of Beniamin, circumciſed the 8. day, &c.) and after his conuerſion being a Chriſtian (as that hee was an Apoſtle, taken vp into the third heauen, &c.) to be as nothing, or worſe then nothing, euen as loſſe or dung in reſpect of beeing a new creature in Chriſt, that is, in reſpect of iuſtification, and ſanctification. And therefore we may not ſet our mindes too much vpon outward things, as riches, honours, pleaſures: ſeeing they are not auaileable to ſaluation.

Beſides, this teacheth all thoſe that are but in meane and baſe eſtate, to bee content: for outward priuiledges auaile nothing: outward wants and miſeries, hinder nothing. If a man be rich, he is nothing the nearer, and if he be poore, hee is not a whit the further off: it is the pouerty of the ſpirit, which makes a man rich in grace: for though the poore man bee the rich mans ſlaue, yet hee is the ſonne of God, and fellow-heyre with Chriſt: and though the rich man be the poore mans maſter, yet hee is the ſeruant of Chriſt, as Paul ſaith, Hee that is called beeing a ſeruant, is Gods free man: and hee that is called beeing free, is Chriſts ſeruant, 1. Cor. 7. 22.

Laſtly, this croſſeth the opinion of the multitude, who think that if a man be increaſed in riches, graced with fauour, aduanced, with honour, that he is a godly, wiſe, religious man; and that religion which he profeſſeth, is the truth. This is nothing elſe, but to haue the faith of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt in reſpect of perſons, Iam. 2. 1.

The ſecond concluſion is, that the new creature is the onely thing that is acceptable to God. Circumciſion, &c. auaileth nothing, but a new creature. By the new creature, the Apoſtle vnderſtandeth the Image of God, or renouation of the whole man, both in the ſpirits of our mindes, and in the affections of our hearts, which is alſo called the new man. Wee ſhall the better conceiue it by the contrary, namely, by the olde man; which is want of knowledge in the minde, and delight in ignorance: want of ſubiection and conformity in the will, and rebellion withall: want of holineſſe in the affections, and proneneſſe to euill. The new man then, is the reſtoring of all theſe defects. For the vnderſtanding hereof, conſider that there are three things in the ſoule: The ſubſtance of the ſoule: the faculties or powers of the ſoule: and the qualities of theſe faculties. Now neither the ſubſtance nor faculties are loſt by the fall, but onely the qualities of the faculties: as when an inſtrument is out of tune, the fault is not in the ſubſtance of the inſtrument, nor in the ſound, but in the diſproportiō, or iarre in the ſound: therefore the qualities onely are renued by grace. Theſe qualities or habits, are either in the vnderſtanding: or will and affections. The qualitie in the vnderſtanding, is knowledge. Coloſſians 3. 10. To haue put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge, after the Image of him that created him. In the will and affections, they are principally two, righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, both which are in truth and ſinceritie, without all hypocriſie. Epheſians 4. 24. Put on the new man, which after God is created in righteouſneſſe, and true holineſſe: where holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, are oppoſed to concupiſcences, and luſts of the olde man; Truth (which hath relation to both) to ſpirituall guile, and diſſimulation: ſo that each of theſe qualities, haue two parts, a want of the contrary euill, and a poſitiue quality or habit of goodneſſe. Holineſſe reſpecteth God, and containeth all duties of pietie, contained in the firſt table: Righteouſneſſe, reſpects man, and the creatures, and compriſeth all the duties enioyned in the ſecond table. Truth reſpecteth the manner how both the former are to be practiſed, viz. with an vpright and ſincere heart, free from all hypocriſie and deceit. Theſe three making a perfect harmony in all the faculties of the ſoule: Holineſſe performing all the duties of pietie: righteouſneſſe the duties of humanity: truth ſeaſoning both the former with ſincerity.

But (may ſome ſay) how is the new creature oppoſed to all externall things, or ſaid to be of any force in the kingdom of Chriſt, ſeeing it is not auaileable to iuſtifie a man before God, beeing ſtained with manifolde imperfections? For anſwer whereof, we are to know, that outward things are ſometime oppoſed to Chriſt, and his righteouſneſſe, as Coloſſ. 3. 11. There is neither Iew nor Grecian, circumciſion nor vncircumciſion, &c. but Chriſt is all, and in all things: ſometime to faith, as Gal. 5. 6. Neither circumciſion auaileth any thing, nor vncircumciſion, but faith which worketh by loue: ſometime to the new creature or ſanctification, as in this place, and 1. Cor. [illegible] 19. Circumciſion is nothing, &c. but the keeping of the commandements of God. But the ſenſe is all one, for they are oppoſed to Chriſt, as to the matter of our iuſtification: to faith as to the inſtrument apprehending it: to the new creature, as to the ſigne of them both.

Further, where both here, and 2. Cor. 5. 17. the Image of God is called a new creature, or as it is in the originall [καινὴ κτίσις] a new creation, the meaning is not, that either the ſubſtance, or faculties of the ſoule are created anew, but that the worke of regeneration is wholly to be aſcribed to God alone, (not as though we were ſtockes or ſtones without life or motion,) but becauſe God doth create theſe new qualities in vs, quickening vs when wee were dead in ſinne, and working in vs both the will and the deede, Phil. 2. 13.

If regeneration then bee a new creation, it muſt needes follow, that before our conuerſion wee were not onely dead, but euen flatte nothing, in godlineſſe and grace. By which wee ſee what to iudge of the Semi-pelagian hereſie, which teacheth, that a man by an internum principium, may diſpoſe himſelfe to will that which is truely good: and that man is not ſtarke dead in ſinne, but onely ſicke or wounded and halfe dead, as the man which fell among theeues, Luk. 10. or as a priſoner that is ſhackled and manackled, who can walke of himſelfe, if his fetters be taken from him: ſo we (if Chriſt looſe the chaines of our ſinnes) haue power of our ſelues to moue our ſelues. VVhich doctrine wee know is moſt iniurious to the mercie of God, and moſt derogatorie to the merits of Chriſt, ſeeing it makes him in the worke of our ſaluation, to be but cauſa remouens, prohibens, (which as Logicians teach) is but cauſa ſine qua non, which in truth is no cauſe at all. So that they make themſelues their owne Sauiours, and Chriſt to bee but an inſtrument whereby they ſaue themſelues: for if hee doe but remooue the impediment, they without any more adoe, are able to mooue and act themſelues. When as the conuerſion of a ſinner is as great a worke, as the creation of heauen and earth: for Paul calleth it here a new creation. Nay, here is a greater power required (if I may ſo ſpeake) then that whereby the world was created. For though an infinite power be required aſwell to the creating of the great world, as the recreating or regenerating of the leſſe world, as our Sauiour Chriſt ſignifies, Mar. 2. 9. Whether is it eaſier to ſay to the ſicke of the palſie, Thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee, or to ſay, Ariſe, take vp thy bed and walke? yet the holy Ghoſt ſeemeth, of the two, to make it more difficult, to create a new heart, then a new world, in that ſpeaking of the creation of the world, he ſaith it was made by the word of God, By the word of the Lord the heauens were made, Pſal. 33. 6. or by his fingers, When I conſider the heauens, the works of thy fingers, Pſ. 8. 3. or by his hands, Pſ. 102. 25. The heauens are the works of thy hands. But the redemption of man, and the conuerſion of a ſinner, is ſaid to be wrought by the arme of God. Marie in her Magnificat, ſaith, He hath ſhewed ſtrength with his arme, Luk. 2. 51. nay, hee was faine to ſet his ſide to it, and it made him ſhedde many a teare, and ſweate as it were droppes of blood, trickling downe to the ground, Luke 22. 44. Before our conuerſion wee are like the drie bones, Ezechiel 37. for as when the winde of God came vpon them, bone came to bone, and were ioyned with ſinewes, and couered with fleſh, and had their ſenſes reſtored: ſo when the Spirit of God, like the Fauonian winde, bloweth vpon vs, it reuiueth vs againe, giuing vs a new life, new ſenſes, a new heart, new wils, and affections: for all olde things paſſe away, and all things become new, 2. Cor. 5. 17. For it opens the eyes of our vnderſtanding, making vs diſcerne of things that differ, Epheſ. 1. 18. Phil. 1. 10. it boareth a new eare of obedience in vs, Pſal. 40. 6. and giueth vs a new taſte, not to ſauour the things of the fleſh, but of the ſpirit, Rom. 8. 5.

Further, this ſerues to detect the naturall Popery of the multitude, and of our owne hearts, when we perſwade our ſelues (though falſely) that though we goe on in our ſinnes, yet that we can repent when we liſt. VVhen as the Prophet ſaith, O Lord, I know that the way of man is not in himſelfe: and Paul ſaith, that it is as great a worke to create a new heart, as to create a new world: for regeneration is a new creation, 2. Cor. 5. 17. Auguſtine ſaith well, He that will grant pardon to him that repents, will not alway giue repentance to him that ſinneth.

Ier. 10. 23.

Qui dabit pœnitenti veniam nō dabit peccanti pœnitentiam.

Againe, in the ſenſe that Paul calleth the Image of God, a new creature, or the new man, and corruption the olde man: we graunt, that our religion is new, and popiſh religion is olde. For as the new man is the reſtored Image of God, in which Adam was firſt created, though afterwards defaced by his owne inuentions, Eccleſ. 7. 31. So our religion is the reſtored or reformed doctrine firſt taught by the Apoſtles, which afterward was corrupted by mens deuices. Albeit in Tertullians ſenſe, ours is the older religion, and theirs the new: as the Image of God is the old man, and corruption the new.

Quod antiquiſſimum, id veriſſimum.

Vſe. If we be not changed in our liues, but remaine olde Adams ſtill, euen the ſame men we were before, in minding, willing, affecting earthly things, and faſhioning our ſelues to the guiſe of the world; wee are no new creatures, though wee promiſe and proteſt neuer ſo much: wee are but hypocrites, deceiuing others, and our ſelues alſo. For where this new creature is, there is a change in all the faculties and powers of ſoule and bodie: the minde is not ſet vpon the world, but mindeth heauenly things: the will, affections, and conuerſation of the whole man, is in heauen, Philip. 3.20. For the ſpirit of regeneration is like the leauen which a woman tooke and hid in three peckes of meale till all was leauened: for after the ſame manner, by a ſecret operation it altereth the minde, will, affections. If any be in Chriſt (ſaith the Apoſtle) hee is a new creature, olde things are paſſee away; beholde, all thing are become new, 2.Cor.5.17. If therefore we be new creatures, why leade wee not a new life? if we be changed in affection, why are we not changed in conuerſation?

But by this we may perceiue, that al which are Chriſtians in profeſſion, are not Chriſtians in conuerſation: all that are waſhed with the outward Element of water, are not waſhed with the inward baptiſme, the lauer of regeneration: as firſt, thoſe that are as good fellowes (that is) as badde as euer they were before, and make no conſcience of ſinne. Secondly, ſuch as are no more but ciuill honeſt men, like thoſe honeſt men which raiſed perſecution againſt Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their coaſts, Act. 13. 50. Thirdly, worldly wiſe men which ſauour of nothing but the world. Laſtly, ſuch as haue ſome loue and liking of the word, and are in ſome ſort outwardly conformable thereunto, hauing ſome legall ſorrow for ſinne ariſing from legall terrors: but haue no thorow change nor renouation.

Laſtly, wee may not maruell if the world hate and maligne thoſe that are new creatures: ſeeing they neither minde nor affect the ſame things. For there can bee no true loue, where there is contrariety of iudgements, wils, affections, which hath beene, is, and will be, betwixt thoſe that are borne of the fleſh, and thoſe that are borne of God, Gen. 3. 15.

16 And as many as walke according to this rule, peace ſhall be vpon them, and mercy, and vpon the Iſrael of God.

Here Paul commends this glorying in the croſſe of Chriſt, and ſtudie of pietie, in becomming a new creature, as the onely rule of faith and manners, which all teachers and hearers were to obſerue and follow: Enforcing the keeping and obſeruing of this double duty, by the fruite and benefit that comes thereby, ſpecified here by peace and mercie. In the words two things are generally to bee conſidered: Firſt, the duty of walking, in theſe words, As many as walke according to this rule: Secondly, the reaſon or motiue to the practiſe thereof, in theſe, Peace ſhall bee vpon them, and mercie: which is amplified by the generality thereof, that is, ſhall light vpon as many as walke according thereto, and vpon the Iſrael of God. The duty is, that we walke according to this canon, or rule: the* word tranſlated walke, ſignifyeth not ſimply to walke, but to walke warily, and circumſpectly (as it is expounded Epheſians 5. 15.) or to walke by rule, in order, and meaſure, without treading aſide, but making ſtraight ſteppes to our feete. Hebrewes 12. 13. Pauls rule which wee muſt walke by, is faith in Chriſt, called here glorying in the croſſe of Chriſt: and repentance towards God: called regeneration or the new creature: which is rightly called a rule of faith, and manners of things to be beleeued, and practiſed, becauſe by it all doctrines and actions are to bee examined: nay, the Scripture is therefore called Canonicall, becauſe it ſets downe an expoſition of this rule: there being nothing from the firſt chapter in Gen. to the laſt words in the Apocal. which aimeth not at one of theſe two, either repentance towards God, or faith in Chriſt.

* στοιχεῖν.

Here all miniſters are taught what rule to follow in preaching the word, or building the Church of God, namely faith, and repentance, the doctrine of the croſſe, and conuerſion, or the new creature. And all hearers according to what rule to order their liues and actions. For this metaphor of walking, and that by a rule or line, ſhewes that wee are trauellers or pilgrimes, that this world is a ſtrange countrey, that wee are to goe to another, that the world is an endles labyrinth, in which we ſhall for euer loſe our ſelues, except we be guided by this rule.

And here we ſee that there is a certen rule for the regulating of all things appertaining to faith and manners, though we cannot apply it, nor vſe it as wee ſhould: The fault is in vs, not in the rule.

Whereas Paul ſaith as many as walke according to this rule, hee ſhewes that Chriſtians haue but one only rule which they are to follow, and according to which they muſt frame their liues; for the Apoſtle exhorts vs that wee all proceede by one rule, Philip. 3. 16. Therefore the Papiſts doe notoriouſly offend not onely in wreſting, peruerting, and breaking this rule, but in making other new Lesbian rules, which they preſcribe as neceſſary to be followed: as the rule of S. Francis, of Saint Dominick. S. Auſten. S. Ierome, &c. holding one mans baptiſme better then another, one mans profeſſion holier then another, one mans rule perfecter then another: following any rule rather then Chriſts, and ſo diuide his ſeameles coate. And that theſe ſundry rules of Monkes are vaine & wicked, it may appeare: Firſt becauſe they agree not with this rule of Paul, they being many, it but one: it directing and leading to Chriſt, they leading to by-paths, obſcuring the merit of Chriſt, and preſcribing many things partly friuolous, partly impious, contrary to faith and good life. Secondly, in that they agree not among themſelues; euery ſect hauing his own proper orders, and contending their owne to bee better, holier, perfecter then the reſt. Thirdly, in that they deuide into diuers ſects thoſe that ought to be all one in Chriſt, for which cauſe Paul cals the Corinthians carnall, in holding ſome of Paul, others of Apollos, 1. Cor. 3. 4. For how can they be ſpirituall, who in ſpeech, action, habite and attire, profeſſion and conuerſation, profeſſe nothing but ſchiſme and diſſention? Ierome againſt the Luciferians ſaith, Sicubi audieris eos qui dicuntur Chriſtiani, non a Domino Ieſu Chriſto, ſed a quoquam alio nuncupari, puta Marcionitas, Valentinianos, Montenſes, Campates, ſcito non eccleſiam Chriſti, ſed Antichriſti eſſe Synagogam: that is, whereſoeuer thou ſhalt heare thoſe that are called Chriſtians not to haue their name from our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, but from ſome other, as Marcionites, Valentinians, Montenſes, Campites, know thus much, that they are not the Church of Chriſt, but the Synagogue of Antichriſt. Nay further, ſolitary life in leauing the ſociety of men, and ſequeſtring themſelues from all company, which is the ground, and generall practiſe of Monkiſh Eremites (for Cœnobites to ſpeak properly are no Monks, as the word teacheth) is againſt the very light of nature it ſelfe. Firſt, becauſe it is naturall for men to liue together; nay it is the ground of the family, the Church, and common-wealth. There was neuer nation ſo barbarous or ſauage, but endeauoured to liue together by aſſociating themſelues, in cities, townes, villages, caues, woods, tents, or ſome other way, according to the cuſtome of the countrey: which generall practiſe of all, argues the impreſſion of nature in all. Secondly, ſpeech is giuen men for this ende, that they might conuerſe together: for it were little or nothing auaileable if men ſhould liue alone, and conuerſe with none. Thirdly, ſundry vertues beſtowed vpon men, as iuſtice, fortitude, loue, and friendſhip, ſhould bee giuen in vaine, if men ſhould liue ſolitary, ſequeſtred from all company. Fourthly, mans umbecillitie argues thus much; for whereas all other creatures are armed by nature, as the Bull with hornes, the Boare with tuskes, other with teeth, feathers, ſwiftneſſe, &c. man is borne feeble and naked, not able to prouide or defend himſelfe, but onely by helpe of others; which is an argument that hee is borne to liue in ciuill ſociety, and to bee holpen by others. Laſtly, man is borne to doe good to himſelfe and others, in ſome eſtate and calling, 1. Corinthians 7. But hee that liueth alone can doe no good to others, nor receiue good from them: For whereas they pleade for themſelues, that they leaue their particular callings, and betake themſelues to Hermetages, that ſo they may renounce the world; I anſwer, that to renounce the world, is not to leaue their places and callings, whereunto God hath called them, but to renounce the corruption that is in the world through luſt, 2. Pet. 1. 4. Theſe and the like reaſons made the Philoſopher to ſay, That he which left the ſocietie of men, and betooke himſelfe to a ſolitarie life, was either a God, or a beaſt.

Ariſtot. Polit. lib. 1. cap. 1.

By this wee may ſee what Lesbian rules they follow; and how that which they account the higheſt degree of perfection, is in truth the depth of abomination: that it hath beene the cauſe of much wickedneſſe, as of idlenes, hypocriſie, whoredome, ſodomitry, beſides the cruell murdering of many poore innocents. Therefore let neither their hypocriſie, nor the Churches pretended authority, nor the long receiued cuſtome, any thing mooue vs, but that leauing them, wee follow the rule of Paul in this place: for they that walke according to it, peace ſhall be vpon them, and mercie. By peace wee are to vnderſtand outward peace, as proſperity, and good ſucceſſe in all things we goe about. For whatſoeuer they doe ſhall proſper, Pſal. 1. 3. And peace with the creatures; as firſt with the good Angels, Coloſſians 1. 20. who are miniſtring ſpirits, ſent forth to miniſter, for their ſakes that ſhall be heires of ſaluation, Hebr. 1. 14. Pitching their tents about them, Pſalm. 34. 7. And bearing them in their hands as a nourſe her childe, Pſalme 91. 12. Secondly, with the godly. The Prophet ſaith, that in the kingdome of Chriſt, The wolfe ſhall dwell with the lambe, the leopard ſhall lie with the kidde, &c. that is, men of fierce, ſauage, and woluiſh natures, ſhall be ſo changed by grace, as that they ſhall liue peaceably and louingly together. Thirdly, with the wicked their enemies, partly because they ſeeke to liue in peace, as Dauid ſaith of himſelfe, I labour for peace, Pſalme 120. verſe 7. partly becauſe God ſo inclines their hearts, as that they are peaceable. Laſtly, with the beaſts of the field, and all the creatures. The Lord promiſeth to make a couenant with the wild beaſts, and fowles of the heauen, in behalfe of his people, that they may ſleepe ſafely, Hoſea 2. 18. But the peace which is principally meant in this place, is peace of conſcience, which paſſeth all vnderſtanding, Philip. 4. 7. Which is peace with God, beeing reconciled and at one with him, Rom. 5. 1. Beeing iuſtified by faith, wee haue peace with God. And peace with our ſelues, which is three-fold, as it is oppoſed to a three-fold diſſention in man. The firſt is, when the will and affections renewed by grace, are obedient to the minde enlightened by the ſpirit, and at peace therewith: oppoſed to the diſſention that is betwixt rebellious affections, and naturall reaſon. The ſecond is, when grace (though ſtrongly aſſailed) giueth corruption the foile, whereupon followeth the calming and quieting of the minde, oppoſed to the combate between the fleſh & the ſpirit. The third is, when the conſcience perſwaded of remiſſion of ſinnes, and reconciliation with God, ceaſeth to accuſe & terrifie, and begins to excuſe, and comfort vs, oppoſed to the conflict that a diſtreſſed conſcience hath with legall terrours, and the anger of God. By mercy (which is the cauſe of this peace) are vnderſtood, all ſpirituall bleſſings, which flow vnto vs from the loue, and fauour of God in Chriſt, as remiſſion of ſinnes, iuſtification, ſanctification, and eternal life it ſelfe. The words ἐπ᾽ αὐτούς, vpon them, haue great emphaſis, ſignifying, that theſe bleſſings come down from heauen, and light vpon them that follow this rule, and that they cannot be hindered by the malice of men.

Eſa. 11. 6.

Let the Pope then anathematize, curſe, & excommunicate vs, both Prince and people, becauſe we tread not in the ſteps of his faith, but of the faith of our father Abraham, and walke not according to his rule, but according to this rule of the Apoſtle: for we need not feare his thunderbolts nor curſes, ſeeing the cauſeleſſe curſe ſhall neuer come, Prou. 26. 2. for what though he curſe, if God doe bleſſe? It was the thing that comforted Dauid being curſed of his enemies, in that though they did curſe, yet God would bleſſe, Pſal. 109. 28. and let vs comfort our ſelues in this, that he will curſe them that curſe his people, Gen. 12. 3.

Againe, if peace and mercy ſhall be vpon them that walke according to this rule, then wrath and indignation ſhall light vpon thoſe that follow any other rule, or deuiſe any other way, or ſet downe any other meanes of ſaluation beſides, or contrary to this. Falſe therefore is the opinion of Puckſius, that if a man leade an outward ciuill life, hee may bee ſaued in any religion, the Iew in his Iudaiſme, the Turke in his Mahometiſme, the Heathen in his Paganiſme. For they that walke not in this way, according to this rule, do but weary themſelues in endleſſe Labyrinths: and ſo walking without line or rule in their crooked waies, ſhall be led with workers of iniquity, when as peace ſhall be vpon Iſrael, Pſal. 125. 5. Other vſes are made of mercy and peace, Pag. 11. and 12. to which places I referre the reader.

The Apoſtle addeth, that peace and mercy ſhall bee vpon all them that walke according to this rule, and vpon the Iſrael of God. There is a double Iſrael mentioned by Paul, Iſrael according to the fleſh, 1. Cor. 10. 18. and the Iſrael of God: as there is a two-fold Iew, one outward, in the fleſh: another inward, in the ſpirit, Romanes 2. 18, 19. By the Iſrael of God, the Apoſtle meaneth all ſuch as are like to Nathaniel, who was a true Iſraelite, in whom there was no guile, Ioh. 1. 47. whether they bee the faithfull Gentiles, or beleeuing Iewes. And he makes mention of the Iſrael of God, partly by reaſon of the aduerſaries, who bragged ſo much of their father Abraham, and that they were the onely true Iſraelites, and yet were no Iſraelites, becauſe they troad not in the ſteps of the faith of Abraham, partly for the weake conuerts, who thought it a hard thing to be ſeuered from the ſociety of thoſe, to whome the promiſes were made; partly for vs Gentiles, that wee might know that all are not Iſrael, which are of Iſrael, Rom. 9. 6. but that all they which are of faith are bleſſed with faithfull Abraham, Gal. 3. verſe 9. ſeeing that God is no accepter of perſons, Acts 10. 34.

v. 17 From hence forth let no man put me to buſineſſe: for I beare in my bodie the markes of the Lord Ieſus.

Here the Apoſtle layes downe his laſt admonition, preuenting an obiection that might bee made by the falſe apoſtles, or the Galatians. For whereas it might be ſaid, that Paul ſought himſelfe and the world, ſhunned perſecution, and therefore ioyned circumciſion to Chriſt, to pleaſe the Iewes, and followed not his owne rule v. 16. hee takes away this obiection with great authority, when hee ſaith, From henceforth let no man put mee to buſines: And withall hee addes a reaſon of it, For I beare in my body the markes of the Lord Ieſus: as if hee ſhould ſay, The bonds, the impriſonments, the ſtripes, wounds, and ſcarres in my body, do ſufficiently teſtifie my fidelity in my miniſtery, for if I had preached circumciſion, I ſhould not haue ſuffered perſecution. The words may be, and are taken in a double ſenſe. Firſt thus, The falſe apoſtles, and you Galatians (by their inſtigation) haue beene troubleſome vnto me, by falſe accuſations and ſlaunderous imputations, as that I taught circumciſion and the obſeruation of the ceremoniall Law, as a thing neceſſary to ſaluation, & ſo you haue made a reuolt from my doctrine, and by that meanes haue doubled & tripled my labour and paines among you: But from henceforth ceaſe to be troubleſome vnto me, you may take experiment and proofe from mee; the markes that I beare in my body doe ſufficiently witneſſe and ſeale the truth of my doctrine, and my fidelity in mine Apoſtleſhippe, as alſo whoſe diſciple I am, Moſes or Chriſts, and what rule I follow, Iudaiſme or Chriſtianiſme. Secondly, they carry this ſenſe, I haue ſaid, that they which walke according to this rule, in glorying onely in the croſſe of Chriſt, peace ſhall be vpon them, and mercy, and vpon the Iſraell of God; And I ſay againe and againe, that wee ought to ſtriue and contend for it, to obſerue and keepe it, as a thing moſt neceſſary to ſaluation: τοῦ λοιποῦ, as for other things not neceſſary to ſaluation, as circumciſion, &c. Let no man trouble mee in the execution of mine Apoſtolicall function, or hinder the courſe of the Goſpell, by vrging any other doctrine or ceremony contrary or diuerſe from this, as neceſſary to ſaluation: This one thing is neceſſary, other things are needleſſe and fruitleſſe in compariſon, therefore neither I, nor the Church of God ought to be troubled with them. This latter ſenſe I take to be more agreeable to the text. Some make the ſenſe to bee this, I haue had many troubles and conflicts; and haue many markes and ſcarres in my body inflicted by perſecutours: therefore bee no more troubleſome vnto me: for it were too much to adde wormwood to my gall, affliction to affliction. Here we ſee the condition of the Apoſtle, and the eſtate of all faithfull miniſters; that it is full of trouble and moleſtations. For as they are accounted men of turbulent ſpirits, diſquieters of the ſtate, as Elias was, 1.King.21. and Ieremy, chapter 15.18. and Paul, Act.16.20. & 21.28. So they are moſt troubled with factious oppoſers and falſe teachers, who labour to bring into the Church, things partly needles and ſuperfluous, partly hurtfull and pernicious. Thus the falſe apoſtles troubled the paſtours and Church of Galatia, Gal.5.10. and the Churches of Antiochia, Syria, Cilicia, Act.15.24.

Secondly, conſider how that the moſt and greateſt troubles of the Church, haue beene for matters not of ſubſtance, but of circumſtance, partly not neceſſary, partly contrary to the rule: which notwithſtanding haue bin vrged with fire and fagot, as things moſt neceſſary.

Laſtly, he that ſtands forth for the defence of Gods truth (as Paul did, and all Miniſters ought to doe) muſt let goe all circumſtances, and looke to the ſubſtance. Not with Martha to trouble himſelfe about many needles things, when as one thing onely is neceſſary. Luke 10.41.

The reaſon followeth in theſe words: For I beare in my body the markes of the Lord Ieſus.

The word in the Originall tranſlated markes, doth properly ſignifie prints with an hotte yron. But it is here vſed generally to ſignifie any blemiſh, skarre, or marke whatſoeuer, whether ſuch as was woont to be ſet vpon ſeruants bought with money, (which among the Iewes was a hole in the eare pearced with a naule, Exodus 21.6. Deut.15.17.) or vpon ſlaues taken in the warres, as the Samians ſet vpon an Athenian captiue the ſigne of an owle: and the Athenians vpon a Samian the ſigne of a ſhippe. Or vpon malefactours, as a hole in the eare, an F in the fore-head, a brand in the hand. Or ſuch a marke, as ſome thinke was ſet vpon Cain, Gen.4.15. or the marke of God, Ezech.9.4. or of the beaſt, Apoc.16.2.

στίγματα. vide Lipſium de militia Romana. lib.1. dialogo 9.

The markes of Chriſt are of two ſorts, either inward and inuiſible: or outward and viſible. The inuiſible markes are two. The firſt, is Gods eternall Election, which is called Gods ſeale or marke, 2.Tim.2.19. The foundation of God remaineth ſure, & hath this ſeale, The Lord knoweth who are his. All the Elect are marked with this marke, Apocal.7. and by it Chriſt knoweth and acknowledgeth them for his ſheepe, Ioh.10. The ſecond is regeneration, or the imprinting of the defaced image of God in the ſoule. By this marke (which is the true indeleble character, neuer to bee blotted out) are all beleeuers ſealed, 2.Cor.1.22. Eph.1.13. Theſe inward inuiſible markes of Election and Regeneration, are in the ſoule, and therefore not here meant, for he ſpeakes of bodily markes, I beare in my body the markes. The outward viſible markes are two-folde: Typicall, or Reall. Typicall, as circumciſion, which was a marke ſet in the fore-skin of the fleſh, Rom.4.11. The blood of the Paſchall Lambe, wherewith the houſes of the Iſraelites were marked, when the firſt borne of the Egyptians were ſlaine by the deſtroying Angel. And baptiſme is of the ſame kinde: for by Baptiſme Chriſtians are diſtinguiſhed from Iewes, Turkes, Infidels whatſoeuer. Reall markes of Chriſt, are either in his naturall, or in his myſticall body. In his naturall body, the wounds which were giuen him in his hands, feete, and ſides, which he ſhewed to his diſciples after his reſurrection, Ioh.20.27. which, whether they be now to be ſeene in his glorified body (as ſome affirme) or aboliſhed (as others,) I leaue to the Reader as a thing vncerten, and meerely coniectural, ſeeing there is nothing in Scripture either for it, or againſt it, that doth neceſſarily conclude it. But of theſe markes, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh not in this place. The markes in his myſticall body, are thoſe, which are in his mẽbers, as wounds, skarres, whippings, maimednes, &c. of which we reade, 2.Cor.4.10. Euery where we beare about in our body the dying of the Lord Ieſus: and, 2.Cor.11.24,25. Fiue times receiued I fourtie ſtripes ſaue one: I was thriſe beaten with roddes, once ſtoned, &c. And theſe the Apoſtle here calleth the markes of Chriſt, becauſe they are inflicted for the profeſſion of Chriſt, and the Goſpel: as the wounds and skarres of a ſouldier may bee called his Princes wounds and skarres, becauſe they are had in his cauſe and quarell. Now thoſe in his naturall body differ from theſe in his myſticall: Firſt, in that they are meritorious, for by his ſtripes wee are healed, 1.Pet.2.24. Theſe in his myſticall body are glorious in the ſight of God (as the death of his Saints is,) yet not meritorious. Secondly, thoſe in his naturall body, were prophecied of before in particular, Pſal.22.16. They pearced my hands and my feete. Theſe in his myſticall body only in generall, that wee ſhould be conformable vnto him.

In this place Paul ſpeaketh of the latter only, which were in his owne perſon, and this hee doth, not to put any merit in them, (as Saint Francis did) but to teſtifie himſelfe to be a faithfull ſeruant of Chriſt. And he further meets with the falſe apoſtles, who would needes haue had the Galatians circumciſed, that ſo they might glorie in the fleſh, as hauing ſet the marke of circumciſion in the fore-skin of their fleſh. As if he ſhould ſay, I ſet not markes in other mens fleſh, to glory of them, as the falſe apoſtles doe: but I beare about in my bodie the marks of the Lord Ieſus, theſe are the ſignes of true Apoſtleſhip, reconciliation with God, ceaſeth to accuſe & terrifie, and begins to excuſe, and comfort vs, oppoſed to the conflict that a diſtreſſed conſcience hath with legall terrours, and the anger of God. By mercy (which is the cauſe of this peace) are vnderſtood, all ſpirituall bleſſings, which flow vnto vs from the loue, and fauour of God in Chriſt, as remiſſion of ſinnes, iuſtification, ſanctification, and eternal life it ſelfe. The words ἐπ' αὐτούς, vpon them, haue great emphaſis, ſignifying, that theſe bleſſings come downe from heauen, and light vpon them that follow this rule, and that they cannot be hindered by the malice of men.

Let the Pope then anathematize, curſe, & excommunicate vs, both Prince and people, becauſe we tread not in the ſteps of his faith, but of the faith of our father Abraham, and walke not according to his rule, but according to this rule of the Apoſtle: for we need not feare his thunderbolts nor curſes, ſeeing the cauſeleſſe curſe ſhall neuer come, Prou. 26. 2. for what though he curſe, if God doe bleſſe? It was the thing that comforted David being curſed of his enemies, in that though they did curſe yet God would bleſſe. Pſal. 109. 28. and let vs comfort our ſelues in this, that he will curſe them that curſe his people, Gen. 12. 3.

Againe, if peace and mercy ſhall be vpon them that walke according to this rule, then wrath and indignation ſhall light vpon thoſe that follow any other rule, or deuiſe any other way, or ſet downe any other meanes of ſaluation beſides, or contrary to this. Falſe therefore is the opinion of Puckſius, that if a man leade an outward ciuill life, hee may bee ſaued in any religion, the Iew in his Iudaiſme, the Turke in his Mahometiſme, the Heathen in his Paganiſme. For they that walke not in this way, according to this rule, do but weary themſelues in endleſſe Labyrinths: and ſo walking without line or rule in their crooked waies, ſhall be led with workers of iniquity, when as peace ſhall be vpon Iſrael, Pſal. 125. 5. Other vſes are made of mercy and peace, Pag. 11. and 12. to which places I referre the reader.

The Apoſtle addeth, that peace and mercy ſhall bee vpon all them that walke according to this rule, and vpon the Iſrael of God. There is a double Iſrael mentioned by Paul, Iſrael according to the fleſh, 1. Cor. 10. 18. and the Iſrael of God: as there is a two-fold Iew, one outward, in the fleſh: another inward, in the ſpirit, Romanes 2. 28, 29. By the Iſrael of God, the Apoſtle meaneth all ſuch as are like to Nathanael, who was a true Iſraelite, in whom there was no guile, Ioh. 1. 47. whether they bee the faithfull Gentiles, or beleeuing Iewes. And he makes mention of the Iſrael of God, partly by reaſon of the aduerſaries, who bragged ſo much of their father Abraham, and that they were the onely true Iſraelites, and yet were no Iſraelites, becauſe they troad not in the ſteps of the faith of Abraham; partly for the weake conuerts, who thought it a
A hard thing to be ſeuered from the ſociety of thoſe, to whome the promiſes were made;
partly for vs Gentiles, that wee might know that all are not Iſrael, which are of Iſrael, Rom.
9. 6. but that all they which are of faith are bleſſed with faithfull Abraham, Gal. 3. verſe
9. ſeeing that God is no accepter of perſons, Acts 10. 34.

v. 17 From hence forth let no man put me to buſineſſe: for I beare in my bodie the markes of the Lord Ieſus.

Here the Apoſtle layes downe his laſt admonition, preuenting an obiection that might bee made by the falſe apoſtles, or the Galatians. For whereas it might be ſaid, that Paul ſought himſelfe and the world, ſhun-
B ned perſecution, and therefore ioyned circumciſion to Chriſt, to pleaſe the Iewes, and followed not his owne rule v. 16. hee takes away this obiection with great authority, when hee ſaith, From henceforth let no man put mee to buſines: And withall hee addes a reaſon of it,
For I beare in my body the markes of the Lord Ieſus: as if hee ſhould ſay, The bonds, the impriſonments, the ſtripes, wounds, and ſcarres in my body, do ſufficiently teſtifie my fidelity in my miniſtery, for if I had preached circumciſion, I ſhould not haue ſuffered perſecution. The words may be, and are taken in a double ſenſe. Firſt thus, The falſe apoſtles, and you Galatians (by their inſtigation) haue beene troubleſome vnto me, by falſe accuſa-C tions and ſlaunderous imputations, as that I taught circumciſion and the obſeruation of the ceremoniall Law, as a thing neceſſary to ſaluation, & ſo you haue made a reuolt from my doctrine, and by that meanes haue doubled & tripled my labour and paines among you: But from henceforth ceaſe to be trou-bleſome vnto me, you may take experiment and proofe from mee; the markes that I beare in my body doe ſufficiently witneſſe and ſeale the truth of my doctrine, and my fidelity in mine Apoſtleſhippe, as alſo whoſe diſciple I am, Moſes or Chriſts, and what rule
I follow, Iudaiſme or Chriſtianiſme. Secondly, they carry this ſenſe, I haue ſaid, that they which walke according to this rule, in D glorying onely in the croſſe of Chriſt, peace ſhall be vpon them, and mercy, and vpon the Iſraell of God; And I ſay againe and againe, that wee ought to ſtriue and contend for it, to obſerue and keepe it, as a thing moſt neceſſary to ſaluation: τοῦ λοιποῦ, as for other things not neceſſary to ſaluation, as circumciſion, &c. Let no man trouble mee in the execution of mine Apoſtolicall function, or hinder the courſe of the Goſpell, by vrging any other doctrine or ceremony contrary or diuerſe from this, as neceſſary to ſaluation: This one thing is neceſſary, other things are needleſſe and fruitleſſe in compariſon, therefore neither I, nor the Church of God ought to be troubled with them. This latter ſenſe I take to be more agreeable to the text. Some make

A the ſenſe to bee this, I haue had many troubles and conflicts; and haue many markes and ſcarres in my body inflicted by perſecutours: therefore bee no more troubleſome vnto me: for it were too much to adde wormwood to my gall, affliction to affliction. Here we ſee the condition of the Apoſtle, and the eſtate of all faithfull miniſters; that it is full of trouble and moleſtations. For as they are accounted men of turbulent ſpirits, diſquieters of the ſtate, as Elias was, 1. King. 21. and Ieremy, chapter 15. 18. and Paul, Act. 16. 20. & 21. 28. So they are moſt troubled with factious oppoſers and falſe teachers, who labour to bring into the Church, things partly needles and ſuperfluous, partly hurtfull and B pernicious. Thus the falſe apoſtles troubled the paſtours and Church of Galatia, Gal. 5. 10. and the Churches of Antiochia, Syria, Cilicia, Act. 15. 24.

Secondly, conſider how that the moſt and greateſt troubles of the Church, haue beene for matters not of ſubſtance, but of circumſtance, partly not neceſſary, partly contrary to the rule: which notwithſtanding haue bin vrged with fire and fagot, as things moſt neceſſary.

Laſtly, he that ſtands forth for the defence of Gods truth (as Paul did, and all Miniſters ought to doe) muſt let goe all circumſtances, and looke to the ſubſtance. Not with Martha to trouble himſelfe about many needles C things, when as one thing onely is neceſſary.

Luke 10,14.

The reaſon followeth in theſe words: For I beare in my body the markes of the Lord Ieſus.

στίγματα. vide Lipſium de militia Romana. lib. 1. dialogo 9.

The word in the Originall tranſlated markes, doth properly ſignifie prints with an hotte yron. But it is here vſed generally to ſignifie any blemiſh, ſkarre, or marke whatſoeuer, whether ſuch as was woont to be ſet vpon ſeruants bought with money, (which among the Iewes was a hole in the eare pearced with a naule, Exodus 21. 6. Deut. 15. 17.) or vpon ſlaues taken in the warres, as the Samians ſet vpon an Athenian captiue the ſigne of an owle: and the Athenians vpon a Samian the ſigne of a ſhippe. Or vpon malefactours, as a hole in the eare, an F in the D fore-head, a brand in the hand. Or ſuch a marke, as ſome thinke was ſet vpon Cain, Gen. 4. 15. or the marke of God, Ezech. 9. 4. or of the beaſt, Apoc. 16. 2.

The markes of Chriſt are of two ſorts, either inward and inuiſible: or outward and viſible. The inuiſible markes are two. The firſt, is Gods eternall Election, which is called Gods ſeale or marke, 2. Tim. 2. 19. The foundation of God remaineth ſure, & hath this ſeale, The Lord knoweth who are his. All the Elect are marked with this marke, Apocal. 7. and by it Chriſt knoweth and acknowledgeth them for his ſheepe, Ioh. 10. The ſecond is regeneration, or the imprinting of the defaced image of God in the ſoule. By this marke (which is the true indeleble character, neuer to bee blotted out) are all beleeuers ſealed, 2. Cor. 1. 22. Eph. 1. 13. Theſe inward inuiſible markes of Election and Regeneration, are in the ſoule, and therefore not here meant: for he ſpeakes of bodily marks, I beare in my body the marks, &c. The outward viſible markes are two-folde: Typicall, or Reall. Typicall, as circumciſion, which was a marke ſet in the fore-skin of the fleſh, Rom. 4. 11. The blood of the Paſchall Lambe, wherewith the houſes of the Iſraelites were marked, when the firſt borne of the Egyptians were ſlaine by the deſtroying Angel. And baptiſme is of the ſame kinde: for by Baptiſme Chriſtians are diſtinguiſhed from Iewes, Turkes, Infidels whatſoeuer. Reall markes of Chriſt, are either in his naturall, or in his myſticall body. In his naturall body, the wounds which were giuen him in his hands, feete, and ſides; which he ſhewed to his diſciples after his reſurrection, Ioh. 20. 27. which, whether they be now to be ſeene in his glorified body (as ſome affirme) or aboliſhed (as others,) I leaue to the Reader as a thing vncerten, and meerely coniectural, ſeeing there is nothing in Scripture either for it, or againſt it, that doth neceſſarily conclude it. But of theſe markes, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh not in this place. The markes in his myſticall bodie, are thoſe, which are in his mẽbers, as wounds, ſkarres, whippings, maimednes, &c. of which we reade, 2. Cor. 4. 10. Euery where we beare about in our body the dying of the Lord Ieſus: and, 2. Cor. 11. 24, 25. Fiue times receiued I fourtie ſtripes ſaue one: I was thriſe beaten with roddes, once ſtoned, &c. And theſe the Apoſtle here calleth the markes of Chriſt, becauſe they are inflicted for the profeſſion of Chriſt, and the Goſpel: as the wounds and ſkarres of a ſouldier may bee called his Princes wounds and ſkarres, becauſe they are had in his cauſe and quarell. Now thoſe in his naturall body differ from theſe in his myſticall: Firſt, in that they are meritorious, for by his ſtripes wee are healed, 1. Pet. 2. 24. Theſe in his myſticall body are glorious in the ſight of God (as the death of his Saints is,) yet not meritorious. Secondly, thoſe in his naturall body, were prophecied of before in particular, Pſal. 22. 16. They pearced my hands and my feet. Theſe in his myſticall body only in generall, that wee ſhould be conformable vnto him.

In this place Paul ſpeaketh of the latter only, which were in his owne perſon, and this hee doth, not to put any merit in them, (as Saint Francis did) but to teſtifie himſelfe to be a faithfull ſeruant of Chriſt. And he further meets with the falſe apoſtles, who would needes haue had the Galatians circumciſed, that ſo they might glorie in the fleſh, as hauing ſet the marke of circumciſion in the fore-skin of their fleſh. As if he ſhould ſay, I ſet not markes in other mens fleſh, to glory of them, as the falſe apoſtles doe; but I beare about in my bodie the marks of the Lord Ieſus, theſe are the ſignes of mine Apoſtleſhip, and arguments of fidelitie in my Miniſterie, which I ſee not in other mens fleſh, but haue in mine owne.

Here we ſee what we are to thinke, & what vſe we are to make of the wounds, skarres, and blemiſhes, that are in any of the Saints for the profeſſion of the truth. Firſt, that they are the ſufferings, wounds, and markes of Chriſt himſelfe (as Paul tearmeth them here, and Coloſſ. 1. 24.) ſeeing they are the wounds of the members of that body, whereof he is the head. Secondly, they haue this vſe, to conuince the conſciences of perſecutors, and wicked men, that they are the ſeruants of Chriſt, which ſuffer thus for righteouſneſſe ſake, for which cauſe they are here mentioned by Paul. Thus he prooues himſelfe to be a member of Chriſt by the affliction which he ſuffered for his ſake. 2. Cor. 12. Thirdly, if men be conſtant in their profeſſion, namely in faith and obedience, they are banners of victory. Therefore no man ought to be aſhamed of them, no more then ſouldiers of their wounds and skarres: but rather in a holy manner to glory of them as Paul did. For as it is a glory to a ſouldier to haue receiued many wounds, and to haue many skarres, in a good cauſe, in his Princes quarrel, and for the defence of his country: So it is a glory for a Chriſtian ſouldier to haue the markes of the Lord Ieſus in his body, as of wounds, ſcourges, bondes, impriſonment, for the profeſſion of the truth. Therefore Conſtantine the great, (as the Eccleſiaſticall hiſtorie records) kiſſed the holes of the eies of certaine Biſhops, (which had them put out by the Arrians, for the conſtant profeſſion of the faith of Chriſt) reuerencing the vertue of the holy Ghoſt which ſhined in them.

This makes nothing for the fratres flagellantes, who glory in the markes which they make in their fleſh, by whipping of themſelues. For firſt, it is not the puniſhment (as Cyprian ſaith) but the cauſe that makes a Martyr. Secondly, the markes which men ſet vpon themſelues contrarie to the Law, Leuit. 19. 28. are not the markes of the Lord Ieſus: but thoſe onely which are ſet vpon them by others, for the profeſſion of the truth. Thirdly, this whipping and afflicting of themſelues, beeing but will-worſhip, in not ſparing of the bodie, Coloſſ. 2. 23. is no better accepted of God, then the ſuperſtitious practiſe of Baals prieſts, lancing themſelues with kniues, til the blood guſhed out. 1. King. 18. 28.

Againe, if this be the glorie of a ſeruant of Chriſt, and a note of conſtant profeſſion, what ſhall we ſay of them, who haue not onely their conſciences ſeared with a hotte yron, but by drinking, whoring, rioting, &c. get the markes of Bacchus and Venus in their bodies? For if theſe be the markes of Chriſt, thoſe muſt needs be the markes of Satan.

Laſtly, hence we are taught a ſpeciall dutie, and that is, to ſuffer bodily affliction in the profeſſion of the truth: and though bonds and impriſonment abide vs in all places, not to paſſe for them, ſo that wee may fulfill our courſe with ioy, according to Pauls example, both here, and Act. 20. 24. as alſo his commandement to Timothie, Suffer affliction as a good ſouldier of Ieſus Chriſt. 2. Tim. 2. 3. The reaſons are theſe. Firſt, by ſuffering bodily affliction, wee are made conformable vnto Chriſt, and fulfill the reſt of the afflictions of Chriſt in our fleſh. Coloſſ. 1. 24. Secondly, they teach vs to haue a ſympathy and fellow-feeling of the miſeries of our brethren, to remember thoſe that are in afflictiõ, as though we alſo were afflicted in the body. Heb. 13. 3. Thirdly, our patient induring of affliction, doth not onely ſerue as a preſident and example to others to ſuffer patiently, but alſo is a notable meanes to confirme them in the truth. 2. Cor. 1. 6. Phil. 1. 14. Laſtly, they ſerue to ſcoure vs that are earthly veſſels, from the ruſt and filth of ſinne, that cleaues ſo faſt vnto our nature.

18. Brethren, the grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, be with your ſpirit, Amen.

Here, the Apoſtle concludes his Epiſtle with his vſuall farewell, commending the Galatians to the grace of God, and wiſhing vnto them all things appertaining to ſpirituall life and godlineſſe. 1. Pet. 1. 3. which he ſignifieth here by grace. There is a twofold grace mentioned in Scripture, Grace which makes a man gracious or acceptable to God, gratia gratum faciens: and grace which is freely giuen, gratia gratis data. Gratia gratum faciens, is the fauour and loue of God, whereby he is well pleaſed with his elect in Chriſt, and this grace is in God himſelfe, and no qualitie infuſed or inherent in vs: and it is truly called the firſt grace, as beeing the cauſe of all other ſubſequent graces. Gratia gratis data, is the free gift of God beſtowed vpon men, whether naturall, or ſupernaturall: Naturall, either in the ſtate of innocencie, before the fall, as originall iuſtice, &c. or in the ſtate of Apoſtaſie, ſince the fall, as the gift of illumination. Ioh. 1. 9. and ſuch like. Supernaturall, either common gifts, as the gift of miracles, prophecying, tongues, &c. or ſauing graces, as the grace of election, effectuall vocation, iuſtification, adoption, glorification, &c. all which are called the ſecond grace, becauſe they flow from the firſt, as the ſtreame from the fountaine. Thus Paul diſtinguiſheth them, Rom. 5. 15. calling the former the grace of God, the latter the gift by grace. Now grace in this place is not to bee reſtrained onely to the benefit of our redemption, as it is, 2. Cor. 13. verſ. 13. where the grace of Chriſt is diſtinguiſhed from the loue of God, and communion of the holy Ghoſt: but to bee vnderſtood of the fauour and loue of God, which is the firſt grace: and of the ſauing grace of regeneration, which is the ſecond grace, or the gift by grace. And it is called the grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, firſt, becauſe he is the fountaine of it, Ioh. 1. 16. Of his fulneſſe all we haue receiued, and grace for grace. Secondly, becauſe he is the conduit or pipe, by which it is conuaied vnto vs. Ioh. 1. 17. Grace and truth came by Ieſus Chriſt: for he is our propitiator by whome alone we receiue grace, that is, the fauour of God, and reconciliation: for grace, that is, for the fauour and loue which God the Father bare vnto his Sonne, we beeing accepted of God, and beloued in his beloued. Eph. 1. 6. Chriſt is further called [our Lord] in fiue reſpects. Firſt, by right of creation. Ioh. 1. 3. All things were made by him. Secondly, by right of inheritance. Heb. 1. 2. He is made heire of all things. Pſal. 2. 8. I will giue thee the Heathen for thine inheritance, and the ends of the world for thy poſſeſſion. Thirdly, by right of redemption. 1. Cor. 6. 20. Ye are bought with a price, which is neither ſiluer nor gold, but the pretious blood of Chriſt. 1. Pet. 1. 18. 19. And this he performed by a double right, namely, by right of propriety, as a King redeemes his ſubiects, the maſter his ſeruants: or by right of affinitie, as the father may redeeme the ſonne, one brother an other, and one kinſman an other. Fourthly, by right of conqueſt. Luk. 11. 21. VVhen a ſtrong man armed keepeth his pallace, &c. but when a ſtronger then he commeth vpon him, & ouercommeth him, he taketh from him all his armour wherein hee truſted, and diuideth the ſpoile. Laſtly, by right of contract & marriage. Hoſ. 2. 16. Thou ſhalt call me Iſhi, and ſhalt not call me Baali. and verſ. 19. I will marrie thee vnto me for euer in righteouſneſſe, iudgement, mercie, and compaſſion; I will marrie thee vnto me in faithfulneſſe, and thou ſhalt know the Lord.

1. Theſ. 5. 23

The Apoſtle proceedes and ſaith, the grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt be with your ſpirits. For the better vnderſtanding of which phraſe, we are to know, that Man conſiſteth of two eſſentiall parts, of ſoule, and body. Eccle. 12. 7. Duſt (that is, the bodie) returnes to the earth, whence it was taken: and the ſpirit returnes to God that gaue it. Albeit the Apoſtle elſwhere deuideth man into three parts, ſpirit, ſoule, and bodie, when he praieth for the Theſſalonians, That their whole ſpirit, and ſoule, and bodie, may be kept blameleſſe, vnto the comming of Chriſt. Where he ſubdiuideth the ſoule into two parts, into reaſon or vnderſtanding, which he calleth the ſpirit: will or affection, which he tearmeth (by the common name agreeing to both) the ſoule: God hauing giuen reaſon to ſee, and wil to ſeeke after that which is good: that reaſon hauing eyes might guide the will that is blinde, and goe before, that it might follow. So that the ſpirit and ſoule are not two ſeuerall ſubſtances, but one and the ſame (euen as the bodie and the fleſh are one bodie) and yet are they diſtinguiſhed for doctrine ſake. Heb. 4. 12. the word of God is ſaid to enter through, euen to the diuiding aſunder of the ſoule and the ſpirit: and Eph. 4. 17. 18. the Apoſtle diſtinguiſheth the ſoule into three Faculties, the minde, cogitation, heart: when he ſaith the Gentiles walked in the vanities of their mindes, and had their cogitations darkned, becauſe of the hardneſſe of their hearts: by minde, meaning the hegemonicall part or vnderſtanding: by cogitation, the inward ſenſes, as memory, phantaſie, &c. and by heart, the affections.

νοῦς, διάνοια, καρδία.

Mens cuiuſq; is eſt quiſq;.

Now by ſpirit in this place, is not meant the vnderſtanding alone, but by a ſynecdoche the whole man is vnderſtood, albeit the ſoule principally be meant, becauſe it is the proper ſubiect of grace: for grace beeing a ſpirituall thing is placed immediately and properly in the ſpirit, or minde of man; and in the bodie accidentally, where it doth bewray it ſelfe by outward actions. Secondly, for that, as the ſeate of grace is in the mind; ſo the ſenſe and apprehenſion of it is there likewiſe, and not in the bodie. Thirdly, as Theophylact ſaith, Non ait vobiſcum, quid ita? abigens eos à rebus hiſce, arguenſque non à lege hos ſpiritum, ſed à gratia accepiſſe. So that, it is all one, as if he ſhould haue ſaid, The grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt be with you all, as it is, Phil 4. 23. and 2. Theſſ. 3. 18. as it may appeare by the like: for that farewell which Paul giues Timothie in his latter Epiſtle, The Lord Ieſus Chriſt bee with thy ſpirit, 2. Tim. 4. 22. is all one with that in the former, Grace be with thee. 1. Tim. 6. 21. And that ſalutation Philem. 25. The grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt be with your ſpirit, is all one with that Coloſſ. 4. 18: Grace be with you.

Hence that phraſe and forme of ſpeech in our Engliſh Liturgie, or Common prayer booke, (though miſliked by ſome, and cauilled at by others) hath his warrant & ground, when the Miniſter ſaith, The Lord be with you; and the people anſwer, And with thy ſpirit, wiſhing the ſame to him, that hee to them, that God would be with his ſpirit, that is, with him.

Againe, marke how the Apoſtle as he did beginne with grace, chapt. 1. 3. ſo he doth end with grace, to teach vs firſt of all, that our ſaluation is placed in it alone, for the beginning, the progreſſe, and the accompliſhment thereof: for election is of grace, Rom. 11. 5. and vocation is of grace, 2. Tim. 1. 9. and iuſtification, Rom. 3. 24. and glorification, Rom. 6. 23. Secondly, that Chriſt is to haue all the glorie of this grace, whereby we are ſo highly aduanced into the fauour of God, both for the beginning, continuance and ending, without aſcribing any part thereof to our ſelues, or any other creature. Thirdly, that all our ſalutations and greetings, our adieus and fare-wels, ought to be grounded in the grace of Chriſt, otherwiſe they are but carnall: and therefore the Apoſtle biddeth the Chriſtians to ſalute one another in a holy kiſſe, or (as Peter ſpeakes) with the kiſſe of loue. 1. Pet. 5. 14.

Rom. 16, 16

This confutes the Popiſh Doctors, who doe not only aſcribe the beginning of their ſaluation to themſelues, in co-working with God in their firſt conuerſion: but alſo the end and accompliſhment of it, by workes of condignitie, which (as they ſay) are meritorious of eternall life.

Further, obſerue, with what emphaſis the Apoſtle concludes his Epiſtle: Firſt oppoſing Chriſt the Lord of the houſe, to Moſes who was but a ſeruant in the houſe. Secondly, the grace of Chriſt to inherent iuſtice, and merits of workes. Thirdly, the ſpirit, in which he would haue grace to be ſeated, to the fleſh, in which the falſe Apoſtles gloried ſo much. Laſtly, brotherly vnitie one with another, implied in the word brethren, to the proud and lordly carriage of the falſe Apoſtles ouer them.

Heb. 3. 5. 6.

The Concluſion.

In the end of all, it is added, in the Greeke, and Syriacke copies, that this Epiſtle was written to the Galatians from Rome. Which poſtſcript ſeemes to be erroneous and falſe: for firſt, there is not a title in the whole Epiſtle, that giueth the leaſt inkling that it ſhould haue beene written from Rome: whereas in all the reſt, which are written from thence, Paul makes mention of his bonds, and impriſonment. Secondly, the varietie of copies argues the vncertentie of it, ſeeing in ſome copies it is ſaid to haue beene ſent from Epheſus, as Caietan and Hyperius affirme, in their Commentaries vpon this place. Thirdly, Baronius (if his authoritie bee of any weight in this caſe) affirmeth that it is not likely or credible that it was written from thence. But, bee it graunted that this poſt-ſcript were true indeede; yet it is no part of Canonicall Scripture, as not being written by the Apoſtle, but added afterwards by the ſcribes which copied out the Epiſtles. Neither is this onely true of poſt-ſcripts, but alſo of Inſcriptions or Titles prefixed before Epiſtles, they are no part of holy writ. This may eaſily be prooued in particular: for firſt, touching poſt-ſcripts, the Greeke copies agree in this, that the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, was written from Philippi, and ſent by Stephanas, Fortunatus, Achaicus, and Timotheus: when as it is certen, it was written from Epheſus, For firſt, chap. 16. v. 5. he ſaith, He will come to them when he ſhall goe through Macedonia. Therefore Paul was not then at Philippi, a chiefe citie in Macedonia. Secondly, in the 19. v. of the ſame chapter, he ſaith, All the churches of Aſia ſalute you, which ſhewes plainely, that when Paul writ this Epiſtle, he was at Epheſus in Aſia, not at Philippi in Europe. Thirdly, v. 8. he ſaith, he will abide at Epheſus till Pentecoſt, therefore hee was not then at Philippi. Fourthly, that it was written before the tumult in Epheſus raiſed by Demetrius and his complices, and ſo conſequently before his comming to Philippi: as alſo that it was ſent by Timotheus and Eraſtus, it is manifeſt, v. 10. of that chapter, beeing compared with Act. 19. v. 21. 22. Laſtly, the Syriacke tranſlatour agreeth with me, in affirming that it was written from Epheſus; and ſo doth Baronius Annal. tom. 1. pag. 494. l. 39. Againe, the poſt-ſcript of the 2. to the Corinthians hath, it was written from Philippi of Macedonia, and ſent by Titus and Luke: whereas the Rhemiſts (if we may giue any credit to their teſtimony, who elſewhere make titles part of the Canonicall Scripture) ſay, it was written at Troas, as it is thought. And Baron. annal. tom. 1. pag. 590. l. 51. Antwerp. thinkes it was written at Nicopolis, vpon this occaſion; that in his former Epiſtle from Epheſus promiſing to come vnto them as he paſſed through Macedonia, and comming not, 1. Cor. 16. he doth in this excuſe himſelfe, 2. Cor. 1. 15. 16. 17. compared with the 2. Cor. 7. 5. Neither is it a good reaſon to prooue that Titus caried this Epiſtle (as it is in the poſt-ſcript) becauſe Paul ſaith, He ſent Titus to them, and another with him, 2. Cor. 8. 18. 22. & 12. 18. for Paul ſpeakes of Titus his comming vnto them before that time: neither may it bee thought that Titus was ſent the ſecond time vnto them, conſidering that departing from Macedonia, and taking Titus with him, he left him in Creete. See Caeſar Baron. annal. tom. 1. Antwerp. p. 591. l. 40. Beſides, the Rhemiſts controll the ſubſcription of the firſt Epiſtle to the Theſſalonians, which hath it thus, The firſt Epiſtle to the Theſſalonians, written from Athens. For in their preface, they are bold to affirme, that it ſeemeth rather to haue bene written at Corinth, then at Athens? and they giue this reaſon of it, becauſe after the ſending of Timothie to Theſſalonica, Paul and he mette not at Athens againe, but at Corinth. And Baronius affirmeth, that it ſeemeth to haue bene written preſently after that Sylas and Timotheus came to him to Corinth, out of Macedonia, by comparing Act. 18. 5. with 1. Theſſ. 3. 6. Annal. tom. 1. p. 457. l. 1. And Emmanuel Sa doth cenſure the Syriacke poſt-ſcript, which ſaith it was ſent from Athens by Timothie, ſeeing that Timothie was then abſent. The like they affirme in the argument of the ſecond Epiſtle: for albeit the Greeke poſt-ſcript hath it, that it was written from Athens, yet they rather thinke it was written from Corinth, where Paul abode a yeare and ſixe moneths, Act. 18. 11. becauſe the title is like vnto the firſt Epiſtle, Paul, and Syluanus, and Timotheus, &c. And Baronius ſaith, that it ſhould be written from Athens, impoſſibile eſt affirmare; becauſe it was written ſoone after the former, as may appeare by the inſcription, Paul, and Syluanus, and Timotheus, (they continuing together:) but the former was written from Corinth, (as hath bin prooued) and therefore the latter: ſpecially conſidering that Paul went thence from Athens, and abode at Corinth a yeare and a halfe, and returned not backe againe to Athens, but went to Epheſus, Annal. tom. 1. pag. 457. l. 28.

Annal. tom. 1. p. 657. l. 26. Antuerp.

Adde hereunto, that whereas the poſtſcript of the 1. to Timothie ſaith it was written from Laodicea the chiefe citie of Phrigia Pacaciana, the Rhemiſts notwithſtanding in the argument affirme, that it is vncerten where it was written: and though it be commonly ſaid to haue beene written at Laodicea, yet it ſeemeth to be otherwiſe, becauſe it is like he was neuer there, as may be gathered by the Epiſtle to the Coloſſians which was written at Rome in his laſt trouble, a little before his death: for Coloſſ. 2. 1. Paul ſeemes to inſinuate that hee was neuer at that Laodicea of Phrigia, neare to Coloſſos, and Hierapolis, and that they neuer ſaw his perſon. Beſides, neither Pliny (who writ after Paul) nor any other auncient claſſique Authour, doth make mention of Phrigia Pacaciana: ſo that it ſeemeth to haue beene ſo called long after Pauls deceaſe: the firſt mention that is made of it (as ſome haue obſerued) beeing in the acts of the 5. Synode of Conſtantinople. Baronius is of opinion that it was written from Macedonia, tom. 1. pag. 564 grounding his coniecture vpon 1. Tim. 1. 3. As I beſought thee to abide at Epheſus, when I went into Macedonia; ſo doe.--- The ſame doth Athanaſius affirme in his Synopſis, and Theodoret in his preface vpon that Epiſtle.

Againe, the ſubſcription of the 2. to Timothie, that it was written from Rome vnto Timothie the firſt Biſhop elected of the Church of Epheſus, cannot wel ſtand as ſome thinke with that of S. Paul, 2. Tim. 4. 5. Doe the worke of an Euangeliſt, ſeeing that Euangeliſts were not tyed to perſonall reſidencie, to abide in one place (as Biſhops and Paſtors are) but were to go from place to place, to confirme the Churches planted by the Apoſtles. But the diſcuſſing of this argument, whether Timothie were an Euangeliſt, properly ſo called, and whether the ſame man could not be an Euangeliſt, and a Biſhop, requireth a longer diſcourſe, then can be affoarded to this ſhort treatiſe. Laſtly, the poſt-ſcript of the Epiſtle to Titus, ſaith it was written from Nicopolis of Macedonia: the deuiſers of which aſſertion ground their opinion vpon Titus 3. 12. where Paul ſaith, Be diligent to come to me to Nicopolis, for I haue determined there to winter: miſtaking the text, for he ſaith not, be diligent to come to me to Nicopolis, for I haue determined here to winter (as beeing there alreadie) but I haue determined there to winter. By which it is plaine, that when Paul wrote to Titus, he was not at Nicopolis, (as the poſt-ſcript affirmeth,) and ſo wee ſee the text which they alledge for them, maketh moſt againſt them. And this is the iudgment and reaſon of Baronius, Annal. tom. 1. pag. 575. l. 33. Antuerp. howſoeuer Claudius Eſpenceus ſhifts his fingers of it, and paſſes it ouer in ſilence.

Thus much concerning Subſcriptions: a word or two touching Inſcriptions or titles prefixed before Epiſtles. That theſe be no part of Scripture written by the Apoſtles, but added to the Epiſtles by ſome others, it may appeare by theſe reaſons. Firſt generally, if titles were Canonicall as well as the Epiſtles themſelues, the Fathers would neuer haue doubted (as they did) whether Paul were the author of the Epiſtle to the Ebrewes or not, ſeeing in all copies ſaue one (as Beza hath obſerued) it beareth his name: but ſome of them aſcribe it to Barnabas, as Tertullian: others to Luke, as Ierome witneſſeth; others to Clement: Oecumenius intituleth it onely thus, The Epiſtle to the Ebrewes, without adding the name of Paul or any other penner of it: and ſo Hentenus a papiſt doth tranſlate it out of Oecumenius: Secondly, ſome Epiſtles (as thoſe ſeuen written by Iames, Peter, Iohn, Iude) haue vnfit titles prefixed before them, in that they are called ſometime Canonicall, (ſpecially of the Latine Church) and ſometime Catholike (chiefly of the Greeke Church) neither of which were euer giuen them by any Apoſtle, or Apoſtolique writer. For firſt touching the title Canonical, it may ſeeme ſtrange that this inſcription ſhould euer haue bin appropriated vnto them, which is common with them to the whole word of God: as though in them were contained a more perfect and abſolute rule of doctrine and manners, of things to be beleeued and practiſed, then in the other bookes of holy writ; conſidering that ſundrie Diuines (albeit erroniouſly I confeſſe) haue beene ſo farre from giuing vnto them this preheminence aboue the reſt of the bookes of Scripture, that they haue altogether reiected them, as no part of Canonical Scripture: by name the Epiſtle of Iames, the 2. of Peter, the 2. and 3. of Ioh. and that of Iude, of all which it was doubted in auncient time, as we ſee in Euſebius, and the Syrian Church receiueth them not to this day, as being not in the Syriacke tranſlation; and Caietan a popiſh writer, and the Lutherans at this preſent, reiect them, as may appeare by their writings. Secondly, that this inſcription was added to theſe Epiſtles without ſufficient ground, and warrant of reaſon, may appeare, in that no reaſon can bee giuen why theſe ſeuen ſhould be called Canonicall, rather then the Epiſtles of Saint Paul, or that to the Ebrewes (whoſoeuer was the penner thereof.) For whereas the ordinarie Gloſſe ſaith, they are called Canonicall, becauſe they were receiued into the Canon with the other Epiſtles; by that reaſon they ſhould bee no more Canonicall then the reſt, nay, not of that authenticall, at leaſt of that vndoubted authoritie the reſt are of, ſeeing they hardly obtained to bee regiſtred in the Canon with the reſt as Canonicall. Laſtly, this title was neuer giuen to theſe Epiſtles by the Greeke Church (which was more auncient) but onely by the Latine Church, as might be prooued by manifold teſtimonies, if it were a thing neceſſarie to be ſtood vpon. Neuertheleſſe, howſoeuer this inſcription cannot be defended, yet it may bee excuſed, and tollerated, as a title of diſtinction, to didiſtinguiſh them from the other Epiſtles. As we ſee the Iewes diuiding the old Teſtament into foure parts: the firſt they called the law, or fiue bookes of Moſes: the ſecond the former prophets, viz. Ioſhua, Iudges, two bookes of Samuel, two bookes of the Kings: the third, the later prophets, as Eſay, Ieremie, Ezechiel, and the ſmall prophets: the fourth they called Kethubim, which in Engliſh is as much as the Scriptures, not as though thoſe 11. bookes were more properly Scripture then the Pentateuch of Moſes, or the bookes of the former and later prophets: but onely for diſtinction ſake they were ſo called. And they are tearmed of the 70. and of the Greeke church ἁγιογραφά, that is, holy writs, not becauſe they had a peculiar holineſſe proper to them aboue other parts of Gods word, (ſeeing all Scripture is equally giuen by diuine inſpiration) nor as though the amanuenſes of theſe bookes were more holy then the other pen-men of the holy Ghoſt (nay, contrarily it is doubted by ſome, of Salomon, who penned three of theſe bookes, whether hee were elected or reiected, whereas it is not doubted of the reſt:) but onely (as I haue alreadie ſaid) to put a note of diſtinction betwixt them and other bookes, in naming of them, as Hugo[*] de S. Vict. hath well obſerued.

ſtinguiſh

In this ſenſe this title Canonicall, may bee giuen to theſe Epiſtles without danger: but if wee ſhall vnderſtand it in any other ſenſe, we ſhall be ſo farre from beeing able to defend it, that we ſhall not be able to excuſe it.

The ſecond title which is giuen them, is, that they be called Catholike, which inſcription is as vnfit as the former: for they are ſo called (as ſome would haue it,) becauſe they were written, and directed to the whole Catholike Church, conſiſting both of Iewes and Gentiles. But that is not true, ſeeing Iames chap. 1. 1. directeth his Epiſtle onely to the twelue tribes that were diſperſed, and not to the Gentiles. And Peter, who was an Apoſtle of Circumciſion, 1. Epiſt. 1. 1. writeth onely to the ſtrangers the Iewes, that dwelt here and there through Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Aſia, and Bythinia. Others thinke they are tearmed Catholike, for that they were not ſent to one man, or family, or citie, or countrey: but generally to the whole bodie, companie, and ſociety of the Iewes, whereſoeuer diſperſed ouer the whole earth. But neither in this ſenſe can they fitly, or truely be tearmed Catholike: foraſmuch as two of theſe ſeauen, viz. the ſecond and the third of Iohn, were written to particular perſons, the one to the elect Ladie, the other to Gaius. And by this reaſon the Epiſtle to Timothie, that to Titus, and Philemon, may be called Catholike, as well as theſe.

Againe, be it graunted, that they were all directed to all the Iewes, yet I ſee not why the Epiſtle to the Ebrewes, may not as well challenge this title to be called Catholike, as any of theſe ſeuen, conſidering it was written to all the Iewes, and onely to the Iewes.

Thirdly, others affirme them to be called Catholike, becauſe they containe Catholike doctrine, ſuch as appertaineth to all men generally, of what eſtate, place, condition, or calling ſoeuer they be. But in this ſenſe all Pauls Epiſtles may bee called Catholike Epiſtles. For whatſoeuer is written, is written for our learning, that we through patience and conſolation of the Scriptures might haue hope, Rom. 15. verſ. 4.

Secondly, the word Catholike, is not ſo ancient: for Pacianus an ancient father, ſaith, it was not vſed in the Apoſtles dayes. His words are theſe. Sed ſub Apoſtolis (inquies) nemo Catholicus vocabatur: eſto, ſic fuerit, vel illud indulge, cum poſt Apoſtolos hæreſes extitiſſent, diuerſiſquè nominibus Columbam Dei atque reginam lacerare per partes, & ſcindere niterentur; nonne cognomen ſuum plebs Apoſtolica poſtulabat, quo incorrupti populi diſtingueret vnitatem, ne intemeratam Dei virginem, error aliquorum per membra laceraret? That is, But thou wilt ſay, vnder the Apoſtles no man was called Catholique, well, be it ſo, yet admit this withall, when after the Apoſtles there were hereſies, and men beganne to rend in peeces, and diuide Gods Doue, and Queene, by ſundry different names, did not the Apoſtolike people require their ſurnames, whereby they might diſtinguiſh the vnitie of the vncorrupt people, leſt the errour of ſome, ſhould rend in ſunder Gods vndefiled Virgin? Where wee ſee Pacianus doeth freely graunt, that this ſurname Catholike was not in vſe in the time of the Apoſtles. Which teſtimonie Baronius doeth notably diſſemble, in ſhewing the originall of this name out of Pacianus; affirming, but not prouing it to be as ancient as the Apoſtles. Now this errour hath not onely befallen the Latine, and Greeke copies, but the Syriacke likewiſe, as may appeare in the title prefixed before the moſt ancient Syrian tranſlation, where we ſhall finde theſe words, The three Epiſtles of the three Apoſtles, before whoſe eyes our Lord was transfigured, Iames, Peter, Iohn. In which inſcription bee couched two foule errours. Firſt, in that this Tranſlator maketh but three Epiſtles of Iames, Peter, and Iohn: whereas there are ſix, he omitting the ſecond of Peter, the ſecond and third of Iohn (as alſo that of Iude) as no part of holy Scripture: and therefore the Syriack Church (as I haue already ſaid) doth not receiue theſe Epiſtles into their Canon vnto this day. The ſecond is, that hee affirmeth Iames, before whom our Sauiour CHRIST was transfigured in mount Tabor, to bee the Author of this Epiſtle. For that Iames before whome Chriſt was transfigured in the Mount, was Iames the ſonne of Zebedeus, and brother of Iohn, Mat. 17. 1. After ſixe daies, Ieſus tooke Peter and Iames, and Iohn his brother, and brought them vp into an high mountaine, and was transfigured before them. Which Iames could not poſſibly be the penner of this Epiſtle, for hee was ſlaine by king Herod long before the deſtruction of Ieruſalem, and the diſperſion of the 12. tribes, Act. 12. v. 2. About that time Herod the king ſtretched forth his hand to vexe certaine of the Church: and he ſlue Iames the brother of Iohn with the ſword. Therefore Iames the author of this Epiſtle, was Iames the ſonne of A Alpheus. For to faine another Iames the brother of our Lord, as ſome haue done, is childiſh, ſeeing it is plaine by ſundry places of the new Teſtament, that there were but two of that name mentioned in Scripture, Iames the ſonne of Zebedeus, called Iames the greater: and Iames the ſonne of Alpheus, brother to Iude, called the leſſer, and brother of our Lord.

Biblioth. ſacræ tom. 3. ad Sympronian. Novatian. de Cathol. nomine Epiſt. 1.

Annalium tom. 1. pag. 349. Antuerp.

[*] Tom. 1. pernot. Elucid. c. 12 quia nullam habent ſpecialem proprietatem quâ diſtinguantur à cæteris, commune nomen quaſi proprium obtinent.

Gratias tibi Domine Ieſu.

24 DE59

ΕΠΙΕΙΚΕΙΑ:

OR

A TREATISE OF CHRISTIAN EQVITY AND MODERATION.

Deliuered publikely in Lectures by M. W. Perkins, and now publiſhed by the conſent of his Aſsignes in Cambridge, by a Preacher of the Word.

Ephes. 4. 31.
Forgiue one another, as God for Chriſts ſake doth forgiue you.

HINC LVCEM ET POCVLA SACRA
ALMA MATER CANTABRIGIA

Printed at London by Iohn Legatt, Printer
to the Vniuerſitie of Cambridge.
1613.

TO THE RIGHT HONOVRABLE THE LORD SHEFFEILD, LORD LIEVTENANT, AND LORD PRESIDENT:

SIR THOMAS HESKITH, SIR IOHN BENET
Knights: Charles Hales, R. William, Cutbert Pepper, Iohn Ferne, Eſquires: and the reſt of his Maieſties Honourable Councell, eſtabliſhed in the North parts, and vnder his Highnes the higheſt Patron of Equity: Grace and peace from Ieſus Chriſt.

BRITISH MUSEUM

RIGHT Honourable and Worſhipfull, how famous in all writers the yeare Eightie eight, and how fatall it was made by all the olde and later Coniectures is not vnknowne to any of you: but how the iſſue anſwered the expectation, I ſee not, ſaue onely in that notable ouerthrow of the enemies of God, the Papiſts: whereupon our reuerend [a] country-man, and Chriſts Champion for England, ſaid very well:

Octogeſimus octauus, mirabilis annus
Clade Papiſtarum, fauſtus vbiq; piis.

But if euery yeare deſerue to be famous in Engliſh Chronicles, it is this yeare, I cannot tell whether I ſhould ſay 1602 or 1603. wherein, whether Gods anger was more, in taking from vs ſuch a Queene (as for ought I reade) the world neuer had: or his mercie, in giuing vs ſuch a King, as England neuer had, I leaue it to better heads to be determined. How is the name of our God to be magnified, by whoſe mercy ſo great a loſſe is made no loſſe, but a gaine to vs? for who ſeeth not, that all her Princely vertues, do not only liue in him, but are alſo in him (being a man) more perfect & accompliſht? Shee is dead, but her Heroicall zeale & loue to Religion is aliue; ſhe bequeathed it with her kingdome to his Highnes, who doubtleſſe wil make both her Religion, and her Kingdome to flouriſh as much more, as a man doth excell a woman. And who knoweth not, that the enemies of our Religion, and our peace, (notwithſtanding all their politike diſſembled brags to the contrary) doe finde his Maieſtie ſo little for their purpoſe, that now they would ſing a thouſand Maſſes to haue her aliue againe, againſt whome they thundered out [b] ſo many Curſes and Excommunications, and after whoſe blood they ſo thirſted whilſt ſhee liued: what ſtraights are they driuen into? who would wiſh her aliue againe, at whoſe hands (though a woman) they neuer gained, nor got one inch of ground in 44. yeares; though nine or ten Popes, and 10000 of their ſlaues, wraſtled with her all the while, with all the power, and pollicie, craft, and trecherie, which the diuell could lend them. Nay, her ende was as glorious as her beginning, and her laſt Proclamation againſt them, was more to their ſhame, and leſſe to their comfort, then euer any in her life before: and ſo farre was ſhee, from allowing them a Toleration, of their intolerable religion, in her olde, and therefore weakeſt age, as that it neuer entred into her royall heart: nor euer thought ſhee it worthy to be made a queſtion, whether it ſhould be or no. No, ſhee halted not betwixt two religions: but to her Baal was Belial: and therefore ſhee baniſht him; and God was the Lord, and therefore ſhee ſerued him. Shee was reſolued that Dagon muſt down, if Gods Arke ſtand; or elſe if Dagon ſtand, the Arke muſt away. For both together cannot ſtand vpright. Shee held that as, when the enemies themſelues brought the Arke into Dagons temple, Dagon fell downe: ſo if the Iſraelites ſhould haue admitted Dagon into Gods Temple, that the Lord himſelf would haue remooued his Arke from them. Bleſſed was ſhee in her life, and twiſe bleſſed in her end: ſhee loſt not her firſt loue, and her workes were more at the laſt, then at the firſt: and bleſſed are wee that enioyed her ſo long: and more bleſſed, who vnder her enioyed ſuch 44 yeares, as all the bookes in the world cannot ſhew vnder a woman: but moſt bleſſed of all, in that after ſuch a Dauid, God hath ſent vs ſuch a Salomon; after ſuch a woman, ſuch a man, after ſuch a Queene, ſuch a King, who will make an end of many a Ioab, and many a Shimei, which ſhee could not well doe, and finiſh that Temple which ſhee ſo well beganne: and who (I doubt not to affirme it) doe the diuell, and the crafty Papiſt all they can, is the chiefe Champion of Ieſus vpon the face of the earth.

And how happy a yeare ſhall this be, if the loſſes which learning hath ſuſtained be as well recompenced? Iunius of Leiden, *Toſſ*a*ine* of Heilderberg, Perkins of Cambridge, haue this yeare bin taken from vs, beſides many other of inferiour note: happy ſhould thoſe three famous Vniuerſities be, if the like were ſeated in their roomes. Let vs leaue the firſt to the lower, the ſecond to the higher Germanie, to praiſe them, to lament them, and to make ſupply for them. It is the third who ſpecially concerneth vs: what loſſe the Church of God, and in the Church, England: and in the Church of England, the Miniſtery: and in the Miniſtery, the Vniuerſities: and in the Vniuerſities, the younger ſtudents haue ſuſtained, by the vntimely death of that Reuerend man, I thinke is not vnknowne to any of you. For how ſhould he be vnknowne to any (of any note) in England, whoſe name and eſtimation is ſuch in other nations, as that at one [a] Mart we find, that in one halfe yeare, two of [b] his bookes were tranſlated into Latine, and foure were printed beyond the ſeas. The beſt recompence of this loſſe, is the fruit of his labours, which he hath left behinde, whereof ſome were written by himſelfe, and others taken by other men from his mouth: all which, at leaſt ſo many of them as may be perfected, there is hope we ſhall in time enioy. Had not Iohan. Budæus, and Carolus Iouvilleus done ſo to Calvin: Vitus Theodorus, Ioh. Frederus, and Iuſtus Ionas done ſo to Luther, many worthy workes of thoſe two great Inſtruments of God had vtterly periſhed: and had not ſome done ſo to this worthy man, no doubt many ſweete blaſts of that ſiluer trumpet of God, had vaniſhed away. For my part, though time be pretious vnto me otherwaies, yet thinke I that time well ſpent, which I beſtow in preparing to the Preſſe, any thing of his. This diſcourſe of Equity now made ready, as a childe borne after his fathers death, I preſent to your Honourable view and patronage. If any aske why I dare tender ſo ſmall a gift to ſo great perſonages; my onely anſwer is, I make the Iudges of Equity, the Patrons of Equity. God graunt you a long and Honourable ſtate, vnder our worthy Salomon. Amen.
From my ſtudy, Sept. 10. 1603.

Your Honours, and Worſhips
In the Lord:

W. Crashavve.

To

---

a Fulk. in præf. in Teſt. Rhem.

b Pius. 5. Gregorius 13. Sixtus 5.

Paulus 4.
Pius 4.
Pius 5.
Gregorius 13.
Sixtus 5.
Vrbanus 7.
Gregor. 14.
Innocent 8.
Clement. 9.

1 King 18.21.
1. Sam. 5.2.3.4
Apoc. 2.4.19.

3 King. 1.
2. Chron.

a Nund. Fråk. ver. 603.

b Catholicus reformatus, de Morte, de Vita, Prophetia. Calv. in Dan. Luther in Geneſ. in Hoſea, &c.

To the Chriſtian Reader whoſoeuer.

IDoe here preſent unto thee, (Chriſtian brother) a ſmall diſcourſe of Equitie, deliuered by that faithfull labourer in the harueſt of God, maſter William Perkins, in a fewe Lectures. The diſcourſe is little, and briefe, but the matter is pithie, and the vſe profitable. Equity and Chriſtian moderation whether publike, or priuate, is the true badge of Chriſtianity. Without publike Equitie, what is the court of Iuſtice, but turned into the ſeate of Iniquity? and without priuate Equity, what is mans life, humane ſociety, neighbourhood, nay friendſhip, nay kindred, nay marriage it ſelfe, but euen a potion of poyſon in a golden cuppe? Art thou therefore a Magiſtrate? here is taught thee how to diſcharge thy place, in the execution of the lawes, as ſhall neither be vnſeeming the lenitie of a Chriſtian, nor the ſeueritie of a Magiſtrate. Art thou a priuate man? here is taught thee how to carry thy ſelfe in all dealing and bargaining with another: how to demeane thy ſelfe towards thy wife, thy ſeruant, thy childe, thy friend, thy neighbour, in ſuch manner, as if thou hadſt all the comforts and contentments of this earth, yet the practiſe hereof, ſhall make them all tenne times more comfortable: and the want thereof ſhall turne all their ſweetnes into gall and wormwood. When therefore thou readeſt this little booke, and withall, (laying it to thy life) doeſt finde the truth of it in thy courſe and conuerſation, then acknowledge the Spirit of God in this holy man, (who now ſleepes in peace) praiſe God for him, bewaile his loſſe, and helpe me and others with thy holy prayers, that we may ſtill goe forward in this good worke, of publiſhing theſe his godly labours: and in deliuering out to the Church of God theſe Iewels, which the Lord from his mouth gaue vs to keepe, not for our owne, but for the common good.

Thy brother in Chriſt Ieſus,

W. C.

PHIL. 4. 5.

Let your moderation of minde be knowne to all men: the Lord is at hand.

THE Apoſtle in this chapter, giueth ſundry exhortations to many Chriſtian duties. In the firſt verſ. to perſeuerance in faith and true religon. In the ſecond and third verſes, to mutuall concord. In the fourth verſe, to a ſpirituall ioy in the Lord.

In this fift verſe, he exhorteth to the vertue of Equitie, or moderation of minde. Our Engliſh tranſlations commonly reade it thus: Let your patient minde be knowne to all men: which though it bee truely and well ſaid, yet the words tranſlated haue a larger and fuller ſignification. Therefore according to the nature and force of the words, I rather chuſe to reade it thus: Let your equity or moderation of minde be knowne, &c.

The words containe two parts.

1. An exhortation, Let your equity be known to all men. 2. An excellent reaſon to enforce it: the Lord is at hand.

The drift and ſcope of the exhortation is to perſwade the Philippians, and in them the whole Church, to the practiſe of Equity.

Now this Equity, whereunto the holy Apoſtle ſo earneſtly exhorteth, is a worthie Chriſtian vertue, ſo excellent, as the careſull practiſe thereof, is the marrow and ſtrength of a common-weale, and where it is, there cannot be but peace and contentment in all eſtates; and ſo neceſſary, as without the practiſe of it, no houſe, family, ſocietie, cittie, common-wealth, kingdome, or Church can ſtand or continue. Indeed a kingdome may be obtained by force and armes, by violence and cruelty: but it cannot ſtand or continue without this equity, and Chriſtian moderation betwixt man and man. Nay ciuill ſociety, and common dealing betwixt man and man, cannot continue, vnleſſe one man yeeld to another. In a word, there can be no peace in families, no ſound or laſting loue betwixt man and wife, nor any comfortable quietnes, where one doth not yeeld to the other, and one beare with another in many things. And if it be ſo in marriage, which is the neareſt coniunction, and the moſt excellent and perfect ſociety, which is in this world: then is it much more true, in all other ſocieties of men, that there can be no peace, no Chriſtian neighbourhood, no true friendſhip, vnles one beare with another, and one towards another do carry himſelfe in an euen and moderate courſe.

Seeing therefore this is ſo neceſſary and excellent a vertue, I haue purpoſed to ſpeake of it at large. Let vs then examine theſe two points: 1. the nature of it. 2. the kindes of it.

For the firſt: Chriſtian equity is a rare and excellent vertue, whereby men vſe a true meane, A and an equall moderation in all their affaires and dealings with men, for the maintaining of iuſtice, and preſeruation of peace. This I take to be the true deſcription of the generall nature of this vertue: and herein, Firſt, I ſay it is a vertue, which is conuerſant about practiſing of a moderation in all our courſes and dealings with men. For we men can vſe no meane nor moderation with God, but if we doe euill, it is all too much, and if wee doe good, it is all too little: againe, equity and moderation is to be performed of God towards men, and not of men towards God. For if men deale not equally towards God, the fault is theirs, and not his, God is not the worſe for it; but if God B deals not moderately with men, the world would not laſt one houre. And laſtly, where there are no faults, there is no forgiueneſſe: where no infirmities, there needes no moderation: but in God there is no want, no errour, no imperfection; but his loue, his mercy, and his workes of loue and mercy towards mankinde, and to his Church eſpecially, are moſt perfect, therefore there needes no moderation, nor forbearance towards God, but towards men, who being fleſh and blood, and full of infirmities, (from which regeneration it ſelfe doth not fully free vs) do therfore ſtand in neede of this vertue to bee practiſed amongſt them: elſe their ſociety and fellowſhip cannot endure. And further, all men in C this caſe are alike, & therefore one hath good cauſe to beare with another. The Prince is fleſh and blood as well as his ſubiects: the husband is fleſh and blood as well as the wife is; the Paſtor is a man as his people and hearers are. Hence it followeth, that therefore one is ſubiect to infirmities, as well as an other: and therſore I conclude, that in all our courſes and dealings of man with man in this world, there muſt be practiſed a Chriſtian moderation.

Secondly, I ſay in the deſcription, that the end of this vertue, is to maintaine iuſtice, and to preſerue peace: which two are the very ſinewes and ſtrength of a Chriſtian kingdome: for D where we doe not to other men, as we would others ſhould do to vs, there is no iuſtice. And where wee will not paſſe by ſmall faults, and forbeare infirmities, there can be no peace: ſuch is the excellency of this vertue, as it ſerues to maintaine two other ſuch great and principall vertues, as are euen the heart, and the braine of the common-wealth, namely, Iuſtice and Peace.

But for the more exact & particular knowledge of the nature of this neceſſary vertue: let vs deſcend to the particular branches and kindes of it.

Chriſtian Equitie therefore, is either publike, or priuate.

Publike Equity is that, which is practiſed in publike meetings and aſſemblies of men, as in Courts of iuſtice, Aſſiſes, Seſſions, Councels, Parlaments, and ſuch like.

The matter whereabout this publike Equity is conuerſant, is the right and conuenient, and the moderate and diſcreet execution of the lawes of men.

Lawes of men, made by lawfull authority according to God Law, and for the common good are, and are to be eſteemed, bones and ſinewes to holde together, props and pillars, to vphold the common wealth, and all ſocieties. God therefore hath giuen to Kings, and to their lawfull deputies, power and authority, not only to command & execute his owne lawes, commaunded in his word: but alſo to ordaine and enact other good and profitable lawes of their owne, for the more particular gouernment of their people, and to be helps for the better executing of Gods lawes. And alſo to annexe a puniſhment and penalty to the ſaid lawes: which penalty is to be according to the quality of the fault, greater or leſſe: inſomuch that they may in many caſes, (if the common good ſo require) inflict euen death it ſelfe. And further, God hath giuen theſe gods vpon earth, a power as to make theſe lawes, and annexe theſe puniſhments: ſo alſo vpon mens defaults & breaches, hath he giuen them authority to execute the law ſo made, and to inflict vpon the offender, the puniſhment annexed.

Now becauſe this point is of great moment in a commõwealth: and the true knowledge and due practiſe thereof, is the glory and beauty of a kingdome: therefore for the better direction herein, both of prince and people, magiſtrate and people gouerned; let vs enter further into the conſideration thereof.

In the lawes of common wealthes, two things are to be conſidered, the ſight whereof will giue great light, to know more perfectly, what this publike equity is.

Theſe are 1. the extremity of the law: 2. the mitigation of the law.

Both theſe are put into the hand of the Magiſtrate by God himſelfe, to bee ordered according to his diſcretion, and as the circumſtance requireth: and of them in order. The extremitie of the law, is, when any law of man, is vrged and executed ſtraightly & preciſely, according to the literall ſenſe, & ſtrict forme of the words, and the exacteſt meaning, that can be made out of the words, without any manner of relaxation, at that time, when there is good and conuenient cauſe of mitigation, in regard of the perſon offending.

The point cannot wel be expreſſed in fewer words.

The principall, and moſt materiall clauſe in this deſcription of extremitie, is in thoſe words: At that time, when there is iuſt cauſe of mitigation, in regard of the perſon offending. For A if there be no good cauſe of mitigation, then it is not called extremity, but iuſtice of the law: but when there is good cauſe, why in a Chriſtian conſideration of ſome circumſtances, this iuſtice ſhould bee mitigated, and yet is not; but contrariwiſe is extreamely vrged, and preſſed to the furtheſt, then it is extremitie: Now this extremitie of the law, is in this caſe ſo farre from iuſtice, as indeede it is flat iniuſtice. And herein is the prouerbe true, Summum ius, ſumma iniuria: that is, the extremity of the law, is extreame iniury. And of this doth the holy Ghoſt meane, Eccl. 7. 7. Be not ouer iuſt, that is, preſſe not iuſtice too farre, nor vrge it too extreamely in all caſes, leſt ſometimes you make the name of iuſtice, a B couer for cruelty.

Now beſides this, there is a ſecond thing in the hand of the Magiſtrate, namely, the moderation, relaxation, or mitigation of this extremitie: and that is, when the proper forme of the words, and the ſtricteſt meaning of the law is not vrged, and the puniſhment preſcribed in the law, is moderated, or leſſened, or deferred, or (it may be) remitted, vpon good and ſufficient reaſon; and in ſuch caſes, as whereof the law ſpeakes not directly, nor the law-maker did purpoſely aime at. The ground of this mitigation is, becauſe no law-makers being men, can fore-ſee, or ſet downe all caſes that may fall out. Therefore when the caſe altereth, then muſt the diſcretion of C the law-maker ſhew it ſelfe, and do that which the law cannot doe.

This mitigation is in the hand of the Magiſtrate, as well as the extremity: nay it is a part of his duty as well as the former: and he offends as well, that neglects to mitigate the extremitie, when iuſt occaſion is, as hee that neglects to execute the extremity, when there is need. As therefore, he is no way fitte to be a Iudge, who hath no knowledge, or care to execute the law; ſo he is but halfe a Iudge, who can do nothing but vrge the law, & the plaine words of the law, and is not able alſo to mitigate the rigour of the law, when neede ſo requireth. Therefore euery Magiſtrate is to practiſe this with the other, and not to ſeparate D thoſe things which God hath ioyned.

But now leſt this moderation, and mitigation of mans lawes, (which is the practiſe of publike equity) ſhould turne to the maintenance of malefactors, the aboliſhing of lawes, the deſpiſing or weakening of authority, (which in theſe daies litle needeth) we muſt therefore now remember this caution, That there muſt be no mitigation, but honeſt, profitable, and conuenient. If any man aske, when is it ſo? I anſwer in three caſes.

Firſt, when the mitigation ſtands with the law of nature.

Secondly, when it agreeth with the morall law, or any part of the written word.

Thirdly, when an inferiour law is ouerruled, or countermanded by a higher law.

In theſe three caſes, the moderation of A mens lawes, and the mitigation of the puniſhment due, by the extremity of theſe lawes,is honeſt and good,and may and ought to be practiſed.

But if it be contrary,and not warranted by ſome of theſe: then that mitigation is flatte iniuſtice,and a manifeſt wrong vnto the law.

That the difference of theſe two, the extremity, and mitigation, may better be diſcerned,let vs conſider it in ſome examples.

It is the law of England, and many other countries,that the theefe ſhall die.

Now though the word of God hath not the ſame puniſhment in plaine tearmes: yet is the law good and warrantable, as ſhall appeare in the ſequell, and I thinke is doubted B of by none.

The drift of this law is,to repreſſe that common and generall ſinne of theeuery,a preuailing ſinne,as any other, & ſo farre preuailing, as the rigour of good lawes is neceſſarily required, for the repreſſing of it: ſo that this law was made,for the cutting off of ſuch rotten members as doe but corrupt others, and of whoſe amendment there is no hope.

Now, ſuppoſe a young boy pinched with hunger,colde,and pouerty,ſteales meate, apparell, and other things for releefe, beeing preſſed to it by want, and not hauing knowledge, or grace to vſe better meanes: to put this perſon to death, for this fact, is the extremity of the law,in reſpect of the circumſtances C of the perſon,who did it,beeing a childe: and of the end, for which he did it,to releeue his wants.

Now the moderation in this caſe is, when vpon theſe conſiderations, that firſt,he is not an olde,nor a practiſed theefe,but young and corrigible,one that being reformed,may liue long, & prooue a good member in the common wealth: and ſecondly, that his theft was not hainous, but the things hee ſtole were of ſmall value: and thirdly,that he did it not vpon a malicious, cruell, and iniurious intent, but to releeue his hunger and want. The equity or moderation,I ſay in this caſe,is not to inflict death, (for that were extremity,) but to determine a puniſhment, leſſe then death: yet D ſuch a one as ſhall bee ſufficient, to reforme the party from his ſinne, to puniſh the fault, to terrifie others,and to ſatisfie the law.

Thus in this example it appeares manifeſtly what this moderation is, and what is extremity,which is contrary to it: and the ſame might we ſee in many more.

Now hauing thus conſidered theſe two together,hereupon wee may ſee what this publike equity is,namely nothing elſe,but a moderation and mitigation of the extremity of a law, vpon honeſt and conuenient reaſons, and in ſuch caſes, as were not directly intended in the law. The obſeruation and due practiſe of this equity, is the glory, credit, and honor of all publike aſſemblies,as aſſiſes,ſeſſions,and all courts of iuſtice,and without the obſeruation of this, when neede is, all that they do is flat iniuſtice in that caſe. For they lame and maime the law, they fulfill but the one part of the law: for in euery law there are theſe two things: the extremitie in plaine tearmes, and the mitigation implied, and theſe two together make the law perfect: and the glory of the law ſtands as well in practiſing of the mitigation, as in the execution of extremity, nay ſometime it ſtands in the mitigation, and not in the extremity, inſomuch as the moderation is then the equity of the law,and the extremity is meere iniuſtice. And as this is the glory of the law,ſo is it the glory of Iudges and Magiſtrates, thus to execute the lawes, and to temper them with ſuch diſcretion, as neither too much mitigation, doe aboliſh the law, nor too much extremity leaue no place for mitigation. Therefore (to make an end of this point) two ſorts of men are here reprooueable. Firſt,ſuch men (as by a certen fooliſh kinde of pitty, are ſo carried away,) that would haue nothing but mercie, mercie, and would haue all puniſhments, forfeitures,penalties, either quite taken away, & remitted,or at leaſt leſſoned,and moderated, they would alſo haue the extremity of the law executed on no man. This is the high way to aboliſh lawes, and conſequently to pull downe authority, and ſo in the ende to open a doore to all confuſion, diſorder, and to all licentiouſnes of life. But I neede not to ſay much herein, for there are but fewe that offend in this kinke, mans nature beeing generally inclined, rather to cruelty then to mercy. This fault proceedes either from a weakeneſſe of it,and an effeminateneſſe of minde; and then a man is vnfit to bee a Iudge: or elſe from vaine glorie,and a baſe and affected popularity, and ſuch a man is vnworthy to bee a Iudge.

But in the ſecond place, this doctrine and the very ſcope of this text, condemnes another ſort of men,which are more cõberſome; that is to ſay, ſuch men as haue nothing in their mouthes,but the law,the law: and iuſtice, iuſtice: in the meane time forgetting, that iuſtice alwaies ſhakes hands with her ſiſter mercy,and that all lawes allow a mitigation. The cauſes of this euill are two.

1. The general corruption of mans nature, which is alwaies ready to deale too hardly with other men: as alſo to mildly with themſelues,and partially in their owne cauſes.

2. And ſecondly, for the moſt part, ſuch men doe gaine more by law, then by equity, more by extremity, then by mitigation: as the ſouldier liues better by warre,then by peace; and as the fleſh-flie feedes on the wound,that cannot feede on the ſound fleſh: ſo theſe men gaine by law, that which they can neuer get by equity: for equity and moderation breede vnity, and if all men were at vnity, what ſhould become of them? but extremitie breeds variance: for (in reaſon) one extremitie drawes on an other, & ſo in mens variances they are ſet on worke: & the more the better for them. Theſe men therefore, ſticke ſo preciſely on their points, and on the very tricks and trifles of the law, as (ſo the law be kept, and that in the very extremitie of it,) they care not, though equitie were troden vnder foote: and that law may reigne vpon the earth, & they by it; they care not, though mercie take her to her wings, and flie to heauen. Theſe men (for all their goodly ſhewes) are the decayers of our eſtate, and enemies to all good gouernment. For though they haue nothing in their mouthes, but Iuſtice, Iuſtice, and haue baniſhed mercy, yet let them know, that Iuſtice will not ſtay where mercy is not. They are ſiſters, & goe alwaies hand in hand: they are the two pillars, that vphold the throne of the Prince: as you cannot hold mercy, where Iuſtice is baniſhed, ſo cannot you keepe Iuſtice where mercy is exiled: and as mercie without Iuſtice, is fooliſh pitie, ſo Iuſtice without mercie, is crueltie. So that as theſe men haue baniſhed mercie, ſo within a ſhort time, they will ſend Iuſtice after her, and cruelty and oppreſſion will come in their roomes, which are the very ouerthrow of all eſtates.

Theſe men, when they are made practiſers of the law, Iudges, or Magiſtrates, are to learne this leſſon, which the holy Ghoſt here teacheth, Let your equitie be knowne to all men: and let all Magiſtrates thinke it their honour, to be counted mercifull Iudges: let them reioyce, as well to ſhew mercie when there is cauſe, as to execute extremitie when there is deſert: and let them labour for that Chriſtian wiſedome and diſcretion, whereby they may be able to diſcerne, when mercie and mitigation ſhould take place, and when extremitie ſhould be executed. If inferiour Iudges or Magiſtrates be negligent herein, then muſt we haue recourſe to the Prince, the higheſt Iudge on earth, and vnder God the firſt fountaine of Iuſtice and mercy: whoſe care muſt bee, that as Iuſtice and mercie (not one of them, but both together) doe vphold his throne, & faſten the Crowne vpon his head: ſo he likewiſe ſee them both maintained, and take order, that in the execution of his owne lawes, there bee alwaies a roome as well for mercie and mitigation, as for Iuſtice and extremitie. This muſt he doe, becauſe his lawes cannot be as Gods lawes are. Gods lawes are perfect, and abſolute, and of ſuch an vniuerſall righteouſneſſe, as that at all times, and in all places, they are of equall ſtrength, and of the ſame equitie in all caſes: and therefore are to be executed without diſpenſation, relaxation, or any mitigation, which cannot be offered vnto them, but with iniurie and violation. But mens lawes, comming from their owne wits, are imperfect, and ſo in all caſes, they doe not hold the ſame equitie, and therfore muſt needes be executed with a diſcreet and wiſe moderation. This moderation is publike equitie, and this publike Equity, is the ſcope of this text, and the due practiſe of it in the execution of mans lawes, is the glory of all Chriſtian Commonwealths.

Hitherto of the firſt and principal branch of Publike Equitie.

To proceede further. As this publike Equitie principally ſtands in the moderation of the lawes of men; ſo it deſcends more ſpecially euen to all the publike actions of a mans life: ſo that by the rule and direction of this Equitie, thus deſcribed, men may know how to guide themſelues, in ſuing bonds, and taking forfeitures: and how men may with good conſcience, carrie themſelues in ſuretyſhips, in taking of fines, in letting of leaſes, and in all manner of mutuall bargins, betwixt man and man. By vertue of this, a man may ſee how to frame all theſe and ſuch like actions, in ſuch ſort, as himſelfe ſhall reape credit, and gaine ynough, and his neighbour helpe and ſuccour by him.

For in forfeitures of bonds, forfeitures of lands, or leaſes, in ſuretyſhips, in rents, in fines, and all other dealings of men together, there are theſe two things.

Firſt, the extremitie, that is, that which the law will affoard a man in that caſe: and there is ſecondly, the moderation of the extremitie, vpon good and conuenient reaſons: let vs conſider of them in ſome few examples.

A man is bound to another, in an hundreth pound, to pay fiftie at a day. The ſame man, not by negligence, but by ſome neceſſitie, breakes his day, and afterwards brings the principall debt. Now to take the forfeiture, is in this caſe, extremitie: though the law doth yeeld it. And if a man ſtand vpon this extremitie, hee deales not honeſtly and equally, but hardly and extreamely with his neighbour: and the law cannot free him in this caſe, from manifeſt Iniuſtice.

What is then the moderation in this caſe? Euen this, to take thine owne, and remit the forfeiture: the reaſon is, becauſe the cauſe and ground of appointing a forfeiture, was not for aduantage, but only for the better ſecurity of the principall: which ſeeing thou haſt, thou haſt that which the law did intend thee.

Againe, his breach was not wilfull, or with purpoſe to hurt thee, but againſt his will. If therefore thou beeſt directly damnified by his miſſing thy day, (without all æquiuocation) then take thy reaſonable dammages out of his forfeiture, if not, then remit the whole forfeiture; and this moderation is publike equitie. And without this, there can bee no buying nor ſelling, borrowing nor lending, betwixt man and man. See another example. One takes a leaſe of thee, for yeares, to pay thee ſuch a rent, and for not paiment of that rent, his leaſe to be void. The poore man miſſeth his rent day: now what ſaith the law? his leaſe is forfeited : but to take this aduantage, is the A extremitie of the law: the moderation is, to remit the ſame forfeiture, in part, or in whole, as thou ſhalt ſee reaſon in equitie and conſcience: This moderation is in this caſe, Publike equitie, and without this, there can be no letting of lands, betwixt man and man.

So for fines and rents, the law ſaith, Thou maiſt make the moſt of thine owne: If thou ſtretch this law as farre as the very words will beare, then maieſt thou make ſuch fines and rents, as may grinde the faces of the poore, ſo as no man ſhall liue vnder thee: but thus to doe, is Extremitie, and beyond the purpoſe of the law.

The moderation in this caſe is, not to take all B thou maieſt get, but ſo to fine and rent thy lands, as he that takes them, may liue of them: The reaſon of this Mitigation is, becauſe enuie and hatred, may often make many men offer more for a farme, then it is worth, to croſſe and hurt their neighbour, or to get all into their owne hand. Here therfore, though the law doth yeeld thee all that, which a man doth willingly offer, yet muſt thine own conſcience be a law vnto thee, to make thee a moderatour of that extremitie.

Let theſe three examples ſerue for many. Now in theſe and all other publike dealings betwixt men in the world, a man obſerues Publike equitie, when he dealeth not with his neighbour, according to that extremity, C which the ſtrickt words of the law will beare: but according to that Moderation, which good conſcience requireth; and which the law it ſelfe in ſome caſes doth admit. By the knowledge of theſe two, a man that hath any conſcience, may ſee how to carrie himſelfe, in all theſe ciuill affaires, in an euen, vpright, and equall courſe, and warrantable not onely by the law of the land, but euen by the law and word of God.

And I make this diſtinction of the law of the land, and the word of God, becauſe wee are to know this for a rule: That euery extremitie, which a law in the ſtricteſt acception doth affoard, is not warrantable to be vrged by the word of God: and yet notwithſtanding it is good, conuenient, and requiſite, that the extremitie be warran- D ted by the law, becauſe in ſome caſes, it muſt needs be executed. The lawes of men, may ordaine and appoint extremities: but the law of God muſt tell vs, when to vrge them, and when to moderate them: So then, when a man takes the extremitie, he doth that, that is alwaies warrantable by the law: but in ſome caſes, is not warrantable by Gods word, which commandeth a Mitigation, when there is good reaſon for it. But he that taketh the extremitie, when there is no iuſt cauſe of mitigating it, and againe doth mitigate it, when there is cauſe, his courſe is not onely warrantable by the lawes of men, but euen by the lawes of God alſo. For it is the dutie of euery Chriſtian man, to remember in all his bargains and dealings, that his maner of dealing, muſt not onely be warranted by the lawes of the land, but euen by Gods word alſo: & this is to be knowne and taken for a generall rule in all this treatiſe. And he that will duly conſider the true difference of extremitie and moderation, as they are here deſcribed, may ſee how to carrie himſelfe in all his dealings, ſo as they may bee warrantable: both by our owne lawes, and by the word of God.

To returne then to the matter, and to end this point of publike equitie: If any man ſhall obiect, that this moderation is a wrong to the law: I anſwer, it is not: for it is neither againſt the law, nor altogether beſides the law, but onely beſides the ſtricteſt meaning of the law. Nay it is included in the law, as well as the extremity is, though not in the ſame manner: for the extremity is warranted by the law, mitigation is but tollerated: the law alloweth extremity, but it onely admitteth a mitigation. So then, both extremitie and mitigation, are within the law, but it is in the hand principally of the Magiſtrate, and in ſome caſes of other men alſo to diſcerne the ſeuerall circumſtances, when the one is to bee executed, and when the other: for ſometime one is the iuſtice of the law, and ſometime the other: and according as theſe two are iuſtly and wiſely executed or neglected, ſo is the iuſtice of the law executed or neglected.

The want of this equitie in mens publike actions, is the cauſe of much cruelty, oppreſſion, and inequalitie in dealings betwixt man and man; becauſe extremitie is for the moſt part onely regarded, & mitigation is baniſhed out of all bargaines. And it is impoſſible, to keepe good conſcience in forfeitures of bonds, and in forfeiture of lands, ſuretyſhips, fines, rents, and ſuch kinde of actions, vnleſſe there be due regard had to the practiſe of this publike equitie. Men therfore, muſt conſider that they are Chriſtians; and liue in a Chriſtian Commonwealth: And they muſt not ſtand only vpon the law, and the aduantage that the law giues. As they are men, they haue a law of the country, which may allow extremitie: but as they are Chriſtians, they liue vnder a law of God, the eternal law which muſt iudge them at the laſt day: the righteous law, which no creature ſhall euer be able to blame of iniuſtice, or of extremitie: and men muſt know, that God himſelfe commands this equitie of one man to another.

But if men, for the feare of God, will not deale equally and moderately, with them that are in their power, but ſtand ſtrictly vpon forfeitures and other extremities: then muſt the godly Magiſtrate exerciſe his power, and by the force of his authoritie, cauſe them to mitigate their extremitie, and to put in practiſe that equity which becommeth Chriſtians. And let euery Iudge and Magiſtrate know, that by the law of the euerlaſting God, he not onely may, but is bound thus to doe to

A them, who will not doe it of themſelues. It may bee therefore good counſell to all men, rather to practiſe this Chriſtian equitie of themſelues, then to bee compelled to it by authoritie: for euery vertue and good worke, the more free and voluntarie it is, the more acceptable is it to God, and more commendable before men: and let all men remember, that whereas the ſtrict words of mens lawes, ſeeme to giue them leaue to vrge the extremity, yet cannot that excuſe them, nor free them from the danger of Gods law, which commands them to practiſe Chriſtian equitie and moderation.

Now before we make an end of this Publike equity, one point is neceſſary to be handled in few words. B Some may obiect, If moderation be intended, and included in our law, as well as extremitie, why then is extremitie onely mentioned in the law, and not this mitigation, which they ſo much doe vrge vnto vs? The anſwer is readie. The law expreſſeth and vrgeth the extremitie, to fray men thereby, from comming within the danger of the extremitie; and concealeth the mitigation, leſt it ſhould be an encouragement to offend: yet intending it as well as the extremitie, and leauing it in the hand of the Magiſtrate, to put in practiſe, when iuſt occaſion is offered, as well as the extremitie. Herein appeareth the great wiſedome of the law-makers, our auncient foreſathers, who well and wiſely foreſaw, that C though mitigation be as neceſſarie as extremitie, and oftentimes more: yet becauſe of the ill conſciences of the moſt men, and the readineſſe of all men to offend, thought it fitter to expreſſe the extremitie in plaine tearmes; thereby to keepe ill men within the compaſſe of obedience, and cloſely to leaue the mitigation to the diſcretion of the Magiſtrate. So then our law-giuers concealed the mitigation, and expreſſed it not in their lawes, in good policie, and to good purpoſe. If we therefore doe onely take the extremity, wee take onely one part of their intent, and ſhew our ſelues vnwiſe, and ſhallow witted, who cannot ſee D the wiſedome, which they cloſely concealed, in wiſe and Chriſtian policie.

He is not worthie the name of a lawyer, at leaſt of a Chriſtiā lawyer, much leſſe worthy the place and ſeate of a Iudge, who knoweth not this. For if the law contained not both theſe, it were vnrighteous, and ſo no law. For mitigation is for the good man, and extremitie for the euill, the careleſſe, and vnconſcionable man: if there were no extremitie, how could the euill man be kept within compaſſe? and how ſhould the poore honeſt man liue, if there were no mitigation? So then, it is warrantable by the word of God, and good conſcience, that extremitie ſhould be in force, and ſhould ſtand by the law, but ſo as it alwaies admit of mitigation, when neede is.

Let therefore our concluſion be, to exhort euery man, into whoſe hands is put the execution of lawes, to ſhew himſelfe as wiſe, in executing them, as were our forefathers in the making of them: that is, as well to regard the Mitigation which is concealed, as the Extremitie which is expreſſed: ſo ſhall the law-makers wiſe intent be performed, publike equitie preſerued, and much Iniuſtice and hard dealing preuented.

Now in regard of this, that hath beene deliuered touching publike Equitie, lawyers muſt not thinke, that I haue gone beyond the compaſſe of my calling, and encroched vpon their liberties. For they are to know, that the lawes of men, are policie, but Equitie is Chriſtianitie. Now Chriſtianitie was, before there were any lawes of men: & therfore they muſt bee ordered according to the rules of Chriſtianitie. Againe, Diuines muſt take lawyers aduice, concerning Extremitie, and the letter of the law: good reaſon then that lawyers take the Diuines aduice, touching Equitie which is the intent of the law. Moreouer, their law is but the miniſter of equitie; but our law the word of God is the fountaine of Equitie: therefore the principall rules of Equitie, muſt they fetch from our law: conſidering that law without equitie, is plaine tyrannie. Laſtly, in the firſt Chriſtian Commonwealth that euer was, namely, the Iewes, the Diuines, that is, the Prieſts of thoſe daies, were the onely lawyers: for their poſitiue lawes were the Iudiciall lawes, giuen by God himſelfe, whoſe interpreters were the Prieſts and Leuites. If therefore, once the Diuines had ſo much to doe with poſitiue lawes, it may not nowe bee thought amiſſe, if they giue aduice out of the word of God, touching the equall execution of the lawes of men.

And ſo much touching the doctrine of publike Equitie, grounded vpon the word of God.

Now followeth the ſecond kind of Equitie, called priuate; namely, that which is to be exerciſed betwixt man and man, in their priuate actions.

But ere we goe further, ſome may demand the difference betwixt publike and priuate actions. Priuate actions of men are ſuch, as are practiſed amongſt men, without any help of the law: as contrariwiſe, Publike actions are ſuch, as cannot be performed but by the helpe of the law, and the hand of the Magiſtrate. Whereupon it followeth, that publike actions may bee betwixt priuate men, and priuate actions betwixt publike perſons: there is a publikeneſſe and a priuateneſſe (as I may tearme it) both of men and actions. A man is priuate, vntill he be exalted vnto ſome authoritie, in Church or Commonwealth: then he is a publike perſon. An action is priuate, as long as it is begun and handled betwixt two men, and needeth not the publike voice, nor cenſure of the law to determine it, and then it is publike. For example: a Magiſtrate may haue dealing with an other man, or two Magiſtrates together. If they determine it together betwixt themſelues, it is a priuate action, because they do it, not as they are Magiſtrates, but as they are men: and ſo there is a priuate action betwixt publike perſons. So a priuate man no Magiſtrate, may haue a treſpaſſe, a debt, a forfeiture, or any other action or demand againſt another man: wherein (becauſe he cannot come to a reaſonable and equall end, by priuate meanes) he craues the helpe of the law, and the voice of the Magiſtrate: and ſo here is a publike action betwixt priuate men. Now this vertue of Equity reſpecteth not the publikenes or priuateneſſe of the perſons, but of the actions: therefore as that is Publike Equitie, which is exerciſed in the determining of publike actions, which come to the iudgement of the law: ſo that is priuate Equitie, which is practiſed in the managing of Priuate Actions, which are begun and concluded priuately betwixt man and man, and neuer come to publike hearing, nor triall of the law.

Now let vs come to ſearch more neerely into the nature of this vertue. Priuate Equitie is a moderate, euen, and equall carriage of a mans ſelfe, in all his priuate words and deedes, towards all other men, and all their words and deeds. First, I ſay, it is [a moderate carriage] of a mans ſelfe, that is, betwixt both extreamities, neither bearing all things, nor reuenging euery thing. Secondly, I ſay towards all other men: wherein I comprehend all men, and all ſorts of men: husbands, wiues: Magiſtrates, ſubiects: teachers, hearers: maſters, ſeruants: parents, children: men, women, neighbours in townes, fellowes in ſocieties, in ſeruice, in labour. In a word, none are excepted, who any way doe liue or conuerſe together, but of them all it is true, that if there be not a moderation, and a forbearance one of another, there can be no peace amongſt them, but their liues ſhall be all (as it were) a hell vpon the earth.

Seeing therefore, the neceſſitie and excellencie of this vertue is ſuch, that the due practiſe of it is the ornament of families, and ſocieties, and the comfort of a mans life in this world; let vs enter into a more particular conſideration thereof. Priuate Equity hath foure degrees, or principall duties.

First, to beare with naturall infirmities.

Secondly, to interpret doubtfull things in the better part.

Thirdly, to depart from our owne right ſometimes.

Fourthly, to forgiue priuate and perſonall wrongs.

Of all theſe briefly, and in order.

The firſt dutie of priuate Equitie, is to beare with the defects and infirmities of mens natures, with whome we liue, as long as they breake not out into any great inconuenience, or enormitie. Theſe infirmities are manifold: as for example: frowardneſſe or moroſity of nature: haſtineſſe; ſlowneſſe of conceit: dulneſſe of wit; ſuſpitiouſneſſe; deſire of praiſe, and ſuch like. Theſe and many other naturall infirmities, muſt a Chriſtian man beare and tollerate patiently, in thoſe with whome hee conuerſeth, as with his wife, his child, his ſeruant, his friend, his neighbour, &c. And ſo long muſt he beare with them, as they are kept within a meane, and breake not out into extremitie. Of theſe the holy Ghoſt ſpeaketh, Prou. 19. 11. It is the glorie of a man to paſſe by an infirmitie: that is, if he ſeeth in his brother weakneſſes of nature, which doe not ariſe from ſetled malice, or cankred corruption, it is a mans glorie and praiſe, alwaies ſo farre to moderate himſelfe, as not to ſee them, not to take notice of them, at leaſt not to be mooued, nor diſquieted at them: and oftentimes, ſo litle to regard them, as though they were not done. To this end ſaith the Apoſtle, 1. Cor. 13. 7. Loue ſuffereth all things, that is, al things that may be borne with good conſcience, and are done by them whome we loue. Now any thing may bee borne with good conſcience, which is either ſo priuate, or ſo ſmall, that the wrong is onely ours, and no diſhonour thereby enſueth to Gods glorie, nor ill example to the Church: all ſuch things loue ſuffereth. And indeede it is the propertie of true loue, to paſſe by many wants: and the more that a Chriſtian is rooted in true loue, the more infirmities will he paſſe by, in them whome he loues: he ſetteth no limits to himſelfe, how many, or how long to beare, but euen all that are infirmities of nature: many hard words, many angrie fits, many needleſſe ſurmiſes, many vnkindneſſes, will he put vp, and (as it were) not ſee them, whoſe heart is poſſeſſed with true loue, wiſedome, and the feare of God: and thus muſt euery one doe that will practiſe Chriſtian Equitie. For this is a mans glorie, and commendation. Let vs lay this doctrine neerer to our conſciences, by conſidering the nature of this vertue in ſome few examples.

A man hath a wife, or a woman a husband, in whome there is the feare of God, and honeſt faithfull loue, but he or ſhee is ſubiect to anger, or to haſtineſſe, or to an auſteritie in their behauiours, or it may bee it is not in their natures, to practiſe thoſe outward complements of kindneſſe, which others can doe with great facility. Theſe and ſuch like, are but weakeneſſes of nature, in them that feare God: therefore muſt loue couer them, and beare with them, and oftentimes not take notice of them, and the rather, becauſe he or ſhe that hath not ſuch, hath either the like or greater weakeneſſes, all which if one forbeare not in another, it is not poſſible to liue in peace and comfort. But if this part of Equitie were practiſed, it is ſcarce credible, how much it would augment the happineſſe, and adde to the comfort of them that are married.

Againe, a man hath a ſeruant carefull and willing ynough to obey and pleaſe his maſter, A ſter, alſo truſtie and faithfull: but he is ſlow in his buſineſſe, and doth diſpatch things appointed him, to the minde of his maſter, not ſo ſpeedily, not ſo readily, nor with that facilitie, as his maſter requireth. What is to be done in this caſe? To ſee it, and alwaies to checke him for it, and to gall and gird him with it, & euer to be caſting it in his teeth, and threatning him for it, is the extremitie which here the Apoſtle condemneth. The Equitie then in this caſe to be performed, is, in conſideration that it is not a fault of malice, but of nature, not of idleneſſe nor careleſneſſe, but of a naturall weakeneſſe, the Maſter muſt gently tell him of it, and priuately & ſeldome: and aduiſe him, what are the beſt helps for nature in this caſe. B And though hee ſee not that ſpeedie amendment, which he deſireth, yet is he to beare with him, as long as hee is truſtie, diligent, dutifull, and willing, and for thoſe ſo many good properties, hee muſt beare with his wants, and not be too ſharpe, either in reprouing, or in correcting him for them.

In the third place: A man hath occaſion, to conferre often with another man, by reaſon that they are neighbours, or ſpeciall friends, or of the ſame calling, and courſe of life: but one of them is haſtie, & ſoone angry, and it may be in his talke, either for the matter or the maner of it, he cannot but ſhew his anger. Extremity in this caſe is, for a man to C deale roughly with him, to contradict and croſſe him, to denie what he ſaith, to ſtand ſtifly to our owne opinion, and to be angry againe with him.

But on the other ſide, Chriſtian Equity teacheth a man not to ſee it, nor take notice of it, nor to be angrie againe, nor to checke him for it; but to put it off by gentle words, ſoft demands, and other talke: & to yeeld to him, as farre as a man may do, in good conſcience, without betraying of the truth. And by the way, in conference hold it alwaies for a rule of Chriſtian wiſedome, and priuate Equitie, neuer to ſticke ſtifly to any opinion, vnleſſe it be in a plaine truth, & of great moment. Now thus doing to our brother, and ſparing his D weakeneſſe, and continuing on our ſpeech, as though we ſaw not that he was angrie: hereby the conference holds on, and loue is continued as afore. But if contrariwiſe, we take the aduantage of his infirmitie, and diſplay it, and rub him for it, if we be as ſhort as he, & ſtand ſtiffely vpon points, then the conference is broken off without edification, and heartburning riſeth betwixt them, in ſtead of true loue. Thus we ſee in theſe examples, how in a Chriſtian moderation, we are to beare, and to forbeare the naturall weakneſſes of our brethren, if wee purpoſe to liue in any comfort with them in this world.

Yet this forbearance muſt bee with two conditions. Firſt, that theſe wants be wants of nature, not of malice, nor of old, rooted, ſetled, and cankred corruption. Secondly, if they whom we forbeare, containe themſelues within conuenient bounds, & do not exceede, nor breake out into any outrage, or extremitie: for then they are not to be forborne, but to be tould, and reprooued for them, and a mans duty is not to winke at them, but to take notice of them, and to ſhew open diſlike of them. But in as much as theſe are wants of nature, as it is infirmitie in the one to ſhew them, ſo it is the glory & praiſe of the other, to pardon them: yea it is a token of wiſdome, & good gouernment; and a ſigne that a man is a louer of peace, and conſequently of religion, and of God himſelfe, to paſſe by them. The practiſe of this duty, maintaines peace in kingdomes, countries, ſtates, cities, colledges, families, and all ſocieties of men. Thus much for the firſt duty.

The ſecond duty of priuate equitie is, to conſtrue & interpret mens ſayings that are doubtfull, in the better part, if poſſibly it may be: this is to be vnderſtood of all men, though they be our enemies: and this muſt a man doe, if he will liue in peace in this world.

Our nature is giuen to take men at the worſt, to depraue mens deeds and words, and to peruert them to the worſt ſenſe that may be: and this is commonly the cauſe of debate and diſſention in the world.

But the dutie of Chriſtian Equitie is contrarie hereunto; namely, to thinke the beſt they can of all men, to conſtrue all doubtfull actions in the better part, and to make the beſt ſenſe of all doubtfull ſpeeches, if we haue any probable reaſon to induce vs to it. The Apoſtle makes this the propertie of loue, 1. Cor. 13. 5. Loue thinks not euill, that is, not onely then, when there is manifeſt & good cauſe to thinke well; but when it is doubtfull, if it may by any meanes haue a good meaning, if by any means, it may be well thought of, loue will make a man thinke well of it: & the more ſpecially a man loues another, the more equally, indifferently, and Chriſtianly, will he interpret all his ſayings and doings. The want of this duty, and the practiſe of the contrary, is the cauſe of more troubles, tumults, garboiles, fallings out, & heartburnings, in kingdomes, countries, ſocieties, and families, betwixt man and man, then any one thing in the world beſides. Dealing thus with the words of Chriſt coſt him his life: for when Chriſt ſaid, Deſtroy this temple, and I will build it in three daies, they interpreted it of the Temple of Ieruſalem, when as hee meant of the temple of his bodie. And the wrong and ſiniſter interpretation of Dauids ambaſſage, by his neighbour king Hanun, was the cauſe of that great warre betwixt two mightie kingdomes, the Iſraelites, and the Ammonites, which coſt ſo many thouſand their liues. For when Dauid ſent Embaſſadours to comfort him after his fathers death, he and his wicked counſellers interpreted it, that he ſent ſpies, and intelligencers, to find out the weakeneſſe of the land. It cannot be ſpoken, what broiles, hachburlies and confuſions in kingdomes, what contentions in Common-wealths, what factions and diuiſions in colledges and ſocieties; what diſquietneſſe in families, what vnkindnes and falling out amongſt old friends; & what ſeparation euen amongſt them that ſhould be neereſt, are daily in the world, by reaſon of this ſiniſter interpretation of mens words and deeds. We therefore that do profeſſe our ſelues the children of peace, muſt learne to make conſcience of this, the due practiſe whereof, is the conſeruation of peace.

And further in this dutie, one thing more is to be remembred, namely, that wee muſt not giue too ſharpe a cenſure, euen of the open and manifeſt euill ſayings, or doings of our brother: we muſt not iudge them to bee done careleſly, when it may be they are done ignorantly: nor deliberately, when it may be they are done raſhly: nor preſumptuouſly, when it may be they are done vpon infirmitie: nor to be done vpon hatred or malice to vs, when it may be they are done for another cauſe: nor may we iudge an euill thing, to be done for want of conſcience, when it may be, it is done for want of heedfulnes: but alwaies we muſt remember, to make the beſt we can, euen of another mans infirmities. And as, if our brother doe well, we are to acknowledge it, and commend him for it: So if he doe amiſſe, we muſt not make it worſe then it is.

But the world is farre too blame herein: for they can extoll their own well-doing, and twentie waies excuſe their euill doing: but as for other men, they can debaſe their well doing, and aduance their euill doing; nay it is a common thing, to make a badde man worſe then he is, and to ſpeake of an euill action, and of mens faults worſe then they are, yea to ſpeake worſe, euen of ill men then they deſerue. But it is flat Iniuſtice, not onely to ſpeak euill of that that is good, but euen to make an euill thing worſe then it is. Many caſes there are, wherein a man is bound, to make the beſt he can, of a bad action: but to make it worſe then it is, there is no caſe, wherin a man may doe it, without plaine iniurie to his brother. If any man reply, and ſay, I am not to ſpare my ſelfe, nor excuſe my owne faults, but to iudge as hardly of my owne ſayings and doings, as they deſerue, why then ſhould I not alſo doe ſo to another? The anſwer is readie: Becauſe a man knoweth not another man, ſo well as himſelfe. VVords and deedes are knowne to other men, but a mans heart is knowne to himſelfe alone: therefore for thy owne ſayings and doings, thou art alſo able to iudge of thine owne heart, and of thy purpoſe and intent in ſo ſpeaking and doing: but of another man, thou canſt ſay he ſpake or did thus or thus: but his heart, his purpoſe, and intent in ſo doing, thou canſt not iudge: and therefore thou maieſt not iudge ſo ſharply of A another mans ſayings and doings, as of thine owne. To make an end of this point: in the performance of this duty, two cautions muſt be remembred: firſt, that we ſpeake not of continued courſes, in doing or ſpeaking euill, but of particular ſpeeches and actions: for not an action or a ſpeech, but the courſe of life ſhewes what a man is: one euill ſpeech or action may be excuſed, but a cōtinued courſe in doing or ſpeaking euill, may bee by no meanes coloured or excuſed. Secondly, we ſpeake not of manifeſt and publike enormities, as of treaſons againſt the Prince or ſtate: for therin it may be dangerous to the Prince, and hurtfull to the ſtate, to haue any thing coloured, concealed, or excuſed. In ſuch ca- B ſes, we muſt ſet aſide our duty to our brother, and remember our duty to the head & whole bodie: and better it is, that one member bee cut off, then that the whole bodie periſh: but we ſpeake of priuate euill words or deeds, the euill and hurt whereof redoundeth to priuate men. And in them we ſpeake not of manifeſt, groſſe, and palpable crimes, wherein not onely the action is plainly euill, but their intent alſo: for to excuſe or conceale, or to extenuate ſuch, is to make our ſelues acceſſarie to the euill of them. But we ſpeake of doubtful words or deeds, wherein either the action it ſelfe, or at the leaſt, the intent of it, may receiue a likely excuſe, and a probable interpretation of good.

C And vnto theſe two cautions, adde thus much further, that the practiſe of this dutie, for the moſt part ceaſeth, when the Miniſter is to worke vpon the conſcience of an impenitent or a preſumptuous ſinner: for then he is not to moderate or mitigate, to colour or excuſe, to leſſen or extenuate his ſinnes, but to ſpeake of ſinne as it deſerues, and to lay out his ſinnes in their owne colours, that ſo hee may humble him, and caſt him downe.

But out of theſe three caſes, this duty lieth vpon all men, at all times to interpret euery thing in the better part. So then the concluſion of this ſecond dutie is this: Actions appa- D rently good, are to be commended, doubtfull are to be conſtrued in the beſt ſenſe, apparently euil are to be made no worſe then they are, but rather to be excuſed, and let a man alwaies rather ſpeake too well, then too euill of another man, and rather ſpeake better, then worſe then he deſerues, and rather iudge too mildely and mercifully, then too ſharply: for if a man be deceiued either way, that is the ſafer way wherein to be deceiued: Thus to doe, is to performe that Chriſtian equitie which is here commanded, and to maintaine peace which is the comfort of a Chriſtian life. And thus much of the ſecond duty.

The third duty and degree of Priuate Equitie is, In ſundrie caſes to depart from a mans owne right: that is, to yeeld oftentimes in ſuch things, wherein by law he might ſtand; and oftentimes to forgoe ſuch things, which by

A law he might require. Without this Equity, Iuſtice,& peace cannot ſtand. Chriſt our Sauiour gaue a notable exāple hereof in paying tolle, Mat. 17.27. Chriſt needed not to haue done it, nor could any law haue compelled him to it, yet becauſe he would not trouble the publike peace, nor giue them occaſion of contention, he yeelds from his right,& paies them tolle: all Chriſtian men muſt learne by his example, not to ſtand alwaies vpon their right, if they will continue peace in Gods Church. It is not ſufficient Chriſtianity, nay it is a very wicked ſpeech, which wee often heare men ſpeake, It is my right, and therefore I will not loſe it: ſo might Chriſt haue ſaid, and B if you looke the place, you ſhall finde, that he firſt of all argueth the caſe, and concludes that hee is free, and not bound to pay; and yet ſaith Chriſt, Rather then I will offend them, or giue them cauſe to thinke worſe of me, or my doctrine, I will pay it. Euen ſo muſt a a Chriſtian man in many caſes goe from his right, and that for the maintenance of publike peace in the common wealth, and of priuate peace one man with another.

For the maintenance of publike peace, thus muſt men doe in Publike Conferences, as in Parlaments and Councels, and ſuch like generall aſſemblies, wherein the ſeuerall opinions of men are to bee deliuered; and thus C muſt men doe in bonds, forfeitures, borrowing, lending, loſing, finding, buying, ſelling, in leaſes, fines, rents, & all manner of bargaines.

And for the maintenance of priuate peace, men muſt in their moſt priuate actions, one yeeld to another in ſuch things, wherein they might ſtand, and oftentimes be contented to loſe that that is their owne; and in conferences muſt a man oftentimes ſuffer himſelfe to be croſſed and ouerthwarted in that, of which he is moſt certaine, and to graunt that to be, which is not, and that not to bee, which hee knowes to be, if the matter bee of ſmall moment, & concerne not religion, nor the ſtate: many ſuch things muſt a Chriſtian man put vp daily at the hands of his brother for the maintenance of peace & loue amongſt them. D This is a doctrine little knowne, and leſſe regarded in the world; for it is a generall opinion that a man may take his owne, and may lawfully ſtand vpon his owne right, (which if it be meant generally in al caſes, is moſt falſe,) nay this is a common ſpeech of all men, I demaund but my right, and I will not loſe my right; and this is thought a reaſonable ſpeech, and hee is eſteemed a good man, who taketh no more then his right: for oftentimes men ſtand ſo ſtrictly vpon their right, that they go further then their right reacheth. But this is a very carnall practiſe, and controlled by the Scripture, and by the example of Chriſt, as wee heard afore. But if any man obiect, that the example of Chriſt is not to bind vs, becauſe hee is the Mediatour, and therefore was to performe extraordinary obedience: I then anſwer, that not onely Chriſt, but other holy men haue practiſed this duty, for he paied tolle not onely for himſelfe, but for Peter alſo. And there is a notable example of this duty in Abraham,, who when his brother Lot and his ſhepheards could not agree, was content to depart frō his right: for whereas he being the elder, might haue choſen firſt, he notwithſtanding ſtands not vpon that, but bids his brother Lot chooſe whether he will, and he will take what he leaueth. A moſt equall, Chriſtian, brotherly part of that holy Abraham, whoſe faith is ſo much commended in the Scriptures. If we therefore will be called the children of Abraham, then muſt wee bee followers of him in his workes, and namely in this, wee muſt oftentimes depart from our owne right.

In the practiſe of this dutie, one caution onely muſt be remembred, namely, that wee muſt diſtinguiſh of anothers right and our owne. In thy owne right thou maieſt yeeld, but when thou art to deale for another man, thou muſt not yeeld too much, nor bee too lauiſh of another mans right: but this caution holdeth eſpecially when the cauſe is not ours, but Gods, or his Churches; for when it is ſuch a truth, which directly concerneth the honour of God, or the good of his Church, then muſt a man take heed hee yeeld not, without warrant from Gods word. For as it is Equity often to yeeld thy right, ſo to yeeld in Gods cauſes, is to betray the truth. If therfore thou maiſt not giue another mans right from him, without his conſent, much leſſe maieſt thou without warrant from God, yeeld any thing at all of his right from him. This duty therefore is to bee performed in actions that concerne our ſelues, and wherein the loſſe is not Gods, or his Churches, but our owne. But it is lamentable to ſee many men, how lauiſh they are in giuing from God, and care not how much they loſe of his glory: but ſtand moſt ſtrictly vpon their owne points, and wil not yeeld one inch, nor loſe one foote of their owne right. And from hence comes ſo many ſuites in law, and other brabling contentions in the world, all which, or many of them, might be ſtaied, if men had but conſciēce to practiſe this Chriſtian Equity, to yeeld one to another in matters of their owne, and of ſmall moment: and it is certaine, that if men in the world were not perſwaded, ſome by religion and conſcience, ſome by naturall reaſon and pollicie, to practiſe this duty, it were not poſſible for the ſociety of men long to continue vpon the earth. So much for the third degree.

The fourth and laſt degree of Priuate Equity, is to forbeare and to forgiue wrongs and iniuries done vnto vs in word or deede. The Scripture is plaine for this, and ſo is naturall reaſon, which teacheth, that euery one that beares the name of a man, ſhould forgiue another, becauſe he being a man, may deſerue and intelligencers, to find out the weakneſſe of the land. It cannot be ſpoken, what broiles, what hurliburlies and confuſions in kingdomes, what contentions in Common-wealths, what factions and diuiſions in colledges and ſocieties, what diſquietneſſe in families, what vnkindnes and falling out amongſt old friends, & what ſeparation euen amongſt them that ſhould be neereſt, are daily in the world, by reaſon of this ſiniſter interpretation of mens words and deeds. We therefore that do profeſſe our ſelues the children of peace, muſt learne to make conſcience of this, the due practiſe whereof, is the conſeruation of peace.

And further in this dutie, one thing more is to be remembred, namely, that wee muſt not giue too ſharpe a cenſure, euen of the open and manifeſt euill ſayings, or doings of our brother: we muſt not iudge them to bee done careleſly, when it may be they are done ignorantly: nor deliberately, when it may be they are done raſhly: nor preſumptuouſly, when it may be they are done vpon infirmitie: nor to be done vpon hatred or malice to vs, when it may be they are done for another cauſe: nor may we iudge an euill thing, to be done for want of conſcience, when it may be, it is done for want of heedfulnes: but alwaies we muſt remember, to make the beſt we can, euen of another mans infirmities. And as, if our brother doe well, we are to acknowledge it, and commend him for it: So if he doe amiſſe, we muſt not make it worſe then it is.

But the world is farre too blame herein: for they can extoll their own well-doing, and twentie waies excuſe their euill doing: but as for other men, they can debaſe their well doing, and aduance their euill doing; nay it is a common thing, to make a badde man worſe then he is, and to ſpeake of an euill action, and of mens faults worſe then they are, yea to ſpeake worſe, euen of ill men then they deſerue. But it is flat Iniuſtice, not onely to ſpeak euill of that that is good, but euen to make an euill thing worſe then it is. Many caſes there are, wherein a man is bound, to make the beſt he can, of a bad action: but to make it worſe then it is, there is no caſe, wherein a man may doe it, without plaine iniurie to his brother. If any man reply, and ſay, I am not to ſpare my ſelfe, nor excuſe my owne faults, but to iudge as hardly of my owne ſayings and doings, as they deſerue, why then ſhould I not alſo doe ſo to another? The anſwer is readie: Becauſe a man knoweth not another man, ſo well as himſelfe. VVords and deedes are knowne to other men, but a mans heart is knowne to himſelfe alone: therefore for thy owne ſayings and doings, thou art alſo able to iudge of thine owne heart, and of thy purpoſe and intent in ſo ſpeaking and doing: but of another man, thou canſt ſay he ſpake or did thus or thus: but his heart, his purpoſe, and intent in ſo doing, thou canſt not iudge: and therefore thou maieſt not iudge ſo ſharply of A another mans ſayings and doings, as of thine owne. To make an end of this point: in the performance of this duty, two cautions muſt be remembred: firſt, that we ſpeake not of continued courſes, in doing or ſpeaking euill, but of particular ſpeeches and actions: for not an action or a ſpeech, but the courſe of life ſhewes what a man is: one euill ſpeech or action may be excuſed, but a continued courſe in doing or ſpeaking euill, may bee by no meanes coloured or excuſed. Secondly, we ſpeake not of manifeſt and publike enormities, as of treaſons againſt the Prince or ſtate: for therein it may be dangerous to the Prince, and hurtfull to the ſtate, to haue any thing coloured, concealed, or excuſed. B In ſuch caſes, we muſt ſet aſide our duty to our brother, and remember our duty to the head & whole bodie: and better it is, that one member bee cut off, then that the whole bodie periſh: but we ſpeake of priuate euill words or deeds, the euill and hurt whereof redoundeth to priuate men. And in them we ſpeake not of manifeſt, groſſe, and palpable crimes, wherein not onely the action is plainly euill, but their intent alſo: for to excuſe or conceale, or to extenuate ſuch, is to make our ſelues acceſſarie to the euill of them. But we ſpeake of doubtful words or deeds, wherein either the action it ſelfe, or at the leaſt, the intent of it, may receiue a likely excuſe, and a probable interpretation of good.

C And vnto theſe two cautions, adde thus much further, that the practiſe of this dutie, for the moſt part ceaſeth, when the Miniſter is to worke vpon the conſcience of an impenitent or a preſumptuous ſinner: for then he is not to moderate or mitigate, to colour or excuſe, to leſſen or extenuate his ſinnes, but to ſpeake of ſinne as it deſerues, and to lay out his ſinnes in their owne colours, that ſo hee may humble him, and caſt him downe.

But out of theſe three caſes, this duty lieth vpon all men, at all times to interpret euery thing in the better part. So then the concluſion of this ſecond dutie is this: D Actions apparently good, are to be commended, doubtfull are to be conſtrued in the beſt ſenſe, apparently euil are to be made no worſe then they are, but rather to be excuſed, and let a man alwaies rather ſpeake too well, then too euill of another man, and rather ſpeake better, then worſe then he deſerues, and rather iudge too mildely and mercifully, then too ſharply: for if a man be deceiued either way, that is the ſafer way wherein to be deceiued: Thus to doe, is to performe that Chriſtian equitie which is here commanded, and to maintaine peace which is the comfort of a Chriſtian life. And thus much of the ſecond duty.

The third duty and degree of Priuate Equitie is, In ſundrie caſes to depart from a mans owne right: that is, to yeeld oftentimes in ſuch things, wherein by law he might ſtand, and oftentimes to forgoe ſuch things, which by

A law he might require. Without this Equity, Iuſtice, & peace cannot ſtand. Chriſt our Sauiour gaue a notable exãple hereof in paying tolle, Mat. 17.27. Chriſt needed not to haue done it, nor could any law haue compelled him to it, yet becauſe he would not trouble the publike peace, nor giue them occaſion of contention, he yeelds from his right, & paies them tolle: all Chriſtian men muſt learne by his example, not to ſtand alwaies vpon their right, if they will continue peace in Gods Church. It is not ſufficient Chriſtianity, nay it is a very wicked ſpeech, which wee often heare men ſpeake, It is my right, and therefore I will not loſe it: ſo might Chriſt haue ſaid, and B if you looke the place, you ſhall finde, that he firſt of all argueth the caſe, and concludes that hee is free, and not bound to pay; and yet ſaith Chriſt, Rather then I will offend them, or giue them cauſe to thinke worſe of me, or my doctrine, I will pay it. Euen ſo muſt a a Chriſtian man in many caſes goe from his right, and that for the maintenance of publike peace in the common wealth, and of priuate peace one man with another.

For the maintenance of publike peace, thus muſt men doe in Publike Conferences, as in Parlaments and Councels, and ſuch like generall aſſemblies, wherein the ſeuerall opinions of men are to bee deliuered; and thus C muſt men doe in bonds, forfeitures, borrowing, lending, loſing, finding, buying, ſelling, in leaſes, fines, rents, & all manner of bargaines.

And for the maintenance of priuate peace, men muſt in their moſt priuate actions, one yeeld to another in ſuch things, wherein they might ſtand, and oftentimes be contented to loſe that that is their owne; and in conferences muſt a man oftentimes ſuffer himſelfe to be croſſed and ouerthwarted in that, of which he is moſt certaine, and to graunt that to be, which is not, and that not to bee, which hee knowes to be, if the matter bee of ſmall moment, & concerne not religion, nor the ſtate: many ſuch things muſt a Chriſtian man put vp daily at the hands of his brother for the maintenance of peace & loue amongſt them. D This is a doctrine little knowne, and leſſe regarded in the world; for it is a generall opinion that a man may take his owne, and may lawfully ſtand vpon his owne right, (which if it be meant generally in al caſes, is moſt falſe,) nay this is a common ſpeech of all men, I demand but my right, and I will not loſe my right; and this is thought a reaſonable ſpeech, and hee is eſteemed a good man, who taketh no more then his right: for oftentimes men ſtand ſo ſtrictly vpon their right, that they go further then their right reacheth. But this is a very carnall practiſe, and controlled by the Scripture, and by the example of Chriſt, as wee heard afore. But if any man obiect, that the example of Chriſt is not to bind vs, becauſe hee is the Mediatour, and therefore was to performe extraordinary obedience: I then anſwer, that not onely Chriſt, but other holy men haue practiſed this duty, for he paied tolle not onely for himſelfe, but for Peter alſo. And there is a notable example of this duty in Abraham, who when his brother Lot and his ſhepheards could not agree, was content to depart frõ his right: for whereas he being the elder, might haue choſen firſt, he notwithſtanding ſtands not vpon that, but bids his brother Lot chooſe whether he will, and he will take what he leaueth. A moſt equall, Chriſtian, brotherly part of that holy Abraham, whoſe faith is ſo much commended in the Scriptures. If we therefore will be called the children of Abraham, then muſt wee bee followers of him in his workes, and namely in this, wee muſt oftentimes depart from our owne right.

In the practiſe of this dutie, one caution onely muſt be remembred, namely, that wee muſt diſtinguiſh of anothers right and our owne. In thy owne right thou maieſt yeeld, but when thou art to deale for another man, thou muſt not yeeld too much, nor bee too lauiſh of another mans right: but this caution holdeth eſpecially when the cauſe is not ours, but Gods, or his Churches; for when it is ſuch a truth, which directly concerneth the honour of God, or the good of his Church, then muſt a man take heed hee yeeld not, without warrant from Gods word. For as it is Equity often to yeeld thy right, ſo to yeeld in Gods cauſes, is to betray the truth. If therfore thou maiſt not giue another mans right from him, without his conſent, much leſſe maieſt thou without warrant from God, yeeld any thing at all of his right from him. This duty therefore is to bee performed in actions that concerne our ſelues, and wherein the loſſe is not Gods, or his Churches, but our owne. But it is lamentable to ſee many men, how lauiſh they are in giuing from God, and care not how much they loſe of his glory: but ſtand moſt ſtrictly vpon their owne points, and wil not yeeld one inch, nor loſe one foote of their owne right. And from hence comes ſo many ſuites in law, and other brabling contentions in the world, all which, or many of them, might be ſtaied, if men had but conſciẽce to practiſe this Chriſtian Equity, to yeeld one to another in matters of their owne, and of ſmall moment: and it is certaine, that if men in the world were not perſwaded, ſome by religion and conſcience, ſome by naturall reaſon and pollicie, to practiſe this duty, it were not poſſible for the ſociety of men long to continue vpon the earth. So much for the third degree.

The fourth and laſt degree of Priuate Equity, is to forbeare and to forgiue wrongs and iniuries done vnto vs in word or deede. The Scripture is plaine for this, and ſo is naturall reaſon, which teacheth, that euery one that beares the name of a man, ſhould forgiue another, becauſe he being a man, may deſerue

A and ſtand in neede of the ſame himſelfe, and therefore is to doe as he would be done vnto: But eſpecially a Chriſtian man, who lookes for forgiueneſſe at Gods hand for his owne ſinnes, muſt needes forgiue his brother. So that to a Chriſtian man, there is a double band or reaſon, to tie him to this duty. One is as hee is a man, therefore muſt hee forgiue him that offends him, that ſo another man may alſo forgiue him, when he offendeth. For there is none, but beeing a man, and liuing amongſt men, he muſt needs offend. Another more forcible reaſon is, as hee is a Chriſtian, therefore muſt he forgiue, becauſe elſe, how can he in reaſon demand or pray for forgiueneſſe at Gods hand for many thouſand offences of his owne, and thoſe exceeding great, when another man cannot obtaine forgiueneſſe at his hands, for a fewe ſmall offences? This duty is of greater neceſſity then all the former: for vpon practiſe of this, depends the preſeruation of peace: but where this is not practiſed, there is no religion, nor conſcience, nor ſaluation: for where there is no forgiuing of another man, that man is not forgiuen at Gods hands. And hee whoſe ſinnes are not in Chriſt forgiuen, and taken away, that man is in the ſtate of damnation, and till he be forgiuen, he can neuer be ſaued: but hee can neuer be forgiuen, till hee forgiue his brother: C and ſo it is plaine, that euen ſaluation it ſelfe, in ſome ſort, depends vpon the practiſe of this duty, yet not as a cauſe, but as a ſigne, or an effect of ſaluation. For this is not true, that euery one who forgiues, is forgiuen of God, but this is true, that whoſoeuer is forgiuen of God, wil forgiue his brother. So then, neither in reaſon, nor in religion, can a man looke for forgiueneſſe himſelfe, vnleſſe hee make conſcience to forgiue another. Yea God hath made euery man a Iudge in this caſe, to condemne himſelf, if he do it not, when he praies euery day, that God would forgiue him euen ſo, as he doth forgiue others.

Yet in this duty of forgiuing outward iniuries, two cautions are to be remembred. 1. D That there is a time when a man is not to forbeare & ſuffer, but may ſtand vpon his guard, and defend himſelfe from the iniurie: and that is, when his life is indangered, as when a man is aſſaulted by a theefe, or by his deadly enemy, who ſeekes his life, and can haue no helpe, he is in that caſe to help himſelfe, when hee muſt either kill or bee killed, then reaſon and religion biddes him defend himſelfe: and beeing in that caſe, that a man cannot haue the Magiſtrates helpe, that beares the ſword for his defence, God puts for that time, the ſword into a mans own hand, and makes him a Magiſtrate for that time, and occaſion. For in caſes of ſuch extremity, God allowes euery man to bee a Magiſtrate, not onely to defend himſelfe, but euen to kill his enemy, if it bee impoſſible any way elſe to ſaue his owne life: and this defence of a mans ſelfe, hinders not the duty of forgiuing; for ſo farre muſt a man forbeare and forgiue, that hee be ſure to defend his owne life.

In the ſecond place, though a man forgiue the iniury and wrong done vnto him, yet may he ſafely in ſome caſes, goe to law for recompence of that wrong. It is a diuelliſh opinion in the world, that a man cannot go to law, and be in charity: we muſt know, that a man may go to law, and yet be in charity: for to forgiue the malice, and to ſue for recompence, are things indifferent; It is not ſo much charity to forbeare the recompence, as it is to forgiue the malice. If therefore a man forgiue not the malice, hee is out of charity, but hee B may ſue for ſatisfaction, and bee in charity. The Scripture forbiddeth not mens going to law, but tels them how they ſhould do it: law is not euill, though contentious men, and vnconſcionable lawyers, haue vilely abuſed it: but is Gods ordinance, and may lawfully bee vſed, ſo it be on this manner:

Firſt, it muſt not bee for euery trifle, euery treſpaſſe, euery ill word; but in theſe caſes, a man is both to forgiue the malice, and to remit the recompence, becauſe he is litle or nothing at all hurt by it. For example, A poore man ſteales a little meate from thee in his hunger, let the law take hold on him, but purſue thou him no more for it, then by the law thou needes muſt. Againe, thy neighbours cattell doth treſpaſſe thee, thou muſt not goe to law for it, the malice bee it more or leſſe, thou muſt forgiue in Chriſtianity, & for conſcience ſake, and the damage is ſo ſmal, as that therefore thou maiſt not go to law for it. For the law is abuſed in being executed vpon trifles, and thoſe lawyers ſhame themſelues, and diſhonour their profeſſion, who are willing that euery treſpaſſe of ſixepence damages, be an action in the law: this is one of the cauſes of the baſe and vile names that are giuen to the law and lawyers in theſe daies, becauſe the law is imployed vpon ſuch trifles. And it is to be wiſhed, that the ſupreme Magiſtrate would take order to reſtraine this generall euill: that contentious men and vnconſcionable lawyers might not conſpire together, to peſter the law with theſe trifles; & thogh men be ſo vnconſcionable, as to run to the law for euery treſpaſſe, yet ſhould lawyers be ſo conſcionable, and ſo wiſe, as they ſhould driue them from the law again. Thirdly, thy neighbour giues thee ill words, raiſeth or carrieth euill tales of thee: Equitie is, not to goe to law for euery euill word, but to conſider, that for the malice, thou art to forgiue it, and for the damage it cannot bee great, becauſe many mens tongues are no ſlaunder, neither art thou any thing worſe for it, eſpecially when hee dare not ſtand to that he hath ſaid, as for the moſt part they doe not.

The ſecond caution in going to law, is, that it muſt not bee the firſt, but the laſt meanes of peace. Law is a kinde of warre; as therfore war is to be the laſt meanes of publike peace, ſo ſhould the law be the laſt meanes to be vſed, for the attaining of priuate peace. All meanes muſt be tried ere thou go to law, and if none will ſerue, then is the law ordained for thee, wherby to recouer thy right, & to maintaine Equity, for as to go to law for a trifle, or at the firſt, is extremity, and ſo iniury: ſo to go to the law for a cauſe ſufficient, and after other meanes vſed in vaine, is Iuſtice and Equity, and no extremity.

Here therefore let all Chriſtians learne how to go to law; and the rather I doe vrge this point, becauſe the law is notoriouſly abuſed: and it is almoſt incredible, what infinite ſummes and maſſes of money, are daily ſpent in it moſt vnneceſſarily: inſomuch as the lawyers doe exceede in wealth, any other ſort or calling of men in this whole realme.

For reformation wherof, let men but learne and practiſe the two former rules: 1. Law is not ordained to be a Iudge of euery trifle: It is a ſhame to our law that men be ſuffered in the common wealth to arreſt each other for debts of ſmall value, ſo as ten times, & otherwhiles twenty times as much is ſpent for the recouery of them, as the principall is. Are not wee a Chriſtian common wealth? why then haue wee not the wiſedome to appoint another, an eaſier and a directer way for the recouery of ſuch debts? and if there be no other way, why doth not a Chriſtian man ſtay for it, or loſe it rather then go to law for it? It is a ſhame for our nation, that there ſhould be at one Aſſiſes ouer England, ſo many hundred actions of treſpaſſes, wherein the dammage is little or nothing. To reforme theſe, is a worke worthy of a Prince, and euery man ſhould put his helping-hand to it.

Secondly, let law be thy laſt remedy. This rule controlls another foule miſorder in our land. Men are ſued when they would gladly compound; when they would willingly ſatisfie by priuate order, they are compelled to anſwer by law. And yet there is a worſe thing then this: the law which ſhould be the laſt, is not onely made the firſt meanes, but whereas it ſhould bee open and publike, it is vſed as a cloſe and ſecret meanes; it ſteales vpon men (as the phraſe is.) For men are ſued afore they know, and great charges come vpon them, ere they are tolde of it by them that ſue them. Is this Equity? yea is it not rather extremity? And yet (alas) how common is it in moſt places. Let therefore euery Chriſtian man, remember his leſſon here taught by the Apoſtle, Let your Equity be knowne to all men. But it ſeems then, will ſome ſay, that men may not go to law. I anſwer, thou maieſt go to law, though not for trifles, yet for things of waight, as for the purſuit of a notorious thief, to his due and iuſt triall: for the title of thy lands: for the recouery of thy iuſt and due debts of value: and of thy childs portion: for the making ſtraight of great accounts: for A the triall of thy good name, when thou art ſo ſlaundered, and by ſuch, as that thy credit is publikely indangered: for theſe, and ſuch like cauſes, thou maieſt goe to law, when by other more eaſie meanes, thou canſt not procure a reaſonable ſatisfaction. For then it is vnlawfull to ſue for the greateſt cauſe in the world.

The truth of all this doctrine doth Paul teach the Corinths, whome hee reprooueth of three faults. 1. that they went to law before heathen Iudges. 2. for euery cauſe. 3. they vſed no priuate meanes of ſatisfaction, but ran to the law at the firſt.

The firſt of theſe cannot be our ſinne, for wee haue no heathen Iudges, in as much as our ſtate and gouernement, by the mercie of B God is not heatheniſh, but we haue a Chriſtian common wealth. But the other two are the generall ſores of this land; let vs therefore labour to heale them, and to couer our ſhame: let vs remember that not Extremitie, but Equitie becomes a Chriſtian; and let euery man take heed of this, as hee would bee knowne to bee a Chriſtian: for the knowne badge of Chriſtianitie, is mercifulneſſe: the more mercifull, the better Chriſtian. For he hath taſted deeper of Gods mercies to himſelfe, and therefore he is mercifull to his brother; and the worſe Chriſtian, the leſſe mercifull, for he neuer felt Gods mercies to himſelfe, therefore he cannot be mercifull to his brother. Now to goe to law for euery trifle, C or to ſteale law vpon thy brother, or to ſue him before thou offer him peace, it argues a hard heart, and vnmercifull, and farre from this duty of forgiuing: but to be loath to go to law, and to put it off as long as may be, and firſt to giue warning, and to offer peace, and not to doe it, but in matters of waight, it argueth a mercifull heart, and ſuch a one as is ready to forgiue, and ſuch a one in whome the Spirit of God doth dwell.

And thus I hope I haue opened this duty of forgiuing, and forbearing, in ſuch ſort, as a Chriſtian may ſee how to practiſe it, with cōfort to his conſcience, and alſo without any great loſſe in this world, or hurt to his eſtate.

And thus much for the foure ſeuerall duD ties and degrees of priuate Equity.

Now hauing opened the nature & kindes of Chriſtian Equity, let vs proceede further in the text. Let your Equitie (ſaith the Apoſtle) be knowne to all men. The words import, that it is our dutie, not onely to know this vertue, and the nature of it, and to bee able to talke of it, but in all our affaires publike and priuate, and in all our dealings with men, ſo to put it in practiſe, that men may ſee it, & that it may be known to other men and that they may bee able to auouch for vs, that our dealing is vpright, equall, and indifferent, ioyned with equity and moderation, and free from extremitie and oppreſſion: this is the meaning of that which we are here commanded by the Apoſtle. And the reaſon why the Apoſtle vrgeth vs to make it knowne, is, becauſe there is a priuy hypocriſie in our natures, whereby wee are giuen to make ſhew of more then is in vs. Againſt which vice we do truly labour, when we labour to make our vertues manifeſt and knowne to the world, that ſo the tree may be knowne by his fruits: he is a holy & religious man, not who knoweth, and can talke well, but he whoſe religion and holineſſe is knowne in the world, and ſeene of men: he is a mercifull man, of whoſe mercy men do taſte. So he is an equall and vpright man, whoſe Equity is felt, and found by them who deale with him. Let therefore our actions with men teſtifie the vertues of our heart, that men who liue with vs, & deale with vs, may be able to ſay for vs, that we are poſſeſſed with thoſe vertues; for this is to be truly good, not when a man can ſpeake well, or tell of his owne goodneſſe, but when other men ſee it, feele it, and ſpeake of it.

Hitherto of the meaning of the words.

Now that which was Pauls exhortation to the Philippians, ſhall bee mine to all true Chriſtians: Let your Equity be knowne to al men. You haue learned what it is, and how it is to bee practiſed: it now remaines, that wee content not our ſelues with the bare knowledge, but take notice of it, as of a doctrine belonging to vs, and put it in practiſe in all our dealings, publike and priuate, yea and make it manifeſt to the conſciences of all men, good and bad: ſo that euery man, with whome wee deale, may taſte and feele of our Equity, and bee able to teſtifie of vs, that Equity beares rule in all our actions: thus if we doe, wee are Chriſtians not in name, and profeſſion only, but in deed and truth.

And to perſwade vs all to this holy dutie, let vs vſe ſome few reaſons to inforce it: and amongſt all the reaſons that might bee brought, there is none better then this here vſed in the text (The Lord is at hand.)

But before wee come to ſpeake of it, let vs conſider of one other, which doth moſt naturally inforce this exhortation, and it is this:

God ſheweth moſt admirable Equity and moderation towards vs, therefore ought wee to ſhew it one towards another: It is the reaſon of the holy Ghoſt, Be ye mercifull, as your heauenly Father is mercifull. Wonderfull is the moderation that God ſheweth to man, and it appeares eſpecially in foure things, whereof two belong to all men, and the other two concerne his Church.

The firſt Action of God, wherein he ſheweth great moderation towards al men, is this: A law was giuen to our firſt parents, Eate not of this tree, if you doe, you die for it: and that a double death, both of body and ſoule. But they ate, and ſo brake the law, and therby did vndergoe the penalty annexed: by force and vertue whereof, they ſhould haue died preſently, the death both of body and ſoule, and this had beene no Extremitie, but Iuſtice, for this was due vnto them by the Iuſtice of that law, which was giuen them. But now, beholde Gods Equity, and moderation of the Iuſtice of that law, he ſtrikes them not preſently, as the tenour of the law, and their deſert required, neither with the firſt, nor ſecond death, but deferres the full execution, laying vpon them (for the preſent) a leſſe puniſhment, namely, a ſubiection to the firſt death, and a guiltineſſe of the ſecond, that is, of damnation. Beholde a maruellous mitigation, by the tenour of that law, their bodies and ſoules ſhould both haue preſently died, and beene caſt into hell, but God in mercy ſuſpends and deferres the execution of it, and onely ſtrikes Adams body with mortality, whereby he was ſubiect to the firſt death, and his ſoule with guiltineſſe, whereby he was ſubiect to the ſecond death: by which mitigation it came to paſſe, that as Adam by his repentance, afterward quite eſcaped the ſecond death, ſo hee taſted not of the firſt death till nine hundred yeares after. If a priſoner counts it a mercifull fauour of the Prince, or the Iudge, when after his iudgement to die, he is repriued but one yeare; then what a mercifull mitigation was this in God, to repriue our firſt parents for ſo many hundred yeares? This was the firſt action of Gods mercy to man, and this concernes all mankinde generally, but eſpecially Adam and Eue.

But the ſecond doth more neerely concerne all men. So ſoone as a man commits any ſinne, euen then is hee guiltie of eternall damnation, becauſe he hath broken the law: for the curſe of the law is not onely a guiltineſſe, but a ſubiection to the wrath of God, preſently to be inflicted vpon the ſinne committed, without any intermiſſion: ſo that ſo oft as a man ſinneth, ſo oft doth he deſerue to be plunged ſoule and body into hell, without beeing ſpared one houre. If therefore the Lord did caſt tenne thouſand into hel in one houre, he did but Iuſtice, for ſo the law requireth: but ſee the mercifull moderation of the Lord: though we deſerue euery houre to bee caſt into hell, yet is euery houre and minute of our liues, full of the mercy and moderation of the Lord: ſo as though our ſinnes crie for damnation preſently, yet God ſtaieth his hand, and doth not execute the ſentence of damnation vpon the ſinner inſtantly after his ſinne, no not in one of ten thouſand, but ſpareth euery man many yeares, ſome more, ſome leſſe, but all more then their ſinnes deſerue, or the law requireth. We often reade, and alwaies finde, that God heares the crie of ſinners: but we ſeldom reade, that God heares the crie of ſinne, for if hee alwaies heard it, when ſinne cries for vengeance to him, hee ſhould turne vs all into hell in one houre: this is a wonderfull patience and moderation in God, and yet beholde a greater.

For whereas wee by our ſinnes doe euery houre plunge our ſelues into hell, as a man that violently caſtes himſelfe into a gaping gulfe; ſee Gods wonderfull mercy, we thruſt our ſelues in, and he puts vs backe: he ſtaieth vs with his own hand, & ſo keepes vs out. See what a ſea of mercies the Lord doth powre vpon man: for how can that but be an infinite ſea of mercies, which is ſhewed to ſo many thouſands of men, ſo many thouſand times in one houre. If his mercy did not moderate the extremity of his law, there ſhould not be one man left vpon earth, but all in one houre caſt into hell: but God ſtaieth his Iuſtice, and ſtaieth his law, yea ſtaieth vs, who our ſelues would execute the law vpon our ſelues, and ſo caſt our ſelues into hell, he keepes vs out, and giues vnto vs a longer time to repent. And this is true in all men: to ſome hee giues longer, to ſome ſhorter, but to euery one ſome;

whereas the law giues not one houre to any man, nay the law is ſo farre from giuing time to repent, that it admits no repentance at all, no though a man ſhould ſinne but once, and inſtantly after that one ſinne, humble himſelfe in repentance, and craue forgiuenes; the law will not accept him to fauour, nor yeeld forgiuenes, nor allow his repentance: for the law can doe nothing but this: either iuſtifie and reward him that fulfils it, or condemne and puniſh him that breakes it; further then this the law by it ſelfe goeth not.

It is the Goſpel which commandeth vs, & teacheth vs to beleeue and repent, and to the Goſpell are we beholding for accepting our repentance, which the law would neuer doe:
which is indeede ſo farre from accepting repentance, as it neuer intendeth nor aimeth at repentance directly in it ſelfe: and therefore in it ſelfe, it is worthily called the miniſterie of condemnation. So then beholde a moſt ſtraight law, and a moſt mercifull God: ſo ſtraight a law, as (if that mercy were not) it would neuer giue vs one houre to repent in, nor receiue vs to fauour though we repented preſently, but preſently vpon our ſinne caſt vs into hell. O therefore taſte and ſee how good and gracious
the Lord is: the law cannot haue his extremity, nor the diuell his will vpon vs, who is the Iayler of the law; & is malicious, thogh the law be iuſt: and ſo by the extremity of the iuſtice of the one, and the extremity of the malice of the other, no man ſhould liue one houre in the world, were it not for the wonderfull mercie and mitigation of God, who contrary to the courſe of the law, both accepteth men when they repent, and giues alſo time to repent, and thus hath God done,
as in the beginning with Adam, ſo in all ages:
To the olde world, after many preachers ſent, and many hundred yeares patience, and many thouſands of ſinnes ripe for vengeance, yet God giues 120. yeares more: O how many millions of ſinnes did they commit against him in that time? and yet had they repented at the laſt, they had beene ſaued: but all was in vaine, and therefore in the end God
A ſent a flood, and ſwept them all away. Euen ſo, and more patiently hath God ſuffered vs in theſe latter daies. But how comes it to paſſe then, will ſome ſay, that wee haue not a flood as well as they? Surely becauſe his mercy was great to them, but wonderfull to vs; wee are as euill as they, yea if wee iudge aright, and conſider duly all circumſtances, our ſins are far more, yea farre more hainous then theirs were: ſo that we deſerue a flood tenne times more then they did, and if God dealt but iuſtly with vs, where he brought one vpon them, he ſhould bring an hundred on vs: and if iuſtice bare the ſway, ſhee ſhould ſweep vs away, one generation after another, with a continuall flood. But mark the moderation of God,
B more to vs then to them, who deſerue worſe then they. He gaue vs not an hundred and twenty, but many hundred yeares, and brings no floods of iudgements, but ſpares vs from yeare to yeare, and from age to age, that ſo we may either repent and eſcape hel: or when our time is come, drowne our ſelues in damnation, and ſo be the principall cauſe of our owne deſtruction.

It may not vnfitly bee noted in this place, that ſomtime God may be ſaid to caſt a man into hell, and ſometime man himſelfe. God throwes a man into hell, when for ſome monſtrous and contagious ſinne, hee takes away a wicked man in the midſt of his wickedneſſe, by ſome ſudden iudgement, and ſo
C ſends him to hell. But a man plungeth himſelfe into hell, when God giues him leaue to liue, and libertie and time to repent, but hee continueth careleſly in his ſinnes till hee die, and ſo caſteth himſelfe violently into damnation.
Now ſuch is the mercifull moderation of God, that for one man whome he caſts into hell (as hee did Iudas preſently vpon his ſin) an hundred wicked men caſt themſelues into hel, abuſing that time and liberty, which hee gaue them to repent in, and ſo bringing vpon themſelues ſwift damnation. Let euery man therefore euery day of his life, when hee conſidereth the thouſands of ſinnes that are committed that day, and ſeeth no flood of water, fire nor brimſtone to come vpon
D vs, let him wonder at Gods mercy, and ſay with the Prophet, It is the Lords mercie that we are not conſumed. Furthermore, this moderation of God to al men, hath another branch.
Euery mans ill conſcience is to him like the fire of hell, and doubtleſſe the torment of conſcience, is a part of the very reall torment of hell: now if euery man had but iuſtice, hee ſhould feele preſently after euery ſinne,
the very torment of hell, namely, the ſting and torment of a guilty accuſing conſcience:
but ſee the mercy and moderation of God, he inflicts it not preſently, but onely giues the ſinner a pricke, or a little pang (as it were) when he hath ſinned, but the raging furie of the conſcience, (which is the greateſt hell that is vpon earth) hee deferres till the houre

A of death, or the day of iudgement. VVhen therefore thou haſt done euill, and feeleſt a pricke in thy conſcience, and a checke, but no more, remember that euen then, if God did not moderate his Iuſtice, thou ſhouldeſt feele the extreame horrour of thy conſcience, which would ouerwhelme thee as a burden, which is too heauy for thee to beare.

Thus then wee ſee the maruellous mercy of God wicked men are his ſworne enemies, for ſinne is that which offends him aboue all things in the world, yet ſo great is his mercy, and ſo large is his moderation, that euen his enemies taſte of it euery day and houre.

Thus much of Gods Equity and moderation to all men. B

Now ſecondly, this moderate and milde dealing of the Lord, is more ſpeciall to his Church and children: and that alſo ſhewes it ſelfe in two actions. Firſt of all, Iuſtice requireth that euery man ſhould pay his debt: and common reaſon tels vs, that words and promiſes cannot paſſe for paiment, but due debt muſt be ſatisfied. Now euery Chriſtian man is in a great debt to God: that debt is obedience to his law, for Chriſt came to ſaue vs from the rigour of the law, not to free vs from obedience to it: but how doe we pay that debt? euen as hee doth, who oweth tenne thouſand pounds, and craueth to pay it by a penny a C yeare; for ſo wee owing perfect obedience in thought, word, and deede, and alſo puritie of nature, the roote of all: we (I meane the beſt and holieſt men of all) haue nothing to tender to God, but a few good deſires & grones of the heart, and a ſilly poore endeauour: all which is vnto that which the law requireth, like vnto one penny to ten thouſand pound. Yet behold the mercie of God and his compaſſion to his children: theſe our deſires, and that our indeauour comming from the truth of our hearts, doth he accept for perfect paiment; and that man who hath an heart fearing God, and a care and deſire to pleaſe God in all things, and in his place and calling endeauoureth it accordingly, is the man whom D God loueth, and embraceth in the armes of his mercy, though he be far from that, which in debt and duty hee oweth to God. Thus doth God teſtifie of himſelfe in Malachie: I will ſpare you euen as a father ſpareth his owne ſonne that ſerueth him. Now wee know there is no ſparing nor forbearance like vnto that. A father bids his little ſonne doe this or that which is farre aboue his ſtrength, the childe not conſidering the difficultie, but looking onely at his dutie, and deſiring only to pleaſe his father, goeth about it, and doth his beſt, and yet when all is done, hee can doe nothing to it at all: now the father reioyceth in this willing obedience of his ſonne, and approoueth in his childe the will and endeauour, though hee cannot doe the thing hee biddes him. Euen ſo doth the Lord ſpare his children; hee commaundeth vs to keepe his law, and it is no more then our dutie, which notwithſtanding of our ſelues wee can doe no more, then a little childe is able to carry a milſtone: yet if wee willingly goe, when God commaundeth vs, and doe our endeauour, and all we can, and grone vnder the burden, and deſire to doe more; this our deſire and indeauour, proceeding from faith, and from a ſon-like willingneſſe, doth the Lord accept for the perfect deed. This is no ſmall moderation, but great and wonderfull. For whereas wee owe perfect obedience, and he might iuſtly challenge it, and for want of it, make vs pay it with ſoule and all, he is content to take a will, a deſire and endeauour, which is all wee can, and is in effect nothing at all. In this world, that man would bee extolled for his mercie, who will take of his debter a penny a weeke, who oweth him a 100. pound: or that takes all he can pay, & accepts his good minde for the reſt: Oh then how mercifull is our God, who for ſo great offences, and ſo huge a debt, as ours is to his Maieſtie, is content to accept of our endeauour and hearty deſire? the heart and tongue of man cannot ſufficiently magnifie ſo great a mercy. Thus much for the firſt.

Againe, the mercie and moderation of God towards his children appeares thus: There is not the beſt man, but he ſinneth, & there is not a ſinne ſo litle, but in iuſtice it deſerueth a whole world of puniſhments, yea all thoſe curſes denounced in the law, euen all thoſe plagues threatned, Deut. 28. all which in iuſtice ſhould ouerwhelme him, preſſe him downe, and cruſh him to nothing. But beholde the mercifull moderation of God, he is content to lay no more croſſes on his children, then by his owne grace (which he alſo giues them) they ſhall bee able to vndergoe, and in the ende to ouercome alſo. When his children ſinne, as when doe they not?) doth he puniſh them according to the proportion of their ſinne? no: for then all the curſes of his law ſhould bee heaped on them for one ſinne; and if hee did ſo, hee did but Iuſtice: nay he deales ſo with them, as it is not to be called a puniſhment at all, but rather a chaſtiſement: for a puniſhment muſt be in ſome ſort proportionable to the offence, but that which hee layeth on his children, is nothing at all to their ſinne: and therefore it is no puniſhment properly, but (as it were) the chaſtiſement or correction of a father, to teach his ſonne his dutie, and to reforme him, and bring him home from his euill waies: and therefore not in the rigour of a Iudge, but in the loue and wiſedome of a father, hee firſt conſidereth what wee are able to beare: and then layeth no more on vs, then we may well beare: and which is moſt wonderfull of all, he giues vs ſtrength to beare them. To this end ſpeakes the Apoſtle to the Corinthians, 1. Cor. 10. There hath no temptation taken you, but that which befals the nature of man. Whereby he imports thus much, that there are temptations, and croſſes in Gods Iuſtice due for ſin, and which he hath in ſtore, readie at his pleaſure, which are ſo great, ſo heauy, & ſo fearefull, as the nature of man could not poſſibly beare them, but ſhould ſinke vnder them, and periſh, as did Cain and Iudas, and ſuch like: Amongſt theſe an euill conſcience is one, which is ſo intollerable, as the wiſe man ſaith, Prou. 18. 14. A wounded ſpirit, who can beare it? But the croſſes he laieth on his children, are alwaies ſuch, as they beare with comfort for a time, and at laſt with ioy do ouercome them. A notable example hereof we haue in Salomon, of whome God ſaith to Dauid, If he ſinne, I will chaſtiſe him with the rod of men: as if he ſhould haue ſaid, I could in my iuſtice, for Salomons great ſinnes, beate him with ſcorpions, and bring him to nothing, by my heauie hand; but I will conſider, he is my child, and but a man: therefore will I lay vpon him no more, then the nature of man is able to beare. As God dealt with his ſonne Salomon, ſo this is Gods voice to all his ſonnes: vnto all my Church and Children, will I vſe ſuch lenitie and moderation, & in my chaſtiſing of them, I will ſo abate the rigour of my Iuſtice, that by my hand and rodde, they ſhall not bee preſſed downe, but rather raiſed vp in new obedience, and learne thereby to feare and loue me more then before.

This ſhould euery Chriſtian man ſeriouſly conſider of, and thinke with himſelfe, how much this bindes a man to deale moderately with his brother, when the Lord deales ſo moderately with him. Thou ſinneſt, and God chaſtiſeth thee moſt mildly, and layeth not on thee the thouſand part of thoſe croſſes, which in Iuſtice he might do. Shall the Lord deale thus moderately with thee, for thy many, and ſo great ſinnes, and wilt thou deale ſo hardly with thy brother, in his few and ſmall offences againſt thee? remember therefore in thy dealing with thy brother, this dealing of God with thee, and certainely thou canſt not forget the one, if thou haſt taſted of the other. Shew thy ſelfe therefore that thou haſt beene partaker of Gods fauour, and that thou haſt felt in thy ſoule, the ſweeteneſſe of his mercies, by beeing mild and mercifull to thy brethren; out of that great ſea of mercies, which God lets flow ouer thee all thy life long, let fall ſome droppes of mercie on thy brother, and remembring how God deales with thee, deale not thou with thy brother alwaies ſo hardly, nor ſo ſtraitly, as thou mayeſt, or he deſerues. Let theſe foure mercifull actions of God towards thee, bee foure ſtrong bonds, to tie thee to the obedience of this duty, to be mild and mercifull to thy brethren, remembring euery day, how moderately God deales with thee, and how farre from that extremity, which thou deſerueſt. And to mooue vs hereunto, let euery man be well aſſured, that the more he hath taſted of Gods mercie, the more ſhall men taſte of his mercie: and the more ſinnes that a man hath forgiuen him at Gods hands, the more will hee remit and forgiue in his brother; and the more he feeles in his owne ſoule Gods loue and mercie to him, and the more neere he is to God by his faith and repentance, the more carefull will he be, to deale gently with his brethren; and the reaſons hereof are theſe:

Firſt, God forgiueth not a man his faults, but vpon condition that hee ſhall forgiue his brother, God is not mercifull to a man, but vpon condition he ſhall be ſo to all men with whome he deales. Secondly, the mercie of God to vs, in forgiuing our ſins, is not made knowne to the world by any meanes more, then this, when a man is not hard and extreame, but equall and mercifull in his dealing with men. Whereupon therefore it followeth, that the further a man is from God, and the leſſe that he hath felt of Gods loue to him, the leſſe moderation will hee performe to his brother. Let euery man then be aſhamed, by theſe extreame courſes with his brethren, to make it knowne to the world, that hee is an impenitent ſinner, himſelfe vnreconciled to God, and his ſinnes vnpardoned: and let no man thinke hee ſhall eſcape that cenſure, if he be an vnmercifull man: for certainely it is imprinted in mens dealings, whether they be in Gods fauour, and their ſinnes pardoned, or no. Let therefore euery man, when his owne crooked nature, or the diuell makes him boile againſt his brother in anger, and vrgeth him to vſe him hardly and extreamely, conſider with himſelfe, and ſay: I liue vnder God, I am more in Gods hand, then this man in mine; I haue offended God more, then hee me: and if I had my deſert, I had now beene in hell for my ſinnes: but yet I liue, and by his mercie I am ſpared, and am here ſtill. But hath God ſpared me, that I ſhould pinch others? hath he beene mercifull to me, that I ſhould be cruell to others? ſurely therefore I will bee mercifull and moderate to my brethren, more then they deſerue, leſt God take his mercie from me: and then what ſhall become of me, but to be throwne ſuddenly into hell, which I deſerued long agoe: nay, I will by my equitie and moderation towards my brethren, mooue the Lord to be ſtill more mercifull to me, without which his mercie, I cannot liue one day in the world.

Hitherto of the exhortation of the Apoſtle, and of the great moderation of God to man.

Now followeth the Apoſtles reaſon, The Lord is at hand. Theſe words beare two ſenſes or meanings. The firſt, of the laſt iudgement: the ſecond, of Gods preſence. The firſt is thus framed, as if the H. Ghoſt meant of the laſt iudgement: Be you equall and moderate one towards another, for God is readie in his great and generall iudgement, to iudge all men, and then happie is he that finds not Iuſtice, but taſts of mercie: and who ſhall taſt of mercie then, but hee that ſhewed mercie in this world? But if ſecondly, the holy Ghoſt meant of Gods preſence, then is the argument framed thus; God is preſent with euery man, and at euery action, to teſtifie and iudge of it, and either to approoue it and reward it, if it be vpright, equall and mercifull; or to correct and puniſh it, if it be extreame, and void of equitie: therefore let your equitie bee knowne to all men. Both ſenſes are good, but we will cleaue vnto the latter. It is then all one, as if the holy Ghoſt had ſaid; Vſe equitie and moderation in your dealings, and remember who is at your elbow, ſtands by and lookes on, readie to iudge you for it.

Surely there can be no better reaſon then this, if it be ſetled in a mans heart: for a theefe or a cut-purſe, if he ſaw the Iudge ſtand at his elbow, and looke vpon him, he would not do euill, he would ſtay his hand, euen becauſe he ſeeth that the Iudge ſeeth him, who can preſently hang him. A ſtrong reaſon with men, & it keeps euen bad men from leud practiſes. Cōſider therfore when the Iudge of Iudges, the Lord of heauen and earth, ſtands by and ſeeth, and markes all thy actions, whether they be towards thy brother, as his is towards thee. This ought to make the greateſt man on earth, feare how he deales cruelly or hardly with his brother. But worldly men will not be perſwaded of this, but when they are laying their plots to deceiue their brother, and when by iniuſtice and extremity, they pinch and wring him, they thinke in their hearts, God ſeeth them not, nor do they euer thinke of God, but labour that God may bee out of all their thoughts. This is the cauſe of all ſin in the world: for thence is it, that mens hearts are hardened, and that they care not how extreamely they deale with men, becauſe they thinke God ſeeth them not, nor will cal them to account for it, and doe with them as they haue done with their brother. Hence comes all iniuſtice, crueltie, extremitie, ſuits in Law A for trifles, taking forfaitures of leaſes, and of bonds, and taking all aduantages. Hence comes it, that one man will not ſpare another one day, nor forgiue one fault, nor paſſe by any infirmity, nor put vp the leaſt iniury, nor yeeld one inch from his right: but if his brother offend neuer ſo little, vpon neuer ſo apparent weakenes, hee ſhall heare of it on both ſides, as they ſay: and if he deſerue ill, he ſhall haue his deſerts to the full. Thus hearts are hardened, affections are immoderate, bowels B of compaſſion are ſhut vp, loue and pity are baniſhed, and in their roomes reigne cruelty, and iniuſtice. Moderation dwells in corners, but extremity is that, which beareth ſway ouer all the world: what is the cauſe of all this? Surely, firſt, becauſe men are vnſanctified, and haue not repented of their ſinnes, and ſo they feele not, that God is moderate & mercifull to them. Secondly, they perſwade not themſelues, that God ſeeth them; therefore againſt this blaſphemous thought the roote of all euill, and cauſe of all ſinne, arme thy ſelfe with this reaſon of the Apoſtle, and C reſolue of it, that this is the eternall truth of God, and ſhall ſtand for euer, The Lord is at hand: and ſeeth and obſerueth thee and all thy doings. Therefore as thou wilt eſcape his mightie and fearefull hand, ſeaſon thy doings and dealings with moderation: and if thou hadſt no conſcience, nor mercie in thee, yet be merciful, remembring who ſeeth thee, and deale moderately and equally in the ſight and preſence of ſo moderate, ſo mild, and ſo mercifull a God; ſo mercifull a rewarder of him that deales moderately, and ſo D powerfull a reuenger of him that deales hardly and extreamely with his brother. Let vs then end with the Apoſtle as we began: Let your equitie and moderation be knowne to all men, for God is at hand.

And thus much out of Gods word, of Publike and Priuate Equitie, wherein I haue not ſpoken all I might, but giuen occaſion to others, to enter into further conſideration thereof.

Trin-vni Deo gloria.

A TREATISE OF MANS IMAGINATIONS.

Shevving

His naturall euill thoughts:
His want of good thoughts:
The way to reforme them.

MATTH. 12. 33.

Either make the tree good, and his fruit good; or els make the tree euill, and his fruit euill.

HINC LVCEM ET POCVLA SACRA
ALMA MATER CANTABRIGIA

Printed at London by IOHN LEGATT, Printer
to the Vniuerſitie of Cambridge.
1613.

TO THE RIGHT VVORSHIPFVLL S. THOMAS HOLCROFT KNIGHT, WITH THE VERTVOVS LADIE ELIZAbeth his wife: Grace and peace.

THAT waighty charge of Salomon (Right Worſhipfull) to euery ſonne of wiſedome, for the (a) keeping of his heart with all watch and ward, may well perſwade vs, that ſome matters of great importance depend thereon: Among many (becauſe my gates may not be great before ſo ſmall a citie) I will touch one. There is a ſtrange deſire, not of earthly but of ſpirituall powers, after the poſſeſſion of mans heart. God ſaith, (b) My ſonne giue me thy heart, and to him indeed the right belongs: Yet through mans tranſgreſſion Satan hath got ſuch hold thereof, that vnleſſe it be by diuine power, he will not be kept out; and though wee heare not Satans voice, yet his (c) dealing bewraies his meaning, that aboue all things in man he deſires the heart. Once he ſtroue about a dead (d) mans bodie, but doubtleſſe his purpoſe therein was to haue ſet vp an idoll for himſelfe in the hearts of the liuing. But what is mans heart that it ſhould be ſo deſired? Surely in ſubſtance litle, but for imployment almoſt infinite: It is a Treaſure (e) whereout man bringeth all his actions good, or euill: it is a temple wherein is placed either the Arke of God, or Dagon for the diuell. Yea, it is a (f) pallace wherein dwelleth, and a throne whereon ſitteth either Chriſt, or Satan, the (g) King of glorie, or the (h) prince of darkneſſe: and (i) he that keepes poſſeſſion will there exerciſe dominion. Neither may we thinke that one heart will ſuffice both theſe; (k) no man can ſerue two maſters: God will haue all or none; (l) If any part be ſeared from him in high diſpleaſure he leaues the reſt, and ſo the whole fals to the diuell. Now ſith the caſe ſtandeth thus with mans heart, doth it not neerely concerne euery one to know his owne eſtate in this behalfe; to wit, what kinde of treaſury, whoſe Temple, whoſe pallace and throne his heart is? that if all be well he may reioyce, and ſo keepe it for the Lord; if otherwiſe, then ſeeke redreſſe betime.

To this purpoſe ſerues this preſent Treatiſe: wherein as in a glaſſe may firſt be ſeene, the fearefull ſtate of mans naturall heart, full fraught with euill thoughts, void of good conſideration, and ſo moſt fit for Satan: then after doe theſe bleſſed meanes appeare, whereby mans naturall heart may be reformed, to become the Temple of God, the ſeate of grace, and a (m) bed of ſpices for the welbeloued to feed vpon. And theſe are points of that importance, that whoſoeuer neglecteth them, may ſay farewell grace: and bid adue to God himſelfe: for in the heart, if at all in man, muſt theſe be ſeated.

Now the publiſhing hereof beeing committed vnto me, I preſent the ſame vnto your Worſhips, and vnder your protection deſire to commend it to the Church of God. It would too much enlarge my gates to annexe the manifold reaſons which mooue me to this choice on your behalfe; onely this I pray, (that ſeeing it is the firſt fruits of my labour in this kinde wherein I had full power of free choice in my dedication) it may intimate to you both, mine vnfained hearts deſire of that euerlaſting good I wiſh vnto your ſoules: and alſo teſtifie in part my thankfull mind for your manifold fauours to me, and mine who depend vpon you.

Now God Almightie bleſſe your Worſhips, with your children and family, according to your ſeuerall neceſſities of his mercie and goodneſſe, for ſoule and bodie, in this life and for euer. Cambridge, Auguſt. 20. 1606.

Your Worſhips in the Lord,

Thomas Pierſon.

---

[a] Prou.4.23

[b] Pro.23.26

[c] See Act. 5.3. Luk.22.3.

[d] Moſes body. Iud.9.

[e] Mat.12.35 Hinc fons boni, & peccandi origo. Hieron. ad Demetriad.

[f] Aug in Pſal.24.8.

[g] Pſal.24.7.

[h] Eph.6.2.

[i] Qui poſſedit, ipſe imperabit. ib. Aug.

[k] Mat.6.24.

[l] Quia ſit ibi pars aliqua Diabolo, diſcedit Deus iratus; & poſſidet totum diabolus, Auguſt. in Ioh.

The ſum of this Treatiſe.

[m] Cant.6.1.

To the Reader.

KNOVV (good Reader) that for my furtherance in the publiſhing of this Tractate, I had the Authours owne draught of the plat-forme of it, beſide two perfect Copies of all his Sermons. I haue for plaineneſſe ſake deuided it into Chapters and Sections: for the better effecting whereof, I was conſtrained to tranſpoſe two of the vſes, otherwiſe I doubt not, but euery one that heard it preached, will iudge me to haue dealt faithfully with the godly Authour. The Lord proſper it to thy good.

The Contents of this Treatiſe.

CHAP. I.
The vnfolding of the text whereon the Treatiſe is grounded. pag. 456.
CHAP. II.
The Illneſſe of mans naturall thoughts: and how they may be knowne. pag. 458.
CHAP. III.
Mans naturall thoughts concerning God. pag. 459.
CHAP. IV.
Mans naturall thoughts concerning his neighbour. pag. 467.
CHAP. V.
Mans naturall thoughts concerning himſelfe. pag. 469.
CHAP. VI.
Mans naturall want of good thoughts or conſideration; with the fruite thereof. pag. 473.
CHAP. VII.
The vſe of the doctrine of mans naturall Imaginations. pag. 474.
CHAP. VIII.
Rules for the reformation of euill thoughts. pag. 477.
CHAP. IX.
Of ſpirituall conſiderations concerning God. pag. 479.
CHAP. X.
Of ſpirituall conſiderations concerning our ſelues. pag. 481.

Gen. 8. 21.

And the Lord ſaid in his heart, I will henceforth curſe the earth no more for mans cauſe: for the Imagination of mans heart is euill euen from his youth.

CHAP. I.

The vnfolding of the text, by way of preparation to the Treatiſe.

IN the former part of this chapter, Moſes hath faithfully related the drying of the waters after the flood; and Noahs ſacrificing vnto God, with Gods acceptance thereof. Now in this verſe and the next, he recordeth ſuch lawes and decrees as God made with Noah touching the reſtauration of nature periſhed by the flood; as well for the ſparing of the creatures from ſuch like deſtruction, as for the continuance of his prouidence in needfull times and ſeaſons, meete for their future preſeruation. Theſe words containe the firſt of theſe lawes: wherein we may obſerue three points; Moſes his preface to this law; the law it ſelfe; and the reaſon thereof.

I. The preface; And the Lord ſaid in his heart. Theſe words muſt not be taken properly, for God hath not an heart as a man hath, neither ſpeaketh he as a man doth; but hereby is meant, that God determined and ſet downe with himſelfe this law and decree.

In this phraſe of ſpeech, note this one thing: If it had pleaſed him, God could haue ſpoken to man by a voice, the hearing whereof would haue confounded him: but as here we ſee, he doth abaſe himſelfe, and as it were lay aſide his honour and might, and ſpeaketh vnto vs after the manner of men, euen to the capacity of the moſt ſimple. Which teacheth vs, that it is the good wil and pleaſure of God, that not only the learned, but euen the vnlettered and moſt ignorant ſhould know and vnderſtand the holy Scriptures: for els hee would neuer haue penned them in a phraſe and ſtyle that doth ſo well accord to the capacitie of the ſimple.

II. Point. The decree it ſelfe: I will henceforth curſe the ground no more for mans cauſe. This is the peremptorie law of God touching the reſtauration of nature: wherein are contained two things: firſt, what God hath done: ſecondly, what God will not doe hereafter. The thing that God hath done is, the curſing of the earth: for he ſaith, I will curſe no more: implying that he once curſed it.

In this obſerue, that God may truly bee ſaid to be a cauſe of curſes, & to curſe his creatures: not onely for that he doth ordaine and
A decree al curſes, but alſo becauſe he inflicteth them vpon the creatures: yet ſo as the ſame is alwaies moſt iuſtly deſerued by ſin, before it bee inflicted of the Lord. And ſo muſt Gods curſing of the earth, bee vnderſtood in this place, as a fruite of his wrath for the ſin of man: accordingly God is ſaid directly to create euill, Iſa. 45. 7. becauſe whatſoeuer afflictions, curſes, and puniſhments are in the world, they are ordained and inflicted by God vpon the creatures for the ſinne of man.

This plainly confuteth the common
B opinion of ignorant people, who hold that all good things, as peace, wealth, ioy, and felicity, come from God; but all euill, as affliction, calamity, curſes, and iudgements, come from the diuell, & God onely ſuffereth them. This is a moſt erroneous and blind conceit, which filleth many a ſoule with much anguiſh and impatience: for what comfort can he haue in the time of trouble, that is perſwaded it commeth wholly from the diuell, and the hand of God is not therein? VVe therefore muſt learne to reforme this opinion, & know that croſſes, and troubles come from God. This Dauid knew well, and therefore when Shemi
C curſed him, and railed on him, he forbad Abiſhai to touch him, becauſe (ſaith he) 2. Sam. 16. 10. What if (or, it may be) God hath bid him curſe Dauid. So Ioſeph telleth his brethren, who moſt traiterouſly ſold him into Egypt, that the Lord ſent him before them, Gen. 45. verſ. 5.

Secondly, here conſider the impulſiue cauſe that mooued God to curſe the earth by a flood: it was not in the earth, but in men: I will henceforth curſe the earth no more for man, that is, for mans ſinnes. In the new
D Teſtament there are two eſpeciall ſinnes recorded for which God ſent this curſe: firſt, carnall ſecuritie. They were choaked with worldly cares, and drowned in earthly pleaſures: In the daies of Noah, they did eate, and drinke, marrie, and giue in marriage, Math. 24. 38. Secondly, the contempt of the Goſpell in the miniſterie of Noah, who preached an hundred and twentie yeares vnto them, while the Arke was in building, but they were diſobedient as (a) S. Peter ſaith, following their owne pleaſures and delights. VVhereby it appeares that theſe two ſinnes, Securitie, and contempt of the Goſpell, a 1. Pet. 3. 20

are moſt grieuous ſinnes: for theſe brought deſtruction not onely vpon all mankind (Noah and his family excepted) but euen vpon all creatures that liued by breath.

Now looke as theſe ſinnes were in the old world, euen ſo are they riſe in this laſt age, according to the prophecie of our Sauiour Chriſt, Luk. 17.26. As it was in the daies of Noah, ſo ſhall it be in the daies of the ſonne of man: and as this is the ſtate of the whole world, ſo it is the ſtate of this our Church; moſt men are drowned in the pleaſures of this world, and choaked with the cares thereof: for howſoeuer they will heare the Goſpell preached, yet fewe apply their hearts to beleeue the ſame, ſhewing forth the power thereof by repentance from dead workes, and amendment of life in new obedience. But we muſt know, that if theſe two ſinnes brought a curſe, euen deſtruction vpon the old world, then no doubt they will bring a fearefull curſe vpon this age, though not by water, yet ſome other way that ſhall counteruaile the flood; and therefore wee muſt lay theſe things to our hearts, that vnleſſe wee abandon ſecurity, and worldly luſts, and withall doe repent and beleeue at the preaching of the Goſpell, wee ſhall ſee Gods heauy curſe will fall vpon vs; for if we match the olde world in ſinne, wee muſt not looke to come behinde them in iudgements.

The ſecond thing in this decree is, what God will not doe hereafter, Namely: curſe the earth any more: this muſt bee vnderſtood of that particular curſe, which the Lord laid on the earth by waters, when he drowned the world: for the generall curſes that were laid vpon the ground, and on mankinde for Adams ſinne, remaine ſtill, and ſhall not bee taken quite away till the end of the world: ſo that the meaning of this law is, that the Lord will no more drowne the whole earth for the ſinne of man by a flood.

Here then we ſee the cauſe why the ſea being as raging and ſtirring as euer it was, doth notwithſtanding keep it ſelf within it bounds, and not ouerflowe the world: and why the clowdes beeing as full of water, as euer they were, do not powre downe more floods vpon the earth to deſtroy it. Surely it is by vertue of this particular law, and decree of God, whereunto the ſea and clowdes become obedient, I will henceforth curſe the earth no more. And here we haue iuſt occaſiō to take knowledge and view of our owne wretched & damnable eſtate, how wee are ſolde vnder ſinne: for howſoeuer wee were created bleſſed, and happy, yet by our fal in Adam we are become far worſe then any earthly creature, for each creature in his kind, as the ſunne, the moone, & ſtarres, the ſea, and clowdes, and al other obey Gods commandement: but man of all creatures hauing lawes giuen him of God to keepe, rebelleth in breaking the ſame, and to him it is meate & drinke, by nature to liue in the tranſgreſſion of Gods commandements. Thus by comparing our ſelues with the brute creatures, wee may learne to humble our ſelues, and to be abaſhed when wee ſee them which were made to ſerue vs, to goe before vs in obedience to the lawes of our Creator.

III. Point. The reaſon of Gods decree, in theſe words, for the Imagination of mans heart is euill, euen from his youth. At the firſt this reaſon may ſeeme very ſtrange, that God ſhould no more curſe the earth for man, becauſe the Imagination of his heart is euill; In all likelihood God ſhould haue ſaid the contrarie, I will ſtill curſe the earth becauſe the Imaginations of mans heart are euill: for ſo he ſaith, Chap. 6. verſ. 5,6. that ſeeing all the Imaginations of the thoughts of mans heart were only euill continually; therfore he would deſtroy the man from the earth, and from man to beaſt, and euery creeping thing: How can both theſe ſtand togither? Anſw. Thus; In the ſixt chapter the Lord ſaith, hee will once deſtroy the world by water, becauſe of the wickedneſſe of the Imaginations of mans heart: and here hee ſaith, hee will not proceede to curſe the earth againe and againe by the ſame puniſhment, becauſe the Imaginations of mans heart are euill, euen from his youth; as if hee ſhould ſay, I haue once drowned the world for the wickednes of mans inuentions, but if I ſhould thus proceede to deale with man according to the wicked Imagination of his heart, I muſt bring euery yeare a new flood vpon the earth, becauſe I ſee the frame of mans heart is euill continually.

Here then obſerue, that God in the preſeruation of mankind, doth temper and moderate his iuſtice by mercy: for if he ſhould deale according to mans deſerts he ſhould euery day bring curſes vpon him; yea ſo ſoone as a man is borne hee ſhould bee deſtroyed; but God dealeth not ſo rigorouſly, hee mingleth mercy with iuſtice, whereby the whole frame of heauen and earth, the ſtate of man and all ſocieties do ſtand: That which Habacuk prayed for, (a) In iuſtice, or wrath, remember mercy, the Lord hath performed euer ſince the flood, yea ſince the fall of Adam.

There be three great and weighty cauſes, which mooued God to temper iuſtice with mercy for the preſeruation of mankinde and other creatures: firſt, that hereby hee might ſhew his patience and long-ſuffering towards the veſſels of wrath, (as the Apoſtle (b) ſpeaketh,) that is, towards ſuch as will not repent, that at the laſt day they may bee moſt iuſtly condemned: Secondly, that there may be a company of men vpon earth which may worſhip God: for God hath ſpeciall care of his owne glory among men, and therefore tempers iuſtice with mercie in their preſeruation, that they might glorifie him. Pſal. 130.4. There is mercy or pardon with thee, that thou maieſt bee feared: that is, whereas (O Lord) thou mighteſt in iuſtice throw all men to hell ſuddenly, yet in mercy thou pardoneſt the ſinnes of ſome, for this ende, that they might worſhip thee: feare being put for worſhip and obedience. Thirdly, and principally, that the elect and choſen of God might be gathered; for God in his eternall counſell and decree hath appointed and ſet downe a certaine number of men, vnto whome he will giue eternall life, and for their cauſe doth hee ſpare the whole world from daily deſtruction: but when that number ſhall be accompliſhed, then ſhal heauen and earth go together, and the world ſhal be no more.

[a] Hab. 3.2.

[b] Rom. 9.22

And here by the way, this third cauſe of the continuance of nature, muſt teach vs our duty; to wit, that ſeeing it pleaſeth God in mercy to giue vs liberty to liue a ſpace of time in this world, ſome twenty, ſome thirty, ſome fourty or fifty yeares, and that for this ende, that herein wee might bee fitted for his kingdome, when as in the rigour of his iuſtice he might haue caſt vs to hell in our mothers wombe, or ſo ſoone as wee were borne; wee therefore muſt be carefull not to deſpiſe this long-ſuffering and patience of God, but rather labour in the feare of God, that it may become (c) ſaluation to vs, by our conſcionable endeauour in all ſuch meanes vnto the end, as he hath ſanctified for the working of the graces of life in the hearts of his children. And thus much for the reaſon in generall.

CHAP. II.

Sect. 1.

The idlenes of mans naturall cogitations.

THat wee may the better perceiue in this reaſon the eſtate of man in reſpect of his naturall Imaginations, the words are more particularly to be vnfolded. For the Imaginations of mans heart, &c. The heart in Scripture is taken ſundrie waies: ſometimes for that fleſhy part of man in the middle of the body, which is the fountaine of vitall blood: ſometime for the ſoule of man, ſometime for the faculties of the ſoule: and ſometime for the middle of any thing, as (d) the heart of the ſea. (e) the heart of the earth, that is, the middle thereof. Here it is taken for the vnderſtanding facultie of the ſoule, whereby man vſeth reaſon: which S. Paul cals (f) the ſpirit of the minde.

By Imaginations, he meaneth the frame, or framing of the heart. And this is taken two waies: of ſome, for the naturall diſpoſition of the vnderſtanding after the fall of man: of others, for that which the minde & vnderſtanding by thinking frameth, plotteth, and deuiſeth, that is, for the effect thereof. We may take it both waies, yet I rather approoue the latter: for Chap. 6. 5. the Lord ſaith, Hee will once deſtroy alll fleſh; and giues this reaſon, For the frame and thought of mans heart is euill continually. VVhere by thoughts or Imaginations can nothing elſe be meant, but that which is deuiſed and plotted in the thoughts of mans heart: ſo Salomon ſpeaking of an heart which God hateth, ſaith, It is framing or thinking thoughts of wickedneſſe, Prou. 6. 18.

By mans heart, wee muſt not vnderſtand the heart of ſome particular perſons, as of thoſe that liued in the olde world alone, but of men generally, man beeing put for whole mankinde.

Is euill, that is, it imagineth, & thinketh that which is againſt the lawe of God: From his childhood, that is, ſo ſoone as he beginneth to thinke, to reaſon or conceiue of any thing, ſo ſoone doth hee imagine and conceiue that which is euill: ſo that the whole meaning is this, The minde and vnderſtanding part of man is naturally ſo corrupt, that ſo ſoone as hee can vſe reaſon, he doth nothing but imagine that which is wicked, and againſt the Law of God. The words thus explaned, containe in them two maine points touching the frame of mans heart by nature. The firſt is:

The imagination and conceit of euery man is naturally euill.

This appeareth not only in this place, but elſewhere, Rom. 8. 5. The wiſedome of the fleſh is not an enemy, but enmity againſt God. Againe, ſuch as the fountaine is, ſuch are the ſtreames that flow thence; But our mind & vnderſtanding the fountaine of our thoughts, is by nature ſinfull; (g) To the impure, their mindes and conſciences are defiled; And againe, (h) of our ſelues wee are not able to thinke a good thought; and therefore the thoughts that come from thence, muſt needes alſo be corrupt: Mans imagination ſtands in thoughts; the vnderſtanding deuiſeth by thinking: And theſe thoughts of the Imagination are al naturally wicked: (i) From the heart (ſaith Chriſt) proceede euill thoughts: and Salomon ſaith, The thoughts of the wicked (as all men are by nature) are an abomination to the Lord.

Sect. 2.

How the naturall thoughts of man may be knowne.

Seeing that naturall Imagination is practiſed by euill thoughts, we muſt ſomething conſider of the naturall thoughts of man: And herein handle theſe two points: Firſt, whether the thoughts of man may be knowne; ſecondly, what the naturall thoughts of man be.

For the firſt; there are two waies to know mans thoughts: either directly without meanes, or indirectly by meanes. The firſt way is proper to God alone: for no creature in heauen or earth can immediately and directly know the thoughts of man: this Salomon confeſſeth in his notable prayer to God, 1. Kin. 8. 39. Thou only knoweſt the thoughts of al the children of men. Ierem. 17. 9. The heart is deceitfull and wicked aboue all things, who can know it? verſe 10. I the Lord ſearch the heart, and trie the reines.

The ſecond way to know mens thoughts is indirectly, and by meanes: which be three, by inſtinct from God; by reuelation from the Scripture, & by ſignes. Firſt, by an extraordinary inſtinct: ſo did (k) Eliſha diſcloſe the king

[c] 2. Pet. 3. 15.
[d] Pſal. 46. 2.
[e] Mat. 12. 40
[f] Eph. 4. 23
[g] Tit. 2. 14.
[h] 2. Cor. 3. 5
[i] Mat. 23. 19
[k] 2. King. 6. 9. 12.

of Syria counſell to the king of Iſrael: and by the ſame meanes, hee tolde his ſeruant (l) Gehezi what he did behind his backe, when he tooke gifts of Naaman the Aſſyrian. And ſo did (m) Peter tell Ananias and Saphira of their falſe conueyances with the money that they tooke for their poſſeſſion. And yet here wee muſt vnderſtand, that when God reuealed theſe ſecret thoughts to men, it was onely in ſome things, at ſome times, & for ſume ſpeciall cauſes, whereupon Nathan was faine to reuoke his counſell, which hee gaue to Dauid for the building of the houſe of God, (n) when hee knew the will of God more perfectly. And ſo was Elias deceiued, when he ſaid hee was left alone, of all Iſrael that feared God; for (o) God tolde him, he had reſerued ſeauen thouſand, that neuer bowed the knee to Baal, which Elias knew not. Secondly, mens thoughts may be knowne by Reuelation from Scriptures: for therin that ſpirit ſpeaks euidently, which knowes the frame of the heart: and hence it is, that in the miniſtery of this word, the thoughts of naturall men are made manifeſt. Thirdly, mans thoghts are knowne by ſignes, as ſpeeches, & actions: thus Peter knew the (p) heart of Simon Magus; and Paul the heart* of Elimas. And thus may any man know the thoughts of another, euen as he may know the tree by his fruit, and the fountaine by his ſtreame.

l 2.Kin.5.26
m Act.5.3.
n 1.Chr.17.2.4.
o 1.Kin.19.18.
1.Cor.14.25
p Act.8.21.
* Act.13.10

Beſides theſe, there are two other meanes added whereby to know mens thoughts: one by the Papiſts, & another by the Aſtrologians. The Papiſts ſay, the Saints in heauen know mens thoughts, not directly of themſelues, but by reflection in the glaſſe of the Trinity. But this is a meere forgery of their own, which Iſay neuer knew, ſaying thus of the Saints departed, (q) Abraham is ignorant of vs, and Iſrael knoweth vs not, but thou Lord art our redeemer. And the Saints vnder the altar cry, * How long Lord, how long, wilt thou not iudge and auenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? giuing vs to vnderſtand, that they are not ſo ſharpe ſighted, as by the glaſſe of the Trinity to ſee into the day of the laſt iudgement, and therefore not into the thoughts of mens hearts. So that there are onely three waies to know the thoughts of men: and ſo they may be knowne.

q Isa.63.16.
* Reu.6.10.

CHAP. III.

Of mans naturall thoughts concerning God.

HAuing found that the thoughts of man may be known; we come now to ſee what bee the naturall cogitations of euery ſinfull man. Although they bee almoſt infinite in themſelues, yet they may be reduced to three heads: They either concerne God, or a mans neighbour, or elſe a mans owne ſelfe.

Of this thought; There is no God.

Touching God, there be in man 4. capital euil thoughts. Firſt, That there is no God: which as it is firſt in order, ſo it is the moſt notorious, & vile damnable thought that can be in a naturall man. And that this is one of the thoughts of man naturally, appeareth by the expreſſe teſtimony of God himſelfe, who knoweth the thoughts of man better then man doth. (r) The wicked thinketh alwaies there is no God. And againe, (ſ) The foole hath ſaid in his heart, there is no God.

r Pſal.10.4.
ſ Pſal.14.1.

Touching this thought, obſerue theſe foure points: Firſt, in whome it is: Secondly, how a man by thinking ſhould deny God. Thirdly, what is the fruit of this thought: and fourthly, the examination of your hearts touching this thought.

For the firſt: we muſt not thinke that this wicked thought is onely in ſome notorious and hainous ſinners: but it is in the corrupt mind & imagination of euery man that commeth of Adam naturally, not one excepted, ſaue Chriſt alone: ſo the foole of whom Dauid (t) ſpeaketh muſt be taken, not for ſome ſpeciall ſinner, but for euery man that liues vncalled, and without repentance, how ciuill ſoeuer his life bee other waies; though ſome ſhame reſtraine his tongue from vttering it, yet by nature his corrupt heart is prone to thinke there is no God. This is made euident by Saint Paul, (u) who going about to prooue that all men are ſinners by nature, alleadgeth for his proofe diuers teſtimonies of Scripture, and particularly out of theſe two Pſalmes before cited: wherby he giues vs to vnderſtand, that the foole there mētioned, muſt be vnderſtood of euery naturall man. But it will be ſaid, that it is ingrafted in mans nature to hold & think there is a God, and therfore euery man doth not deny God in his heart. Anſ. Wee muſt know that theſe two thoughts, There is a God, & there is no God, may be, and are both in one and the ſame heart: the ſame man, that by the light of nature thinketh there is a God, may by that corruption and darknes of mind that came by Adams fall, thinke there is no God: for two contraries beeing not in the higheſt degree, may be in one and the ſame ſubiect: as light and darknes in the ſame houſe: heate and colde in the ſame body.

1. In whom this thought is t Pſal.14. Pſal.10.
u Rom.3.

II. Point. How doth a man by thinking deny God in his heart? Anſ. Two waies, firſt, by turning the true God into an idol of mans braine: ſecondly, by placing ſomewhat that is not God in the roome of the true God. For the firſt, the imagination of euery man naturally, without further light from the word of God, doth turne the true God into an idol: and therefore Paul ſaith of the Galatians, that before their vocation, (x) they did ſeruice to them which were no gods: and of the Epheſians, that (y) they were without God in the world: euen becauſe they did not in their mindes conceiue of God aright, and accordingly worſhip him, though the wiſer ſort amongſt them did acknowledge one God the Creator of heauen and earth. And therefore Dauid ſaith plainly, that (z) all the gods of the Gentiles are idols, or vanities: nay, as the Apoſtle ſaith, diuels. 1. Corinth. 10.20. That which

How a man by thinking denies God.
x Gal.4.8.
y Eph.2.12.
z Pſal.96.5

the Gentiles ſacrifice, they ſacrifice vnto diuels, and not vnto God.

Now mans minde turneth the true God into an idoll, by three notorious thoughts, which are the root of many damnable ſinnes in this life; firſt, by thinking that God is not preſent in all places; whereby God is robbed of his attribute of Omni-preſence: for the true God beeing infinite, muſt bee in all places; which when the heart of man denieth, it imagineth God to be ſuch a one as he is not, and ſo turneth him into an idoll; and that man naturally thinketh thus of God, the Scripture is plaine: Iob 22.12,13 wicked men are brought in ſpeaking of God, as though hee were ſhut vp in heauen, and had nothing to do in the world: Is not God on high in the heauen? and beholde the height of the ſtarres how high they are. How ſhould God know? can hee iudge? &c. So the Pſalmiſt expreſſeth the thoughts of the wicked in their practiſe of ſinne, God hideth away his face, and will neuer ſee: and the Lord ſhall not ſee, Pſalm. 94.7. yea they who ſeeke the deepe to hide their counſell from the Lord, whoſe workes are in darkneſſe, ſay, Who ſeeth vs? who knoweth vs? Iſa. 29.15. Secondly, by thinking there is no prouidence of God, whereby he ordereth and diſpoſeth all things in the world particularly: That this is another naturall thought, the Pſalmiſt ſhewes plainely, bringing in the wicked man, ſaying thus of God, God hath forgotten, hee hideth his face, and he ſhall not ſee. And the prophet Zephanie brings in the ſinner ſpeaking thus of God, that he doth neither good, nor euill. Thirdly, by thinking there is no iuſtice in God; this is done when men imagine with themſelues, that albeit they proceede in the practiſe of ſinne, yet God will not puniſh them according to the threatnings of his word; If we doubt whether ſuch an imagination be in mans heart, reade Deut. 29.19,20. where Moſes directly forbiddeth the people to ſay in their hearts, I ſhall haue peace though I walke in the ſtubbornnes of my heart; this is that (g) bleſſing of a mans ſelfe in ſinne, which Dauid chargeth vpon the couetous, and wicked. Thus they ſinne that (h) put farre away the euill day; and ſay, the euill ſhall not come. Hereby God is robbed of his Iuſtice, and made a God all of mercy, ſuch a one as will not puniſh ſinne, and ſo indeede is made an idol of mans braine.

g Pſal. 10.

h Amos 6.3 Amos 9.10

The ſecond way whereby a man denieth God in thought, is by placing in the roome of the true God, an idol of his owne braine: This men doe, by thinking ſome other thing beſide the true God, to bee their chiefeſt good: thus voluptuous men make (i) their belly their god: and couetous men make (k) riches their god, by placing their felicity in pleaſure, and in riches: for looke what a man thinks to be the beſt thing in the world for him, that is his GOD, though it bee the diuell himſelfe, or any other creature. And for this cauſe is the diuell called the god of the world, becauſe the men of this world iudge their owne courſes, wherein they ſerue the diuell, the beſt thing in the world for them, yea farre better then the ſeruice of God, and therefore giue their hearts thereto: for affection followeth opinion, and that which a man affects moſt, he muſt needs thinke beſt of: and therefore what a man affecteth moſt, that maketh hee to become his god; ſo that iudging other things beſide the true God, to bee beſt for him, he muſt needs place them in the roome of the true God, and ſo in his imagination deny God.

i Phil. 3.19

k Col. 3.5.

2. Cor. 4.4.

III. Point. What is the fruite of this thought? for therby we ſhall beſt iudge, what a curſed thing this is, to thinke there is no God. This thought bringeth forth the moſt notorious ſinnes that can be, euen Atheiſme it ſelfe, which is a ſinne whereby men ſundry waies deny God: and it is two-folde, either in practiſe, or in iudgement.

The fruit of this thought.

Atheiſme in practiſe is that ſinne, whereby men deny God in their deeds, liues, and conuerſations: and ſo declare this thought. This is a moſt horrible ſinne, and a huge burthen to the whole earth: and yet (many that liue in the boſome of the Church are foully tainted herewith. This Atheiſme in practiſe hath 3 ſpeciall branches: Hypocriſie, Epicuriſme, & Witchcraft. Hypocriſie is a ſinne whereby men worſhip the true God, but yet in a falſe manner, giuing vnto God the outward action, and holde backe from him the true worſhip of the heart. Epicuriſme is a ſinne whereby men contemne God, and giue themſelues wholly to their pleaſures, ſpending their time in eating, drinking, and other delights, & not ſeeking or fearing God: and this is the ſin of the richer ſort in this age. Witchcraft or magicke is that ſinne wherby men renounce the true God, and betake themſelues to the aide, counſell, and helpe of the diuell, either by himſelfe, or in his inſtruments: this is a large ſinne, and a great part of Atheiſme, and many are tainted with this ſinne, either becauſe they are practitioners of witchcraft, or els do ſeeke helpe of ſuch.

Atheiſme in iudgement is that ſin, whereby in opinion and perſwaſion of heart men denie God. And this likewiſe hath three degrees: firſt, when men holde, and accordingly worſhip the true God, creator of heauen and earth; but yet ſo, as they conceiue of, and worſhip him otherwiſe then he hath reuealed himſelfe in his word. To this firſt degree we muſt referre the three great religions of the Turke, of the Iew, and of the Papiſts: for as they ſtand at this day, they are three great parts of Atheiſme.

The Turke worſhippeth God the maker of heauen and earth, and likewiſe reuerenceth Chriſt as man, acknowledging him to bee a Prophet, yea, a more worthy Prophet then his Mahomet; And yet his religion is Atheiſme, for he conceiueth of God out of the Trinity,

Trinitie, and ſo worſhippeth nothing but an idoll.

Againe, the Religion of the Iewes, at this day is a part of Atheiſme: for howſoeuer they holde one God, and acknowledge the books of the olde Teſtament for the Scriptures of God, yet they worſhippe not that God in Chriſt, and ſo in ſtead of the true God, frame an idol in their owne braine; for as Chriſt (c) ſaith, Whoſoeuer denies the Son, the ſame hath not the Father, ſo that they wanting Chriſt, and by conſequent the Father alſo, indeede and truly haue no God; but as Chriſt told the Samaritans (d) They worſhip they know not what.

Thirdly, the religion of the Papiſts at this day is a part of Atheiſme: we muſt indeed diſtinguiſh it from the two former: for in word they acknowledge the Trinitie in vnitie, and vnitie in Trinitie, and their doctrine of the vnion of Chriſts two natures in one perſon, is according to the Scripture: But yet if wee marke the drift, and ſequele of their doctrine in other points, wee ſhall finde it to be cloſe Atheiſme: as may bee prooued by two reaſons: firſt, becauſe the true God, who is the Creator of heauen and earth, is infinite in Iuſtice, and mercie: But according to the doctrine of the Papiſts, God is not infinite in Iuſtice, and mercie: And therefore to them is not the true God: for firſt, Gods Iuſtice according to them, is not infinite: for they (e) teach, that a man by his own proper works of penance (which bee finite and imperfect) may truely ſatisfie God for the guilt of temporall puniſhment. Secondly, they make the mercy of God imperfect by (f) peecing vp the ſame with mans merits in the worke of Redemption: for Gods mercy is either euery way mercy, or no mercy, as Paul ſaith, (g) If it bee of grace, it is no more of workes, or elſe were grace no more grace, and if it be of workes, it is no more grace, or elſe were worke no more worke. Secondly, the Chriſt of the Papiſts is a falſe Chriſt; this will appeare by plaine reaſon out of their doctrine: for firſt, they ſpoile Chriſt of his true manhood by their doctrine of real preſence, wherein they hold, that Chriſts body is not onely in heauen, but really and ſubſtantially in all places where the ſacrifice of the Maſſe is offered, thus they make it omnipotent, and ſo quite take away the nature of a body. Secondly, they diſgrade Chriſt from the three offices of his Mediatorſhip: firſt from his kingly office, by (h) placing the Pope in his roome, and ſtead, as his deputie in Chriſts preſence: for they giue power to the Pope to rule the Catholique Church, and to make lawes to binde mens conſciences, which bee things proper to Chriſt alone: wherein they do as much as if they ſhould take the Crowne from Chriſts head, and ſet it on the Popes: for to claime regencie in the preſence of the lawful Prince, is to proclaime rebellion againſt the Prince, for commiſſion of vicegerencie ceaſeth, in the preſence of him that appointeth it; now Chriſt is alwaies preſent with his Church, Mat. 28.20. And therefore the Pope by his claime, muſt needes thruſt Chriſt out of his office. Secondly, from his prieſtly office, which conſiſteth in ſatisfaction, and interceſſion: Chriſts ſatisfaction they nullifie by (i) ioyning therwith the ſatisfaction of mens works, for thereby they make it imperfect: And they rob him of his interceſſion, by (k) communicating the ſame to Saints; yea, they exalt the virgine Marie farre aboue Chriſt in this work, for they pray her to aske the Father, to commaund Chriſt her ſonne, by the authority of a mother, to doe thus, and thus, for them, and ſo make Chriſt her vnderling. Thirdly, from his propheticall office, by making the Pope the infallible Iudge of al controuerſies: avowing, that they rather deſire to know the ancient inſtitution of Chriſtian religion from the Popes mouth, then from holy writ. Now thus robbing Chriſt of his offices, they make him a falſe Chriſt: and ſo wanting the Sonne, they cannot haue the Father, for (l) he that hath not the Son, hath not the Father: and therefore popiſh religion wanting the Father and the Sonne, cannot be a true religion, but meere coloured Atheiſme in iudgement.

The ſecond degree of Atheiſme in iudgement, is when men place ſome idoll in the roome of the true God, holding the ſame for their God: thus did the Gentiles ſinne in worſhipping the ſunne, the moone, & the ſtarres, or other creatures.

The third degree is, when a man doth auouch, holde, and maintaine, that there is no God at all; this is the higheſt degree of Atheiſme, and the moſt notorious ſinne that can be, and all ſuch perſons as maintaine this curſed thought, are vnworthie the common breath of men: for if that man ſhall die the death, and that worthily, who ſhall auouch his lawfull Prince to be no prince, how much more ought he to die the death, though hee had a thouſand liues, that ſhall affirme the true God, to bee no god? Thus wee ſee the fruits of this euill thought, whereby the haynouſneſſe of it doth plainely appeare.

Examination of this thought.

IV. Point. The examination of our owne harts, touching this thought, whether it may be found among vs or not: doubtleſſe euery one will labour to cleare himſelf hereof; And the reaſon wherewith many doe ſooth vp themſelues, is this, becauſe they neuer felt in themſelues any ſuch conceits as this, that there is no God. But we may eaſily deceiue our ſelues herein, for a man cannot alwaies diſcerne what be the thoughts of his own heart: There be in man two kinds of cogitations, or as one may ſay, reaſons: the firſt is a ſingle cogitation, whereby a man ſimply thinketh, or knoweth, or iudgeth this or that; and this is properly called the minde. The other is a reflexe cogitation or reaſon, whereby a man iudgeth that he knoweth or thinketh this or

---

[c] 1.Ioh 2. 23.

[d] Ioh.4.22.

[e] Bellar. Lib.7.de poenit.c.7.

[f] Rhem. on Rom. 8.17. ſect.4.

[g] Rom. 11. 6.

[h] Rhem. on Epheſ.1.22. ſect.5.

[i] Rhem. on Rom 8. 17. ſect.4.

[k] Rhem. on 2.Cor.1.11. ſect.3. In officio beatæ Mariæ.

In annot. ſup: diſt.40. c.ſi papa. Edit. Greg.

[l] 3.Ioh.2. 23.

that; and it is commonly called Conſcience. Now ſince Adams fall, the conſcience is corrupt by originall ſinne, as bee all other powers of mans ſoule; whence it comes to paſſe, that conſcience cannot do his duty in giuing true teſtimony concerning mans imaginations: but a man may thinke euill, and yet his conſcience not tell him: and therefore wee may not ſay, becauſe we feele not theſe euill thoughts in vs, therefore wee haue them not, or we are free from them.

3. Signes of this thought.

But that wee may the better examine our hearts, wee muſt come to the ſignes whereby this euill thought is beſt diſcerned. Dauid in the 14. Pſal. ſetteth downe three ſignes hereof: firſt, (m) A diſordered life: ſecondly, (n) not calling on the name of God by prayer: thirdly, (o) contemning of them that put their truſt in God. Looke where theſe are to bee found, there is this euill thought, That there is no God. Now if we examine our ſelues by theſe ſignes, wee ſhall finde this wicked thought to bee amongſt vs: for firſt, many indeed are content to heare Gods word; but where is that man that reformeth his life according to that hee heareth? Certen it is, as their conſcience can witneſſe, few turne vnto God vnfainedly, few do break off their courſe in ſinning. Now this vnreformed life is an infallible token of this damnable thought.

Secondly, the exerciſe of prayer and inuocation on the name of God, is rare among men: no doubt many a touched heart doth euery day vnfainedly call on God for grace, but yet generally this is true: men go on from day to day, and from yeare to yeare, and neuer pray vnto God for ſupply of grace. Indeede men pleade for themſelues, that they vſe to pray: for they ſay the Lords Prayer, the Creede, and the ten commaundements: but wee muſt know, that with many, this practiſe is nothing but a vaine repetition of words; for prayer is an action of the heart, and not the labour of the tongue and lippes onely; ſo to ſay the Lords Prayer, is not to pray; for the words therof may be repeated with the heart of an Atheiſt.

And thirdly, the contempt of them that put their truſt in God, is rife among vs: for who is ſo much ſcorned and reproched, as he that maketh profeſſion of religion? Now may that complaint be iuſtly taken vp by the ſeruants of God, Iſa. 8. 18. Beholde, I and the children whome the Lord hath giuen me, are as ſignes and wonders. And, He that refraines from euill, makes himſelfe a pray to the euill tongue, Iſa. 59. 15. Yet let theſe ſcoffers know, whatſoeuer they be, that ſeedes of Atheiſme do poſſeſſe their ſoules.

To come yet more particularly to the triall of this thought in our ſelues: Whoſoeuer denieth the preſence of God, denieth God. Now let the conſcience anſwer, whether we be not afraid to ſinne in the preſence of many mortall men, and yet in the preſence of God, doe make no bones thereof, ſo the eyes of men be turned from vs. Now what is this, but either flatly to denie the preſence of God, or at leaſt to yeeld more feare and reuerence to men, then we do vnto God? Againe, what is the cauſe why men vſe oppreſſion, and iniuſtice, deceit, & lying in their worldly affaires? Is it not becauſe this thought of Atheiſme doth poſſeſſe their hearts, that God regards not theſe outward things? Durſt men directly ſin againſt God in ſeeking theſe outward bleſſings for naturall life, if they did rightly relie vpon Gods prouidence, knowing euery good gift to come from his bountifull hand? Laſtly, let thy conſcience ſpeake; doth not thy heart while thou goeſt on in ſinne, ſay thus vnto thee, God is mercifull, I will hereafter repent, and ſo ſhall I eſcape puniſhment? If a man doe well obſerue his own heart, he ſhall finde therein this vile thought, which directly ouerturnes the infinite Iuſtice of God, making him a God all of mercie, when as indeede hee is as well a God of Iuſtice as of mercie. By all which it is more then euident, that naturally this vile thought runs in mans heart, There is no God.

Vſe. Hereby then we muſt learne to ſee what vile, miſerable, and wretched ſinners wee are in our ſelues: though we had no actuall outward ſinnes, yet this damnable thought maketh vs accurſed: If a man (p) curſe the King in his heart, the ſin is ſo great, and haynous, that the foules of heauen ſhall diſcloſe it: How horrible then is this ſinne for a man in his thought to curſe God, the King of Kings, and Lord of Lords? This therefore muſt humble vs in our ſelues before the Lord.

Againe, hereby wee muſt bee admoniſhed to vſe all good meanes wherby we may come to ſee, and know not onely the groſſe actual ſinnes of our liues, but eſpecially this damnable thought of our hearts; fewe there bee that doe ſee it, and therefore we muſt bee earneſt with our ſelues in ſearching our owne hearts, to finde out this and ſuch like abominations that be in vs. And thus much for the firſt euill thought.

Sect. 2.

Of this thought; The word of God is fooliſhnes.

The ſecond damnable thought of mans naturall heart concerning God, is this; The word of God is fooliſhneſſe. This thought muſt principally bee vnderſtood of the Goſpel, as S. Paul declareth, ſaying, (q) It hath pleaſed God by the fooliſhneſſe of preaching, to ſaue them that beleeue: where hee calleth the Goſpel of Chriſt fooliſhnes, not that it was ſo indeed, but becauſe the vnconuerted (r) Corinthians, and other Grecians, iudged the preaching of Chriſt crucified, the moſt fooliſh thing in all the world. And in the next chapter he ſaith, (ſ) The naturall man, that is, he that is not effectually called, perceiueth not the things of the Spirit of God: to wit, that a man muſt repent of his ſinnes, and beleeue in Chriſt for the pardon

m v.2,3.
n v.4.
o v.6.
p Eccl.10.12. q 1.Cor.1.21
r ver.23.
ſ 1.Cor.2.14.

pardon of them, if he would bee ſaued; they are fooliſhnes vnto him. Nicodemus anſwer to Chriſt maketh this plaine, Ioh. 3.4. eſteeming regeneration (without which Chriſt ſaid no man could enter into the kingdome of heauen) to be a mans returne into his mothers wombe, and a birth from thence againe.

This wicked thought muſt be vnderſtood of the law of God alſo; the heart of man by nature iudgeth the threatnings of the law to be vntruthes, and ſo fooliſhneſſe: hence the Lord by Moſes forbad the people when they heard the threatnings and curſes of the law denounced againſt them, (e) To bleſſe themſelues in their hearts, ſaying, We ſhall haue peace: hereupon he denounceth a woe to them that deride his iudgements threatned, and ſay, (f) Let him make ſpeede, let him haſten his worke that we may ſee it, &c. As if they ſhould ſay, we doe not beleeue that any ſuch things ſhall come to paſſe: like to the mockers of whome Peter prophecieth, (g) VVho walke after their luſts and ſay, VVhere is the promiſe of his comming?

[e] Deut. 29. 19.

[f] Iſa. 5. 19.

[g] 2. Pet. 3. 3.4.

Fruits of this thought.

Now that this is a moſt damnable thought, may appeare by the curſed fruits thereof; for firſt, hence ariſeth that diuelliſh and carnall opinion of ſundrie men, that thinke and hold religion to be but humane policie to keepe men in awe, and ſo vſe it as a politicke deuice to exerciſe mens braines to keepe them from ſedition, trecherie, and rebellion: Secondly, hence ſprings all Apoſtacy, and departing from the faith: The Galatians were a worthy Church planted by the Apoſtle Paul, yet euen in his time they began to fall away to another Goſpell, which made him to maruell; and the reaſon was this, (h) They were not contented with that ſimplicitie, which is in Chriſt, but would ioyne with him, the obſeruation of legall ceremonies. The like we may ſay of thoſe famous Eaſterne Churches as thoſe ſeauen Churches of Aſia, planted by the Apoſtles; wherein the truth flouriſhed for a while, but not long after the Apoſtles times they fell into many damnable hereſies, as Arrianiſme, and ſuch like. Yea about ſixe hundred yeares after Chriſt, they embraced the damnable religion of Mahomet. In the Weſt parts alſo, were worthie, and famous Churches planted by the Apoſtles, and their ſucceſſors, as in Italie, France, Germanie, Spaine, and England, who about the ſame time of ſixe hundred yeares after Chriſt, fell to Papiſme, which ſpread it ſelfe ouer all Europe and further (ſome few Churches of Greece excepted.) In which religion men abandon the Goſpell of Chriſt, and betake themſelues to another Goſpell, by adioyning to the truth of Chriſt, their owne deuices: And this Papiſme, hath raigned euer ſince, til now of late, and ſo hath Apoſtacie taken place in thoſe Churches which the Apoſtles planted; The cauſe whereof was in the wicked and ſinfull heart of man, iudging the Goſpell fooliſhnes, wherupon men were contented to yeeld thẽſelues to any other religion, rather then to that ſimplicitie of truth, which is in Chriſt Ieſus. We now in England by Gods ſpeciall mercie, hold, and teach the word of God: but if God ſhould alter our religion with the times, the greateſt part of men among vs would forſake the truth, & cleaue to any other religion, and that onely vpon this ground, becauſe they iudge the Goſpel fooliſhnes: Let any man among vs broach an error, or hereſie, and it ſhall haue patrones at the firſt, be it neuer ſo vile & abſurd, and protectors afterward. When that brutiſh hereſie of the family of loue, tooke ſhipping in Germanie, & ariued in England (though it be an opinion voyd of common ſenſe) yet it had applauſe amongſt vs, and was receiued of many, and would haue ſpred it ſelfe further, if the preaching of the word, with the care of the Magiſtrate had not ſuppreſſed it. And the reaſon hereof is this; mans minde by nature is full of darkneſſe; he cannot without Gods ſpeciall grace, perceiue the things of God, & ſo he iudgeth the Goſpel fooliſhnes, & embraceth error, rather thẽ the truth, yea loueth darkneſſe, rather then the light, becauſe his deedes are euill, Ioh. 3. 19.

1 Machiauelisme.

2 Apoſtacie.

[h] Gal. 1. 6.

Examination for this thought.

For the examination of our hearts touching this bad thought; After due triall wee ſhall find, that the minds of moſt among vs are poſſeſſed herewith: for we are indeed content to come into the aſſemblies where God is worſhipped, and we doe ſubmit our ſelues to the miniſtery of the word to be taught and inſtructed: Therein we haue our owne perſonall ſinnes diſplaid, and reproued, and withall very fearefull & terrible curſes of the law denounced againſt vs for the ſame, both iudgements in this life, iudgements in death, & alſo iudgements eternall after this life: Now let the conſcience anſwer, what is the cauſe when we heare theſe things, that we be not mooued, why are not our hearts touched with griefe and ſadneſſe, when we heare Gods iudgments due vnto vs for our ſinnes daily denounced againſt vs? Some indeede there bee whoſe hearts tremble at the word; but ſmall is that number. If a man runne through the ſtreetes, and crie fire, fire, our hearts are ſuddenly ſtriken with great feare: but the Miniſter of God may ſtand and crie, fire, fire, the fire of hell which is (s) kindled by the breath of the Lord like a riuer of Brimſtone as the Prophet ſpeaketh, and yet mens hearts are nothing mooued: what is the cauſe that we ſhould be ſo affected with the burning of an old houſe by temporall fire, and bee not afraid at the voice of God, which proclaimeth vnto vs eternall burning with the fire of Gods wrath? Surely the cauſe is this, our harts are foreſtalled with this falſe imagination, that the curſes of the law are fooliſhnes, & that there be no ſuch tormẽts as the word denounceth; It will not ſinke into the heart of a naturall man that his ſins are ſo heinous, and Gods iudgements ſo terrible againſt them, as the word maketh them: And till ſuch time as this damnable thought be taken away, mens hearts will neuer bee touched with the threatnings of the law; this is a barre to ſtoppe the way to all ſuch paſſions as the law would worke.

[s] Iſay. 30. 33

Againe, when the Miniſter of God ſpeaketh of the pardon of ſinne, and of eternall life by Chriſt, who hath his heart melting for ioy in regard of this ſaluation? Though men be called vpon to come into the kingdome of heauen, yet few ſtriue to enter in: though we be daily exhorted to repent, yet few turne to the Lord: all which bee branches of the Goſpel; but men beleeue them not, becauſe their hearts bee filled with this damnable thought, The Goſpell of Chriſt is fooliſhneſſe: When the Iſraelites were reſtored from captiuity in Babylon, it was as (b) a dreame vnto them: now if that temporall deliuerance ſeemed a dreame, what a dreame will this ſpirituall deliuerance from the captiuity of hell and death, to the libertie of the ſonnes of GOD in grace and glorie, ſeeme to be? And indeed to a naturall man it ſeemes fooliſhneſſe that God ſhould become man, and that Chriſt by death ſhould free men from death, and by ſuffering the curſe of the law, ſhould take away the ſame from vs, and by his righteouſnes ſhould iuſtifie vs vnto life: all which notwithſtanding be points of the Goſpel. This alſo is the cauſe why after long teaching there is little turning, or faithfull obedience yeelded vnto the Goſpell: neither will it be better with men, while this euill thought abideth in them.

(b) Pſal. 126,1.

Vſe. 1. If this be a truth, that euery naturall man thinketh the word of God to be fooliſhneſſe, then we muſt learne this leſſon of the Apoſtle, * He that ſeemes to bee wiſe in this world, muſt become a foole, that he may be wiſe, that is, he muſt reiect his owne naturall reaſon, and ſtoppe vp the eyes of his naturall minde, like a blinde man, and ſuffer himſelfe wholly to bee guided by Gods Spirit in the things of God, that thereby he may be made wiſe vnto ſaluation.

* 1.Cor.3.18

Secondly, we muſt hereby learne to make earneſt praier vnto God * for the opening of our eies, that we may be able to vnderſtand the Goſpell of Chriſt, and know the right meaning of that word of ſaluation: for of our ſelues we can neuer vnderſtand it, vnleſſe the Lord inſtruct vs by his Spirit: (d) No man commeth vnto me, ſaith Chriſt, that is, beleeueth, except it be giuen him of my Father: But (e) euery one that hath heard, and learned of the Father, commeth vnto mee. Thus much of this ſecond euill thought.

* Pſal. 119. 18.

[d] Ioh. 6. 36.

[e] verſ. 45.

Sect. 3.

Of this thought, I will not obey Gods word.

From the former ariſeth an other moſt vile thought, in the heart of euery natural man, as a branch of the ſame; namely, becauſe the word of God is fooliſhneſſe, Therefore I will not performe obedience thereunto. That this is the naturall thought of man, Iob teacheth plainely; for he bringeth in the wicked (that is, euery ſinner) ſaying thus to God, (f) Depart from vs, we will not the knowledge of thy waies. This the wicked man ſaith, not with his mouth, for none is ſo farre paſt al ſhame, that dares thus blaſphemouſly ſpeake againſt God; but thus he ſaith in his heart, his affections ſpeake it, when hee purpoſeth with himſelfe, to caſt off the yoake of God, and to liue after his owne luſts: and therefore they ſay further, (g) VVho is the Almightie that we ſhould ſerue him? as if one ſhould ſay, It is a diſgrace to me to abaſe my ſelfe to ſerue God; I will not doe it. The Prophet Ieremie bringeth in the Lord ſaying thus to his people, (h) Stand in the waies, and behold, and aske for the old way, which is the good way, and walke therein, and ye ſhall finde reſt for your ſoules: but in the ſame place the Iewes anſwer, VVe will not walke in thy waies. Shall we thinke that they durſt thus impudently anſwer the Lord with open mouthes? No ſurely; But the Prophet in theſe wordes ſetteth downe the purpoſe of their hearts who hardened the ſame obſtinately againſt the word, when they were exhorted to repentance and obedience before the Lord. Our Sauiour Chriſt compareth himſelfe to a Noble man that goeth into a farre countrey; now when he is gone, the citizens of his countrey ſend meſſengers after him to tell him, (i) That they will not haue him to raigne ouer them. Which though it be properly to be vnderſtood of the nation of the Iewes, who did indeede ſay ſo to our Sauiour Chriſt, yet it may alſo bee extended to all impenitent ſinners, who ſay in their hearts; Chriſt ſhall not raigne ouer vs: for ſo long as a man is vncalled, he carrieth a purpoſe to liue in ſin, ſome in this ſinne, and ſome in that, and ſo doing, ſaith in his heart, God ſhall not be my God, I will not ſubmit my ſelfe vnto his lawes, Chriſt ſhall not raigne ouer me. This is plaine and manifeſt by mens behauiour, when they are reprooued for their ſinnes. Tell the couetous man of his auarice, the ſwearer of his blaſphemie, & the drunkard of his drunkenneſſe, &c. will he humble himſelfe in conſcience of his ſinne? Nothing leſſe: but his heart will ſwell againſt thee, as his furie and impatience will ſoone bewray; and the reaſon is, becauſe he neuer thinketh of his owne eſtate, how by creation he oweth homage vnto God, as to his Creator: for his purpoſe is to goe on in ſinne, and when he is reprooued for the ſame, his deſire is croſſed, which he cannot abide, and therefore rageth; ſhewing thereby manifeſtly, that in his heart he ſaith, He will not obey Gods commandements.

[f] Iob 21.14.

[g] verſ. 15.

[h] Ier. 6. 16.

[i] Luk. 19. 14.

For the examination of our hearts touching this thought: whether did wee euer thinke thus with our ſelues, I will not obey Gods commandements? Doubtleſſe euery man will anſwer for himſelfe, that hee abhorres this thought.

Examination for this thought. And yet after iuſt triall it will appeare, that generally this thought is rife among vs: for though we heare the word, and receiue the Sacraments the pledges of our ſaluation, and will be counted the members of Chriſt, yet what is the cauſe that there is ſo litle knowledge of God, and obedience to his word? And why doe men in their callings ſhew forth ſo ſmall loue, ſo litle mercy, iuſtice, & good conſcience? The truth is, that though ſome haue theſe things in them in ſome meaſure, yet the bodie of our people is generally voyd of theſe good vertues, and fruits of the ſpirit: hee that hath but halfe an eye may ſee it: for where is that religious keeping of the Sabbath that ſhould be? where is that ſerious performing of worſhippe vnto God which ought to be? All which argue, that the heart is corrupt and deceiuable, and ſaith indeed to God, I will not obey thy word, Lord depart from me. What man almoſt is there that ſaith with himſelfe, Oh miſerable man, what haue I done?

The Vſe. By this wicked imagination wee may ſee how hard a thing it is truly & ſoundly to conuert a ſinner vnto God, & how eaſily a man may deceiue his owne ſoule, & beguile the world by hypocriſie: for a man by long exerciſe in the word may haue a great meaſure of knowledge, and withall good wit, and memorie, and with them vtterance, and by a common gift of the ſpirit, bee able to teach the word truly, and to conceiue prayer to good purpoſe, and withall haue a cankred heart towards God, poyſoned with this damnable thought, I will not obey the word of God: for euery man that hath inwardly in him a purpoſe to liue, though but in one ſinne, his heart is not vpright with God, neither bee Gods graces, as faith, and repentance found in his heart: for true repentance is a purpoſe, and reſolution to leaue all ſinne, and to pleaſe God in all things.

Sect. 4.

Of this thought; It is a vaine thing to worſhip God.

The third wicked imagination of mans heart cõcerning God is this: It is a vaine thing to worſhip God. This Iob ſheweth to bee true: bringing in the wicked man ſaying, (a) What profit ſhall I haue if I pray vnto God: we muſt not thinke that he ſaid thus with his mouth, but in his heart: And the Prophet Malachie bringeth in the Iewes ſaying, (b) It is vaine thing to ſerue God, and what profit is it that wee haue kept his commaundement, and that we walked humbly before the Lord of hoſts? Yea righteous Dauid, a man after Gods owne heart, was ouertaken with this euill thought, when hee ſaid, (c) Certainely I haue cleanſed my heart in vaine, and waſhed my hands in Innocencie: whereby it is plaine, that this is a naturall euill thought in euery man.

a Iob.21.15

b Mal.3.14.

c Pſal.73.13.

Yet here we muſt remember, that this euill thought comes not into the minde of man at all times, but onely at ſuch time, when occaſion is offered, as namely when a man is called on to the ſeruice of God, which vpon ſome occaſion he is deſirous to omit: Then will his minde range about for libertie from Gods ſeruice, and ſo will hee bethinke himſelfe of the wicked mans eſtate who neuer ſerued God, and yet is in better caſe outwardly then the godly man is? And hereupon he begins to ſay in his heart, doubtles It is a vaine thing to ſerue God.

Examination for this thought.

For the examination of our hearts touching this thought, after iuſt triall it will bee found among vs, as the ſtate of all ſorts of families will declare? Among the poorer ſort you ſhall ſee men labour from morning to euening, and take great paines to prouide for the world, but in the meane time where is the worſhip and ſeruice of God? where is prayer and thankſgiuing, morning, and euening? Surely it is neglected, and the reaſon is, becauſe they thinke thus in their heart, So that I may haue prouiſion for the world, it is no matter whether I ſerue God or not. Come to the rich mans houſe, & there you ſhall ſee them ſpend their time in eating, drinking, gaming, and ſuch delights, but the worſhip of God is not regarded, for thus they thinke with theſelues, If they may haue their pleaſure all is well. Come and reaſon with ordinary men, and exhort them to vſe the meanes of ſaluation, & ſhew forth loue vnto religion ſincerely: their anſwer is, They will doe as they haue done, and as their forefathers did before them, they truſt their ſoules are as good to God-ward as the beſt: And for ought they ſee, none are worſer then thoſe that haue ſo much preaching, and therefore they hope to be ſaued, though they doe not follow it ſo much: And this alſo commeth from this euill thought, It is in vaine to ſerue God. Marke alſo in thoſe places where the Goſpell is preached: If any man ſeeme to make more conſcience of ſin, and of ſeruing God then other, they are made a by-word and a mocking ſtocke, and their profeſſion is turned to their reproch: which argues plainely that mans thought is this, It is a vaine thing to ſerue God. Nay, take a view of the whole world, and you ſhall ſee euery where, men giue themſelues to will-worſhip. No nation is ſo barbarous as to denie vnto God all worſhip, but doe they giue vnto him that which he commandeth in his word? Nothing leſſe: It is either the meere inuention of men, or altogether ſtayned therewith: This is moſt euident with the Turke, the Iew, and the Papiſt: yea our common ſort of Proteſtants haue their will-worſhip: for generally they content themſelues with the mumbling ouer the words of the Creede, the Lords Prayer, the ten Commaundements, perſwading themſelues that by the bare reherſall of the words, they haue ſufficiently ſerued God. Now would we know the cauſe hereof, as alſo why men are ſo ſlacke and cold in prayer, ſo careleſſe, and vnreuerent in hearing Gods word? Surely it is nothing but this vile Imaginatiō bewitching our ſoules, that it is a vaine thing to ſerue God, This quencheth the ſpirit, and hindreth all good motions that be in our hearts.

Sect. 5.

Of mans thought of diſtruſt.

The fourth euill thought concerning God, is, a thought of diſtruſt, thus framed in the minde; God doth not regard me, God will not helpe me, God will not bee mercifull vnto me: This thought made entrance vnto the fall of our firſt parents: for firſt Eue looked vpon the fruit, and ſaw that it was beautifull, and then entred into her heart a thought of diſtruſt after this maner; It may be it is not true which God hath ſaid to vs concerning this fruit, and it may be God regardeth vs not as we thinke he doth, in that he denieth vs this fruit; hereupon her will and her affections were carried to the breaking of Gods commaundement, and ſo ſhe ſinned by diſobedience, and Adam alſo ſinned. When the people of Iſrael murmured in the wilderneſſe (a) Moſes ſinned a ſinne, for hee was debarred entrance into the land of Canaan: Now what was Moſes ſinne? for both he and Aaron (b) praied to the Lord, and checked the people ſaying, Heare oh ye rebells, &c. And at Gods commandement he brought water out of the rocke? Surely his ſinne was ſecret euen inward vnbeleefe and diſtruſt in Gods promiſe, for when he ſmote the rocke, hee might thinke thus with himſelfe, it may bee that God will not now giue water out of the rocke, and this ſeemes the more probable, becauſe he went beyond his commiſſion in ſmiting thriſe vpon the rocke, when God bad him onely to ſpeake (c) vnto it. This euill thought takes hold of religious Dauid alſo: (d) I ſaid in mine haſt I am caſt out of thy ſight, as though he ſhould ſay, Heretofore I haue found fauour with God, but now in mine aduerſitie I am vtterly reiected: Againe, (e) I ſaid in my feare, all men are lyars: that is, when feare of death tooke hold of mee, then I thought that Samuel lyed vnto mee, when hee ſaid I ſhould come to the kingdome ouer Iſrael. The children of Iſrael did often bewray this thought of diſtruſt, when they were pinched with hunger, and famine in the wilderneſſe, they ſay, (f) Can God prouide a table for vs in the wilderneſſe? Can he giue bread and fleſh for his people? As if they ſhould ſay, we thinke hee cannot, nor will not: Yea the Apoſtle Peter was not free from this thought, for when Chriſt walking on the waters, commanded Peter to come vnto him, he came out boldly, and walked towards Ieſus, but when (g) He ſaw a mightie winde, he began to ſinke: whence came this? Surely from a thought of diſtruſt which he had in his heart to this effect: It may be God will not ſupport me in this my walking: and that this or ſome ſuch thought was in his heart appeareth by Chriſts anſwer to him ſaying, (h) O thou of little faith, why diddeſt thou doubt? By all which it is euident that this is a naturall thought in the minde of man, which at ſome time troubleth the moſt righteous man that is.

a Num. 20. 12.

(b) verſ. 6.

c verſ. 8.

d Pſal. 31. 21

e Pſal. 116. 12.

f Pſal. 78. 19. 20.

g Mat. 14. 30

h verſ. 31.

Now touching this thought of diſtruſt, two things are to bee skanned: firſt, the time when it taketh place in mans minde; and ſecondly, the danger of it. For the time; This thought doth not alwaies take place in the minde of man, but only in the time of ſome danger, affliction, and temptation, and eſpecially in the time of ſicknes, and in the pangs of death. Thus in his grieuous affliction was righteous Iob troubled with this thought of diſtruſt: for then he complained, that God did hate him and gnaſh vpon him with his teeth, and as his enemie, ſharpned his eyes againſt him; yea, that (k) he made him as his butte, and marke to ſhoote at. And Dauid in a grieuous trouble of minde, thus complained: (l) Will the Lord abſent himſelfe for euer? And will he ſhew no more fauour? Is his mercie cleane gone for euer? Doth his promiſe faile for euermore? Hath God forgotten to be mercifull, &c. Whereby appeareth, that in his affliction he was greatly troubled with this diſtruſtfull thought, and there is no man liuing, but when trouble & affliction comes, he ſhall feele in himſelfe theſe thoughts of diſtruſt. Indeed while peace & eaſe continue, preſumptuous thoughts poſſeſſe the minde; but when the daies of peace be gone, & troubleſome times approach, then preſumptuous thoughts giue place, and thoughts of diſtruſt come in their roome and ſtead.

The time of this thought.

k verſ. 12.

l Pſal. 77. 7

II. Point. The danger of theſe thoughts of diſtruſt is very great, as the fruits thereof declare: for hence ariſe; firſt, all horrours, & terrors of conſcience, all feares, and aſtoniſhments of the heart: For when the mind ſaith (though falſly) God doth not regard me, God will not ſaue me, then the trembling heart is full of horror and dread. Secondly, hence commeth deſperation it ſelfe, whereby men confidently auouch that God hath forſaken them, and caſt them off, and that there is no hope of life, but preſent death, remaining for them: this thought troubleth the mind of the wicked, and of the repentant perſon alſo: for deſperation is nothing but the ſtrength of this thought of diſtruſt. Thirdly, this weakneth the foundation of our ſaluation, which ſtandeth in the certaintie of Gods promiſes, for this thought of diſtruſt denieth credit to Gods promiſes, and maketh them vncertain: Among all other euil thoghts this doth moſt directly hinder ſaluation, for it is flat againſt faith, as water is to fire: for true faith makes a man ſay with good conſcience, (m) Chriſt died & ſhed his blood for mee, God the Father will be mercifull vnto me, and ſaue me: But this diſtruſtfull thought cauſeth a man to ſay the cleane contrarie, Chriſt died not for me: God will not ſaue me: ſo that where this thought preuaileth, true faith is not, neither can take place.

Fruits of this thoght.

m Gal. 2. 20

Vſe. Conſidering the danger of this diſtruſtfull thought is ſo great, we muſt be admoniſhed in the feare of God to vſe all good meanes, while the daies of peace doe laſt, that it take no place with vs in the day of trouble and temptation. The meanes to expreſſe it are the preaching of the word, and the Sacraments of Baptiſme and the Lords Supper.

Meanes againſt diſtruſt.

For the firſt: the word of God preached is a ſpecial meanes ordained of God, for the true applying of Gods promiſes of mercy to our owne ſoules; and therefore a moſt ſoueraigne remedie againſt this thought of diſtruſt; for when the promiſes of mercie in Chriſt, are offered vnto Gods people in the preaching of the word by a lawfull Miniſter, it is as much as if Chriſt himſelfe in his own perſon ſhould ſpeake vnto them, by vertue of Gods ordinance. If God from heauen ſhould ſay to any man, mercie belongeth to thee, he would beleeue: if God ſay to Cornelius, beleeue thou, and my mercy belongs to thee, Cornelius will beleeue; if he ſay to Peter beleeue thou, and my mercy belongs to thee, Peter will beleeue: & if he ſay ſo to Marie Magdalen, ſhee wil beleeue. Loe here, when the Miniſter of God, out of Gods word, ſaith to any man, beleeue thou, and repent thou, and Gods mercy belongs vnto thee; it is as much as if the Lord ſhould call him by name particularly, and ſay vnto him, beleeue thou, and repent, and my mercy belongs vnto thee: yea, it is all one as if God himſelfe ſhould ſay, I am thy Father and thou art my childe, if thou wilt repent, and beleeue.

The ſecond meanes which is alſo very effectuall to cut off this thought of diſtruſt, is Baptiſme. If an earthly prince giue a pardon to any man, and put the mans name in the pardon, and his owne broad ſeale vnto it, the man will neuer doubt of his pardon, but beleeue it. Behold, in Baptiſme God entreth couenant with miſerable wretched man, and herein makes promiſe of life vnto him: yea he puts the mans name in the couenant, ſealing the ſame with his owne ſeale: and therefore the party baptized, muſt beleeue againſt this thought.

The third meanes, is the Lords Supper rightly adminiſtred and receiued: for therein the bread and wine giuen to the hand of euery communicant by the Miniſter, are particular pledges & tokens vnto them of ſpeciall mercie in Chriſt. Theſe are the meanes which we muſt vſe with all good conſcience in the daies of peace, that when troubles come, this thought of diſtruſt may not preuaile againſt vs. And thus much of mans naturall euill thoughts againſt God. Many other might be added hereunto, but theſe being the principall, I omit the reſt.

CHAP. IV.

Of mans naturall thoughts againſt his neighbour.

NOw wee come to the euill thoughts of mans naturall heart againſt his neighbour. And to finde them out we muſt haue recourſe to the ſecond Table of the morall law, which was penned with reſpect to (a) the corrupt eſtate of man, forbidding that which mans corrupt heart thinketh naturally againſt his neighbour, for euery commandement thereof is ſpirituall, forbidding not onely the wicked actions, euill words, & geſtures; but all corrupt affections, yea all euill imaginations of man againſt man.

(a) Gal. 3. 19.

Theſe thoughts of man againſt his neighbour be of two ſorts; either without conſent, or with conſent. Thoughts without conſent, are the very firſt euill motions of the minde which a man conceiueth againſt his neighbour, to which the will neuer giueth conſent, and theſe are forbidden in the tenth commandement, Thou ſhalt not luſt.

Thoughts with conſent of will are ſuch as a man conceiuing in his minde, doth withall deſire, or purpoſe in his heart to practiſe: and theſe are forbidden in the fift, ſixt, ſeuenth, eight, and ninth commandements, by reaſon whereof they may fitly bee reduced to fiue heads. They are either thoughts of diſhonour, againſt the fift commandement; or thoughts of murther, againſt the ſixt; or thoughts of adulterie, againſt the ſeuenth; or thoughts of theft againſt the eight; or thoughts of diſgrace, againſt the ninth commandement.

Sect. 1.

Of thoughts of diſhonour.

Firſt, a thought of diſhonour is any thought that tendeth to the contempt and abaſing of the perſon of our neighbour, in reſpect of our ſelues. And it is then conceiued in our minds, when we thinke thus of all other men beſide our ſelues: Such and ſuch a man, is farre inferiour vnto me; a baſe and contemptible fellow in regard of me. Example hereof we haue in the Phariſie, a man ſtrict in profeſſion, and zealous in his religion, who commeth to the Temple to pray with the Publican: now marke what he ſaith, (b) O Lord, I thanke thee, that I am not as other men are, or as this Publican. Which words proceed from ſuch a proud thought as this; Lord I thanke thee, all other men are farre inferiour vnto me: I doe farre ſurpaſſe the common ſort: this Publican is a baſe fellow, and no bodie to me. If any ſhall imagine that this thought is not in euery man, but in ſome few proud perſons, I anſwer, it is by nature in euery perſon liuing without grace: and therefore Saint Paul giueth this commandement, That (c) euery man in meekneſſe ſhould eſteeme others better then himſelfe, giuing vs to vnderſtand, that by nature all men thinke beſt of themſelues, and eſteeme others farre worſe then themſelues.

(b) Luk. 18. 11.

c Phil. 2. 3.

The Vſe. If this thought of diſhonour be in all mens hearts, then behold what a pallace of all Satanicall and damnable pride the heart of man is naturally: it is like vnto the table of Adonibezek, at which hee ſate in a chaire of eſtate, and made others, euen kings, Iudg. 1. 7.

A count other men to be like dogs under his feete, with their thumb ... (a) such an one it may ... (b) ... he lifteth up himselfe, saying, How the man ... treadeth his brother under his feete, as nobodie unto him. And this is the cause of much strife & debate in al humane societies, this causeth many iarres, much iustling, and great contempt among men in words and deedes.

Now that we may reforme this thought in vs, we must learne to say as Iob did after hee had bin afflicted, and came to see his sinnes: (c) I abhorre my selfe: with Abraham, (d) I am but dust and ashes: and with Dauid, I am a worme, and no man, Psal. 22.6. yea with Paul, (e) O wretched man that I am ... of sinne; and that will helpe to pull downe the B pride of our hearts.

Sect. 2.

Of murthering thoughts.

The second euill thought of man against his neighbour with consent, is a thought of murther, or of any thing that tendeth thereto. Of this wee haue particular examples in Scripture. Deut. 15.9. The Lord forbiddeth the Iewes to haue this murthering thought in their hearts, I will not giue to the poore, I will not lend unto them, giuing us to understand, that this was the common thought of the Iewes, or else he would not haue forbidden it: yea the Lord doth there set out this thought by two signes, first, an euill eye, when a man C turnes his countenance from the poore, or looketh on them without compassion: secondly, vnmercifull dealing, when a man will not helpe the poore by gift, according to his abilitie. And because all actions proceede from thoughts, the heart being the fountaine of our deedes, hence it appeareth, that this murthering thought against the poore, is rife in this age: for where is the man that doth pitie the poore, and doth good to them according to his abilitie? nay, the Lords complaint against the Iewes, may be fitly applied to our times, in regard of cruelty and oppression, The spoile of the poore is in your houses: what haue ye to doe, that ye beate my people to peeces, D and grinde the faces of the poore? Isa. 3.14.15.

The second example of a murthering thought, is concerning Gods Church, and it is this, I will doe some spite or hurt to them that worship God. For proofe hereof reade Psal. 74. 8. Dauid bringeth in the Babylonians, Edomites, &c. saying thus among themselues against Gods people, Let vs destroy them altogether, and Psal. 83. 4. Let vs cut them off from being a people: and let the name of Israel be no more in remembrance. Now as this was their thought, so is it the thought of all men naturally: for that which was the disposition of Babel, Edom &c. to be thus minded against Gods Church, is the disposition of all men naturally: for ... hatred of men is ... the purpose of mischiefe against those that professe religion: for all

A ciently harboured hatred against Gods Church, and people, so Christ saith to his disciples, (f) Ye shall be hated of all nations for my names sake. Yea whosoeuer killeth you shall thinke that he doth God good seruice: and therefore this thought of doing mischiefe is as generall, euen in the minde of euery man by nature. This further appeareth by the continuall persecution, that hath euer beene raised against Gods owne Church, since the beginning of the world: it began at Abell, soone after the giuing of the couenant of grace to our first parents, still hath continued to this day, and shall abide unto the end: so that if carnal men could looke into their owne hearts, they should there behold this murdering thought B against Gods people. This murdering thought commeth from another wicked imagination, set downe by S. Peter, who bringeth in the wicked of this world, (g) Thinking it a strange thing, that Gods children doe not, as they doe, and runne not with them unto all excesse of riot, liuing in drunkennesse, fornication, and such other abominations, for this cause doe they conceiue hatred, and so will continue, till God giue them grace to repent. If any shall say this thought is not generall, for Nabuchadnezzar (h) an heathen man shewed fauour to Daniell, and highly aduanced him: I answer, it is true he did so, but that was a worke of Gods speciall prouidence, who procured him fauour, and disposed the kings heart to affect C him, as he did also the heart of the chiefe (i) Eunuch. Otherwise Nabuchadnezzar naturally did nothing but intend mischiefe against Gods Church, as his rage against the three children did euidently bewray, Dan. 3.19.

A third example of this murthering thoght I adde, which euery Minister of Gods word may obserue by daily experience, and that is this, when mens faults are particularly rebuked in the ministerie of the word, and the quicke, as it were touched by applying the word to the conscience, then will the heart of a naturall man thus conceiue of the Minister that reproueth sinne: This man meaneth me, D he hath some spite, and malice against me, that he thus reproueth my particular faults, when as the Minister knew them not to bee his personall sinnes: but it is the power of the word that ransacketh the sinfull heart: this is the fault of all carnall hearers, who will heare quietly till their faults be rebuked; but then they thinke malitiously of the preacher: thus Herod dealt with Iohn Baptist, he heard him gladly for a while, Mark. 6. 20. but when he was rebuked for his brother Philips wife, then he cast Iohn in prison, Luk. 3. 19. 20. And if conscience might be iudge, many an hearer would bee found to haue an Herods heart towards Gods Minister.

Sect. 3.

Of thoughts of Adulterie, theft, and disgrace.

The third thought of man touching his neigh-

c Iob 39.37

d Gen.18. 27.

e Rom.7.24

f Mat 24.9 Ioh.16.3.

g 1.Pet.4.3. 4.

h Dan.2.48

i Dan.1.9.

neighbour, is the thought of Adultery, which is the thought with conſent to any vnchaſtitie. Such a thought had Iudah concerning Thamar his daughter in law, when he iudged her an whore, and deſired to lye with her, Gen. 38. 15, 16. And with ſuch thoughts was Amnons heart ſo vexed, that he fell ſicke for his ſiſter Thamar, 2. Sam. 13. 2. This makes a man an Adulterer in heart before God, though actually he commit not the fact, Mat. 5. 28.

The fourth is the thought of Theft, which is the thought with conſent of beguiling or wronging another in his goods or ſubſtance. This is that imagining of iniquity, and working of wickednes vpon their beds, in coueting of fields, againſt which Micah pronounceth a woe, Mic. 2. 1. And this thought alſo poſſeſſeth their hearts, that with the wicked Iſraelites wiſh the time were come, wherein they might make the Ephah ſmall, & the Shekell great, Amos 8. 5. that is, leſſen the meaſure, and inhaunce the price, and falſifie the weights by deceit.

The fifth euill thought, is a thought of diſgrace, which ſome way tendeth to the reproch, and debaſing of our neighbours good name, as when a thing is well done, to thinke and iudge it to be ill done, or when a thing is amiſſe, to iudge it worſe then it is: Thus Eli thought diſgracefully of Hannah, deeming her to be drunk, ſaying, 1. Sam. 1. 13, 14. Put away thy drunkenneſſe, when ſhee prayed deuoutly from a troubled ſoule to the Lord, v. 15. Thus Eliab, Dauids eldeſt brother, thoght diſgracefully of Dauid, when he ſhewed himſelfe willing to encounter with Goliah that reuiled the hoaſt of the liuing God, ſaying, 1. Sam. 17. 28. I know the pride and malice of thine heart, that thou art come to ſee the battell: when as indeede the Spirit of God put that motion into his heart, to take away the ſhame from Iſrael, as the happy euent declared plainely. So when our Sauiour Chriſt ſpake moſt comfortably to the ſicke of the palſie, ſaying, Mat. 9. 2. Be of good comfort, thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee; then the curſed hearts of the wicked Phariſies thought thus in themſelues, This man blaſphemeth, v. 4. And when the gift of the holy Ghoſt was ſent vpon the Apoſtles, cauſing them to ſpeake ſtrange tongues to the great admiration of men of diuers nations, then ſome of the malicious Iewes thought they were drunk, ſaying ſcoffingly, Act. 2. 13. They were full of new wine. And this thought of diſgrace is in euery man naturally, bringing forth continually the fruits of diſgrace, as Enuie, Strife, Emulations, Diſſentions, and Debates: for loue thinketh not euill; but naturally true loue is wanting in all men; and therefore they cannot but thinke euill of others.

Wee ſee the fiue euill thoughts of mans naturall heart againſt his neighbour, touching which two things are yet further to bee ſkanned, to wit, when theſe euill thoughts do ariſe in the minde, and in whom they are. For the firſt, it is true, that they do not at all times A ariſe in their mindes, but then only when occaſion is giuen: for mans heart is like tinder or drie wood, which burnes not of it ſelfe, but ſo ſoone as fire is put to it, then preſently it kindleth. When you come to talke with a naturall man, it may be for the preſent, he thinketh not to lie, but giue him occaſion to lie, and then he ſoone bethinkes himſelfe thereof, and will not ſpare to vtter it, if it may make for his aduantage. And the like we may ſay of Malice, Adultery, Theft, Diſgrace, or any other ſinne againſt our neighbour: Doe but miniſter occaſion thereabout to the naturall heart of man, and he thinketh of them, and without Gods grace reſtraining, or renuing B him, will bring forth the ſame in action.

The ſecond point. In whome are all theſe euill thoughts? Anſwer. In all men naturally without exception, till they bee renewed by Gods ſpeciall grace: Yea the truth is, theſe thoughts doe euery where abound, for looke what men doe practiſe, that firſt of all they thinke, for the thought is the beginning of euery action; But in the world all ſinnes againſt the ſecond Table doe abound, as the practiſe of Diſhonour, of Murther, Adultery, Thefts, and Diſgraces: and therfore theſe euill thoughts from whence theſe actions come, muſt needes be common.

Vſe. By this we may ſee what a huge maſſe C of corruption the naturall heart of man is, without Gods ſpeciall grace; for thoughts of diſhonour make a mans heart a pallace of pride, like the table of Adonibezek: Alſo thoughts of crueltie make mans heart a ſlaughter-houſe: Thoughts of Adulterie make it a moſt filthy ſtewes: Thoughts of Theft make it to become a den of theeues, wherein all manner of fraud, and badde dealing is plotted & deuiſed: and laſtly, thoughts of Diſgrace make it a fountaine of backbiting, debate, ſlander, and reuiling: And therefore howſoeuer the outward life may bee ordered ciuilly, yet without Gods grace mans heart is moſt vile; And thoſe that pleade their good nature, and good meaning, are here confuted; for naturally the heart thinks D all euill againſt his neighbour.

CHAP. V.

Of mans naturall thoughts concerning himſelfe.

Sect. 1.

Mans proud thoughts of his owne excellencie.

THe third kinde of mans naturall euill thoughts, are ſuch as concerne himſelfe, and they are principally foure.

The firſt may be fitly tearmed a thought of pride, whereby euery man naturally thinkes himſelfe moſt excellent, and farre to exceede

Iſa. 14. 13.

all other men whatſoeuer: thus the Prophet Iſay brings in Babylon ſpeaking in her heart, that is, thinking, I will aſcend into heauen, & exalt my throne aboue or beſides the ſtarres of God, as if ſhee ſhould thinke with her ſelfe, I am farre more excellent then any other whatſoeuer, & therefore I am to bee exalted from the earth to heauen, and to be matched with God himſelfe. And the Prophet Zephany brings in Niniue ſpeaking this in her heart, (a) I am, and there is none beſides me. And ſo the proud Phariſie in his priuate, & ſecret prayer to God, ſaith, (b) I thanke thee Lord, that I am not as other men, meaning that he is more excellent. And the whore of Babylon (c) is brought in ſaying of her ſelfe, (d) I ſit as a Queene, and am no widdow, and ſhall ſee no mourning. All which places ſhew this to be the nature of man, to exalt himſelfe in his owne heart, aboue all others. If any ſhall ſay, hereby no more can bee prooued, but that this thought is in ſome proud and inſolent perſons, I adde therefore, that as our firſt Parents in the beginning, did learne that proud leſſon of the diuell, Ye ſhall be as Gods: ſo wee being in their loynes when they ſinned, and deſcending from them by ordinary generation, doe together with our nature receiue that corruption from them, whereby wee thinke thus proudly of our ſelues, that wee farre excell others, and are as little gods on earth, in reſpect of others. Indeede the moſt will ſay for themſelues, wee doe abhorre this proud thought, neither did wee euer finde it to bee in vs: But wee muſt know, that the leſſer wee diſcerne it in our ſelues, the more it reigneth in our hearts; and the more we diſcerne, and bewaile it, the leſſer place it taketh in vs.

[a] Zeph. 2. 15.

[b] Luk. 18. 11.

[c] The hereticall Church of Rome.

[d] Reu. 18. 7.

The danger of this thought.

Now touching this thought of pride, two things muſt be obſerued: the danger, and the higheſt degree of it. For the danger of this thought; The outward affecting of ſtrange faſhions in apparell is a wonderfull pride; But the moſt vile and wretched pride of all, is that ſpirituall pride of the heart whereby a man deſpiſeth all other, in regard of himſelfe, and thinketh himſelfe farre better then any. This I manifeſt by ſundrie reaſons: as firſt, from the fruites of this inward pride, for hence doe flowe many damnable ſinnes, in mens liues and conuerſations: as firſt, Ambition, whereby men are not content with that eſtate, wherewith God hath bleſſed them: but doe ſeeke by all meanes to bee aduanced to higher dignity and eſtate. Secondly, Preſumption, whereby men dare enterpriſe things beyond their calling, and aboue their power, taking vpon them more then they are able for. Thirdly, boaſting, whereby a man ſpeaketh of himſelfe more then is ſeemely, and extolleth himſelfe aboue his deſert. Fourthly, Hypocriſie, when a man pretendeth hee hath that grace and religion, which indeede hee hath not, or elſe maketh ſhewe of more grace then is truely in him. Fifthly, Obſtinacy, when a man perſiſteth in an errour, and will not yeeld to the truth, though it bee manifeſted vnto him. Sixtly, Contention, whereby men ſtriue one againſt another in word or deed, without relenting. And laſtly, Affectation of Nouelties, eſpecially in outward attire; for when a man conceiues ſo highly of himſelfe, then withall he thinkes no manner of attire good enough to beautifie, and adorne his body; and ſo begins to deuiſe, and affect ſtrange and forraigne attire.

Fruits of inward pride.

Secondly, the danger hereof appeareth hence, that where this thought of pride raigneth, (as it doth in all men naturally) there the ſpirit of grace dwelleth not: Mary in her ſong ſaith well, Luk. 1. 51. God ſcattereth the Imaginations of the proud, that is, of thoſe which haue this conceit of their owne excellencie aboue others: and Saint Iames, Iam. 4. 6. God reſiſteth the proud, and giueth grace to the humble: yea, thus ſaith he that is high and excellent, Iſa. 57. 15. hee that inhabiteth eternitie, whoſe name is the holy one: I dwell in the high and holy place, with him alſo that is of a contrite and humble ſpirit, to reuiue the ſpirit of the humble: But he that lifteth vp himſelfe, his minde is not right in him, Habak. 2. 4.

Thirdly, ſuch is the danger of this ſinne, that when all other ſinnes die in a man, this thought of pride dyeth not: nay, when other ſinnes are mortified, and Gods graces come in ſtead thereof, yet this will then reuiue, and make the graces of God, matter whereof to worke: as when an ignorant perſon attains to ſome knowledge, this pride wil take occaſion from that gift of God, to puffe vp the heart; yea when a man in true humility of heart, ſhall renounce the actions of pride, yet then will pride bee working, for this is a fruite of pride, to thinke well of our ſelues, becauſe we are not proud.

The height of this thought.

II. Point. The higheſt degree of this pride is, when a man thinketh himſelfe to be equall with God. This is a moſt notorious, nay an abominable height of pride; and yet the truth is, ſome men haue come hereunto. Thus the king of Babel thought of himſelfe, when he ſaid in his heart, Iſa. 14. 14. I will aſcend aboue the height of the clowdes, and will bee like the moſt high. It may ſeeme ſtrange that men ſhould thinke thus of themſelues; but wee muſt know, that men may doe it two waies: firſt, when they thinke they haue power of themſelues, whereby they are able to match or counteruaile the power of God: ſo thought Nabuchad-nezzar, when hee ſaid, Dan. 2. 15. Who is that God, that can deliuer you out of my hand? Such a thought had proud Pharao in his heart, when he ſaid to Moſes and Aaron, Exod. 5. 2. Who is the Lord, that I ſhould heare his voice, and let Iſrael go? Secondly, when they take to themſelues Gods honour, and thinke it to be due to them: Thus did Herod, (e) when by ſilence hee approoued the blaſphemous voice of the people, who cried vnto to him, the voice of God, and not of man. And thus Antichriſt ſitting in the temple of God, 2. Theſſ. 2. 4. Exalts himſelfe aboue all that is called God, or worſhipped. Now that man of ſin is the Pope of Rome; for howſoeuer in word he humble himſelfe, and call himſelfe the ſeruant of ſeruāts; yet indeed through the pride of his heart, hee ſitteth as God, taking vnto himſelfe that honor which is proper to God: for he claimeth power to preſcribe new rules of Gods worſhip, to forgiue ſinnes, to make lawes to binde the conſcience properly, yea to open and ſhut heauen, and to diſpoſe at his pleaſure of earthly kingdomes; he taketh vpon him to diſpence with the morall law, and with Apoſtolicall conſtitutions: al which belong to God alone, and none dare claime them to belong vnto him, but hee that matcheth himſelf with God; and this is the higheſt degree of pride.

[e] Act. 12. 22.

Bellar. de Rom. Pontif. lib. 4.

The Vſe. By this euery man may ſee what hee is of himſelfe, what a curſed and proud nature he carrieth about with him: for euery man naturally when occaſiō is offered, thinks highly of himſelfe, and baſely of others in regard of himſelfe. Let vs therfore take notice of this Satanicall pride that is in our nature, and ſtriue againſt it, for who would not be aſhamed to ſay with the proud Phariſie, I thank thee Lord, I am not as other men, &c. or with the arrogant Iewes, Stand apart, touch me not, I am holier then thou! Iſa. 65. 5.

Sect. 2.

Mans thought of his owne righteouſnes.

The ſecond euill thought concerning a mans ſelfe, is this, I am ſufficiently righteous, and I neede no repentance. That this is the thought of euery man naturally, appeareth by the Lords commandement to the people of Iſrael, forbidding them to ſay in their hearts, when they were placed in the promiſed land, that for their own righteouſnes the Lord brought them in to poſſeſſe it, Deut. 9. 4. Whereby he giues vs to vnderſtand two things: Firſt, that as the Iewes did there, ſo euery man thinkes himſelfe to be righteous. And ſecondly, hee thinkes, that God doth giue his bleſſings vnto him for his owne righteouſneſſe: for the Lord vſeth not to forbid ſuch a thought as men naturally haue not in them: ſo in like manner when Ieremy rebuked the people for their ſinnes, they ſaid, Ier. 2. 35. They were innocent and guiltleſſe, they had not ſinned. And the Church of Laodicea ſaith thus of her ſelfe, Reu. 3. 17. I am rich and need nothing: that is, I abound in ſpiritual graces. This is the thought of the proud Phariſie, who truſts in himſelf that he is iuſt, Luk. 18. 9, 10. and therefore braggeth vnto God, that he is not ſuch and ſuch, but he doth this and that, he faſteth, he giues almes, paies tithes, &c. and in plain tearms his heart ſaith this, I am righteous, I neede no repentance: for of ſuch Chriſt ſpake, when he ſaid, Mat. 9. 18. He came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance. And again, Luk. 15. 7. I ſay vnto you, that ioy ſhall bee in heauen for one ſinner that conuerteth, more thē for ninety & nine iuſt men which need no amendment of life: where wee muſt obſerue, that Chriſt meaneth not, that there are indeed ſome ſo righteous, that they neede no amendment; but he ſpeakes according to the opinion, which ſome haue of themſelues, to wit, that they are righteous, and neede no repentance: by all which it is more then manifeſt, that this is a naturall thought of a man concerning himſelfe.

Examination for this thought.

This euill thought reigneth in our age & time as all the former doe: for come to an ignorant man that hath not beene inſtructed in religion, reaſon with him touching his eſtate, and aske him whether he can keepe the law of God or not, he will anſwer, he can; hee loueth the Lord his God with all his heart, and his neighbor as himſelfe: Aske him how he looks to be ſaued; his anſwer is, by his own righteouſneſſe, and for his owne goodneſſe. If due examination were made, this would be found to be the thought of many that liue in the Church among vs; and there is none by nature free from this thought.

Hereby then we may ſee that the thoughts of euery man, be he what hee will, are plaine Papiſtry, for Popery is naturall: One chiefe pillar and ground thereof is iuſtification, and ſaluation by workes; which opinion euery man brings with him from his mothers wombe: And ſo it is in the point of merit, men naturally thinke they receiue the good thinges which they haue from God, for their owne righteouſneſſe.

Secondly, hence it appeareth, that it is a matter of great difficultie, to bring a man throughly to renounce his owne righteouſneſſe, and ſoundly and heartily to imbrace true religion, and the righteouſnes of Chriſt by faith. This is no leſſe then the change of nature, and yet this muſt euery man doe, that will bee ſaued, hee muſt become nothing in himſelſe, that hee may be all in Chriſt Ieſus, which is as impoſſible to nature, as to change water into fire, and therefore men had neede to beware how they put off the time, and neglect the meanes in which God ſheweth his power in working this change in the hearts of his Elect.

Thirdly, hence wee ſee the euident cauſe of that prepoſterous courſe of the world, which moſt men take in ſpending their witte, and ſtrength, ſome for riches, others for honours and pleaſures, and in the meane while they can ſpare no time for religion, to ſeeke Gods fauour in Chriſt, and the graces of the Spirit. It may be they wil afford a good word vnto religion, but yet they regard it not in reſpect of other things. And this is the behauiour not of ſome few, but of all ſorts and degrees of men naturally. Now the cauſe hereof is this curſed euill thought, whereby men perſwade themſelues, they bee righteous, and neede no repentance, and till this thought be rooted out of mans heart, hee will neuer value the word and religion of God according to the worth thereof, ſo as with the good Merchant he wil part with al that he hath, rather then he wil be fruſtrate of this pearle, Mat. 13,45,46. Indeed men vſe to pleade thus for themſelues; We confeſſe our ſelues to be ſinners, and therefore wee cannot thinke ſuch a wicked thought, that wee neede no repentance; But wee muſt know, that both theſe may well ſtand together, in the wicked heart of man; he may confeſſe himſelfe to be a ſinner, and yet thinke that he is righteous: for is not this the common practiſe, to make great ſinnes little ſinnes, and little ſinnes no ſinnes: Doe not men cloathe vice in vertues robe, and turne out vertue in the rotten ragges of vice? Is not drunkenneſſe counted good fellowſhip, and kind neighbourhood? Is not ſwearing made the token of a braue minde, and pride counted decencie; and fornication but a tricke of youth; & couetouſnes eſteemed good thrift, and carefulneſſe? On the other ſide, is not the more ſincere profeſſion of religion tearmed preciſenes, Puritaniſme, Hypocriſie, and ſuch like? doth not hee that refraineth the common ſinnes of the time, make himſelfe a prey to the mouthes of the vngodly? Now where theſe things are, though the mouth ſay, I am a ſinner; yet the heart thinketh I am righteous, and ſo it is apparent this thought is common among vs.

Sect. 3.

Mans thought of ſecurity in the day of peace.

The third euill thought concerning a mans ſelfe is, a thoght of ſecurity, in the time of peace and proſperity, men ſay thus in their hearts, I am free from all Gods iudgements, I am in no danger of hell, death, or damnation, but ſure enough of ſaluation. It may be thought, that none is ſo bewitched of the diuell, as to haue this conceit of himſelfe, but the Scripture is moſt plaine in the proofe hereof, Pſal. 10.6. The wicked man (ſuch as is euery man by nature, as we ſhewed before) ſaith in his heart, I ſhall neuer be moued, nor be in danger. And the Prophet Iſaiah brings in wicked men, ſaying, Iſa. 28.15. We haue made a couenant with death, and with hell we are at agreement: which muſt not be vnderſtood as done indeed, (for death and hell will make league with none,) but only in mens wicked Imagination, perſwading themſelues, that they be in no danger of hell, or of the graue: for ſo much the next words import, that, though a ſcourge runne ouer and paſſe through, yet it ſhall not come at vs: yea righteous Dauid was ouertaken herewith, for in his proſperity he ſaid in his heart, Pſal. 30.6. I ſhall neuer be moued; much more then is it the thought of euery naturall man, to ſay with the rich foole, vpon the increaſe of outward bleſſings, Luke 12.19. Soule, ſoule, take thine eaſe, thou haſt enough, nothing can hurt thee.

The Vſe. By this we may come to the knowledge of a thing which falleth out in all ages, worth our diligent obſeruation. It hath pleaſed God from time to time, to ſend his Prophets and Miniſters to call his people to repentance: thus did Iſay, Ieremy, Ioel, Amos, and the reſt; yea the Lord himſelf (as Zephany ſaith, Zeph. 3.5.) riſeth euery morning, and brings his iudgements to light, which ſhould turne men from their ſinnes, he faileth not, and yet the wicked will not learne to be aſhamed.

To come to our own times: it hath pleaſed God to ſtirre vp many worthy Miniſters vnto vs, who ſpend their time, and ſtrength, in labouring to bring men to repentance, & ſaluation; but yet who is he almoſt that turneth from his ſinnes? yea the Lord himſelfe, as in former times, ſo now doth preach from heauen by his iudgements, as famine, plague, &c. and yet by lamentable experience, we ſee that the body of our people remaine ſecure, they are ſetled on their lees, Ier. 48.11. frozen in their dregs, Zeph. 1.12. no man ſtirs vp himſelfe to ſay, What haue I done? Ier. 8.6. Now the cauſe hereof is nothing els, but this curſed thought of ſecurity, whereby a man ſaith thus in his heart, I am free from Gods iudgements. Reade Mat. 24.37. As it was in the daies of Noah (ſaith our Sauiour Chriſt) ſo ſhall it be in the daies of the comming of the Sonne of man: they did eate, drinke, marry wiues, and giue in marriage, and knew nothing till Noah entred into the Arke, and the flood came and tooke them all away. Queſtion. How could it bee, that they ſhould know nothing, ſeeing Noah had preached vnto them of the flood, an hundred and twentie yeares before? Anſwer. Surely it was as if they had knowne nothing, for they would not beleeue him, it would not ſink into their heads, much leſſe ſettle in their hearts, that GOD would deſtroy all the world by waters: and ſo may it be ſaid of theſe times, we know nothing; though we be called to repentance by the miniſterie of the word, yet we will not repent; & though we heare of Gods iudgements, we thinke our ſelues free from them, and will not beleeue til the beeſome of his wrath ſweepe vs all away, as the flood did the olde world.

Remedie

Wherefore, to redreſſe among vs this damnable thought of ſecurity, let vs conſider our grieuous ſinnes in particular, & ſet before our eyes the curſe of God, both temporall iudgements, and eternal death, due vnto vs for the ſame. It is the applying of Gods heauy wrath that muſt make vs ſhake off this ſecure thought, which the rather we muſt do, thogh it be grieuous to the fleſh, and as a pang vnto death in a naturall man, because till this thought bee remooued, the ſauing graces of Gods ſpirit wil not take rooting in our harts.

S. 4.

Mans faint thoughts in time of diſtreſſe.

The 4. and laſt euil thought of mans heart touching himſelfe, is this; In time of miſerie he ſaith, His croſſes are greater and worſer then indeed they are. So Iob complaines in his affliction, that (h) his griefe and miſerie was heauier

h Iob 6.2,3.

then

thorow the ſound of the ſea ſhore. And the Church in great affliction calls thus to paſſengers, (i) Behold, and ſee if there be any ſorrow like vnto my ſorrow which is done vnto mee: and that it is the thought of euery mans heart naturally, appeareth by experience: for let a man be in diſtreſſe outwardly, or elſe touched in conſcience for his ſinnes, when you ſhall labour to miniſter cōfort vnto him according to Gods word: he will anſwer, that neuer any was in like caſe to him, ſo grieuouſly tormented and afflicted as hee is. And indeede it is the property of mans naturall heart, to eſteeme *little croſſes to be exceeding great, yea oftentimes to deem that to be a croſſe, which is none at al: the reaſon is, the want of iudgement rightly to diſcerne the ſtate of their affliction, & the want of ſtrength to ſupport it as it is: (k) For if thou be faint in the day of aduerſity, thy ſtrength is ſmall.

i Lam.1.12.
* Ion.4.8,9.
k Pro.24.10

For the remedie of this euill thought, firſt we muſt ſeeke to rectifie the Imagination, by bringing the minde to a right conceit of the affliction: this is a ſpeciall courſe to be obſerued in dealing with them that bee oppreſſed with any diſtreſſe: for a ſtrong conceit of a mans owne miſerie doth many times more hurt, then the miſery it ſelfe: therfore be ſure the iudgment be well informed, and then the cure is halfe wrought. This done, the partie afflicted may wel conſider the deſert of ſinne, in the endles torments of the damned, which the Lord preuenteth in his children by temporall chaſtiſements in this life: (l) For when we are iudged, we are chaſtened of the Lord, that we might not be condemned with the world: And ſo labouring to be humbled for ſinne, and to lay holde on Gods mercy in Chriſt, through whome all things, euen afflictions, worke together for the beſt, no doubt hee will be able to ſay, (m) I will beare the wrath of the Lord, becauſe I haue ſinned againſt him: And (n) why art thou caſt down, oh my ſoule, why art thou ſo diſquieted within me? wait on God, for I will yet giue him thanks, he is my preſent helpe, and my God. Thus much of mans euill thoughts concerning himſelfe.

l 1.Cor.11.31
m Mich.7.9
n Pſal.43.5.

CHAP. VI.

Of the want of good thoughts in euery man naturally.

Sect. 1.

Good thoughts about temporall things be much wanting.

HAuing ſpoken of mans naturall euill thoughts concerning God, his neighbor, and himſelfe: we come to the ſecond point to bee obſerued in the text; to wit, That there is a want of good thoughts and conſideration in euery man naturally: for the Lord here ſaith, his thoughts are euill from his youth: and Chap. 6. v. 5. They are onely euill euery day: now looke where euill is onely, and continually, there good muſt needes be wanting altogether.

This want muſt be conſidered either in reſpect of temporall, or of ſpirituall things. By temporall things I meane ſuch worldly affaires and actions, as concerne mans naturall life, wherein though good conſideration bee not quite away, yet wee muſt know, that the ſame is corrupt, and very weake & imperfect, euen as reaſon is; and there is much want in euery man in this behalfe. There is one alone (ſaith (a) Salomon) and there is not a ſecond: which hath neither ſonne, nor brother, yet there is none end of his trauell, neither can his eye be ſatisfied with riches; neither doth he thinke, for whome doe I trauell? here behold a notable example of this want of good conſideration about earthly things: that a man ſhould ſpend both his wit and ſtrength in heaping vp riches, & knowes not to whome hee ſhall leaue them. But wee need not be inquiſitiue for examples: for we may daily obſerue in our ſelues and others, apparent want of good conſideration in theſe worldly affaires: which muſt not ſeeme ſtrange vnto vs, ſeeing that reaſon it ſelfe, the ground of conſideration is greatly blemiſhed, through the corruption of nature, about theſe earthly things.

a Eccl.4.8.

Sect. 2.

Good thoughts in matters ſpirituall, be altogether wanting.

In things ſpirituall, which concerne the kingdome of God, there is in our nature an abſolute want of good conſideration, herein of our ſelues we haue no good thoughts: Wee are not of our ſelues (ſaith (b) Paul) ſufficient to thinke any thing, that is, any good thing, as of our ſelues: The whole body of the Goſpell is therefore called a myſtery, becauſe the things therein contained and reuealed are ſuch, as (c) neuer came into mans heart to thinke. This want wee may obſerue eſpecially in foure things: 1. in reſpect of Gods preſence & prouidence: 2. of Gods Iudgements: 3. of our owne ſinnes: 4. of our duty to God.

b 2.Cor.3.5
c 1.Cor.2.9

First, man by nature doth not thinke of, or conſider Gods preſence and prouidence to behold & to remember al his waies, in thought, word, and deed: hereof the Lord complaines againſt Ephraim and Samaria, (d) ſaying: they haue dealt falſly, and they conſider not in their hearts that I remember all their wickedneſſe: And the ſame is the ſtate of euery naturall man beeing left to himſelfe: for all by nature are equally corrupt with originall ſinne, and ſo are deſtitute of this good thought: which yet may appeare the more plain by this, that naturally mans heart is poſſeſſed of the cleane contrary, to wit, God ſhall not ſee, God will not regard, as hath beene ſhewed before. And indeede it is a worke of grace to haue the heart rightly affected with this thought, God beholds al my waies, he conſiders and remembers euery thing I doe; fleſh and blood cannot attaine vnto it.

The firſt good thought wanting.
d Hoſ.7.1.2.
Pag.460.

Secondly, a man by nature doth not cōſider or thinke of the Iudgements of God, temporal & eter-

The ſecond good thought wanting.

eternall due vnto ſin. This thought was wanting in the men of the old world, though Noah preached vnto them an 120 yeares of the generall deluge, yet the conſideration of it took no place in their hearts; & therefore it is ſaid, Mat. 24.38,39. They knew nothing till the flood came and tooke them all away: from the want of this thought it came to paſſe, that Lots ſonnes in law thought their father had but mocked, when he told them that God would deſtroy Sodom, Gen. 19.14. Hence it was, that the rich foole bleſſed himſelfe in his heart, ſaying, Luke 12.19. Soule, ſoule, take thine eaſe, & neuer bethought himſelfe of any danger, till it was ſaid vnto him, O foole, this night will they fetch away thy ſoule, v.20. And ſhall we thinke this thought is wanting at this day, ſeeing Chriſt hath ſaid, Math. 24.37. As it was in the daies of Noah, ſo ſhall it be at the comming of the Sonne of man?

The third good thought wanting.

Thirdly, a man naturally doth neuer bethinke himſelfe of his owne ſinnes, he hath no purpoſe of heart ſeriouſly to examine his life paſt, or to repent of ſuch ſinnes as he findeth in him: This appeares by the Lords owne complaint againſt the Iewes, who were ſo farre from turning from their ſinnes, that not one would ſay in his hart, Ier. 8.6. What haue I done? nay, whē they had committed moſt ſottiſh idolatry, Iſa. 44.16,17,19,20. in making an idol-god of one part of a tree, with the other part whereof they had roſted their meate, & warmed themſelues, yet they conſidered not this in their hearts, neither had they knowledge or vnderſtanding to ſay, I haue burnt halfe of it in the fire, I haue baked bread vpon the coales thereof, I haue roſted fleſh, and eaten it, and ſhall I make the reſidue thereof an abomination?

The fourth good thought wanting.

Fourthly, a naturall man doth not conſider what duty and ſeruice he owes vnto God: his mind is wholly bent to his own waies, but the Lords talent lies hid in the ground wrapt vp in a napkin, Mat. 25.18. Hereof the Lord complaines againſt the Iewes, Ier. 5.24. That they ſay not in their hearts, let vs feare the Lord our God: hence it was that the fooliſh virgins, Mat. 25.38. did content themſelues with the blaſing lamp of an outward profeſſion, and neuer bethought themſelues of that oyle of grace, which God required in all thoſe, that would enter with Chriſt into his bride-chamber, till it was too late: and the ſlight ſeruing of God at this day, declares the generall want of this conſideration.

Sect. 3.

The fruit of this want of good thoughts.

Here further we muſt know, that this want of good conſideration is a grieuous euill, and a mother ſinne, from whence as from a fountaine, ſtreames of corruptions & tranſgreſſions, both of heart & life, doe iſſue forth; firſt, hereby wee are diſabled from yeelding vnto God that obedience of heart, which his Law requires: for how can we loue the Lord with all our thought and minde, and our neighbour as our ſelues, Luk. 10.27. as God commaunds, when as naturally our hearts are void of all good thoughts towards God and towards our neighbours? Againe, whence comes ſinning with an high hand, when men ſinne and wil ſinne? whence comes it, that men bleſſe themſelues in their ſins, & flatter themſelues in their own eyes, while they go on in ſinne, but from want of cōſideration of Gods preſence, & of Gods iudgements? This Abraham knew well, and therfore ſaid of the people of Gerar, Gen. 20.11. Becauſe they wanted the feare of God, that is, al conſideration of Gods preſence, & of Gods iudgements, therefore they would kil him for his wiues ſake. Whence alſo comes that ſenſuality, wherby men addict themſelues wholly to the profits, pleaſures, & honors of this world, neuer minding heauen or hell, but from want of cōſideration of their duty to God? If men did vſe to cal themſelues to account for their ſinnes, or did ſet before their eyes the iudgements of God due vnto them, it could not be that there ſhould bee ſuch want of contrition towards God, or of cōpaſſion towards their brethren, as euery where abounds. And the like might be ſaid of many other capital ſins, all which proceed from the want of good cōſideration. Where by the way, wee may obſerue, that our common people doe farre deceiue themſelues in this perſwaſiō of themſelues, That by nature they haue good hearts, and good meaning. If you charge them with the ſins of their liues, they will ſtraightway pleade their good intention, and ſay, though they ſometime faile in action, yet they meane well alwaies. But the truth is, naturally well meaning, and good conſideration, in ſpirituall things is altogether wanting. And therefore while men doe ſooth vp themſelues in their good meaning, they deceiue their owne hearts through ignorance of their naturall eſtate: and they muſt know, that they can neuer come vnto Chriſt, that they might haue life, till they be quite gone out of themſelues, in regard of ſuch conceits.

CHAP. VII.

The vſe of the former doctrine.

Sect. 1.

That the Scripture is the word of God.

HAuing ſeene what euill thoughts be in euery man naturally, and what good thoughts be wanting in him: it followes now to make ſom vſe of this doctrine, concerning mans naturall Imaginations.

The firſt vſe ſhall bee againſt all Atheiſts, who think the Scripture to be meere policy, deuiſed by man to keepe men in awe. But we are to know, that the holy Scripture is no deuice of man, but the very word of the euerliuing God, which I thus demōſtrat out of the former doctrine: The Scripture ſaith in generall, that all the imaginations of euery naturall man are euill & that continually. Now it doth not onely affirme this in generall, but declares it also in particular; for elſewhere it ſheweth what thoſe particular euill thoughts be which the natural minde of man frameth concerning God, his neighbour, and himſelfe. Againe, the ſame Scripture ſaith in generall, That good thoughts and conſiderations, are naturally wanting in euery man; & elſewhere it declareth in particular what thoſe good thoughts be which enter not into the minde of a naturall man: both theſe haue bin plainely ſhewed out of the word of God. Now hereupō it doth neceſſarily follow, that the Scripture is the word of God: for let the cunning Atheiſt ſhew whence it is that the Scripture doth declare mans thoughts; he cannot ſay, of man, for no man knoweth the thoughts of another; nay he cannot finde out his owne thoughts: neither can he aſcribe it to any angell good or bad; for the minde of man is hid from them, they know not mans thoughts. It remaineth therefore, that as God alone is the ſearcher of the hearts, ſo that ſcripture which declareth vnto man what be his thoughts, is the only word of the ſame God. Indeed God vſed man for his inſtrument, in the penning and deliuerie of the Scripture; but hee himſelfe by his Spirit is the ſole author thereof.

Sect. 2.

That man hath no free-will to good by nature.

The ſecond vſe ſhall bee againſt the Papiſts, who aſcribe to mans will a naturall power to that which is truly good, as by it ſelfe to co-worke with Gods grace in the firſt act of mans conuerſion. But the charge of euill here laid vpon the frame of mans naturall heart by God himſelfe, doth teach vs otherwiſe: for looke how farre the frame of the mind, which is the principall part of the ſoule, is corrupt for thoughts & imaginations, ſo farre is the will the inferiour part of the ſoule corrupt in willing. But the minde is naturally ſo corrupt that it cannot thinke a good thought, and therefore anſwerably the will by nature is ſo corrupt, that it cannot will that which is truly good. If it be ſaid, that man hath libertie of will in humane actions and in ciuill duties: Anſw. He hath, but yet ſuch actions proceeding from a corrupt fountaine, are ſinnes in euery naturall man; howſoeuer for the matter of the workes they may bee called good, beeing ſuch as God himſelfe ordained.

Bellarm. de grat. & lib. arbit. libr. 16. ca. 15. ſect 10.

Sect. 3.

Of the timely preuenting and ſuppreſsing of wicked imaginations.

The third vſe ſhall be for admonition vnto them, to whome is committed the education of youth, as Parents, Maſters, Tutors, &c. that ſeeing the imaginations of mans heart are euill from his youth, therefore they muſt all ioyne hand in hand betime to ſtop vp, or at leaſt to leſſen this corrupt fountaine. Parents muſt ſow the ſeedes of grace into the minds of their young children, that if it were poſſible, euen at their mothers breaſts they might be nouriſhed in the faith. Thus dealt Lois and Eunice with their young Timothie: for Paul ſaith, (a) He learned the holy Scriptures * of an infant. Then as their children grow in diſcretion and vſe of reaſon, they muſt bee (b) nurtered in religion, and haue the grounds thereof by often repetition driuen into their hearts: for this is the beſt meanes to free their minds, though not altogether from naturall imaginations, yet from the force and poyſon thereof: for (c) follie is bound to the heart of a child, but the rodde of teaching, that is, inſtruction with correction, will driue it away from him; yea, when as the (d) child ſet at libertie makes his mother aſhamed, yet will (e) the ſonne that is well inſtructed, giue his father reſt, and yeeld delight vnto his ſoule. Further, where Parents leaue, there Maſters and Tutors muſt take hold, building vp that good foundation which is laid to their hand, that by them alſo the ſtreame of mans naturall imginations may be ſtopped: yea, though parents ſhould neglect this duty towards their owne children, as too many do at this day, yet each godly Maſter, if he deſire to haue Gods Church in his houſe, muſt inſtruct his family, as (f) Abraham did, & labour for circumciſion of heart both to his children and ſeruants, euen as (g) Abraham did circumciſe not onely thoſe that were borne in his family, but alſo thoſe that were bought for money. Both Parents and Maſters are carefull to preuent diſeaſes, and to breake off ſickneſſes at the beginning in their children and ſeruants, which by continuance might bring bodily death; oh then how carefull ought they to be, to ſtoppe betime the courſe of naturall imagination in them, which without the ſpeciall grace of God, will bring eternall condemnation both to ſoule and bodie? And the rather muſt this courſe be taken in youth; and that betime, becauſe cuſtome, whether in good or euill, is a ſecond nature: (h) Teach a child in the trade of his way, and when hee is old hee will not depart from it: But, (i) can the blacke-Moore change his skinne, or the leopard her ſpots? then may hee alſo doe good that is accuſtomed to doe euill: herein the vices of the minde, are like the diſeaſes of the bodie, by longer continuance they grow more incurable. Yea, all that ſtudie and reade the Scriptures, either for their owne priuate, or for the publike good, muſt ſeeke by prayer to God for the ſanctification of their mindes from this euill corruption, leſt beeing left vnto themſelues, they become vain in their imaginations. Dauid a man according a 1.Tim.5. 15.

* ἀπὸ βρέφους.
b Eph.6.4.
c Prou.22. 15.
d Prou.26. 15.
e Ibid.27.
f Ge.18.9.
g Gen.17. 23.
h Pro.22.6.
i Ier.13.23.

a Pſal.119.
(b)Col.1.21
c 1.Cor.2.14.

to Gods owne heart, prayed at leaſt ten times in one (a) pſalme for the teaching of God in the vnderſtanding of his law: oh then what great cauſe haue we ſo to doe whoſe (b) mindes are naturally ſet in euill workes, beeing blind in the things of God, (c) not able to perceiue them: but on the contrary, wholly prone to inuent and to embrace that which is euill.

Sect. 4.

Of repentance for euill thoughts.

d Ioel.2.13
e Act.8.22
f 1.Theſſ.5.23.

The fourth and laſt vſe ſhall be for practiſe to euery childe of God: for if the Imaginations of mans heart bee euill from his youth, then there muſt bee repentance for ſecret thoughts which neuer come into action; yea, though we neuer giue conſent of will thereto. When Ioel proclaimed a faſt, and called the people to humiliation, he bids them (d) Rent their hearts, and not their garments: and Peter ſaid to Simon Magus, (e) Repent of this thy wickedneſſe, and pray God, that if it be poſſible, the thought of thy heart may be forgiuen thee: both which places doe plainely ſhew, that true repentance is not outward in change of ſpeach or attire, but inward in the change of the thoughts of the minde, and affections of the heart. And hence it is that Paul prayeth for the Theſſaloniãs, (f) That they may be ſanctified throughout, in ſoule, in bodie, and ſpirit, that is, in the mind, where is the framing of the thoghts. Now if ſanctification bee required in the minde, then muſt there be repentance of the ſinnes that are therein. This duty the Lord himſelfe vouchſafeth to teach, and therefore we muſt make conſcience to learne and practiſe it, if wee would be truly turned to the Lord. And to moue vs hereunto, conſider the reaſons following.

1.Reaſon.
g Deut.27.26.
h Prou.14.22.and Prou.15.26
i Mark.12.30.

Firſt, the curſe of God, euen the pangs and torments of the damned, both in this life and after death, are due to the perſon of man for his wicked thoughts: for curſed is euery one (ſaith (g) Moſes) that continueth not in all things that are written in the law to doe them: ſo that he which breaketh the law but once, and that in thought onely, is accurſed, becauſe hee hath not done all things that are written therein. Now wicked thoughts are a breach of the law: for Salomon ſaith, (h) Doe not they erre that imagine euill? and againe, The thoughts of the wicked are an abhomination to the Lord: yea, the want of good thoghts is a breach of the Law: for Chriſt (i) ſaith, Thou ſhalt loue the Lord thy God with all thy thought; and therefore wicked thoughts muſt needes deſerue this curſe. The fall of the diuels was moſt fearefull and irrecouerable, and (though it be not certen,) yet moſt Diuines agree in this, that their ſinne was firſt in thought; and therefore wicked thoughts are deadly euils. Alſo to ſhew the wickedneſſe of euill thoughts, God hath ſet this brand vpon them ſince the fall of Adam, that by them not onely mans bodie, but alſo his minde and memorie, are farre ſooner confounded then by outward accidents; this was not ſo by creation, and therefore it is the heauie curſe of God vpon them.

2.Reaſon.
Order of producing actions.

Secondly, theſe wicked thoughts bee the roote and beginning of all euill in geſture, word and deede; there cannot be an action before there be a thoght: for this is the order whereby our actions are produced: firſt the minde thinketh; then that thought delighteth the affection, and from that commeth conſent of will; after conſent of wil, commeth execution of the action; after execution commeth trade and cuſtome by often practiſe: and vpon cuſtome (if the worke be euil) commeth the curſe, which is eternall death. How great a cauſe therefore haue we to repent vs of the wicked imaginations of our hearts? The old world indeede was drowned for their actuall abhominations, but no doubt, the Lord had great reſpect in that iudgement to their wicked thoughts, which were the roote of all: and therefore he mentioneth them as a cauſe of the flood. Gen. 6.5.

1.Examination of euill thoughts.
k Heb.4.12
l 1.Cor.14.15.
2.Praier for pardon of them.
m Act.8.21
3.Reformation of euill thoughts.

In this repentance three things are required; firſt: a due examination of our hearts concerning theſe imaginations, which we may take by the knowledge of thoſe points before handled, of mans naturall thoughts concerning God, his neighbour, and himſelfe: And to further vs herein we muſt remember that all the euill thoughts before mentioned be in vs naturally, ſo as if we be left to our ſelues, when occaſion is offered, wee will conceiue them in our minds, as that there is no God, that the word of God is fooliſhneſſe, &c. Againe, wee muſt heare Gods word preached attentiuely, and apply, not onely our outward ſenſes, but our minds alſo thereto, that ſo it may enter into our hearts, for the word of God, working in the heart, will diſcouer vnto a man what be his thoughts: This word (ſaith the holy (i) Ghoſt) Is mightie in operation, and ſharper then any two edged ſword, it entreth through euen to the deuiding aſunder of the ſoule and the ſpirit, the ioynts and the marrow, and is a diſcerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart: At the preaching of this word the ſecrets of the heart of an infidell are diſcouered: If all propheſie (ſaith (k) Paul) and there come in an infidell, or one vnlearned, he is rebuked of all men, and iudged of all; and ſo are the ſecrets of his heart made manifeſt, whereupon he falleth downe, and worſhippeth God ſaying plainely, God is in the Prophets indeed. Secondly, after examination, we muſt pray for the pardon of our euil thoghts: A plaine commandement of this duty Peter giues to Simon Magus, (l) Pray to God ſaith he, that the thought of thine heart may bee forgiuen thee: And vndoubtedly hee that hath not grace to pray for the pardon of his euill thoughts, hath not true repentance in his heart. Thirdly, we muſt ſeeke to reforme our mind of euil thoughts, this is a further matter then reformation of life: And it is expreſſely commanded by the holy Ghoſt, Eph.4.23. Be ye renued in the ſpirit of your mindes, that is, in the moſt inward and ſecret part of your ſoules, euen where the thoughts and imaginations are framed and conceiued. This duty muſt be remembred; for Chriſtian religion conſiſteth not in outward ſhewes and behauiour, (though thereby we may giue comfortable teſtimonie of Gods inward graces) but it ſtands principally in the minde, and in the heart, which muſt therefore bee reformed with the powers and faculties thereof.

CHAP. VIII.

Rules for the reformation of our euill thoughts.

Sect. 1.

Our thoughts muſt be brought into obedience to God.

1.Rule. FOr the reformation of our thoughts, ſundry rules muſt be obſerued: firſt, That we bring all our thoughts into the obedience of God. Euery man will grant that words and actions, muſt be in ſubiection; but I ſay further, euery thought in the mind muſt be conceiued in obedience to God, and no other waies: Salomon ſaith, Prou. 20.18. Eſtabliſh thy thoughts by counſell, which may admit this meaning, that a man muſt not conceiue a thought in his minde, vnleſſe he haue counſell and warrant from the word of God ſo to thinke: And S. Paul ſaith, 2.Cor.10.5. The weapons of our warfare (ſpeaking of the preaching of the Goſpell) are not carnall, but mightie through God to throw down holds, caſting downe the imaginations, and euery thing that is exalted againſt the knowledge of God, and bringing into captiuitie euery thought to the obedience of Chriſt; giuing vs to vnderſtand, that thoſe who ſubmit themſelues to the miniſterie of the word, muſt be of this minde, not onely to be conformable thereunto in word and action, but in euery thought of their minde, euen thoſe muſt bow the knee to Chriſt: howſoeuer with men wee ſay thought is free, yet with God it is not ſo. And indeede hee which hath effectually receiued the grace of Chriſt, will endeuour to yeeld obedience aſwel in thought, as in word and action: Whatſoeuer things are true, (ſaith Paul) Phil. 4.8. Whatſoeuer things are honeſt, whatſoeuer things are iuſt, pure, and pertaine to loue, whatſoeuer things are of good report, if there be any vertue, if there be any praiſe, (he ſaith not onely doe (a) theſe things, but) thinke on theſe things, where the commaundement is plaine, that a mans thoughts muſt be holy, pure, iuſt, and of ſuch things as are praiſe-worthy and of good report, that ſo they may be conceiued in obedience to God.

a vers.9.

Sect. 2.

Of the guarding of our hearts.

2.Rule. b Pro.4.23. The ſecond rule for the reformation of our thoughts, is giuen by Salomon (b) keepe or counter-guard thy heart aboue all watch and ward: that is, guard & keepe thy heart more then any thing that is watched or guarded, whether citie, houſe, treaſure, or ſuch like: and the reaſon adioyned ſheweth the neceſſitie of the rule, for out of it come the iſſues of life.

3.Things in the guarding of the heart. In the right guarding of the heart, three duties muſt be performed: firſt, we muſt couenant with our outward ſenſes, reſoluing fully with our ſelues by Gods grace that none of them ſhall be the inſtruments, the beginning or occaſion of any ſinne in heart, or life. This couenant (c) Iob made with his eyes, not to looke vpon a maide, to luſt after her: And Dauid prayed the Lord to direct and keepe his eyes from beholding vanitie: Pſal. 119.37. Now looke how theſe holy men dealt with their eyes, ſo muſt we proportionably deale for all the outward ſenſes of our bodie, binding them all, after their example, from beeing the meanes of prouocation to any ſinne. This dutie is moſt neceſſarie, for the outward ſenſes bee the doores and windowes of the ſoule, and vnleſſe good care be had thereto, the diuell will enter in by them and fill the ſoule with all corruption.

c Iob 31.1.

Secondly, we muſt obſerue our euill thoghts, and at their firſt riſing, ſtoppe and reſtraine them, not ſuffering them to take any place in our hearts: this is a ſpeciall meanes to preſerue and guard the heart, for from the thoughts proceed all bad deſires, corrupt affections, euil words & actions: the mind muſt firſt conceiue before the will can deſire, or the affections be delighted, or the members of the bodie practiſe any thing, ſo that whoſoeuer is of a looſe life, and bad behauiour, it commeth frō the prophaneneſſe of his heart in euill thoughts: neither can it bee hoped that any man ſhould reforme his life, that will not guard his heart, and keepe his mind from wicked imaginations: the diuel cannot worke his wil vpon mans affections, or preuaile ouer mans will, but by thoughts, and therefore it is neceſſarie, that the firſt motions of euill in the mind be reſtrained at the beginning.

Thirdly, wee muſt with all care cheriſh and maintaine euery good motion of Gods Spirit that is cauſed in vs by the miniſterie of the word, or by the aduice of Gods children: for theſe are the ſparkes and flames of grace, which Paul meaneth, when he ſaith, 1. Theſſ. 5.19. Quench not the ſpirit.

Sect. 3.

Of the eleuation of the heart to God.

Thirdly, for the reformatiō of our thoghts 3.Rule.

we muſt often vſe eleuation of minde & heart to heauen, where Chriſt ſitteth at the right hand of his Father. Thus did Dauid, Pſal. 25. 1. Vnto thee, oh Lord, doe I lift vp my ſoule: And Paul, ſaying of himſelfe and other Chriſtians, Phil. 3. 20. That they had their conuerſation in heauen, ſignifieth thus much, that not onely their ſtudies and meditations, but alſo their dealings in the world were heauenly. Saint Iames bids vs, draw neere to God, Iam. 4. 8. Now which way ſhuld a poore wretch here below, draw neere to God, but by lifting vp his heart to the throne of grace in heauen, that ſo God in mercie may draw neere vnto him by grace? The Lord hath inſtituted in his Church the vſe of his laſt Supper, wherein the giuing and receiuing of bread and wine doth repreſent and ſeale vp vnto vs our communion and participation of the bodie and blood of Chriſt giuen for our redemption: Now the principall action on our behalfe therein required, is this Eleuation of the heart vnto God, as well for the contemplation of Gods infinite mercie in Chriſt and of Chriſts endleſſe loue to vs, as for the application of his merits to our owne ſoules by the hand of faith, as alſo for the ſpirituall reſignation of our ſelues in ſoules and bodies, by way of thankfulneſſe, to him that hath redeemed vs. Further touching this Eleuation we muſt remember, that it ought to bee our continuall and ordinarie action vnto God: for as it is with him that keepes a clock, vnleſſe he doe euery day winde vp the weights, which are alwaies going downward, the clocke will ſtand; ſo it fareth with vs, our hearts are euer drawing towards the earth, and the things here below, by reaſon of that bodie of ſinne which hangeth on ſo faſt, and preſſeth downe; Heb. 12. 1. and therefore wee muſt endeauour by Gods grace continually to lift them vp to heauen: The Apoſtle bids vs, Pray continually, 1. Theſſ. 5. 17. not that we ſhould doe nothing elſe but pray, but his meaning is, that we ſhould euery day ſo oft as occaſion is offered, lift vp our hearts vnto God. But of all other there bee three eſpeciall times wherein wee muſt vſe this heauenly Eleuation: firſt, in the morning by prayer, thankſgiuing, or both, before the cogitations of any earthly affaires come into our mindes, that ſo wee may giue vnto God the firſt fruits of our thoughts euery day. Secondly, in the euening before we lay downe our bodies to reſt, for who knoweth when he layeth down himſelfe to ſleepe, whether euer he ſhall riſe againe aliue? Thirdly, at any other time of the day, wherein we receiue any bleſſing from God temporall, or ſpirituall, or doe feele our ſelues to ſtand in need of any of his gifts, or graces; for ſeeing euery good gift comes from him, is it not reaſon wee ſhould giue this glorie to his name, to lift vp our hearts to his throne of grace, whenſoeuer we receiue or expect the ſame from his bountifull hand?

Sect. 4.

Of the aſſurance of our particular reconciliation with God.

4.Rule. Fourthly, for the reformation of our thoughts, wee muſt labour to be aſſured in our hearts by Gods ſpirit, of our particular reconciliation with God in Chriſt. This is that knowledge of the loue of God which paſſeth knowledge, for which Paul, Eph. 3. 14. 19. Bowed his knees vnto the Father of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, in the behalfe of the Epheſians: in regard hereof Paul eſteemed all things loſſe, yea to be droſſe and dongue. Phil. 3. 8. Now when this aſſurance is ſetled in our hearts, it will purifie not onely the affections, but alſo the firſt motions and thoughts of our mindes: He that hath in himſelfe this hope (ſaith Saint (a) Iohn) purgeth himſelfe as God is pure. For when a man ſhal be truly perſwaded in his heart, that of a vile ſinner, euen the child of wrath, he is made the child of God, and a veſſell of honour acceptable to God, enioying his loue, and fauour in Chriſt, then will he reaſon thus with himſelfe, hath God of his endleſſe mercie vouchſafed to receiue me into his grace and fauour, that otherwaies ſhould haue bin a firebrand of hell for euermore? oh then, how ſhould I ſuffer my mind, my will, and affections, to be any longer the inſtruments of ſinne, whereby I ſhal diſpleaſe ſo gracious a God, and caſt my ſelfe out of his loue and fauour? nay, but I will imploy my ſoule which hee hath redeemed with all the powers and faculties thereof, as weapons of righteouſneſſe for the aduancement of his glorie.

a 1. Ioh. 3. 3.

Sect. 5.

Of ſpirituall conſideration.

5.Rule. Laſtly, if we would reforme our thoughts, we muſt giue our ſelues to ſpirituall conſideration or meditation. By Spirituall conſideration I meane any action of the minde renued and ſanctified, whereby it doth ſeriouſly thinke on thoſe things which may further ſaluation. This conſideration I call ſpirituall, to diſtinguiſh it from earthly plotting care, whereby naturall men ſhew themſelues wiſe and prouident for the things of this life, though in the matters of God which concerne ſaluation, they bee blinde and ignorant. Alſo I adde, it muſt be an action of a minde renued and ſanctified, becauſe the naturall man perceiueth not the things of the ſpirit of God, 1. Cor. 2. 14 they ſeeme fooliſhneſſe vnto him, and therefore he cannot giue his minde vnto them.

Now the excellent vſe of this rule wil plainly appeare by the fruitfull practiſe of it in the prophet Dauid: for what was more vſual with him then ſpiritual and heauenly meditation? ſometime vpon (b) God himſelfe; ſometime (c) on the workes of God; ſometime (d) on his owne waies: and (e) continually on Gods word. Now b Pſa. 119. 55.

c Pſal. 119. 97.
d Pſ. 119. 59.
e Pſ. 119. 98.

ſanctifying this duty by prayer, as it is plaine he did continually, Pſal. 19.14. Let the meditation of my heart, oh Lord, be acceptable in thy ſight: hence it came to paſſe, that he profeſſed, Pſal. 119.113. An hatred vnto vaine inuentions, which are the proper effects of an vnreformed minde: and on the contrarie, by this godly practiſe, Pſal. 119.99. He got more vnderſtanding then his teachers; yea he attained to this excellent ſtate of a renued minde, that his reines, whereby hee meanes the moſt ſecret part of his ſoule, taught him in the night ſeaſon, Pſal. 16.7. And in reaſon wee may perceiue the truth hereof: for ſeeing contraries do mutually expell one another, what can be more effectuall to purge the mind of euill thoughts, then to exerciſe the ſame with ſpirituall conſiderations? for when through the bleſſing of God, theſe ſhall take place, the other muſt needes be gone: in regard whereof it ſhall not be amiſſe ſomewhat to inſiſt in the handling of them.

CHAP. IX.

Of ſpirituall conſiderations concerning God.

Sect. 1.

Of the conſideration of Gods preſence.

Spirituall conſiderations ſeruing for the reformation of our thoughts, doe either concerne God, or our ſelues. That which concerneth God containeth many branches, but I will inſiſt in foure eſpecially. Firſt, touching Gods preſence, whereby a man doth thinke and ſo reſolue himſelfe, that whereſoeuer he is, he ſtands before God, and that all his thoughts, words, and deedes, are naked in Gods ſight; Dauids heart was filled with this conſideration, when he penned the 139. pſalme: for that whole pſalme from the beginning to the end, ſerueth to expreſſe this holy cogitation of Gods preſence: the like impreſſion muſt wee labour to haue in our hearts touching Gods preſence: for it is the moſt notable meanes, to cleanſe the heart from euill thoughts, to reſtraine the will and affections from wicked delights, and to keepe in order the whole man, cauſing him to ſtand in awe of Gods commaundements. Dauid ſaith, Pſal. 19.9. The feare of the Lord is cleane; meaning thereby, that that man which hath the feare of God in his heart, ariſing from this conſideration of Gods preſence, hath a cleane and pure heart. This conſideration alſo is a notable meanes of comfort in the time of trouble and danger: hence Dauid ſaith, Pſal. 23.4. Though I walke through the valley of the ſhaddow of death, I will feare none euill: for the Lord is with me: and hence it was that, Pſal. 3.6. He would not be afraid for tenne thouſand of the people that ſhould riſe vp againſt him.

Sect. 2.

The conſideration of Gods iudgements.

The ſecond conſideration touching God, is of his iudgements, not onely thoſe which were done of old, and are recorded in the Scripture, or other hiſtories; but euen his leaſt iudgements which we behold or heare to fall vpon Kingdomes, Townes, particular houſes and perſons, muſt wee carefully lay vnto our hearts. Of the want hereof the Lord complaineth among his people, ſaying, Ier. 12.11. The whole land lieth waſt, becauſe no man ſetteth his minde on it: giuing vs to vnderſtand, that the neglect of due cōſideration of Gods iudgement, brought deſolation to the whole land, and therfore the want thereof is a maine and grieuous ſinne, bringing further iudgements with it.

God hath ſundrie times ſent his iudgements among vs, generally by plague, and famine, and particularly on ſundrie families, & perſons; but who regardeth them? Wherefore vnleſſe we will double Gods iudgements vpon vs, let vs remember our duty, and ſeriouſly thinke vpon them. And that this conſideration may be profitable vnto vs, we muſt doe three things, firſt, wee muſt carefully obſerue, marke, and remember them: Pſal. 119.52. I remember thy iudgements of old, O Lord. The Lords people were much wanting therin, as Pſal. 78.11.42. Secondly, we muſt apply them to our owne perſons in particular, ſo as the thought thereof may make vs afraid, though they befall others. When Habakuck 3.16. in a viſion ſaw the iudgements of God which were to come vpon the Chaldeans, the conſideration thereof was ſo powerfull with him, that it made him tremble and quake: In a family when the father beateth his ſeruant, the child feareth; and when one child is beaten, then all the reſt crie: euen ſo when God our Father powreth downe his iudgements, though vpon the heathen, yet we muſt feare; but when any of his children are afflicted, it muſt ſtrike ſoare to our hearts. Thirdly, we muſt make vſe of Gods iudgements, that light vpon others, by applying them to our ſelues. When certaine men brought newes to our Sauiour Chriſt of an heauie iudgement vpon ſome Galileans, whoſe blood Pilate had mingled with their owne ſacrifices, Luk. 13.1,2,3. immediately our Sauiour labours to bring them that told him to make vſe thereof for their owne good, ſaying, that thereby they ought to be mooued to repentance; for they that were ſlaine, were no greater ſinners then the reſt: and therefore except they who told that newes did amend their liues, they ſhould alſo periſh. So that whenſoeuer we ſee or heare of any iudgement of God vpon others, wee muſt thereby bee mooued to repent: and thus doing, wee ſhall come to a right conſideration of Gods Iudgements.

Sect. 3.

The conſideration of Gods word.

The third conſideration concerning God, is of his word. Dauid maketh it the propertie of a bleſſed man, Pſal. 1. 2. to meditate in the law of God day and night: and he profeſſeth of himſelfe, that it was his meditation continually: Pſal. 119. 97. yea oftentimes hee promiſeth to (a) meditate in Gods precepts, to (b) delight in Gods ſtatutes. This is (c) Maries praiſe, that ſhe kept in her heart ſundry things which Ieſus ſpake. And ſo ought euery child of God, high or low, daily and continually to meditate in the word of God. But, alas, this dutie is little knowne, and leſſe practiſed: men are ſo farre from meditating in Gods word, that they are ignorant of it. Among many families you ſhall ſcarſe find the booke of God: and ſuch as haue it, for the moſt part, do litle vſe it. The ſtatutes of the land are by very many ſearched out diligently, but in the meane time the ſtatutes of the Lord are little regarded: oh that men knew the ſweete comfort of the Scriptures, Rom. 15. 4. then certenly they would account their meditation therein, Ier. 15. 16. The ioy and reioycing of their heart.

a verſ. 15.
b ver. 16.
c Luk. 2. 51.

Now the right conſideration of Gods word conſiſts in three things: firſt, wee muſt obſerue the true ſenſe, and meaning of that which we heare, or reade; ſecondly, wee muſt marke what experience wee haue had of the truth of the word in our owne perſons; as in the exerciſes of Repentance, and Inuocation of Gods name, and in all our Temptations: this is a ſpeciall point in this meditation, without which the former is nothing. Thirdly, we muſt conſider how farre forth we haue beene anſwerable to Gods word in obedience, and wherein wee haue beene defectiue by tranſgreſſions. Againe, in the word of God, there be both commaundements, and promiſes: The conſideration of Gods commaundements is a notable meanes to direct, and moderate, not onely our word, and deedes, but alſo our ſecret thoughts and deſires: for if before we thinke, before we will, or ſpeake any thing, we would firſt conſider that God commaunds vs to thinke, to will, and ſpeake thus and thus, this would mightily ſtay, and ſuppreſſe in vs all corrupt thoughts and deſires, all euill words, and actions. The promiſes of God likewiſe duly conſidered would greatly further vs in good thoughts: for to them that thinke on good things, ſhall bee mercie and truth, Prou. 14. 22. The cauſe then why many that know the wil of God, ſo much faile in particular obedience, is becauſe that with their knowledge, they do not ioyne this ſerious conſideration of Gods commaundements, and promiſes, and apply the ſame to their occaſions.

Sect. 4.

The conſideration of Gods workes.

The fourth conſideration concerning God, is of his workes: for as Dauid ſaith, Pſal. 11. 2. The workes of the Lord are great, and ought to bee ſought out of all that loue him. This conſideratiō bindeth vs to enquire, and ſearch what be the workes of God toward vs, his worke of creation, his prouidence, preſeruation, with al other his workes of mercie, and iuſtice in vs, and vpon vs: whether ordinarie, or extraordinary. The Prophet Iſay denounceth a woe againſt thoſe that had the Harpe, and Violl, Timbrell and Pipe, and wine in their feaſts, and regarded not the worke of God, nor conſidered the works of his hands, Iſa. 5. 11. 12. whereby we may ſee that the neglect hereof, is a grieuous ſinne, and yet it is the common ſinne of this age.

Now for the better performance of this dutie, wee muſt thus proceede, firſt we muſt conſider our creation, how the Lord gaue vs beeing, when we were nothing, and how hee made vs reaſonable creatures, and not brute beaſts, yea, he created vs in his owne image, when as hee might if it had ſo pleaſed him, haue made vs Toades, and Serpents. Secondly, wee muſt conſider his good prouidence ouer vs, how hee hath preſerued our life from time, to time, and ſaued vs from many dangers. And his great patience muſt not be forgotten, how he hath ſpared vs from the righteous Iudgements of our ſins: he might haue caſt vs into hell in our mothers wombe, or ſo ſoone as wee were borne for our originall ſinne, but he hath giuen vs a large time of repentance. Here alſo we muſt conſider his exceeding fauour in the time and place of our birth, and life: hee might haue ſuffered vs to haue beene borne among Infidels: but behold we were borne in the boſome of Gods Church: he might haue depriued vs of the meanes of our ſaluation, his holy word and Sacraments, but in his tender mercie he hath vouchſafed them vnto vs, to bring our ſoules to life. He might haue hardened our hearts againſt his feare, Iſa. 63. 17. And blinded our eyes againſt his light, Rom. 11. 8. but yet he hath enlightened our mindes to know his truth, and ſoftned our hearts cauſing vs to crie vnto him for the pardon of our ſinnes: he might haue giuen vs up to a reprobate ſenſe, Rom. 1. 28. when we ſwarued from his teſtimonies, and regarded not the knowledge of his will: but loe, as a louing Father he hath often chaſtened vs for our profit, that wee might be partakers of his holineſſe: Heb. 11. 10. He might haue left vs comfortleſſe vnder the reproch of the wicked, but he hath vouchſafed vs his Spirit, for our euerlaſting comforter. Thus muſt we duly conſider of all theſe wonderfull workes of God towards vs, and not like the men of this world, thinke on nothing but paſtimes, honours, and commodities; This will bee a notable meanes to keepe our hearts from euill thoughts: for whoſe heart will not relent towards his God, that ſo many waies hath taſted of his bounty towards him? yea, this conſideration will be an exceeding ſtay and comfort to our ſoules in the day of trouble, and diſtreſſe: ſo Salomon ſaith, Eccleſ. 7. 15, 16. Beholde the worke of God, and in the day of affliction conſider: A naturall man cannot away with trouble, if ſorrowes increaſe vpon him, he is ready to make away himſelf, which comes of this, that hee cannot conſider the workes of God, for he that can rightly meditate on Gods goodneſſe towards him in all his workes, ſhal be able with patience to ſupport his ſoule vnder the greateſt croſſe. A practiſe hereof we may ſee in Dauid, who being in a moſt grieuous temptation, ſo as hee cried out, Pſal. 77. 8. Is the Lords mercy cleane gone? hath he forgotten to be mercifull? &c. did yet recouer himſelfe by the conſideration of Gods former workes of mercie, and of his wonders of old, whereof hee had experience in his owne perſon, verſ. 11, 12.

CHAP. X.

Of ſpirituall conſiderations which concerne our ſelues.

Sect. 5.

The conſideration of our owne perſonall ſinnes.

THe conſiderations which reſpect our ſelues, are ſixe: Firſt, wee muſt conſider our owne perſonall ſinnes; as well the corruptions of our hearts, as the actuall tranſgreſſions of our liues. This was Dauids practiſe, Pſal. 119. 59. I conſidered my waies (ſaith hee) and turned my feete into thy teſtimonies. The Iewes likewiſe in their great affliction, ſtirred vp themſelues to this duty, ſaying one to another, Lam. 3. 40. Come let vs ſearch, and trie our waies, and turne againe vnto the Lord.

In this conſideration of our ſinnes, wee muſt doe three things: Firſt, ſeriouſly call to minde in what manner wee haue ſinned, whether of ignorance, or of knowledge, of weakneſſe through infirmitie, or of wilfulneſſe through preſumption. Secondly, wee muſt duly waigh the greatneſſe of our particular ſinnes, euen of the leaſt of them, remembring this, that by euery ſinne wee commit, Gods infinite maieſtie is diſpleaſed, and his iuſtice violated. Thirdly, we muſt conſider the number of our ſinnes; which wee ſhall neereſt attaine vnto by ſearching out our thoughts, our wils, and affections, our words, and actions, all which beeing diligently obſerued, will make vs crie out, that they be in number as the haires of our head, and the ſands by the ſea-ſhoare. Queſt. But what if a man haue truly repented him of his ſinnes, muſt he ſtill vſe this conſideration of them? Anſw. Yes verily, although he be aſſured of the pardon of them: ſo did Dauid after Nathan told him thy ſinnes are forgiuen; hee penned the 51. Pſalme, and when hee was high in Gods fauour, he praied ſtill for the pardon of the ſinnes of his youth, Pſal. 25. 7. for howſoeuer God in mercy put our ſins out of his remembrance, vpon our true repentance, yet we muſt neuer put them out of our remembrance, ſo long as wee liue in this world; becauſe the conſideration of them, though they be pardoned, is a notable meanes both to mooue vs to renew our repentance, and alſo to make vs watchful againſt ſinne in time to come.

Sect. 2.

Of mans miſery through his ſinnes.

Secondly, wee muſt conſider the miſery into which euery one is plunged by nature through Adams fall, & his own ſins. This was Iobs meditation, ſaying, Iob 14. 1. Man that is borne of a woman hath but a ſhort time to liue, he is full of miſery: and ſo goeth on moſt notably, deſcribing the miſery of man: yea, this was Salomons conſideration in the whole booke of Eccleſiaſtes, from the beginning to the end.

Now that this conſideration may take place in our hearts, we muſt enter into a particular view of this our naturall miſerie: the principall branches whereof bee theſe: firſt, 1 a ſeparation from all fellowſhip with God: for as Mans natu-Iſay ſaith, Iſa. 59. 2. Our ſinnes haue ſeparated rall miſery betweene God and vs: and this is the ſpeciall branched part of mans miſerie. Secondly, ſocietie and out.
fellowſhip with the damned ſpirits, the diuell and 2 his angels; ſtanding in this, that man by nature beareth the image of the diuell, and withall performeth ſeruice vnto him in the practiſe of lying, iniuſtice, crueltie, and all manner of ſinne. Thirdly, all manner of calamities in this 3 life, as ignominie in good name, paines and diſeaſes in the bodie, loſſes and dammages in friends, and in all temporall bleſſings whatſoeuer. Fourthly, The horrour of a guil- 4 tie conſcience, which is in it ſelfe the beginning of hell torments: for it is our accuſer vnto God, our Iudge to giue ſentence againſt vs, and the very hang-man of our ſoules to condemne vs eternally. Fiftly, the ſecond 5 death, which is the full apprehenſion of the eternall furie of the wrath of God, both in body and ſoule eternally. This conſideration muſt bee often vſed of euery man, to mooue him to repentance, and it is very effectuall thereunto: for if wee doe but conſider how a man for the paine of one tooth, will bee ſo grieued, that hee could wiſh with all his heart to be out of the world, that his paine were ended; oh then how great ſhall wee thinke the apprehenſion of the full wrath of God to be, ſeazing not vpon one little member onely, but vpon the whole man both body & ſoule, and that for euer? No tongue can expreſſe, nay no heart can conceiue the greatneſſe of this terrour, and therefore it muſt bee an occaſion both to begin, and increaſe true repentance in vs daily.

Sect. 3.

Of our owne particular temptations.

Thirdly, wee muſt conſider our owne particular temptations wherewith wee are moſt aſſaulted through the malice of Satan, and our owne corruption. Be ſober and watch (ſaith Peter, 1.Pet.5.8.) for your aduerſarie the diuell goeth about like a roaring Lyon, ſeeking whome hee may deuoure. This was Pauls practiſe towards the inceſtuous man, whome hee had enioyned to be excommunicate; for after hee gaue direction that hee ſhould bee receiued into the Church againe, leſt hee were ſwallowed vp of ouer much heauineſſe, and ſo Sathan ſhould circumuent them: for (ſaith hee, 2.Cor.2.7.& 11. wee are not ignorant of his enterpriſes. If forraigne enemies ſhould ſeeke the inuaſion of our land, not onely our Magiſtrates, but euery ordinarie man well affected to his Countrey, would bethinke himſelfe what coaſt were the weakeſt, that thither preſent defence might bee ſent to keepe out the enemies; euen ſo, ſeeing the diuell doth aſſault vs daily wee muſt enter into ſerious conſideration of our thoughts, wils, and affections, and ſee in what part wee bee moſt weake, and in what inclination Satan may moſt eaſily preuaile againſt vs, which wee ſhall beſt eſpie by obſeruing the ſinnes of our liues; and this will make vs arme our ſelues againſt him by Gods grace, euen in the weakeſt parts, that he breake not into our hearts, to the ruine of our ſoules.

An ordinary, and yet moſt dangerous temptatiō.

This conſideration concerneth all men, not onely the diſſolute and ſinfull, but euen thoſe that haue receiued moſt grace. It were infinite to goe through all the temptations of Satan: conſider this one for all, whereby hee kils many a ſoule; Through the whole courſe of mens liues, he laboureth to fil their hearts with carnal ſecurity, and to bring them to neglect the ordinarie meanes of ſaluation; this done, hee ſeekes to keepe them in this eſtate all their life long: but in the ende hee takes another courſe, for when death approcheth, then hee ſeeketh to ſtrike their mindes with obliuion of Gods mercies, and to fill their ſoules with terrours in regard of their ſinnes, and of Gods iudgements due vnto them; that ſo bereauing them of all hope of mercy, hee may bring them to finall deſpaire. We therefore being fore-warned of his deadly fraud, muſt ſeriouſly bethinke our ſelues of this temptation, and caſt with our ſelues euery day how to auoid it. This wee ſhall doe if wee ſhake off carnall ſecurity, and negligence in the meanes of our ſaluation: and prouide betimes for the aſſurance of Gods loue and fauour, that when death ſhall come, we may be free from the terrour of an euill conſcience, and haue ſtrong hope and conſolation in Chriſt Ieſus.

Sect. 4.

Of our particular end.

Fourthly, we muſt conſider our particular end. The Lord complaines of the want hereof in his owne people: Oh that they were wiſe, then would they conſider this; they would conſider their latter end, Deut. 32.29. In this conſideration three points muſt bee obſerued: firſt, that the time of death is vncertaine, no man knoweth when hee muſt die: ſecondly, that the place is vncertaine, no man knowes where hee muſt die: thirdly, that the manner of his death is vncertaine, none knoweth by what death he ſhall glorifie God; and therfore that we may not deceiue our ſelues, we muſt think that moſt fearefull and grieuous ends may befall vs, in regard of the bodily paine and torment, euen then when wee little feare or ſuſpect any ſuch thing. This conſideration will bee a notable meanes to ſtirre vp our hearts, either to beginne, or renew our repentance: when wicked Ahab heard of his ferafull end, he was humbled, 1.Kin.21.17. And the Ninevites being tolde of their ſudden deſtruction, repented in ſackcloth and aſhes, and turned to the Lord, Ion.3.5,6.

Sect. 5.

Of our ſtraight accompt at the laſt day.

Fiftly, wee muſt often conſider with our ſelues, and that moſt ſeriouſly, of that ſtreit account, and reckoning of all our thoughts, words, and actions, which wee muſt make vnto God at the laſt day of iudgement. This is the principall conſideration of all, and the want hereof a fearefull ſinne, arguing great negligence, ignorance, blindneſſe of minde, and hardneſſe of heart: if a traueller come into an Inne, hauing but one penny in his purſe, and call for all manner of dainty fare, and prouiſion, ſpending ſumptuouſly, will not all men iudge him voide of all conſideration, ſith hee hath nothing to pay, when his account is to bee made? Loe, this, or worſe is the moſt mens caſe, who in this life purſue their profits and pleaſures, with all eagerneſſe, they care not how, neuer regarding that reckoning which they muſt make vnto God, at his terrible day of account with all the world; and therefore though the former conſiderations will not, yet let this take place in our hearts, to moue vs to a daily fore-hand reckoning with God in the practiſe of true repentance, and to imploy the good gifts and bleſſings we receiue from God, like good ſeruants, vnto the beſt aduantage of his glory, that when this account is to bee made, wee may giue it with ioy, and not with feare. And that this conſideration is effectuall to this purpoſe, Salomon teacheth in vſing it as his farewell with diſſolute youth, with whome otherwaies he hath little hope to preuaile, ſaying, Eccl. 11.9. Reioyce thou young man, take thy pleſure in thy youth; yet know, that for all this, thou muſt come to iudgement. But how powerful it is with Gods child, wee may ſee in Paul, Act. 24. 10. who profeſſeth of himſelfe, that in regard of this account, he indeauoured to haue alway a cleare conſcience towards God, and towards men.

Sect. 6.

Of our preſent eſtate towards God.

Laſtly, wee muſt ſeriouſly conſider of our preſent eſtate towards God, whether we be in the ſtate of ſinne, or in the ſtate of grace; whether we belong to the kingdome of darkeneſſe, or be true members of the kingdome of Chriſt: it is not enough to be in the Church, but wee muſt be ſure we be of the Church; For many wolues and goates be in Gods fold; They went out from vs (ſaith S. Iohn, 1. Ioh. 2. 19.) but they were not of vs: and therefore Paul aduiſeth to this conſideration, ſaying, 2. Cor. 13. 5. Prooue your ſelues, whether you be in the faith or not. The want hereof was the fearefull ſinne of the fooliſh virgins, Mat. 25. 3. who contented themſelues with a ſhew of religion, hauing the blazing lampes of outward profeſſion; and laboured not for that oyle of true grace, which might enlighten their ſoules to the fruition of Gods glory: yea, this is the common ſinne of this age, men bleſſe thēſelues in their good meaning, ſaying they hope well, and do not thoroughly ſearch, whether they bee true members of Gods Church or not: Now if after triall it appeare, that true faith and repentance bee wanting in vs, which are the ſeales of adoption in Gods children, then with al good conſcience, wee muſt vſe the meanes appointed of God, to obtaine theſe graces for our aſſurance, the comfort whereof will bee ſo precious vnto our ſoules, that wee ſhall abhorre to admitte ſuch wicked imaginations into our mindes, as any way tend to depriue vs of it.

Theſe are the conſiderations which reſpect our ſelues; whereunto if we giue our mindes in a conſtant courſe, as alſo to the former which concerne the Lord, obſeruing withall the rules before preſcribed, through Gods bleſſing vpon our indeuour, we ſhall vndoubtedly finde by good experience, that euill thoughts ſhall not preuaile againſt vs: but being reformed in our cogitations, we ſhall ſend out of our mindes as from a cleanſed fountaine, ſuch ſtreames of good words and workes, through the whole courſe of our liues, as ſhall redound to the glorie of our God, the good of our brethren, and the conſolation of our owne ſoules, through Ieſus Chriſt our Lord, to whome with the Father, and the holy Ghoſt, bee praiſe in his Church for euermore. Amen.

WILLIAM PERKINS HIS PROBLEME OF

The forged Catholiciſme, or vniuerſalitie of the Romiſh Religion.

And it is a counter-poyſon againſt Iodocvs Coccivs his Theſaurus Catholicus.

AND

An Introduction to young Students in the reading of the Fathers.

HINC LVCEM ET POCVLA SACRA
ALMA MATER CANTABRIGIA

Printed at London by Iohn Legatt, Printer
to the Vniuerſitie of Cambridge.
1613.

The Probleme, or Poſition.

It is vnpoſſible for any popiſh Diuine in the world to ſhew out of the true monuments of the Councells and Fathers, and out of their naturall ſenſe and meaning, that the faith of the preſent Church of Rome, is truly Catholike in thoſe points wherin it diſſenteth from the reformed Churches of the Goſpell.

The explanation of the Probleme.

B*Y the faith of the Romane Church*, I meane the doctrine concerning the way and meanes of ſaluation, propounded in the Councell of Trent, in the Romane Catechiſme to the pariſh prieſts, and in the Miſſall and Breuiary which are reformed and printed by the command and authoritie of Pope Pius the fift.

Catholike, I take in that ſenſe which Vincentius Lirinenſis doth in his booke againſt hereſies cap. 3. There muſt be an eſpeciall care (ſaith he) in the Catholike Church, that that onely bee beleeued and taught which hath beene held in all places, at all times, and of all profeſſors; for that is truly and properly called Catholike, as the verie force and deriuation of the word it ſelfe doth declare, comprehending all things truly vniuerſall. And againe, chapt. 25. He is rightly and truly a Catholike, who— hath reſolued with himſelfe to beleeue and profeſſe that onely, which he knowes the Catholike Church in auncient times did vniuerſally hold: And what noueltie or vnknowne doctrine he ſhall perceiue any one afterward to bring in, either varying from, or contrarie to all the Saints and Fathers, let him know that that doctrine hath no reference to religion any way, but rather doth wholly belong to temptation. So Saint Auguſtine writing of Baptiſme againſt the Donatiſts, in his 4. booke, chap. 24. Whatſoeuer the Church hath vniuerſally, and continually profeſſed, (hauing not the inſtitution thereof from ſome of the Councells) that we muſt aſſuredly beleeue to haue had his originall from no other meanes but the ordination of the Apoſtles.

Now let vs conſider what S. Auguſtine and what Vincentius held to bee auncient. It is twelue hundred yeares ſince either of them liued; wherefore what could ſeeme auncient
A vnto them but ſuch things as were receiued in the Apoſtles times, and the age next ſucceeding? They doubtles, thought not thoſe things auncient which had their firſt ingreſſe into the Church in their time, or about a hundred or 2. hundred yeares before, much leſſe did they hold that of antiquity, which was neither found out, nor receiued into the Church, till after their daies. Therefore not all antiquity of doctrine is to be approued, but that onely which Lirinenſis, Auguſtine, Ambroſe, Ierome, Cyprian, &c. held to be of and from antiquitie, and which they commended
B vnto their poſteritie; as alſo that vniuerſalitie is to be accounted true, and onely that, which tooke place in all Churches in the Apoſtles times, and in the ages next going before Vincentius and Auguſtine.

Preparatiues to the demonſtration of the Probleme.

C BEFORE I come to the confirmation of my poſition I muſt of neceſſitie giue aduertiſement of three things; the better to cleare the way for the defence enſuing. The firſt ſhall concerne the authoritie of the Fathers, and their diuers manners of writing. The ſecond ſhall diſcouer their counterfeit workes, & ſuch as are doubted of. The third ſhall explane the reaſons why the Apoſtles religion is now ſo depraued.

1. The authoritie of the Fathers, and their manner of writing.

The auncient writers doe teach and de- 1 fend,

ſend, that the Canonicall Scripture is of it ſelfe the perfect rule and ſquare in all controuerſies of faith. Tertullian againſt Hermogenes: I doe adore the fulneſſe and perfection of the Scripture. Athanaſius alſo in his Synopſis affirmes that thoſe doctrines which are contained in the Scriptures are ſufficient vnto faith. Baſill in his treatiſe of faith, It is a manifeſt offence of arrogancie and infidelitie, either to reiect any part of that which is written, or to adde any other thing which is not written. Auguſtine againſt Petilians Letters, lib. 3. cap. 6. whether it concerne Chriſt, or his Church, or any other thing belonging to our faith, or life, I will not ſay if we doe preach—: but euen as the Apoſtle himſelfe ſaith afterwards, if an Angel come from heauen with any other doctrine then that you haue heard out of the Legall and Euangelicall ſcriptures, Let him be accurſed: The ſame Auguſt. in his 49. tract. vpon Iohn: Wheras our Sauiour Chriſt did many things, and yet all of them are not written: thoſe things were choſen out to be written, which were thought to be ſufficient for the ſaluation of beleeuers. Vincentius Lirin. chap. 41. The Canon of holy Scripture, ſufficeth vnto all things euen abundantly. Saluian in his third booke of prouidence; ſaith, that the bookes of the Goſpell containe doctrine repleate with all manner of perfection, Scotus likewiſe; in his prologue before the 1. booke of ſentences. q. 2. ſaith, It is euident that the Scripture doth ſufficiently containe all things neceſſarie for the pilgrimage to heauen. Cameracenſis vpon the ſentences: We muſt haue recourſe onely vnto the Scriptures, that we may obtaine ſaluation. Bellarm. of the vnwritten word of God, lib. 4. cap. 11. I ſay that all thoſe things were written by the Apoſtles, which are neceſſarie for all men, and which they publikely preached vnto all men.

2 The auncient writers will haue their ſayings and teſtimonies well examined, and ſo farre forth onely to be receiued as they doe agree with the rule of our faith, and the writings of the Prophets and Apoſtles. So ſpeaketh Dionyſius Alexandri. of Nepos. In many other things I doe embrace and loue Nepos: but ſurely the truth is to bee preferred and reſpected before all. If any man doe ſpeake well, we ought to giue him his due praiſe and approbation without all enuie, but if hee ſpeake any thing that is not ſound, we muſt both examine it, & trie it throughly.

Euſeb. eccl. hiſt. l. 7. c. 23.

So Saint Auguſtine alſo, I will not binde you vnto mine authoritie, that you ſhould therefore thinke any thing neceſſarie to be beleeued, becauſe I affirme it.

Ad Paulinum, epiſt. 112.

And againe, I haue learned to giue this honour and reuerence vnto thoſe bookes alone which are now called Canonicall, that I doe infallibly beleeue that no author of them all, or any of them did euer erre in any of his writings. For others, I doe ſo reade them, that (how holy or learned ſoeuer they be) I doe not thinke this or that to be true, becauſe they ſo held it, but ſo farre as they are able to perſwade me, either by thoſe Canonicall authors, or by probable reaſon, that it is not oppugning the truth.

Epiſt. 19.

Beſides, A I am not tyed vnto the authoritie of this Epiſtle, becauſe I hold not Cyprians letters for Canonicall, but I doe examine them by Canonicall Scriptures: and whatſoeuer I finde therein conſenting vnto them, I approoue with his praiſe; and whatſoeuer is thereunto oppoſite, by his leaue I muſt reiect.

Ad Creſconium l. 2. c. 32.

And in another place. In theſe parts of Scripture which are moſt plaine, are found all thoſe things that containe the rules of our faith and manners, namely, Hope, and Charitie.

De doctr. Chriſt l. 2. c. 9.

Chryſoſtome alſo ſaith, that if a man affirme any thing without authoritie of Scripture, his auditours doe but ſlenderly reſpect it.

In Pſal. 95.

Baſill alſo teacheth, that it is not ſufficient for vs to beleeue the Fathers and writers of the Church in matters of faith, vnleſſe they doe confirme their ſayings by Scripture.

In l. de ſpirit ſanct.

B 3 The Fathers in many points of Diuinitie haue ſpoken very vnfitly. 1 As firſt, when they were mooued thereunto in their heate of diſputation. So Baſill ſpeaking of Gregorie of Neocaeſaria. They could not vnderſtand (quoth he) that this (namely, that the Father and the Sonne, are one in perſon) was ſpoken in contention and controuerſie of diſputation with Aelian, not poſitiuely, nor dogmatically.

Epiſt. 64. Hypoſtaſi.

2 Secondly, becauſe in their exhortation they oftentimes, were too rhetorical, either in the fauour of others, or to affect their auditorie the more. This Saint Hierome confeſſeth of himſelfe, excuſing ſomething that hee had ſpoken vnfitly, we did play the Rhetorician (quoth he) and gaue ſomewhat to our declamations. So Theodoret, C I do not account thoſe things a rule of doctrines and decrees, which are flauntingly and rhetorically ſpoken in the Church.

Dialog. 3.

Which thing may farre more truly be affirmed of the rabble of the Canoniſts and ſchoolemen. Let one of them deſcribe all the reſt. One cryeth that all actions of inferiours ſhall be iudged by the Pope, but the Popes onely by God. Another ſaith, that none can iudge the chiefe Chayre: A third ſaith, that God onely can depoſe Popes: A fourth is not aſhamed to auerre, that though the Pope ſhould carrie heapes of ſoules to hell with him, yet no man ought to reprehend him. Thus theſe wretches neuer conſider that theſe allegations that they clap ſo faſt together, are either of the Popes own coyning, enlarging the borders of their garments: or of ſome of thoſe that made it their trade to flatter them.

Thomas de Corſellis apud Aeneam Sylvium de Geſtis Concil. Baſill. l. 1.

3 Thirdly, D becauſe they ſpake more careleſly, while Controuerſies were not moued. As Auguſtine doth acknowledge: that while the Pelagians ſtirred not, the auncient Fathers ſpake the more negligently about originall ſinne, and free-will. His words are theſe. He (meaning Chryſoſtome) diſputing in the Catholike Church, did thinke his words would be no otherwiſe conceiued: there was then no ſuch queſtion made concerning this thing, you had not as yet raiſed your contention, and therefore he ſpake more careleſly.

Contra Iulian. Pelagian. l. 1. c. 2.

Bellarmine himſelfe confeſſeth that the writers ſpeake ſometime properly and warily, and ſometime vnfitly and heedleſly. 4 Fourthly, becauſe they oftentimes borrowed their forme of ſpeech from the vulgar, and therefore haue written in many places thereafter. Melchior Canus ſhall be a witneſſe. Canus loc. comm. l. 11. cap. 6. We cannot denie (ſaith he) that euen the graueſt authours, eſpecially in deſcribing the miracles of the Saints, haue both harkned after flying reports, and alſo deliuered them in writing vnto poſteritie. Wherein truly (if I might iudge) they either ſoothed themſelues, or the rude and vulgar ſort of the faithfull in too great meaſure, becauſe they knew that the common ſort did not onely eaſily beleeue all thoſe miracles, but alſo deſired moſt earneſtly to heare of them. And they thought it the more tollerable, becauſe they knew that the moſt famous authors doe hold that it is the true law of a hiſtorie to write ſuch things as the common report confirmed to be true,-—Which things I may perhaps both rightly and truely affirme of Gregorie and Bede. 3 After this manner in the bookes of antiquitie, that is often tearmed by the names of Catholike and Apoſtolike, which was ſo eſteemed by the vulgar ſort of the faithfull. 5 Fiftly, becauſe the Fathers being ouercome by the multitude, were nowe and then carried into ſuperſtitions, as the force of the tide violently carrieth away the boates: and herupon it enſued, that they concealed ſome things for feare. August. ad Ianuar. epi. 119. There are many ſuch faults as this (ſaith one) which I dare not ſo freely reproue, becauſe of auoiding the offence of ſome other holy, or perhaps turbulent perſons. 6 Sixtly, becauſe ſometimes they ſpeake of things hiſtorically and in forme of rehearſall, not poſitiuely and by way of aſſertion. Apolog. pro lib. contra Iouin. c. 4. Witneſſe Saint Hierome: The auncient Fathers are ſometimes enforced to ſpeake againſt their owne thoughts, onely becauſe that they muſt bee faine to affirme ſo againſt the poſitions of the heathen.

Againe: It is one thing to ſpeake ſcholaſtically or diſputatiuely, and another thing to ſpeake dogmatically or doctrinally. So alſo a later writer: Otho. Friſing. l. 4. c. 18 We muſt marke how authors doe ſpeake, whether out of opinion, or out of aſſertion, or out of the vehemencie of ſorrow comforting themſelues. And ſo he proceedeth expounding the ſaying of Saint Ambroſe, ſpoken of Valentinian dying without Baptiſme: The grace which he intreated for he did not loſe. So Abbot Ioachim: In Reuelat. A man may ſpeake what he thinketh out of coniectures, but not as though hee vnderſtood certainely any thing thereby. And thoſe teſtimonies of antiquitie which ſay that Enoch and Elias are the two witneſſes, he calleth them pag. 148. opinions fallible, no knowledge or vnderſtanding. So Bartoll the Ciuilian is ſaid to defend Pope Clement the 5. his conſtitution, concerning the Popes power ouer Kings, Duaren. de ſac. eccl. miniſt. l. 1. c. 4. rather triflingly and for faſhion ſake, then truly and out of his owne conſcience, becauſe he is wholly vncertaine, and neuer affirmes one flat poſition one way or other; as alſo becauſe his place of abode was vnder the iuriſdiction of the Church of Rome. Heare another. Catharinus de certitud. gratiæ, aſſertion. 13. We muſt not hold all the Popes opinatiue allegations (beeing not decretally ſpoken) to bee of the ſame value with their expreſſe determinations, as they themſelues doe teſtifie. For Innocentius himſelfe vpon the Chapter Literas, &c. (when there was a queſtion made, concerning which the finall ſentence of Pope Clement was alleadged) held not Clements iudgement for a determination, neither would hee himſelfe determine thereof—For it were too hard a matter, and not to be borne, that the iudgement of the learned ſhould be tied to euery anſwer and opinatiue allegation of the Popes: for they haue not alwaies the aſſiſtance of the ſpirit. Bellarmine ſpeaking of Celeſtine and Innocentius teaching expreſſe contraries, ſaith, That neither of them decreed any certainty in that controuerſie, but both ſpake out of their iudgement to the greateſt probability. And that there are many things in the decretall Epiſtles, which imply not any matter of faith, but onely diſcouer the Popes opinions concerning theſe things. VVhy therefore may not we auouch the ſame of the Fathers?

4 Therefore the Fathers of later ages oftentimes expounded the ſayings of their predeceſſors out of the holy Scriptures, or elſe did flatly reiect them. VVitneſſe hereof Saint Auguſtine in the controuerſies with the Pelagians: Iulian did cite Baſill, ſin is not a ſubſtance, but an accident, therefore eaſily remooued out of the will ſo that no skarre or token thereof remaine. Saint Auguſtine expoundeth this place according to the analogie of faith: It is eaſie not to mans will, but vnto Gods mercie. And this ſufficed againſt the Manichees, who held that it was impoſſible. And whereas ſome Fathers, viz. Ireneus, Iuſtine, Clement, and Tertullian held that the law of nature had power to ſaue the Gentiles without Chriſt: Saint Auguſtine expreſly confuteth them all. Nay which is more, the Fathers themſelues would either plainly retract and call in againe ſuch things as they had vnfitly committed to others eares, or els they would correct them by writing the contrarie in another place.

5 The Fathers haue errours, yea and that ſometimes very groſſe ones, they themſelues acknowledge it very plainly. In the Doctors bookes (ſaith one) Anſelmus in Comment. in 2. ep. ad Cor. which the Church authentically vſeth, there are ſometimes found errours, ſometimes hereſies, yet this is no ſufficient cauſe to condemne either booke or author: Let a reader of iudgement peruſe them, and he ſhall prooue me no lyer. Another: The Fathers whilſt they labour with all their induſtry to ſubuert one error, haue oft times either fallen, or at leaſt ſeemed in ſome ſort to fall into another: not vnlike to husbandmen who ſtriuing to make ſtreight the crooked trunke of a younger tree, often doe exceede the meane ſo farre, that they make it bend as much the other way. Sixt. Senenſ. in præfat. l. 5. Biblioth. Heare alſo a third of approoued iudgement: Can. loc. com. l. 11. c. 6. The writings of great authours are not altogether perfect: for ſometimes they ſlippe and ſhrinke, as one ſaith, vnder their loade, and otherwhiles they dally with the affluence of their own inuention, and affect popularitie.

---

2. A Catalogue of the counterfeit, doubtfull, or corrupted workes of the Fathers, together with ſome errors which the gloſſers of them haue ſprinkled in their workes.

The booke of the Apoſtles conſtitutions——

Held for apocryphall in the decretalls, diſt. 15. cap. Sancta Romana, and in the diſtinct. 16. cap. Canones: Iſidor alſo doth affirme the ſame. It is further condemned by the ſixth Councel of Conſtantinople, cap. 2. Epiphanius hereſ. 30. is the firſt that euer made mention of them.

Saint Iames his Maſſe——

It containeth prayers for ſuch as liue in Monaſteries, and ſuch was there none in Saint Iames his time. Beſides many words neuer hard of in the Apoſtles time, as θυσίας, ἱερεῖον, &c. and the word λειτουργία for the manner of maſſing; and herein is laid downe a forme of the communion, not receiued in the Apoſtles times, as out of the Acts and Iuſtine may eaſily be conuinced. And if this were the true Liturgy of Saint Iames, it ſhould be a portion of holy Scripture, it would alſo haue beene more famous in the primitiue age of the Church, but no mention was of it, vntill almoſt 600. yeares after Chriſt.

Saint Peters Maſſe——

Falſe altogether and forged.

The Aethiopians Maſſe——

Aſcribed to Saint Matthew; but falſly, whereas it ſpeaketh of the Epact and Golden number, both which were long after inuented. And the ſaying of Gregorie the great is commonly knowne, that the Apoſtles did conſecrate by the ſole pronouncing of the Lords prayer.

Saint Markes Maſſe---

Containing prayers for the Pope, Readers, Singers, Subdeacons, &c. which orders were after inſtituted. Ann. 80.

The booke of Saint Andrewes paſſion---

Neuer ſpoken of in the moſt approoued authours, Euſebius, Hierome, Gennadius, &c. to omit the blaſphemies therein contained, as All haile holy croſſe, &c.

Saint Andrewes Maſſe—

Euſeb. hiſt. eccleſ. lib. 3. cap. 35.

Of the ſame kinde and reſpect with the other.

Clement of Rome his Workes—

Vnder this mans name many fictions are patronized: there is one Epiſtle of his extant vnforged, namely, to the Corin. as the ſame author teſtifieth in the fore-alleadged booke, cap. 34. Ruffinus in his preface before Clements Recognitions, and the firſt councell of Vaſa, cap. 6. doe make mention of one Epiſtle of Clemens vnto Iames the brother of the Lord: but now there goe three vnder that title. But that theſe are all counterfeite, it hereby appeareth, becauſe Iames was dead ſeauen yeares before Peter: and Clemens was not Biſhop of Rome vntill after Peter, as it is euident almoſt out of all hiſtories. Beſides his fifth Epiſtle teacheth communitie of wiues and goods, and the 2. doth moſt fooliſhly aduiſe Iames to take heede that there bee found no Mice dung amongſt the peeces of the Lords bodie, & that they be not putrified by the negligence of the prieſts.

Beſides his eight bookes of Apoſtolike conſtitutions, are of no greater eſteeme then theſe other. Euſebius, Hierome, nor Gennadius mention any ſuch worke. Againe, the author himſelfe diſcouereth himſelfe in one place, where he affirmes the vernall Æquinoctiall to fal on the 22. day of the 12. moneth, which is called March: but in the times of Chriſt and his Apoſtles it was reckoned alwaies to fall on the 25. day of the ſame moneth, and not on the 22. vntill the ſecond Councell of Nice. This Charles Bouius was well able to diſcerne, but neuer to excuſe. The Fathers indeede doe ſometimes quote the Apoſtles conſtitutions, but (as Baſill de ſpiritu ſancto, cap. 27. confeſſeth) they were vnwritten, at leaſt by Clement, for his name was not annexed vntill after times.

Dionyſius Areopagita, Saint Pauls ſcholler.

His bookes de cœleſt. hierarchia, de eccleſiaſtica hierarchia, de diuinis nominibus, and ſome of his Epiſtles are forged. Ann. 69.

Many learned authors, as Eraſmus, L. Valla, Caietane, and others writing vpon the 17. chapter of the Acts, do abſolutely deny theſe workes to be his: the reaſons are theſe. Firſt: Though he were Pauls ſcholler, by him conuerted, yet in theſe workes he is ſo vnmindful of the benefit of his conuerſion, and friendſhip held with his maſter, that hee neuer vouchſafeth to name him, but graceth Hierotheus, an obſcure fellow for his maſter.

2 Secondly, he writes of many orders, as Popes, Biſhops, Prieſts, Monkes, &c. of all which it is well knowne that Dionyſius his age acknowledged not one, but onely Biſhops.

3 Thirdly, Euſebius and Hierome in his Catalogue neuer make any mention of theſe workes: nor any before Gregory the great, who though he cite theſe Epiſtles, yet doth not hold them to be this Dionyſius his workes.

Illyricus hath other good reaſons for this purpoſe, whereof,

1 The firſt is, becauſe that ſwelling, obſcure, improper, and intricate ſtyle which this Dionyſius vſeth, was not in vſe at Athens in the Apoſtles time: but at leaſt 300. yeares after began to take place in Greece and alſo at Rome.

2 Secondly, the later tranſlation ſaith, that hee writ this Hierarchy vnto Timothie, whome he calleth his ſonne, which in the vſe of the Scriptures and the Church, is aſmuch as to ſay his ſcholler: Whereas Timothie had for a long time a moſt excellent teacher that elect veſſel of God, Paul himſelfe, and in Pauls time was himſelfe a famous Doctor and Biſhop: ſo that hee was more like to bee Dionyſius his maſter then his ſcholler.

3 Thirdly, preſently after Dionyſius his conuerſion Paul taught long at Corinth, and longer at Epheſus, both which places are neighbours vnto Athens, ſo that if this Dionyſius had bin deſirous to be inſtructed, hee might haue had Paul himſelfe as it were in his owne houſe for the ſpace of two whole yeares, and neuer haue beſtowed his time with Hierotheus, a man vnknowne in the Church.

4 Fourthly, in the end of his hierarchy, ſpeaking of the baptiſme of infants, he ſaith, that he teacheth that doctrine which his maſters receiued from the Apoſtles themſelues. Hereby he ſheweth himſelfe to haue bene no ſcoller of the Apoſtles: and he calleth them, his maſters (in the plurall number) to imply that that doctrine came from the Apoſtles vnto him by ſucceſſion from many intercedent teachers.

Vbi de baptiſmo infantum ait ea ſe dicere, quæ ſancti præceptores eius ex traditione antiqua ad Eccleſiam deriuârunt.

5 Fiftly, how is it poſſible but Dionyſius ſhould haue often written vnto Timothie to know if hee had heard Paul teach any otherwiſe of theſe things, ſeeing Timothie liued ſo long and friendly with him, and was ſo well learned?

6 Sixtly, this Authour talketh oftentimes of the diſtinction of the quire & the church, and of other places of the church, whereas in the Apoſtles time, and an hundred yeares after, the Chriſtians had no churches of ſuch buildings, but had their prayers, ſermons, and meetings in their houſes.

7 Seuenthly, Saint Iohn the Apoſtle liued after Dionyſius, and abode for the moſt part at Epheſus and in Aſia the leſſer, where Timothy alſo liued, who is ſaid to haue beene very familiar with him: how then durſt Dionyſius preſume to inſtruct Timothie hauing ſo worthie a maſter? and not rather begge of him with a thouſand intreaties, to ſet him downe the opinions of Iohn and Paul concerning this or that matter?

8 Eightly, this Authour in his booke De diuinis nominibus, alleadgeth Clemens a Philoſopher diſputing concerning Logicke, and affirming that the principall models or examples of things, or the Ideæ or formall cauſes are relatiues. Now there neuer was any other Clemens a Philoſopher, but he of Alexandria, whoſe bookes are now extant, who liued 200. yeares after Chriſt: and this allegation ſeemeth to be extant in the end of the 8. booke of his Stromata, where hee ſaith, that cauſes, eſpecially the former cauſes are relatiues.

9 Ninthly, In his 4. booke De diuin. nom. he alleadgeth Ignatius his Epiſtles: which notwithſtanding were written after Dionyſius his death, as the hiſtories of both their liues doe leaue teſtimony. This Authour in his Hierarchy citeth Saint Iohns Goſpell, and the Reuelation, as if that they had beene long agone written, and held as parts of holy Scripture. But if wee ſhall giue credit to hiſtories treating hereof, both theſe workes were not ſet forth by Saint Iohn vntill a litle before his owne death, namely, about 14. yeares after the death of Dionyſius Areopagita.

10 Tenthly and laſtly, amongſt his Epiſtles there is one vnto Policarpe, whome hee writes vnto as a Doctor and a Biſhop. Now writers affirme, that Dionyſius ſuffered in France in the yeare of grace 96. And Policarpe otherwhere in the yeare 166. and of his age 86. ſo that Policarpe muſt needes be a very beardleſſe youth when Dionyſius ſuffered martyrdome. Thus farre Illyricus. As for his Myſtica Theologia, Sixtus Senenſis is of opinion, that it was not knowne in Athanaſius his times, Biblioth. cap. 4.

LINVS.

The bookes which beare his name concerning Peter and Paules paſſion, are written by ſome iangling trifler.

Martial of Burdeaux.

Ann. 100.

Found of late in France, calleth himſelfe impudently Chriſts Apoſtle, and is neuer named of Euſebius, Hierome, or Gennadius.

ABDIAS.

All the VVorkes extant vnder this mans name, are fictions: he is called a counterfeit and a lyar, by I. Molanus lib. 1. de fide hæreticis ſeruanda, cap. 6. Looke Iewels reply againſt Harding, artic. 1. ſect. 5.

IGNATIVS.

Seuen Epiſtles of his doth Hierome and Euſebius lib. 3. cap. 35. and 36. reckon for true, but now they are increaſed vnto twelue: whereof there are fiue counterfeit, and theſe are 1. ad Mariam. 2. ad Tarſenſes. 3. ad Hieron. 4. ad Antiochenos, 5. ad Philippenſes: and out of theſe the Papiſts haue many allegations. But admit they were of his doing, yet there are many things ſince thruſt in which are none of his: as that where hee ſaith ad Philippenſes, That they muſt faſt the fourth & ſixt daies of the weeke, after the Lords paſſion weeke: and forbiddeth the faſt of the Lords day, and of the Saturday except one. Wheras, as Auguſtine Epi. 86. ad Caſulanum ſheweth, that it is lawfull to faſt on the Lords day; and epiſt. 19. ad Hieronymum, that it was the cuſtome at Rome, and in ſundry other Churches to faſt on the Saturday. Againe, where he ſaith, that whoſoeuer eateth of the Iewes paſſe-ouer is partaker of their guilt of killing of Chriſt, whereas Epiphanius alleadgeth an Apoſtolike canon directly oppoſite: and the Eccleſiaſticall hiſtorie doth teach the contrarie. Beſides, in his epiſtle ad Smirnenſes he takes vpon him to correct (or rather contradict) Salomon: My ſonne (ſaith he, Prou. 24. 8.) Honour God and thy king: but I ſay (quoth this counterfeit Ignatius) Honour God as the authour of all things, and the Biſhop as the higheſt of Prieſts, and after him wee muſt honour the king. Theodoret in his third Dialogue doth mention a place out of this Epiſtle concerning the errour of Menander, which notwithſtanding at this day is not to be found therein: and Tritemius hath left it out: alſo Bellarmine ſaith, that the Greeke copies are corrupt.

His Epiſtle to the Epheſians is either counterfeit or at leaſt corrupted: Theodoret Biſhop of Cyrus, in Eraniſte, dialog. 1. and Gelaſius in his booke againſt Eutyches, of Chriſts two natures, doe cite a teſtimonie out of this Epiſtle, which is not to be found in the copies now extant.

PAPIAS of Hieruſalem.

Ann. 120.

Euſebius hiſt. Eccleſ. lib. 3. cap. 36. cenſureth this Authour to haue written ſtrange and fabulous matters concerning Chriſt, to miſtake and miſconſtrue the Apoſtles diſputations, and to be the firſt brocher of the error of the Chiliaſts or Millenaries.

PROCHORUS.

The hiſtory of Iohn the Diuine vnder this mans name, is done by a later writer, which the word ὁμοούσιος, conſubſtantiall doth teſtifie, being vſed by him, and yet not of vſe vntill after times.

HEGESIPPUS.

The hiſtorie extant at this preſent in Bibliotheca Patrum is falſly fathered vpon him: for in his 3. booke and 5. chapter, he ſaith, that Antioch which was before accounted as the third citie in fame of all the Romane Empire, beganne then to bee reckoned in the fourth place, when Conſtantinople the city of the Bizantines began to increaſe. Now the true Hegeſippus liued before Conſtantine, namely, in the yeare of grace 160. Againe, Tritemius ſaith, that Hegeſippus wrote an Eccleſiaſticall hiſtorie from the paſſion of our Lord vnto his owne time: but theſe bookes containe the hiſtories of the Maccabees, the Iewes warres, and the deſtruction of Ieruſalem. Looke more in the preface of Renatus Laurentius.

IUSTINE.

Ann. 150.

He is an expreſſe Chiliaſt in his dialogue with Triphon. His booke of queſtions and anſwers is falſly impoſed vpon him; for in the 82. and 86. queſtions he mentions Origen, and in the 127, Irenæus, and the Manichees, who were not vntill after his death.

Ann. 160.

The booke of Maries death, or tranſlation into heauen is doubted of: Tritemius fathers it vpon Melito of Sardis, but erroniouſly: it is held by the Pope for apochryphall, diſt. 15. cap. Sancta Romana. Hierome neuer names it. Bede reiects it as full of errors, and falſly aſcribed to Melito, in retract. Actorum, cap. 8. So holdeth F. Suarez vpon Thomas.

IRENÆUS.

Was an expreſſe, and profeſſed Chiliaſt. Witneſſe Euſeb. lib. 3. cap. 39.

THEOPHILUS of Antioch.

Ann. 170.

Saint Hierome diſallowes the commentaries vpon the Prouerbes, and the Goſpell, that goe vnder his name. Sixt. Senenſ. Biblioth. lib. 4.

TERTULLIAN.

Ann. 200.

Saint Hierome denies him to haue beene a man of the Catholike religion, for he fell to be a Montaniſt, yea euen an arch heretike; he wrote theſe workes againſt the Catholikes. 1. liber contra Pſychicos: 2. De Monogamia: 3. de Ieiunio: 4. De fuga in perſecutione. 5. De pudicitia. 6. De exhortatione ad caſtitatem. And in theſe bookes hath he ſowne many ſeedes of Poperie. Gelaſius cenſured all his bookes for apochryphall, diſt. 15. His booke de pœnitentia, Eraſmus thinketh not to bee his. His booke de corona militis, he wrote when he was a Montaniſt, and therein declareth a new Propheſie.

ORIGEN.

Ann. 230.

Full of errors, Hierome calleth his writings poyſonfull: Euſebius alſo and Ruffinus complaine that his writings were moſt foully depraued by heretikes: his counterfeit workes are theſe: 1. His Homilies vpon Eſaias, full of ſolœciſmes, not reckned in Saint Hieromes catalogue. 2. his three tractates vpon Iob, where he accuſes them of hereſie that ſay there is one God and three perſons. 3. two Homilies vpon the 38. Pſalme. 4. foure Homilies of his later explanation of the Canticles. 5. one treatiſe of the Lamentations. 6. his commentaries vpon the epiſtle to the Romanes, not faithfully tranſlated by Ruffinus. 7. his booke de pœnitentia, Gelaſius calleth apochryphall, diſt. 15. 8. His Homilies vpon diuerſe paſſages of Scriptures, if theſe if any were written by Origen, they were depraued by Ruffinus. 9. The Homily vpon the firſt words of Saint Iohns Goſpell, in that there is mention of the Manichees and Arrians, which heretikes aroſe in the Church after Origens time.

CYPRIAN.

Ann. 240.

In admiring of Tertullian too much, ſometime hee approoues the Montaniſts: theſe workes following are certainely none of his

1. His

A 1. His treatiſe of Sina and Sion. 2. Of the finding Iohn Baptiſts head, there he talkes of Pipin the French King. 3. His expoſition of the Creede mentioneth the Arrians: Hierome aſcribeth it vnto Ruffinus. 4. His booke of Prieſts ſinglenes, it is ful of barbarous words, vnknowne to the Latine tongue, as Inordinabiliter, contubernaliter, coniugalitas, abſentare: all which ſauour of a Gloſſiſt, or a caſuiſt. 5. His twelue ſermons of the cardinall workes of Chriſt, are done by an vnknowne Author, as Pamelius, and Sixtus Senenſis Biblioth. lib. 4. do affirme. 6. His ſermon of Chriſts Baptiſme doth directly contradict Cyprians knowne opinion of the rebaptizing of heretikes. 7. His booke of the praiſe of Martyrdome, affecteth quirkes and conceits. 8. His booke of the double martyrdome, talketh of the Turkes, who ſaw not the world till very neere a thouſand yeares after Cyprian. 9. His bookes of twelue abuſes, Tritemius and Pamelius (both learned Papiſts) do hold that worke as counterfeit. 10. his treatiſe of the ſtarre, the Sages, and the Innocents death. 11. his ſermon againſt the Iewes. 12. his booke of Geneſis and Sodome, held to be Tertullians by Sixt. Senenſis. Biblioth. l. 4. 13. his Paſſion was written by Paul the Deacon in the yeare 807. as Sigebert (an auncient Chronicler) recordeth. 14. his booke of Dicers. 15. his prayer for the Martyrs. 16. his prayer for good Friday. 17. The booke of Cyprians repentance. diſt. 15. cap. Sancta Romana. In this booke hee is ſaid to haue beene a Magitian, which is vntrue, for our Cyprian was by profeſſion a Rhetorician, as Hierome in his Catalogue, and in his commentarie vpon the third chapter of Ionas affirmeth; but he maketh no mention of his Magick, nor Cyprian himſelfe, in the deſcription of his conuerſion lib. 2. epiſt. 2. nor Pontian his Deacon in the life of Cyprian. 18. his booke of the vnitie of the Church is corrupted by the Papacie to proppe vp Peters primacie, for theſe words, and gaue his ſheepe to him to be fedde, and theſe, hee ordained one Chayre and theſe, Peters primacie was giuen, to ſhew one Church and one Chayre was alſo: VVho ſo forſaketh Peters Chayre vpon which the Church is founded: theſe words I ſay are not to bee found in moſt of the old manuſcripts. Looke the catalogue of T. Iames. His workes of diſcipline, and of the good of chaſtitie to Nouatus the heretike, that hope of pardon is not to bee denied to them that are fallen, theſe are al thought not to be Cyprians.

METHODIVS. Ann. 250.

His booke of the creation is not named in Hierome. I. Simlerus in his Bibliotheca doubteth of it.

GREGORY of Neocæſaria. Ann. 260.

His Homilies of the Annunciation, &c. are ſuſpected, because the liues of the Saints, their leſſons and hymnes vpon their feaſts, were not in vſe vntill Charlemaines time in the yeare 807. when they were firſt inſtituted. Paulus AEmilius in his firſt booke of the acts of the Frenchmen. Sigebert alſo vpon the yeare 807.

ARNOBIVS. Ann. 290.

His bookes againſt the Gentiles, are in number but ſeauen, as Hierome recordeth in his epiſtle vnto Magnus: the eighth now publiſhed is not of the ſame authors, as Sixtus Senenſis holdeth in his Bibliotheca, l. 4. And yet that learned Doctor Fulke of bleſſed memo-
B rie, is of opinion that it was made either by Arnobius himſelfe, or by Minutius Felix. The commentaries vpon the Pſalmes that beare his name, are of a farre more moderne forge: witneſſe Bellarmine de amiſſ. grat. & ſtatu peccati, lib. 4. cap. 9. for they mention the Pelagian hereſie.

The Councell of Neocæſaria. Ann. 320.

The collector of the Councels doth attribute vnto this Councell no more but fourteene canons, not foure and twentie, as Gratian ſaith.

EVSEBIVS Cæſarienſis. Ann. 330.

C The Papiſts doe cauill at Euſebius eccleſiaſticall hiſtorie, but vniuſtly. For admit hee were an Arrian, and too earneſt a defender of Origen; yet his hiſtorie is of ſufficient credit. Euſebius did contriue his Eccleſiaſtical hiſtorie with great praiſe, ſaith Hierome: and Baſil calleth him ἀξιόπιστον worthie to be credited.

LACTANTIVS.

His verſes of Chriſts paſſion are counterfeit: for they contradict all Lactantius his true writings in theſe words.

Kneele, and adore the croſſes ſacred wood.

Beſides in Saint Hieromes catalogue they are neuer named in the number of his works,
D though others be named which now are not extant.

His worke of the reſurrection is aſcribed vnto Venantius in the Vatican copie, as Thomaſius affirmeth. His Phœnix ſeemeth to haue beene made by no Chriſtian Author, as the ſaid witneſſe alſo auerreth.

The Donation of Conſtantine.

Theſe matters concerning Conſtantine are in my iudgement apocryphal, as alſo many other great and tedious charters aſcribed vnto Clement and Anaclete Popes, ſaith Cuſanus in his booke de Concordia Catholica, lib. 3. cap. 2. Conſtantine bequeathed Italie vnto his ſonnes by wil and teſtament ſaith Naucleras, lib. 2. generat. 11. This donation is recorded by no approoued author of any antiquity: Nay the auncient bookes of Grattian haue no ſuch diſtinction, as Antonine confeſſeth, 1. part. Hiſtor. Titul. 8. cap. 2. ſect. 8. that chapter ((ſaith he) is not in the auncient decrees, and therefore we can neither be certaine what Conſtantine did giue, nor how much. So teſtifieth alſo Melchior Can. loc. comm. l. 10. c. 5. Moreouer, the Popes owne decrees concerning this donation, differ greatly one with another, for in the 96. diſtinction, chapter Conſtantinus: it is ſaid, that the city of Rome, and all Italy, togither with the Empire of the Weſt, was giuen vnto Syluester. But in Sextus his decretals, l. 1. tit. 6. de Electione, ca. fundamentum, there mention is only made of the gift of the citie. Nauclerus in his ſecond volume, and 11. generat. writeth thus: Of what quantity or value were Conſtantines gifts to the Church of Rome, it is not yet agreed vpon by them that treate of it. The text in the chapter Conſtantinus, doth affirme, that he gaue to S. Syluester, and the Church of Rome, the city of Rome it ſelfe, Italy, and al the Prouinces of the Empire of the Weſt, as it is recorded in the 96. diſtinction, chapter Conſtantinus. Others contemne that text as chaffe, and as prouing nothing which deſerueth credit. For after this, Conſtantine left the inheritance of the foreſaid kingdomes, vnto his ſonnes, and they remained long after vnder the ſway of the Emperours, and Catholike Kings, by right of ſucceſſion. Which is not ſlenderly confirmed by the chapter Fundamenta, De Electione, lib. 6. which deſcribing the donation of Conſtantine, mentioneth the city of Rome as the onely gift, neuer ſpeaking of Italy, or the other Prouinces. No more doth the Canon futuram, 12. q. 1. which text ſaith, that Conſtantine hauing attained vnto the truth of religion, ſent letters vnto all parts of his Empire, commaunding them not onely to become Chriſtians, but alſo to build Churches for publike deuotion; and ordained liuings to bee giuen for their maintenance, built the great Church of S. Peter at his owne coſt and charges, and erected his chayre, giuing moſt ſumptuous gifts thereunto, in ſo much that he reſigned his Imperiall ſeate, to the benefit of S. Peter and his ſucceſſours. This part alſo is confirmed the more by this, that whatſoeuer now belongs vnto the Patrimonie of the Church of Rome, is wholly found to haue bin beſtowed thereupon by ſucceeding princes of after times: others thinke otherwiſe; let the truth preuaile. Againe: Of this gift and grant there is nothing extant in any author, ſaue in the Decretals: no nor in the moſt auncient volumes of them neither, as witneſſeth Antonine, Biſhop of Florence, in his Chronicles, which I doe greatly wonder at, ſince that Iſidore, who liued 800. yeares agoe, (a graue author, and one truely holy) doth plainly ſay in his hiſtory, that he, (viz. Conſtantine,) left the city of Rome vnto the A Pope. Thus farre Nauclerus.

The Canons of the firſt Councell of Nice.

Ann. 328.

All aboue twenty are forged. Theodoret in his firſt booke and 8. chapter, doth acknowledge 20 of them concerning Church gouernment, but no more. It is therefore falſe to holde 70 of them to be from the Fathers. Beſides, in the vulgar tomes theſe canons are corrupted, the true ones are extant in Ruffinus, as Cyrill witneſſeth in his Epiſtle to the Councell of Carthage, which is extant in the firſt tome of the Councels, in the acts of the Councels of Africa.

The Epiſtle of this Councell of Nice to Sylveſter, is counterfeited: for therein Macarius is B ſaid to be the Biſhop of the Church of Conſtantinople, which was not as then in the whole world. Sylveſters reſcript, or anſwer to them, is a bird of the ſame feather: as alſo the 80 Arabian canons.

The Councell of Sinueſſa.

Mentioned by no ancient writer at all, therein it is ſaid, that Diocletian talked with Marcelline, which is falſe. Sigonius de Regno occidentali. lib. 1. The preface vnto this Councell, extant in the firſt tome of the Councels, is done by none knowes whome, and therefore of no moment in antiquity.

The ſecond Councell of Arles.

Moſt manifeſtly depraued, and beſides, of vncertaine time. It is ſaid to haue beene vnder C Conſtantine and Sylveſter, and yet therein is mention made of the Bonoſiaci, cap. 17. and of the firſt Councell of Vaſa, chap. 28. which was held vnder Pope Leo the firſt.

EVSEBIVS.

Ann. 330.

His Chronicle is corrupted. Peter (ſaith he) the firſt Biſhop of the Chriſtians, when hee had founded the Church at Antioch, went to Rome, where hee preached the Goſpell 25. yeares, continuing Biſhop of that city ſo long. But in his 3. booke, and firſt chapter he ſaith, that Peter preached in Pontus, Galacia, Cappadocia, and Aſia, and towards the end of his life being placed at Rome, was there crucified. Looke alſo the fourth chapter.

D The Councell of SARDICA.

The third, fifth, and ſeuenth Canons thereof are ſuſpected, for in them the appeale vnto the Pope is allowed, and it is decreede that hee may ſend his Legate à latere, who in his name may make agreements in other Prouinces. But Auguſtine in his Epiſtle vnto Cœleſtinus, ſaith thus, Wee finde it not decreed in any Councell of the Fathers, that any ſhould bee ſent as from the ſide of your holines. And the ſame Father againſt Creſconius, lib. 3. cap. 34. acknowledgeth no Councell of Sardica, which is not hereticall. And to this agreeth Cardinall Cuſanus de concordia Cathol. lib. 2. cap. 25. Beſides, theſe canons are directly oppoſite vnto the 5. canon of the Councell of Nice. Now ſome do thinke theſe canons not counterfeit, but to be vnderſtood of a priuiledge graunted aboue ordinary vnto Pope Iulius, and that they were abrogate by the ſecond canon of the generall ſynode of Conſtantinople.

The Councels of Rome vnder Conſtantine and Sylueſter.

Counterfeit altogether: and not mentioned at all by hiſtoriographers.

ATHANASIVS.

Euagrius in his 3. booke, chap. 31. ſaith, that the Neſtorians and Eutychians publiſhed many of Appollinaris his bookes cloking them vnder the name and credit of Athanaſius: The workes falſly impoſed vpon him are theſe:

1 The booke of diuers queſtions, of the holy Scripture vnto King Antiochus, for therin great Athanaſius is cited: queſt. 23. and S. Gregorie Nazianzene is named twiſe: queſt. 117. & 129. Dionyſius his Myſtica theologia alſo is there alleadged, which was vnknowne in Athanaſius his time. Senenſ. Biblioth. lib. 4.

2 The 16. queſtion of the worſhip of the croſſe, in the 4. action of the 7. Councell, this is aſcribed to one Leontius, that liued about Mauritius his time.

3 The treatiſe of Theologicke definitions. There Gregory Nyſſenus is cited.

4 The diſputation concerning faith held at Laodicea betweene Arius, and Athanaſius. The author of this worke ſheweth, that this Arius was not that Arch-hereticke, but another. Caſſander thinketh it done by Vigilius the Martyr.

5 The commentaries vpon Pauls epiſtles vnder Athanaſius his name, they are Theophilactes.

6 The exhortation to the Monkes.

7 The booke of the paſſion of the Image of Chriſt crucified in Berith in Syria, for this happened in the yeare 764. Sigebert.

8 The epiſtle to Pope Marcus for the copies of the Nicene Councell, (becauſe the copies of Alexandria were burned by the Arians,) together with Marcus his anſwer, this burning of bookes was vnder Conſtantius, Athanaſ. epiſt. ad orthodoxos. But at that time was Marcus dead. Bellarm. de Pont. lib. 2. cap. 25.

9 The ſecond epiſtle vnto Serapion, of the holy Ghoſt. Theſe are all forged.

Theſe workes of Athanaſius are ſuſpected, as not his.

1 The treatiſe of Chriſts incarnation.

2 Of the healthfull comming.

3 A ſermon againſt hereſies.

4 The 16 oration vnto Maximus.

5 An epiſtle to Marcellinus of the interpretation of the Pſalmes.

6 The ſermon of virginity.

7 Teſtimonies of holy Scripture.

8 The ſermon of our Lords paſſion. Herein are the queſtions vnto Antiochus cited, which are not this authors: hee forbids othes.

9 An epiſtle to Serapion.

10 An epiſtle to all the Brethren through Egypt, &c.

11 A ſermon of Chriſts mother. Therein is Neſtorius hereſie confuted, therefore it was written after the Councell of Epheſus.

12 A ſermon vpon that of the Goſpell: Whoſoeuer ſhall ſay, &c.

13 The diſputation in the Councell of Nice againſt Arius.

14 An epiſtle to the ſolitarie liuers: it is partly an epiſtle, partly a fragment of another worke. And ſome things are there promiſed, which now are not extant there. The author of Commelinus edition.

15 The worke of the life of Antonie. This was lately added vnto the others, it is iuſtly ſuſpected; for it is idle and trifling in many things.

16 An homilie of the ſower.

17 The declaration of Leuiticus.

18 The epiſtle to Pope Felix, therein he ſaith the Church of Rome is ſacer vertex in quo omnia vertuntur. But this alluſion neither is, nor can be made in Greeke, therefore it was rather written in Latine. Beſides, there are many things herein diſagreeing from Athanaſius, as when he ſaith that the Goſpel was firſt preached at Rome, and that it was decreed in the Councell of Nice, to appeale to the Biſhop of Rome in all cauſes. Iuell.

19 The epiſtle to Pope Liberius in the 1. tome of the Councels, is fooliſh in the allegations of Scripture, and therefore not to be attributed vnto Athanaſius.

DOROTHEVS of Tyrus. Ann. 350.

The ſynopſis that beares this mans name, is both falſly aſcribed vnto him, and alſo of it ſelfe full of faigned tales. Amongſt the 72. diſciples, hee numbreth the Eunuch of the Queene of AEthiopia, and maketh Iulia, a woman, a Biſhop: and he maketh that Caeſar that is mentioned in the epiſtle to the Philippians, the 4. chapter, namely Nero, a Biſhop alſo. Bellarmin.

DAMASVS. Ann. 370.

The litle epiſtle of his in the ſecond tome of Hieronimes workes, Eraſmus doth ſuppoſe to be falſly aſcribed vnto him: the epiſtle alſo to the Biſhops of Numidia is forged; for in Damaſus his time, the Biſhop of Rome had nothing to doe with the Churches of Africa; to whome notwithſtanding this author propounds his edicts, and threatneth thoſe that tranſgreſſe them.

EPHREM. Ann. 380

His workes in Syrian (the tongue wherein hee wrote them) cannot now be gotten, but either in Greeke or Latine.

GREGORY of Nyſſa. Ann.380.

His inſtructiue oration of the ſoule, is corrupted by heretikes: Niceph. l. 11 c. 19. His orations alſo, & thoſe of Amphilochius, Chryſostome, Cyril of Alexandria, and Andrew of Creete, vpon the feaſt of the Purification, ſet downe by Lippomanus and Surius, are all of a falſe broode: for this feaſt had his inſtitution but in Iuſtinians time. Looke Durandus his Enchirid. lib. 7.

GREGORY of Nazienzene. Ann.380.

The Tragedie vnder his name doth not ſauour at all of his ſtyle, nor obſerueth ſtrictly the Iambicke verſe according to his cuſtome. The Author ſeemeth to imitate Euripides. Fulk.

CYRILL of Ieruſalem Ann.380.

His Catechiſmes are ſuſpected. Ioſias Simler in his Index ſaith, that of the Greeke bookes which the ſtate of Auſpurg bought of Antony the Preſident of Corfu, are named 18. Catechiſmes of Iohn Biſhop of Ieruſalem, for thoſe who were newly baptiſed, and 5. which interprete the myſteries and ceremonies, wherefore it would be looked vnto, leſt perhaps they be Iohns (who was long after Cyril,) and yet are of ſette purpoſe impoſed vpon the other to procure the greater authority. In his Bibliotheca, his epiſtle vnto Auguſtine of Hieromes miracles, is a fiction. It is well knowne that hee died before Hierome. And this epiſtle condemneth Sabinian for aſcribing two wils vnto Chriſt.

BASILL. Ann.380.

Theſe workes of his are either doubted of, or ſurely corrupted.

1 His booke of the holy Ghoſt: in the middeſt whereof are ſome things inſerted, which Eraſmus holdeth diſſonant from Baſils phraſe and forme of writing.

2 His aſcetica or contemplatiues are not in the catalogue of his monuments in Nazianzene his Monodia or funerall poeme. Euſtathius firſt of the Armenian Monkes is thought of ſome to bee the author of them. Sozomen. lib. 3. cap. 13.

3 The Rule vnder his name is ſuſpected. Nazianzene neuer mentions it, and there is alſo another fathered vpon him which hath but 35. chapters. Therein are many things diſſenting from Baſils other writings.

4 The litle booke of Baſils life vnder Amphilochius his name, is a falſe birth, full of fables, and contrarie to approoued hiſtories. Looke Iuels Reply to Harding. art. 1. ſect. 33.

5 The epiſtle to Caſarea the noble woman, is of no ſound authority.

PRVDENTIVS. Ann.380.

The prayers at the end of his Hamartigeneia, are not his labours, Giſeline did ſee them printed by themſelues without name of author, they do plainly contradict the 7. ode of his Cathemerina, in theſe words:

In that bleſt region doe I craue no roome, &c.

A very impious ſaying, and not to be aſcribed to Prudentius. Looke Illyricus his catalogue ſet forth in the yeare 1598. pag. 186.

AMBROSE. Ann.380.

Theſe workes are falſly thruſt vpon this holy Father.

1 Ninety and two ſhort ſermons to the people: ſome of them are found amongſt S. Auguſtines, as theſe:

Ambroſe his	is	Auguſtines
25.		9.
38.		73. de tempore.
69.		31. de ſanctis.
7.		19. de verbis Domini.
9.		25. de verbis Apoſtoli.
37.		77. de tempore.
68.		26. de ſanctis.
1.		31. de ſanctis.
2.		33. de ſanctis.

2 His ſermon of Agnes: it endeth thus: Thus much I Ambroſe.

3 His ſermon of Auguſtines baptiſme: he there adornes him with a blacke cowle, and falſly maketh him the author of monkery.

4 His booke of Salomon.

5 The preparatiue prayers to the maſſe, are not of Ambroſe, there is adoration of the ſacrament.

6 The booke of the Apology of Dauid.

7 Two bookes of the calling of the Gentiles: falſly aſcribed vnto Ambroſe, or to Proſper of Aquitaine, who in his verſes againſt the ingratefull, oppugnes the vniuerſal grace and redemption, which the fore-ſaid bookes doe maintaine.

8 The booke to the deuout virgin.

9 The booke to the fallen virgin, it is a declamation, and almoſt all extant in Hieromes epiſtle to the mother and daughter. Hoſpinian.

10 The booke of Dauids expoſtulation or complaint.

11 The booke of widdowes directly oppoſite to his commentaries vpon the Romanes, cap. 1.

12 The Commentaries vpon the Hebrewes, are likelier to bee made by Remigius or Anſelme.

13 That Hegeſippus ſtorie was tranſlated by Ambroſe out of the Greeke, is in Eraſmus iudgement, a thing not credible.

14 The commentaries vpon the Reuelation. Six. Senenſ. lib. 4.

15 The booke againſt the Arians, touching faith aſcribed to Nazianzene in the Latine edition of his workes, tranſlated by Ruffinus.

16 His Miſſall mentions the feaſt of the Aſſumption, which was not inſtituted vntill long time after him.

17 The worke of the life of Gerviaſius is none of his, for it hath many things repugnant to his true workes.

18 His 84. epiſtle is Proſpers, Suarez.

Ann. 400.

HIEROME.

Theſe following workes in the common iudgement of all men, are no children of this Father.

The Hebrew traditions vpon the three bookes of the Kings and Chronicles, condemned by Senenſis, lib. 4. & Lyra.

The prefaces vnto
- Baruch.
- The two books of Machabees.
- The Pſalter: in number two.
- The Prouerbs of Salomon, two alſo.

Foure Homilies vpon the Canticles.

Hebrew places vpon the Acts, they doe cite Hierome himſelfe, cap. 27.

The commentaries vpon the Lamentations of Ieremie, Senenſ. lib. 4. they are of Rabanus Maurus his doing, or els of Bedes, as Eraſmus thinketh.

His commentaries vpon Mark, with their preface. Senenſ. lib. 4.

The prefaces vnto Luke and Iohn.

The commentaries vpon the Pſalmes, Cenſured by Lindan, Canus, Eraſmus, and Bruno.

The preface and commentaries vpon Iob, Senen. lib. 4.

The third booke of his commentaries vpon the Prouerbs, in the 31. chapter Gregorie is cited.

The commentaries vpon the Epiſtles of Paul, Senenſ. lib. 4.

The Epiſtle to Demetrias, is Pelagius his worke. Gregor. Arimin. 2. d. 26. qu. 1. art. 3. It is manifeſt ſo to bee out of Saint Auguſtines booke de gratia Chriſti & originali peccato, chap. 37. and 38. wherein the words which Pelagius affirmed hee wrote vnto Demetrias, are rehearſed, and are very like to theſe here alleadged. It is plaine alſo out of Auguſt. epiſtle to Iuliana, mother to Demetrias, where the words of Pelagius are rehearſed which are contained in this epiſtle.

The epiſtles vnto
- Geruntius his daughter.
- Marcella.
- A baniſhed virgin.
- Amenus being ſicke, touching a perfect man.

The inſtruction of a friend in the knowledge of Gods Law.

A Of three vertues.

A ſermon of Maries aſſumption, vnto Paula and Euſtochium.

Of honouring our parents.

Of the ſeauen degrees of the Church vnto Ruſticus, Biſhop of Narbon.

Of the praiſe of virginity, vnto Mauritius his daughter.

Of Gods attributes in the Scriptures.

An explanation of the Creede, vnto Damaſus.

An expoſition of our faith, vnto Cyrill.

To Præſidius the Deacon, concerning the Paſchall taper.

Of the keeping of Eaſter.

B An obiurgation againſt Suſanna beeing fallen.

An obiurgation vnto Euagrius for Leuita.

An exhortation to a ſouldiour of the world.

Of the ten temptations of the Iſraelites.

An explanation of the 40. & 117. pſalmes.

To Dardanus concerning the kindes of muſicke.

4. ſermons of
- 1 the reſurrection of
- 2 Chriſt.
- the natiuity of Chriſt.
- 3 the Epiphanie.
- 4 the Lent

Ten ſermons vpon Eaſters euen, touching the eating of the Lambe.

To Euſtochium, of Peters chaines.

C Of the keeping of vigils.

Exhortations to Pammachius & Oceanus.

To a ſecular penitent.

Of the diuerſities of leproſies.

Of the two ſonnes, the prodigall, and the thriftie.

The rule of monkes gathered by Lupus de Oliveto.

A dialogue vnder the names of Hierome and Auguſtine.

An Homily of the body and blood of our Lord.

Another vpon Saint Matthewes Goſpel.

An Apologie for Origen. Neither his, nor Pamphilus the Martyrs.

A Catalogue of ſome eccleſiaſtick writers.

D An epiſtle to Tyraſius, vpon the death of his daughter.

To Oceanus, touching ſufferance of reproches.

The anſwer to Damaſus his epiſtle.

To Paula and Euſtochium of the vertue of the Pſalmes.

To Damaſus concerning the offering of the altar.

A rule for monkes of 41. chapters.

Chromatius and Heliodorus to Hierome, with the reſcript thereunto.

Of Maries natiuity.

Euſebius his epiſtle to Damaſus, of Hieroms death.

Auguſtine, of Hieromes worthineſſe.

Hieromes life, by an vnknowne Author.

Suſpected.

Two epiſtles to Auguſtine, one beginning Quoties in vrbe: the other, Anno præterito.

An epiſtle to Apronius.

Another to Theophilum, Beatitudo tua.

Another to Celantia.

Comitis liber, called by Micrologus, cap. 25.

Dictionarius, beareth Hieromes name, Honorius, lib. 2. c. 88. but it is ſome far later Authors.

Here note, that in the 16. diſtinction, cap. Sancta Romana, Hieromes iudgement is allowed concerning Origen, Ruffinus, and in all things wherein he reprehendeth them.

Ann.400.

DAMASVS.

His Pontificall is of ſuſpected authority. The Venecian edition of the Councels, confeſſeth that it diſagreeth from all approoued and receiued hiſtories: the firſt tome, page 617. & 684. and the ſecond tome, pag. 463.

Ann.405.

CHRYSOSTOME.

Sixtus Senenſis in his Bibliotheca, libr. 4. reckoneth all theſe workes as falſly impoſed vpon this Father.

One Homily vpon Geneſis, the 2. chapter, beginning Dignitas humana, &c.

Another vpon the ſame chapter, beginning Deus inſtitutor, gathered out of Auguſtines fragments: there are two whole chapters taken out of this booke, de Eccleſiaſticis Dogmatibus, namely the 31. and 32.

Another vpon the ſame chapter, Iubetur Adam.

Three vpon the third chapter of Geneſis: 1. beginning Deus ſine initio. 2. Quoties mecum temporis. 3. Chriſtiano cum hoſte.

One vpon the 15. chap. Fides eſt religionis.

One vpon the 25. Portabat Rebecca.

One vpon the 37. Filij autem Iacob.

One vpon the 17. of Exod. Stabat Moyſes.

One vpon the 11. of Iudg. Deus qui voluit.

One vpon Kings, 1. 13. Dominus Deus cum Dauid.

One vpon 2. Kings 7. Imitatores Chriſti.

One vpon 2. Kings 17. Perdidit Abſolon.

One vpon 3. Kin. 17. of Elias. Glorioſus olim.

Another vpon the ſame. Cum geſta peccata.

One vpon 4. Kings 2. of Elias his aſcenſion, beginning, Apud quoſdam veteres. This Bede in his queſtions vpon the booke of Kings, thinketh to bee Chryſoſtomes, but the ſtyle ſauours of that Homily which is put amongſt Hieromes falſe children, for Eaſter daies, beginning Exultet cœlum, and it is alſo amongſt Euſebius Emeſenus his ſermons.

One Homilie vpon 4. Kings 5. Cum Naaman.

One vpon 4. Kings 6. Of Heliſæus. Et ſi frequenter.

Two Homilies vpon Iob, cap. 1. Veruntamen fratres: and, Athletam in certamen.

Two prefaces vpon the Pſalmes: Poſt Moſem: and, Omnis Scriptura.

One Homilie in Pſalme 1. Beatitudo eſt omnium.

One vpon the 2. Quemadmodum qui in Solem.

Two vpon the 9. Creatoris omnium: and Deus generis noſtri.

One vpon the 13. Quemadmodum cum Dominus.

One vpon the 14. Eſt pulcher Pſalmus.

One vpon the 22. Circulo conſecrato.

One vpon the 24. Viatoris arcta.

One vpon the 25. Filij Lucis.

One vpon the 26. Ex plenitudine verbi.

One vpon the 29. Celebritas confeſſionis.

One vpon the 33. Sermo diuinus.

One vpon the 37. Sæpe à nobis.

Vpon the 38. pſalme, one Homilie beginning, Et quomodo poteſt Pſalmus.

On the 39. one, Nec hunc quidem Pſalmum.

Two vpon the 40. Nulli quidem: and, Etiamſi Propheta.

Two on the 42. Hic Pſalmus eſt: and, Cohæret priori.

Vpon the 68. one Qui orationibus.

Vpon the 71. one Dominus virtutum.

The 84. one Omnis qui ſe agnoſcit.

The 90. one Pſalmum nonageſimum.

The 93. one Aduerſus fluctus.

The 95. one Egregium vereque mirandum.

The 96. one Ictus à vipera.

The 106. one Spiritus Sanctus.

The 115. one Narratur quòd apiculæ.

The 118. one Benignitas dei.

The 118. one Veritatem prædicandam.

The 121. one Dominus noſter.

The 142. one Iudicia Domini ſicut abyſſus.

Vpon the 1. of Eſay, one Si volueritis.

Vpon the 9. one Chriſtus vnà cum Patre.

Vpon the 42. one Vita innouata.

Vpon the 62. one Quoniam tempus venit.

Vpon the 1. of Ieremie, one Magnum Ieremiæ meritum.

Vpon the 3. of Daniell, of the three children, one Trium puerorum ſermo.

Vpon the 13. of Suſanna, one Diuinæ lectiones.

Vpon Zachary the 6. one Nobiles genere.

The imperfect worke vpon Matthew, euen the Catholikes themſelues thinke to bee Chryſoſtomes; but ſome doe denie it, becauſe it ſauours of Arianiſme: but yet it is generally commended for the variety of learning therein contained.

Three Homilies vpon the 1. of Matthew, beginning, Hoc futurum.
Dedicatur nouus.
In eo quod dixit.

One vpon the 4. O incomparabilem.

Three vpon the 5. beginning,
Non tantum.
Cum nobis pro officio.
Per omnia.

Three vpon the 6.
Dominica.
Sicut in ſuperioribus.
Series lectionis.

One vpon the 7. Omnibus notam.

Two vpon the 9. { Chriſtus in. / Multa tempeſtate.
Vpon the 14. one Hodie nobis.
Vpon the 15. one Myratur.
Vpon the 18. three { Videtur— / Exercitia. / Magnum.
Vpon the 19. two { Iuſſus. / Quoniam.
Vpon the 20. two { Poſtquam. / Proximis.
Vpon the 21. two { Pato. / Si ad arborem.
Vpon the 22. two { Omnis malitia. / Frequenter.
Vpon the 26. two { Ad hodiernum. / Secundum Saluatoris.
Vpon the 27. two { Euangelica. / Sufficiens.
Vpon the 1. chap. of Marke, fiue { Animal. / Nunc tentiamus. / Videte. / Quoniam. / Inſtruxerat.
Vpon the 5. one Interrogat.
Vpon the 8. one In ſuperiore.
Vpon the 9. one Iurat.
The 10. one Quoniam.
The 11. three { Iſte qui. / Ingreditur. / In Euangelio.
The 13. one Euangelica.
Vpon the 1. of Luke, one De ſol.
Vpon the 2. one Ioſeph autem.
The 10. one Tum dixit.
The 15. one Omnium.
The 16. one Quoniam dixerat.
The 19. one Super Chriſtum.
Vpon the 1. of Iohn, one, De Ioanne.
Vpon the 4. one Innumera.
The 11. one Grandi fratres.
The 14. one Dominus Chriſtus.
The 26. two { Maria. / Hoc ergo.
Vpon the 1. Corinth. 13. one Apoſtolus Paulus.
Vpon the 1. Corinth. 15. one In heſterno fratres.

Thus farre Sixtus.

D Chryſoſtomes Maſſe is a forged thing. It containeth prayers for Alexius the Emperour, who liued long after Chryſoſtome: and for one Nicholas either Pope or Patriarch of Conſtantinople. The copies differ exceedingly. In the commemoration of the Saints, Chryſoſtome himſelfe is named. Therefore it was not done by him, but patched together by diuers after his time vnder his name, and that at diuers Editions: chiefly, that which is there ſpoken of the adoration of Chriſts Image, is a meere inuention. For Chryſoſtome in his true writings, cals painting a ſuperſtitious arte, homil. 50. vpon Matthew, And the 2. Councell of Nice, which did ſcrape together all auncient authorities for image worſhip, yet neuer cites this Liturgy of his.

A His homily of the birth-day of Peter and Paul, is of the ſame ſort, Surius. Some of the homilies to the people of Antioch, are patched together out of diuers places and authors, as namely, in the 66. theſe words, Who is adorned with purple—, and ſtandeth ready to pray vnto the Saints: theſe words are read in S. Auguſtines Sermons, intituled, Of S. Paul: The ſixt Epiſtle to Theodorus.

AVGVSTINE.

Theſe Workes following are forged in the common iudgement of all men.

B In his firſt Tome.

A fragment of the rule of the Clergie.

The ſecond rule: and concerning a Heremites life.

Eraſmus holds, that the third rule is alſo forged, which is called the rule of men: or, vnto the ſeruants of God. And Polydore iudgeth theſe three Workes to be none of Saint Auguſtines.

In the ſecond Tome, theſe Epiſtles are counterfeit.

An Epiſtle which was the 111. in the place whereof Eraſmus put the Epiſtle vnto Fortunatianus.

C The 132. Epiſtle, vnto Demetrias the virgin.

Sixteene of his Epiſtles to Boniface, & contra: from the 181. vnto the 199.

The Epiſtle to Cyrill of Hieruſalem, touching Hieromes prayſes.

Innocentius his Epiſtle, the 93. amongſt Auguſtines, Eraſmus holdeth fained.

All the Epiſtles aboue 242. the popiſh Diuines of Louayne haue lately added.

In the third Tome.

The booke of Eccleſiaſticall opinions, it is held to be of Gennadius. Walfrid. de reb. eccl. cap. 20. Thomas Aquinas, catena in 1. cap. Mat. But thoſe things which are inſerted from the 21. chapter, vnto the 52. are of ſome more

D late author, who ſeemed to haue ſome ſmack of Pelagianiſme.

One booke vnto Petrus of Faith, Bertram in his booke, Of the body & blood of Chriſt, aſcribeth it vnto Fulgentius.

The bookes, Of the wonders of the Scriptures: their authour talkes of the account made by the Cycle, lib. 2. cap. 4. therefore they were not written vntill 600. yeares after Chriſt.

The booke, Of the ſpirit and ſoule: it citeth Boethius, chap. 37. Tritemius fathers it vpon Hugo de Sancto Victore.

The Queſtions of the Trinity.

The work of the Patriarchs benedictions.

In the fourth Tome counterfeit—

The booke of the 8. queſt. of Dulcitius.

The booke of 21. queſt. and queſtion 65. A

The queſtions of the Old and New Teſtament.

The worke of the Incarnation of the word.

Of the Trinity and Vnitie of God.

Of the Eſſence of the Diuinitie.

Of Faith concerning things inuiſible.

Of true and falſe Repentance. Herein is Auguſtine himſelfe cited.

Of healthfull Inſtructions.

Of Friendſhip.

Doubted of.

The booke of Continence.

Of Patience.

Of the goodneſſe of widowhood.

Of 33. queſtions. B

In the fiſt Tome, forged.

The booke of the contention of the church and the ſynagogue.

Suſpected.

The Oration of the 5. hereſies.

Againſt Felicianus of the Vnitie of the Trinitie.

The Treatiſe of Stoickes and Epicures.

A treatiſe vpon theſe wordes: I am that I am.

In the 7. tome forged, or ſuſpected——

The worke againſt Fulgentius the Donatiſt.

The booke of Hypognoſtica.

Of Predeſtination and Grace. C

Of Gods Predeſtination.

In the 9. tome forged——

Expoſition vpon the Reuelation.

Of louing of God.

His Soliloquia.

His Manuall.

Of the triple habitacle.

Of the ladder of Paradice.

Of 12. degrees of abuſes.

Of contrition of heart.

Of the Glaſſe.

Of a Chriſtian life.

Of Maries aſſumption.

Of the contempt of the world.

Of the vanitie of the times.

Of obedience and humilitie. D

Of the good of diſcipline.

Of the viſitation of the ſicke. Bellarmine de extrema vnctione, lib. 1. cap. 4.

Of viſiting the ſicke.

Of the comfort of the dead two bookes.

Of the praiſe of charitie: a treatiſe.

Of Sobrietie and chaſtitie.

A ſinners looking glaſſe.

Of the conflict of vertues and vices.

Of the vprightneſſe of Catholike conuerſation.

Of the firſt mans creation.

Of the tree of knowledge of good & euill.

Of Antichriſt.

Vpon the hymne, Magnificat.

Doubted of——

A booke of the Lords husbandrie, or of Wedneſday.

A booke of meditations.

A ſermon of the deluge.

Of the time of Barbariſme.

Of the 4. vertues of Charitie.

Of the profite of faſting.

Of the combat of the ſoule.

Of the deſtruction of the citie Hieruſalem.

Of the good of diſcipline.

Of the medicine of repentance, one booke, and of the profite of repentance.

In the 10. tome, counterfeit ſermons.

A ſermon of the tranſlation of Steuen.

Sermons to the heremiticall brethren.

The 3.14.18,19,20.22.28.34.38.47.52. 54.56,57,58. of his ſermons de verbis Domini.

The 2.12.15,26.34.35. de verbis Apoſtoli.

Of his booke of 50. Homilies: the 2,3,4, 7.9,10.15.21,22.30,31.41.45.46.

Of his ſermons de tempore, the 9,10,11.18. 24.28.33.37.38.39.43.47.48.50.59.62. wherein hee ſaith that not to faſt in lent is a ſinne, but that in his purer workes he denieth.

Of the 118. Epiſtle to Ianuarius, chapter the 4.63.68.77.95.96,97.99.113.114.125. For the articles of the Creede in Saint Auguſtines time were not ſo diſpoſed, I meane in that order they are here ſet downe. For he in his booke of the Creede to the Catechumeniſts omitteth the deſcenſion into hell, and the life euerlaſting. Chryſoſtome, tome 5. (de Symbolo, omitteth the communion of Saints.) 117,118.120,122.125.128.130.132.136. 137,138.152.156,157,158,159.161.167, 169.174.176.181.183.188.196.199.207. 211.223,224.226.228,229.238,239.241, 242. And others alſo are by the Proteſtants thought to be thruſt in, as the 91.215.251. 255.

Of his ſermons de ſanctis, the 2.5.7.10.11. 15.19,20.22.26,27.30,31,32.34,35.37. all aboue 50. the Paris Diuines haue added. The Proteſtants thinke all the reſt to be baſtards, neither Auguſtines, nor Fulgentius his, becauſe amongſt other things the author of them, ſerm. 35. maketh mention of Iſidore, that liued 200. yeares after Auguſtine.

Of his ſermons de diuerſis 35——all aboue 43. were added by them of Louayne, we thinke them all falſe coyned.

Palladius his hiſtoria Lauſiaca, is nothing but a fardle of old wiues tales, as may eaſily appeare to the reader: and therefore of no eſteeme at all. Ann. 220.

THE DECRETALL EPISTLES.

Ab ann. 80. ad 300.

Theſe epiſtles decretall which paſſe vnder the names of Clement, Euariſt, Teleſphorus, Higinus, Anicetus, Soter, Calixtus, Vrban, Pontian, Anterus, Fabian, &c. and Syluester, are all forged: and that for ſixe reaſons. Firſt, all theſe epiſtles had one and the ſame author, for they are all written in the ſame ſtyle and forme of writing, and the ſame phraſes are often repeated in diuers Epiſtles. Now it is a thing impoſſible, for ſo many Biſhops to ſpeake all iuſt after one forme, though they ſhould labour to imitate one another. 2. Many things of theſe Epiſtles are written ſo there from the true phraſe of the Latine, that they are meerely barbarous: as this: Epiſcopi ſunt obediendi, diligendi, & ſummopere venerandi, & non detrahendi vel lacerandi: and this, Patres omnes ſunt venerandi, non reſpuendi, non inſidian- 3 di, &c. 3. Theſe epiſtles in their quotations of holy Scripture doe follow Hieromes tranſlati-on, which none of the Popes that theſe decrees are fathered vpon euer ſawe: for it was 4 not then extant. 4. There is not one epiſtle almoſt of them all, but containeth ſome things expreſſely againſt the credit of all Hi-ſtoricall truth; for they ſpeake of the Primacy and rule of the Church of Rome, ordination of Biſhops, and of their immunities, of the accuſation & degradation of Prieſts, and of appealing to the ſea of Rome: whereas in the three firſt ages, becauſe of the multitude of perſecutions, little reſpect (as Syluius ſaith)

5 was had vnto the Church of Rome. 5. So ſaith Cuſanus in his booke de concordia Catholic. lib. 3. cap. 2. and *Bellarmine de Pontifice, lib. 2.
c. 14.* confeſſeth, that ſome errors haue crept into theſe epiſtles, and that hee dares not affirme them to be infallibly theirs, whoſe name they beare: & Iſidore in his preface before the Councels, doth not mention them all; Euſebius ſpeaks onely of the epiſtles of Clemens and Victor, which yet are not now extant. Damaſus writing of his predeceſſors, neuer ſaith word of theſe epiſtles. No more doth Hieron.

Beſides, the decreetall epiſtles of the Popes (extant in the tomes of the Councels) from Syluester vnto Gregory the firſt, & ſo forward, are all either counterfeit, or iuſtly ſuſpected.

This is plainly ſhewed by the groſſe abſurditie of their ſtyle, in the moſt of them; by their vnapt alleadging the Scriptures, & their deſire of rule ouer the Catholike Church. For at this they all do ayme, namely, to erect and protect the ſupremacy of the Church of Rome. Chiefly theſe following.

1 Markes Epiſtle vnto the Biſhops of Egypt. He ſaith that the Romane Church did neuer erre, nor euer hereafter ſhall erre. But that opinion of the immobilitie of the Romane faith, was not admitted into the world vntil in theſe later times. Catharinus in Gal. 2.

2 Iulius his firſt Epiſtle vnto the Biſhops of the Eaſt for Athanaſius. This diſagreeth quite from the true copie which is in Socrates l. 2. c. 15. and in Sozomen l. 3. c. 8. His ſecond alſo is fooliſh and friuolous.

3 Liberius his anſwer to Athanaſius: and his Epiſtle vnto all Biſhops.

4 Felix his Epiſtles to the Synod of Alexandria.

5 Steuens vnto Damaſus, and another of Damaſus vnto Steuen Biſhop of Africa, wherein there are theſe words of new Latine: Charitatiuè, compaſſibiliter, ordinabiliter, praſui fratres ſuppeditaſti, ſed indicaſti. Such like is that of his ad Epiſcopos Numidiæ, [and another ad Epiſcopos Illyricos.]

6 Syricius his firſt Epiſtle vnto Himerius Biſhop of Tarracon. The barbarouſneſſe of the ſtyle maketh it ſuſpected, as in theſe words. In ergaſtulis autem ſunt tales perſonæ retrudendæ vt tantum facinus continua lamentatione deflentes purificatorio pœnitudinis igne poſſint decoquere. Beſides, he imperiouſly commandeth the Biſhop of Tarracon to publiſh his decrees to be obſerued of all the Biſhops: But the Church of Rome as then had no ſuch iuriſdiction. Of no greater value is his Epiſtle to the Millaners; nor the 3. and 4. to the B. of Africa.

7 Two Epiſtles of Anaſtaſius. The date, and the Conſuls hereto ſubſcribed, diſagree from all true hiſtories. In the firſt you ſhall finde theſe words. Quaſi ad caput charitatiuè mittere non dubitetis. And hee commandeth with Apoſtolike authoritie, ſtandum eſſe ad lectionem Euangelii.

8 The Epiſtles vnder Innocentius the firſt his name, are iuſtly called in queſtion, becauſe there are in them many traditions, which vnto the Diuines of thoſe times were altogether vnknowne. And beſides there are whole Paragraphes put into them which are extant as well in the later Popes writings, as in the former. The third Epiſtle to Exuperius, maketh mention of fiue bookes of Salomon: the 22. ſpeaketh of the Biſhops Myter, which the Church then knew not. And the Epiſtle vnto the Councell of Carthage is very fooliſh and idle.

The Epiſtles alſo of Innocentius which are the 91. and the 93. among the Epiſtles of S. Auguſtine, are counterfeit. Eraſmus.

9 Sixtus the third his Epiſtle vnto the Eaſterne Biſhops, hath theſe words: Valentinianus Auguſtus noſtra authoritate Synodum congregari iuſſit. Moſt fooliſhly! Valentinian could call a Councell by his owne authoritie, and needed no Popes aſſiſtance, the Epiſtle therfore is forged. In his third Epiſtle, de malis doctoribus, &c. theſe words, [Semper tamen Purgatorii locum excipio in quo animæ hominum corporibus ſolutæ ad tempus expiantur] are thruſt in by ſome other, for they haue no coherence at all, either with the precedent, or ſubſequent clauſes: for Sixtus ſaith, there is but two places, Heauen and Hell, and that out of the kingdome of God there is no ſaluation. Ann. 433.

10 Hilarius his Epiſtles.

11 Anaſtaſius his Epiſtle vnto Anaſtaſius the Emperour, he warneth him to obey the Apoſtolike admonition, viz. the Popes decrees, wheras the Popes of thoſe daies obeyed the Emperours decrees, non è contra.

12 Pope Iohns the firſt his 2. Epiſtle is oppoſite vnto the hiſtorie of that time.

13 Felix the IV. his Epiſtles, the ſecond wherof beginneth thus. Quoniam importabilibus verbis garrulaſti.

14 Boniface the 2. his epiſtle, and the deprecation of Aurelius of Carthage thereunto annexed. Herein mention is made of the Prince Iuſtine, whereas Boniface Biſhop of Rome liued in nether of the Iuſtines times. It is like to be the handiworke of ſome of the Popes flatterers.

15 Vigilius his firſt epiſtle, a very trifling peece of worke, hee teacheth that ruinated Churches may be reedified, and conſecrated with the Maſſe onely, without any ſprinkling of holy water. His third is ſo confuſedly patched together, that it is impoſſible to make true ſenſe of it.

16 Iohn the third his epiſtle.

17 Benedict the firſt his epiſtle: Part of it is a fragment of Alexander the firſt, his firſt epiſtle decretall: the other part is almoſt the whole fourth chapter of the 1. vnto Timothy.

Gregory the third, his third epiſtle (tom. 3. Conciliorum) ad Epiſcopos Bauariæ, diſagrees from the copie which is in Auentines Annales, lib. 3.

Zacharies fifth epiſtle (tom. 3. Concil.) containeth friuolous anſwers to moſt fooliſh queſtions. One thing chiefly to be noted is, his command of the time when to eate bacon. His ſixth epiſtle is corrupt by ſome filthy interpreter. Catalogus teſtium.

18 Nicholas his epiſtles vnto the Emperour Michaell. Therein hee ſaid that godly Emperours neuer would commaund the Prieſts, but intreat them as Fathers. But Euſebius ſaith otherwiſe, lib. 10. cap. 5. and Nicephorus, lib. 7. cap. 43. Theſe ſay that Conſtantine the Emperour commaunded Miltiades Biſhop of Rome to iudge the cauſe of Cæcilianus Biſhop of Carthage. The epiſtle of the Synode of Alexandria to Pope Felix is counterfeit, and full of lyes.

Am. 360. Hilarius his epiſtle (the 88. amongſt Auguſtines) is not rightly aſcribed vnto Hilary of Poictou. Eraſmus. The epiſtle alſo vnto Apra his daughter, containeth nothing worthy of Hilarius, nor the hymne vnto her.

Am. 420. The hiſtorie of Ambroſe his life attributed vnto Paulinus is a fiction. Eraſmus in his preface vnto Ambroſe his workes.

EVODIVS.

Am. 420. Two bookes of the miracles of S. Steuen, extant in Auguſtines tenth tome, are both forged. Tritemius indeede ſaith, that he wrote a volume of the miracles done in Africke by the reliques of Steuen the Martyr, which reliques Oroſius the Prieſt carried thither: But theſe bookes now extant containe no ſuch matter, neither are they mentioned in any Author at all.

SOPHRONIVS.

That Sermon of the Aſſumption of Mary in Hierome, is none of his, but ſome triflers of A very late time, as is bewrayed by the very ſtyle it ſelfe. Beſides, Sophronius and Hierome liued both at one time, as appeareth by the booke of Eccleſiaſtike writers: but this Sermon talketh of Eutyches and Neſterius, both whoſe hereſies were broched after the death of Hierome.

MAXIMVS TAVRINENSIS.

The credit of this mans ſermons, is vncertaine, for many of them are aſcribed vnto diuers Authors, as theſe. Ann. 420.

His ſermon on the natiuitie of Chriſt, whoſe beginning is, In aduentu Dominico, is B amongſt Saint Auguſtines ſermons, 11. de Tempore.

His ſermon vpon the Epiphanie, beginning Licet fratres dilectiſſimi, &c. is the 37. de Tempore.

His ſermon of Chriſts accuſing before Pilate, beginning Mirum forſan videatur, is the 118. de Tempore.

His ſermon vpon the ſolemnity of Eaſter, is the 128. de Tempore.

His ſermon vpon Saint Steuens day, beginning, Lectio Actuum Apoſtolorum, is the 5. of Saint Auguſtins, de Sanctis, and hath another beginning out of Auguſtine, as they of Louain doe confeſſe.

C His ſermon vpon the natiuity of Peter and Paul the Apoſtles beginning, Glorioſiſſimos Chriſtianæ fidei, &c. is Auguſtines 27. de Sanctis.

His ſermon beginning Legimus in libro qui Actibus Apoſt. &c. is Ambroſe his 9. ſermon, and Auguſtines 25. de verbis Apoſtoli.

CYRILLVS ALEXANDRINVS.

Hath a commentarie vpon Iohn in 12. bookes. Ann. 430.

But the foure middle bookes of the twelue were loſt, and Iodocus Clictoueus hath added other foure in their places: viz. the 5, 6, 7, and 8.

D Sixteene bookes of Commentaries in Leuiticum.

His Epiſtles vnto Coloſyrius, ſuſpected. It is not extant amongſt his workes, the fragment is cited by others: and whether Cyrill of Alexandria wrote it or no, it is vncertaine.

EVCHERIVS.

His three bookes vpon Geneſis, and Commentarie vpon the Kings, is ſome vnknowne moderne Authors. Seneuſ. præfat. in Biblioth. and lib. 4. Ann. 430.

His homily of Maries Aſſumption, forged. For therein are theſe words: Worthily did our Fathers decreee, that this Goſpell ſhould be read vpon this ſolemne feaſt of the Virgin Marie: whereas this feaſt had not his inſtitution vntill 160. yeares after Eucherius, viz. vnder Mauritius an. 595. Looke Durandus his Enchiridion. Out of the credit of this Homily conſider the value of the reſt.

IOHN CASSIANVS. AND FAVSTVS RHEGIENSIS.

Ann. 435. & 490. Both theſe authors bookes Gelaſius in a Councell of 70. Biſhops did condemne. And with reaſon. For the firſt wrote againſt Proſper, and the ſecond aginſt Fulgentius, concerning the Predeſtination of the Saints, and the good of perſeuerance. Beſides, Fauſtus was condemned by Petrus Diaconus, lib. de Incar. Hormiſda Pope in his Epiſtle in 5. Tom. Biblioth. Ado in Chronicis: and Trithemius in Fauſto. And therefore Driedo and Ruardus Tapperus in approouing Fauſtus his writings doe ſhew themſelues halfe-Pelagians.

THEODORETVS.

Ann. 440. His 12. bookes, De curatione Græcarum affectionum, are ſuſpected, becauſe Nicephorus in his catalogue of Theodorets labours neuer nameth them. And theſe bookes make for the Inuocation of Saints, which Theodoret vpon the ſecond of the Coloſſians, doth condemne.

His Epiſtles alſo vnto Leo and Renatus are doubtfull.

His booke De Sanctis hath ſome things inſerted by others.

LEO.

Ann. 450. Theſe workes of his beare a counterfeit name.

A Sermon vpon All-Saints day, either wholly forged, or at leaſt in the title. For this Feaſt had his originall from Boniface the 4. about the yeare of our Lord 610. long after Leo. Petrus de Natalibus, lib. 10. cap. 1.

His 5. Sermon of Lent, is Auguſtines 63. De Tempore, and his eight Sermon is Auguſtines 33. de Tempore.

Some of his Epiſtles, as the 84. and the 92. are no where extant, but in Gratian, who (like a notorious falſifier) thruſt many workes vpon the Fathers which they neuer were authors of. And it is a ſtrange thing that Leo ſhould offer to ſend his imperious Edicts through Europe, Aſia, and Affricke, when as he was conſtrained of neceſſity to make a ſupplication vnto the Emperour for the calling a Councell within Italy. And hereby it is plaine, that his 84. and 46. Epiſtles are either counterfeit or at leaſt corrupted: becauſe he arrogateth the fulneſſe of power in forraine and far diſtant regions, and enioyneth Anatolius Biſhop of Conſtantinople to execute his commiſſion in the beginning of the 46. Epiſtle. But the Fathers of the ſixt generall Councell, expounding and confirming that which formerly had beene defined in the firſt Councell of Conſtantinople, and in the Councell of Chalcedon, ſay thus in the 36. chapter: Renewing the Decrees of the 150. Fathers that met in this royall citie of Conſtantinople, & of the 630. Biſhops which aſſembled at Chalcedon, we likewiſe determine, that the Sea of Conſtantinople haue equall priuiledges and honours with the Sea of Elder Rome, and in all Eccleſiaſticall matters be aduanced with as great honour and reuerence as it, beeing next vnto it.

The mutuall Epiſtles of Iohn Pope, and Iuſtinian, extant in the Code, lib. 1. tit. 4. de Summa Trinitate, are of doubtfull credit. For firſt, Iuſtinian ſaith there, that he hath laboured, that all the Prieſts of the Eaſterne Iuriſdiction ſhould bee obedient vnto the Church of Rome. But all hiſtories ſay, that this was Phocas his deede. Ado Viennenſis, chronic. ad annum 604. Iuo Carnotenſis in Chron. Platina in Bonifacio tertio. It is alſo aſcribed vnto Michael Paleologus. Beſides, in this Epiſtle the Pope is called the head of all Churches. But the contrarie is to be ſeene in Gregory the fourth his Regiſtrum, epiſt. 32. 34. 36. 38. Thirdly, this Epiſtle and the other of Iohn, are not extant in the old Manuſcripts: witneſſe Alciate, Parerg. lib. 5. cap. 23. Ann. 450.

Articus his Epiſtle in the end of the Councell of Chalcedon is a counterfeit. Looke Iunius his Animaduerſions in Bellarmine de Pontif. Roman. lib. 1. cap. 24. & lib. 2. cap. 25.

The Epiſtle of the ſaid Councell vnto Leo is ſuch another. Newly found (as is pretended) in the Library of the Friars preachers at Coleine.

GELASIVS.

The booke of the two Natures, Bellarmine denieth to be written by Gelaſius the Pope, De Pontif. lib. 4. cap. 10. And Melchior Canus, loc. comm. lib. 6. cap. 8. yet they hold it the worke either of Gennadius, or Gelaſius Biſhop of Cæſarea. Ann. 496.

VIGILIVS.

His epiſtle vnto Theodoſius, Anthemius, Seuerus, Eutychian heretikes, wherein he profeſſeth himſelfe to be of their opinion, is cenſured to be a counterfeit, by Baronius, tom. 7. vpon the yeare 538. and after a ſort by Bellarmine de Pontifice lib. 4. cap. 10. But the epiſtle is deſcribed by Liberatus, and is extant in the 22. chapter of his Breuiarie, and is alſo in the Chronicle of Victor. The ſame doth teſtifie that it was written after Vigilius his ordination, and therefore Bellarmine erreth in holding the contrarie.

ANDREAS CRETENSIS.

His Encomium de dormitione Sanctæ deiparæ, cap. 6. maketh mention of the feaſt of the Ann. 500.

Aſſumption of Marie, which was not inſtituted vntill the yeare of our Lord, 595. many yeares after this authors death: therefore theſe orations ſeeme forged.

An.520. THE COVNCELL OF AGATHA.

The canons of this Councell which are cited in the Decretals De conſecrat, diſt. 1. cap. Miſſas, are no where extant.

EVSEBIVS EMISSENVS.

The homilies vnder this name were not written by Euſebius of Emeſa in Greece, but by a certaine frenchman, as appeareth in the homilly vnto Blandina. Fulke. Bellarmine confeſſeth this alſo, De extrema vnctione lib. 1. cap. 5. Looke alſo in the ſame Bellarmine de ſacram. Euchariſt lib. 2. cap. 29.

An.570. The ſermon of the feaſt of the Natiuitie, beginning Natiuitas Domini, extant amongſt Fulgentius his workes, is aſcribed vnto Auguſtine, and is his 15. ſermon de Tempore. And in ſome Manuſcripts it is fathered vpon Seuerianus.

An.600. GREGORY THE GREAT.

The book of his Dialogues is doubted of: it is ſtuffed full of Italian wonders; and is not conſonant vnto the reſt of Gregories writings, neither in matter nor forme. Chemnitius.

His booke of the Sacraments, and of Anthemes, Pamelius ſet forth, but it is not mentioned in any author, but onely in Micrologus in the 24. chapter.

In the 2. Councell of Nice, an epiſtle is aſcribed vnto Gregorie the Great, concerning Image-worſhip, which was indeed the 3. Gregories: for Gregorie the Great prohibited adoration of Images.

An.670. CAESAR OF ARLES.

The homily of the wordes of the Apoſtle, Si cuius opus manſerit, &c. which is aſcribed vnto this author, is Auguſtines 41. de Sanctis

THE 6. SYNODE.

The canons of this Councell in Trullo, are condemned by the Papiſts as forged, but in the ſecond Nicene Councell they are commanded to be obſerued, and are by Gratian himſelfe approoued, diſt. 16. capite Sextum. Maſter Beza citeth an old gloſſe of Balſamons, taken out of a very old Manuſcript. The words in Engliſh are theſe, And this is alſo a generall Councell: For although the Biſhops of the Weſt, namely the Latines and Italians (to whome this Councell in ſome canons giues a ſore blow) doe vrge it very earneſtly that it is no vniuerſall Councell, nor that the Popes Delegate was there preſent: becauſe that there is another 6. Councell, held vnder Conſtantine ſurnamed long-bearded, (as it is reported) and that this was held long after by the command of Iuſtinian Rinothmetus. But I, not induring this, and looking nearer into the coherence of this matter, and into the canons orderly following, written in theſe words: The holy and generall Councell defineth thus and thus: letting paſſe the moderne canons, which are neither ſubſcribed by the Kings, nor the Fathers that held the Councell: taking vnder examination the moſt auncient copyes of theſe canons, I found amongſt the names ſubſcribed vnto this Councell in Trullo, that there were preſent in that Councell, both the Popes Deputies, one Baſilius, Primate of Cortina in Crete, and another who was Biſhop of Rauenna, and not onely them, but alſo other of the Popes legates beeing Biſhops of Theſſalonica, Sardinia, Heraclea in Thrace, and Corinth. Thus much Balſamon. And Bartholomew Caranza writeth thus. In the volume of the Councells printed at Coleyne, there are nine Canons aſcribed vnto the ſixt Synode, whereas we know that the 6. Synode which was called vnder Conſtantine, ſet forth no Canons, but afterward vnder Iuſtinian, there were 227. Fathers gathered together in the Emperours Pallace at Conſtantinople, and they ſet forth the 102. following Canons. This is affirmed by the Fathers of the 7. Councell held at Nicea vnder Conſtantine the ſonne of Leo, and Irene his mother in the 5. acte of the ſaid Councell, and more at large in the 6. act, tom. 1. In both places citing the 82. of theſe Canons. Beſides Nicholas the 1. maketh mention of theſe Canons, in his epiſtle vnto Michaell the Emperour, as alſo Anaſtaſius, Abbat, & librarie keeper vnto the ſea Apoſtolike, in the preface of the 8. Synode, ſaying: Seeing that the 6. Councell ſet forth no rule at all, but onely the Creede, it is certaine that the Canons by them alleadged, were ſet forth priuately and by themſelues, long after the 6. Councell. Moreouer, the Fathers of both Empires called together at the Councell of Florence, doe cite theſe 102. Canons in the 5. ſeſſion. Gratian alſo in the decree citeth ſome of theſe Canons, & aſcribes them vnto that 6. Councell. Thus much ſaith he. Diſt. 16. cap. Sextam. Adrian the Pope ſaith: I receiue the 6. holy Councell with all the Canons. And the ſame Adrian in his epiſtle vnto Taraſius hath theſe words: In the Diuine and lawfully publiſhed Canons of the 6. Councell, &c.

Surius graunteth that the 9. Canons fathered vpon the 6. Councell tom. 2. Concilior. are counterfeit.

BEDE. Ann.720.

His Martyrologium ſome thinke to be corrupted by ſundrie additions.

THE 2. COVNCELL OF NICE. Ann.784.

This Councell, beeing wholly for Image-worſhip, is both impious and idolatrous, and therefore rejected by the Biſhops of the Weſt, as witneſſeth Aucntine in his Annal. l. 4. The decrees of the Grecians (quoth he) for Image-worſhip, were aboliſhed by the Councell of Frankford. Ado alſo, in the ſixt age, Honedon, &c. Albert Pighius refuſeth to hold the Coleine edition of this Councell for true: there are therein many palpable falſhoods.

CAROLVS MAGNVS.

There is a booke of his againſt the Councell of Nice which the Papiſts doe ſay is forged, but without any ground at all. For Hincmar Archbiſhop of Rhemes in his booke againſt Hincmar Biſhop of Ianduna maketh mention of this booke, and ſaith hee read it when he was a boy in the Emperours Palace, and cited almoſt word by word the 28. chapter lib. 4. Beſides Auguſtine Steuchus, keeper of the Laterane librarie at Rome, doth teſtifie in publike writing, that the copie of this booke is there extant written in old Lumbard letters. Thus much out of the moſt learned Hoſpinian.

DAMASCENE.

His Sermon of our Ladies ſleepe, is called in queſtion: for it citeth Euthymius, who liued long after Damaſcene, vnder the Emperour Alexius.

The little booke of the bodie of Chriſt ſet forth vnder his name by Turrianus the Ieſuit, out of Cardinall Sfortia's librarie, is (to ſpeake in a word) worthy of no credit at all; for his writings by reaſon of their ſhamefull errours haue no great reſpect amongſt vs.

LVDOVICVS PIVS.

Ann. 820.

Charlemaines ſonne. His donation, wherein he giues Rome, and the Popes election vnto the Pope and citizens of Rome, diſt. 63. cap. Ego Ludouicus, &c. is a meere forgery. For Paſchalis beeing forced by the people to take the Popedome vpon him without the Emperours authoritie, cleareth himſelfe by his legate vnto the Emperour Ludouicus Pius, and layeth all the fault vpon the clergie and people. Th' Emperour was herewith ſatisfied, but he ſent a ſharpe and ſeuere command vnto the people to beware euer after to offer like iniurie vnto the Imperiall maieſtie. Sabellicus Ennead. 8. lib. 9. Platina in Paſchalis his life. Molineus the Ciuilian thinkes that ſome librariſt of the Popes tooke paines to force this Donation, and therefore that that iuſt ſuſpition may diſanull the credit thereof.

Beſides, the Canon Diſt. 63. cap. Ego Ludouicus is contrarie to the canon Diſt. 63. cap. Cum Hadrianum. For if Lodwick the firſt, haue giuen away his freedome of the Popes election, why ſhould Lodwick the 2. his nephew thinke himſelfe any way wronged therein?

Otho the Emperours oath.

In the decree, diſtinction 63. chap. vbi dominus, there is an oath ſet downe taken by this Emperours legates in his name, vnto Iohn then Pope. Now all this is as true as that the ſea burneth. For Otho, comming vnto Rome, as the Soueraigne Lord and commander of the Pope, depoſed Iohn from that dignitie for his villanies, all the whole citie, clergie and layitie approouing and applauding his iuſtice in this doing. VVitneſſe, Luitprandus, & Paulus Diaconus, hiſt. lib. 6. as alſo Theod. à Niem.

ANASTASIVS.

Ann. 880.

There is a booke of the liues of the Popes, vnder this mans name, wherein are diuers errors ſet down, not iuſtifiable by any auncient or graue authors teſtimonie in the world: many chronicle ſlippes, ſome contrarieties, and ſome impoſſibilities. Baronius thinkes it done by diuers, at leaſt by two ſeuerall authors: It is in ſome places altogether depraued by the forged additions and detractions of others, by reaſon of the extreame ignorance of former ages. The firſt part is fathered vpon Damaſus by Platina, Trithemius, & Onuphrius: It ſwarmeth with abſurd barbariſmes & ſolœciſmes. Thus much Albinus.

PASCHASIVS.

Ann. 880.

His booke of the bodie and blood of our Lord, is depraued by malignants. For the tale of Chriſts body viſibly appearing in forme of an Infant (in the 24. chapter, in Bibliotheca Patrum,) is foiſted in by ſome garrulous Monke. For it is oppoſite vnto all the reſt of Paſchaſius his doctrine of the manner of Chriſts preſence in the ſupper: and beſides differeth as much from his phraſe and ſtyle. This Hoſpinian hath noted in his 5. booke de Sacramentis.

SIMEON METAPHRASTES.

Ann. 950.

A triuiall Pedant in Conſtantinople, he writ the liues of the Saints, more truly to bee intituled, The Legends of lies.

ANSELME.

Ann. 1080.

His two bookes de Imagine mundi, are by ſome imputed vnto Honorius: Simler, in Bibliotheca. In his commentaries vpon Mathew, Bellarmine de Euchariſt. lib. quarto cap. 9. ſaith that the Greekes (or their fauorites) haue thruſt in a place, namely vpon the 27. chapter thereof, concerning the time of Chriſts firſt inſtitution of the Sacrament.

Bernards counterfeit, or at leaſt ſuſpected works are theſe following.

Of the ſolitarie life to the brethren de monte dei.

Meditations.
Of the inward houſe.
Of the order of our life.
The ladder of Paradiſe: reiected by the Louainiſts.
The formes of honeſt life.
The Monkes looking-glaſſe.
Diuers ſermons, which marke in the Antwerpe edition: Among theſe,
A Sermon of the Lords Supper.
A booke of Conſcience.
A Sermon of Andrew.
The deſcription of Clare-ville.
An Epiſtle of Bernard Syluester.
48. Sermons of Gilbertus vpon the Canticles: Bernard wrote but 86. and died: the reſt Gilbertus added after his death.
Of Maries lamentation.
Bernards doctrine.
An Homily of the diſciples that went to Emaus.
A booke of the loue of God.
Another of the nature and dignitie of diuine loue.
A booke of Chriſts Paſſion, vpon the text I am the true Vine.
An oration in meeter vnto the members of Chriſts body.
Another of the Paſſion.
A third vnto Chriſt and Marie.
A fourth of the Natiuity of Chriſt.
A forme of priuate confeſſion.
The manner to liue well, vnto his ſiſter.
A ſecond book of conſcience.
A deprecation vnto Marie.
Of mans miſeries.
Sermons of the ſpirituall conflict.
O 12. degrees of humility.
A Sermon vpon the ſunday next after twelfth day.
Fifteene ſermons of the Supper. Peter Martyr ſaw them vnder another mans name.
An homily vpon the text: The kingdome of heauen is like vnto a merchant.
An epiſtle vnto Matthew Biſhop of Alba.
A meditation vpon Salue Regina.
A Sermon in aduent of the 11. Burthens.
The life of S. Malachi.

IEFFREY ARTHVR of Monmouth.

His foure bookes of the Brittiſh affaires, are thus cenſured by William of Newberie: There is (ſaith hee) a certaine writer of late come forth, telling many ridiculous tales of the Brittaines, extolling them (with impudent foolerie) farre aboue the Macedons and Romanes: hee is called Ieffery, ſurnamed Arthur, becauſe the olde Brittiſh tales of Arthur, are by him augmented, and with a little rhetoricall paint, publiſhed as hiſtories of authentical credit. Nay beſides and aboue this, hee hath publiſhed for moſt impeachable and impregnable verities and prophecies, certaine moſt deceitfull diuinations of one Merlin, to which he hath alſo added much of his own ſurmiſings, in his tranſlation of them into Latine. Againe, how egregiouſly impudent is he in farcing in fictions into his book which he calleth the Brittiſh hiſtory, no man that readeth it, (vnleſſe wholly ignorant of antiquity) can chooſe but perceiue. For hee that knoweth not the truth of things, quickly giues way to the current of illuding fables and fabulous illuſions. I burſt to recapitulate his fictions of the Brittaines geſts before Ceſars conqueſt: ſtreames flowing either from his owne inuention, or els deriued by him (as through his leaden conduit) from other mens braines into his booke, as immoueable verities. Thus much Newbery, ſomewhat ſharply, conſidering his owne workes are ſubiect to the ſame cenſure that he ſo roughly thundereth vpon Arthurs: for he himſelf oftentimes leaues the true tract of hiſtories, to fetch in trifling fables into the body of his hiſtorie of the affaires of England.

FRANCIS. An. 1200

That Epiſtle of his vnto all his brethren is a forgery. Bellarm. de Miſſa lib. 2. cap. 10.

BONAVENTVRE. An. 1260

The Pſalter of the B. Virgin is falſely fathered vpon him, for hee in his commentary vpon Lumbard, ſaith, that We muſt beware leſt in honouring the Mother, wee diminiſh the honour of the Sonne.

IACOBVS DE VORAGINE.

Hee was Biſhop of Genua: his booke called the golden Legend, hath nothing in it but whole myriades of moſt ſhamefull and ridiculous lies.

NICEPHORVS CALLISTVS. An. 1300

An author fraught with fables, hee telleth a tale of Chriſts Image ſent of him vnto Abagarus: But Euſebius found no ſuch thing in the treaſuries of Edeſſa: libro primo hiſt. in fine.

All ancient authors, vncited of ſome ſucceeding writers, and vnauthorized by ſome good author, are either really forged, or by the Church vnallowed: and therefore of more doubtfull credit: and ſuch is Ludgarus of S. Suiberts miracles, &c.

Alſo all bookes that haue their originall frõ ſome Romiſh librariſt. 2. that are extant onely in the Vatican, or Laterane librarie. 3. or onely in the Monkes cloyſters, all ſuch wee iuſtly ſuſpect.

Whatſoeuer any olde writer hath vnfitly ſet downe, concerning any matter of faith, were it written before any hereſie was riſen vp about that matter, it is to bee firly and fauourably expounded: but if it were written after any ſuch hereſie, it is flatly and fairely to be reiected.

III. The cauſes of the Corruption of the Apoſtolike Religion.

1 THe doctrine of religion, is by many, wrung, and wreſted vnto the opinions of the Heathen. So doth Caſſander teſtifie in the appendix of the defence of his booke de officio pij viri. We cannot (quoth he) denie, but that the auncient Chriſtians (with a wonderfull conſent) haue affirmed that of the lawes of their religion, which both the Romans, and other nations in elder times haue affirmed of their lawes: viz. that they were partly written, and partly vnwritten, ἐγγράφως καὶ ἀγράφως: The Greeks thēſelues doe vſe theſe words: euen Clem. Alexand. Baſil, Epiphan. & Dionyſius. And the Fathers (leſt the doctrine of the Church ſhould ſeem too harſh, doe twine it towards naturall reaſon, and phyſicall arguments: and in the queſtions of ſinne, free-will, and faith, they argue more like Philoſophers then Diuines: as for example, Athanaſius in his booke againſt idols, and Clement in the 2. of his Stromata.

The counſels of ſupererogation are nothing elſe, but the Philoſophers καθῆκον, or decorum. The doctrine of Purgatorie came into the Church out of the heathen writers: for the Philoſophers and the Poets were the firſt that euer wrote of the paines of Purgatorie after death: as Plato in his 10. booke, de Republica: Virgil in his 6. of Æneads, and Ouid in his Metamorphoſis, l. 15. The Platoniſts (ſaith Auguſtine de ciuit. Dei, lib. 21. cap. 13.) although they will haue no ſinne vnpuniſhed, yet all thoſe puniſhments they will haue to tend vnto reformation, whether they bee inflicted by law diuine, or humane, in this life, or after death.

2 The rites and cuſtomes of the heathen (with ſome litle change) haue beene brought into the forme of Gods worſhip, and that by Chriſtians. It was a cuſtome with many, to banquet vpon Martyrs ſolemnities, and this was fetched from an olde ethnicke cuſtome. Auguſt. confeſſion. l. 6. c. 2. Gregory Thaumaturge changed the Gentiles ſolemnities into the Martyrs feaſts: Gregory Niſſenus in his life, ſaith thus: Hee ſuffered the celebrations of the Martyrs memories, leſt the vnskilfull multitude ſhould (through deſire of vaine delight) perſiſt in the adoration of their gorgeous idolatry. Theod. de Euangel. verit. cognit. l. 8. ſaith, for the Pandia, Diaſia, & Dionyſia, that is, the feaſts of Iupiter, and Bacchus, the people doe now make their banquets to ſolemnize the memories of Peter, Paul, Thomas, Sergius, Marcellus, Leontius, Antonine, Maurice, and other ſuch holy Martyrs. Painting and Imagerie was an heathenish cuſtome. Euſeb. l. 7. c. 17. hiſt. eccl. as alſo to burne incenſe, and light tapers vnto the images. Cicero offic. lib. 3. yearely vigils were vſed of the Gentiles before they came into the Church, as appeareth by Suetonius in Veſpatians life, c. 7. as alſo ſprinkling of holy water: Iuvenal. Satyr. 6. which Sozomene expreſly cals a heatheniſh cuſtome, l. 6. c. 6. Alſo lighting of candles by day light: Seneca, l. 4. epiſt. 15. alſo ſhauing of crownes: Apuleius de aureo aſino. l. 11. The prieſts of Iſys (quoth he) had their haire ſhauen, and their crownes very ſmooth. Ruffinus hiſt. l. 2. c. 29. ſaith, that for Serapis his breſt-plate, euery one painted the croſſe vpon the poſts, entries, windowes, walls, and pillars: and that Conſtantine vſed this ſigne of the croſſe in his enſigne, Sozomene teſtifieth, l. 1. c. 5.

3 The Church hath reſumed the aboliſhed cuſtomes and ceremonies of the Iewes: as the making of their holy veſtiments according vnto the Prieſts of Moſes law. Alcuinus de offic. diuin. alſo Amalarius de offic. Eccl. l. 2. c. 22. Gratian. de conſecr. Diſt. 1. ſaith, that the conſecrations, and holy vnctions are to be made and performed according vnto the preſcripts of Moſes, and the imitation of the Leuites. The licence & too free liberty which the Church vſed in theſe three things, hath beene the cauſe of all theſe corrupted feſters now predominant therein, and ranckling the chiefe and choiſe parts thereof.

The

The Demonſtration of the Probleme, or Poſition.

THe Demonſtration of the Probleme ſhall be ſhewed in theſe poſitions following, which I haue compoſed of the chiefeſt places of diuinitie, which are now in controuerſie. And the ſcope of all of them is this, to ſhew and prooue, that the Religion at Rome now profeſſed, is falſly called Catholike. And the ſumme of my Demonſtration tends to ſhew, that the chiefe and proper heads thereof, either 1. were not receiued from the times of Chriſt, or his Apoſtles; or 2. if they were receiued thence, yet not as Articles of faith, but only as Opinions and probable Coniectures; or 3. that in all places the Pureſt Churches neuer held them in the ſame ſenſe that the Papiſts held them in the Councell of Trent.

The places and heads of the controuerſies are theſe:

Holy Scripture.	508
Traditions,	511
The Mediatour.	513
The truth of the Humanity.	ibid.
Deſcenſion into hell.	514
Free will.	516
The remainders of Concupiſcence.	519
Veniall ſinne.	520
Images.	521
Reliques.	ibid.
Signe of the Croſſe.	523
Churches for prayer.	525
Canonicall houres.	ibid.
Interceſſion, Inuocation, and Worſhippe of Saints.	ibid.
Prayers for the dead.	530
Iuſtification.	533
Merit.	535
Faith.	536
Fulfilling of the law.	540
Supererogation.	ibid.
Pilgrimage.	541
Faſting, Stations, Proceſſion.	542
Sacraments.	544
Worke wrought.	546
The Miniſters intention.	ibid.
The Character or ſeale.	547
Baptiſme.	ibid.
Sacrifice of the Maſſe.	550
Communion vnder one kinde.	554
Priuate Maſſe.	555
B Mixture of wine and water.	556
Keeping of the Sacrament.	ibid.
Vſe of the latine tongue in the ſeruice.	557
Tranſubſtantiation or reall preſence.	558
Adoration, & eleuation of the Sacrament.	564
Sacred rites pertaining to the Maſſe.	ibid.
Penance ſacramentall.	565
Satiſfaction.	ibid.
Purgatorie.	568
Sacramentall confeſſion.	570
C Confirmation.	572
Chriſme.	ibid.
Marriage.	574
Prieſts marriage.	575
Single life.	ibid.
Extreame vnction.	580
The primacie of the Biſhop of Rome.	ibid.
Buls or Indulgences.	589
Of the power of Kings.	590
Cardinals.	593
Monkes.	594
D Marie the Virgin.	596
Feaſt daies.	597
The Church.	598
Succeſſion.	ibid.
Antiquitie.	ibid.
Councels.	599
Benedictions.	600
The Clergy and laytie.	601
Additions of ſome later Papiſticall opinions.	602

Holy Scripture.

1 THE auncient and Chriſtian Church hath acknowledged the Iewes Canon of the olde Teſtament, to be true and perfect, excluding wholly from thence the bookes of Tobie, Iudith, Wiſedome, Eccleſiaſticus, and the Macchabees. Teſtimonies. Beſides theſe (ſaith Athanaſius, in Synopſi,) there are other bookes of the olde Teſtament which are not canonicall, but only read by the Catechumeniſts, as the bookes of Wiſedome, Eccleſiaſticus, &c. Of theſe (ſaith Cyril of Hieruſalem, Catech. 4.) reade the 22. bookes, but meddle not with the Apocrypha; meditate diligently vpon thoſe Scriptures which the Church doth confidently reade, and vſe no other. The Apoſtles and Biſhops at the firſt ſowing of the word, who left vs theſe bookes, were farre wiſer, far holier then thou art: therefore ſince thou art the ſonne of the Church, do not break the bounds they haue ſet thee in: and as I ſaid before, ſtudy the 22. bookes of the old Teſtament. Theſe are they (ſaith Cyprian, or Ruffinus, in exp. Symb. of the Iewes Canon) which the Fathers haue put into the Canon, by which we muſt lay the foundation of our faith: yet note this, that there are other bookes alſo called by the Fathers, Eccleſiaſticall, not Canonicall, and ſuch is the Wiſedome of Salomon, and another of Ieſus Syrach—, as alſo the bookes of Toby, Iudith, & the Macchabees. In the new Teſtament, the booke called Paſtor—, all which bookes they would haue read in the Church, but not alleadged for confirming any point of faith. Epiphan. l. de pond. & menſ. after he hath reckoned vp the Canon, thus cenſureth the books of the Wiſdome of Salom. and Eccleſ. They are fit and profitable, but not reckoned amongſt thoſe which are approoued by the Church: and therfore they were neither laid vp in Aaron, nor in the Arke of the Teſtament. The ſame words are in Damaſcen: and Nazianzen doth certenly determine of the Canon in his verſes of the true bookes of holy Scriptures. In Engliſh, thus:

In our old Teſtament two and twenty bookes are ſet,
According to the number of the Hebrew Alphabet.

Looke alſo in the ſame Nazian. his Iambicke poeſie vnto Seleucus, of good education. Hierome ſaith, in prolog. Galeato in lib. Reg. The Wiſedome of Salomon, Ieſus Syrach, Iudith, and Toby, are not in the Canon. And in another place, Præf. in l. Salo. As the Church readeth the bookes of Iudith, Toby, and Macchabees, and yet allowes them not for canonical: ſo alſo we reade theſe two (the books of Wiſedome, and Syrach) for the edifying of the people, but not for confirmation of any eccleſiaſticall opinion. And in a third place, Præf. in Eſdram & Nehem. ad Domnionem & Rogatianum: what books ſoeuer are not from the Hebrewes, & among the 24. old ones, are wholly to be reiected. This opinion of Hierome doth Lyra, Prolog. in Apocryph. Dionyſius Carthuſianus & Hugo Cardinalis, Prol. in Ioſuam, follow. Let vs take a teſtimony (ſaith Gregory, in Iob, l. 19. c. 17.) out of the Macchabees, which although they bee not Canonicall, yet were ſet forth to edifie the Church. Toby, Iudith, and the Macchabees (ſaith Radulphus, in Leuit. l. 14. c. 1.) are not of any authority, though they be read for the inſtruction of the Church. After the Authentike bookes (ſaith Petrus Cluniacenſis, epiſt. 2. l. 1.) there remaines other ſixe to be ſpoken of, viz. Wiſedome, Syrach, Toby, Iudith, & the two of the Macchabees: and theſe though they could not attaine to the credit & authority of the former, yet for their commodiouſnes & good worth, they haue deſerued admittance of the Church. Caietane in the end of Heſter, ſaith, that ſeauen chapters of Heſter, the bookes of Toby, Iudith, Wiſdome, Eccleſiaſticus, and the Macchabees, are all Apocrypha. Charles Sigon. Com. in Seuer. Sulpitium, denies the Macchabees to be canonicall, becauſe of the diſſonance of the ſtyle from the reſt, and ſeemes to preferre the hiſtory of Iuſtine before it. Hierome ſaith, in præfat. in Iudith: that the Nicene Councell reckoned Iudith amongſt the holy Scriptures: therefore that Synod held all the reſt of the Apocrypha as vnworthy of allowāce in the Church; yet is not that certaine which Hierome affirmeth of this book: for his words are, we reade the Councell to haue reckoned it: but Athanaſius, preſent at that Councell, vtterly refuſeth it. Alſo the Councell of Laodicea, in ca. 59. decreed, that no part of the old Teſtamēt ſhould bee read in the Church, but onely the Hebrewes canonicall Scriptures. Indeed the 3. Councell of Carthage, in the 47. Canon, nūbreth all the aforenamed books amongſt the holy Scriptures: but I ſay that the Catalogue of the bookes of that Councell, is either counterfeit, or iuſtly doubted of: for 1. this Canon which is reckoned for the 47. of this Councell, is in ſome bookes the 24. Canon of another Councell vnder Boniface, as Surius will teſtifie. 2. In this Canon are allowed 5. books of Salomon: whereas there are not ſo many. 3. The Canons in Trullo appproue both the Laodicean Councell, & this, which ſhould not haue bin done if they had determined iuſt contraries, the one making that apocryphall, which the other makes Canonicall. 4. I think the Councell of Carthage held all bookes Canonicall, which the ancient Fathers admitted to be read in the Church.

2. The booke of Baruch hath bin held apocryphal, both by the Fathers & Coūcels, euē to the yeare 1439. at which time the Florentine Coūcell canonized it: and yet did Driedo denie it to be Canonicall after this. De dogm. Eccleſiæ, lib. 1. cap. 4.

3 Heſters laſt 7. chapters, Daniels hymne of the children, the hiſtory of Suſanna, Bell, and the Dragon, are all reiected as counterfeits by the Fathers. Hierome, præf. in Daniel, cals the

hiſtory

hiſtorie of Suſanna, Bel, and the Dragon fables, and ſaith they beare not the authoritie of holy Scripture. And ſo he ſaith, Euſeb. Apollinaris, and Methodius doe all iudge.

The author of the booke de mirabilibus ſcripturæ, in S. Auguſt. l.2.c.32. ſaith, that concerning the other denne of Lyons, and the tranſportation of Abacuk, in the tale of Bel & the Dragon, nothing is put in this ranke, becauſe they are not contained in the diuine Scriptures. And Sixtus Senenſis, Biblioth. lib. 1.cap.8. reiecteth the 7. chapters of Heſter, & the hiſtory of Suſanna, as additions.

4 The word Canonicall is vſed by the Fathers in two ſenſes: viz. abſolutely, and reſpectiuely, ἁπλῶς, & κατά τι. That which is abſolutely Canonicall, is the perfect rule both of faith and diſcipline. Reſpectiuely Canonicall is that worke, wherein are contained ſome ſentences taken out of the writings abſolutely Canonical, and ſome hiſtories concerning the Church of God, and are therefore allowed to be read in the Church at publike meetings. And in this ſenſe it is oppoſite only to prophane and heatheniſh workes. In this ſenſe are theſe Apocryphall bookes called Canonicall, and diuine, or, of diuine authority, by Auguſt. De ciu. dei lib.18.c.36. cum c.23.l.2.contra 2. epiſt. Gaudentij: and Hierome, Pref. in Machab. And in this ſenſe doth the Councell of Carthage in the afore-cited canon acknowledge all thoſe for Canonicall Scriptures, which (ſaith it) wee haue receiued from the Fathers, to bee read in the Church. And indeede, when as the Fathers doe cite theſe Apocrypha, they do not alleadge them as properly Canonicall, but onely as hiſtoricall. Ambroſe lib. de bono mortis: & lib. 2. in Lucam, citeth the 4. booke of Ezra, yet who is he that holdeth this booke for Canonicall? So is the third of Ezra, and Hermes his booke called Paſtor, oftentimes alleadged by the ancient writers, and yet are Apocrypha. By the Canons of the Apoſtles, Can. 84. the 3. book of the Machabees is Canonicall, but not by the Councell of Trent. Bellarmine ſaith, that the decrees of the Popes are by Gratian called holy Scriptures, but καταχρηστικῶς, that is, abuſiuely, to diſtinguiſh them from prophane writings: and Canonicall to diſtinguiſh them from the Fathers holy Workes, which are neither rules for our faith, nor haue power to bind vs to beleeue them. For althogh (quoth he) the Canons of Popes and Councels are diſtinguiſhed from, & ſet after the holy Scriptures, yet in their kinde they both are, & may be called holy and Canonicall writings,—as Innocentius cap. cum Martha. extra. de celebra. Miſſarum, calleth that ſentence of Auguſtines holy Scripture, (he iniureth a martyr that prayeth for a martyr.) And in this ſenſe doth Damaſus call the Canons of the Apoſtles Canonicall.

5 The auncient Fathers, and the moſt learned of their ſucceſſours, do holde the Hebrew and Greeke text of the holy Scriptures to be vncorrupted and pure. This not one denies. Hier. In c.6. Iſa. derideth them that ſay that the Hebrew bookes are corrupted. The ſame Father will haue more credit giuen to the originall, then to the tranſlator, Ep. ad Lucin. de opt. gen. interp. In c.3. Mal. epiſt. ad Auguſt. 89. Pref. in 4. Euan. Auguſtine alſo, De ciui. Dei. l.15.c.13. ſaith, That when a diuerſity is found in the bookes; truſt that language from whence it is knowne, to haue beene firſt tranſlated. So ſaith Ludouicus Viues vpon this place of Auguſtine: And Auguſtine himſelfe in diuers other places, viz. Ep.108. Tract.3. in Ioan. de doctr. Chriſt. l.2.c.11. Arias Montanus ſaith plainly, that the Iewes neuer corrupted the Hebrew booke which wee now haue; and if there were any change, yet was there not one word, one letter, one title which was not kept in the treaſury called Mazzoreth, and therefore he calleth that Mazzoreth a faithfull cuſtody.

6 The Fathers before Gregory the firſt, neuer vſed the vulgar tranſlation, which is now ſaid to be of Hieromes correction, by Damaſus his commaund.

1. Tertullian againſt Marcion vſed it not.

Onera veſtra inuicem ſuſtinete, lib.5.cap.4.
Irritam faciam, l.5.c.5.
Non me pudet euangelij, l.5.c.13.

The vulgar Edition.

Alter alterius onera portate. Gal.6.
Prudentiam prudentium reprobabo. 1.Cor.1.
Non erubeſco euangelium. Rom.1.

2. Cyprian vſed it not.

Non ſum idoneus.— Ad Quirinum, l.1.num.12.
Quia proſpexit redemptionem populo ſuo, l.2. num.7.
In principio erat ſermo, l.2.num.6.
An numquid opulentiam bonitatis eius & ſuſtinentiam & patientiam contemnis, l.3.n.35.

Vulgar Edit.

Non ſum dignus calceamenta portare. Mat.3.
Quia viſitauit & fecit redemptionẽ plebis ſuæ. Luk.1.
In principio erat verbum. Ioh.1.
An diuitias bonitatis eius & patientiæ & longanimitatem contemnis. Rom.2.

3. The Romane Clergie that liued in Cyprians age, vſed it not.

Donaui tibi omne debitũ quia rogaſti me. ep.31.
—Prædicatur in vniuerſo mundo.

Vulgar Edit.

Omne debitũ dimiſi tibi, quoniam rogaſti me. Mat.18.
Fides veſtra annunciatur in vniuerſo mundo. Rom.1.

4. Arnobius vſed it not.

Pueri nouiſſima hora. Comment. in Pſal.67.
—Vt ventilet, Pſ.106.
—Ego autem intercessi.

Vulgar Edit.

Filioli nouiſſima hora eſt. 1.Ioh.2.
Satanas expetiuit vos vt cribaret. Luk.22.
Ego autem rogaui.—

5. Hilarie vſed it not.

Iudicabitur de vobis, in Mat.
—Vento moueri, ibid.

Gladium exerens, ſeruo principis ſacerdotum aurem abſcidit. A

Vulgar Edit.

Mat.7. Quo iudicio iudicaueritis, iudicabimini.
Mat.12. Arundinem vento quaſſatam.
Mat.26. Extendens manum exemit gladium ſuum, & percutiens ſeruum principis ſacerdotum amputauit auriculam eius.

6. Ambroſe vſed it not.

Inter mulieres. Comment. in Luk. 8.
——Contingat mihi.——ibid.
——quid veſtiamini. ibid.

Vulgar Edit.

Luk.1. ——in mulieribus
——fiat mihi ——
Luk.12. ——quid induamini. ——

7. Auguſtine vſed it not.

De ſaliua ſua lutum fecit & inunxit oculos caeci. Tractat. in Iohan. 44.
Poſt panem, aut poſt panem intinctum. tract. in Iohan. 61.
Et teſtes ſumus, & annuntiamus vobis vitam aeternam quae erat apud patrem, & manifeſta eſt in nobis. Tract. 10. in 1. Epiſt. Iohan.
Omnis ſpiritus qui non confitetur Ieſum in carne veniſſe. tract. 6. in 1. Epiſt. Iohan.
Dilectio ex Deo eſt. ibid. tract. 7.

Vulgar Edit.

Ioh.9. Fecit lutum ex ſputo & liniuit lutum ſuper oculos eius.
Ioh 13. ——Poſt buccellam.——
1.Ioh.1. Et teſtamur & annunciamus vobis vitam aeternam, quae erat apud patrem, & manifeſtata eſt vobis. C
1 Ioh.4. Omnis ſpiritus qui ſoluit Ieſum.—— ibidem. Charitas ex Deo eſt.

8. Optatus vſed it not.

Portae inferorum non vincent.
——Conuerſi elidant vos.
Dicebat Ieſus hanc ſimilitudinem propter eos qui ſe ſanctos putant, & contemnunt caeteros.

Vulgar Edit.

Math.16. Portae inferi non praeualebunt.
Cap.7. ——Conuerſi dirumpant vos.
Luk.18. Dixit autem & ad quoſdam qui in ſe confidebant tanquam iuſti, & aſpernabantur caeteros.

9. Fulgentius vſed it not.

——*Qui conſtitutus, ad Thraſimundum l.*1.*c.*5. D
——Conformatus mihi. [illegible]

Vulgar Edit.

1.John 4. Omnis ſpiritus qui ſoluit Ieſum.——
Philip.3. ——Configuratus morti.——

10. Primaſius vſed it not.

Oleo laetitiae prae conſortibus.
Quibus ad horam ceſſimus.

Vulgar Edit.

Hebr.1. Oleo exultationis prae participibus.
Galat.3. ——Neque ad horam.——

11. Proſper vſed it not.

Vt habeat non renunciare his, de promiſſ. part. 3.
——In eremo parate viam.
Cum impleuerit curſum, Iohannes dixit, quem me ſuſpicamini eſſe, non ſum ego, ſed ecce venit poſt me de cuius pedibus non ſum dignus ſoluere corrigiam calceamentorum eius.

Vulgar Edit.

John 1. Vt reſponſum demus.
——In deſerto.——
Acts 13. Cum impleret autem Iohannes curſum ſuum dicebat, quem me arbitramini eſſe non ſum ego, ecce venit poſt me, cuius non ſum dignus calceamenta pedum ſoluere.

12. Leo vſed it not.

Beati pauperes: beati qui lugent. Feſt. om. ſanct.
——Hereditate poſſidebunt terram.

Vulgar Edit.

Math.5. Beati pauperes: beati mites, quoniam ipſi poſſidebunt terram.

7 Gregory often followeth that tranſlation, euen the errours of them that copied it out; as Luk. 15. euertit domum, for euerrit: hom. 34. in Euangel. Therfore the Latine tranſlation fathered on Hierom, had not then got footing, neither was it preferred in the Romane Church before other, till about the time of Gregory the Great, who in that reſpect in the 20. booke of his Morals, cap. 23. tearmes that tranſlation new. Neither doth he in all things follow it; for in his 1. book of Morals, c. 19. he readeth not Ipſa conteret, but, Ipſa obſeruabit. And after Gregories time, that alone was not receiued: for Bede, Gildas, and others, followed other tranſlations now and then. And Bernard, Serm. in Cant. 24. readeth in Gen. 4. Si recte offeras, & non recte diuidis, according to the Septuagints. It was not therfore only & wholy approoued of, for the ſpace of a 1000 yeres after Chriſt; neither can it bee ſhewed by any decree of the Church, that the latine edition ſhould bee held for authenticall, before the late Councell of Trent.

8 It is probable that the vulgar tranſlation which is made authentical among the Catholikes, is not that which Hierom at Damaſus his appointment did correct, for there are many errours in this, which Hierome did correct. The name of Eſay in 1. cap. v. 2. of Marks Goſpel, in the vulgar edition Hierome thinks was added by ſome copyers negligence, in Comment in Mat. c. 3. And vpon the 6. chapt. of Mat. he correcteth the word [exterminant] which the vulgar tranſlation keepeth. And whereas the vulgar edition hath, Mat. 16. 23. vade poſt me, Sathan, he ſaith, vade retrò me. Againe, in the epiſt. to the Galat. c. 1. they ſay, Expugnabam illam, but he ſaith, Comment. ibid. Deuaſtabam illam: and in the ſame chapter they ſay acquiaui, he Contuli. And vpon the 3. chapter: It is written (quoth he) in certaine bookes, Quis vos faſcinauit non credere veritati? but becauſe this is not in Origens copy, we let it paſſe. In the 5. chap. the vulgar ſaith, Euacuati eſtis à Chriſto: he ſaith, à Chriſti opere ceſſaſtis, iuſtly reprehending the former interpretation; yea Auguſtin himſelfe, though he ſo greatly commend the tranſlation of Hier. in his 10. epiſt. yet in more thē 500 places he doth not follow this editiō.

9 What the Fathers haue ſpoken concerning the Churches allowance of the Scriptures, tures, doth not belong to the Church that now is. That place of Auguſtine, Contra epiſt. fund. cap. 5. [I would not beleeue the Goſpell vnleſſe the authoritie of the Catholike Church mooued me] Gerſon of Paris, Lib. de vita ſpirituali lection. 1. Carol. holdeth not to be meant of any church, but onely of the primitiue Church which ſaw Chriſts perſon, or his Apoſtles, & could beare record of their doctrine and writings. That which is ſpoken of the Churches approbation of the Scriptures, ſaith Durandus lib. 3. diſt. 24. queſt. 1. is meant of that Church onely which was in the Apoſtles time, who were full of the holy Ghoſt, and beſides ſaw Chriſts miracles, and heard his doctrine: and therefore were conuenient witneſſes of all things that he either did or ſaid——ſo that the Goſpels which that Church then receiued, cannot be by vs now refuſed, becauſe of the diuerſitie of the cauſe: whoſoeuer thinketh otherwiſe, is an heretike, of what ſtate, or condition ſoeuer he be.

VVhat ground had Cuſanus then for his aſſertion to the Bohemians, Epiſt. 2. viz. that the authoritie of the Scriptures doe depend vpon the approbation of the preſent Church, and they haue no more power to looſe and binde, then the church will giue them. And that ſpeech of Bellarmine is a foundation of Atheiſme, If quoth he De effectu ſacram. lib. 2. cap. 25. we ſhould take away the authoritie and credite of this preſent Church and Councell of Trent, the Decrees of all other Councells, nay euen Chriſtian faith it ſelfe might be called in queſtion. Againe, the credite and certaintie of all opinions and doctrines dependeth vpon the authoritie of the preſent church.

10 The Canonicall ſcripture is a principle of Diuinitie deſeruing credit of it ſelfe, and therefore not manifeſtable by any other exteriour principle. The principles of Diuinitie (ſaith Petrus de Alliaco in lib. 1. Sentent. queſt. 1. art. 3.) are the very truthes of the Sacred Canon. Moreouer the finall reſolution of Theologicall diſcourſe appertaineth vnto them, and from them the concluſions of all Diuinitie are drawne. Gods wil (ſaith Ioachim Abbas in Apocalypſ.) is, that we acknowledging the letter of both the Teſtaments, preſume not vpon any other relation or opinion, further then the written word.

11 The holy Scriptures in all ſuch things as are neceſſarie for our ſaluation doe manifeſtly, truly, and infallibly explane and open themſelues, ſeruing for both gloſſe and text. The regular and diligent interpretation according to Scripture, (ſaith Ireneus lib. 4. cap. 63.) is without danger of errour, or blaſphemie. Our meanings and allegations (ſaith Origen in Ierem. hom. 1.) without theſe witneſſes, the ſcriptures, haue not any credit. And whereas it is ſaid, in the mouth of two or three witneſſes ſhall euery word ſtand, this rather belongs to the proofe of the interpretour, then to any certaine number of men whatſoeuer: That I may confirme the word of my vnderſtanding, taking the two witneſſes, to be meant of the Old and New Teſtamẽt, & the three to be ſpoken of the Goſpell, the Prophet, and the Apoſtle; for ſo ſhal euery word be confirmed. The Scripture expounds it ſelfe (ſaith Chryſoſtome Hom. 13. in Geneſin, and ſuffers not the hearer thereof to erre. So ſaith Auguſtine De doctr. Chriſt. lib. 2. cap. 6. and 26, 27, 28. and ſo Clement alſo, for you ought not (ſaith he, Epiſt. 5. and he is cited diſt. 37. c. Relatum.) to ſeeke out any ſtrange and impertinent ſenſe, nor confirme it by confuſed allegations of the ſcriptures, but fetch the trueſt ſenſe indeede out of the ſcriptures themſelues.

12 The infallible and determining iudgement of al controuerſies of faith is in Chriſts owne perſon, or in the holy Ghoſt ſo farre as he ſpeaketh vnto vs in the Scriptures canonicall. He, ſaith Tertullian De praeſcript, ſitteth at Gods right hand, but he hath ſent his deputie namely, the power of the holy Spirit to worke vpon the hearts of the faithfull.

We muſt haue iudges ſought out, ſaith Optatus contra Parmenian. but ſince earth affords no Iudgement of this matter, wee muſt ſeeke a iudge in heauen. But what neede wee knock at heauen, ſince we haue here a teſtament in the Goſpell? An earthly father, feeling himſelfe neere death, and fearing the contention of his ſonnes after his death, calling ſome witneſſes, hee tranſpoſes his will out of his dying breſt into laſting parchment. If ſo be now Contention doe ariſe amongſt the brethren, doe they runne to their fathers graue? no, but ſeeke out his will and teſtament, and hee who ſleepeth in his tombe ſpeaketh liuely out of the ſilent parchment. He whoſe this teſtament is, is in heauen; therefore his will is to be ſearched out in the Goſpell as his teſtament. This Controuerſie, ſaith S. Auguſtine De nupt. & concupiſ. lib. 2. cap 33. requires a Iudge: then let Chriſt be the iudge, let himſelfe ſpeake who it was that his death did profit:——And with him let the Apoſtle alſo iudge, becauſe in the Apoſtle Chriſt ſpeaketh. And De grat. & lib. arbitr. cap. 18. let the Apoſtle Iohn ſit as Iudge betweene vs.

Tradition.

1 THe Fathers by the name of Tradition doe ſometimes vnderſtand the doctrine receiued in the primitiue Church, taught by the Apoſtles, and recorded in their writings. If it be taught in the Goſpell, ſaith Cyprian Epiſt. 74. ad Pompeianum, or contained in the Epiſtles or Acts of the Apoſtles, that conuerts from hereſies ſhould not bee baptiſed, but onely haue impoſition of hands, in ſigne of repentance: let this holy and Diuine tradition bee obſerued.

2 They doe ſometimes call that an vnwritten tradition which is contained only in the ſenſe of the Scriptures, and not in the words,and to this manner of ſpeaking are referred all things gathered by analogy or proportion. Auguſtine ſaith De Geneſi ad liter.l.10. cap. 23. that Baptiſme of children is an Apoſtolike tradition, yet De bapt. contra Donatiſt. cap.24. he prooues it out of the ſcriptures. So holdeth he that deniall of rebaptization vnto heretikes is a tradition vnwritten according to the words, but written in ſenſe and foundation. VVherfore one and the ſame tradition may be both written and vnwritten: written in ſenſe,vnwritten in words.

Tradition is by Vincentius Lyrinenſis vſed for the whole ſumme of Catholike doctrine, founded and grounded vpon and in the ſcriptures: not conteining any doctrine of faith without, or beſides the ſcriptures, becauſe he holds the ſcriptures the perfect and all-ſufficient rule for vs that can be; yea moreouer he addeth, that the tradition of the Church is to be followed onely in the chiefe queſtions, that are the foundations of the whole Chriſtian faith and doctrine.

3 By the name of tradition are very often meant cuſtomes in things of liberty,or eccleſiaſtike rites;that is, rules concerning things and actions of comelineſſe and gouernment only,not pertinent any way to diuine worſhip or the articles of faith. And theſe for the more eſteeme of order in the Church are called Apoſtolike, as the Grecian Idols for their more reuerence were ſaid to come downe from Iupiter, Act.19. And Epicurus his booke de organo iudicandi, was called Διοπετὲς, that is, à Ioue lapſus, fallen from Iupiter: and the porch in Ieruſalem called Salomons after the common opinion, Ioh.10.23. whereas indeede Herod built it. Euery prouince, ſaith Hierome epiſt. ad Lucinium, thinketh their fathers precepts to be the Apoſtles doctrines. And In Agge. c. 1. But the ſword of God doth ſtrike them for other things alſo, which they haue inuented and faigned of themſelues, as Apoſtolike traditions, beeing without all allowance and teſtimonie of ſcriptures. And in Tertullian, tradition is taken for any cuſtome of what originall ſoeuer. Doſt thou not thinke, ſaith he De corona milit. cap. 34. that it is lawfull for any Christian to inuent and inſtitute what doth agree with God, aſſiſt diſcipline, and helpe vnto ſaluation?

The faſt of wedneſday and friday is called an Apoſtolike tradition Canon. Apoſt. 68. and Epiphan. hereſ. 75. and yet we find it ſeldome or neuer obſerued in the Catholike Church, which ſheweth that it was Apoſtolike onely in name,and not in deed.

4 Some of the fathers inclining vnto ſome hereſies did make much of vnwritten traditions. So doth Iuſtine Dial. cum Triphone, defend the hereſie of the Chiliaſts by Apoſtolike tradition: ſo was Ireneus deluded with traditions,for he held that Chriſt did liue 50. yeares, which he ſaith he receiued by traditiõ from the Apoſtles. So Clemens of Alexand. Stromat. lib. 1. ſaith, that Gods workmen haue a double husbandrie, written and vnwritten: and no maruel: for this man will haue the Gentiles ſaued by Philoſophie. Ireneus lib.3.cap.2. and Tertullian De præſcriptione, doe both teſtifie that the old heretikes held the ſame opinion of Traditions, which neuertheleſſe they both doe confute. So dreamed Euſebius, de preparat. Euang. lib. 1. cap. 8. that the Apoſtles taught ſome things in words, and other ſome in writings: and ſome things more excellent they reſerued for the perfect only. Tertullian himſelfe beeing fallen into Montaniſme, gaue himſelfe ouer vnto new prophecies and traditions.

5 The auncient Fathers ſpeaking of theſe Traditions,doe oftentimes contradict themſelues. So doth Baſil, We preach (ſaith he, lib. de Spir. ſan. cap. 27.) and obſerue ſome things out of the written word, and other ſome which we haue receiued by myſticall tradition from the Apoſtles: And ſaith, that both theſe haue like force and efficacie vnto godlineſſe. But Regul. moral. 8. and 26. epiſt. 80. he doth not ſticke to ſay, that the Scriptures contained all things needfull to ſaluation.

So Chryſoſtome in 2.Theſ. homil. 1. It is a Tradition, inquire no further. But, in Pſal. 95. hom. 1. If we preach any thing without Scripture, our auditorie will be moſt vncertaine what to thinke, now aſſenting, now doubting, and ſometimes plainely reiecting as friuolous the words they heare: Thus contrarieth he himſelfe. And againe, Serm. de ſancto & adorando Spir. If you heare any ſay, I haue the holy Spirit, and yet he ſpeake not out of the Goſpell, but of his owne fantaſie, he ſpeaketh of himſelfe, and the holy Ghoſt is not in him. And a litle after, If any of thoſe that are ſaid to haue the holy Ghoſt, doe ſpeake ought beſides the Goſpell of themſelues, beleeue them not, but follow my doctrine.

6 The Church now Romane doth not acknowledge the traditions which the auncient Fathers called Apoſtolike; and if it doe acknowledge them, yet it is not certaine that they are the Apoſtles. Thriſe dipping in Baptiſme is now out of vſe, talked of in Tertullian, de coron. mil. cap. 3. and Baſill; which alſo the 4. Councel of Toledo did diſallow. Standing at prayers vpon the Sundaies betweene Eaſter and VVhitſontide now is quite forgotten, yet it was an old tradition. In Epiphan. by tradition no man may marrie after vow of ſingleneſſe; and yet he alloweth thoſe which burne to marry, thinking it leſſe euill to haue one vice then many, though Papiſts now doe controule him making a nullitie of ſuch marriages. Neither vſe they now adaies to cauſe the newly-baptized to taſt milk & hony, nor to cauſe the baptized of diſcretion to faſt the weeke after their baptiſme, nor to faſt wedneſday and friday, yet were all theſe Traditions. But let vs heare Caſſanders minde herein. There are three kindes of rites (ſaith ° he) whereof the firſt is of ſuch as were not of ſuch moment as to binde vnto the ſtrict keeping of them: as theſe were

° Defenſio libelli de offic. pii viri.

A were in Tertullian and Hierome, of taſting milk & hony after baptiſme——, as alſo not kneeling on the Lords day, nor vpon all the 50. daies betweene Eaſter and Whitſontide, but praying ſtanding: which old cuſtome both held Apoſtolike, and inſtituted in the Councell of Nicæa, c. 20. as alſo confirmed by the diuine cuſtome of the Churches, for all this hath no ſigne or token of the vſe thereof remaining amongſt vs. For we make no difference now betweene ſunday and weekeday, only vpon ſome ſolemne faſts the Deacon exhorts vs to kneele. Alſo the faſt of wedneſday & friday was once moſt religiouſly obſerued, which daies Epiphan. ſaith, were by the Apoſtles B appointed for holy aſſemblies. But this wedneſday faſt is now almoſt forgotten amongſt the Romans, vnleſſe it be that ſome Prouinces, and ſome priuate men doe vpon this day abſtaine from fleſh. And the friday faſt is changed into only abſtinence from fleſh, as alſo almoſt the whole Lent: which abſtinence doth but yeeld a vaine ſhew of the true and auncient faſting, ſince it brings vnto many rather change of dainties, & greater exceſſe of luxury, then any reſtraint of bodily wantonneſſe. Thus much Caſſander.

Therefore the preſent Church of Rome can ſhew no conſent of the catholike Doctors for thoſe vnwritten Traditions, which it hath ſet downe as neceſſary to ſaluation.

C

The Mediatour.

1 THe ancient Fathers do teach Chriſt to be the Mediatour (as he is God & man) by a different act & operation, but in one and the ſame perfection proceeding frō both the natures of Chriſt. For in his humane nature he wrought our ſaluation by ſuffering, dying, ſatisfying: and in his diuine nature, by giuing ſtrength vnto his humanitie to endure the death of the croſſe, and perfect his ſatisfaction. The diuine humanitie (ſaith Auguſtin, hom. de ouibus c. 12.) & the humane diuinity is our Mediatour. And in another place, de conſenſu Euang. l. 1. c. 35. Therefore is Chriſt called the Mediatour of God & man, betweene immortall God, and mortall man; God and man re- D conciling man vnto God; remaining that which he was, & made that which he was not.

Chriſts death (ſaith Cyril l. 1. de fide, ad Reginas) is cōfeſſed to be profitable vnto vs, but if he were not God, how could he, & he alone ſuffice for the price of al our redemption? but he onely in his death ſatisfied for all, becauſe he is aboue all. Neither could we bee freed (ſaith Auguſtine againe, Enchirid. cap, 108.) by that one Mediatour of God and man, the man Chriſt, vnleſſe he were God.

2 Whereas the auncient Fathers ſometimes affirme, that Chriſt is Mediatour only as he is man; & Mediatour, by that, by which he is man; and Mediatour in his humane nature, and Mediatour according to his manhood: they doe not ſpeake of the manhood onely and excluſiuely, but of the whole perſon, ſo conſidered as hee hath aſſumed mans nature and fleſh vpon him.

3 Whereas they deny Chriſt to be Mediatour as God, they ſpeake of the godhead or of the Sonne of God abſolutely conſidered, not of God as incarnate: that is, they ſpeake of the bare Deitie, or of Chriſt as he is verbum Patris, the word of the Father. And there is not one of all the Fathers that ſaith, that Chriſt according to both his natures, is the Mediatour ſo, as his onely humanitie is the formall cauſe of his Mediatourſhip and the actions thereof: for the whole perſon compounded of God & man, according to both natures, is the beginning of all the operations of God-man.

Therefore it is a fiction of the Schoolemen to ſay, that Chriſt is the Mediatour only according to his humanitie.

The truth of the Humanity.

1 THe ancient Fathers when they call Chriſts humanity Deified, & Partaker of the Deitie, and ſupreme glory, in theſe and like phraſes they expreſſe the perſonall Vnion, and they are to be vnderſtood with this caution, as farre as theſe things agree with the nature of the humanity, and doe not infringe the properties thereof. Or, they ſpeake thus in reſpect that the fleſh is as the inſtrument of the Diuinitie, by which, and in which it doth exerciſe the power and actions thereof. The Lords fleſh (ſaith Damaſcene, lib. 3. cap. 17.) is enriched with diuine efficacy, becauſe of the perſonal Vnion, neither yet doth it fall or depart from his owne proper nature, nor from the naturall properties thereof. And Nazianzene ſaith, Orat. 42. that the humanitie is endowed with diuinity, and is God together with it: but this is in reſpect of the perſonall vnion, not eſſentially not formally.

2 When the Fathers ſometime ſay, that Gods omnipotencie is communicated vnto the manhood of Chriſt, or to Chriſt as man, they muſt be expounded two waies: firſt, in reſpect that the man Chriſt is called omnipotent, becauſe of the communication of the properties. Secondly, in reſpect that the proper works of God are aſcribed vnto the fleſh, as the Organ or inſtrument of the Diuinitie. So doth Damaſcene, lib. 3. cap. 18. and Nicetas, Theſaur. lib. 3. cap. 38. vſe theſe ſayings.

3 Some of the Fathers ſay, that Chriſts Natiuity was without miracle, as other mens ordinarily are. So affirmes Ambroſe vpon the text Omne maſculum aperiens vuluam, in Comm. in Luc. lib. 2. and alſo Origen, Homil. 14. in Luc. Tertullian in fine lib. De carne Christi: Cyprian or Ruffinus, in Symbol. Apoſt. and Leo Epiſt. 83. & 97. is not farre from this opinion alſo. It is poſſible (ſaith Durandus, lib. 4. diſt. 44. q. 6.) that by the operation of the Deitie, there was made a dilatation or enlarging of the naturall parts and paſſages in the virgin Mary without any breach or interruption. And to confirme this, he citeth Gregorie vpon the ſecond of Luke. Againe, Ieſus came in when the doores were ſhut, but it is not ſaid, that hee came through the doores beeing ſhut:—— they might bee opened and ſhut againe in a moment, ſo as the Diſciples might not perceiue it.

4 The Fathers affirming the fulneſſe of grace in Chriſt, doe meane of Chriſt as God, or of the whole perſon, not of his ſoule. So meaneth Athanaſius in his 4. Sermon againſt the Arrians, and Nazianzene in his Oration vpon Baſil.

5 The Fathers doe not with one conſent affirme, that Chriſt had the fulnes of knowledge from his conception, ſo as he could neuer haue more. He receiued a ſoule (ſaith Origen, περὶ ἀρχῶν. lib. 4.) in nature and eſſence like vnto one of ours. Therefore did Luke notifie his age (ſaith Ambroſe, de Incarnat. Dom. cap. 7.) becauſe thou ſhouldeſt know that he ſpoke of his manhood: for it is the bodie, not the Deitie, that is the obiect of age. Wherefore, if he increaſed in the yeares of man, he alſo increaſed in the wiſedome of man. Auguſtine is variable in this point, and yet that place of Luke 2. Puerulus creſcebat—— he holds to bee meant of Chriſts humanitie, De Geneſ. ad liter. lib. 10. c. 18. Growing vp in age and wiſedome (ſaith Bruno Herbipolenſis, in Symb. Apoſt.) after his holy natiuitie, he came to the age of thirtie yeares.

6 That which the Fathers doe attribute vnto the name of Ieſus, or of Chriſt, is not properly aſcribed to the bare name, but as it is inuocated by men, or to the inuocation of the name; oftentimes I haue ſcarce pronounced that name (ſaith Nazianzene, ad Nemeſium,) when the diuell preſently haſted away. The diuels gaue place (ſaith Origen, Contra Celſ. lib. 1.) at the very calling vpon the name of Ieſus. And lib. 3. the ſicke were cured by calling vpon the Almightie God, and the name of Ieſus ouer them.

Hilarion (ſaith Hieronie, In vita Hilari.) caſt out diuels by inuocating the name of Ieſus.

The deſcenſion into hell, (to deliuer the Fathers.)

1 THe Fathers doe ſometimes defend a virtuall deſcenſion of Chriſt into hell, and a vertuall deliuerance from hell, that is, by the merit and vertue of his paſſion and death, not a locall. This Auguſtine (in Pſal. 85.) doth acknowledge. And Durandus l. 3. Sent. diſt. 22. quæſt. 3. denieth any other deſcenſion of Chriſt into the place of the damned, then A one virtuall, or in the effect. Thomas alſo (part. 3. quæſt. 52. artic. 2.) denies that Chriſt was really in any other place ſaue Limbo, but in the place of the damned onely virtually, or in effect. In this ſenſe many teſtimonies of the Fathers muſt be taken figuratiuely. In like manner they ſay that Adam and others were in hell, not locally, but according to their deſert, yea and that before they died.

2 Thoſe of the Fathers that defend a locall deſcenſion and deliuerance, doe not defend it as an article of the Creede, but as a probable opinion. This may be prooued, becauſe they ſeldome or neuer put this Article into their creeds and confeſſions of the faith. You muſt know (ſaith Ruffinus, in expoſit. Symbol.) B that in the Church of Rome, this article, hee deſcended into hell, is not put in the creede, nor in the creede of the Eaſterne Church, though it ſeeme to be included in theſe words, dead and buried. Nay this Article is not in any creede or confeſſion almoſt of all the Fathers. It is not in Marcellus his confeſſion in Epiphanius, not in Ignatius his confeſſion, in ep. ad Magneſianos, vel ad Epheſios: not in that of Polycarp, (Epiſt. ad Philippenſes,) not in Iuſtines, (in Apolog. 2.) not in Irenæus his, (lib. 1. cap. 2.) not in Tertullians, lib. de Præſcript. vel contra Praxeam, though hee explane the Apoſtles Creede: not in Origens, in Proemio περὶ ἀρχῶν, where hee intreates of faith: not in Gregories of Neocæſaria: not in the C Councells of Nicea, Socrat. lib. 1. cap. 5. not in Euſebius his creede of Cæſaria, (Theodoret. lib. 1. cap. 12. not in the third creede rehearſed in the Nicene Councell, Socrat. lib. 1. cap. 5. not in Athanaſius his creede, Epiſt. ad Epictetum. not in that creede which is in Athanaſius his epiſtle touching the Councells of Arimin and Seleucia; not in the Synod of Sirmias creede, Socrat. lib. 2. cap. 25. Hilar. lib. de Synod. contr. Arian. not in the Councell of Sardica's creed, Theodoret. lib. 2. cap. 8. not in Hilaries expoſition thereof: not in the creede of the Synod of Antioch, ſet downe by Hilary, lib. de Synod. contr. Arian. not in the creede of Seleucia a citie of Iſauria, in Socrates, lib. 2. cap. 32. Epiph. hereſ. 73. not in the Synod of Illyria, Theo- D doret. lib. 4. 8. not in Damaſus his creede, ſet downe by Hierome, Tom. 2. operum. Theodoret. lib. 5. cap. 10. not in Euſebius Pamphilus his creede, Socrat. lib. 1. cap. 5. not in Hillaries, de Synodis cont. Arianos: not in Baſils creede, in his Aſcetica, not in Nazianzenes: not in that of Victorine, l. 1. contr. Arian. not in Epiphanius his Ancoratum, where the Catholike faith is rehearſed, not in Theodoret, in Dialog. Impatibilis, where the Nicene creede is expounded: not in Maximus Taurinenſis, where he expounds the creede: not in that which Chryſologus repeateth foure times, Homil. 56, 57, 58. not in that of the firſt Councell of Toledo, not in the Epheſine creede, Ann. 435. not in that of the firſt Coũcel of Conſtant. not in that of the 6. coũcel of Conſtãt. Act. 19. Not in that of the Synode of Chalcedon, in Zonaras: not in the Creede of the Fathers in Cyril. ad Reginas, l. 1. not in that of the third Councell of Toledo, not in that of Gregory the firſt, not in Spiridion, Niceph. lib. 8. cap. 15. not in that which the Biſhops of the Eaſt offered Conſtans, Niceph. lib. 9. cap. 11. not in that which the Legates of the Weaſt offered the ſame Emperour; Niceph. lib. 9. cap. 10. not in the booke of Faith vnto Petrus Diaconus, nor in Auguſtine, whereſoeuer he expounds the Creede, (although in his workes, lib. de fide & Symb. In libris 4. de fide ad Catechumen. Serm. de tempore 123. 125. he doth explane it fiue ſeuerall times: nor in the firſt expoſition of the Creede, in Chryſoſtomes 5. tome.

Synod

3 The Fathers by Chriſts deſcenſion into hell, do ſometime vnderſtand his deſcending into theſe lower parts of the world. Chriſt not onely in his death, but alſo in his birth, ſaith Bede, Pſal. 85. did deſcend into hel. And in the 6. generall Councell. Act. 10. is left out, He deſcended into hell, and there is put in, He deſcended out of heauen. And ſo it is alſo in the Nicene Councell, Ibid. Act. 17. And in the Epheſine Creede, He deſcended from the heauens. In the 6. and 11. of Toledo, it is, Being ſent from his Father hee came into the world.

4 The deſcenſion into hell ſometimes is put for buriall: As in Athanaſius his creede, and the later expoſition of the creed in Chryſoſtome. And in the creede of Toledo 4. there are theſe words, He deſcended into hell to free the Saints there captiue, and hauing ouercome the dominion of death, he roſe againe. And in Hierome, in Proem. comment. in Iſay. Beeing buried, and riſing againe——he is preached. He deſcended not onely into hell (ſaith Radulphus Ardens) In vigil. aſcenſ. hom. 2. but alſo into the lower parts of the earth, that is, into the place of torment, breaking it vp, and leading away captiuitie captiue.

5 The Fathers either knew not at all, or (if they knew) yet ſpake doubtfully of the ſeuerall places of hell: and therefore ſometimes oppugne Limbus Patrum which is called a part of hell: and ſometimes (but vncertainly) make for it. Abrahams boſome (ſaith Auguſt. epiſt. 99.) that is, the habitation of ſecret reſt, is not to bee held any part of hell. And De remiſſ. peccat. lib. 1. cap. 28. There is no middle place for any man to be (ſaith he) but with the diuell, that is not with Chriſt. Although (ſaith he De Geneſ. ad liter. lib. 12. cap. 33.) I confeſſe I haue not yet found that the place where the righteous reſted, (as Abraham and Lazarus) is called hell,——neither where they are ſaid to be in hell——haue I yet found: but I ſtill doe ſeeke, and know not. Nor doe I finde in all the ſcriptures, (which are Canonicall) that hell is taken in good part or ſenſe,——and therefore I cannot ſee how Abraham can bee ſaid or beleeued to be in hell. Againe, Perhaps (ſaith hee In Pſal. 85.) there is a lower A part of hell where the ſinners are ſhut which were very wicked; for whether Abraham were in any of thoſe places, we cannot certainely determine. And againe, Perhaps betweene thoſe two hels——, &c. Tertullian, wil haue Abrahams boſome (wherein he thinkes the iuſt ſoules are kept vntill the laſt iudgement) diſtinct from hell. Hell is one place as I thinke (ſaith he Contra Marcion. lib. 4. cap. 51.) and Abrahams boſome another. And I call that region Abrahams boſome, which if it bee not heauenly, yet is higher then hell, giuing reſt vnto the ſoules of the righteous vntill the conſummation of all things doe terminate their reſurrection, with fulneſſe of reward: B Here alſo he aſcribeth this opinion of Limbus vnto Marcion. Marcion (ſaith he) thinketh otherwiſe, namely, he determineth both the rewards of the creatour, whether it be of torment, or reſt, in hell, vnto thoſe that keepe or breake the law and the prophets, but he aſcribeth heauen vnto Chriſt, and to his God. and in l. De anima. cap. 7. VVhat is that which is tranſported vnto hell after the ſeparation from the bodie, and vnto what did Chriſt deſcend in his death? I thinke, vnto the ſoules of the patriarkes. Concerning the firſt man (ſaith Auguſtine epiſt. 99. and our firſt parent, the whole church almoſt doth agree in this, that Chriſt freed him from thence; which we C muſt thinke was not beleeued vpon no ground, whenceſoeuer it firſt came vp, although we haue no authoritie of Canonicall Scripture to authorize it at all. Theſe perhaps, ſaith Iulian of Toledo, Prognoſt. lib. 2. cap. 4. were the two hels, in one whereof the ſoules of the iuſt were at reſt, and in the other the wicked puniſhed. Bede In Pſal. 85. ſaith, that the earth is the vpper hell, and that the place of puniſhment after this life, is the lower hel.

6 Of the intent of Chriſt in his deſcenſion, the Fathers ſpeake variably: moſt hold that he went to free the ſoules of the Saints out of the bonds and captiuitie of death. I thinke it no abſurditie ſaith Auguſt. De ciuit. Dei. lib. 20. cap. 15. to beleeue that the Saints of old that expected Chriſt in faith, were in D habitacles farre diſtant from the torments of the wicked, but yet that they were in hell, vntill that Chriſts blood and deſcending thither, ſet them free. But in epiſt. 99. more plainly, I doe not finde (ſaith he) what good Chriſt did vnto thoſe iuſt ones that were in Abrahams boſome, by his deſcending into hell, from whome according to the bleſſed preſence of his Diuinitie hee was neuer abſent. Chriſt deſcended into hell ſaith Clemens Alexan. moſt plainly, Stromat. 6. for no other cauſe but to preach the Goſpell to the Gentiles, that they might learne the true faith and be ſaued, or iuſtly be condemned for euer. And thus alſo Damaſcenus in Oratione de fidelibus defunctis holdeth. But this opinion is condemned by Philaſter cap. 74. There are heretikes (quoth he) that ſay that Chriſt deſcended into hell, and there after his death told them all, that who ſo there confeſſed him ſhould bee ſaued. Looke Auguſtine De hereſ. cap. 79. concerning this, and Gregory lib. 6. Indict. 15. epiſt. 15. Chriſt deſcended into hell for vs ſinners, ſaith Fulgentius Ad Thraſimund. lib. 3. cap. 31. Chriſt deſcended ſaith Epiph. Hereſ. 46. contra Tatianos, to giue pardon vnto thoſe that erred not from acknowledging his deity, but were kept in hell for other errors: yea Bellarmine himſelfe De anima Chriſti, lib. 4. cap. 15. confeſſeth that this in the beleefe of Chriſts deſcenſion is not of neceſſity but of decency or conformity. Although (quoth he) it bee not neceſſarie that Chriſts ſoule ſhould be preſent at the illumination of the Fathers with diuine viſion: yet it ſeemes fit that it ſhould bee preſent while that was doing. But the articles of our faith (good M. Bellarmine) bee founded vpon ſomewhat beſides congruitie, they ſtand vpon neceſſitie.

7 Thoſe that wil haue the Fathers in hell vntill Chriſts aſcenſion, do contradict themſelues, or one another. 1. Some, as Ruffinus for one, will haue them in paines. The King (ſaith he In expoſ. Symbol.) was ſaid to be in priſon alſo, but not as the reſt were: they were there to ſuffer paines, but he to releaſe them. Athanaſius: De ſalutar. Chriſt. aduent. ſaith, Adams ſoule and the reſt that ſerued God in the law of nature, were in ſorrow, and cried out. By Chriſt, ſaith Anaſtaſius Sinaites, in Hexamer. was Adam freed from his ſorrowes. And De recta fidei dogmat. lib. 5. The ſoules were freed out of the cloiſters of hell where they were held in moſt miſerable tyranny, perhaps not tyranny, yet guiltie of the debt of a multitude of ſinnes. Preſently vpon Chriſts deſcenſion (ſaith Caſarius Homil. 3. de Paſchate,) that eternall night of hell had morning: the noiſe of the mourners was ſilent; the huge weights of the chaines were laid off, and the bands of the damned fell away all broken.

2 Other ſome will haue them in a quiet repoſe without all moleſtation. So will Hierome haue them, Ad Paulam, epiſt. 25. cap. 3. and Auguſtine De geneſ. ad lit. lib. 12. cap. 33. So that Abraham although he was in that place of repoſe, yet is ſaid to haue beene in hell with Lazarus.

Free-will.

1 SOme of the Fathers ſpeaking of Free-will, in ſome places doe meane of the freedome which was in our nature before our fall: or of the freedome of glorie. So meaneth Auguſtine Hypognoſt. 3. (or whoſoeuer was the author of that booke) when hee ſaith, vnto Adam was that ſpoken, Eccleſ. 15, If thou wilt keepe my commaundements, they ſhall keepe thee.

2 Other ſomethings are ſpoken of the naturall freedome of our will from neceſſity, from which it cannot but be free. And in this ſenſe they ſay, that we haue a will abſolutely free in all things; that is, an vnderſtanding minde, and will whereby we aſſent vnto or diſſent from our iudgement; by which that which we doe, we doe it wittingly and willingly, not compelled. Gregorie Arimin. lib. 2. diſt. 29. in fine, ſaith, It is ſufficient to make a thing voluntarie, if it be done by him that knoweth and is willing. The ſoule hath free-will, ſaith Cyrill Catechiſ. 4. the diuell may ſtirre it vp vnto ſinne, but conſtraine it againſt the wil he cannot. God made vs of a free conſent, ſaith Hierome in Iouinian. lib. 4. neither are we forced by neceſſity either to vertue or vice. And theſe ſpeake of the libertie we haue in reaſonable and ſenſible things. So doth Auguſtine de perfect. iuſtit. contra Cœleſtium, and Cœleſtius; obiecting that of Saint Paul, faciat quod vult. As though (ſaith he) it were a great matter to deſire to wedde; where the diſputation is earneſt concerning the aſſiſtance of Gods mercie. Neither let a man thinke, ſaith the Author in Ambroſes wordes, De vocat. Gent. lib. 1. cap. 3. becauſe he is drawne on by the Spirit of God, that he hath not free-will, for he loſt not that when he yeelded himſelfe in will vnto the diuell, by whome indeede the iudgement of his will was depraued, but not vtterly taken away. So ſaith Euthymius, In Luc. 15. cap. of the prodigall ſonne: He asked that part of the goods which fell vnto him, that is, free-will; as if he ſhould ſay, vrge me not neceſſarily to ſerue, for I haue free-will. So Bernard, De grat. et lib. arbit. ſaith, Seeing then that conſummation or perfection in glorie muſt bee wrought vpon vs or euen in vs, but not of our ſelues; and that our creation was wrought, and that without vs; there is onely reformation, which after a ſort is wrought with vs by reaſon of our voluntarie conſent, that ſhalbe reckoned to our deſert.

3 Some things alſo are ſpoken of free-wil, as of a good belonging to naturall life, or an externall morall good, or of outward diſcipline. And this manner of ſpeaking the author of the booke in Auguſtine called Hypognoſtic. vſeth, lib. 3. He is rightly ſaid to be but halfe aliue, ſaith he, for he had his vitall motion, that is, his free will wounded. And ſo Gregorie of Arimin. 2. diſt. 26. and after him Caſſalius de quadripartita Iuſtitia, lib. 1. doe ſpeake of goodneſſe conſidered in the kind, obiect & office, not of good from all circumſtances.

4 Some of their ſayings hereof are legall, in that they ſhew, not what we can doe, but what we cannot doe through ſinne, and what we ought to doe in duty. The Pelagians (ſaith Auguſtine, De grat. & lib. arbit. cap. 16.) thinke themſelues great ſchollers, when they obiect that God would not command what hee knoweth impoſſible to bee kept; who knoweth not that? but therefore hee commands vs ſome things which we cannot doe, becauſe we ſhould know what we ought to beg of him.

5 Otherſome are meant of the will being freed, and therefore ſhew what our will may doe in a worke truly good, not of it ſelfe, and it owne naturall power, but what it can do by grace.

6 Moſt of the Fathers correct their owne vnfit ſpeeches of Free-will, (but chiefly Auguſtine.) For indeed almoſt all of them ſpeake contraries, that none can tell their poſitiue doctrines: ſometime they extoll humane power too much, and that firſt becauſe if they ſhould directly haue affirmed the weakeneſſe of the wil, the Philoſophers might haue ſcorned them. 2. Becauſe they would not giue the reynes vnto negligence. And ſometimes they beate downe the liberty of will on the other ſide. Chryſoſtome doth often giue too much to the power of the will after the fall: and yet ſometimes correct himſelfe. A man before hee ſinneth, (ſaith hee, Serm. 1. de Aduentu.) hath Free-will, to chooſe whether hee will yeeld to the diuell, or no: but when hee hath once taken that ſubiection vpon him by ſinne, then he is no more at his owne commaund. Thou haſt nothing (ſaith Baſil, Serm. de humilit.) left thee oh man, to bee proud of; whoſe glory and hope ſhould bee to mortifie all thine owne affections, & ſeeke the life to come in Chriſt: whoſe firſt fruites we hauing reaped, do owe our life, and all we are, vnto the gift and grace of God. For it is hee that giueth vs both to will and to doe according to his good pleaſure.

7 The Fathers before Pelagius, while the controuerſies of Freewill were not ſtirred vp, ſpake thereof very ſecurely, like as Pelagius did, chiefly, they that oppoſed the Marcionites, Valentinians, or the Manichees: with whome whileſt they contend about the hereſie of the neceſſity of all things, and of all euents, they miſſe the way a little, in giuing too much to Free-will, and too little vnto grace, at leaſt in ſhew. There were nought of any worth in man, (ſaith Iuſtine, Apolog. 1.) vnleſſe hee had an equall power to turne vnto what part hee liſt. God doth not force any (ſaith Ireneus, libro 4. capite 71.) but is alwaies well meaning, and therefore hee counſelleth all men vnto good. But hee hath giuen man a free election euen as well as the angels. Wee are all of one nature (ſaith the ſame Father, capite 72.) able to keepe good, and ſo to worke, and able to loſe good, and not to worke in it. There ſhould no law haue beene giuen, (ſaith Tertullian, Contra Marcion. libro 2.) vnto him that hath not the due keeping of the law in his owne power: and the ſame freedome of will (which was in Adam) maketh vs victors of the ſame diuell.

It is our parts to beginne, (ſaith Hieronim. Contra Pelagium libro 1. capite 1.) and Gods to perfect: wee muſt doe what wee can, hee will fulfill what we cannot. Vnleſſe the Patriarke (ſaith Chryſoſtome, In Geneſ. homil. 42.) had firſt done his part, hee had not obtained ſo great things of God: and therefore marke not onely this, but in all things elſe; how firſt hee ſheweth the greatneſſe of his vertue, and ſo therby deſerues Gods aſſiſtance. And againe: (homil. 17. in Ioan.) let vs here obſerue, that God in his bleſſings to vs, doth not preuent our wils, but it muſt beginne in our ſelues: and when hee ſeeth our mindes prompt and ready to receiue grace, then hee giueth vs many occaſions of ſaluation. I ſaid, (ſaith Auſten, de predeſt. Sanct. libro primo, capite tertio,) that it lieth in vs to beleeue and to will, and in God to giue the power of working well, vnto the beleeuing and willing. To propound or beginne a good worke (ſaith Heſichius, In Leuit. libro 2. capite 7.) is in our power: but to perfect and finiſh it according to the precept, is onely in Gods grace. After Pelagius was riſen vp, Caſſianus held with him concerning Free-will: (as Proſper ſaith of him, Contra Collatorem:) for in one of his Collations, Collatio 13. capite 11.) hee affirmeth, that the grace of God ſometime preuenteth vs, and ſometimes is preuented by vs. So held Fauſtus Rhegienſis.

8 Auguſtine after Pelagius was riſen, in all his laſt writings, neuer acknowledgeth either the exerciſe, or the actiue power of Free-will, in working true good, or in the firſt conuerſion of a ſinner. Why doe wee preſume ſo much, ſaith hee, (De natura & grat. capite 35.) of the power of nature? it is wounded, maimed, vexed, and loſt: let vs confeſſe it freely, and not defend it falſely, VVherefore let vs ſeeke the grace of God, not to informe, but to reforme it thereby. And in the Hypognoſt. 3. capite primo, it is ſaid, that by ſinne man did loſe both the abilitie of goodneſſe, and the goodneſſe of poſſibilitie. The will (ſaith Auguſtine in another place, de perfect. iuſtit.) beeing ouercomme by ſinne, nature hath loſt her libertie. And againe, de ſpirit. & lit. capite tertio. Free-will hath not any power but vnto ſinne, if the way of truth bee vnknowne: and when that which is to bee done beginneth to appeare, vnleſſe alſo it doth delight, and bee beloued, there is no doing, no vndertaking, no well liuing. VVee are therefore willing, but God is he that worketh this willingneſſe in vs: and wee worke, but God giueth vs this abilitie to worke according vnto his good pleaſure, Auguſtine, De bono perſeuerantia, capite 13. It is certaine, that wee are willing when wee are ſo, but it is hee that maketh vs ſo, of whome it is ſaid: It is God that worketh this will in vs. It is certaine that wee worke when wee doe ſo; but it is hee that giueth vs this working power, by giuing our will moſt efficient power, as if hee ſaid, I will cauſe you worke. Auguſt. De grat. & lib. arbit. capite 16. Vnleſſe he firſt worke vs to be willing, and then worke with vs being willing, we ſhal neuer bring to paſſe any good worke.

VVee muſt confeſſe, that wee haue Free-will both to good and euill: but in doing euill, euery man iuſt and vniuſt is free (in choice.) but in doing good, none can bee free (in will and act) vnleſſe hee bee freede by him that ſaid: If the Sonne free you, you are truely freed, Auguſtine de corrept. & grat. capite primo. Holy thoughts, good purpoſes, godly counſels, and all motions of a good will are from God: becauſe by him wee are able to do ſome good, without whom we can doe nothing at all, Author de dogm. Eccleſ. cap. 27. Wee loſt our free election to loue God, by the greatneſſe of the firſt ſinne, Epiſt. 107. Libertie without grace, is no liberty, but contumacy, Idem, Epiſtol. 89. ad Hilar. Man in his creation had great power of Free-will giuen him, but in his fall hee loſt it, Idem de verb. Apoſt. Serm. 2. And you ſhall very often finde theſe words in Auguſt. Our bound will, captiued, deſtroyed, loſt, &c. Of this opinion of Auguſtine, was Proſper alſo. Infidelitie (ſaith he, contra Collatorem, cap. 21.) tooke away our faith, bondage tooke away our liberty; neither can any part of vertue remaine there, where ſuch a crue of vices haue broke in. Adam (ſaith Fulgentius, de Incar. & gra. cap. 13.) beeing created without neceſſitie of ſinning, when hee loſt his ſoules health in offending God, loſt vtterly euen the power of thinking of all diuine things. Againe, in another place, cap. 12. The power of thinking good thoughts, beeing loſt in the firſt man, was recouered in the ſecond. VVee beleeue (ſaith Maxentius, de Fide cap. 32.) that our free naturall will, hath power in nothing, but in diſcerning and deſiring worldly and carnall things onely, which ſeeme not glorious before God, though before men perhaps they doe. But in things belonging to ſaluation, it can neither thinke of them, chooſe, deſire, nor finiſh them without the infuſion and operation of the Spirit of God. And he addeth: To will and to performe is Gods gift. Bernard teacheth, that it is one thing to chooſe, and another to chooſe good: To will (quoth he, de grat. & lib. arbit.) is in vs by Free-will, but not to performe our will; I ſay not to will either good or euill, but onely to will: for to will good, is increaſe, (of grace he meaneth,) and to will euill, is defect. Free-will maketh vs willing, but grace maketh vs wel-willing: from free-will wee haue power to will: but to will well comes from grace.

9 Auguſtine in diuers places plainely affirmeth all the workes of the vnfaithfull to bee ſinnes, de nupt. & concup. libro primo, capite tertio. In Iul. libro 4. capite 3. De ciuit. Dei libro 5. capite 19. & libro 19. capite 25. In Pſal. 31. in præfat. Our Free-will, ſaith he, contra 2. Epiſt. Pelag. libro 3. capite 8. beeing now captiuated, can do nothing but ſinne. So Hieronim. in Galat. capite 5. VVithout Chriſt all vertue is vice. And Gregorie very rightly, Moral. libro 2. capite 33. The ſonnes doe feaſt in the eldeſt brothers houſe, when all other vertues are entertained in faith, which if it bee not the firſt-begotten in our heart, all the reſt can neuer bee good, though they ſeeme neuer ſo well. It is through the gift of God, whenſoeuer we decline from ſinne, ſaith the Councell of Arauſic: But Stapleton, De Iuſtific. libro 2. capite vltimo, ſcourgeth this doctrine, and ſtickes not to ſurmize, that Auguſtine went a little beyond his bounds in this controuerſie with Pelagius. But other moderne writers holding with Auguſtine, doe flatly denie, that a man by the power of nature can diſcerne or diſtinguiſh of a morall good. So holdeth Gregorie of Arimin. in 2. diſtinct. 26. quæſt. 1. art. 2. & 2. diſtinct. 29. quæſt. 1. artic. 2. Capreolus, in 2. diſtinct. 28. quæſt. 1. art. 3. Caſſalius, de quadrip. inſtit, lib. 1. cap. 15. & 32. &c. Alſo theſe deny, that a man without faith, & the eſpeciall helpe thereof, by natures power can doe a good morall worke, ſo as there be no ſinne in the action or worke. Both Gregory of Ariminium, and Capreolus, In 2. diſt. 28. holde this: But Caſſalius de quadrip. inſtit. lib. 1. cap. 36. both teacheth and defendeth, that the Fathers were of this minde. This alſo is Marſilius his opinion, In 1. quæſt. 20. Bellarmine indeed confeſſeth, that Scotus, Durandus, and Biel (vpon the 28. diſtinction of Lombards ſecond booke) haue perhaps written more freely then is behoouefull. Sixtus Senenſis ſaith, Præfat. in libro 5. Biblioth. that Auguſt. ſometimes giues but too little vnto mans Free-will: and Chryſoſtome on the contrarie ſeems to extoll it as much beyond the mean. * Bradwardine in his booke De cauſa Dei, againſt Pelagius, * libro 3. cap. 4. teacheth, that Free-will beeing tempted, cannot ouercome any temptation by it ſelfe, without the aſſiſtance and grace of God. And this alſo in another place, cap. 5. ibid. VVith what grace of the creation ſoeuer it be vpheld, yet without ſome ſpeciall grace of God, it cannot conquer any temptation at all. And againe, cap. 6. ibid. That that ſpeciall helpe of God, is Gods inuincible will.

*He was Archbiſhop of Canterbury, anno 1350.

*Extat in Bennet Colledge in Cambridge.

10 The Fathers ſay, that our will is aſſiſted by God, according as wee ſometimes ſay, Such a man helped me to doe this, when as he did all, and I nothing.

§ 11 The Fathers holde a poſſibility of turning, wherby mans mind & wil may by Gods ordinary diſpenſation, bee turned to receiue grace, when they are preuented and helped by the holy Spirit. To be able to haue faith & charity, ſaith Auguſt. De prædeſt. Sanct. c. 5. is in mans nature. And againe, Contra Iulian. l. 2. Mans nature is capable of iuſtification by the grace of the holy Spirit. Gregorie of Arimin. vnto that of Auguſtine: There is nothing ſo much in mans power as to will, ſaith thus: libro 2. diſt. 28. VVe may ſay, that it is in our power not onely to will or chooſe bad things, but alſo good things; but with this difference: wee may vſe our election vnto euill without Gods eſpeciall helpe: but vnto good if he doe not chiefly aſſiſt vs, we cannot. It is in mans power, ſaith Auguſtine, Retract. lib. 1. cap. 22. to change his bad will into better, but this power is none at all vntill God giue it. And ibid. cap. 23. We may will to beleeue, it is true; but with the ſame condition: they are both from him (viz. to will and to beleeue) becauſe hee prepareth our will: and both from vs, becauſe they bee not done againſt our wils. And in this ſenſe are many ſayings of S. Auguſtine to be vnderſtood. For he ſpeaketh of the paſſiue poſſibility, which belongs to the matter, not of the actiue, belonging to the forme, which is abſent before the conuerſion, both according to the firſt and ſecond act.

12 The Fathers acknowledge a co-operation with the grace of God, euen naturall in reſpect of the faculties of the vnderſtanding and will: and alſo from the grace of God, in reſpect of willing that which is good. He that made thee without thy ſelfe, ſaith Auguſtine, De verb. Apoſt. Serm. 15. doth not iuſtifie thee without thy ſelfe. And hee that made thee not witting, doth iuſtifie thee beeing willing, and without thy will there ſhall no righteouſneſſe be in thee. Therefore the Papiſts doctrine of Free-will, that it is but halfe dead, that is, bound from vſe or exerciſe, but not dead in reſpect of the actiue power of willing well, is not Catholike.

Of the remainders of Concupiſcence.

1. WHereas ſometime in the Fathers wee finde it written, that Concupiſcence is no ſinne after regeneration, it muſt be thus vnderſtood, becauſe that God of his mercy doth not impute it. So that the Fathers doe onely deny that concupiſcence is ſinne vnto the perſon in whom it is, but that it is ſinne in it ſelfe, and of it ſelfe, and ſo remaineth after baptiſme, they neuer deny, but doe auerre it ſo to bee. Auguſtine himſelfe, Contr. Iul. Pelag. lib. 5. cap. 3. very plainely calleth that concupiſcence ſinne, againſt which the good ſpirit doth ſtriue, becauſe, ſaith hee, there is in it a diſobedience againſt the rule of the minde. And againe, De nupt. & concup. lib. 1. cap. 26. This is to bee free from ſinne (ſaith he) not to be guilty of ſinne. Beſides, Tractat. in Ioan. 41. Let not ſinne rule: he ſaith not, let it not be in thee, for as long as thou liueſt, thou art ſure to haue ſinne in thy members, but yet let it not rule in them. So Ambroſe, apud Aug. contra Iul. 2. c. 5. calleth the remains of concupiſcence in the regenerate, iniquity: and Hillary calleth it malitiam ilneſſe, apud eundem, lib. 2. cap. 8. Caietane, in Rom. cap. 7. verſe 8. ſticks not to ſay that concupiſcence (whereof S. Paul ſpeaketh) is euen formally ſin, in reſpect that it is a part of originall ſin.

2 The firſt motions of concupiſcence, before conſent, the Fathers holde to bee ſinne. So holdeth Bede: Carnall concupiſcences ſaith he, in Pſal. 9. are the firſt death, & deaths entry. And in Pſal. 114. Whoſoeuer fals but in thought, offendeth God: and againe, In Pſal. 1. The ſoule is killed three waies; with delectation alone, with delight ioyned with conſent, and with action. Sinne, ſaith Radulphus, In Leuitic. libr. 8. cap. 4. doth breede in a mans ſoule before conſent, and now beginneth to be brought forth, but is not conſummate or perfected. And Caſſiodorus, In Pſal. 119. calleth thoſe deſires vnlawfull, to which wee doe not conſent: and Auguſtine alſo before him, In Pſal. 118. Conc. 3. doth the like.

3 When the Fathers ſay, that the firſt motions in concupiſcence are not ſinnes, vnleſſe we conſent, we muſt not ſo vnderſtand them, as though they were not ſinnes in the truth of appellation, but becauſe the guilt of theſe firſt motions, together with the guilt of concupiſcence it ſelfe, is taken away in our regeneration: So ſaith Auguſtine, De peccat. origin. lib. 2. cap. 40. The vicious deſires alſo (vnto which if wee doe not conſent, there is not guilt contracted) are all purged away in the ſame fountaine of regeneration. And againe, Contra Iul. lib. 2. cap. 10. As for vs we ſhould be alwaies without ſinne, if this euill were once cured, and if we ſhould neuer conſent with it vnto euill. But hee had ſaid before, cap. 9. in fine: How then doe wee ſay that this ſinne is dead in baptiſme, ---and yet confeſſe that it dwelleth ſtill in our members, and cauſes many deſires in vs againſt our wils, vnto which wee reſiſt by not conſenting, --vnleſſe becauſe it is dead touching that guilt wherewith it held vs; and yet vntill it bee cured in the conſummation of buriall, will rebell though it be dead? Although now it is not called ſinne after the ſame manner, whereby it maketh a man guilty, but in that it was cauſed by the guilt of the firſt man Adam, and by rebelliouſneſſe endeauours to bring vs into guilt, vnleſſe we be helped by Gods grace, through Ieſus Chriſt. Looke his third ſermon in Pſal. 118. Hence it is that Auguſtine ſaith often, that wee neede not ſay forgiue vs our treſpaſſes, for the vnuoluntary motions of our concupiſcence, becauſe he held them all forgiuen in baptiſme, epiſt. 200. ad Aſellic. lib. de perfect. iuſtit. in Pſal. 118. conc. 3.

4 Sometimes they ſpeake of the externall ſuggeſtions of Sathan, and thoſe indeede are no ſinnes of ours, vnleſſe wee giue our aſſent vnto them, ſo ſaith Gregory, Moral. libro 21. cap. 3.

Veniall ſinne.

1 A Veniall ſinne which is beſides Gods Law, and not againſt it, and in his nature bindeth onely vnto the guilt of temporall puniſhment, was not knowne among the Fathers for ſeuen hundred yeares after Chriſt. Afterwards it got entrance and patronage. The reward, ſaith Haimo, In epiſt. dominica 8. poſt Pentecoſten, of ſinne is death: not of all ſinnes, but onely of thoſe that are criminall, and whereof Iohn ſaith, It is a ſinne vnto death.

2 The Fathers acknowledge, that all ſinne properly, and of it owne nature, deſerueth eternall death by the iuſt iudgement of God. There is a daily repentance of good & humble beleeuers, ſaith Auguſt. epiſt. 108. when knocking our breſts wee ſay, forgiue vs our treſpaſſes,—for we doe not begge forgiuenes for thoſe which we know are forgiuen in baptiſme: but for them which (though but ſinneall,) yet are often incident vnto humane frailtie; and beeing drawne to a ſumme againſt vs, would oppreſſe vs as much as another heauy ſinne: for what difference is it in ſhipwracke to be ſunke with one furious billow, or to haue the water enter by little and little, and neuer reſpect it vntill it ſinke the ſhippe? And againe, Tract. 12. in Ioan. many little, or ſmall ſinnes vnregarded, kill the ſoule. Beſides: Expoſit. 1. in epiſt. Ioan. many light ſinnes make one heauie one. All ſinne (ſaith Nazianzene, Orat. 31. is the death of the ſoule. And who is he, ſaith the author Aſceticorum, that dare ſay this ſinne is litle, what euer it be? I know not, ſaith Hierome, epiſtol. 14. how we can call any ſinne light, which is done in contempt of God. The reproouing ſentence of the ſeuere Iudge, ſaith Bede, In Samuel. libro prim. cap. 10. doth not onely condemne thoſe fires of capitall ſinnes, wherein the diuell his workes are manifeſt; but euen all little ones, and theſe alſo which men may hold ſlender or light. Euery ſinne, ſaith Gregorie, In Ezec. lib. 1. hom. 3. is heauy, becauſe it withholdes the ſoule from aſcending. To vſe idle ſpeeches, ſaith Sixtus 3. De malis doct. & oper. fidei, or to call a man a foole, ſeeme ſmall and ſlender faults: but he addeth: If hee be guilty of hell that doth but call his brother foole, what ſin can then be not deſeruing hel, I leaue the reader to iudge. All ſin, ſaith Gerſon, De vita ſpirit. lect. 1. in that it is an offence to God, againſt his eternall Law, is in his own nature and indignity, deadly, according to the rigour of iuſtice, and ſeuering a man from the life of glorie. Againe, No offence is veniall in it ſelfe, but onely through Gods mercy, who will not impute all offences expreſly vnto death, when as in iuſtice hee might, ſo that it is concluded, that ſinne mortall, and veniall in beeing ſo, are not intrinſecally and eſſentially diſtinguiſhed, but onely in reſpect of the diuine mercie, which imputeth the one vnto death, and not the other; and thus holdeth Roffenſis, In refut. articul. 32. Lutheri. That opinion, ſaith Baius, profeſſour of Louaine, is not to bee reprooued, which ſaith, that euen light ſinnes, excluding Chriſts blood, in their one nature, barre vs from heauen; this hee prooues by many texts of Scripture.

3 The Fathers call ſinne veniall, not becauſe it is ſo in it ſelfe, but becauſe it is in the perſon of the righteous, vnto whome is giuen remiſſion of ſins in Chriſt, through the grace of God. In this ſenſe Bede, comment. in 1. Iohn 5. ſaith: There are ſome ſmall ſinnes, which cannot take from the iuſt, the merit of their iuſtice, nor diminiſh it. Sinne, ſaith Cyril, Catec. 2. is heauy to the retainer, and light to the reiecter: and Caſſianus, Collat. 22. ſaith, that ſuch ſins are pardonable vnto the righteous.

4 Alſo that was called a veniall ſin which had pardon in the cenſure of the Church: for greater ſinnes were thought worthie excommunication, and for thoſe was publike penance performed; but in theſe lighter, that is, veniall ſinnes, it was not ſo, and hereupon is veniall ſo often oppoſed vnto criminall. There are ſome ſinnes great and pernicious, ſaith Tertullian, de pudicit. and otherſome that we daily runne into, and to which wee are ſo incident, that if they were not pardonable, no man could bee ſaued, but for theſe there is pardon in Chriſt the Mediatour. So Auguſt. epiſtol. 89. ſaith, There are ſome vices called crimes, and ſome, without which no man liueth. And Cæſarius, Homil. 1. ſinne is either capitall, or ſmall: Capitall, as murder, ſacriledge, &c. And Bede in Pſal. 3, oppoſeth veniall ſinne vnto criminall, taking criminall for that which the magiſtrate puniſheth. Now this that the Fathers ſpake of ſinnes after the manner and reſpect of men, the ſchool-men haue transferred vnto God, and ſo haue ſet downe a kinde of ſinne which needeth not Chriſts blood to purge it.

5 Thirdly, that is called a veniall ſinne, which obtaineth pardon in the euent & conſequent, though it be mortall in it ſelfe. So Ambroſe, lib. de parad. cap. 4. That fault is pardonable, which a confeſſion of ſinnes doth follow. There are ſome ſinnes (ſaith the author, de vera & falſa pœnit. apud Aug. cap. 18.) that are in themſelues mortall, but by repentance are made veniall. Now (ſaith Auguſt. de Ciuit. Dei, l. 21. c. 27.) ſince we know not the meaſure of our veniall iniquity (though it continue in vs) ſurely we take greater pains to profite in good, and bee more feruent in prayer. And the mortall ſinne hereunto oppoſed, is the ſinne that leadeth vnto death; ſo ſaith Pacian, epiſt. 3. ad Sempronian: and Hierom. In Ierem. capite 2. calleth thoſe heauie ſinnes, which draw man to deſtruction, and oppoſeth lighter ſins thereto. So the author of the prayers in Prudentius at the end of his Hamartig. ſaith:

[illegible] thou iudging ſtill
Of all my ſinnes for pardon hope I will,
Although my words and deedes be were ſo ill.

6 Fourthly, ſinne is called veniall, becauſe it is excuſable before men, through humane good will: ſo an officious lie is veniall: And Auguſt. Enchir. cap. 22. ſaith: Therefore it is a ſinne, but veniall, which beneuolence excuſeth. And they are called veniall reſpectiuely, in reuerence to greater crimes. So Caſſianus Collat. 22. ſaith of veniall ſinnes, they ſeem light and ſmall vnto men: and Sixtus 3. l. de malis doctor. & operib. fidei, they ſeeme little & ſlender, and are eſteemed light: and this is in reſpect of the greater.

Images and Reliques.

1 THere was no vſe of images receiued at all in the primitiue Church, but onely Symbolicall, and for ornament ſake, and that in priuate places, for 380 yeares after Chriſt. Ireneus obiected againſt the Gnoſticks, lib. 1. c. 24. that firſt they had the image of Chriſt painted, then that they crowned it, and worſhipped it. Looke alſo Auguſtine de hæreſ. 7. and Epiphanius, In hæreſ. 27. Wee worſhippe no images, ſaith Origen, Contra Celſ. libro 7. for wee doe not binde our inuiſible and incorporeall God vnto any figure. So Arnobius, or rather Minutius Fœlix contra Gent. lib. 8. What image ſhall wee make for God? whoſe true image, if wee iudge according to truth, is man: and there hee bringeth in the heathen ſaying of vs; VVhy, haue they no altars, no temples, no knowne images? So Euſebius, Hiſtor. eccleſ. libro 7. capite 17. It was out of an heatheniſh cuſtome, that the auncients did after this ſort, honour thoſe that they held to bee their ſauiours, (that is, with painted images.) VVee haue decreede, ſaith the Eliber. Councell, chapt. 36. that there ſhould bee no pictures in the Church, leſt that which we worſhip and reuerence, ſhould bee painted vpon the walls. Epiphanius Epiſt. ad Ioann. Hieroſolym. tore a hanging in peeces in the Church, becauſe there was the image of a man painted thereupon, againſt teſtimonie of Scriptures. This minde of his, Hierome approoueth, who tranſlated the Epiſtle into Latine. Hereupon ſome of the Papiſts doe reprehend Epiphanius. 1. Caſtro contra hæreſ. lib. 8. titul. image, accuſeth him of errour, though he cleare him of hereſie: he had zeale, but not according to knowledge, ſaith Waldenſis, de ſacrament. tom. 3. cap. 157. Others do reiect the latter part of this Epiſtle as counterfeit, namely, Damaſcene orat. de imaginib. Alan, Cope, and Sanders, but without al proofe of argument. Firſt, they ſay this place is not cited in the Councell of Nicea: what then? it is cited in the Councell of Frankford, Carolus libro 4. capite 25. 2. They ſay Epiphanius did not reckon image-worſhippe amongſt the hereſies: it is falſe, he directly affirmeth, Hæreſ. 79. That it is the diuels inuention to make pictures of men, and ſet them vp to be worſhipped. And againe, Hæreſ. 55. ſpeaking of the Melchiſedechians, he ſaith, they made them an image of Moſes, and worſhipped it, wherein they were ſeduced. And amongſt the hereſies of the Carpocratians, Hæreſ. 27. hee reckoneth that for one, to worſhippe the Images of Ieſus, Peter and Paul. 3. They obiect that of Gregory, lib. 9. Indict. 4. epiſt. 9. vnto Serenus, that broke downe the images of the Saints: Tell mee brother what prieſt thou haſt at any time heard, or ſeene doe that that thou haſt done. But I would haue them ſhew that Serenus did not alleadge Epiphanius and other Fathers teſtimonies againſt images.

2 About 400 yeares after Chriſt, images beganne to get entrance, not onely into priuate places, but euen into the Churches of the Chriſtians: but this vſe of them was but hiſtoricall; as Auguſtine, De conſecratione Euangel. lib. 1. cap. 10. Baſil, Oratione in Sanct. Barlaam. Nyſſenus, Oratione in Theodorum, Prudentius, Hymn. de Sanct. Caſſiano, and Paulinus, epiſtol. duodecim. doe teſtifie. For the bare and ſolitarie images of the Saints, or their ſingle ſtatues, were not erected vntill ſixe hundred yeares after Chriſt, which Caſſander in Conſult. de artic. controu. doth plainly and freely confeſſe.

3 Superſtition getting head, image-worſhip got foundation, yet neuer amongſt the learned and godly; neither were images ſet forth for publike worſhip, vntill ſixe hundred yeares after Chriſt. Gregorie, libro nono Indict. quart. epiſtol. 9. denies that images are to bee worſhipped. And Sigonius, De regno Italiæ libro primo, affirmes, that they would carry the Virgin Maries Image in ſolemne pompe, but hee makes no mention of any adoration of it, euen vntill the yeare fiue hundred ninetie and one; about which time, ſome Councels approoued the images that were then ſet vp in Churches, but did not teach that they were to be worſhipped, and if that this worſhip got roote any where before this time, it was not amongſt the teachers, but amongſt the ſuperſtitious people. Pope Sergius, ſaith Regino in Anno 622. in Saint Peters veſtrie, found a great peece of the wood of Chriſts croſſe, which from that time forth, all the people vpon the Exaltation day, do kiſſe and adore, in the Cathedrall Church of Conſtantine.

4 This ſame image-worſhippe was firſt eſtabliſhed publikely in the yeare ſeauen hundred eighty eight, by the 2. Nicene Councell. But on the contrary ſide, but a little before, a Councell of Conſtantinople (wherein there were three hundred and thirtie Biſhops held vnder Copronymus) condemned both the worſhip of Images and Reliques. P. Æmil. de Geſt. Francorum. The ſame did Leo Conſtantines father, and Philippicus. Petr. Diac. lib. 6. cap. 12. And the Councel of Frankford, (wherein was preſent Charlemaine, and the Romane legates) did condemne the ſecond Nicene Councell as hereticall. The Greekes falſe ſynode, ſaith Regino, lib. 2. ad an. 794. gathered for image-worſhip, is reiected by the Pope; yea this Councell was condemned by al the Princes & Biſhops of Brittaine. Charles the French King (ſaith Houeden in continuatio. Bede, ad an. 792. ſent a booke of the ſynode vnto Brittaine, directed vnto him from Conſtantinople: wherein (alas) were many things ſet downe quite contrarie vnto our true faith, but chiefly in that it was decreed by the vniforme conſent of very neere all the Doctors of the Eaſt, 300 Biſhops or more in number, that images are to bee worſhipped: which the Church of God doth wholly deteſt, & execrate. Againſt which Albinus wrote an epiſtle wondrouſly confirmed by the holy Scriptures, and in the perſon of our Princes and Biſhops, carried it with the ſame booke vnto the French King. Bellarmine de imag. l. 2. c. 14. confeſſeth, that the Councel of Frankford diſallowed the Councell of Nicea; but that (ſaith he) happened by reaſon of two errours. 1. Becauſe it thought that the Nicene Councell was called without the Popes authority. 2. Becauſe it thought this Councell had decreed image-worſhip to be Latria, that is, worſhip due to God. Now heare how hee is anſwered by Suarez, in 3. Thome. quaeſt. 25. diſputat. 54. I can hardly beleeue (ſaith hee) that the Councell of Frankford could proceede againſt the Nicene Councell by error of fact; for it was gathered a little before vnder the ſame Pope Adrian that confirmed it, whoſe legates were preſent at the Councell of Frankford (as the ſame authors do confeſſe,) how then can it be that all the Fathers of this whole Councell ſhould bee ignorant of the doctrine and authority of this Nicene Councell, hauing the Popes owne Legate to inſtruct them in both? Now Cope in dialogis, Surius tom. 3. concil. and alſo Suarez loco praedicto, doe anſwer, that the Councell of Frankford defend the honour of images; and that it reproueth the Councell of Conſtantinople, ſometime by the Greekes called the ſeauenth, which was aſſembled for aboliſhing of images. So the Synode of Senona, cap. 14. ſaith, that Charles in the Synode of Frankford did ouerthrow the erronious madneſſe of the Iconomachi. I anſwer, The Councell of Frankford keepeth a mid-way, reſeruing ſome honour for images, (and ſo muſt Æmilius de geſtis Francorum, libro 2. neere the end, bee vnderſtood, when hee ſaith, that images haue their reuerence reſerued:) and therefore condemned the Councell of Conſtantinople, that vtterly aboliſhed them, and the Councell of Nicea, that on the contrarie did eſtabliſh the adoration of them. In the Councell of Frankford, ſaith Platina in Adriano, both the Synode which the Greekes call the ſeauenth (that is, that of Nicea) and alſo the hereſie of Fœlix, concerning aboliſhing of images, was taken away.

Ado alſo in Chron. ad. an. 792. & Genebr.

5 The Fathers generally doe not defend, but rather refute this worſhippe euen after the Nicene Councell. Auguſtine de moribus eccleſ. cap. 34. doth plainely reproue the worſhippers of pictures, and ſepulchres. Note this proprietie, ſaith Hierom, In Daniel. 3. They ſay their gods are worſhipped, and images adored, both which, the ſeruants of GOD doe abhorre. Pictures, ſaith Walfridus, Strabo de reb. eccleſ. cap. 8. are not therefore to bee troden vnder foote, and aboliſhed, becauſe wee know they are not to bee worſhipped, nor adored. And the 6 Councell of Conſtantinople forbadde the picturing of the holy Ghoſt, vnder the forme of a Doue, or of the Wiſemen vnder a ſtarre, or of Chriſt vnder a Lambe: witneſſe Caranza annot. ad canon. 82. Leo Armenius commaunded all images to bee broken downe by expreſſe edict, Zonar. annal. tom. 3. The Almaines and Armenians forbadde the worſhippe of images in their countreyes. Nicet. Choniat. in annal. And the moderne authors teach, that the Images of God are not to bee made. Abulenſis, In Deut. 4. quaeſt. 5. And Durand. In 3. diſtinct. 9. quaeſt. 2. ſaith, That it is a foolerie to make, or adore any image of the Trinitie: where alſo hee denies, that the images themſelues are to be worſhipped, but onely the figure in the image. And, in Rational. libro primo, cap 3. Wee worſhippe no images, neither call them Gods. And Biel in can. Miſſ. lect. 49. ſaith, That images are ſuffered in the Church, not to bee worſhipped, but for other endes. So ſaith Hales 3. part. quaeſt. 30. artic. vlt. and Perefius de traditionibus. And Ionas, Biſhop of Aurelia, De cult. imag. l. 1. ſaith, that image-worſhip is pernitious, and ſuperſtitious: adding, let not our religion conſiſt in worſhipping of humane workes, for they are better that make them, & yet we ought not to worſhip them, let not our religion be in our fantaſies. And Gerſon, In compendio Theolog. in expoſitione primi praecept. ſaith, Thou ſhalt not bow down to them, nor worſhip them: betweene which diſtinguiſh thus: thou ſhalt not adorare, that is, with bodily worſhippe, by bowing knee or body to them; thou ſhalt not colere, that is, with the affect of thy minde. And a little before: wherefore images are forbidden to be made either to be bowed vnto, or worſhipped.

6 The Latine tranſlatour of the Bible neuer obſerued the diſtinction of Image & Idolum, as wee may ſee in very many places of Scripture. viz. Deut. 4. 16. and 4. Kin. 11. 18.

Wiſd. 15. and 14. Eſa. 40.18 and 44.13. Baruch. 7.10. Imagines ſimulacri. Amos 5.23. imago idolorum. By which ſaith Hierome, In Iſai. 37. ſpeaking of idols, wee meane the images of the dead. So doth Cardinall Paleotus teſtifie that image, picture, & idol are taken in one ſenſe. De ſacris & prophanis imaginib. lib. 1. cap. 15. Saint Hierome (ſaith he) writeth that where Idola was put in the text, Aquila tranſlated it Imagines, or figuras. And we reade in Cicero, Imagines quæ vocantur Idola; Images called Idols: and In Plato, Idola, &c. Idols are the Images which are in the waters, or glaſſes, painted or printed, or ſuch like. So the Latine word Simulachrum they alwaies put for the Greek word Idolum: for wheras in the Latine tranſlation of the Pſalme wee reade ſimulachra gentium, the Images of the Gentiles, the Greeke ſaith τὰ εἴδωλα τῶν ἐθνῶν. And hee addeth: The name of an Image, if we marke the proprietie of the word, ſignifieth any impious and diuelliſh figure.

7 The Primitiue Church bore a certaine honour and reuerence vnto the Reliques of the dead Saints, keeping and carrying them from place to place, and flocking vnto them Hieron, contra Vigil. This honour began about 300. yeares after Chriſt, but they neither adored them nor bowed knee vnto them for 600. yeares. For the Fathers vſed to put them vnder the altar, Ambroſe lib. 10. epiſt. 85. ſub finem. but the Papiſts now put them in glaſſes and gauderies, aboue the altar, and that to haue them adored. In elder times the reliques were buried in the earth, and in ſecret places. So Cyril contra Iulian. lib. 10. Cyrill the Eremite. In vita Euthymij, he remoued the body of this holy man vnto a Church hee had newly built, and laid it into a holy coffin, that ſhould neuer after bee opened, and ſo ſaith Prudentius Periſtephanōn hymn. 3. of Eulalia.

The ſacred bones and duſt of her that ſleepes,
Our mother earth in hallowed boſome keepes.

And a little after

Hows to reuerence thoſe bones ſo bleſt:
And that ſame altar vnder which they reſt.

And the multitude there preſent, ſaith Victor. De perſecut. Vandal. lib. 3. beeing full of ioy, carried the bodies of the holy Martyrs vnto carefull buriall. So Conſtantine made him a bridle, & armed his helmet with the nayles that Chriſt was faſtened to the croſſe withall, Ruffin. hiſt. lib. 1. cap. 8.

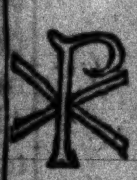
8 At the places of theſe reliques (whileſt the gift laſted) were ſometimes miracles done, not by them, but by God to increaſe in vs an honour to the godlineſſe of their owners, not that wee ſhould adore them, for in antiquitie, adoration was taken for humbling and proſtrating the bodie.

The ſigne of the Croſſe.

1 THe Fathers vſed to arme thẽſelues againſt the diuell with the ſigne of the Croſſe, not that they aſcribed any ſuch power vnto the outward figure, but becauſe they would make ſhew vnto others of their beleefe in the croſſe, that is, in the death of Chriſt with this ſolemne ceremonie, and vſe it as an Item or watchword to ſtirre vp their faith which ouercomes all euils. And the ſigne whereby Conſtantine was victor, was not the ſigne of the croſſe, but the character of the name of Chriſt, which wee ſee in many ancient coines of Conſtantinus and other Chriſtian Emperours, in forme as is in the margẽt here expreſſed: together with this inſcription, τούτῳ νίκα or as Socrates lib. 1. cap. 1. Nicephorus, lib. 7. cap. 29. and Zonaras in Conſtantino, haue it, ἐν τούτῳ νίκα, that is, In iſto Deo, non ſigno, in this God, not this character. It is not requiſite, ſaith Chryſoſtome, Hom. 55. in Matth. to make a bare croſſe with thy finger in thy forehead, but with a ſtrong faith in thy hart: So that the croſſe doth not ſignifie the figure of the croſſe, but the paſſion of Chriſt crucified, by a Metonymie. So ſaith Origen, in Rom. lib. 6. And the praiſes giuen vnto the ſigne of the croſſe, are but rhethoricall tearmes, as when they call it an altar, it is a figuratiue ſpeach borrowed from the ceremoniall law, and when they call it a ladder, it is a tranſcendent metaphor. And vnto all the ſayings of the Fathers where they call the croſſe their redemption, hope, and ſaluation, I anſwer in a word, the ſpeeches are relatiues, all referred to Chriſts paſſion, or vnto himſelfe in that figure repreſented. For it is ordinary amongſt them to put the continent for the thing contained.



2 The Croſſe was neuer adored by the ancients, much leſſe adored with Diuine honour: they allowed it a certaine veneration, namely a reuerent vſe, vſing it in teſtimonie of their faith, and withall extolling it as the ſigne of their vnmoueable beleefe vpon Chriſt crucified, before the Gentiles, yea euen when they were threatned with torments. This end and vſe is not now amongſt vs, becauſe we are not now amongſt the Gentiles. VVe neither worſhip croſſes, (ſaith Arnobius Contra Gentes l. 8.) nor yet deſire them. Helene (ſaith Ambroſe, De obitu Theodoſ.) finding the title, adored the king (Chriſt he meaneth) but not the wood: becauſe that is an error of the heathen, & an vngodly vanity. But about the 400. yeare after Chriſt, the Croſſe began by litle and litle to be adored of ſome priuate men. So ſaith Prudentius li. Apotheoſis.

Diſtinctio adorationis et venerationis. Auguſt. eſt de doctrina chriſt. lib. 3. c. 9. & Caroli M. lib. contr. Concil. Nic. 2.

——— But now the ſcarlet red
Of th'Emperour in Chriſt his church is ſpread:

And by this mightie Prince the croſſe is worſhipped.

So ſaith Paulinus epiſt. 11. He (the Biſhop of Hieruſalem) euery yeare at Eaſter ſet forth the croſſe for the people to worſhip, being himſelfe the chiefe of the worſhippers. So Hierome in his epitaph of Paula, ſaith, that ſhe did proſtrate herſelfe in adoration before the croſſe, as if ſhee ſaw the Lord there hanging. And epiſt. 17 ad Marcellam he ſaith, Paula & Euſtochium do wiſh that they might but haue leaue to lick the wood of the croſſe. So the Apamenſes anno 540. bringing foorth the croſſe, doe adore, and embrace it, Euagr. hiſt. eccl. lib. 4. cap. 25. But afterwards the 2. Councell of Nicea, Actio 7. denied that Chriſts image was to be adored with diuine worſhip.

3 The Tranſient or paſſing croſſe, (that is, the croſſe which they ſigned, or the ſigne of the croſſe) was commonly vſed in the purer churches, not the fixed croſſe, that is, the croſſe made of ſtone, wood, or mettall, or yet painted vpon walles in churches or oratories, for the firſt 400. yeares. The firſt altar, & the firſt croſſe were ſet vp in England by Oſwald in the field where hee conquered Cadwall, An. 635. Polychronic. lib. 5. cap. 12. Alſo in the conſecration of the Sacraments the croſſe was neuer called to vſe vntill about the 400. yeare: for the firſt 300. yeares after Chriſt it was but held a ſigne of a mans outward profeſſion, vſed in his ordinarie actions; but afterwards it was brought into the Lords ſupper; at firſt, to ſignifie vnto vs the good wee reape by Chriſt, Auguſt. in Ioan. tract. 118. but afterward that by it the ſacrament might be bleſſed and conſecrated. But that Chriſt did conſecrate the Euchariſt on this manner, Amalarius vtterly denyeth, De eccleſiaſt. offic. lib. 3. cap. 24. aſcribing it vnto Auguſtine. Beſides the ſigne of the croſſe for many ages at firſt, was but a ſimple and bare ceremonie in the ſacrament, but afterward that rite beeing changed Ann. 1000. it ſince hath bin alwaies vſed in an odde number, Microlog. cap. 14.

4 The auncient writers held the ſoule to be defended by the ſigne of the croſſe either following Montanus, as Tertullian De reſurrect. carn. The bodie is ſigned, that the ſoule may be defended: or els doubtfully: I doe thinke (ſaith Auguſtine De peccat. merit. & remiſſ. lib. 2. cap. 26. that the Catechumeniſts are ſanctified by the ſigne of Chriſt and prayer with impoſition of hands, after ſome certaine manner. Where note the words I thinke, and after ſome certaine manner; for theſe ſhew that Auguſtine doubted of that ceremonie, and beſides you ſee he held not the ſanctification to bee made by the croſſe onely, but with prayer alſo.

5 At the ſigne of the croſſe there haue miracles bene done, becauſe the name of Chriſt crucified was alwaies adioyned, either in ſecret or expreſſe inuocation, and then the Saints had a power to worke miracles. Our faith (ſaith Tertullian, in Scorpiac. contra Gnoſtic. is our defence, and if it be not ſtriken with diſtruſt when we ſigne on this faſhion, that is, by making this ſigne, we often doe good vnto the heathen, God giuing vs that power which the Apoſtle ſhewed when he ſcorned the biting of the viper. And therefore we ſee that miracles, and caſting out of diuels, are not to bee aſcribed vnto the Croſſe, but vnto the faith of miracles, and inuocation of Chriſt. How much this ſigne doth terrifie the diuels, (ſaith Lactantius, De vera religione, libro quarto, capite 27.) hee may ſoone know, that ſeeth how when they are adiured by Chriſt, they were forced to flie from the bodies they had poſſeſſed. And a little after: Chriſts followers can caſt out the ſame filthie ſpirits out of men, both by their maſters name, and by the ſigne of his paſſion. This directeth our courſe (ſaith Saint Auguſtine, De Sanctis, ſermon. 19. ——this doth it together with the faithfull calling vpon Chriſts name, namely, the famous memorie of the victorious croſſe. Stand ſtoutly vpon this ſigne (ſaith Cyril, Catacheſ. 13.) for when the diuels ſee the Croſſe, they remember the crucified. To ſpeake in a word, the Fathers giue not theſe wonderfull effects ſo much vnto the ſigne of the croſſe, as vnto prayer and inuocation of God. Looke in the writings of all thoſe that are of antiquitie, and ſee whether this be true. Looke in Nazianzene vnto Nemeſius, Origen againſt Celſus, libro tertio & octauo, Theodoretus in his Peter and Thalaſſius: Euſebius in hiſtor. Eccleſiaſtic. libro octauo, capite ſeptimo: Sulpitius vnto Euſebius the prieſt, Epiſtol. prim. the Author of the Dialogues, in Gregorie Dialog. libro primo, capite prim. Victor of the perſecution by the Vandals, libro ſecundo, and Paulinus of the life of Saint Martin, libro ſecundo: all theſe will teſtifie my aſſertion. Nay the ſigne of the croſſe, as the Fathers vſed it, was a certaine ſecret inuocation of Chriſt crucified: ſo that it is a fooliſh and an idle forgerie, to ſay, that it had that efficacie ex opere operato, by the bare making of it, ſeeing it had all the power from inuocation.

6 Thoſe croſſes that were vſed in the Church for the firſt 400. yeares, had no Image at all of Chriſt crucified vpon them. This aſſertion cannot bee confuted by any approoued teſtimonie of Antiquitie. And it ſeemeth that this image of the crucifixe did firſt grow in vſe publikely in or about the yeare of Grace 710. as it appeareth in the Councel held in Trullo. To the end that that which is perfected (ſaith this Synode, Canon. 82.) may bee repreſented vnto publike view euen in liuely colours, we command, that in ſtead of the old Lambe, the figure of that Lambe that taketh away the ſinnes of the world, Chriſt our God in the likeneſſe of a man be ſet vp and erected in Images, from this time forward.

Churches for prayer.

1 THe Fathers acknowledge Churches as houſes of prayer, but binde vs not to come to the Church alwaies when we pray.

2 And they name their churches after their Martyrs names for diſtinction ſake, onely appointing the worſhip vnto God, and not vnto them. VVe honour them (ſaith Auguſtine, de vera religione, capite 55.) out of charitie, not out of duty or bond: neither build we any churches vnto them. And Contra Maximinum Arrian. libro primo, titulo vndecimo: Should wee not be curſed and caſt out from Chriſts truth and his Church, if wee ſhould build any temple of timber & ſtones vnto any Angel, although moſt excellent becauſe we ſhould giue that honour to a creature, which is due onely vnto the Creatour? If therefore wee ſhould commit ſacriledge in building a Temple vnto any creature, how is not he the true God, vnto whome wee build no temple, but are our ſelues the temple vnto him? And here, as alſo often elſewhere, Auguſtine prooueth the holy Ghoſt to bee God, becauſe he hath a temple. VVhich argument both Baſill, Epiſtola 141. and Ambroſe De Spiritu Sancto, libro tertio, cap. 13. doe vſe.

3 The ancient conſecration of the churches was with meere words and prayers, not with croſſing, or ſuch like rites. And dedication of churches began about the 300. yeare after Chriſt.

4 The Fathers of the firſt 200. yeares, neuer talke of adorning churches, but about Conſtantines time this errour got roote, and ſo cuſtome bearing ſway, the Fathers began to looke for ornaments for the church. Then firſt of all, ſaith Otho Friſing, libro quarto, capite tertio, (in Conſtantines time) were publike Edicts giuen out for building of churches, that is, more ſtately roomes, or temples; for before they vſed holy houſes to pray in.

Canonicall houres.

THe Fathers obſerued houres both diuerſly and freely: but that all ſhould bee bound vnto the ſame & to ſo many houres, is a tyrannicall ſuperſtition. And Walfridus oftentimes repeateth that it was a long time after the Apoſtles that theſe houres were inſtituted and ordained. VVe muſt know (ſaith he, De reb. eccl. cap. 25.) that there paſſed many ages after the reuelation of the Goſpell, before theſe houres were ordained to be the ſolemnities of certaine houres in the day and night as they are now. And the purer primi- A tiue Church had not ſeuen canonical houres: Neither Athanaſius, Baſill, nor Hierome doe at any time mention the firſt houre: Caſſianus indeed doth, ſaying it was ordained about his time. De inſti. Cœnob. lib. 3. cap. 4. and ſo doth Soto hold alſo, de iure & inſtit. lib. 10. queſt. 5. articul. 1. VVherefore Baronius ſaith falſely when he affirmeth that Chryſoſtome and Baſill doe often mention the foure houres of the day. Beſides, the Fathers do preſcribe houres for the night aſwell as for the day: And beſides the canonicall houres, they ſet downe a night-ſeruice, and night-watches, as diuers authors, viz. Amalarius, eccleſiaſt. offic. lib. 4. à c. 2. ad cap. 11. Rupertus, De diuin offic. lib. 1. à cap. B 1. ad cap. 8. Radulphus, In Obſeru. can. prop. 14. Caſſianus, lib. 2. cap. 4. the Councell of Agatha as it is cited Diſtin. 91. cap. Preſbyter. Gregory in the decretals lib. tertio, tit. 41. cap. 1. de celebratione miſſarum, and Bede alſo lib. tertio in Eſdram, capite 28. doe teſtifie. You muſt riſe twiſe or thrice a night, (ſaith Hierome to Euſtochium:) But they will haue the middeſt of the night eſpecially obſerued, and namely Athanaſius De virginit. Baſill queſt. fuſius explic. queſt. 37. Hierome, Ad Euſtoch. de obit. Paula, and Hugo de Sancto Victor, in ſpecul. eccleſ. cap. tertio, et de eccle. offic. lib. 2. cap. primo & 9. Theſe the Church of Rome doth not now follow, for three daies before Eaſter the prieſts doe C ſing the night ſeruice and laudes at euenſong: and all the three nocturnes are ſung together by the whole quire.

Interceſſion, inuocation, and worſhip of Saints.

1 VNtill 200. yeares after Chriſt, the interceſſion of the dead, and thereupon their inuocation, was neuer heard of in the Church of God. Let any man giue an inſtance to the contrarie.

2 Afterwards, Origen for one, and others, D with him fell to diſpute of the interceſſion of the Saints for vs: but very doubtfull and inconſtant was their doctrine hereof vntill foure hundred yeares were expired. VVhether the Saints (ſaith Origen lib. 2. in epiſt. ad Rom.) that are with God doe any thing for vs, and labour ———, let this alſo be reckned amongſt the ſecret and hidden myſteries of God, which may not bee committed to writing. And againe, Homily 3. in Cantic. ſpeaking of theſe prayers, he ſaith, though not peremptorily, As for thoſe holy men which are departed out of this world, retaining as yet their loue to thoſe remaining here behind, it ſhall not be amiſſe to thinke of them, that they haue a care of their welfare, & that they helpe them with their prayers. If thou haue any care, (or vnderſtanding, λόγος) of our labours, ſaith Nazianzene vnto Gorgonius

ſoule, in Oratio. de laudibus Gorgonia, if it bee granted vnto the diuine ſoules to know and perceiue things done here below, then receiue thou my prayer: And in his firſt oration againſt Iulian, he ſaith, Heare alſo ô thou ſoule of Great Conſtantine, if thou haue any ſenſe, perceiuance, or vnderſtanding [εἴ τις αἴσθησις]. And in his oration vpon Baſill, he likewiſe ſaith, that Baſills ſoule is in heauen and there offereth ſacrifice as I ſuppoſe: [ὡς οἶμαι]. And in his Epitaph vpon his father, he ſaith; He doth now more good with his interceſſion, then he did in all his life with his doctrine, as I doe perſwade my ſelfe. And by and by he addeth: If it be not too bold a part to ſpeake thus. So Hierome in Nepotianus his Epitaph. Whatſoeuer I ſay (quoth he) ſeemeth mute, becauſe he heareth not: and yet a little after he ſaith, that he is amongſt the quires of Angells. So Auguſtine in his booke of the care for the dead, cap. 16. leaues it vndetermined whether the dead martyrs do helpe vs or no, and addeth that theſe things paſſe our vnderſtanding. And cap. 13. he prooueth by Scripture, and namely out of Eſay the 63. 16. that the Saints know not what is done here below. And in his comment vpon the 108. Pſalme, he dares not graunt that the dead doe know the paines and pleaſures which happen vnto their friends. The ſoules of the dead, ſaith the author of the booke de Spiritu & Anima, which is among Auguſtines workes. cap. 29. are in a place where they neither heare nor ſee the things which doe here happen vnto men in this life. Yet they haue a care of thoſe that liue on earth, though they know not at all what they doe; euen as wee haue a care ouer the dead, though not knowing what they doe. Although the Saints doe pray for vs (as the Apoſtles did for her, meaning the woman of Chanaan) yet ſhall we be ſooner heard when we pray for our ſelues, ſaith Theophilact, In Matthew, cap. 15.

3 Beſides, the auncient writers doe commonly affirme that the ſoules of the faithfull are reſerued in ſecret habitacles, out of heauen) not enioying the ſight of God, vntill the laſt iudgement. So holdeth Ireneus libro quinto in fine, Iuſtine Martyr queſt. 60. & queſt. 76. Origen homil. ſeptem in Leuit. & lib. 2. peri arch. Chryſoſtome homil. 39. in 1. Cor. and 28. in Hebr. Theodoret in Hebr. 11. Theophylact, In Hebr. 11. Euthymius, In Luc. capite 16. and 23. Aretas, In Apocal. capite 6. Victor, In Apocal. ibidem. Lactantius, libro 7. capite 21. Hilary, In Pſalm. 138. Prudentius, Hymn. de exequi. defunctor. Ambroſe de Cain libro ſecundo, cap. 2. & de bono mortis. Auguſtin, Retract. libro primo, capite 14. Epiſt. 3. ad Fortunatian, Enchirid. cap. 108. de Geneſi ad literam libro 12. capite 25. de ciuit. Dei libro duodecimo, cap. nono, & in Pſal. 36. And Bernard alſo, Ser. de omnibus Sanct. tertio, & Serm. quarto. Here it muſt needes follow that the Fathers either doubted of the interceſſion of Saints or els contradicted themſelues. And in the ſame manner it may bee concluded that ſo they held Limbus Patrum, Inuocation of Saints, and the glaſſe of the Trinitie.

4 Interceſſion of Saints, whereof the Fathers for many ages doe commonly ſpeake, is a generall interceſſion for the Church, not for this or that particular man: and this interceſſion our Church doth very willingly acknowledge. As for that particular interceſſion of particular Saints, for particular men, it was not ſo ſoone beleeued, but was firſt of all drawne out of dreames, and rifled out of reuelations. Euſebius in his hiſtorie, libro ſexto, cap. 4. telleth, that Potamiena (as it was reported) three daies after her martyrdome, appeared to Baſilides in the night, ſetting a crowne vpon his head, and telling him that ſhee praied vnto the Lord for him. And one Apollo in a reuelation ſaw one of his dead brethren making interceſſion for him: this is recorded by Palladius, in Hiſtor. Patrum. cap. 52.

5 The Fathers teach that the Saints doe make interceſſion for vs not onely openly, by prayer, but alſo myſtically, namely by meriting. The merits of the mother, ſaith Anſelme libro De excellentia Marie, doe make interceſſion to obtaine her audience. That which we cannot bring to paſſe by our owne power, ſaith Ivo, epiſt. 119. we heare may bee obtained by the merits of the bleſſed and perpetuall Virgin. Beleeue (ſaith Berno Augienſis, Serm. ſecundo de S. Marco) that whatſoeuer you pray for by Saint Markes merits, you ſhall obtaine it. So the author of the epiſtle vnto Paula and Euſtochium in Hieromes workes of the aſſumption of Marie, ſaith thus of Marie: Let her commend vs with her merits, and aid, and aſſiſt vs with her prayers, that wee alſo may bee found worthy in her commendations. The Saints (ſaith the Maſter of the ſentences, libro quarto, diſtinctio. 45. liter. G.) doe make interceſſion for vs, both in their merits and in their affections. Yea the Fathers ſometimes giue but too much vnto the Interceſſion of the Saints. So ſaith Seuerus Sulpitius of Saint Martin, epiſtola ſecunda, that that was his onely and his laſt hope, that what he could not poſſibly obtaine by himſelfe he ſhould merit and deſerue it by Martins interceſſion. VVe truſt and beleeue (ſaith Leo, Serm. 1. in natal. Petr. & Paul.) —that to obtaine Gods mercy, we muſt haue continuall aide and aſſiſtance by the prayers of our eſpeciall patrons, that how much our owne ſinnes doe weigh vs downe, ſo much the Apoſtles merits may lift and raiſe vs vp againe. I truſt (ſaith Prosper, lib. De promiſſ. & praedictione Dei) to be purely cleanſed from all my ſinnes by the prayers of the Saints. So Gregorie of Terwin, Lib. quart. vita Sancti Martini in Prolog. ſaith, that the Saints by their interceſſion doe procure the euerlaſting puniſhments to be extinguiſhed, and the languor of our offences to be cured. And in the Fathers we ſhall finde the Saints our immediate interceſſours with God. For ſo Adrian the firſt, Epiſt. ad Conſtant. et Irenen. ſaith that the Images of the Saints are to bee worſhipped, becauſe it is certaine, that they are the ſeruants of God, and doe continually offer vp their prayers and interceſſion vnto the Deitie for vs, that doe honour them here below.

6 There can bee no Inuocation of the dead prooued to haue beene in the Church from Chriſt vnto 350. yeares after. For in all the VVorkes of the Fathers that wrote within this limite, no man is able to ſhew any one fit and plaine commaundement or precept, nor any ſincere example for inuocation of Saints.

7 This Inuocation beganne firſt to bee brought into vſe in the Catholike Church, about the yeare of Grace 380. ariſing out of a cuſtome of the vulgar ſort, and ſome mens priuate deuotions. For the Fathers of theſe times doe tel, how the Saints were inuocated, but doe not teach that they are to be inuocated. Nay in their more ſerious diſputations and Sermons they doe reprehend the inuocation of the Saints. All your vowes, all prayers, all interpellations, and all our thankeſgiuings (ſaith Origen againſt Celſus, libro quinto) are to be dedicated vnto God the Lord of all things by and through that high Prieſt, greater then all Angells, the liuing VVord, and God. And againe: This will reſtraine all men from offering or daring to offer any prayers vnto any perſon, but onely vnto the Lord God, who onely is all-ſufficient vnto all, through the Sauiour the Sonne of God. So Athanaſius againſt the Arrians, Sermone tertio, proueth Chriſt Ieſus to be God, becauſe he is called vpon, for a creature ought not to bee worſhipped. And ſo Epiphanius, Hereſ. 79. giueth a venerable reſpect vnto Marie, but denyeth her both adoration and inuocation. And Ambroſe In Commentar. in Roman. prim. plainly affirmeth, that hee thinketh them fooles, that doe adore and worſhip their fellow ſeruants. And Baſil, in Pſalm. ſeptim. ſaith, As it is meete and fit wee ſhould worſhip nothing but God, ſo ought we not to faſten our hopes vpon any but vpon God. As for Hierome, hee doth not ſo much as in one place helpe to build vp this inuocation of Saints, but rather the contrarie. For writing againſt Vigilantius, in Epiſtola ad Riparium, he plainly auerreth: VVe doe not worſhip nor adore, I doe not ſay the Reliques of the Martyrs but neither the Sunne, nor the Moone, no nor the Angells, —— leſt wee ſhould bee thought to ſerue the creature rather then the Creator. VVe neither affirme (ſaith Cyril, Contra Iulian libro 6.) that the Martyrs are Gods, neither haue we accuſtomed our ſelues to adore them. And Theſaur. lib. ſecundo, capite primo, There is no man that knoweth not that the Scriptures denie adoration vnto euery created nature, and allow that to God onely. Chryſoſtome in his true writings, doth nei- A ther vſe nor defend this inuocation, but rather diſalloweth it. As for example, in his Homily, De profectu Euangelij: But thou needeſt not any patrone before God (ſaith he) nor with long diſcourſe to curry fauour with others: but though thou doſt come alone, without euer a patron, and offer thy prayers vnto God by thy ſelfe, yet ſhalt thou obtaine thy petition: for God doth not conſent vnto our requeſt ſo eaſily, when others pray for vs, as when we pray for our ſelues, though we be full fraught with manifold euils. Let not our religion (ſaith Auguſtine, De vera Religione capit. 55.) be to worſhip the dead: wee are to honour them for imitation ſake, but not to B worſhip them for religion ſake. And De ciuit. Dei lib. 22. cap. 10. he ſaith, VVe doe not build temples vnto our Martyrs, as vnto Gods, but we ſet vp memorials for them, as for men departed, whoſe ſoules doe liue in reſt with God. Nor doe we ſet vp any altars to ſacrifice vnto them, but we offer our ſacrifice vnto one onely God, both their & ours. At which ſacrifice they are named in their order, as men of God, who haue conquered the world by confeſſing of him, but they are not inuocated of the Prieſt that ſacrificeth. De ciuitate dei lib. 8. cap. 27. Thoſe that defended the law, ſaith Theodoret In cap. 2. ad Coloſſ. drew on the people vnto the worſhip of Angells alſo; ſaying that the law was giuen by C them. And this vice remained very long in Phrygia & Piſidia. VVherefore the Synode which mette at Laodicea, the Metropolitan citie of Phrygia, did by a decree prohibite all men from praying vnto Angells: And vnto this day there are oratories of Saint Michaell to be ſeene amongſt them and in their borders. And hereunto they did aduiſe men out of their (exceeding) humilitie, alleadging that the God of all things is both inuiſible and incomprehenſible, and that none can come vnto him, and therefore that they muſt vſe the helpe of the Angells to obtaine the fauour of God by them. So Auguſtine Confeſſionū lib. 10. cap. 42. ſpeaking vnto God, ſaith: VVhome ſhall I finde that can reconD cile me vnto my God? ſhall I make meanes vnto the Angells? by what prayer, or what ſacraments? Looke alſo in the ſame Father in his booke De moribus eccleſ. cap. 34.

8 The inuocation which was vſed in theſe times, was properly a Dialogue or conference, as with thoſe that were preſent; now they were preſent, either by a rhetoricall fiction (as who ſhould ſay I will conceiue ſuch an one to be preſent) or in opinion and conceit, for then it was commonly held that the martyrs ſoules were alwaies preſent at the places of their Martyrdome, and ſome beleeued them to be euery where. I proue both theſe conditions thus: Baſil, and Nazianzene (as alſo other Fathers (hauing occaſion giuen the in their Panegyricall orations, did in their concluſions (not inuocate their friends departed, but) as oratours vſe to doe, ſpeake vnto them by a figure called Proſopopœia (a faining of a perſon where none is) as though they were preſent; and make ſome wiſhes, but no prayers vnto them: as when we Engliſhmen playing at bowles, doe in our play bid one bowle runne, or rubbe, &c. So ſpeaketh Nazianzen vnto the Paſſeouer. O great and holy Paſſeouer, expiation or cleanſer of the whole world; for I talke with thee as with a liuing creature, &c. And Inuect. 1. in Iulianum, Heare O thou ſoule of Great Conſtantine, or rather Conſtantius, for Conſtantine died when Iulian was about three yeares old. Iacobi Billius annot. 2. in hanc Orat. If thou haue any ſenſe: and a little after, What is this, O thou moſt diuine Emperour? For I am forced to expoſtulate with him, as if hee were here preſent, and heard me, though indeede he be with God. And in his ſecond Inuectiue he calleth vnto Iulian beeing dead and damned in hell. And after this manner Dionyſius Areopagita Hierarch. eccle. cap. 3. part. 5. or the author of that worke vnder his name, hath a rhetoricall exclamation vnto Chriſt beeing repreſented in the bread. And Victor in his booke of the Vandall perſecution ſpeaketh vnto the Patriarches, Prophets, and Apoſtles: And Hieronimus in his epitaph of Paula ſaith: Farewell ô Paula, and by thy prayers helpe the decrepite age of him that doth honour thee: In which words there is no inuocation, but an apoſtrophe whereby he ſpeaketh vnto her beeing dead, as though ſhee were preſent with him. And the ſame Father in Hilarius life, ſaith thus of Conſtantia: Shee was wont to watch whole nights in his ſepulcher, and ſpeake to him as if hee were preſent, to further her praiers. And Nyſſenus likewiſe, Oratione in S. Theodorum. Thoſe that behold——, ſaith he, doe embrace——as though the bodie were liuing and flouriſhing, vſing the eyes, eares, mouth, & inſtruments of all the ſenſes: And then powring out the teares of loue and duty vnto the Martyr, as though he were liuing and preſent, they offer vp their humble prayers vnto him, to bee an interceſſour for them, intreating him as a ſouldiour of God and calling vpon him as one that obtaineth when he pleaſeth. So Chryſoſtome Orat. in Babylam. If any man, ſaith he, doe but ſtand by theſe ſepulchers, ——the very ſight of the coffin inuading his ſoule, doth penetrate it, and ſtirreth it vp, mouing there in ſuch an affect, that he deemeth them that lie therein buried to be viſibly preſent with him, & offering their prayers together with him. Now that it was commonly beleeued that the Martyrs ſoules were ſtill preſent at their ſepulchers, or where they would, Hieronimus reprehenſion of Vigilantius (who denied this) doth plainly teſtifie. Thou, ſaith Hieronimus contra Vigilant. cap. 2. doeſt affirme that the ſoules of the Apoſtles and Martyrs are placed either in Abrahams boſome, or the place of repoſe, or vnder Gods altar, and that they cannot bee preſent at their tombes, and where themſelues pleaſe: and hee anſwereth him thus: If the Lambe bee euery where, then thoſe that are with the Lambe muſt be beleeued to be euery where. And ſeeing the diuels and euill ſpirits do wander all ouer the world, and through their too great celeritie are euery where preſent, is it like that the Martyrs after the ſhedding of their blood ſhould bee ſhut vp in their coffins, and not be able to get out thereof? So Maximus Taurinenſis In natal. Martyr. Tauricorum ſaith: All the Saints are euery where, and aſſiſt all men——and are alwaies with vs, and ſtay ſtill with vs: that is, doe both keepe and defend vs while we are in our bodies, and alſo doe receiue and entertaine vs when we leaue our bodies. And the like ſaying hath Seuerus Sulpitius of S. Martin epiſt. 2. He is preſent (ſaith he) with all that talke of him, and ſtandeth by them all. But that this is very boldly affirmed, and weakly concluded, who ſeeth not? Though for excuſe ſake we may ſay that theſe Writers vſed vbiq; for Paſſim, or vbilibet.

9 The Fathers in their praiers and communion accuſtomed to recite the names of the Martyrs and other Saints, deſiring God withall to grant them this or that by their intreaties or interceſſions. When we offer this ſacrifice (ſaith Cyril, Catechiſ. 5.) wee make mention of them that are departed before vs, that God may receiue our prayers by their interceſſion. Therefore at the Communion, ſaith Auguſtine in Ioan. tract. 84. we mention not them as wee doe the others that reſt in peace, or that we ſhould pray for them, but rather that they may pray for vs. And ſuch are the commemorations of the Saints in the Liturgies that are named after Iames, Baſil, Chryſoſtome, or that of the Church of Rome. But theſe publike prayers, (as alſo many other priuate ones) were but certaine vowes and deſires that the prayers which they beleeued the Saints did offer for the whole Church, might bee beneficiall vnto them before God, as George Caſſander did very well obſerue. Such alſo is the vow of Prudentius in lib. περὶ στεφάνων in fine hymni 10. concerning the puniſhment of Romanus the Martyr.

Would I might chance amongſt the Goates to ſtand,
And be diſcern'd by all on the right hand,
And that at his intreate the king ſhould
ſay,
Romanus [illegible] bring me that Kidde
away:
Be he a lambe, and clothed with my wooll, &c.

10 The Fathers, eſpecially thoſe after the 400. yeares, haue erred in the Inuocation of Saints, yea are guilty euen of ſacriledge, for they doe ſometimes put their faith, hope, and truſt in them. So erred Paulinus ſpeaking vnto Fœlix In natali. 3.

Obtaine that God would pardon vs our ſinne
By thy iuſt prayers and merits.

And againe, In natali 6.

Lifting his faults to heauen, and comfort hee
With faith, for hope he hath already ſped,
And to Saint Fœlix courts, with haſt is carried.

And a little after:

This God hath made for wearied ſoules a reſt,
Eaſe for the grieued, and ſalue for hearts oppreſt.

And in another place, In natali 8.

Let vs vnto this patrone haſt,
Together with hope vnited faſt.
——We pray thee Fœlix bee
Our right hand ſtill, and tower of ſafety.

And ſo ſaith Fortunatus of Martin, in his life, lib. 2.

Reuerend, whome I with heart and voice adore,
Helpe me poore wretch, it's mercie I implore.

And preſently after:

O bleſſed mediatour be
Betweene my greeued Lord and me.

And ſo Leo, Ser. 1. de nat. Petri & Paul, c. 7. ſaith, that look how much our own ſinnes do caſt vs downe, ſo much the Apoſtles merits do raiſe vs vp. And Gregor. Hom. 32. in Euang. Make theſe the protectours of you in your guilt, ſaith hee, libro 12. epiſtol. 22. We hope in the vertue of Almighty God, and of Peter the prince of the Apoſtles. So Ephrem, Fulgentius, and Damianus doe all exceede all meane in the praiſes of the bleſſed Virgin. Hee hath magnified thee (ſaith Damianus, de natiu. Mariæ, Sermo 2.) that is mightie, and vnto thee is giuen all power in heauen and earth, and nothing is impoſſible vnto thee to whome it is poſſible to eleuate thoſe that are deſperate, vnto hope of bleſſedneſſe. For how can that power hinder thy power, which tooke fleſh of thy fleſh? For thou commeſt vnto that Golden altar of mans reconciliation, not onely asking, but euen commanding; not as a ſeruant, but as a Lady, and miſtreſſe. And ſometime they ſticke not to ſay, that they doe know all things: as Paulinus, natal. 6.

Thou knoweſt their manſions that in Chriſt his light
Seeſt all, though hidde and abſent from thy ſight.
And in th'al-knowing God, know'ſt euery thing aright.

So likewiſe holdeth Proſper de vita contempl. libro 2. capite 4. No ſecret (ſaith he) ſhall bee hidde from the perfect, who are to ſee God himſelfe which is better then all theſe, with their pure hearts.

11 The vſe of Inuocation which in elder times had beene but priuate mens cuſtome, about the 500 yeare began to become publike: For then begunne Petrus Gnapheus to ſhuffle the inuocation of Saints, amongſt the prayers of the Church: for it is called his inuention to name the virgin Mary, and to inuocate her diuine name in euery prayer, Niceph. libro 15. capite 8. And about the 600 yeare, Gregorie the great commaunded a Litany to bee publikely ſung, wherein all the Saints were inuocated. So that the commemoration of the Saints was at that time turned into inuocation.

12 This opinion of Inuocation of Saints had a large part of the original from dreames, viſions, doubtful and vncertaine reuelations, yea and was moſt of all confirmed by ſuch meanes. It fell out, ſaith Sigonius, De reg. Ital. libro 1. that which way ſoeuer the Image (of the Virgin Mary) was carried, the mortall peſtilence of the ayre did depart, & good health followed, for which bleſſing all men giuing thankes, an Angell was heard out of heauen, ſpeaking vnto the bleſſed Virgin, in theſe words: Reioyce O Queene of heauen, alleluiah, becauſe hee whome thou deſeruedſt to beare, alleluiah, is riſen againe according to his word, alleluiah: which ſpeech, when Gregorie heard, beeing forthwith inſpired by the holy Ghoſt, hee thus concluded it: pray for vs vnto God, alleluiah, ad an. 591. So one Conradus a Germane, penitent for his ſinnes, comming vnto Rome; Hildebrand then Pope, commaunded him to weare a coate of mayle in ſtead of his ſhirt, and faſtened it with fiue chaines, giuing him ſealed letters, containing the catalogue of his ſinnes, and commaunding him to goe viſit all the holy places of the earth, to trie if hee could obtaine any pardon or remiſſion for his ſinnes. ---When hee had continued in prayer from the firſt houre of the day vntill the ninth, (at Saint Steuen the kings tombe in Hungarie) falling into a dead ſleepe before the altar, the holy king appeareth vnto him. Ariſe my friend (quoth hee) thou ſhalt obtaine no pardon of God by any merits or helpe of mine, but goe vnto my ſonne Emerikes tombe, which is here hard by, and hee by his virginity hath deſerued chiefe fauour with God. Hee awaking out of his dreame, inuocateth the name of that Saint, & ſwifter then thought, his chains wherewith hee was bound, burſt all in peeces, his letters opened of themſelues (the ſeale beeing broken vp) wherein there was not one ſinne, no not one letter to bee read or ſeene. And from that time forward, that chappell was had in ſuch reuerence, that men came vnto it from the fartheſt countries, Bonfinius, lib. 2. decad. 2.

13 The power of Canonizing was neuer heard of with the Fathers, vntill the yere 880

A and then Adrian took vp this authority. And Alexander the third after him confirmed it in his decrees, cap.1. Extra. de reliquiis Sanctorum.

14 The diſtinction of religious worſhip into Dulia (ſaint-worſhip) and Latria, (God-worſhip) the Apoſtles neuer knew, nor the Greeke Fathers, nor the Latines for at leaſt 400 yeares after Chriſt. For the Scriptures in diuers places aſcribeth Latria (in the greek tranſlation) vnto men: Deut.28.48. Leuit.23.8. and in other places Dulia is attributed vnto God, Rom.16.18. So Auguſtine granteth Latria vnto men, de ciuit. Dei, lib. 10. cap.1. and denieth them religious Dulia, de vera reli. c. 55. VVee honor the Saints (ſaith he) with B charity, not with ſeruice, that is Dulia. And here obſerue firſt, that Auguſtine denies Dulia vnto Saints. And queſt.94. in Exod. hee giueth both Latria & Dulia vnto God, Latria as to God, Dulia as to the Lord. Secondly, by Latria and Dulia he diſtinguiſheth religious worſhip from ciuill: de ciuit. Dei, lib.10.c.1. & 4. Thirdly, Latria is alwaies vſed in the Scriptures for ſeruice, as he affirmeth, much leſſe that it ſhould bee any thing more then Dulia, de ciuit. Dei l.5.c.15. & l.6.c.1. & l.7.c.32. & l.10.c.1. & 4. Indeed Dulia politica, that is, ſeruice vſed in a ciuill ſtate, was alwaies receiued, and ſo ought to be ſtill by al men, Galat.5.13. But that Dulia which is higher then ciuill worſhip, was not giuen to men for 400 C yeares after Chriſt. And no wonder: for δουλεία is commonly a greater thing, and vſed for ſeruitude without any wages, becauſe he that ſerueth is in anothers power. But Snidas ſaith λατρεία δουλεία ἐστὶν ἐπὶ μισθῷ: that the word Latria ſignifieth a ſeruice for hyre. Hereupon Pereſius de trad. part. 1. conſid. 7. diſprooueth the name Dulia being taken for ſaint-worſhip, becauſe he will haue it giuen vnto God, not vnto men, as they are Gods ſeruants: vnleſſe you take the name of ſeruice metaphorically, and not properly. So Lawrence Valla, and Lodwicke Viues, In Auguſt. de ciu. Dei, libro 10. capite 1. doe both take Latria and Dulia for one thing, and in one ſenſe. Wherefore this diſtinction was inuented by men of the laD ter ages, which indeede Bellarmine doth acknowledge. How bee it, it is in Bede vpon Luke, in cap.4. and in Lumbard, and all his followers, in Sentent. lib.3. diſt.9.

15 That Chriſts Image is to be worſhipped with Latria, is denied by many. As by Henricus, Quodlibet. 2.q.6. (who ſaith it muſt be worſhipped but with hyperdulia:) Albertus Magnus, In Marial. cap. 81. Francis Maira, in 3. ſent. diſtinct. 9. Gabriel, lect. 49. in Canonem, and Pereſius in his booke de traditionibus part. 3. The ſecond Nicene Councell, Action. 2. & 3. giueth worſhip vnto images, but denieth them Latria: and this Latria was not giuen vnto Chriſts Image for 1000. yeares after him. This doth Catharinus freely confeſſe in his booke de Imaginum cultu, where alſo hee affirmes, that Thomas neuer read that councell of Nice.

16 The Glaſſe (or Idea) of the Trinitie wherein the Saints are ſaid to ſee our prayers, is a meere fiction, vnknowne vnto the Fathers for the ſpace of many ages after Chriſt. Auguſtine in his booke of the care for the dead, cap.13. affirmeth, that the ſoules of the departed neuer know what we doe here vpon earth, and doth bring for proofe thereof that of Eſay the 63.16. Abraham hath not known vs: and that of the Kings: 2. King.22. I will gather thee to thy Fathers,—that thine eye ſee not the deſtruction which I will bring vpon this place. And the Fathers of the firſt foure ages after Chriſt, did commonly affirme, that the Saints were preſent with thoſe that called vpon them, and therefore heard them: yet was not this opinion approoued of all the later writers, for ſome of them doe deny, that the ſoules of the godly doe know our prayers in the word, or diuine eſſence, as Durandus diſtinct. 39. queſt.3. Soto ibid. queſt.3. art.3. con.8. & Caietane, In Thomæ 3. part. queſt. 10. art. 2. but onely in their proper kinde by particular reuelations.

17 The worſhippe giuen vnto the Saints whereof the Fathers commonly ſpeake, was a worſhippe of loue, ſociety, veneration, and honouring of them, in imitation, gratulation, eſteeme, praiſe, and holy remembrance of them, belonging vnto the ſecond table: and not any religious worſhip or adoration: becauſe that at firſt they were not worſhipped with Churches, oblations, nor appointed ſeruice, as they were afterwards, and are at this day in the Church of Rome. This doth Auguſtine teſtifie in three ſeuerall places, viz. In Pſal.88. De ciuit. Dei l.8. cap.27. Contra Fauſt. libro 20. capite 4. & 21. and Euſebius likewiſe affirmes it, Hiſt. libro 4. capite 15. And Alexander Ales, q.92. memb.1. art.4. diſputeth, that God alone is ſimply to be called vpon, and the Saints are rather of the number of thoſe that pray continually, then of him that is prayed vnto: and this did Caſſander very wel obſerue in him, In conſultatione ſuper art. controuer. artic. 21.

18 The vowes which now adaies are made vnto the Saints, were altogether vnknowne till Lumbard his time: for hee doth define a vowe, diſt.38. lit. A. to be a certaine teſtifying of a voluntary promiſe which ought properly to bee made concerning God, and the things that belong vnto God.

Prayers for the dead.

1 BEfore 170. yeares after Chriſt there were no memories of Martyrs kept in Churches: nor any praiers, offerings, or ſacrifices for the dead, vntill 200. years after the paſſiō.

The firſt mention of them is in Tertullian, & they had their beginning from tradition, as he affirmeth in his booke de coron. militum, c. 3. Of theſe and other orders (ſaith he) if you require the reaſons, you ſhall finde no Scripture for them, tradition will be pretended for the increaſer, cuſtome for the confirmer, and faith for the keeper hereof.

2 The Fathers of the firſt 400 yeares were of opinion, that we muſt pray for al the dead, euen for the faithleſſe & the damned: yet are they vncertaine whether the dead may bee helped any thing by our prayers and almeſdeedes, or no: and if in any place they ſet downe any certenty hereof, yet not in that ſenſe the Papiſts now doe holde it.

The Sacrifices (ſaith Auguſtine, Enchir. c. 110.) either of the Altar, or of almeſ-deeds, are propitiations for the dead which were not very wicked: and for the very wicked, they are means (ſaith he doubtfully) to make their damnation the more tolerable.

And ſo holdeth Prudentius, lib. Cathemerinon, in hymno 5. ad incenſum cerei paſch.

Yearely that night, wherein our Lord aroſe
From the Acherontike lake, the cage of woes,
The torments of th'afflicted Ghoſts doe ſtay,
And all the damned crue keepe holy day.

And a little after:

Then hell doth ſlumber in ſoft puniſhment:
And all the ſoules in that vaſte priſon pent,
Reioyce in reſt: the fire then hurts not ſore,
Nor boyle the floods with ſulphure, as before.

Of theſe prayers Chryſoſtome ſpeaketh very doubtfully, Hom. 3. in Philip. Say I pray thee (quoth he) what hope can remaine for them that goe from hence burthened with their ſinnes, vnto a place where they cannot be diſburthened of them? for whileſt they were in this world, there was ſtill hope and expectation that they would bee conuerted, and become better men. ——— Let vs helpe them ſo farre as we may, let vs procure them ſome eaſe, (though it can bee but little) yet let vs helpe them ſomewhat: ——— this yet affoardeth ſome comfort vnto them. And afterward hee will haue vs to pray for all the dead, as wee do for all the liuing, for theeues & robbers, becauſe perhaps there may bee ſome conuerſion of them. And in this manner doubteth he in diuers places, viz. hom. 69. ad pop. Antio. & 70. Againe, Hom. 21. in Act. If wee doe offer (ſaith hee) continuall prayers, and giue continuall almes for him, though hee be vnworthy of them, yet God will bee more pacified towards vs. — And, Hom. 32. in Math. Vnto thy dead ſonne giue his due, that therewith he may cleanſe away his ſpots of ſinne from him. So Epiphanius, Hereſ. 75. confeſſeth theſe prayers to haue no foundation in Gods word, but onely are appointed by the Church to be made, and that they do benefit the dead, although they doe not take away the guilt of the whole fault. Damaſcenus, Orat. de fidelibus defunct. bringeth in certaine examples, to prooue that the prayers of the faithfull doe in ſome part helpe the vnfaithfull, and ſuch as are damned vnto euerlaſting torments. And yet in the ſame place, ſpeaking of the opinion whether the ſoules of the Chriſtians may by almeſ-deedes bee releaſed of their paines, as alſo the freeing of the vngodly out of hell, he ſaith thus: But we define or determine nothing; onely we reaſon of it in brotherly loue: and a little after: Then is there no time to ſeeke helpe: for euery man ſhall beare his owne burthen: but now is the time of ayde, now is the time of intreaty, now is the time of reconciliation.

Auguſtine, de cura pro mort. c. 5. is vncertaine whether prayers for the dead are of any efficacy or no: and if hee beleeued that his ſoule was helped by the Martyrs merits, this beleefe was a kinde of ſupplication, and helped him that way, if hee had any helpe any way. And cap. 1. he affirmeth theſe prayers to bee according vnto the vſe of the Church. After the ſame manner hee doubteth alſo in other places, de Ciuit. 21. 27. ¶ And truly it is very likely that this kinde of prayer had his firſt ſpring from the Montaniſts, the inuentours of Purgatory. Looke Tertullian in his booke de caſtitate & monogamia. But there were ſome that diſallowed of theſe prayers, as Gratian can teſtify, c. 13. q. 2. cap. In praeſent. in one place citing Hierome, in Gal. 6. ſaying thus: In this life we may helpe one another by prayers, or by good counſell: but when we come before the iudgement ſeate of Chriſt, then neither Iob, Daniel, nor Noah can ſpeak for any man, but euery man muſt carry his owne burthen. And Petrus Cluniacenſis, l. 1. ad Petrobruſ. confeſſeth plainely, that there haue beene ſome Catholikes that haue doubted of this praying for the dead. And ſo Auguſtine ſaith, Serm. 17. de verb. Apoſt. He iniureth a Martyr, that prayeth for him.

3 The prayers for the dead in their firſt beginning were but thankſgiuing and praiſes wherein the Martyrs names were yearely rehearſed. So Cyprian ſpeaking of Martyrs, epiſtol. 5. libro 4. ſaith, We offer continuall ſacrifice for them. And Epiphanius, hereſ. 75. contra Aerium, Let vs ſolemnize the memories of all the iuſt, the Prophets, Patriarkes, Apoſtles, Euangeliſts, Martyrs, Confeſſours, and Biſhops; whome a little before he affirmed to liue with God. And in like manner ſaith Chryſoſtome, homil. 21. in Act. It is offered for the Martyrs, and for all the faithfull departed.

4 The Fathers prayed for the dead, not that they might haue remiſſion of their ſins as touching the temporal paines of Purgatory (for they prayed for all the dead in generall without exception, as Cyril teſtifies, c. 5. myſt.) wherefore their prayers were made for

1 other ends,and namely, 1. to ſhew their zeale vnto them,& their deſire to commend them vnto God. So doth Ambroſe concerning his brother Satyrus, in oratione funebri: vnto thee, (O Almighty God) doe I commend his innocent ſoule, vnto thee I doe offer my ſacrifice: Graciouſly and fauourably accept of a brothers gift and a prieſts ſacrifice. Now leſt we ſhould ſuppoſe him to be in Purgato-rie,he had ſaid before, He is entred into heauen, becauſe hee beleeued on the word of God. And likewiſe vpon the death of Valentinian,he ſaith, No day ſhall be paſſed by me in ſilence of you,no ſpeech of mine ſhal paſſe without your honourable mention,no night ſhall bee ſpent without ſome prayer of mine beſtowed vpon you, and in all mine oblations ſhall I remember you often. But he had ſaid before, Let vs beleeue that he is gone vp out of the deſert,that is,out of this barren & euil-tilled earth, vnto thoſe ſweete and pleaſant delights, where being adioyned vnto his brothers companie, he liueth in eternall felicitie. As alſo of Theodoſius hee ſaith thus, Theodoſius liueth in the light, and glorieth in the armies of the Saints. And yet before hee had prayed for him alſo in theſe words:
Graunt that conſummate repoſe vnto thy ſeruant Theodoſius, that reſt which thou haſt prepared for all thy Saints. And in like manner Auguſtine beeing about to pray for his mother Monica, Conf. libro 9. capite 13. ſaith,
I beleeue O Lord that thou haſt already fulfilled my requeſt: but Lord approoue my voluntary petitions. So Matthew of Weſtminſter ſaith, that Charles about the yeare
797. wrote vnto Offa king of Mercia,to commaund his ſubiects to make interceſſion for Pope Adrian: yet he addeth, Hauing no doubt that his ſoule is in reſt, but onely to ſhew our moſt deare loue and affection vnto him. 2.
2 The Fathers prayed for the dead, to cheriſh the hope of the reſurrection and the deſire of haſtening it on. So Ambroſe orat. de Valen.
ſaith, Wee pray thee Almighty God to raiſe vp theſe two young men (Valentinian and Gratian) with a timely reſurrection, and recompence their vntimely courſe of this life, with 3 as timely a reſurrection. 3. They pray for them,that their glorie doe encreaſe vntill the day of iudgement, and that then their ſinnes bee not imputed vnto them. So ſaith Chryſoſtome, hom. 32. in Matth. Doſt thou thinke he departed in the corruption of ſinne? Giue him his own wherewith he may cleanſe him-ſelfe from the blots thereof. Doſt thou think he departed in the purity of righteouſneſſe?
Giue him of thine, that his reward and payment may bee the more ample. And the Fathers vſed to offer their prayers in this manner: Graunt we beſeech thee (O Lord) that this offering may benefit the ſoule of bleſſed Leo. Witneſſe Innocentius the third, in his de-cretals, cap. Cum Marthe, extra, de celeb. miſ. 4.
4 They pray for them that their damnation
A might be the more tolerable. So ſaith Auguſt.
in his Enchiridion, c. 110. & 112. They may thinke (if this pleaſe them) that the paines of the damned ſoules at ſome certaine times are ſomewhat mitigated: euen ſo that we muſt ſtil vnderſtand that the wrath of God, that is, their damnation remaineth ſtill vnto them:
In this ſenſe Paulinus, epiſt. 19. praies for eaſe for a ſoule that was tormented in hell: and no maruell, ſince *Prudentius lib. Cathemer. hymno
5. de Paſch.* (before him) durſt affirme that at ſuch and ſuch times,

The torments of th' afflicted Ghoſt doe ſtay,
And all the damned crue keepes holy day.

B Damaſcene affirmeth orat. de defunct. that Traian and Falconella were deliuered out of hell by the prayers of Gregorie and Tecla.
VVherfore theſe prayers were properly the vowes of ſuch as wiſhed them happineſſe, or elſe they were thankſgiuings: and in theſe the Fathers regarded the fulneſſe or ende of the time, not the middeſt of it: for they beleeued all the Saints to bee kept in one common place of cuſtody vntill the laſt iudgement, & therefore they wiſhed the region of light and peace vnto all good men. And albeit they thought the dead to bee helped by the prayers of the liuing, yet they held not this benefit to fall vnto them being in Purgatory, rather then in heauen or hell. 5. Their prayer 5
C for the dead was an admonition vnto the liuing, of the goodneſſe of God vnto the dead, and of the future reward which they ſhould obtaine in following their vertues. So ſaith the author of the booke called Hierarchia Eccleſiaſtica, c. 7. And therefore the Fathers prayed for the dead for other ends, then the Papiſts now adaies doe.

5 Offrings for the dead at the firſt were not ſacrifices of expiation, but only Euchariſticall, that is, thankſgiuings, or banquets, and gifts and legacies of the dead vnto the poore, giuen as almes, and as we here in England cal them Doales: as alſo they were foundings of Churches and ſchooles, or yearely annuities bequeathed vnto either of them.

D VVhen we celebrate the memory of the Saints (ſaith Ephrem, lib. de pœn. cap. 2.) if it be the true Ephrem whoſe booke we haue, Let vs remember the ſicke, the widowes, the father-leſſe, the poore, and the trauellers. And hereupon after the death of any one in the primi-tiue Church, they ſung allelujah. The breath was no ſooner out of her mouth (ſaith Hierome in his Epitaph of Fabiola) but the report of it gathered the whole city together vnto her funerall: ——— the Pſalmes ſounded, and the alleluia reſounding aloft, did ſhake
the guilded rooſes of the temple.

So Epiphanius, Hereſ. 75. and Chryſoſtome, Ad popul. Antioch. hom. 70. & hom. 4. in Heb. affirme, that they vſed to carry lamps and tapers, and ſing hymnes at the funerals of the dead, to ſignifie glory and praiſe vnto God, that had vouchſafed already to crowne the ſoule departed with felicity. Of this nature alſo was their offerings at marriages, as birth dates, &c. beeing all inſtituted for memories and gratulations, though afterward about Gregories time, when ſuperſtition got head, they were all changed into redemptions of ſoules out of Purgatorie.

Therefore, Prayer for the dead, that they might bee freed from their veniall ſinnes, and from that temporall puniſhment for their mortall ſinnes, which they are to endure in Purgatorie, was neuer taught nor admitted by the Fathers.

Iuſtification.

1. A*Vguſtine*, and the reſt of the Fathers that diſpute againſt Pelagius, doe take Iuſtice for an inherent ſanctity, or new obedience: Grace for the aſſiſtance of the holy Spirit: and to iuſtifie, for to make one from vniuſt, iuſt. But indeed they holde with vs, that this new obedience is not in this life perfected, and that wee doe ſatisfie Gods iudgements, and attaine vnto euerlaſting life onely by the ſole obedience of the death of Chriſt. Looke their expoſitions vpon 2. Corinthian. capite quint. verſ. 21. For ſo ſaith Auguſtine, De verbis Apoſtolorum, Serm. ſext. ——That wee may bee Gods righteouſneſſe in him: marke here two things: Gods righteouſneſſe, and not ours: and that In him, and Not in vs. And in his booke, De Spirit. & litter. cap. 26. Iuſtification befalleth not to the doers of the law, but goes before them that fulfil it. Or els it is ſo ſaid, they ſhall be iuſtified, as if it were ſaid, they ſhall be taken for iuſt, or accounted iuſt. And de fide & operibus, cap. 14. Epiſt. 120. cap. 30. Good workes doe follow him that is iuſtified, and not go before him that is to bee iuſtified. And againe, expoſit. incboat. Epiſt. ad Romanos: Men beeing iuſtified by beleefe, doe thenceforth beginne to liue righteouſly. So Hierome likewiſe in 2. Corinthian. 5. ſaith: So Chriſt was offered for our ſinnes, taking vpon him the name of Sinne,—that wee might bee made the righteouſneſſe of God in him, not our own, nor in our * ſelues. And ſo ſaith Chryſoſtome, ibid. Hee made the iuſt a ſinner, thereby to make the ſinners iuſt. Nay, he ſaid not thus, but farre more powerfully: For he aſſigneth not the quality, but the ſubſtance, he ſaid not, a ſinner, but ſinne: that we might be made (hee ſaid not) righteous, but righteouſneſſe, and the righteouſneſſe of God: for that righteouſneſſe is of God, ſeeing wee are iuſtified not of workes (wherein it is neceſſary alſo, that there be not ſpot or ſtaine) but of Grace. And againe, in his 17. Homily vpon the tenth of the Romanes, hee ſaith in like
A manner: If thou haſt beleeued in Chriſt: thou haſt both fulfilled the Law, and farre more then it commaundeth: for thou haſt already receiued a farre greater righteouſneſſe. And Anſelme, in ſecund. ad Corinthios capite quint. ſaith plainely: God made Chriſt ſinne for vs: that wee might bee made the righteouſneſſe of God in him. Hee therefore was made ſinne as wee are made righteouſnes: neither is that righteouſnes ours, but Gods; (that is, it is not of our ſelues, but of God;) nor in our ſelues, but in him: as he was made ſinne, not his own ſin, but ours: neither was the ſinne in himſelfe, but in vs. So Bernard, Serm. ad milit. Templ. capite 11. ſaith: Furthermore, death is chaſed away by Chriſts
B death, and Chriſts iuſtice is imputed vnto vs. And Epiſtol. 190. Man hath anothers iuſtice aſſigned vnto him, lacking his owne.——One mans ſatisfaction is imputed vnto all. And in his 61. Sermon vpon the Canticles, Lord I will remember thy iuſtice onely, for it is alſo mine: For thou art made righteouſneſſe vnto mee of God. Shall I be afraid that one cannot ſuffice for vs both? it is no ſhort raiment vnſufficient to couer two: thy iuſtice is an euerlaſting iuſtice, and will couer both thee and me alſo, and that largely, being moſt large, and moſt laſting. Nay ſome of the moderne writers doe acknowledge this imputatiue iuſtice: as the Antididagma of Colen doth for one, & Albertus Pighius him-
C ſelfe controuerſ. ſecund. in theſe words: If wee ſpeake formally and properly, we are not iuſtified by our owne faith nor charity, but by the onely iuſtice of God in Chriſt, that onely iuſtice of Chriſt being communicated vnto vs.

* Marius Victorinus ſine ſenſu legit (vobis.)

2 The Fathers howſoeuer they do ſpeak differently, and vndefinitiuely of this place of iuſtification: yet in their ſerious meditations, and when they were intangled with temptations, they neuer fledde vnto any iuſtice by workes, or vnto any merits. Heare what Ambroſe ſaith, epiſt. 71. Let no man glorie in his workes, becauſe no man is iuſtified by his deeds: but he that hath iuſtice, hath it in gift, becauſe after baptiſme hee is iuſtified. It is D therefore faith that freeth him through the blood of Chriſt, becauſe happy is hee that hath his ſinnes forgiuen, & his pardon graunted. And Auguſtine crieth out, Confeſſ. lib. 9. c. 13. Wo alſo be vnto the man of moſt commendable life, if you ſift his actions without the fauour of mercy. Onely Chriſt (ſaith he ad Bonif. lib. 4. c. 4.) did vndergo puniſhment for vs without any euill deſert, that we might attaine vnto grace by him, without any good deſert. And Serm. 49. de Tempore: VVhat is that? Enter not into iudgement with thy ſeruant: Stand not in iudgement with mee, nor exact of me all that thou haſt commaunded me, and inioyned me: for thou wilt finde mee guilty, if thou enter but in iudgment with me: wherfore I ſtand in need of thy mercy, rather then of thy moſt eaſie iudgement. And, De grat. & lib. arb. capit. ſept. If that thy good deſerts be Gods gifts, then doth not he crowne thy good deſerts as thine owne deſeruings, but as his owne gifts. And in Pſalm. 67. The vngodly is iuſtified by faith without any good deſerts of his workes. Beſides, & de ſpirit. & liter cap. 13. We do gather out of many teſtimonies, that man is not iuſtified by the precepts of good life, but by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt. And ſuch a ſpeech hath Baſill in his Commentaries vpon the 114. Pſalme: Eternall reſt is prepared for thoſe that haue reſiſted the diuell ſtrongly in this life, not as a debt giuē to their works, but out of the bounteous grace of the moſt mighty & mercifull God. And in his Commentarie vpon the 32. Pſal. If by himſelf the iudgment of God were ſufficient, & if he ſhold deale with vs ſeuerely according vnto our merits, what hope were there remaining for any of vs? which of vs al ſhould be ſaued? Hilarie in like manner, Pſal. 51. affirmeth, that thoſe workes of iuſtice are not of themſelues ſufficient to merit perfect bliſſe, vnleſſe that Gods mercy euen in this will and deſire of iuſtice, doe not impute the viciouſneſſe of mans motions and changes vnto him. Let a man attaine vnto perfection neuer ſo much (ſaith Hierom. in Ezech. lib. 14. cap. 46.) yet ſhall he ſtand in need of mercy for all that: and cannot attaine vnto the fulneſſe of perfection by his merits in this life, but onely by Grace.

It is Gods purpoſe (ſaith Primaſius, in Roman. cap. octau.) to iuſtifie man, without any workes of the Law, or any other merits whatſoeuer, by faith alone: this is a wonderfull thing, ſaith Saint Chryſoſtome, Sermon. octau. in Roman. capite quart. that hee who became ſo famous for his worthy acts, could not bee iuſtified by his good workes, but by his faith: herein is the power of faith mightily manifeſted. And ſo ſaith Paulinus, epiſtol. decim. ad Seuer. Although we are able to keepe his commaundements (with his helpe) yet ought wee perforce to acknowledge our vnprofitable ſeruice, becauſe wee cannot impute vnto our ſelues a iuſt execution of our duty, if wee keepe the commaundements onely. And in the ſame ſenſe ſaith Marcus the Heremite in his booke de Lege ſpiritnali: VVhoſoeuer wee bee that are thought worthie the waſhing of the new birth, wee doe not good workes for any retribution ſake, but onely for the keeping of that puritie and cleaneneſſe which is committed vnto vs. And a little before, The kingdome of heauen is not a reward for any workes, but the meere grace of God prepared for his faithfull ſeruants. And Gregorie the great alſo, Mor. libro 9. capite 14. & libro 21. capite 15. doubts not to affirme, that all mans iuſtice would bee found to be iniuſtice, if God ſhould vſe a ſtrict iudgement. And libro 5. capite 7. This iuſtice of ours being tried vpon the touchſtone of the diuine iuſtice, will bee found iniuſtice, and it is filthy in the diſcuſſion of the Iudge, though it ſhew faire in the eſtimation of the doer. And libro 9. capite 14. I grow ſtrong vnto life, not by merits, but by pardon. And capite 28. Note that the holy man ſaith not, my hands ſhined beeing moſt pure: but my hands ſhined as moſt pure; becauſe as long as wee are bound vnder the puniſhment of corruption, though wee take neuer ſo much paines in doing good workes, yet ſhall wee neuer attaine vnto true puritie. And the ſame Father in his ſeauenth homily vpon Ezechiel ſub finem ſaith, Let vs repoſe no hope in our teares, nor in our deedes, but in the mediation of our aduocate: And in his Commentaries vpon the firſt penitentiall Pſalme: I doe not intreate thee to ſaue mee, truſting to mine owne merits, but preſuming to obtaine that out of thine onely mercy, which I deſpaire to doe out of mine owne deſeruings.

Euſebius Emiſſenus in like manner confirmeth our aſſertion thus: Though we ſweate in toyle of ſoule and body, ſaith he, and exerciſe all our powers in obedience, yet ſhall we neuer attaine by any deſert to get the kingdome of heauen, as a recompence for them. And Bernard, Sermon. 10. de Aduent. Thou canſt neuer merit the glorie eternall, vnleſſe it bee giuen thee freely,—nor are mans merits of that value to claime heauen as their iuſt due. And Serm. in cant. 23. It is ſufficient for me vnto all righteouſnes to haue him my fauourer, to whom only I haue giuen cauſe of offence: all that he doth not impute vnto me, is as though it were not at all. Not to ſinne is Gods iuſtice: & mans iuſtice is Gods pardon.

This alſo Anſelme vpon Roman. 12. directly affirmeth: Becauſe all men (ſaith he) were infolded in ſinne, therefore thenceforth ſaluation conſiſteth not in mans merits, but in Gods grace: And in his Meditations, My life doth terrifie me, for if it be diligently examined, it appeareth wholly either ſinne or barranneſſe. And if there be any fruite therein, it is either ſo fained, ſo imperfect, and ſome way ſo corrupted, that it cannot but either not pleaſe, or diſpleaſe God. Truely it is either wholly in ſinne and damnable, or barren & contemptible. But this of Anſelme is moſt of all to be noted. In this death alone (ſaith he) place al thy truſt; vnto this death commit thy ſelfe wholly, with this death couer thy ſelf wholly, and therein inwrappe thy ſelfe wholly: If God will iudge thee, ſay, O Lord, I put the death of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt betwixt mee and thee, and thy iudgement; no otherwiſe doe I ſtand out with thee: If hee ſay, thou haſt deſerued damnation; ſay then, I put the death of my Lord Ieſus Chriſt betwixt me, and my euill deſeruings, I offer the merits of his moſt worthy paſſion, for the merits which I ſhould haue had, and alas haue them not. And Bellarmines free confeſſion hereof is not to be ouerpaſſed with ſilence, de Iuſti.lib.5.cap.7. Becauſe of the vncertaintie of our owne iuſtice (ſaith he) and the danger of vaine-glory, it is moſt ſafe and ſure to place all our truſt vpon the onely mercy and benignitie of God.

Vlenberg. l. de cauſis cur Euang. pag 436.

3 The Fathers ſometimes ſpeake vnfitly of the article of iuſtification, and that becauſe of three errours: 1. Becauſe they ſpeake of iuſtification rather like Philoſophers then Diuines, bending their Diuinitie vnto the likeneſſe that morall Philoſophy bore then amongſt the Gentiles, thereby the more eaſily to gaine the more of them vnto God. Looke in Clemens of Alexandr. Stromat. 2. 2. Becauſe they confound the law and the Goſpell, not diſtinguiſhing the iuſtice of the one from the iuſtice of the other, as Origen hom. 6. in Levi. ſaith: It is Gods law that waſheth thee and purgeth thy ſinnes. 3. Becauſe they extolled mans natural ſtrength too much: for Ireneus, Tertullian, Clemens, Iuſtine, and Epiphanius held all, that men were ſaued by the law of nature and by Philoſophy.

4 The diſtinction of Iuſtification into the firſt and ſecond, was not knowne amongſt the Fathers for 1500. yeares after Chriſt, but is an inuention of this age.

5 The Fathers doe often ſpeake improperly of iuſtification, according vnto common vſe, putting ſometimes the word of iuſtification for ſanctification, or the renewing of the whole man, both according vnto nature and manners, and this they will haue done by inward vertues and workes.

6 The Fathers affirme that workes do iuſtifie onely declaratiuely, not effectiuely. So ſaith Thomas vpon the 2. of Iames, The works that follow faith are ſaid to iuſtifie, not as iuſtification is called an infuſion of iuſtice, but as it is called an exerciſe, a ſhewing, or a conſummation. And then a thing is ſaid to be done, when it is perfected and made knowne.

7 The Fathers ſometimes ſpeake hyperbolically of workes, thereby to take away the careleſneſſe of the vulgar, and ſet them on fire with a greater deſire vnto good workes; vnto this end doe Chryſoſtomes words ad popu. Antioch. Homil. 33. tend, when he ſaith, that Almes doe free a man from death, (from hell he meanes) giue vs eternall life, & are aduocates for vs: as alſo that of Hilary, in Matth. Can. 6. we muſt of our ſelues deſerue eternall life. And Ambroſe, de pœni. l. 2. c. 5. ſaith in the ſame ſenſe: Our ſinnes are couered by our workes. So doth Origen, hom. 1. in Ezech. Why doeſt thou thinke much to labour, contend, and endeauour, and by thy good workes to be the cauſe of thine owne ſaluation, & bliſſe?

Merit.

1 Merit taken in his proper ſenſe, for due and iuſt deſert, was neuer allowed of the ſound profeſſors for a thouſand yeares after Chriſt. So that to merit, in the Latine Fathers doth ſignifie to doe ſomething which is acceptable and pleaſing vnto God, and worthie of account: and to obtaine or get any thing of God, euen without any deſert of ours. A ſincere and peaceable prayer, ſaith Cyprian, deſerued (or merited) the Lord, (that is, obtained his fauour.) And Suetonius in the life of Octauius ſaith, Let him imitate Octauius in deſeruing his fellowes, that is, in getting their good wils by doing them good turnes. And ſo ſaith Ambroſe, libro 10. in Luc. capite 22. in the beginning: Oh Water, which deſeruedſt to bee the Sacrament or myſterie of Chriſt, which waſheſt all, and art not waſhed thy ſelfe? &c. So Pope Cornelius, in Euſebius, lib. 6. cap. 4. ſaith of Nouatus, that hee was not confirmed of the Biſhop by the ſigne, and addeth, τούτου δὲ μὴ τυχὼν, πῶς ἂν τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος ἔτυχε; which words Ruffinus, capite 33. tranſlateth thus: Vnde nec ſpiritum ſanctum potuit promereri: wherefore hee could not deſerue (that is, obtaine) the holy Ghoſt. So Auguſtine epiſt. 12. writeth vnto Hierome: I haue not yet deſerued thy writings: and elſewhere epiſt. 13: would to God I could deſerue to bee embraced of thee. And Serm 49. de temp. Let no ſinner deſpaire of himſelfe, ſince Paul deſerued pardon: and Tract. 3. in Ioan. to the like effect he ſaith, that we doe deſerue God by faith, that is, we are acceptable vnto him. And that of Gregory is moſt note-worthie: O happy fault which deſerued to haue ſuch a redeemer.

2 Merit in the writings of the Fathers is not put for the worthineſſe of the good work in the reſpect of the reward, but it is alwaies put for the good worke it ſelfe, pleaſing vnto God, and accepted of him, not of it ſelfe and it owne worthineſſe: but through the diuine fauour, and free acceptation of all good workes in Ieſus Chriſt. And therefore it is ſo called, namely, a good worke, thereby to incite vs the more to doe theſe good things. This doth Cardinall Bellarmine freely confeſſe, lib. 2. de grat. et lib. arbit. cap. 12. And that the word Merit, is to be taken in this ſenſe, it hereby appeareth, becauſe all the Fathers do aſcribe all things vnto grace wholly. As Bernard, Serm. 61. in Cant. ſaith, my Merit is Gods mercie; and the ſame word Merit, in his true and proper ſenſe is by them oppoſed againſt grace; as the ſame Bernard vſeth it, Serm. 67. in Cant. There is no place for grace to enter where merit hath taken vp all before: And beſides, Serm. 68. It is ſufficient vnto merit to know that our merit is inſufficient: wherefore theſe workes of grace are called merits by a metaphor, not properly, becauſe they are the gifts of God: as life euerlaſting is called a wage: not properly, but metaphorically. And vnto this end doth Bernard direct his doctrine in his firſt ſermon of the Annunciation, ſaying, that

A merits in very deede, doe deſerue nothing. Neither are mans merits of ſuch worthineſſe (quoth he) that life eternall ſhould bee their due; or that God ſhould any waies iniury man in not giuing it vnto him: for (to omit that all mans merits are wholly the gifts of God, and that man is rather a debtor vnto God for them, thẽ God any waies vnto him;) what are all our merits, beeing compared with that ſo admirable glory? And the diſtribution of rewards is of Gods grace, not the wage of merit, becauſe (as Fulgentius ſaith very well, *ad Mon.lib.*1.*cap.*10.) It is very rightly called grace, becauſe God doth not onely accumulate his gifts vpon his gifts, but alſo becauſe the bountie of the Diuine retribution is ſhewed in ſuch quantitie, that it doth admirably and incomparably exceed all merit, though proceeding from a will and operation both good and giuen of God. And euen the ſame ſaying hath Radulphus Ardens, in Dominica 18.poſt.Trin. Becauſe (ſaith he,) we proceed from and by one grace, vnto another, wee can but improperly call them merits: for as Auguſtine can beare witneſſe, God doth crowne nothing in vs but his owne grace. And againe, in homil.in Domi. Septua. to the like effect: Let no man thinke that God is as it were bound by couenant to performe his promiſe: for as he is free to promiſe, ſo is he free to pay: chiefly ſeeing our merits as wel as our rewards are of his grace; for God crowneth nothing but his grace in vs, who if he would deale ſtrictly with vs, no man liuing ſhould be iuſtified in his ſight. And therefore the Apoſtle, that tooke more paines then all, ſaith. The ſufferings of this life are not worthy of that future glorie which ſhall be reuealed: wherefore this bargaine is nothing els but a voluntarie promiſe.

3 Alſo Merit ſometimes ſignifieth the dignitie and excellency of the thing it ſelfe: as when Hierome, in epiſt. ad Euagr. ſaith: All Biſhops are of the ſame merit and the ſame prieſthood: So the Fathers ſay virginitie is of a greater merit then the other vertues: but indeede merit doth ſeldome ſignifie that which we in England call Deſert: that is, the worthineſſe of the worke in reſpect of the wages and recompence.

4 The merit of congruence, before iuſtification, whether it proceede or ſucceede our faith, is condemned by the Fathers. VVhy is it called grace? (ſaith Auguſtine, prefat. in Pſal. 31.) becauſe it is giuen gratis: VVhy is it giuen gratis? becauſe it coſt no more. And in his Retractations, *lib.*2.*cap.*31. he correcteth his opinion of merits, at leaſt of merits of congruence before iuſtification: I ſaid (quoth he, *lib.*6.queſt.cont.Paganos,) that in religion ſaluation neuer was wanting vnto him that proued worthy: —— But I ſaid not ſo, as though any man could be worthie by his owne merits; but as the Apoſtle ſaith: Not of our workes, but of him that calleth vs. And in *epiſt.*105. he ſaith, To make a man iuſt, merit hath not ſufficient power. And againe, Righteouſneſſe in Scripture is neuer called hire. And in prefat. in Pſal. 31. Thou haſt not done any good, and yet the forgiueneſſe of thy ſinnes is giuen thee. And likewiſe Proſper, cap. 6. de obiect. Gal. ſaith, The iuſtified man (that is of vnrighteous beeing made righteous) doth receiue a gift without any good merit going before his iuſtification. And *Soto, lib.*2.*de natur. et grat. cap.*4. acknowledgeth that we haue in vs diſpoſitions vnto righteouſneſſe, but denyeth that they can properly bee called merits. And *Stapleton, de peccat. orig. lib.*1.*cap.*4. ſaith, that Merit of congruence in reſpect of the firſt grace, is long agoe aboliſhed; nor is B it allowed of by the moſt approued ſchoolemen, as Thomas in his Summe, nor admitted by his followers or later writers at any time. Indeede Gregorie of Arimin, *lib.*2.*diſt.*26.*q.*1. doth expreſly condemne it, as Lyra alſo, in 1. Ioan. and *Thomas VValdenſis, lib.*3.de Sacram.

5 But Merit of condignitie is condemned alſo by ſome others: as namely, by Auguſtines cenſure *de verb. Apoſt. Serm.*2. in theſe words. Thou waſt not worthy —— whome hee might glorifie being iuſtified. —— He crowneth thee in his mercy and pitie: if thou haue preuented him by any merits, examine then thy merits (ſaith God) and thou ſhalt finde that they are my gifts. Anſelme likewiſe, de menſurat. cru. ſaith more plainely then any: If C a man ſhould ſerue God with greateſt feruencie, a thouſand yeares long, yet ſhould not all his deſerts be worth the ſtaying one halfe day in heauen; Looke in Gregorie of Arimin. in 1. *d.*17.*q.*1.*art.*2. Durand, in 2.*d.*27.*q.*2. et in 3.*d.*18.*q.*2. *VValdenſis, tom.*3. *de Sacra. c.*7. *Burgenſis, in additio. ad Lyram ſuper Pſal.*35. Scotus, in 1.Sent.d. 17. q. 2. thinketh that our good workes haue no proportion with eternall life, and bee therefore accepted of God for reward. You muſt know (ſaith *Cuſanus, excit. l.*9.) that Chriſts death onely was of abilitie to merit euerlaſting life, becauſe it beeing a conſummate death, doth merit an eternall life: None of all the other Martyrs doe merit eternall bliſſe by their death, becauſe all other D death of whom ſoeuer comes ſhort of the greateſt death, and is infinitely different from a conſummate death, which onely doth merit the greateſt (that is euerlaſting) life.

Faith.

1 THe Fathers affirme faith to iuſtifie a man not by diſpoſing him inwardly, or preparing him; but by apprehending Chriſt, and applying of him: which is when we doe ſtay our ſelues vpon the mercie of God and merits of Chriſt, holding God as fauourable vnto vs in Chriſt. This is ſet downe by God (ſaith Ambroſe, in 1. Cor. 1.)

that whoſoeuer beleeueth in Chriſt ſhall bee ſaued without workes, receiuing by his onely faith, free remiſſion of all his ſinnes. And Iſichius vpon Leuiticus, lib. 4. cap. 2. Grace is giuen out of mercie and compaſſion, and obtained by faith alone. And Marius Victor hath theſe words, in Gen. 3.

——but he
Beleeu'd, and this ſole faith he did confeſſe,
VVas held a worthy crowne of righteouſneſſe:
Thus we by Abrams great reward are taught,
By faith in Gods true word what good is taught.

As ſoone as euer a man beleeues (ſaith Chryſoſtome in Rom. 3. hom. 7.) he is forthwith iuſtified; and in his commentaries vpon the Heb. cap. 11. hom. 23. after he hath ſpoken of the promiſes made vnto the Patriarches, he addeth, Theſe by their onely faith conceiued an aſſured truſt of theſe things, ſeeing them a farre of, foure generations ere they came to paſſe——. So firmely were they perſwaded of them, that they did as it were ſalute them comming——Thou ſeeſt that this receiuing of theirs, was but an expectation and truſt of them; if therefore to truſt be to receiue, then may we alſo receiue. And it is Auguſtines opinion in Proſper, In Sent. 352. that the faith of Chriſt, is to beleeue in him that doth iuſtifie the wicked: to beleeue in the Mediatour without whome no man is reconciled vnto God: to beleeue in the Sauiour who came to ſeeke and ſaue that which was loſt; to beleeue in him that ſaid, you can do nothing without me. Now what it is to beleeue in him that iuſtifieth the wicked, the ſame Father Tract. 29. in Ioan. layeth downe, ſaying. VVhat is it then to beleeue in him? In beleeuing him to loue him, in beleeuing him to depend vpon him, in beleeuing him to turne vnto him, and to be incorporated into his bodie: And in other places, and that very often he vſeth to affirme that to beleeue in God, is to cleaue vnto God, and to bend towards God. Looke in his enarration vpon the 77. Pſalme, in his 54. tractate vpon Iohn, and in his 181. ſermon de tempore. He alſo in his 26. Tractate vpon Iohn ſaith, who ſo beleeueth in him, eateth him, and is inuiſibly fedde, becauſe inuiſibly regenerate: And in his 50. tractate vpon Iohn: How ſhall I reach my hand vnto heauen, and lay hold of him as he ſitteth there? why, ſend but vp thy faith, & thou haſt hold of him. And Ser. 33. de verb. Dom. Behold, we beleeue in Chriſt whome wee haue receiued through faith: and in our receiuing him we know what to thinke vpon: we receiue but a little, and yet our hearts are fedde fat therewith.

So Bertram in his booke of the bodie and blood of Chriſt, ſaith thus; This bodie is not to bee receiued, beheld, or eaten with the ſenſes of the fleſh, but with attention of a faithfull ſoule——And the decretals themſelues de conſecrat. d. 2. counſell vs in this manner, Behold the holy bodie and blood of thy Lord with faith, honour and admire it, touch it with thy minde, receiue it with the hand of thine heart, and take it wholly with the endeauour of the inward man. And Lombard Sent. lib. 3. diſt. 19. ſaith; We are ſaid alſo to bee otherwiſe iuſtified by the blood of Chriſt, namely, in that we are cleanſed from our ſins by the faith of his death: and therefore ſaith the Apoſtle, the righteouſneſſe of God (in vs) is through the faith of Ieſus Chriſt: and by and by after he ſaith; whome God hath made a propitiatour by faith in his blood, that is, by the faith of his paſſion——. If therefore we behold him that died vpon the croſſe for vs, with the eye of faith, we are looſed from the bands of the diuell, that is, from our ſinnes.

2 That the iuſtification of our ſoules by faith conſiſteth not in apprehenſiun but in inward preparation and diſpoſition, it is a fantaſtike inuention of the Schoolemen.

3 The Fathers doe hold faith onely to be requiſite vnto iuſtification, euen without the workes of grace. VVe muſt eſpecially beleeue (ſaith Auguſtin. Serm. 181. de temp.) the remiſſion of ſinnes; for this is the onely remedie which looſeth man from the ſentence of death eternall.

I am able to ſhew (ſaith Chryſoſtome hom. de fide & lege naturæ) that a faithfull man hath both liued in this life without workes, & hath attained vnto the kingdome of heauen——. And the theefe beleeued onely, and was iuſtified.——but I dare affirme that onely faith by it ſelfe hath ſaued ſome. And hom. 7. in cap. 3. Roman. VVhat is the law of faith? (ſaith he) to be ſaued by grace? Here hee ſheweth the power of God, in that he not onely ſaued vs, but alſo iuſtified and glorified vs, and that without vſe of any workes, exacting onely faith of vs.

VVe haue not beleeued of our owne accord, (ſaith Theodoret in Eph. 2.) but came being called, and when we are come, hee doth not exact puritie and innocency of life, but hath pardoned our ſinnes accepting of faith onely.

This it is to glorie in the Lord (ſaith Baſill Ser. de hum.) when a man is not puffed vp with his owne righteouſneſſe, but acknowledgeth himſelfe deſtitute of all true righteouſneſſe, and iuſtified by faith alone in Ieſus Chriſt.

They are iuſtified before God (ſaith Ambroſe in Roman. 4.) without any labour or toyle, by only faith, no workes of penitence beeing hereto required, but onely that they beleeue.

Origen vpon the 3. of the Romans, after he hath alleadged the example of Paul, ſaith: Therefore the iuſt cauſe of mans glorying is in the faith of the croſſe of Chriſt, which excludeth all glorying that proceedeth from the workes of the law.

Auguſtine againſt Pelagius his 2. epiſtle lib.1.cap.21. ſaith, that of how great holineſſe ſoeuer the Saints of either the new or old teſtament are ſaid to bee, yet nothing ſaued them but faith in the Mediatour, who ſhed his blood for the remiſſion of their ſinnes.

That a man ſhould bee ſaued by his faith, that hath no good workes, it may bee is not a thing out of cuſtome, ſaith Chryſoſtome in Rom.4.hom.8. but to ſee a man who is noted for good workes, not to be ſaued by them, but by faith, this is an admirable thing, and doth make a moſt manifeſt demonſtration of the efficacie and power of faith. And Hom.14.in 8.cap. VVe offer but one gift vnto God, namely in beleeuing his promiſes of things to come, & by this onely way we are brought vnto ſaluation.

4 VVhenſoeuer the Fathers doe ioyne faith and workes together, in the matter of our ſaluation, they ſpeake of an hiſtoricall and generall faith, which is onely a knowledge, and vniuerſall aſſent; or otherwiſe of the externall profeſſion of faith; or alſo of faith as it is the[*] pathway to ſaluation: for although faith as it is the inſtrument or meanes to apprehend Chriſt vnto righteouſnes, and ſaluation, be alone, and vnioyned with any other meane: yet as it is the way vnto ſaluation, it is not alone. VVhence we acknowledge that faith alone is not ſufficient vnto ſaluation, and to liue a good life by, but muſt haue the aſſiſtance of good workes and other vertues.

[*] Auguſt. Retract. l.1.c.14. via fidei.

The helpe of repentance, ſaith Lactantius de diuin, inſtit, epit, cap.9. is great: which whoſoeuer doth caſt away, doth barre himſelfe of the way to ſaluation.

Some do purge away their ſinnes——by watching, ſaith Chryſoſtome in Ioan. hom. 38. thou maiſt doe this an eaſier way, namely, by exerciſing patience vnto all men.

By workes of righteouſneſſe, ſaith Eucherius in Reg. lib.3. we come to the kingdome of heauen: and, we cannot come to theſe euerlaſting ioyes, but by faith, and works of iuſtice. And againe, let them begin at faith and continue to the end of their iourney in good manners, vntill they come whither they intend. in Gen. lib.3.

Let vs make pittie our patrone in this world, ſaith Ceſarius Hom.15. that it may deliuer vs in the world to come, for there is mercie in heauen, which is obtained by exerciſing mercie here vpon earth.

Some haſten vnto God by faſting, ſaith Haimo ſup. Pſal.135. others by almes, and others by other vertues. Let vs haſten vnto our countrey in heauen by doing good workes, ſaith another vic. Ideot, contemp. lib.2. cap.15. And Rabanus ſaith there are many fruits of repentance by which a man may attaine vnto the clearing of his crimes.

5 Sometimes the Fathers ioyning workes to faith, doe ſpeake of faith as it is a perſwaſion of the impunitie and freedome of ſinnes, without penitence: or as it is an vnperfect vertue, vnto which other vertues are therefore to be ioyned.

6 The Fathers doe acknowledge a ſpeciall and vnfallible certentie of faith in God. I truſt in God, ſaith Remigius Altiſiodorenſis in Pſal.10. that is, All my faith is in Chriſt: By him onely I beleeue to be iuſtified and ſaued; he is my rocke, he is my refuge.

He that beleeueth with a ſtrong affection, ſaith Theophylact doth extend his heart wholly vnto God, and what then? he is vnited to him. And his heart beeing enkindled, conceiueth a moſt certaine aſſurance to be made partaker of his deſire: this doe all men finde true by experience.

If thou beleeue that thy ſinnes cannot bee forgiuen, ſaith Bernard in Mar.11. De Annun. Ser.1. but by him whome onely thou didſt ſinne againſt, and who himſelfe cannot ſinne, thou doſt well: but adde this, that thou beleeue that by him they may be forgiuen, this is the teſtimonie that the holy Ghoſt doth ſet downe in thy heart ſaying, Thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee. And againe epiſt.107. Who is righteous but hee that recompenſeth Gods loue, with his loue againe? And this is neuer done, but when the holy Ghoſt by faith reuealeth vnto man, Gods purpoſe from euerlaſting, concerning his future ſaluation. And ſer.5. Dedica. Here it is moſt plainly neceſſarie that faith do ſuccour vs— that that which lieth hidden concerning vs in the heart of the Father, may by his Spirit bee reuealed vnto vs, and the ſame ſpirit teſtifying vnto vs, may perſwade our ſpirits that we are the ſonnes of God: and may perſwade vs by calling vs, and iuſtifying vs freely by faith. And againe elſewhere: We know that we are tranſlated from death to life by this quickening Spirit, and by a certaine and daily experiment (the ſame ſpirit enlightning vs) we doe prooue, that our prayers and contrition doe come from him, and aſcend vnto God, before whoſe eyes they doe finde mercie. And in his eight Sermon vpon the Canticles, VVhat ſoule amongſt you all (ſaith he) hath at ſometime felt the Spirit of the Sonne in his ſecret conſcience, crying, Abba, Father: Let that, O let that ſoule preſume boldly, that it is beloued with a Fatherly affection, that findeth it ſelfe affected with the ſame Spirit that affected the Sonne: truſt to it (thou ſoule whatſoeuer thou art) truſt vnto it, & neuer doubt at any thing. And in his 69. Sermon he hath theſe words. Nothing can forbid this ſoule to ſay, God is my beloued, which in that it feeles it ſelfe to loue, and to loue vehemently, doubts not but that it is beloued as ardently, and as vehemently: and of the ſingular intent, deſire, care, labour, diligence, and ſtudie, that it ſheweth in endeauouring ſo inceſſantly and earneſtly to pleaſe God, doth vndoubtedly acknowledge all theſe in it ſelfe, remembring that promiſe———therefore by it owne proper affects, it knoweth how God is affected, and doubteth not that it is beloued againe, ſeeing it ſelfe doth loue.

There is a certaine kind of glorying in a mans conſcience (ſaith Auguſtine, in Pſalm. 149.) and that is, when thou knoweſt thy faith to be ſincere, thy hope to bee infallible, thy charitie to be vnfained. And in his 75. Tractate vpon Iohn, he hath this ſaying: For now is he in vs, and wee in him, but this as now we doe but beleeue, but then we ſhall know alſo: although wee know it already by beleeuing: but then wee ſhall know it by contemplating. And in another place, In his 13. booke of the Trinitie, chap. 1. and 2. he ſaith, Euery man that beleeueth, ſeeth faith to be in his heart, and he that beleeueth not, ſeeth that faith is not in his heart.

The mind that is repleniſhed with the holy Ghoſt (ſaith Gregorie, Dial. lib. 1. cap. 1.) hath moſt euident ſignes thereof, namely, vertues and humilitie: which if they doe perfectly concurre in one mind, it is certaine that they doe bring aſſured teſtimonie of the preſence of the holy Ghoſt. And in the ſixt booke of his Regiſter, chap. 187. The ſoule that thirſteth for God, is firſt touched with feare, and then with loue.——But when the feare is worne out with the continuall languiſhment of ſorrow, thē at laſt entreth ſome ſecuritie and hope of the preſuming of pardon. And in his Morals, lib. 31. cap. 23. he ſaith, that the ſecuritie of the righteous man, is fitly compared vnto a lyon: who when hee ſeeth any come againſt him, betakes himſelfe to his wonted courage: ſo the other knoweth that he ſhall ouercome all aduerſaries, becauſe he loueth him onely, whom againſt his will he can neuer fall from.

There is abiding in vs (ſaith Cyprian, ad Demet.) a fortitude of hope, and a firmeneſſe of faith, and an vpright and vigorous heart, (euen amongſt the greateſt ruines of this declining world) and a patience alwaies reioycing, and a ſoule alwaies ſecure of the fauour of his God. And de Cœna elſewhere: Our affection knowing it ſelfe cured and ſanctified, waſheth it ſelfe with teares.——And in his (Gods) preſence theſe wel-ſhed teares doe begge for pardon.

Let the hearts of the faithfull (ſaith Leo, Sermon, 10. de quadr.) examine themſelues, ——that finding in themſelues any fruits of charitie laid vp, they may know without all doubt that God is in them. And Serm. 8. de Epiphan. He that will trie whether God doe dwell within him or no,——if hee doe diligently examine the inward parts of his heart, and doe finde therein the loue of God & his neighbour, aſſuredly, and without diſſimulation, hee needeth not doubt that God both gouerneth him and dwelleth in him.

He gaue him for vs (ſaith Ambroſe, de Iacob, & vit. beat. lib. 1. cap. 6.) therefore there is no doubt that we need feare any thing ſhould be denied vs, there is no cauſe for vs to doubt of the continuance of Gods munificence towards vs. And againe, Serm. 7. in Pſalm. 118. He that hath a good conſcience, is not troubled nor in doubt, but conſtantly affirmeth, VVe be the heires of God, and ioynt-heires with Chriſt. And in one of the ſermons vnder his name, he ſaith: whoſoeuer doth ſticke faſt vnto that leauen Chriſt, ſhall alſo be conuerted into leauen, as well helpefull to himſelfe, as conuenient vnto others, and certaine of his ſaluation, and ſecure of the calling and gaining of others.

By this that the holy Ghoſt doth infuſe charitie into vs (ſaith Anſelme, in Rom. 8.) he declareth vnto our hearts by an euident teſtimony that we are the children of God. And in 1. Cor. 2. VVe know by his ſpirit, that wee haue both his gifts, and alſo receiued them of him. And againe, He that hath the feeling of faith in his heart, this man knoweth that Chriſt is in him. in 2. Cor. 13.

VVhenſoeuer any man feeleth himſelfe ſo affected either with his owne ſins, or with others as we haue ſaid, ſaith Baſil Reg. contract. q. 296. then [πληροφορία] let him vndoubtedly know, that he is free from ſinne.

And Cyrill vpon Iohn lib. 10. cap. 3. beſides this generall knowledge doth alſo ſet downe another, namely by which the faithfull hauing receiued illumination from the ſpirit, do with the eyes of their minde ſee God dwelling in them. This is not (ſaith he) the common and generall knowledge of the Saints, but another, farre more cleare, and more certaine, and farre differing from that other generall knowledge.

Let vs bring faith and obedience (ſaith Chryſoſtome, in Gen. cap. 29. hom. 54.) and beleeue as confidently vpon Gods promiſes, as though they were alreadie performed: and againe in Rom. 8. hom. 14. Seeing we haue the teſtimonie of that ſupreme eſſence, who giueth vs what hee promiſeth, and alſo commandeth vs to aske, who can from henceforth doubt of this dignitie?

When theſe three are ſealed in the minde (ſaith Hales ſup. 2. diſt. 12. q. 20.) light, gladneſſe, and peace, it is a moſt ſure experiment that the ſoule hath grace.

Yea Thomas Aquinas 1. 2. q. 112. art. 5. and the moſt auncient of the ſchoolemen, doe rather deny the certainty of knowledge then of faith. I beleeue that I haue faith (ſaith Scotus lib. 3. diſt. 23.) and ſo affirme all the moderne writers. The Enchridion of Colen teacheth that it is neceſſarie vnto iuſtification for euery one to beleeue certainly that his ſinnes are forgiuen him. So Catharinus teacheth and defendeth that the faithfull may haue aſſurance of faith concerning grace in this life. And Caiet. in Rom. 8. ſaith, that the teſtimonie of the ſpirit is a gift by which I neither ſee, nor know, but I beleeue that I am the ſonne of God. So Marinarius the Carmelite Frier in his oration vnto the Councell of Trent, An. 1546. ſaith, Let a man abhorre the fruitleſſe confidence in his owne worth, and depend wholly vpon Gods mercy, let him hold God to be alwaies preſent with him as a moſt mercifull Father, from whome he is alwaies to expect all ioy, and all felicity; nor ought he euer to let this perſwaſion goe out of his minde, although he be moleſted with the moſt intollerable and infinite difficulties that the world, the fleſh, and the diuell ——— can any waies inflict, to withdraw vs from our truſt vpon God and his diuine worſhip. And, VVherefore they neuer wander in the Labyrinth of doubt, (that haue obtained) righteouſneſſe through Chriſt: but liuing in ſecurity of conſcience, in peace of minde, in ioy of heart, and taught by that Spirit which teſtifieth vnto them that they are the ſonnes of God, they dare be bold to ſay, Abba Father.

7 VVhere the Fathers doe ſometimes ſeeme to deny the ſpeciall aſſurance of faith,
1 they doe ſpeake of preſumption, or the car-nall ſecuritie wherein men doe dreame of liberty and peace without temptation and hazard. VVhich of all the company of the faithfull (ſaith S. Auguſt. de corr. et grat. cap. 13.)
dares preſume that hee is of the number of the predeſtinate, ſo long as he liueth here vp-on earth?
2 Sometimes they ſpeake of the certainty of continuance vnto the end without fall or defect; and in this ſenſe ſaith *Auguſtine De ciuit.
Dei lib.* 11. cap. 12. VVho is he that knoweth that he ſhall perſeuere in increaſe and acts of iuſtice vntill the end, vnleſſe he be inſtructed of this by reuelation from him that inſtructeth all concerning this matter by his iuſt and ſecret iudgement, & deceiueth no man.
3 Sometimes they ſpeake of the aſſurance of experience, which is alwaies after the euent
4 of the thing. Sometimes of the certainty of 5 grace and ſaluation of others. Sometimes of aſſurance by ſpeciall reuelation, or priui-ledged aſſurance, not the ordinarie certainty 6 contained in the word & ſacraments. Sometimes of the demonſtratiue aſſurance, beget-ting knowledge in the minde, by peculiar and proper principles, not of the aſſurance of 7 faith. And ſometimes of that certainty which is without any ſignes or tokens, called the certainty of Euidence.

8 The ſpeciall and particular aſſurance of faith was neuer condemned for hereſie before the Councell of Trent condemned it.

Fulfilling of the Law.

Supererogation.

1 THe Fathers doe affirme the law to be fulfilled, firſt by imputing the obedience of Chriſt by faith, and then, by be- A ginning to worke it, and endeauouring either according to ability, not perfectly in the perfection of parts, but in their degrees. Teſtimonies.

All the commandements of God are accounted to be fulfilled, when whatſoeuer is not done, is pardoned. Auguſt. Retract. lib. 1. cap. 19.

Therefore we are iuſt (ſaith Hierom lib. 1. cont. Pelag.) when wee confeſſe our ſelues ſinners, and our iuſtice conſiſteth not in our owne proper merits, but in the mercie of God. Lo [illegible] firſt booke of Bernard [illegible].

He that beleeueth in Chriſt (ſaith Theodoret. in Rom. 10.) doth fulfill the ſcope of the law. VVhat will the law doe, (ſaith Chryſoſtome, in B Rom. 10. Hom. 17.) make a man iuſt? it cannot: for none did euer fulfill it.

He hath obtained the perfection of the law, ſaith Sedulius in Rom. 10. who beleeueth in Chriſt; for ſeeing none is iuſtified by the law, becauſe none hath fulfilled the law, faith was ſet downe to ſatisfie for all omiſſions in the whole law.

No man euer fulfilled the law (ſaith Cuſanus, Excit. lib. 10.) which conſiſteth in loue, but he alone that came not to diſſolue the law, but to fulfill it.

2 Now, that there are two waies of fulfilling the law properly and perfectly without any breach; one in this preſent life, and another in the life to come; none that I euer C heard of, but the ſchoolemen, did euer teach. For the auncient Doctors doe acknowledge no perfection at all in this life, but onely that which conſiſteth in acknowledging our imperfection and enormities. So ſaith S. Auguſt. cont. 2. ep. Pelag. l. 3. c. 7. That vertue which is in a man which is iuſt, in this life is called perfect with this prouiſo, that vnto the perfection thereof, there doe alſo belong both a true knowledge, and an humble confeſſion of the imperfection thereof. And in ep. 29 ad Hiero. Such Charity ——— as cannot be increaſed in this life, is in no man: and as long as it may be increaſed, that which is leſſe then it ought to be, is of corruption, by reaſon of which there is not one iuſt man vpon earth that doth D good and ſinneth not. By which corruption it commeth to paſſe, that no liuing man ſhal be iuſtified in Gods ſight. And, de perfect. iuſti. reſp. ad Ratiocin. 17. he ſaith: As long as there is any reliques of carnall concupiſcence remaining ——— God is not wholly beloued, nor with the whole heart; for the fleſh without the ſoule hath no concupiſcence. But in his booke, de Spiritu et litera, the laſt chapter, he ſeemeth to hold a contrary opinion; for there he ſaith, that if here there cannot be ſo much loue of God as is due vnto a full & perfect knowledge, this is not for all that to bee accounted as a fault. But for the reconciliation of theſe two places, wee muſt know that there is two ſorts of faults: the one when a thing is done directly oppoſite vnto Gods will, and by him forbidden; the other when that is done which God commaundeth, but not altogether with the whole heart, as hee commandeth: and this Auguſtine ſpeaketh not of, but of the other in the later quotation, & contrariwiſe of the former in the firſt.

Wee are not iuſtified by works (ſaith Ambroſe, libro 2. de Iacob. cap. 2.) but by faith: becauſe our carnall infirmitie doth hinder our workes.

The Saints themſelues (quoth Bernard, in Cant. Serm. 73.) had neede to pray for their ſinnes, that they may haue ſaluation through mercy, and not in truſting to their owne righteouſneſſe. And againe, in Cant. 50. How ſhould that bee commaunded which could not poſſibly be fulfilled? or if you will haue it to concerne onely the affect (of Charitie,) I will not ſtand in contention with you, ſo that you grant thus much to me, that it cannot, nor euer ſhall be fulfilled in this life, by any man.

We can hardly do one good worke (ſaith Radulphus, in Leuit. l. 1. c. 1.) without intermixtion of ſome ſinne or other with it, and it is to bee feared, leſt when wee looke for a complete reward of deuotion, the puniſhment for the fault therewith conioyned, be not exacted of vs.

3 Supererogation, wherein a good worke of counſell done ouer and beyond the fulfilling of the law, is acceptable vnto God, was a ſtranger vnto the knowledge of the Fathers. For although they ſay that virginity is offered more then due, and aboue the lawes; and that many doe exceed the commandements with their workes, and performe more in duty thē the precepts do bind them to; yet, that the law is ſo kept, that the keepers are not tranſgreſſours, they doe not ſay; I affirme againe, they do not ſay ſo. But they will haue ſupererogatiue workes done, not that there can bee any duty done which is beyond the morall law, but theſe workes they holde may ſurpaſſe, firſt the negatiue part: for ſo ſaith Chryſoſtome, Hom. 8. in Rom. 4. Not to ſteale or kill, is in euery mans power: but to beleeue that God can do that which is otherwiſe impoſſible, this requires a minde eleuated, and a more vehement affectiō towards God: For this is a ſigne of a worthy and noble loue. He honours God that keepes his commaundements: but he much more that can argue and diſpute through his faith: the other obeyeth God, but this doth aſcribe him —— his glorie with greater meaſure and vehemency.

Secondly, they held ſupererogation aboue externall acts, and in this ſenſe Chryſoſt. Hom. 3. in 1. Cor. doth ſpeake when he determineth that the Philoſophers had ſupererogation: Are not his precepts ſo eaſie (quoth he) that many haue gone beyond them by Philoſophicall reaſon?

Thirdly, they held it as it exceedeth ſome one commaundement. So is Auguſtines ſaying vnderſtood of the virgins, Ser. 8. de verb. Apoſt. The virgins (quoth he) did labour for the beauty of the heart: What doeſt thou command vs? to abſtaine from adultery? doſt thou commaund vs this? wee doe performe more in louing thee then thou commandeſt vs: that is, in this commandement.

Laſtly, as it exceedeth a commandement which is common vnto other men. The Apoſtle Paul did ſpend more (ſaith Auguſt. de opere. Monac. c. 5.) becauſe (as himſelfe witneſſeth,) he warred at his owne charges.

Virginitie is a voluntarie thing (ſaith Optatus, lib. 6. cont. Parm.) and not of neceſſity —— S. Paul giues not any precept, but only counſelleth vs vnto virginity: So do ſome of the other Fathers account virginity aboue the law, that is, aboue the ordinary obſeruation of the law amongſt other Chriſtians, becauſe they thought it to be an Angelicall ſtate. But yet Athanaſius, libro de incar. Ver. doth put virginitie from amongſt the counſels, and in the Precepts: What man, ſaith hee, either in his life, or after his death, hath beene the author of keeping virginitie? ———— yet our Sauior Chriſt the King of all men, preuailed thus much in theſe kinde of cōmandements, that childrē not being of maturity to receiue the diſcipline of the lawes, ſhould profeſſe virginity which is aboue the lawes. And in his Apologie to Conſtantius; That holy and heauenly command of eternall virginity is not kept nor fulfilled happily, but onely amongſt vs Chriſtians.

4 This kinde of ſupererogation, which the Papiſts now teach, is in ſome ſort reprooued by ſome of the Fathers.

None can reſtore ſo much as hee oweth, ſaith Anſelmus, de concep. Virg. c. 21. only Chriſt reſtored for all that are ſaued, more then hee ought. And Thomas in 2. 2. queſt. 184. art. 3. will haue perfection to conſiſt really and eſſentially in the keeping of the commaundements, & inſtrumentally in the executing of the counſels: and for this purpoſe alleadgeth the words of Abbot Moyſes: Faſtings, watchings, &c. are not perfection it ſelfe, but the inſtruments of perfection, becauſe that the end of that diſcipline doth not conſiſt in them, but they are the means to bring vs vnto that end.

Pilgrimage.

1 RELigious Pilgrimage got footing after Conſtantines time, about the yeare of grace 330. and yet was not as then vſed by all, but only by the vulgar: nor vndertaken for any worſhip of God, or merit ſake, but onely for confirmation of faith. It is a part of faith (ſaith Hierome epiſt. 154.) to worſhip the ground whereupon Chriſts feete did tread. Seuerus Sulpitius hiſtor. libro ſecundo, and Paulinus, epiſt. ad Seuer. ſaith, that mens mindes doe draw them to Hieruſalem for no other cauſe, but only to ſee, and to touch the places wherein Chriſt was corporally preſent.

And before Conſtantines time, it is tolde as a rare thing of Alexander, and a wonderfull, that hee haſted vnto Hieruſalem, to worſhip and viſite the holy places, as Euſebius recordeth, lib. 6. cap. 10. But marke there that al this was done by a viſion.

2 Afterward, ſucceeding times changed theſe pilgrimages into part of Gods worſhip and religion; but yet the moſt orthodoxall Fathers in that reſpect did alwaies condemne it. So doth Nyſſenus in an epiſtle of his, affirming that it addeth not a iotte vnto piety, and that God is preſent to thoſe that call vpon his name, in euery place alike. The Lord ſaith not, ſaith Auguſtin. Ser. de Mart. 3. inter Ser. de Sanct. goe into the Eaſt, and ſeeke iuſtice, or ſayle into the Weſt to receiue pardon: forgiue thine enemy, and thou ſhalt bee forgiuen: Doe not ſeeke ought of thy ſelfe, without thy ſelfe. God doth direct thee vnto thy ſelfe, and thine owne conſcience.

Hildebertus Cenomanenſis in an epiſtle to a certain Count, doth affirme, that Pilgrimage is an inexcuſable ſin in them that are bound vnto any miniſtery, and likewiſe that to preferre things not neceſſary, before things neceſſarie, & things not due, before duties: —— and to wander about the world, no Doctor, no Scripture doth at any time, or in any place mention. And Chryſoſtome, Homil. 2. in Philem. ſaith truly, that vnto forgiuenes of ſinnes it is altogether needleſſe to vndertake any Pilgrimage.

3 But as for ſet Pilgrimages vnto certaine images, there was neuer Father dreamed of them for 600 yeares after Chriſt, at the leaſt.

Faſting, Stations, Proceſſion.

1 CONcerning the Lent-faſt, the Fathers are vncertaine: ſome ſay that it is a tradition of the Apoſtles, of which rank are Hierome, ad Marc. epiſt. 54. and Leo, Sermone ſexto & nono de Quadrageſ. Others ſay, that Chriſt himſelfe appointed this faſt of Lent. Ambroſe, Serm. 25. ſaith, it was conſecrated by Chriſt, and Serm. 34. A law giuen by God, a faſt enioyned by Chriſt. And Theophilus of Alexandria, Paſc. epiſt. 1. ad finem, calleth it an Euangelicall inſtitution. Caſſianus, collat. 21. cap. 30. ſaith, (a) That in the primitiue Church their faſt was alike throughout the whole yeare: and then deuotion beginning to grow colde, and faſting to bee neglected, the prieſts commaunded this faſt of Lent. Amalarius, libro ſecundo, capite quinto,

A denieth that any man can truely aſſigne the firſt inuentour of Lent. And Ireneus, apud Euſeb. libro quinto, capite 26. ſaith, that it is but meerely [illegible] a cuſtome riſen out of ſimplicity, and ſome priuate inſtitution.

2 The faſt of Lent in the firſt ages of the Church, was a faſt of great religion and holineſſe, kept for the maintaining of more commodious and ſpirituall exerciſes of inuocation and repentance, and vſed for a remembrance of Chriſts paſſion.

What ſhould I ſtand to relate the often meetings together, (ſaith Euſebius, Hiſt. lib. 2. cap. 16.) and the exerciſes of the men beeing placed together in one roome, and the

B women in another, apart, and the ſeuere order of diſcipline, which wee as yet doe cuſtomably obſerue, and doe vſe to celebrate eſpecially vpon the feaſt of our Lords paſſion, not onely in faſting and watchings, but in the diligent hearing of the holy Scriptures?

If we haue done no good (ſaith Baſil, Hom. 24. in Ebrietat.) by ſo many admonitions, which I haue neuer omitted to exhort you with, in all the time before, and now eſpecially in theſe ſeauen weekes of faſting, wherein continually, night and day I haue inſtructed you in the doctrine of the Goſpel without all intermiſſion, ——— &c.

This faſt is not appointed vs (ſaith Epiphanius, in fine Panar.) whereby to render any fa-

C uour or good turne vnto him that ſuffered for vs, but to confeſſe and acknowledge his paſſion which he vndertooke for vs vnto our ſaluation.

For this ende, (ſaith Chryſoſtome, Hom. 19. ad pop. Antioch.) haue we our faſtings, and our Lent, for this end haue we ſo many holy meetings, and hearing, and hitherto tend all our praiers, and all our doctrine, namely, that being by the diligent meditation of Gods precepts cleanſed from all the ſpottes of ſinne, whereby wee haue beene any way ſtained for the whole yeare, truſting to our ſpiritual freedome, we may receiue that vnbloody Sacrifice, like as godly and religious men ought to doe. And. 73. Homil. ad pop. Antioch. de ieiun.

D Quad. It is not only required of vs (my deareſt brethren) to meete here euery day, and to heare continually of the ſame things, and to faſt the whole Lent, &c.

3 This faſting of Lent was kept freely, without any bond of conſcience, or any neceſſitie of commaund euen vnto the yeare of grace, 400. This is true both in reſpect of the limite of time, as well as of the ſorts of meates. Teſtimonies.

Ambroſe, de Elia & Ieiu. c. 22. inuiting vs vnto voluntarie faſting, ſaith; Vndergoe you the yoke of Chriſt —— he doth not binde your necke with bands, but coupleth the minde to him with fauour and grace: hee doth not compell a man by neceſſity, but directeth the willing of good workes.

---

[a] It may be hee tooke this from Hier. who hath the like ſaying, Epiſt. 22. ad Euſtochium.

Christians (ſaith Auguſtine, cont. Fauſt. Man. libr. 30. cap. 5.) not Hæretikes, but Catholikes doe abſtaind both from ſome ſorts of fleſh, and alſo from ſome kindes of fruites, and that for the taming of their fleſh, and to humble & withdraw their ſoule from bruitiſh and vnreaſonable motions, not that they thinke the meates, or fruites any waies vncleane: and this vſe is obſerued either continually, which fewe doe, or at certaine times and daies, as almoſt all doe throughout the Lent, euery one as much or as little as hee is willing, or as hee is able. But whereas hee ſaith (at leaſt a Sermon vnder his name, viz. 62. de temp.) that it is ſin not to faſt the Lent, this is not to be vnderſtood as if there were a law hereof, but in reſpect of the neglecting of the publike penance which was commonly renewed in this faſt. So Theodoret, in Epit. diuin. Decret. ſpeaking of the eating of fleſh, and drinking of wine, ſaith, that the Church doth not forbidde the vſe of them: and therefore ſome doe make lawfull vſe of theſe goods & pleaſures allowed by the law, & otherſome againe do abſtaine from them: but no man of right iudgement or wiſedome will condemne him that vſeth them. For to abſtaine from them, as well as to eate them, is in his choice and power. And Auguſtine, in lib. 1. cap. 33. De moribus Eccleſiæ, ſaith, that abſtinence and feaſting were both allowed by reaſon and charity, nor is any man conſtrained to forbeare the vſe of this or that meate, but it is left free to euery man, as farre as euery mans health doth permit him. And Proſper de vita contemplat. lib. 2. cap. vlt. ſaith, that we ought to faſt and abſtaine, that we do not binde our ſelues to the neceſſity of faſting, leſt thereby wee ſhould be brought to do a voluntary thing, not of deuotion, but of compulſion.

Concerning faſting (ſaith Primaſius, in Roman. capite 14.) there is no law ſet downe, but euery man as hee can, or will. Spiridion did eate fleſh freely, as Sozomene teſtifieth, libro primo, capite vndecim. And it was Montanus that firſt preſcribed lawes of faſting, which Euſebius affirmeth of him, libro quin. capite 16. Teleſphorus indeede commaunded the Cleargie to faſt the Lent, about the yeare 130. And Ercombert king of England, did firſt commaund the Engliſh men to keepe it in the yeare 640. Sigebert, in Chron. This man, ſaith Florentius a Monke of Worceſter, (ſpeaking of Ercombert) was the firſt of the kings of England that commaunded the idols to bee deſtroyed, and the faſt of fortie daies to be obſerued throughout all his kingdome.

4 This faſt of Lent in diuers Churches was diuerſly obſerued, both in the time, and alſo in the kindes of meates. Thoſe that are at Rome (ſaith Socrates, libro quinto, capite 21.) doe faſt three weekes before the Eaſter, excepting Saturday & Sunday. Thoſe that liue in Illyria, and all Greece, and Alexandria, do beginne their faſts ſixe weekes before Eaſter, calling that time their Paſcha. Others, (beſides theſe cuſtomes) beginning their faſt ſeauen weekes before Eaſter, and yet faſting but fifteene daies onely, equally diuided by ſpaces betweene, doe yet call that whole time, Lent: which breeds no ſmall wonder in me, that all theſe diſſenting in the number of the daies, ſhould neuertheleſſe call all their faſts by the ſame name.

The faſt before Eaſter, though it were but of fewe daies, yet was called Lent: perhaps becauſe it conſiſted of forty houres of day & night, as it is in Euſebius, libro quint. capite 24. and Leo in his fourth Sermon of Lent, ſaith, Let vs faſt on Munday, Wedneſday, and Friday, and on Saturday let vs watch at S. Peters. Gregorie ſaith, homil. 16. That the Lent was a faſt of ſixe and thirty daies. And it is a receiued opinion, that before his time the Lent beganne not vpon Wedneſday, becauſe that in the Decretals, in capite quadrageſim. de conſecrat. diſt. 5. (which were made after him) the foure daies before the firſt Sunday in Lent are added to make vp the number of forty. This doth Ambroſe teſtifie in his foure and thirtieth Sermon, and Caſſianus, Col. 21. c. 24. 27. 28. & do teach, that the Lent vſed alwaies to beginne vpon the Sunday next after Quinquageſima Sunday. So likewiſe holdeth Alcuine de diuin. offic. capite 40. and Ordo Romanus in capite de Septuageſ. and Micrologus, capite 49. I confeſſe there is a Sermon extant amongſt Saint Auguſtines De Tempore, in Feria quarta, which is intituled, A Sermon vpon the Wedneſday in the beginning of the faſt: but that Sermon is none of Auguſtines, and if it be, I ſay the title is added by ſome of later time, and that for the reaſons before alleadged.

The holy Church (ſaith Epiphanius, in via comp.) did accuſtome to keepe all the Lent before the ſeauen daies of Eaſter, in faſting. Now after this faſt of 40. daies the Church was wont to keep fifty daies of feaſts vnto the Pentecoſt.

5 This faſt of Lent was whilome very ſeuerely obſerued, in bread and water, without wines or fiſhes. For the Fathers vſed to eate drie things, that is, bread and ſalt with water: ſo Epiphanius doth teſtifie, in fine Panar. They faſted from fleſh and wine. So witneſſeth Gregorie of Nyſſa alſo, in his oration of louing the poore, and the fourth Councell of Carthage, cap. 85. And Hieron. ad Lat. ſaith, they abſtained from oyle and apples: and in another place, in Epitaph. Paulæ, from wine, liquours, fiſh, hony, and egges. And Chryſoſtome, Serm. de ieiun. ſaith, that the Church abſtained from fleſh and wines. Micrologus, cap. 49. ſaith, Wee are not held to faſt the Lent according to the Canons, if that we eate any thing before euening. And Ambroſe, Serm. 34. oppoſeth the faſter in Lent vnto him that that hath dined. Wherefore this Popiſh faſt of Lent, that forbiddeth fleſh, and alloweth whit-meates & fiſh, was not heard of amongſt the Fathers. Let thoſe that are to faſt (ſaith Molanus, in practic. Theolog. tractat. 3. cap. 11. num. 69.) remember that the Fathers abſtained from wine and delicates. And againe, de Canonic. lib. 1. cap. 26. If we looke into the ancient ſeuerity and diſcipline, ſcarce any one now adaies ſhall proue himſelfe a true faſter: for they faſted vntill euen, we vſe to take our dinners.

6 The faſt of Lent was obſerued by ſome oftentimes in the yeare, and not alwaies before Eaſter: There was a faſt of Lent impoſed vpon the penitents, to be obſerued after Pentecoſt, as Micrologus recordeth, de obſeru. Eccl. cap. 23. The Montaniſts faſted three Lents in the yeare. Hierome vnto Marcella, Epiſt. 54 affirmeth it: and addeth, We according to Apoſtolike tradition doe faſt one Lent in the whole yeare, at a time fit for vs. And Methodius of Conſtantinople decreeth of the penitents after abiuration: Let them faſt two Lents, in continued prayer. S. Francis, and others, kept three, fiue, ſixe Lents.

7 The Stations amongſt the Fathers were ſolemne and publike faſts, obſerued in the Church on the day, from morning vntill night. But the Stations of the Church of Rome at this preſent are not ſolemnized from morning vntill night, nor of the ſame perſons, but by others, and others ſucceſſiuely obſeruing them: and now adaies the faſt is ended ere the ſtation doe begin, which is ſtill celebrated after meate. Looke Ambroſe his 25. Sermon.

8 Concerning the faſtings vpon the euens of great feaſts, Bernard was the firſt that euer mentioned them, Ser. de vigil. S. Andr. and after him Innocentius the third, De obſeru. ieiun. cap. 1. & 22.

9 That the faſting of Ember weekes is a Tradition of the Apoſtles, Leo doth teſtifie in two ſeuerall places, De ieiun. 7. menſ. Ser. 8. & 2. de Pent. But how vncertaine this is, hereby appeareth, becauſe Pope Calixtus the 1. in his Epiſtle vnto Benedict doth affirme, that he did inſtitute the faſt of Ember weeke. And Tertullian, de ieiun. doth teſtifie, that the Catholikes of his time did auerre, that the Apoſtles did impoſe no burthen of faſting vpon them, but onely the Paſchall faſt. And Ambroſe in his 34. Sermon affirmes all faſts but the Lent faſt, to bee voluntarie and at free choice. They are of free choice, ſaith he, this is the law: vnto them wee are ſtirred vp, but vnto this we are compelled.

10 To faſt vpon Saturday is expreſly forbidden by the Canon of the Apoſtles, can. 65. and by Ignatius in his Epiſtle to the Philippians, wherein hee is called a murtherer of Chriſt, that faſteth vpon Saturday or Sunday: yet the Romane Church doth now obſerue this faſt.

11 Pope Agapete de Conſecrat. diſtinct. 1. (in the yeare 533.) did firſt ordaine Proceſſions vpon Sundaies, as Caranza alſo teſtifieth. And the Arrians of Conſtantinople had done the ſame before, which Chryſoſtome both imitated, and augmented in number and ſolemnity. So doth Sozomene affirme, hiſt. eccl. lib. 8. cap. 8

Sacraments.

1 THat there are ſeauen Sacraments of the new Teſtament properly and truely ſo called, no Father for a thouſand yeares doth either affirme or acknowledge. The ſacraments, ſaith Iſidore, (that liued 600. yeares after Chriſt, lib. origin. 6. capite 19.) are Baptiſme and Chriſme: and the bodie and blood of Chriſt. Paſca. de cœna, about the yeare 900. ſaith, The Sacraments of Chriſt in the Catholike Church are baptiſme, and the body and blood of our Lord. Hugo de ſancto Victore in his booke of the ſacraments, doth ſet downe ſeauen of them: but hee excludeth pennance, and taketh in holy water for one. Nay, ſome of the Fathers doe expreſly affirme, that waſhing of the feete is a Sacrament, ſo holdeth Cyprian de ablu. pedum. Ambroſe, libro 3. de Sacram. cap. 1. and Bernard. Serm. de cœna. Dom. Lombard, and his ſucceding traine of ſchoole-men, were the firſt that euer directly affirmed, that there were ſeauen ſacraments.

2 The Fathers though they doe ſometimes giue the name of ſacrament vnto other ceremonies, yet doe acknowledge baptiſme, and the Lords Supper to be the true Sacraments, and the chiefe. Indeed they doe call other things Sacraments, but not in that reſpect and value that they call theſe two. So Auguſtine, de Symb. ad Catechu. libro 2. capite 6. ſaith, that the 2. Sacraments of the Church flowed out of the ſide of Chriſt. And Epiſt. 118. hee ſaith, that the Sacraments are in number moſt few. And Rupertus Tuitienſis, De victoria verb. Dei, lib. 12. cap. 11. asketh this queſtion: What are the chiefeſt Sacraments of our ſaluation? and hee anſwereth, Sacred Baptiſme, and the holy Euchariſt of Chriſts body and blood, the double gift of the holy Ghoſt, the one giuen for remiſſion of ſinnes, and the other for the diuiding of the diuers and multiplied graces. There are ſome Sacraments, ſaith Hugo de Sanct. Victor. l. de ſacr. par. 9. cap. 6. wherein our ſaluation doth principally conſiſt, and is conceiued: Such are the water of Baptiſme, and the receiuing of Chriſts bodie and blood. There are other which though they bee not neceſſarie vnto ſaluation, (becauſe that may be had without them) yet they are helpfull vnto ſanctification. Matthew of Paris in his chronicle writing of William the Conquerour, ſaith, that it was the opinion of the Fathers, and they had written that the ſacraments which are vſed in the Church, namely Baptiſme, Chriſme, and the Lords Euchariſt, haue their effect — by the co-operation of the ſpirit inuiſible. Alexander Hales, part. 4. q. 8. art. 2. doth auerre plainely that Chriſt did by himſelfe ordaine but onely two ſacraments: Baptiſme, and the Euchariſt: and he prooueth it by the flowing of water and blood out of the ſide of Chriſt.

3. The name of ſacrament in the Fathers is ſometimes taken largely, for any myſtery, ſigne, or figure of ſome holy and ſpirituall thing. Auguſtine in his 5. epiſtle ſaith, Euery ſigne of a holy thing is a ſacrament. In this ſenſe to Alex. 1. epiſt. 1. holy water is a ſacrament: as alſo in Aug. l. 2. de peccat. merit. & remiſſ. c. 26. holy bread, & in Aug. l. 19. cont. Fauſt. c. 14. the ſigne of the croſſe, &c. To ſpeake all in a word, in this ſenſe there are rather ſeuenty ſacraments then ſeauen. But ſometimes the word [ſacrament] is taken properly for the viſible ſigne and ſeale of the couenant of grace: and in this ſenſe there are not ſeauen, but two ſacraments in the Church. This double vnderſtanding of the word [ſacrament] Bellarmine himſelfe doth acknowledge.

4 Neither doe all the Schoole-men and canoniſts acknowledge ſeauen ſacraments of the new Teſtament, called properly ſacraments. For Durandus in his firſt edition of his worke vpon the Sentences, 4. diſt. 26. denied Matrimony to be a ſacrament, as Capreolus doth teſtifie, in 4. diſt. 26. But afterwards in the ſame diſtinction, queſt. 3. he mitigated his opinion, and put downe, that Matrimony is not a ſacrament properly called ſo, and vniuocally, as the reſt of the ſacraments are. And ſo holdeth Lumbard himſelfe, 4. diſt. 26. As Thomas, 4. diſt. 26. queſt. 2. ad 4. doth teſtifie. And ſo alſo holdeth Hoſtienſis, in Summa. lib. 1. titulo de ſacram. non iterand. Bernardi Gloſſe, cap. cum in eccleſia, de Sim. & cap. honorat. 32. qu. 2. And Paludanus who auerreth this to be the common opinion of the Canoniſts, in 4. diſt. 26. qu. 1. Some do alſo deny that Matrimony lawfully contracted betweene Chriſtians is a ſacrament: ſo doth Caietane in a little worke of his concerning Matrimony, qu. 1. and Melchior Canus in his Relection of Penitence, part. 5. and at large, locor. com. lib. 8. c. 5. where for his opinion, hee quoteth many teſtimonies out of the decretal Epiſtles, Councels, Fathers, and Schoole-men. Of this opinion is Francis à Victoria in his ſumme de ſacram. numer. 244. and Martinus Ledeſma, in 2. tom. 4. diſt. 44. art. 8. Now many doe holde that Matrimony is not onely a ſacrament of the new Teſtament, (as the Councel of Trent, Seſſ. 8. can. 1. wil haue it,) but that it is alſo a ſacrament of the old Teſtament. So will Hales 4. diſt. 26. art. 1. & 5. haue it, and Bonauenture alſo, 4. diſt. 26. qu. 2. and (one that liued before the Schoole-men,) H. de S. Victor l. 1. de Sacr. part. 8. cap. 13. & lib. 2. part. 11. cap. 1. and of A this minde are many of the later writers, as Roffenſis; Hoſius in confeſſ. Petric. cap. 55. Pighius, In controu. 10. and Alphonſus à Caſtro, in the word nuptiæ, hereſ. 3. who defends this as the common opinion of the Diuines; as alſo Petrus à Soto, lect. 1. de Matrim. Catharinus in the queſtion of Matrimonie, expoundeth the word ſacrament, Epheſ. 5. either of the incarnation of Chriſt, or of the firſt Marriage of Adam and Euah: and addeth, By theſe oppoſite queſtions (to confeſſe the truth) it is not ſo apparent by the Scriptures, that Matrimonie is a ſacrament in that ſenſe that the other ſixe are called. But hee adioyneth, becauſe of the vniuerſall conſent of the Church, wee confeſſe Matrimonie to bee a B ſacrament, and not onely becauſe of that law which commaundeth vs to captiuate our vnderſtanding vnto the obeyſance of faith, but alſo becauſe they doe inferre reaſons for it.

Ordination of Biſhops is not truely and properly a ſacrament, ſaith Lumbard, 4. diſtinct. 24. and ſo doth Alexander, Hales, Thomas, and Bonauenture. To whome of the latter ſort agree Dominicus Soto in 4. diſtinct. 24. queſt. 2. artic. 3. & de Iure & iuſtitia, libro 10. queſt. 1. artic. 2. And Ioſephus Angles, in 4. diſtinct. 24. artic. 11. There are ſome alſo that denie Deaconſhip, and the other lower orders to bee ſacraments properly: of which ſort Durandus is, in 4. diſtinct. 24. queſt. 2. who C alleadgeth many reaſons on this ſide. And Caietane, in 1. tom. opuſc. tract. 11. in treating of the manner of giuing and receiuing orders: & in 3. part. Thom. queſt. 64. artic. 4. ad 1. with Francis à Victoria, who num. 226. teſtifies, that this opinion of theirs is moſt probable. Lumbard himſelfe, 4. diſtinct. 24. lit. c. ſaith, that the Church in proceſſe of time, ordained hir ſelfe Subdeacons and acolytes. Looke Francis à Victoria in his ſumme, num. 226. Thom. vpon the fourth of the ſentent. diſtinct. 23. queſt. 1. artic. 4. ſaith, that the forme of baptiſme and the Euchariſt, are extant in the Scripture, but the formes of the other Sacraments are not ſo.

5 Our Sacraments are ſaid to be of greater D vertue then the Sacraments of the olde law, not becauſe theſe did but ſignifie & prefigure grace, and theſe of ours doe conferre and beſtow it, but becauſe the doctrine whereunto they belong, and the maner of reuelation is more apparent, and becauſe they concerne Chriſt already giuen vp for vs. Looke Auguſtine againſt the Manichee Fauſtus, l. 19. c. 14. & 16. And for the Schoole-men, Hales, part. 4. q. 7. art. 4. m. 7. Bonauenture, Scotus, Durandus, Richardus, and Biel, in 4. diſt. 1. theſe affirme, that circumciſion did giue grace ex opere operato, by the worke wrought. And amongſt the later writers, Ioſeph Angles, in 4. diſt. 1. art. 5. holdeth the ſame: and ſo doth Francis à Victoria de ſacram. num. 1. adding furthermore, that this is the doctrine of all the Doctors.

The worke wrought.

1 THat the Sacraments doe giue grace by the worke wrought, that is, that the action of the Miniſter, or the element of it ſelfe, and by it ſelfe, by a corporall vertue, doth actiuely, effectually, and immediately giue grace, it hath not beene held by the Church for whole twelue hundred yeares: but is a ſcholaſticall fiction, approoued by the Councell of Trent.

2 The Fathers ſay that the Sacraments doe giue grace, but not properly: (as the ſaw B doth cut, not properly) but ſymbolically, in a myſticall reſpect, by reaſon of their ſignification and promiſe annexed vnto them; becauſe when wee vſe them aright as the tokens of grace, God giueth that grace immediately. The man (ſaith Hierome in Iſaie 4.) doth but giue the water, but God giueth the holy Ghoſt, whereby we are purged from filth, and our bloody ſinnes are purified. In like manner Auguſtine libro 15. de Trinit. capite 26. ſaith. How then can it be that he is not God that giueth the holy Ghoſt? Nay rather how great a God is he that giueth God? For neuer a diſciple that he had could giue the holy Ghoſt: they did pray that it might bee infuſed vpon thoſe vpon whome they laid their hands, but they infuſed it not themſelues: C which cuſtome the Church doth now obſerue in his ouer-ſeers. And in his queſtions vpon Leuiticus, libro 3. quaeſt. 84. Moyſes (ſaith he) in his miniſtry did ſanctifie by viſible ſacraments, but the Lord by his inuiſible grace through the holy Spirit, wherein lies all the fruite and worth of the viſible ſacraments; for without that ſanctification of inuiſible grace, what are the viſible ſacraments good for? A little after: Therefore here we gather, that ſome haue had inuiſible ſanctification and the benefit thereof without the viſible ſacraments: —— but that viſible ſanctification which is performed by the viſible ſacraments, cannot be of any value without that other inuiſible ſanctification. Who ſo thin- D keth (ſaith another, viz. Author, qq. de Veteri & Nouo teſt. quaeſt. 59.) that Baptiſme is after a carnall manner, this man is not ſpirituall: nor can hee obtaine the gift of God, that beleeueth himſelfe changed by water, not by faith; for the water is ſeene, but that ſpirit which is not ſeene, worketh faith in him. Although God do giue the Sacrament of grace by wicked men (ſaith Paſchaſius de corp. & ſang. Domini cap. 34.) yet he giueth not grace it ſelfe, but by himſelfe in whome is remiſſion of ſins. And to this aſſertion the ſchoolmen themſelues doe agree. We may not by any meanes ſay (ſaith Bonauenture 4. diſt. 1. q. 3.) that there is grace eſſentially contained in the Sacraments, as water in a veſſell, or me- A decines in a boxe: to vnderſtand them ſo, is erroneous. But they are ſaid to containe grace, becauſe they do ſignifie it. And becauſe grace is alwaies giuen in them (vnleſſe there be a defect in him that receiues them) it muſt be ſo vnderſtood, that grace is in the ſoule, & not in the viſible ſignes. This alſo hee teacheth, q. 4. and herein he is followed by Scotus, Durand. Richardus, Occam, Marſilius, and Biel in 4. d. 1. & of the later writers very many.

3 Some Diuines doe denie that grace is giuen by the Sacrament of matrimonie, amongſt whome the Maſter of the Sentences is the chiefe, who denieth it in his fourth booke and 26. diſtinction: And ſo doth Durandus in his third queſtion vpon the ſame B diſtinction, with which many Canoniſts take part. And Godfridus for one, tit. de Sacram. non iterandis, in his ſumme. The Sacraments (quoth hee) are otherwiſe diuided, for there are ſome wherein grace is giuen: —— and otherſome wherein grace is not giuen, as matrimonie contracted. Hoſtienſis in like manner, lib. 2. tit. de ſacram. non iterandis, ſaith, This is the third diuiſion of ſacraments, becauſe there are ſome that doe giue grace, —— and otherſome wherein grace is not giuen, as matrimonie, either in contraction or conſummation. Yea the Extrauagants alſo hold this opinion, de ſimonia, cum in eccleſiae corpore. And Bernard in Apparatu, ſaith, Wee are forbidden to take any thing for the benedictions of C thoſe that marrie, becauſe by them grace is giuen, but to giue or take any thing for matrimonie, is no ſinne, —— becauſe though it be a ſacrament, yet grace is not giuen thereby. Looke alſo in the Decretals, capite honorantur, 32. quaeſt. 2. and in other Canoniſts, part of whome Couarruuias doth alleadge in his Epitome of the fourth booke of the Decretals, part. 2. §. 2. and part are cited in the Cenſures of the gloſſe of the Canon law, in Gratian. num. 16. 36. 55. and in Gregories Decretals, num. 25. 29. in Sixtum num. 11.

The Miniſters intention.

1 THat opinion which holdeth Baptiſme to be of no force without the mentall and actuall intention of the Baptizer, was not knowne vnto Innocentius, as Angelus teſtifieth in his ſumme, where he ſaith, that it is not neceſſarie vnto true baptiſme, for the baptizer to haue in his minde to doe that which the Church doth. The prieſt (ſaith Chryſoſtome, hom. in Ioan. 85.) lendeth both tongue & hands. So Nicholas the Pope ſaith vnto the Bulgars demands: You affirm, that there is a Iew amongſt you, you know not whether he bee a Chriſtian, or a Paynim, who hath baptized many of you. Truly if he haue baptized thē in the name of the Trinity, they are not to be rebaptized. There is no other intention of the miniſter required (ſaith Catharinus tract. de Intent. Miniſt. Sacram.) but that hee intend to doe that outwardly which the Church doth, though he himſelfe neither beleeue that there is a Church, nor that there is any ſpirituall effect of Baptiſme. But this was ſome inuention of the ſchoolemen who could not make new articles of faith; & if this opinion be admitted, I would faine know of the Papiſts, how they are able to ſhunne Idolatry in the worſhipping of the Sacrament in their maſſe? for they know that no man can bee certaine of the intention of him that conſecrateth it.

The Character.

AN vnremoueable character, which may be imprinted in the ſoule, and conſiſt there without grace, euen in a man damned, is neuer ſpoken of either in the Scriptures or Fathers. The firſt tradition of this Character (ſaith Durandus l.4. diſt. 4. q. 1.) we haue from Dionyſius Areopagita, who ſeemeth to agree with what we haue ſaid of the Character: for hee reciteth a certaine cuſtome obſerued in the Primitiue Church at Baptiſmes of men growne, namely the Biſhop did lay his hands vpon him or her that was to be baptiſed, ſigning them with the ſigne of the croſſe, and commanding them to bee written amongſt the names of the Chriſtians, thenceforth to be with them admitted vnto the other myſteries: and this exterior rite in Baptiſme was the characterizing of them, nor did hee meane any other Character. Scotus in Sent. 4. diſt. 6. q. 9. thinketh it vnpoſſible to proue the Character either out of Scriptures or Fathers, but teacheth that wee muſt beleeue it, becauſe of the authoritie of the Church. And Biel in 4. diſt. 6. quaeſt. 2. doubteth whether the Church haue defined that there is ſuch a character: adding that there is but one authoritie (namely of Innocent the 3. cap. Maiores ex tra. de Baptiſmo) which maketh for the Character.

2 The ancient writers by the tearme Character doe ſometimes vnderſtand the externall forme, order and ceremonie of Baptiſme, or Baptiſme it ſelfe; and in their writings, to impreſſe or infixe the character, is to baptiſe or to profeſſe the faith in Baptiſme. I attend vnto the faith in the name of the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt, ſaith Auguſt. Ser. de geſt. cum Emerit. this is the Character of my Lord and Emperour: concerning this Character did hee commaund ſouldiers (or rather companions) that they ſhould imprint this in all thoſe whome they gathered into his tents, ſaying, Goe Baptiſe all nations in the name of the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt: Paul did feare, becauſe hee knew that this Character was commanded by God to be infixed vpon all men ——— and a little before. What meane I when I ſay, the Apoſtata hath not ſealed with his owne Character? Donatus hath not baptized in Donatus his name. And in his ſecond booke againſt Parmenian cap. 13. he ſaith the Character is in the bodie: And cap. 108. he calleth Baptiſme it ſelfe the Character, lib. 2. contra lit. Petilian.

3 The Character or ſeale of baptiſme in the Fathers doth oftentimes ſignifie the gift & grace of the holy ſpirit. We are ſigned with the ſpirit, ſaith Ambroſe de ſpi. Sanct. l. 1. cap. 6. that we may keepe his ſplendor, & image, and grace: which is ſtill the ſpirituall ſeale. And of this opinion is Theodoret, Haymo, Primaſius, Anſelme, and Theophylact vpon the 2. Cor. 1. v. 21. We as his ſonnes (ſaith Chryſoſtome, hom. 2. in Eph.) are ſigned with the holy Spirit.

Baptiſme.

1 THe Fathers held Baptiſme to bee abſolutely neceſſarie in thoſe that are of yeares of diſcretion. Teſtimonies.

The Catechumeniſt (ſaith Ambroſe, lib. de his qui initiantur, cap. 4.) beleeueth:——but vnleſſe he be baptized——he cannot obtaine forgiueneſſe of ſinnes: nor partake of the gift of ſpirituall grace. To obtaine the kingdome of heauen (ſaith Auguſtine, lib. 4. de Bap. c. 21.) the Catechumeniſt wanteth baptiſme, euen as the wicked that is baptized wanteth the true conuerſion: and tract. 13. in Ioan. How welſoeuer the Catechumeniſt doth profit, yet beareth he the burden of his ſinnes, nor can he lay it off, vntill he attaine vnto Baptiſme. The ſame likewiſe he auerreth in his 1. booke, de anim. cap. 9. From that moment (ſaith the Author, de fide ad Pet. cap. 3.) wherein our Sauiour ſaid, vnleſſe a man bee borne againe ——— without the Sacrament of Baptiſme no man can obtaine heauen, or euerlaſting life, ſauing thoſe that beeing without Baptiſme, ſhedde their blood for Chriſt in the Church. We beleeue (ſaith the Author of the booke, de eccle. dogm. c. 74. in Auguſt.) that the way of ſaluation is open onely vnto the baptized. We beleeue that no Catechumeniſt, though dying in good works, can be capable of euerlaſting life, except by martyrdome wherein all the ſacred things of Baptiſme are fulfilled. Nazianzene, Orat. 40. de Bap. ſaith, that the Catechumeniſts are vpon the threſhold of piety, vnto which they enter by Baptiſme. And againe, that ſome are depriued of Baptiſme, either by infancy, or ſome other ſudden chance whereby they are all debarred from the enioying of grace, though they deſire it. Thus hold theſe Fathers, ſo that they deny that contrition is ſufficient to obtaine the firſt grace, though there be in it a deſire of Baptiſme.

1 Concerning infants, Auguſtine, de orig. animæ, l. 2. c. 12. & l. 3. cap. 9. teacheth vs this: Beleeue not, neither teach that infants dying before Baptiſme, can bee capable of the remiſſion of their originall ſinne. Teach not this if thou wilt be a Chriſtian. And this hee teacheth, viz. epiſt. 28. ad Hieron. & de natura & grat. cap. 8. So doth Fulgentius, de fide ad Pet. cap. 30. Chryſoſtome, hom. 40. in 1. Cor. Ambroſe, de Abraham, lib. 2. cap. vlt. Iſydore, lib. 2. de offic. cap. 24. Gregory, lib. 7. epiſt. 53. and Innocentius III. in cap. Maio. de Bap. VVe are not ignorant (ſaith the Author of the calling of the Gentiles, lib. 2. cap. 8. or rather, 24.) how great a cauſe of ſlothfulneſſe it would be vnto the heart of the faithful, if in the Baptiſme of Infants there were nothing to bee feared of others negligence, and of their mortality. This hold they. But ſome of theſe, & chiefly Auguſtine, and Ambroſe, beeing out of their feruent diſputations with the Pelagians, who denyed originall ſinne, and many others, doe ſometimes abate much from the ſtrictneſſe of that their aſſertion. For ſo doth Ambroſe in his oration vpon the death of Valentinian the yonger, ſpeaking vnto the ſiſters of Valentinian. But I perceiue you lament (ſaith he) becauſe Valentinian did not enioy the Sacrament of Baptiſme. Tell me, what is there in you beſides a will and a deſire? But this deſire he had long ſince, to be——made a member of our head Chriſt, and ſignified, that hee would forthwith be baptized of me. —Hath not he therefore that grace which he deſired? hath not he what he required? And a litle after. Doth this mooue you that theſe myſteries were not celebrated with ſolemnity? then are not the Martyrs crowned that ſuffered beeing Catechumeniſts: for they ſhould not be crowned, vnleſſe they be entred into our myſteries: but if they be waſhed in their owne blood, then did his (Valentinians) piety and good deſire purifie him. And aboue in the ſame oration: I did loſe him whom I hoped to haue regenerated in the Goſpell: But he did not loſe that grace he ſo deſired. That ſuffering doth ſometimes fulfill the place of Baptiſme, S. Cyprian gathered no ſmal proofe (ſaith Auguſtine, de Bap. contr. Donatiſt. lib. 4. cap. 22.) from the vnbaptized theefe, to whom our Sauiour ſaid, To day ſhalt thou bee with me in Paradiſe; which thing I my ſelfe oftentimes conſidering, doe find that the defect of Baptiſme is ſupplied not only by ſuffering for the name of Chriſt, but alſo by faith and conuerſion of heart, if that peraduenture the ſtrictneſſe of the times doe not allow conueniency for the celebration of this myſtery of Baptiſme:——therefore how greatly auaileable that of the Apoſtle is [with the heart we beleeue vnto righteouſneſſe, and with the mouth we confeſſe vnto ſaluation] euen without the viſible ſacrament of baptiſme, was declared in that theefe: and is then inuiſibly fulfilled when the myſterie of baptiſme is wanting by reaſon of inſtant neceſſitie, and not of contempt of religion. And in the 23. chapter, thus: Euen as in the theefe that through neceſſity lacked the corporall baptiſme, his ſaluation was perfected, becauſe through his godly faith hee had that baptiſme ſpiritually: ſo when we haue this pietie readie, though we want that which the theefe wanted by reaſon of neceſſitie, yet is our ſaluation eſtabliſhed vnto vs. And in his queſtions vpon Leuiticus, lib. 3. cap. 84. he affirmeth, that hereby it is gathered, that ſome haue bin inuiſibly ſanctified without the viſible ſacraments. Bernard epiſt. 77. hauing alleadged theſe foreſaid teſtimonies out of Ambroſe and Auguſtine, ioyneth this: Beleeue me, from theſe two pillars (Ambroſe and Auguſtine) I am very hardly withdrawne. I ſay, that with theſe I confeſſe my ſelf either to know aright or to erre: beleeuing that a man may bee ſaued onely by faith, and a deſire to receiue this ſacrament, though death afterwards, or any other invincible power doe preuent and anticipate the fulfilling of this godly deſire. And it is worthy obſeruation, whether it was for this, that our Sauiour when he ſaid [whoſoeuer beleeueth and is baptized ſhall bee ſaued] out of his heed and vigilancie did not repeate, Whoſoeuer is not baptized, but onely, Whoſoeuer beleeueth not ſhall be condemned. Hereby intimating vnto vs, that onely faith is ſometimes ſufficient vnto ſaluation, and that without it nothing is ſufficient. Innocentius the third in his Decretals in the chapter, Apoſtolicam de preſbytero non baptizato, writeth thus vnto the Biſhop of Cremona: I anſwer thus vnto your demaund, that the Prieſt whome you wrote vnto me to haue died without the water of baptiſme, becauſe he continued in the faith of our holy mother the Church, and in the confeſſion of the name of Chriſt, is abſolued from his originall ſinne, and hath attained the ioyes of his celeſtiall countrey. This we doe vndoubtedly affirme. Looke alſo in the chapt. Debitum, de Baptiſmo, &c. In like manner Gerſon in the third part of his Sermon vpon the natiuitie of the virgin Mary, ſaith, It is euident that God doth not tie the mercie of his ſaluation vnto the common lawes of Chriſtian doctrine, or vnto the Sacraments themſelues, in ſuch manner, but that without preiudice of the ſaid law, hee can ſanctifie the children that are not yet come forth of the wombe, with the baptiſme of his grace, and the vertue of the holy Ghoſt. VVherfore it is the duty of women with child——diligently to powre forth their prayers vnto God,——that if the child yet vnborne doe perchance die before it can be partaker of the grace of baptiſme, that Ieſus Chriſt that moſt high Prieſt would vouchſafe to conſecrate and bleſſe it with his mercie, by preuenting [all inconueniences] with the baptiſme of his holy and bleſſed ſpirit. The Church (ſaith Biel in 4. diſtinct.q.2.) hath not yet ſet downe any generall helps for the infants that are as yet in the wombe. But vnto whome is the thought of the Lord reuealed.——He therefore thought good to inſtitute remedies againſt the maladie of ſinne in the Church, by miniſtring the Sacraments vnto ſuch as may be knowne by the Church: but the remedies for thoſe that are not yet come into the world, thoſe hath he reſerued in his owne onely power, whome at his owne pleaſure hee can both bleſſe and ſanctifie without other exteriour remedie, as we reade in the Scriptures hee hath alreadie dealt with ſome. Moreouer, that which is but a priuiledge vnto few, can hee impart vnto whomſoeuer he will, who hath not bound his owne power vnto the Sacraments. Caietane vpon the third part of Thomas his ſumme, *quaſt. 68. art. 1. and 2. auerreth, that in the caſe of neceſſitie the deſire of baptiſme by the parents is ſufficient for the ſaluation of the children. And this hee there confirmes by ſundry reaſons. And vpon the ſame queſtion, art. 11. he prooueth, that the child beeing in danger in the wombe may bee ſaued by baptiſme, not done indeed, but in the deſire of the parents, with ſome bleſſing of the child, and offering of it vnto the Deitie with inuocation of the Trinitie. And this is very earneſtly defended by ſome of the later Writers, as Tilmannus Segebergenſis, lib. de 7. Sacram. cap. 1. Thomas Eliſius Neopolitanus, in clipeo aduerſ. hereſ. cap. de Bap. art. 3. and George Caſſander, lib. de bap. infantium.

3 The Fathers after the ſame manner held the ſupper of the Lord to bee neceſſarie for infants vnto ſaluation, by an Apoſtolike tradition. Dionyſius Areopagita, De Eccleſ. Hierarchia cap. 2. part. 3. after the rehearſall of ſome rites of baptiſme, adioyneth: Laſtly, the Prieſt bringeth him beeing thus made perfect, vnto the moſt bleſſed Euchariſt: and giueth him the deifying communion of the conſummating ſacraments. And likewiſe cap. 7. part. 3. This alſo (if the biſhops doe teach Diuinitie vnto vnfit auditors) ſeemeth rightly ridiculous, that infants not yet beeing able to vnderſtand any diuine thing, ſhould bee made partakers of ſacred baptiſme, and of the higheſt ſignes of the moſt bleſſed communion.

Will not thoſe [infants] ſay at the iudgement: We haue done no euill, nor haue wee contemned Gods Sacraments to runne vnto prophane corruption, it is anothers faithleſneſſe that hath deſtroyed vs, our parents to vs haue prooued parricides?

That which your brotherhood ſaith, that they (Pelagians) doe teach of infants, ſaith Innocentius 1. vnto Auguſtine, apud Auguſt. epiſt. 93.) that they may bee dignified with the reward of bleſſednes without baptiſme, is moſt fooliſh: for vnleſſe they eate the fleſh of the ſonne of man, and drinke his blood, they ſhal not haue life in them. This is alſo Ambroſe his opinion, Libr. de iis qui ſacris myſteriis initiantur. cap. 7. and 8. and Auguſtines, lib. 1. de peccat. merit. & remiſ. cap. 20. as theſe words of his doe teſtifie: Dare any man affirme that this ſentence belongeth not vnto infants? and that they may haue life in them without the participation of this bodie and blood? becauſe he doth not ſay, Whoſoeuer eates not, as he ſaith of baptiſme, whoſoeuer is not borne againe; but vnleſſe you eate, ſpeaking as it were vnto them who can heare and vnderſtand him, which infants cannot doe? But he that holdeth this, doth not obſerue that if this ſaying binde not all,——it is needleſſe for the elder age to obſerue it. And in the ſame booke and 24. chapter: From whence but from an auncient and Apoſtolike tradition (as I thinke) by which they hold it as a doctrine grounded in the Church of Chriſt, that no man can attaine either to the kingdome of God or to euerlaſting life; without baptiſme or participation of the Lords ſupper.——If therefore ſo many and ſo great teſtimonies of Diuinity doe all conſent, that neither ſaluation nor life eternall is to be hoped for of any man, without baptiſme and the bodie and blood of Chriſt: in vaine doe we promiſe ſaluation vnto infants without theſe. This Auguſt. doth almoſt euery where affirme, vid. epiſt. 23. & 107. & contr. 2. epiſt. Pelag. l. 1. c. 22. & cont. Iul. l. 1. cap. 2. & l. 3. cap. 12. and ſo doth the Councell of Toledo, can. 11. Ordo Romanus, Alcuinus de diui. offic. cap. de Sa. Paſc. and Rabanus Maurus in his firſt booke de Inſtit. Cleric. cap. 29.

4 The Fathers vſed ſome rites and ceremonies in baptiſme which are now omitted in al places vniuerſally: as kiſſing of the child which was to be baptized. In Cyprian, l. 3. ep. 8. vſe of milke and honie: in Tertul. lib. 1. con. Marcion, vſe of milke and wine: in Hierom, In Iſa. cap. 55. waſhing of the feete; which Cyprian ſaith was inſtituted of Chriſt to be obſerued for euer, lib. de vnct. Chriſm. Auguſtine reckeneth a great company of rites now quite neglected, in his Symbol. ad Catechum. lib. 4. cap. 1.

5 It was an vſe for the baptizer to blow in the face of the baptized, and alſo the party baptized vſed to exufflate the diuell whome he renounced. This teſtifieth Cyprian or rather the author of the booke De duplici martyrio. Thou haſt denounced perpetuall enmitie [with the diuell] thou haſt renounced all his pompes and pleaſures, thou haſt blowne them away, thou haſt hiſſed them out, and ſworne vnto the doctrine of thy Redeemer.

And Rabanus Maurus lib. 1. cap. 27. de inſtit. Cler. ſaith, that the wicked powers are exufflated, and blowne away by the baptized.

Then when he hath placed him [beeing attentiue and reaching him his hands] towards the weſt, (ſaith the author of the Hierarchie) hee commaundeth him to exufflate Satan thrice, and withall, to rehearſe the words of his abrenunciation. But the Romiſh church

hath

* His Commentarie vpon both articles is moſt maliciouſly and fraudulently taken out of the late editions. Looke therfore in the edition of Paris 1518. or ſome other auncient one.

hath alreadie long agoe aboliſhed this cuſtome and ceremonie.

6 In auncient times the water of baptiſme was conſecrated & bleſſed with prayers and ceremonies of oyle and the croſſe, before the vſe and adminiſtration of it: and this they [erroniouſly] held neceſſary, becauſe the water hereby might receiue the vertue of regenerating. This is mentioned by Cyprian in his 70. Epiſtle: by Ambroſe in his firſt booke de ſacramentis cap.5. & de iis qui myſterijs initiantur, and by other authors, Apud Aug.Tom.9.

7 In the beginning of the Church (the pureſt times) they vſed to baptize out of the church in wels and riuers. Walfrid. Strabo de rebus eccleſ.c.26. teſtifieth this in theſe words: We muſt know that at the firſt the beleeuers were baptized ſimply in floods and fountaines. So was the Eunuch in the Acts of the Apoſtles. But in proceſſe of time they ordained veſſels for baptiſme, called Founts, but theſe at the firſt were vſed without the church. You firſt entred the porch of the houſe of the fount, ſaith Cyril in his firſt Catec. Thou builtſt that Fount that ſtandeth betweene the two Churches, ſaith Paulinus in his 12. epiſtle to Seuerus. Such a ſaying hath Nazianzene alſo in one of his orations. Then at length theſe veſſells were appointed to bee placed in the Pariſh churches, by the decretals, *Diſt.4.cap.*106.

The Sacrifice of the Maſſe.

1 A Sacrifice of Chriſt in the Maſſe, being proper, reall, and propitiatorie for the liuing and the dead, in the hand of the prieſt, was not admitted into the Church for the ſpace of twelue hundred yeares after Chriſt: for it was not knowne in Lumbards time, lib.4 diſt.12. And it differeth in all reſpects from the Sacrifice that the Fathers ſpeake of. For firſt, they held their Sacrifice without tranſubſtantiation, as hereafter ſhall be manifeſted: but this is not ſo held. Secondly, the Fathers Sacrifice was offered by the whole Church, beeing the oblation of all the faithfull. We all (ſaith Iuſtine, In dialogo cum Triphone) how many ſoeuer we be that are called after the name of Ieſus Chriſt,——are made truly the prieſts of God, as he himſelfe teſtifieth, ſaying, that euery where hee would haue pure and acceptable Sacrifices offered him. And this is alſo prooueable out of Auguſtine, Contra Fauſtum lib.20.cap.18. Now the Popiſh Sacrifice is offered by the prieſt. Thirdly, the Fathers Sacrifice was ſanctified by the faith of thoſe that offered: Euery mans Sacrifice (ſaith Auguſtine, Contra literas Petilian.lib.2.cap.52.) is ſuch as——he himſelfe is that commeth to receiue it: all things are pure vnto the pure: yea in the very Miſſall the prieſt prayeth vnto God to accept

A that Sacrifice as the Sacrifice of Noah: whereas on the contrary ſide the Papiſts Sacrifice doth ſanctifie thoſe that doe offer it. Fourthly, the Fathers Sacrifice was the whole action of the Supper: this new one is but the offering of the bread. To knit vp all in a word, that was a typicall and figuratiue Sacrifice: this a ſubſtantiall one accounted, wherein Chriſt himſelfe is offered vnto God.

2 The Fathers vſed to call the Supper of the Lord, or the whole action of the Supper, a Sacrifice: as they did alſo the whole forme of Gods religious worſhip: and that for diuers reſpects, and in diuers meanings. First, becauſe there was therin an offering and giuing of almes, bread, wine, &c. which are a ſpirituall B Sacrifice, out of which the ſignes themſelues in the communion of the Euchariſt were taken, and the almes were beſtowed vpon the poore. But Chriſt (ſaith Irenæus, lib.4. cap.32.) giuing counſell to his Diſciples to offer the firſt fruits of his creatures vnto God, not as to one that ſtood in neede thereof, but to ſhew themſelues neither vnfruitfull, nor vngratefull, tooke the creature of bread, and gaue thankes, ſaying, this is my body: And in like manner he confeſſed the cup, which vnto vs is of a cre[illegible], to be his blood, and taught vs a new oblation of the new Teſtament, which the Church receiuing from the Apoſtles doth offer throughout the Vniuerſall world, vnto God that giueth vs nouriſhment, C beeing the firſt fruits of his gifts in the new Teſtament. Thou art rich and wealthie (ſaith Cyprian, lib. de oper. & Eleemoſ.) and doeſt thou thinke that thou doeſt celebrate the Lords myſteries, when thou neuer regardeſt the almes basket? comming to theſe myſteries without Sacrifice, and taking part of that Sacrifice which the poore hath offered? Amongſt thoſe, one Hilarius (ſaith Auguſt. Retract. lib.2.cap.11.) beeing mooued, ſpoke bitterly againſt a cuſtome then vſed at Carthage, of ſinging hymnes out of the pſalmes at the Altar, either before the oblation, or after the offering was diſtributed to the people. It is lawfull to offer nothing at the Altar (ſaith the fourth canon of the Apoſtles) D but freſh eares of corne,——and incenſe at the time when the holy oblation is celebrated. And the Romane Miſſall ſaith Lord receiue the prayers of thy people, with the oblations of their Sacrifices.——Secondly, they vſed the name of Sacrifice metonymically, becauſe in theſe oblations there was a repreſentation of that Sacrifice that was offered vpon the croſſe, or like a ſpectacle or ſhew wherein the Sacrifice of Chriſts body and blood accompliſhed on the croſſe, is ſhewed and delineate vnto the eyes of the faithfull, deſcribed as it were in a table: and in this ſenſe it is called Vnbloody; as a Tragedy which repreſented ſome bloudy warre, is called an Vnbloody warre. For ſignes and Images are called by the names of thoſe things whereof they are ſignes and Images: ſo that by this it appeares that an vnbloody Sacrifice is no reall Sacrifice. We offer (ſaith Euſebius, lib. 1. cap. 10. de demonſt.) an vnbloody, and reaſonable Sacrifice. And Clement in his conſtitutions, lib. 6. cap. 23. ſaith, that all the bloodie Sacrifices of vnreaſonable creatures were by Chriſt changed into a reaſonable, vnbloody, and myſtical Sacrifice which is celebrated in remembrance of his death, by the ſignes of his bodie and blood. We celebrate an vnbloodie ſacrifice by our duty in the Churches, ſaith the Councell of Epheſus vnto Neſtorius. In Baſils Liturgie, the offering is called the vnbloodie ſacrifice of minde and ſoule. And Lumbard, in the 4. of his ſentences, diſt. 12. denieth that that which the prieſt offereth is truly and properly a ſacrifice, or immolation, but he will haue it ſo called, becauſe it is a memoriall and a repreſentation of the true and ſacred immolation and ſacrifice which was offered vpon the altar of the croſſe. And a little after, Theſe annuall commemorations doe but onely repreſent that which was done long agoe: and ſo make vs to be mooued, as if we ſaw the Lord vpon the croſſe. In like manner Thomas Aquinas, 3. par. q. 83. art. 1. ſaith that the celebration of the Sacrament is called immolation for two reaſons: firſt of all becauſe as Auguſtine ſaith, Signes are called by the names of the things whereof they are ſignes: ſecondly, becauſe by the Sacraments we are made partakers of the death of Chriſt our Lord. There is not therfore any iteration of that ſacrifice which was finiſhed vpon the croſſe, and is held by the Fathers to bee the onely and ſingular ſacrifice. So is it held by Auguſtine in three or foure ſeuerall places, viz. Enchirid. ad Laurent. cap. 33. & de Trinitate lib. 3. cap. 13. & lib. 3. contra ſecundam epiſt. Pelag. cap. 6. Thirdly, the Sacrament is called a ſacrifice by a metonymie, becauſe it is a commemoration, and alſo a repreſentation vnto God the Father of the Sacrifice of Chriſt offered vpon the croſſe. In this ſacrifice (ſaith the author of the booke de fide ad Pet. cap. 19.) there is a thanksgiuing, and a commemoration of Chriſts bodie which he offereth for vs, and of his blood which hee the ſame Chriſt ſhed for vs. We offer no diuerſitie of ſacraments as the high Prieſt (ſaith Chryſoſtome Hom. 17. in Hebraeos.) but ſtill one and the ſame, or rather we make a commemoration of a ſacrifice. And Ambroſ. lib. 4. de ſacram. cap. 6. ſaith, Therefore in memorie of his paſſion, and reſurrection —— we offer vnto thee as a ſacrifice —— this bread ——. But this oblation is intentionall, not reall, and it is by the Fathers ſo called, after S. Pauls phraſe, as they call it vnbloodie. Looke Euſebius his teſtimonie afore-cited lib. 1. de demon. Euang. and Clements. And in this ſenſe the faithfull in their prayers doe offer Chriſt as a ſacrifice vnto his Father for their ſinnes, in beeing wholly carryed away in A their minds and affections vnto that onely and true ſacrifice, thereby to procure and obtaine Gods greater fauour vnto thẽ. Fourthly, it is called a ſacrifice becauſe it is an application of the ſacrifice offered vpon the croſſe vnto our ſelues by faith, by which we are as it were newly ſprinkled with the blood of Chriſt. When thou ſeeſt God offered (ſaith Chryſoſtome lib. 3. de Sacerdotio) the Prieſt bowed vpon the ſacrifice, and powring forth his prayers thereupon, and all the communicants as it were purpled with that precious blood, doſt thou thinke thy ſelfe to be vpon the earth, or amongſt mortall men? or rather art thou not tranſlated incontinently into B the heauens, where beeing lighted of all carnall cogitations, thou doſt with a pure and naked heart and ſoule fall into contemplation of the celeſtiall ioyes? Chriſt once dyed vpon the croſſe, and then was offered vp in himſelfe (ſaith Lumbard 4. diſt. 12. lit. G.) but he is daily offered in the ſacrament, becauſe there is therein contained a remembrance of that which was done but once. Thom. Aquin. 3. p. q. 83. art. 1. ſaith, that the celebration of the Sacrament is called a ſacrifice, becauſe by the Sacraments we are made partakers of Chriſts death. In this ſenſe was the celebration and participation of the Lords ſupper called the offering of the ſacrifice, vntill 869 yeares af- C ter Chriſt. Regino Chron. lib. 2. It remaineth now my ſonne (ſaith Adrian the 2. Pope vnto Lotharius) that you come vnto S. Peters confeſſion, where we by Gods helpe will offer the ſauing ſacrifice, not ſo much for the health of your bodie, as your ſoule, wherein you muſt partake with vs, that by this participation of Chriſts body, you may deſerue to be incorporate againe into the Church, from whome you ſeemed to be ſeparated. And then the ſolemnitie of the maſſe being ended, the Pope inuiteth the King vnto the table of Chriſt, and taking the bodie, and blood of the Lord in his hand, hee ſpeaketh thus vnto him: If thou doſt know thy ſelfe guiltleſſe of this forbidden —— ſinne of adultery —— come vn- D to this table confidently, and receiue this Sacrament of eternall ſaluation to the benefit of thy ſoule, and the forgiueneſſe of thy ſins. Fiftly, it is called a ſacrifice, becauſe of the ſacrifice of prayers, praiſes, and thankſgiuings, from whence the whole ſupper is called the Euchariſt. Iuſtine In Apolog. 2. reciting the manner of celebrating the Lords ſupper vſed at that day amongſt the Chriſtians, ſaith thus, We all ariſe and offer our praiers, which beeing finiſhed, bread, wine and water is brought forth, and he that is chiefe, offereth his prayers and thankſgiuing, as he can, and the people ſing vnto him. It befitteth vs (ſaith Ireneus lib. 4. cap. 34.) to offer our oblation vnto God, and to ſhew our ſelues thankfull vnto God the Creatour, in pure doctrine, & faith without hypocriſie, in firme hope, in feruent loue, offering the firſt fruits of all creatures vnto him: & this pure oblation the Church onely offereth vnto God the Creatour, offering it with thankſgiuing. Laſtly, it is called a ſacrifice by a ſynecdoche, becauſe in the ſupper wee offer our ſelues vnto God to bee conſecrated vnto him and ſerue him in bodie and ſoule. This is the ſacrifice of the Chriſtians (ſaith Auguſtine De ciuit. Dei lib. 10. cap. 6.) We beeing many are all one bodie in Chriſt, which alſo the Church doth frequent in the Sacrament of the altar which is knowne vnto all the faithfull, wherein is ſhewed vnto them, that ſhee is offered in that oblation, which ſhee doth offer. But it is meete (ſaith Gregorie Dialog. lib. 4. cap. 59.) that when we doe theſe things, we doe ſacrifice our ſelues vnto God in contrition of heart: becauſe we that celebrate the myſteries of the Lords paſſion ſhould imitate that which we doe; for then ſhall it bee a true ſacrifice vnto God for vs, when we make our ſelues a ſacrifice.

3 The Fathers when they vſe the word ſacrifice, doe ſpeake after the Iewiſh manner, alluding vnto the worſhip and ſacrifices of the law. So that in difference of the offerings of the law, they call the very ſignes an vnbloodie ſacrifice. Chriſt did firſt of all offer vnto God the Father, bread and wine an vnbloody ſacrifice (ſaith Photius in Oecumenius.) And Damaſcen citeth theſe wordes of Athanaſius: Omit not to burne oyle and waxe at the ſepulcher, calling vpon Chriſt the Lord, for they are acceptable vnto God, and doe returne great recompence. For the oyle and the waxe are the burnt offering, and the offering of the vnbloodie ſacrifice is the propitiation.

4 To ſacrifice, and to offer in the Fathers is vnderſtood by a metaphor of the celebration, execution, and action of all eccleſiaſticall matters tending vnto the worſhip of God. Origen vpon the epiſtle to the Romans l. 2. for circumciſe, ſaith, offer the blood of circumciſion. And Tertullian lib. 4. againſt Marcion, calleth thankſgiuing, oblation: And writing vnto Scapula, for to pray for Cæſar, hee putteth to ſacrifice for the Emperour. And he vſed this forme of ſpeach the more freely, becauſe it was imputed as a crime againſt the Chriſtians, that they would not ſacrifice, nor offer for the Emperour. So in like manner Euſeb. Demonſt. l. 1. c. 10. for to honour God, putteth to ſacrifice prayers and hymnes. And Cyprian lib. 2. epiſt. 3. for to celebrate the Communion, putteth to offer the ſacrifice of the Paſſion. And Epiphanius Hereſ. 79. for to preach the Goſpell, putteth to ſacrifice the Goſpel: And Cyprian againe, l. 3. 13. epi. ſerm. 5. de Lapſis, for to celebrate the Euchariſt, putteth to offer the bread and the cuppe.

5 Sometimes, to offer ſacrifice, and to offer the bodie and blood of Chriſt, is figuratiuely to repreſent them in the Sacrament, not to offer any proper ſacrifice, nor to offer properly. And in this ſenſe they ſay that Chriſt is crucified, and dead in the Sacrament. But there is no Maſſe, no not the canon of the Maſſe at this day that ſaith that Chriſts bodie is really, properly, and ſubſtantially offered. But ſuppoſe it be a reall ſacrifice, doe now but marke the blaſphemies of the canon, which teacheth firſt, that Chriſt is out of the fauour of his Father: ſecondly, that the Father accepteth Chriſts bodie as the lambe out of the hand of Abel: thirdly, that Chriſt hath a mortall Mediatour: fourthly, that there muſt bee an Angell to beare the bodie of Chriſt into heauen.

6 Moſt of the Fathers doe hold that Melchiſedeck offered not bread and wine vnto God, but vnto Abraham expreſſely: So affirmeth Tertullian Contra Iudæos. Ambroſe de Sacram. lib. 4. cap. 3. & epiſt. ad Heb. cap. 7. Epiphanius hereſ. 55. Chryſoſtome in Gen. hom. 36. & in Pſal. 109. the author of the queſtions of both the teſtaments, q. 109. Damaſcene de fide orthodoxa, libro 4. capite 14. and Lombard libro 4. diſtinct. 8. Beſides, they make a ſimilitude betweene him offering bread and wine vnto Abraham, and Chriſt offering himſelfe vnto vs partly on the croſſe, partly in the ſupper. Melchiſedech neuer dreamed of offering Chriſt vnto the Father in the ſupper.

7 The ſupper of the Lord is called a true and full Sacrifice, not in that Chriſt himſelfe is therein ſubſtantially offered, but it is true, both in the truth of repreſentation, & truth of the effect of the Sacrifice of the croſſe which wee obtaine in the communion, and likewiſe it is called true, becauſe therein the Church doth truly offer her ſelfe vnto God, as Auguſtine teſtifieth, lib. 10. de ciu. Dei, c. 20. and alſo becauſe it is the figure of the truth, that is, of Chriſt offered, whome the Sacrifices of the old Teſtament did ſhadow. Hierome in his commentaries vpon Amos, cap. 5. ſaith, that to faſt, to giue almes, and to promiſe chaſtitie, are true Holocauſts, that is whole burnt offerings.

8 The Phraſe, Miſſam facere (vſed in ſome of the Fathers, viz. Amb. l. 5. ep. 33.) doth not ſignifie to ſay the Popiſh Maſſe, but to diſmiſſe ſome out of the aſſembly. I remaining in my duty, began to diſmiſſe them. Thus ſaith Suetonius in Caligula, cap. 25. And behold, after the Sermon, the Catechumeniſts are diſmiſſed (ſaith Auguſtine, de temp. Serm. 237. [fit Miſſa Catechumenis] but the faithfull will remaine. And hereupon the communion was called Miſſa figuratiuely, becauſe when it began, there was a diſmiſſion of ſome. And this order held for 600. yeares, as Iſidore teſtifieth, Origen. l. 6. c. 19. Now the Popiſh Maſſe obſerueth no ſuch cuſtome. Therein is no diſmiſſion, nor doe all that remaine receiue the communion, wherefore Maſſe indeede is the excommunication of the people. Vnto Gregory of Terwin, and Pope Gregory it is a new Phraſe, and they out of propriety doe vſe Miſſam facere, for to celebrate the Supper. The word Miſſa, is but ſeuen times (that I can finde) in all the Fathers that liued before theſe two, and that in a quite contrary ſenſe.

9 Beſides, Miſſa in the Fathers ſignifieth a publike meeting to the communion, and to prayers, or the ſolemne diſmiſſion of that meeting, or euen the forme of their religious worſhip. George Caſſander, præfat. in preces ſuas, ſaith, that the name of Maſſe and Collect, & to make Collects and Maſſes, is all one in ſignification with συνάγειν, to meete together, συνάξεις ποιεῖν, to make congregations, and ἐκκλησιάζειν, to gather together. And he addeth, that as there can bee no Maſſe where there is no Collect, ſo there can bee no Collect wherein there is no Maſſe. So doth Epiphanius the tranſlatour of the Tripartite hiſtory ſay, that a Collect is a prayer which is rehearſed in ſome collected congregation, and a Maſſe, becauſe there is diſmiſſions of ſome from that congregation. Leo, epiſt. ad Dioſcorum, diſtinguiſheth betweene the Maſſe and the ſacrifice. And the Mileuitane Councel, cap. 12. taketh prayers & Maſſes both for one thing. So that the name of Maſſe had in thoſe daies a farre other ſignification then it hath now.

10 The table whereon the communion is celebrated, is called an altar, not properly, but by a figure and alluſion: and hereupon ſometime it is called an altar, ſometimes a table. The table of thy ſpouſe (ſaith the author, lib. de cultu, agr. Dom. in Auguſt.) hath whole bread, and an holy cup. None ſay ſo (ſaith Auguſtine, con. lit. Petil. lib. 2. cap. 47.) but thoſe that receiue life from the Lords table, as Peter did. And, ad Bonifac. Epiſt. 50. They ruſhed in vpon him with horrible violence, and furious cruelty, with clubs, and ſuch like weapons, as he ſtood at the altar, —— breaking downe the wood of the ſaid altar moſt barbarouſly. And the Fathers deny (ſome of them) that they haue any altar properly taken. Celſus (ſaith Origen, libro 8. contra Celſum,) ſaith, that altars, and images, and temples, doe flie from vs, leſt they ſhould be built. Our altar (ſaith Clemens Alexandrinus, Strom. 7.) is an earthly gathering together of ſuch as do apply themſelues to prayers. And a little after. A iuſt ſoule is a truly ſanctified altar. Arnobius, l. 6. contra gentes, ſaith, that the heathen did accuſe the Chriſtians, becauſe they did not make them altars. About the 400. yeare the vſe of altars began, but not for ſacrifice, but for the honour and memory of the Martyrs, as the 5. Councell of Carthage doth record, cap. 14.

11 Sometimes the Fathers do vſe the word ſacrifice abuſiuely. So doth Saint Ambroſe in his booke Ad virginem lapſam. If thou hadſt died as others do (ſaith he) thy parents would haue ſorrowed a little, becauſe of naturall affection: but they would haue exulted in ioy, that they had ſent an vnſpotted virgin before them, a liuing ſacrifice vnto the Lord, and a propitiatrix for their ſinnes. And of his brother Satyrus: Vnto thee almighty God do I offer this innocent ſoule, vnto thee I offer this my ſacrifice, accept of this brotherly gift, of this prieſtly duty: I doe ſend theſe my ſacrifices before me.

12 The oblation for the dead, and the oblation of the dead, do differ greatly. The offering of the dead was money gathered of the liuing before their death, for the vſe of the poore. The other was money gathered by others, for to make commemorations for the dead, and to giue thankes for them. Origen vpon Iob, libro tertio, ſaith, that the Chriſtians did vſe to giue meate, and other gifts, at the memorials of the dead, for the vſe of the poore, and the clergie. Auguſtine, Confeſſ. l. 6. c. 2. ſaith, that his mother caried with her, pottage, bread, and wine, vnto the memorials of the Martyrs and Saints. But yet Auguſtine doth reprehend this cuſtome in his 8. booke De ciuitate Dei, c. 27. Whoſoeuer vſe to carry their banquets thither (ſaith he) which truly the better Chriſtians doe not obſerue, and in many places of the world there is no ſuch cuſtome) yet whoſoeuer do this, —— they will haue them ſanctified there, —— in the name of the God of Martyrs.

13 The Fathers were of opinion, that the oblation in the Supper did benefit the damned, as Auguſtine ſaith, Enchirid. cap. 100. to make their damnation more tolerable, which is alſo confirmed by Innocentius III. in cap. cum Martha, de celebrat. Miſſ. in his decretals: And they held alſo, that it helped the Saints: witnes Cyrill, catech. 5. Cyprian, epiſt. 34. & 37. Auguſtine in his 22. booke, de ciuit. Dei, c. 10. and Chryſoſtome vpon the Acts, hom. 21. alſo they held that hereby their reward might be increaſed, Chryſoſt. hom. 32. in Matth.

14 Theſe phraſes, to offer for the dead, and to ſacrifice for their ſleepe, vſed in Tertullian, and Cyprian, do ſignifie nothing elſe but to rehearſe their names in the Communion, and to giue thankes for them, and to ſhew other ſignes of ioy, by banquets, doales, &c. Looke in Cyprians ninth epiſtle of his firſt booke; and in his 14. Epiſtle of his third booke; as alſo in Chryſoſtomes hom. de Martyribus. In this ſenſe the Lords Supper for 400. years after Chriſt, was called an oblation, or a ſacrifice for the dead, becauſe there was therin continued a cõmemoration for the dead.

15 The Fathers ſometimes doe plainely diſallow this proper, reall, externall and often offered ſacrifice of the bodie and blood of Chriſt for the remiſſion of ſinnes. Lactantius, in Epitome diuin. Inſtit. cap. 2. ſaith, that thoſe things which are done with the hands, or without a mans ſelfe, are no true ſacrifices. Truly I, ſaith Iuſtine Martyr contra Triphon. doe account prayers & thankſgiuings, if they be performed by worthy men, for the onely perfect and acceptable ſacrifices vnto God: for theſe onely are the things which the Chriſtians haue receiued to execute. We haue our ſacrifices, (ſaith Cyril of Alexandria, l.10.contr.Iulian.) namely, ſpirituall and mentall; ——— for we offer vnto God a ſweete ſmell, all the vertues, faith, hope, charity, iuſtice, continence, obedience, gentleneſſe, perpetuall praiſes, and other vertues. For this ſacrifice, being not carnall, but pure & plaine, in the incorporall nature thereof is beſeeming vnto God. And the offerings of mentall fragrancy are the means of a truly honeſt life. And a little after. Becauſe we haue ſerued God better then they [the Patriarches] ſacrificing ſpirituall things vnto God, and vſing the ſpirit in ſtead of ſenſible fire, let not Iulian accuſe vs by asking vs, why wee bring not ſacrifices vnto the altar? And againe, We ſacrifice mentally & ſpiritually the ſweet ſauour of vertues, as it were, conſecrating thẽ vnto God. Chriſts blood (ſaith Auguſtine, contra Aduerſ.leg.lib.1.cap.18.) beeing the ſingular and onely true Sacrifice, was ſhedde for vs. And indeede the Fathers aſcribe the power of getting Gods fauour, and the effect which they hoped of the Sacrament, vnto the prayers and almes then offered, not vnto the operation of the act. The greateſt helpe of ſoules (ſaith Cyrill of Hieruſalem, Miſtag.5.) is the prayer of that holy and reuerend myſterie which is vpon the altar. Wee entreate for the dead (ſaith Auguſtine, De cura pro mortuis, cap.18. either with the ſacrifice of the altar, or of prayers, or of almes. And Chryſoſtome, Hom. 3. in Philip. ſaith, that the people lifting vp their hands at the time of offering, did appeaſe Gods anger in praying for the dead. Wee call vpon God for them (ſaith Bede, in Pſalm.48.) by ſolemnizing of maſſes, and by almeſ-deedes. So that the Supper of the Lord is called a propitiatorie ſacrifice, becauſe it repreſenteth the ſacrifice of the croſſe, and is the meanes that we making our ſolempne prayers, doe obtaine our petitions.

16 The Maſſe had this originall: firſt, the Supper of the Lord was celebrated in moſt ſimple and plaine manner: ſecondly, it began to admit ſome increaſe of ceremonies, eſpecially the offerings for the dead; which was but a gratulation for them, and a thankſgiuing, vntill 200. yeares after Chriſt: thirdly, prayers for the dead got entrance into the Supper, about the 400. yeare, and then came in Purgatorie, and the redemption of ſoules from thence, by Maſſes. About the 780. yeare of grace, Gregories Maſſe was publikely taken vp in the Churches of Italy, whereas before, Ambroſe his Maſſe was of more generall vſe: fourthly, the diſputations of the tranſubſtantiation began about the yeare of grace 840. and was concluded in the Councell of Laterane by Innocent the third: after which, came in the offering of the body and blood of Chriſt vpon the Altar: and after that, followed the incloſing of them, carrying them about, and adoration of them.

Therefore when wee doe reade theſe tropicall ſpeeches of ſacrificing, and offering, in the Fathers, we muſt not beleeue that they did admit any other propitiatorie ſacrifice, but onely the paſſion of Chriſt, beeing the onely ſacrifice of the whole world, nor that they accuſtomed to celebrate the Popiſh Maſſe.

Communion vnder one kinde.

1 THe Church of Rome for aboue 1000. years after Chriſt, vſed both the kinds in communion. This Caſſander teacheth in his Defence of his booke intitled de officio pij viri. The vſe (ſaith he) of the blood of our Lord, togither with his body in the miniſtring of this Sacrament, is both of the inſtitution of Chriſt, and obſerued by the cuſtome of the whole Church, for aboue a thouſand yeares, and vnto this day of the Eaſterne Churches. And although the vſe of one kinde came vp about the yeare 1200. yet the moſt learned of thoſe times neuer taught that it was neceſſary ſo to bee obſerued. But this communion vnder one kinde (againſt all inſtitution of Chriſt) was decreed, defined, & determined as a publike law in the Councell of Conſtance, about the yeare 1414 Cuſanus, epiſtol. 3. ad Bohemos, ſeemes to impute this change vnto the Councell of Laterane, ann. 1215. But Biel, lect. 84. in Canonem, ſaith plainely, that it was a queſtion held in controuerſie vntill the decreee of the Councel of Conſtance. Micrologus writeth thus of the cuſtome of the Church of Rome about the yeare 1080. It is not authenticall (ſaith he) that ſome do dippe the Lords body [into the chalice] and miniſter it vnto the people thus moyſtened, as the perfect communion: for the Romane Order doth contradict this cuſtome, becauſe vpon good-Friday it doth commaund vs to conſecrate wine that is not conſecrated with the Lords prayer, and putting in of the body of the Lord, that the people may haue a full communion.——And Pope Iulio writing vnto the Biſhops of Egypt doth abſolutely prohibit this dipping of the Sacrament, and teacheth that the bread and the cuppe are both ſeuerally to bee receiued as Chriſt ordained. Whereupon S. Gelaſius ——— doth commaund them to bee excommunicate that hauing receiued the body of the Lord, doe abſtaine from partaking of the cup alſo: for hee in the ſaid decree affirmeth, that ſuch ſeparation of theſe ſacramẽts cannot bee done but with mighty ſacriledge, De eccleſ.obſer.c.19.& de conſecrat.d.2.c.comperimus. In Peter Lumbards time, ann. 1150. the ſacrament was receiued vnder both kindes, that it might appeare (quoth he, l. Sen. 4. d. 11.) that Chriſt tooke vpon him our whole nature, that hee might redeeme our whole nature: for the bread hath reference vnto the body, and the wine vnto the ſoule: therefore it is celebrated in both the kindes, to ſignifie vnto vs Chriſts receiuing of body and ſoule, and our freedom of body & ſoule. Leo, Ser. 4. de Quadrag. ſaith, that it is a ſacrilegious hypocriſie of the Manichees, to receiue the body and reiect the blood. Rhemigius Biſhop of Rhemes, that liued about the yeare 470. made theſe verſes to bee engrauen vpon the chalice, as Hincmar teſtifieth in his life. Hauriat hinc, &c. in Engliſh thus:

Hence let the people in that ſacred blood
Which Chriſt did bleed, drinke out their ſoules beſt good.
Theſe vowes, Rhemigius, Prieſt, doth pay his Lord.

And the ſaid Hincmar doth record, that the ſame chalice was in his time afterward giuen vnto the Normans for the redeeming of the Chriſtian captiues. The cup (ſaith Haimo, in 1. Cor. 10.) is called communion, as it were a participation, becauſe all do communicate thereof. The Lord (ſaith Rabanus Maurus, de Inſtit. Cler. l. 1. cap. 32.) firſt conſecrated the Sacrament of his body and blood, with benediction and thankſgiuing, and deliuered it vnto his Apoſtles, which they in imitation of him ſo did, and taught their followers to doe the like: which now the whole Church ouer al the world doth generally obſerue. Onely the benediction of the Biſhop, or Prieſt (ſaith Amalarius, l. 1. de Offic. in præfat.) is ſufficient to conſecrate the bread and wine wherewith the peoples ſoules are to bee fed vnto ſaluation, as the Apoſtles did in the Primitiue Church. And c. 24. Chriſt tooke the bread into his holy and reuerend hands: ———And in like manner the cup, as Cyprian ſaith to Cæcilius, We finde not our ſelues keepers of the precept, vnleſſe wee doe that ſame that the Lord did, and mingling the cup in like maner, we depart not from the diuine commaundement. Now though Cyprian do conclude his ſaying about the mixing of wine and water, yet we may vnderſtand, that this is to be fulfilled of the whole inſtitution of the Lord, wherein there is his commaund, and the Apoſtles obſeruation; and of like effect vnto this is that of Walfrid. in his booke de vtriuſque ſpeciei communione, the 22. chapter. Whatſoeuer hee bee (ſaith Anſelm, ſuper 1. Cor. 11.) rich, meane, or poore, clergie-man, or lay-man, that ſhall receiue this bodie, and drinke this blood of Chriſt vnworthily, ſhall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord: hee eateth and drinketh it vnworthily, that celebrateth this myſterie in any other order then Chriſt deliuered it himſelfe. The preſcription of the forme (ſaith the author de cœna in Bern.) is in bread and wine---; and the kindes of bread and wine are both ſet forth, to ſhew, that there is full and perfect refreſhing in receiuing the body & blood of Chriſt. By all theſe proofes (ſaith Albertus Magnus de offic. Miſſe, ca. 5.) it is gathered, that Chriſt deliuered his body vnder the one forme of bread, and his blood vnder the other forme of wine, and taught it to be thus celebrated. And ſeeing Chriſts actions are our inſtructions, hee deliuered theſe two moſt certainely for vs to obſerue, and therefore wee giue the bodie vnder one kinde, and the blood vnder another. This Sacrament (ſaith Thomas, in 1. Cor. 11. lect. 5.) is giuen vnder a double kind for three reſpects. Firſt, for the perfection thereof: becauſe it being a ſpirituall refreſhing, muſt haue a ſpirituall meate, and a ſpirituall drinke. For the corporall feeding is not made without meate and drinke.——— Secondly, for the ſignification thereof. For it is a memorial of that Paſſion wherin Chriſts blood was ſeparate and drawne from his body: and therefore herein the blood is offered ſeuerally from the body. Thirdly, becauſe of the ſauing effect of this Sacrament. For it helpeth the ſaluation of the body, and therefore is the body offered; and it helpes the ſaluation of the ſoule, and therefore the blood is offered. For the ſoule is in the blood, Gen. 9. And in his 6. Lection he ſaith, that both (bread and wine) belong to the perfection of this Sacrament, as well to ſhew the perfection of the refreſhing, as for the repreſentation of the paſſion, and alſo for the effecting of the ſaluation of body and ſoule. And this is alſo the opinion of Hales, 4. par. ſummæ qu. 35. memb. 1. and Caſſalius de cœna, l. 12. c. 25.

2 The communicants vſed to carry home not onely the bread, but the wine alſo. This teſtifieth Nazianzene, in Gorgon. ad medium: and Hierom, ad Ruſticum. And againe, where we finde the Fathers to make mention of the bread alone, it is a figure called Synecdoche partis, whereby part is put for the whole; or elſe they do take the name of bread only for the bread dipped in the wine.

Wherefore the miniſtring of the Lords Supper vnder one kinde, is contrary to the ordinary cuſtome of the whole and vniuerſall primitiue Church.

Priuate Maſſe.

1 A Kinde of priuate Maſſe wherein the Prieſt onely receiueth the conſecrated formes, without cōmunicating to others, was neuer knowne in the moſt auncient and pureſt antiquity, for the ſpace of 800. yeares. The Supper of the Lord (ſaith Hierome, in 1. Cor. 11.) ought to be common to all, for hee gaue the Sacraments equally vnto all the diſciples preſent. And in 3. cap. Sophon. he telleth how the people did communicate of the blood. Chryſoſt. hom. 3. in Eph. alſo condemnes this priuate Maſſe in theſe words: In vaine doe we offer this daily oblation, in vaine doe we ſtand at the altar, there is none that doth partake with vs. This I ſpeake not to inuite you to receiue in any faſhion, but to make your ſelues worthy of theſe myſteries. And in 1. Cor. 11. homil. 27. thou doeſt not communicate of that which is common: for it was broken equally to all, and equally diuided. Some require a cõmunion ſtill in the Maſſe, and indeede ſo I confeſſe did Chriſt ordaine it (ſaith Eraſmus, epiſt. ad Iulium Pflugium) and ſo in auncient times it was obſerued. Yea the Papiſts themſelues confeſſe, that in the Primitiue Church it was ſet downe, that the faithfull ſhould communicate euery day, as Durandus in rationall. lib. 4. cap. 53. and Hugo Cardinalis in Luc. cap. 24. doe both confeſſe. Cuſanus in his 7. epiſtle to the Bohemians, ſaith, that all that were not prepared to receiue the Euchariſt, were put forth of the Church. And the Councell of Mentz doth prohibite the Prieſt to receiue alone, becauſe they held it as an abſurd thing to ſay, the Lord be with you, when there was none to anſwer. Looke in Reginald Poole his 1. booke de Eccleſ. Diſcipl. capite 191. If any one do not communicate, let him giue place, ſaith Greg. dialog. lib. 2. cap. 23. And Charlemaine made a law, that all the faithfull ſhould communicate, and attend at the Maſſe, without any other further intreaty, Leg. Franciæ, lib. 1. cap. 132. And it ſeemes, that about Walfrids time theſe ſolitarie maſſes beganne, though hee himſelfe doth diſallow of them. In the whole maſſe, ſaith he, de rebus Eccleſ. cap. 22. we doe pray chiefly, & as it were by name for them that doe offer and communicate. And wee may —— ſay, that the reſt perſiſting in the faith and deuotion of theſe that offer and communicate, are partakers of the ſaid oblation and communion. But although when the Prieſts onely doe communicate in their maſſe, it may bee vnderſtood that thoſe doe partake with him, for whome theſe offices are celebrated, and whoſe perſon the prieſt doth execute in ſome Reſponſories: yet wee muſt confeſſe that that is the lawfull Maſſe, wherein there is preſent the Prieſt, the anſwerer, the offerer, and the communicant, as the form of the canon, and the plaine courſe of the prayers do ſhew. The prayers (ſaith Micrologus cap. 19.) which are ſaid after the communion, are not for them that are to communicate, but for thoſe that haue alreadie communicated: therefore whoſoeuer doe deſire to bee helped with the bleſſings of theſe prayers, let them not neglect to receiue the communion before they be ſaid. And cap. 18. hee ſaith to the ſame effect; And indeed in the yeare of grace 1080, in the Church of Rome all were bound to cõmunicate after the breaking of the bread. Radulphus Ardens in his homily vpon Eaſter day, ſaith, that there are two kindes of receiuing, ſpirituall and ſacramentall, and of the later he ſaith thus: Notwithſtanding my brethren, all Chriſtians muſt communicate euen ſacramentally when they haue time and place. And therfore in the Primitiue Church all the Chriſtians vſed to communicate euery Lords day: thus ſaith he, that liued about the yeare 1050.

2 Priuate Maſſes had their firſt originall amongſt the friers in their cloyſters. For Gregory, l. 4. Indict. 14. epiſt. 43. alias c. 87. doth forbid publike Maſſes to bee ſaid in one certaine Monaſtery, leſt there ſhould be any occaſion of popular meetings in the priuate houſes of the ſeruants of God. And l. 5. epiſt. 46. alias c. 146. he doth inhibit publike Maſſe to be ſaid in a certen place, and yet alloweth Maſſe to be ſaid therein. Looke alſo in the 71 epiſtle of his 7. booke. Odo of Cambray in his expoſition of the canon, ſaith, that whereas at the firſt they neuer had Maſſe, without conuention of the people togither for communion, afterward it grew to a cuſtome in the Church, to haue priuate and ſolitary Maſſes, eſpecially in cloyſters.

Mixture of wine and water.

1 THe mingling of the wine with water, was a general cuſtome in al hote countries, for allaying the ſtrength of the wine, as Lyra teſtifies in 1. Cor. 11. and hereby it is prooued ſo to bee, becauſe the water was put in after the cõſecration, as appeares in that Maſſe which is called Chryſoſtomes. But this was none of Chriſts inſtitution, as the Fathers do hold, for Chryſoſtom ſaith, that Pope Alexander was the firſt that mingled water with the wine, Hom. 83. in Mat. Polyd. l. 5. c. 9. And Auguſtine, lib. 3. de conſenſu Euang. cap. 1. ſaith, that theſe words, [I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine] are to be vnderſtood of the cup of the Euchariſt. And the Armenians for aboue a thouſand yeares together, vſed pure wine without any mixture of water therwithall, as Otho Friſingenſis teſtifieth, lib. 7. c. 32. But out of a cuſtome it grew to bee a ceremony ſignifying a myſtery. Afterwards the Aquarij vſed onely water, without any wine, againſt whome Cyprian prooueth the vſe of wine, but not of water mixed with wine.

2 The ſchoole-men hold this mixture to bee no eſſentiall part of the Sacrament, and namely, Thomas, part. 3. qu. 74. art. 7. and Scotus, in ſent. 4. diſt. 11. q. 6. the two chiefe. And likewiſe Hales, Bonauenture, Richardus, & Durand. as Ioſeph Angles, in 4. diſt. 8. art. 6. teſtifies in his comment vpon the ſentences, adding that this is the common opinion of the Doctors. Yea Bellarmine himſelfe is not aſhamed to confeſſe this, in his fourth booke de Sacr. Euchariſt. cap. 10.

Keeping of the Sacrament.

1 THe Fathers vſed to keepe the Sacrament, not for any adoration, or publike bearing it about, but for their priuate vſe in the daies next following.

Shall not the husband know (ſaith Tertullian l. 2. ad uxorem) what thou doeſt ſecretly taſte before thy meate? and if hee doe know, hee doth beleeue that it is but bread, not that which it is called. And hereto belongeth that of Hieromes relation, concerning the cuſtome of the Romans of receiuing euery day, and that (as it is probable) in priuate houſes, epiſt. 50. ad Pammachium, & epiſt. 28. ad Lucinium. Euery one of the people (ſaith Baſil, in epiſt. ad Caeſaream Patrit. in Alexandria & Egipt.) hath the communion in his houſe, receiuing it of the Prieſt that conſecrateth and diſtributeth it.

2 But this reſeruation of the Sacrament was alwaies in priuate houſes, not in the Church, as now it is amongſt the Papiſts, who keepe it for curing the ſicke, which was not done by the Fathers.

3 And this reſeruation was ſometimes found fault withal by the Fathers. Our Lord (ſaith Origen, In Leuit. Hom. 5.) did not lay vp the bread which hee gaue to his Apoſtles, ——— nor did hee bid them reſerue it vntill the morrow. If there be any man (ſaith Concilium Caeſaraugustanum, cap. 3.) that is prooued not to eate the Sacrament in the Church which he receiueth, accurſed be he for euermore: and all the Biſhops did cry out altogether accurſed be he, Concil. Tolet. 1. cap. 14. If there bee ought remaining of the ſacrifice (ſaith Clement in his 2. epiſtle vnto Iames,) let it not bee reſerued vntill the morrow, but let it be rid away by the care of the Clergy: And Heſichius vpon Leuiticus, ſaith, l. 2. c. 8. that the remainder is to be burned with fire: others, that it was to be giuen to the children. Looke Nicephorus his 17. booke, and 25. chapter.

Vſe of the Latine tongue in the Seruice.

1 IN the pureſt Churches, for the ſpace of 800. yeares at leaſt, the duties of Chriſtianity, or diuine prayers, &c. were neuer performed in a tongue vnknowne to the people. Both the Prieſt and the people (ſaith Chryſoſtome, Hom. 18. in 2. Cor.) ſay the ſame common prayers, and all doe ſay one thing. It behoooueth, ſaith Iſidore, De eccleſ. offic. lib. 1. c. 10. that when we ſing, we ſing all together, & when wee pray, that we pray all together, and when the leſſon is read, that ſilence be made, and that all doe hearken to it with attention. —And therefore the Deacon with a cleare voice doth warne ſilence, that there be an vnity kept amongſt all, as well when they ſing, as when the leſſon is read, that whatſoeuer is preached vnto all, may bee equally heard of all. Let euery one pray, ſaith Origen againſt Celſus, lib. 8. vnto the Lord in his natiue and mother tongue. Here is a diſſonance of voice ſaith Hierome, Tom. 1. epiſt. 27. but an vnity of religion, & almoſt as many quires of ſingers, as there is diuerſity of nations. Let the onely Trinitie, ſaith Auguſtine, Epiſt. 178. be praiſed vnto for mercy, of all both Latines, and Barbarians, let no tongue how barbarous ſoeuer, bee made an alien from praiſing one God. And the Ruthens, Armenians, Egyptians, and Ethiopians, had all their diuine ſeruice in their vulgar tongue: and the Morauians, in that Slauon tongue by a graunt from the Pope. And the celebration of diuine ſeruice was in the yeare 1215. graunted by Innocentius the third, In Concil. Lateran. c. 9. vnto diuers places according to the diuerſity of the tongues: this is alſo confirmed out of the decretals of Gregory, l. 1. titul. 31. cap. Quoniam pleriſq; &c. In the Primitiue Church (ſaith Lyra, In 1. Cor. 14.) benedictions, & all other common [deuotiōs] were performed in the vulgar tongue. And in the Councell of Mentz, cap. 45. (about the yeare 813.) it is permitted vnto him that cannot otherwiſe learne the Catholike faith, and the Lords prayer, to learne them in his mother tongue.

2 If a ſtrange tongue at any time were vſed in diuine ſeruice, yet it was vnderſtood of the hearers. For ſo was the latine tongue, and although it were not the mother tongue, in all places and prouinces of the Romane Empire, yet it was vnderſtood generally in them all for the ſpace of 700 yeares & more. In the Prouinces of Afrike they ſpake Latin: and the French men generally did all vnderſtand this tongue. In the 3. Councell of Terwin, about the yeare, 770. cap. 17. the Homilies are commanded to be tranſlated into the more barbarous Romane or Dutch tongue, that they might bee the eaſier to bee vnderſtood. And it is credible, that the Britaines vnderſtood this tongue alſo. For marke what Bede hiſt. Anglic. l. 1. c. 1. ſaith, Britany (quoth he) as this preſent doth ſearch out, and profeſſe one and the ſame knowledge of higheſt truth, & true highnes, in fiue ſeuerall tongues, the Engliſh, Brittiſh, Scottiſh, Pictiſh, and Latine, which now through the meditation of the Scriptures, is growne common to all other. And Ualerius Maximus, libro 2, capite 1. doth teſtifie, that the Romane magiſtrates did ſeriouſly endeauour to haue their language diffuſed abroad, becauſe it wat not lawfull for the Greeks to deale with the Romans concerning any thing; but in the Latine tongue, though they did it in Greece or Aſia. And Cambden that moſt excellent Antiquaria, in his Britannia ſaith thus: If there be any man that wil not beleeue that our Britains vſed the prouinciall tongue of the Romans, ſurely hee knowes not how earneſtly the Romanes laboured to haue all the Prouinces ſpeake Latine, nor doth he mark what a ſway the Latin hath already in our vulgar tongue, to let paſſe the authority of Cornelius Tacitus, who ſaith, that in Domitians time the Britaines ſtudied for the eloquence of the latin tongue. Thus he. Now afterward when the Empire began to incline, and the Latine became corrupted by the Gothes in Italy, yet the vſe thereof remained in matters of religion, as before, by reaſon of the olde cuſtome, which by greater reaſon ſhould haue beene abrogated. But now it is held laudable, yea neceſſary to worſhippe in Latine, that is, in an vnknowne tongue.

3. Any tongue whatſoeuer, euen the Latine it ſelf, vnto thoſe that vnderſtand it not: is barbarous: as Ouid in his Triſtia, ſaith rightly, Barbarus hic ego ſum, &c. in Engliſh thus:

I am but barbarous in this ſtrange land,
For no man here my ſpeech can vnderſtand.

Looke Chryſoſtome and Haimo vpon the 14. of the firſt to the Corinthians.

Tranſubſtantiation, or reall preſence.

1. THe Fathers when they ſpeake of the Supper, haue many and diuers tearmes which may ſignifie conuerſion. Ambroſe lib.4. de Sacrum. cap.4. doth vſe the word conuerſion: and lib. de iis qui myſteriis initiantur, cap.9. the tearme of mutation. And Cyprian de cœna ſaid, the bread is [mutatus] changed, not in ſhape, but in nature. Origen againſt Celſus, lib.8. ſaith, that the bread by prayer is made [fitre] the body. And Gaudentius Tractat. 2. de Exodo, ſaith, that of the bread is made [effici] the body, and of the wine the blood. Euſebius Emiſſenus, hom.5. de Paſ. ſaith, that the prieſt by a ſecret power doth conuert [conuertere] the viſible creatures into the ſubſtance of the body and blood of Chriſt. And againe, that the bread doth paſſe [tranſire] in to the nature of the Lords body. Anſelmus, epiſtol. de corp. & ſang. Dom. ſaith, that the bread doth [migrare] go into the bodie. And Fulbertus, epiſt. ad Berengarium, ſaith, that it is tranſfuſed [transfundi.] Algerus, l. de Sacram. ſaith, that it is transferred and tranſpoſed [traijci & transferri] into the body. But the ancient Doctors, when they doe ſpeake of this change and conuerſion of the bread, do meane the change of the vſe & condition of the bread, and not of the ſubſtance. And therefore in the reading of them, we muſt diſtinguiſh the ſacramentall mutation of theſe ſignes in ſignifying and ſealing, from a ſubſtantiall mutation. And wee ought to hold directly, that they neuer knew of tranſubſtantiation [[illegible]] for at leaſt 800 yeares after Chriſt, but rather condemned it. Cyprian (or whoſoeuer was the author of the Sermon, de cœna) ſaith, bread retaining the forme of bodily ſubſtance. And Ambroſe, de Sacr. lib.4. cap.4. ſaith, They are what they were, and yet are changed into other. And Theodoret, dial. 2. The myſticall ſignes do not leaue their proper nature after conſecration. And Gelaſ. con. Eutyc. The ſignes do remaine in the propriety of their nature. And Walfrid. cap. 16. He deliuered the Sacraments of his body and blood vnto his diſciples in the ſubſtance of bread and wine. And Paſchaſius, de corp. & ſang. Do. c. 10. alias 28. Bread ſtrengtheneth the heart of man, and wine comforteth,--and therefore this myſterie of our ſaluation is rightly celebrated in the ſame ſubſtance. The like vnto this hath Bertram. And Paſchaſius againe, cap. 17. alias 46. Therefore my ſonne when thou commeſt to communicate of this myſtery, open the boſome of thy mind, cleanſe thy conſcience, and giue not thy ſelfe to receiue that onely which the peece of bread containes, but that which faith receiueth, becauſe that in Chriſt is contained the fulneſſe of diuinity. Hereby it is euident, that the canon of the Maſſe for 900. yeares, was neuer held to bee meant of Tranſubſtantiation, nor was there in all that time any mouthly receiuing of Chriſts true body dreamed of. Beſides, Druthmar, that liued about the yeare 800. vnderſtood the words of the canon to be ſpoken of the ſpirituall changing of the bread into Chriſts body, and the wine into his blood. For theſe are his words vpon this place of Scripture [and taking the cup, Mat. 26.] Thus the Lord commaunded vs to doe, changing ſpiritually the bread into his body, and the wine into his blood, that by theſe two we might remember what hee did for vs, concerning his body and blood. And Amalarius about the yeare 820, vnderſtandeth the words of the canon without either Tranſubſtantiation, or reall preſence, l.3. de eccl. offic. cap.25. And Walfrid. cap. 16. After the ſolemnities of the olde Paſſeouer, he deliuered the Sacraments of his body and blood, in the ſubſtances of bread & wine, and taught vs to celebrate them in memorie of his paſſion. Nicetas Choniates, Theſaur. lib. 4. writing againſt the Aſcodrugi, that would not haue myſteries repreſented in corporall things, ſaith, That the inſtitution, wherin our Sauiour vſed bread and wine for the ſaluation and reformation of mankinde corrupted, was not ſuch as wanted bodily things. Wherfore the Fathers when they ſpeake of the changing of the nature of the bread, doe meane the chãge of the propriety only, wherby of bodily ſuſtenance, by the power of the deity, it is made a food for the ſoule.

2. In ancient times it was the whole vniuerſall and orthodoxall conſent of the Church, that that very bread which Chriſt broke, (& not any other thing vnder the figure of bread, was his body. And this is the doctrine of Irenæus, Iuſtine Martyr, Tertullian, Cyprian, Theodoret, Chryſoſtome, Ambroſe, and Auguſtine:

And therefore theſe neuer ſo much as dreamed of Tranſubſtantiation. Which may bee conuinced by theſe ſeuen reaſons following.
1 Firſt, becauſe the Euchariſt was reſerued in priuate houſes for euery one to receiue: Bee-ing diſmiſſed (ſaith Cyprian of one, De ſpecta-culis) and bearing with him as the manner is,
2 the Euchariſt, &c. Secondly, becauſe they vſed to ſend it by children vnto the ſicke, as Euſebius teſtifieth in his 6. booke and 43.
chapter. Thirdly, becauſe it was vſed to bee 3 carryed about in ſuch meane manner, as namely, the body in a wicker basket, and the blood in a glaſſe, as Hierome teſtifieth of Exu-perius Biſhop, epiſt. 4. ad Ruſticum. Fourthly, 4 becauſe the Biſhops vſed to ſend it vnto others [as it is probable] for ſalutations ſake.
Witneſſes *Ireneus, ep. ad Victor. apud Euſebium
lib. 5. cap. 23.* and Nicephorus, lib. 4. cap. 39. Fift-5 ly, becauſe they vſed to giue it vnto Infants, as Auguſtine lib. 3. cap. 10. and almoſt in euery 6 worke of his doth teſtifie. Sixtly, becauſe if there remained any parcells of the Euchariſt vnreceiued, the young children that vſed the Church, were called to eate them vp. This Euagrius, libro 4. capite 35. recordeth, and Ni-cephorus in like manner, libro 17. capite 25.
7 Seuenthly and laſtly, becauſe it was a cuſtome in the auncient Church to burne the remainders of the Euchariſt, as Iſychi-us, libro 2. capite 8. vpon Leuiticus doth affirme.

3 Afterwards begun the diſputations of Tranſubſtantiation, but not as yet approoued as an article of faith, nor concluded of in Lumbard his age, which was about the yeare 1145. for he, lib. 4. d. 11. ſaith, that if it bee demanded of what ſort this conuerſion is, whether formall, or ſubſtantiall, or of ſome other kind, I cannot ſufficiently define; yea the Church for a whole thouſand yeares taught no other then ſpirituall receiuing of Chriſt, & all the Fathers of thoſe times vnderſtood the wordes of the ſupper to bee figuratiuely ſpoken. Wherefore it is a moſt impudent and faithleſſe part of Bellarmine to cite 32. writers for the opinion of tranſubſtantiation.

4 But in the yeare 1215. Innocent the third determined the manner of this conuerſion, in reſpect of the name, calling it Tranſubſtantiation: and for the thing it ſelfe, Leo the 9. determined it, in a conuenticle held at Rome, ann. 1049. And Nicholas the ſecond alſo in his decretalls de conſecrat. cap. Ego Berengarius, in the yeare 1060. And yet Berengarius abode in his true opinion of the Lords Supper, vntill the day of his death, and therefore is ſaid to haue ſeriouſly deteſted that abſurd recantation. Hildebertus Cenomanenſis doth praiſe him. And Lanfranke condemneth him as a violator of his recantation, and vnconſtant in his opinion. And indeede there is not a Papiſt in the world that will defend the recantation in Gratian ſet downe by Nicholas, becauſe he ſaith that the body of Chriſt is ſenſibly cruſhed with the teeth. And diuers of the ſchoolemen (as Biel, In can. Miſ. lect. 47. & Richardus de Media-villa, in 4. d. 8. q. 1.) doe condemne it as an erroneous aſſertion.

5 Now the moſt learned ſchoolemen after Innocentius doe diſagree both in the thing it ſelfe, and in the manner of explaning what the pronowne [Hoc] this, doth ſignifie and demonſtrate properly in theſe words [this is my bodie] Richardus de Media-villa, in 4. d. 8. art. queſt. 1. expoundeth it thus, This] that is, ſomething beeing vnder this ſenſible forme, is my body. Or thus, That which will bee forthwith preſent vnder this ſenſible ſigne which is ſeene, is my bodie. Thomas Aquinas 3. part. q. 78. in corp. art. Hoc. This] that is, that which is conteined in the general vnder theſe kinds, is my bodie. Bonauenture In d. 8. in 2. part. diſt. art. 1. q. 1. thus. This] that is, the ſubſtance of bread: and he will haue [eſt] is, to ſignifie [fit] is made, or [tranſit] is changed or [conuertitur] is turned, Scotus In 4. diſt. 8. q. 2. thus [this] that is, this ſingular eſſence, or ens, is my bodie. Marſilius in 4. queſt. 6. art. 1. thus: [this] that is, that into which this bread is changed, is my bodie. Occam quodlib. 2. q. 19. thus: [this] that is, this bodie which will bee forthwith vnder theſe formes, is my bodie. But Peter of Aliacũ in 4. Sent. q. 5. art. 1. ſaith, that it is not neceſſarie for the Prieſt that conſecrateth rightly to demonſtrate any thing by this word [this]: or that hee ſhould vnderſtand any thing by that word more then by a word that hath no ſignification, becauſe this word is onely giuen vs as a ſigne, wherby we may know that when theſe words are rightly pronounced, the bodie of Chriſt is immediately vnder theſe ſignes, by Gods good pleaſure. Holcot, In 4. ſen. q. 3. ſaith, that by this pronowne [Hoc, this] is ſignified that which remaineth vnder both the termes of tranſmutation, & is that which is onely accidents ſenſible, and no ſubſtance. Biel lect. 48, in cano. Miſſæ. ſaith that [This] that is, this content, into which the bread is to bee turned, &c. in ſome part of time which includeth the pronuntiation, and the terminating or finiſhing inſtant, is my bodie. Caiet. In 3. p. q. 78. art. 5. ſaith [this], that is, this ſingular ſubſtance, is my bodie. Now Guitmund that is elder then thẽ all, l. 2. doth thus expound this word [this] that is, which hitherto was bread, henceforth it is my body, not bread: or thus, [this] that is, that which I now giue you, is my body, for this pronowne [this] in this place hath no relation to any thing before ſpoken, but is a demonſtratiue of the thing preſent.

6 Theſe Phraſes of the Fathers,] that Chriſts body is eaten: goeth into the mouth: is touched with the hands: his blood is drunke, &c.] are to be vnderſtood tropically, that is, ſimbolically: ſignifying the efficacie of ſacramentall receiuing: and admoniſh vs to embrace the bodie of Chriſt that is in heauen, with an vnpolluted heart. For it is the Fathers doctrine, that the bread and wine are truly and properly the ſignes of the bodie and blood of Chriſt. Our Lord (ſaith Cyprian Tract. de vnct. Chriſmatis) at the table where he tooke part of his laſt feaſt with the Apoſtles, with his owne hands gaue them bread and wine: but vpon the croſſe he gaue his bodie to be wounded by the hands of the ſouldiers: that the ſincere truth and true ſinceritie which he had more ſecretly imprinted in the Apoſtles, might declare vnto the world how the bread and wine were his body and blood: and vpon what reaſons the cauſes thus agreed with the effects, and diuers names or formes were reduced to one eſſence; and the things ſignifying and ſignified ſhould be called both by the ſame names. Our Lord (ſaith Auguſtine contra Adimant, cap. 12.) did not ſticke to ſay, This is my bodie, when he gaue the ſigne of his bodie. And againe: Contra Maximinum, Wherein [in which ſignes] wee muſt not reſpect what they are, but what they repreſent: becauſe they are ſignes of things, and beeing in eſſence one thing, are in ſignification another. Origen likewiſe vpon the 15. of Matthew ſaith, that if all that goeth into the mouth deſcendeth into the belly, and ſo is caſt forth into the draught: that meate alſo which is ſanctified by the word of God and prayer, as farre as the materiall part thereof, goeth the ordinarie courſe of other meate. So Chryſoſtome (or whoſoeuer was the author of that epiſtle vnto) Caeſarius ſaith: Euen as we call the bread before it be ſanctified, bread, and when Gods grace hath ſanctified it by the Prieſts meanes, it loſeth the name of bread, and is held worthy to bee called the Lords bodie, although that the nature of bread doe remaine therin, and is not called two bodies, but one bodie of the ſonne——. Chriſts fleſh (ſaith Maxentius Dialog. 2. cont. Neſtor.) is not called the bodie of God as the Church is, nor as the bread, which the whole Church partaketh in memorie of his paſſion: but it is ſo called the bodie of God, as is a mans proper veſture or apparell, wherewith hee is arrayed. He, [Chriſt] (ſaith Auguſtine De ciuit. Dei lib. 21. cap. 25.) in ſaying, he that eateth my fleſh, and drinketh my blood, liueth in me, and I in him, doth ſhew what it is to receiue his bodie not ſacramentally, but truly, and drinke his blood: here marke an oppoſition betweene ſacramentall eating and true eating.

7 Theſe wordes of Chriſt, [My fleſh is meate indeede, Ioh. 6. &c.] are by Clement Pædag. lib. 1. cap. 6. Tertullian de reſurrectione carnis, Origen in Leuit. hom. 7. Chryſoſtome in Ioan. hom. 46. and Auguſtine tract. in Ioan. 25. and 26. taken in an allegoricall ſenſe.

8 And the words [this is my bodie] moſt of the Fathers take figuratiuely, and namely theſe: Tertullian lib. 4. cont. Marc. Origen, in two places, viz. in Leuit. hom. 7. and in Matt. cap. 15. Cyprian de vnct. Chriſmatis. Nazianzene de Paſchate: Ambroſe in three places, viz. de iis qui myſter. initiantur cap. 9. de Sacr. lib. 4. cap. 5. in 1. Cor. 11. Hierome in two, viz. in Matth. 26. & in Mark. 14. Auguſtine in ſeauen or eight, viz. libro 3. de doct. Chriſt. lib. 3. cap. 16. de Trinit. lib. 3. cap. 4. & 10. epiſt. 23. in Leuit. q. 57. cont. Adimant. cap. 12. & Pſal. 98. Chryſoſt. in Pſal. 22. Theod. dial. 1. Proſper in Sent. Auguſt. And he is cited, de conſecr. d. 2. c. Hoc eſt. Bede in Luc. 22. and Bertram de corp. & ſang. Domini.

9 But the Fathers ſpeake not only figuratiuely of the Sacrament, but euen ſometimes hyperbolically thereof, to beget it the greater reuerence, and to pierce mens mindes, and follow the phraſe of Scripture, and leſt the ſupper ſhould ſeeme a tragicke fiction. In this ſenſe ſaith Chryſoſtome in 1. Cor. 10. hom. 24. What is in the cup? that which flowed from his ſide. And againe, that which hee ſuffered not vpon the croſſe, hee ſuffereth for thee in the offering, ſuffering himſelfe to bee thruſt through. And hom. 21. ad populum Antioch. thinke what thou takeſt in hand——. For it is a pernicious thing to vſe that tongue vnto reproches, that hath miniſtred at ſuch diuine myſteries, and beene purpled with the colour of that blood, and made a ſword of gold.

10 That which the Fathers ſpeake of the bread and wine in the Lords Supper, the ſame they ſpeake in like manner of Baptiſme and the word of God. We are ſaid (ſaith Origen, Hom. 16. in Num.) to drinke the blood of Chriſt, not onely in the ſacraments, but when we heare and receiue his words. And in another place. Bind not thy ſelfe vnto the blood of the fleſh, but rather ſeeke after the blood of the word: and heare him that ſaith vnto thee, this is my blood which is ſhed for you for the remiſſion of your ſinnes. No man muſt any way doubt (ſaith Auguſtine in one of his Sermons, ad infantes,) cited by Bede, in 1. Cor. 10. that euery faithfull Chriſtian is made partaker of the body and blood of Chriſt, when he is made a member of him in Baptiſme: nor that hee is alienate from the communion of that bread and the cuppe, although he beeing in vnitie with Chriſt, bee taken out of this world before hee come to communicate of the ſaid Sacrament: for he is not depriued of the participation and benefit thereof, ſince he hath already attained to that which that Sacrament doth ſignifie.

11 The Fathers by the forme of bread [ſpeciem] doe ſtill vnderſtand the ſubſtance, not the accidents without the ſubſtance. In this ſenſe ſaith Cyrill of Hieruſalem, Myſtag. 4 vnder the forme of bread is giuen the bodie, and the blood vnder the forme of wine. I ſee not the forme of blood (ſaith Ambroſe, De Sacram. lib. 4. cap. 4.) but the likeneſſe it hath. And lib. de iis qui myſteriis initiantur, cap. 9. If Elias his ſpeech were of ſo great power, that it was able to fetch downe fire from heauen, ſhall not Chriſts words bee of the power to change the formes of the Elements? To make the forme of viſible bread (ſaith Au- guſtine, Serm. ad infantes, recorded by Bede in 1. Cor. 10) many graines of corne are compact together: ——and in the wine likewiſe, brethren, conſider how it commeth to be one liquor. Vnder that viſible forme of oyntment (ſaith Theodoret, in 1. Cor.) they doe receiue the inuiſible grace of that moſt holy ſpirit. And the ſame meaning ſometime they haue when they vſe theſe phraſes, the figure, or outward ſhape of the bread. And they doe vſe theſe words, to turne our eyes from the externall ſignes, vnto the heauenly matter therein ſignified, vpon which wee ought to fixe the eyes of our mindes. And hereupon Chryſoſtome ſaith, that there is nothing ſeene vpon the table, but the bodie and blood of the Lord; & yet intends not to put accidents without a ſubſtance. Contrariwiſe, the word [nature] doth ſometimes in the Fathers ſignifie the quality and condition onely; and not the eſſence of the thing. And in this ſenſe Cyprian de cœna, ſaith, the bread changed not in forme or ſhape, but in nature, by the words omnipotency is made fleſh.

12 Cyrill, libro 10, cap. 13. in Ioan. and elſewhere. And Hilarie, lib. 8. de Trin. with ſome other Fathers will haue Chriſt to be in vs naturally, and corporally; and ſo they will haue vs to receiue him. But they doe not ſpeake of the manner of our vnion with Chriſt herein, but of the limits of our vnion. They will haue vs vnited with Chriſt in one myſticall bodie, according to the truth of nature, and to bee ioyned truly and really with his fleſh and ſpirit, and yet after a ſpirituall and vncorporall manner.

13 Damaſcenus commutation [illegible], lib. 4. c. 14. and Theophylactes tranſelementation [illegible] is the change of the bread into another ſtate or condition, not into another ſubſtance and beeing, becauſe it is vnited to Chriſts body in a ſacramentall vnion, and of a corporall foode made a ſpirituall. For after the ſame manner, they affirme that we, [illegible] that is, are really conuerted into that (Chriſts) fleſh, Chryſ. hom. 45. In Ioan. and are tranſelementated into him, Theophylact. In Ioan. cap. 6. and yet they doe not faine any aboliſhing of our ſubſtance for all this. And this ſame [illegible] is not alwaies a changing of ſubſtance, but ſometime a correctiõ or changing of a thing into better; but howſoeuer, this transformatiõ helpeth not the Papiſts a iotte, for that which is transformed, remaineth not in regard of his exteriour forme. Although the auncient Fathers (ſaith Suarez vpon Thomas, tom. 3. queſt. 75. diſput. 50. ſect. 1.) vſed many words in the explanation of this myſterie, yet they are all either generall, as are the words [Conuerſion, Mutation, Paſſing into, and changing] or they are properly applyed to the accidentall change, as the word [Transfiguration] and ſuch like. Onely Theophylact his word [tranſelementation] commeth nearer the explanation of the myſteries true propertie, and ſignifieth a change of the things euen vnto the firſt elements, vnto the firſt matter: but yet that word is too vnappliable, and too vnfit for this myſtery. For it may ſignifie the conuerſion of one element into another, or the reſolution of a mixt body into the elements: but tranſubſtantiation moſt properly, and moſt fitly ſignifieth the conuerſion or commigration of one whole ſubſtance, into another whole ſubſtance.

14 The Fathers when they ſay, that the bread or wine remaineth no more, doe not meane ſimply, but in reſpect of his intent that is to receiue them, when hee receiueth them rightly: becauſe then wee muſt not thinke of the bread or the wine, but fixe both our mind and ſenſes wholly vpon Ieſus Chriſt.

15 Where they deny, that the bread is a figure of the bodie, they ſpeake of the bare ſigne, which is without fruite. There is not onely a certaine figuring of Chriſts fleſh, ſaith Theophylact, In Ioan. 6. Hee ſaid not, theſe are the ſignes of my bodie (ſaith Euthymius, in Matth. cap. 26.) but, this is my bodie. VVe ought not therefore to looke into the nature of that is ſet before vs, but into the vertue.

16 To conſecrate, is not to tranſubſtantiate, but to dedicate a prophane thing vnto an holy vſe. And that the conſecration of the bread is included in theſe fiue words [for this is my body] and of the wine in theſe [this is my blood] or ſuch like, no Father did euer teach. Cyprian, Serm. de cœna ſaith, that in his time they did conſecrate with theſe wordes: Doe this in remembrance of me, this is my fleſh, this is my blood: Baſill and Chryſoſtome held, that it was done by prayers, as we may reade in their Liturgies. Wilt thou know (ſaith Ambroſe, de Sacram. lib. 4. cap. 5.) what are the heauenly wordes of conſecration? Theſe are they, the Prieſt ſaith, make this oblation aſcribed vnto vs, reaſonable and acceptable for vs——who the day before his paſſion tooke bread in his holy hands,——and giuing thankes, bleſſed it, broke it, and gaue to his Apoſtles, ſaying, Take, eate, &c. and ſo vnto the end of the inſtitution. But Hierome, in 3. cap. Soph. ſaith, that to make the Euchariſt, there is not onely a neceſſitie of ſolemne prayer, but alſo of merite in the Prieſt. We call that onely (the bodie & blood of Chriſt) ſaith Auguſtine, de Trinit. lib. 3. c. 4.) which we taking from the fruits of the earth, and conſecrating with myſticall Prayer, doe receiue in due order, for our ſoules health, and as a memoriall of our Lords ſuffering for vs. Preſently after this prayer (ſaith Gregorie lib. 7.) Indict. 2. epiſt. 63.) we ſay the Lords prayer; becauſe it was the Apoſtles vſe to conſecrate the hoſt of oblation at that prayer onely. Vnleſſe Chriſt doe come himſelfe, (ſaith Heſichius lib. 1. in Leuit. cap. 8.) at the Prieſts prayer, and ſanctifie the ſupper, & lay the foundation of the action, there can by no meanes any ſacrifice of the Lord be made. It is not credible (ſaith Innocentius III. lib. 4. de myſt. Miſſæ, cap. 6. that he diſtributed his body before he had conſecrated. But it may be ſaid that Chriſt conſecrated by the diuine power, and afterwards ſhewed the forme that others ſhould follow in their ſolemnizing, for hee of himſelfe conſecrated by his owne power: but we, by that vertue which he hath giuen to the words. If any Prieſt (ſaith Scotus in 4. diſt. 8. q. 2. art. 2.) ſhould begin to ſay theſe words, this is my bodie, and omit the words that doe goe before them: I ſay, that in all ſuch caſes wee may not worſhip [the Euchariſt] ſimply, but with this condition, If it be truly conſecrated. And of the conſecration of the blood he ſpeaketh in like manner: We are not infallibly taught, whether vnto the forme of the conſecration of the blood doe belong any of the wordes which are after theſe wordes [of my blood] or any of them that follow vntill theſe [doe this:] therefore it is dangerous to auerre any thing without ſufficient authority be had for the confirmation. Likewiſe Biel, in 4. diſt. 8. q. 3. concl. 3. ſaith, that the neceſſarie and preciſe forme of conſecrating the ſupper, is not ſufficiently determined of in the Canonicall Scriptures: which aſſertion hee doth afterwards affirme by reaſon. The learned man D. Redman obſeruing the tumultuous wrangling of the ſchoolemen about the words of conſecration, was not afraide to affirme, that not one almoſt of all the whole ſchoole did rightly vnderſtand the word [Conſecrare] Hiſtor. Martyr. Anglicana.

17 The bodie of Chriſt in the Fathers writings, is threefold, Reall, that is, his bodie aſſumed: Myſticall, the Church: Sacramentall, the bread in the ſupper. The body of Chriſt taken from the altar (ſaith the decretalls de conſecr. d. 2. cap. 79.) is a figure, if we view the outward formes of bread and wine: but the truth, when we beleeue the bodie & blood of Chriſt to be truly there within. The fleſh is a Sacrament of the fleſh (ſaith Auguſt. in Sent. Proſ. and the blood of the blood. The bread is Chriſts body, not corporally but ſpiritually, ſaith AElfrik Archb. of Canterbury in his ſermon in Saxon, wherein hee diſtinguiſheth the bodie crucified, and the ſacramentall bodie. And to make Chriſts bodie, is to conſecrate the bread into the ſigne of his reall bodie. Let the word come to the element (ſaith Aug. tract. in Ioan. 80.) and it becommeth a Sacrament. This is the body which the Fathers ſay ſo often to be daily made, bleſſed, eaten, broken, diuided, falleth to the earth, is handled, ſwallowed, and torne with the teeth: Cyprian, ſermone de Lapſis. The nature of the bread and wine (ſaith Bede In Epiph. Do.) is by the ineffable ſanctification of the ſpirit, tranſlated into the Sacrament of the bodie and blood of our Lord. The fleſh and blood of our Lord (ſaith Hier. in Epheſ. 1.) is vnderſtood two waies, either for his ſpirituall, and diuine fleſh, and blood, whereof he ſaid, my fleſh is meate indeed, & my blood is drinke indeed, —— or for the fleſh which was nailed on the croſſe, and that blood which was ſhed by the ſouldiers ſpeare.

18 And the creation that the Fathers ſpeake of was alwaies without tranſubſtantiation. When the oyle is conſecrated for the ſicke (ſaith Amalar. de eccl. off. l. 1. c. 12. we conclude thus: by whome thou (ô Lord) alwaies createſt all theſe good things.

19 The Fathers ſay that we receiue Chriſt in the bread, or vnder the forme of bread, as the bread is a ſigne of Chriſts fleſh, & inſtrument of the ſoules nouriſhment: not as the receptacle of his body. And likewiſe they ſay that we in the water doe receiue the remiſſion of our ſinnes. Lumb. Sent. 4. d. 4. But this is as we ſay, that wee haue poſſeſſion giuen vs in writings, when as the writings doe but aſſigne the ſame vnto vs: and ſo we receiue Chriſt in the bread, as the ſignified in the ſigne, not the contained in the continent.

20 The Sacrament is honoured, receiued, and reſpected, as it is the expreſſiue ſeale and ſigne of our myſticall vnion with Chriſt, by whoſe body wee are after an admirable manner, quickned. Hence it is called a myſterie to be trembled at, becauſe by theſe creatures through the operation of the diuine maieſtie, we are made partakers of the bodie and blood of Chriſt. And hence it was that God hath ſhewen ſome miracles about this ſupper to make the inſtitution more honourable, not to prooue the reall preſence. And vpon this, the Fathers had a care that none of it ſhould fal to the ground, and reuerenced all the ornaments of the Church, and ſuffered not the Catechumeniſts to communicate. And Chryſoſt. in Ephe. hom. 3. ſaith that it is a kings table, that the king himſelfe is preſent, and Angells doe miniſter to him. By this he mooued all to reuerence, and hence he called it an oblation to bee trembled at. vid. loc.

21 The Fathers giue but one place at once vnto Chriſts bodie. Our Lord is aboue (ſaith Aug. tract. 30. in Ioh.) but here alſo, and our Lord is truth. For his body wherein he roſe againe, may be but in one place: but his truth is ſpread abroad euery where. Baſil de Sp. S. cap. 22. prooueth the holy Ghoſt to be God, becauſe he can be in many places at once. He aſcended into heauen (ſaith Aug. epiſt. 57. ad Dardan.) ſitteth at Gods right hand, from whence and from no other place hee ſhall come to Iudgement. And againe, In that he is God, he is euery where: but as he is man, he is but in heauen. And, doubt not that as God he is euery where preſent —— but his circumſcriptible bodie is in ſome certaine place of heauen. According to his humane ſubſtance, ſaith Fulgent. l. 2. cap. 17. ad Thraſimund.

he

A hee left the earth, when hee aſcended vp to heauen. The fleſh, ſaith Vigilius contra Eutyc. l.4. whileſt it was here vpon earth, was not in heauen, and now that it is in heauen, it is no more vpon the earth.

22 Laſtly, when tranſubſtantiation was once eſtabliſhed, the moſt learned ſtucke to the opinion of conſubſtantiation, as moſt congruent vnto Scripture, receiuing the opinion of tranſubſtantiation, either ſolely or chiefly, becauſe the Church had ſo decreed. Scotus in 4. diſt. 11. q. 3. art. 1. holds expreſſely, that the doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation is not expreſſed in the Scriptures, adding this: It ſeemeth to mooue vs chiefly [to hold tran- B ſubſtantiation] becauſe we muſt hold of the Sacraments, as the Romane Church hath ſet downe in the Extrauagants de hæret. c. Ad abolendam, where note theſe wordes in the Paris edition, ann. 1497. in the margent: the faith of this Sacrament is only becauſe of the determination of the Church. And in the ſame article reſp. ad arg. 3. ſaith thus. We ſay that the Church hath reſolued that this meaning [that the bread is tranſubſtantiate] is the trueſt faith, in the creede of Laterane vnder Innocent the 3. beginning, Firmiter credimus, &c. ——where the truth of ſome things to be beleeued is declared, & that more plainely, then either in the Apoſtles Creede, Atha- C naſius his, or that of the Councell of Nice. Briefly, whatſoeuer is there ſaid fit to bee beleeued, wee muſt hold to be of the ſubſtance of faith——. If you aske why the Church would make choice of ſo hard an vnderſtanding of this article, when the Scripture may be ſalued with an explication, both more eaſie, and in apparance more true; to this I ſay that the Scriptures are expounded by the ſame ſpirit that made them. And we muſt imagine that the Catholike Church explaneth this to vs with the ſame ſpirit that it taught vs our firſt faith, namely, the ſpirit of truth. This opinion, both in the ſame ſenſe, and almoſt in the ſame words we may reade in Biel, lect. 41 in Canon. Miſſ. with this additi- D on moreouer, that this ordination [of tranſubſtantiation] was not knowne perhaps in the Church vntill after the inſtitution. And it is thought to haue beene firſt reuealed vnto the holy Fathers, or found out by them through their labour in explaning of the Scriptures. Though Chriſts body (ſaith Petrus de Alliaco, in 4 Sen. q. 5. art. 2. Concl. 2.) as a quantitie, and the bodily quantity thereof be in heauen, and in the Sacrament: yet is it not in the Sacrament as a quantatiue body, or a bodily quantity. And againe, q. 6. art. 2. That maner [of Conſubſtantiatiō] which ſaith the ſubſtance of bread doth there remaine, where the bodie of Chriſt begins to be, is poſſible, & neither oppoſite to reaſon nor Scriptures: nay it is eaſier to vnderſtand, and more reaſonable to conceiue then any of thoſe that ſeparate the ſubſtance from the accidents, and make Chriſts body a non-ſubſtance. For this putteth no accidents without a ſubſtance, which is one of the difficulties in this queſtion——. And therfore it ſeemes not any way inconuenient to follow the firſt way, if ſo be that the Church had ſo determined. And againe: The fourth, and more common opinion is, that the ſubſtance of bread remaineth not, but ceaſeth ſimply to haue a beeing:——and though this bee not ſo probable out of Scripture, nor in my iudgement, out of the determination of the Church: yet ſince it fauoureth this opinion, as the common opinion of Doctors and holy men, therefore I alſo doe hold it. Thus he. It is moſt plaine (ſaith Durandus, in 4. diſt. 11. q. 1.) that it is a raſh part to ſay that Chriſts bodie by diuine power cannot be in the Sacrament otherwiſe then by hauing the bread conuerted into his ſubſtance. And againe, But if that manner [which teacheth the ſubſtance of bread to remaine after conſecration] were true, de facto, of the thing done, wee ſhould haue many doubts taken away which fall about this Sacrament, in teaching the bread doth not remaine. For firſt, there is a doubt how any thing can bee nouriſhed by this Sacrament; and then how the formes may bee corruptible; or how any thing can haue generation by them, all which doubts the other ſenſe would cleare.——But becauſe this way may not be held expreſſely, ſince the Church hath determined on the contrary way, whome we preſume not to erre in ſuch caſes, therefore by holding expreſſely that ſide, we muſt anſwer vnto the arguments on the contrary ſide. And in his third queſtion. Sauing the reuerence of a better iudgemēt, it may be thought that in the Sacrament there is a conuerſion of the ſubſtance of the bread into Chriſts body, and that in this manner: The forme of the bread beeing corrupted, the matter therof is vnder the forme of Chriſts body, ſuddenly, and by the eternall power of God: as the matter of food or nouriſhment is vnder the forme of that which it feedeth by the power of nature. And afterwards: The foreſaid manner of the conuerſion——is euidently poſſible: And the other [tranſubſtantiation] is not intelligible, neither is the one more approued or reproued by the Church, then the other. VVhereas the words of the Scriptures (ſaith Caietane, in 3. part. Thom. q. 75. art. 1.) are expounded two waies, either properly, or metaphorically: the firſt errour in this point was theirs that interpreted theſe wordes of our Lord [this is my body] metaphorically, which the Maſter of the ſentences in his fourth booke, and tenth diſtinction ſpeaketh of, who in this point is reprooued. And the force of his reproofe conſiſteth herein, that the Church vnderſtandeth theſe words properly, and it behoueth them to be verified properly. I ſay the Church: for indeed there is not any forcible motiue in the Goſpell to make theſe words bee taken properly. But Ioſeph Angles, in florib. Theolog. in 4. diſt. 11. q. 4. de Euchariſtia, art. 1. admoniſheth vs of circumſpection in reading this place of Caietane. Seeing it is certaine (ſaith Ferus, in Mat. 26.) that Chriſts body is there, what need we diſpute whether the bread remaine or not? Thus he. Now before the ſchoolemens time, there was one AElfrike, Arch-biſhop of Canterbury, who in his forenamed Saxon Sermon which was wont to bee read euery feaſt of Eaſter in the Engliſh Churches, ſpeaketh expreſly againſt the ſame tranſubſtantiation, and Bertram likewiſe in his booke of the body and blood of Chriſt.

Adoration and eleuation of the Sacrament.

1 The adoration in the Sacrament belongeth vnto Chriſt ſitting in heauen, and is an inward worſhip of the heart, or lifting vp of the minde beeing ſtirred vp with theſe outward ſignes. The ſignes (ſaith Aug. de catech. rudi. cap. 26.) are viſible Sacraments of diuine things, but inuiſible things are therin honoured.

2 If the worſhip be referred to the Sacrament only, it is but a reuerence, and no adoration, giuen as well to baptiſme as the ſupper, as teſtifieth, Aug. de doctr. Chriſt. l. 3. c. 9.

3 Honorius the third, an. 1220. was the firſt that euer inſtituted the adoration of the Sacrament. And after him Vrban the 4. ordained a feaſt in honour of the body of Chriſt.

4 The eleuation of the hoſte was vſed, not that it ſhould be adored, but to ſignifie the myſterie of Chriſt taken downe from the croſſe. Amalar. l. 3. c. 26. The Prieſts and Deacons eleuation ſignifie the taking downe of our Lord from the croſſe: the hoſte and the cup ſignifie the Lords body. And the Liturgie of Chryſoſtome doth not affirme, that the eleuation of the bread was vſed, that Chriſt therein ſhould be adored: but the prieſt eleuating the ſacred bread crieth out, Holy, to the holy.

The appurtenances of the Maſſe, at this day.

1 The tapers that are now lighted in the Church on the day at Maſſe time, before and after the reading of the Goſpell, are not approoued by the Fathers. We light no torches on the day time, ſaith Hierome againſt Vigilantius, yet he confeſſeth that they were lighted in the Churches of the Eaſt, by ſome of ignorance, & by others that had zeale, but not according to knowledge, c. 3. But Tertullian, de Idololat. ſaith, that this was the cuſtome of heretikes. And Lactantius wiſely reprehendeth it, l. 6. Inſtit. c. 2. ſaying: They doe light vp lampes vnto God, as though hee liued in the darke: ſo doth the Councell of Eliberis, c. 34.

2 The Primitiue Church neuer vſed Incence. VVe buy no frankincenſe at all, ſaith Tertullian, apolog. 42. We goe not into Arabia to ſeeke frankincenſe (ſaith Auguſtine in Pſal. 49.(——it is the ſacrifice of praiſe that God requireth at our hands. And Pſal. 50. Offer wiſely: thou haſt thine offering within thy ſelfe: goe not abroad to ſeeke frankincenſe, but ſay, In me ô God are thy vowes, the praiſes which I will giue thee. Arnobius in his 7. booke againſt the Gentiles inferreth many reaſons againſt the burning of Incenſe.

3 The veſſells wherein our Sacraments are put and conſecrated (ſaith Walfrid. cap. 24. de reb. eccleſ.) are cuppes and diſhes. Pope Zepherine ordained that the celebration ſhould bee performed with diſhes of glaſſe: and Vrban after him cauſed them & all other Church veſſels to be made of ſiluer: thus as in all the reſt, ſo in this hath the churches grauitie and ſtate in ceremonies, increaſed daily with the times. Thus ſaith he.

4 The linnen veſtures, [be they Albes, or Surpleſſes] were at the firſt the rayments of noblemen, and for honours ſake giuen vnto Prieſts: but not vnto any Monke, ſaue onely in diuine ſeruice time, as Eraſmus teſtifieth in the life of Hierome. Theodoret lib. 2. hiſt. cap. 27. relateth that Conſtantine gaue Macarius Biſhoppe of Hieruſalem a robe wrought with gold, for him to vſe in Baptiſme.

5 The Prieſts ornaments (as Walfrid reporteth) grew vp by little and little vnto the height that they now be in. For firſt they ſaid their Maſſes in common attyre: as they doe vnto this day in ſome Churches of the Eaſt: But Pope Stephen ordained that the Prieſts ſhould haue holy veſtures, to weare in no daily vſe ſauing in the Church, —— It was decreed in the Councell of Bracarea, that no Prieſt ſhould celebrate Maſſe without a typpet. Others added other veſtures, in the Church, either in imitation of the habite of the ceremoniall Prieſts, or to beare ſome myſticall ſignification. Thus ſaith Walfrid. de reb. eccleſ. cap. 24. And indeede the gaudie ſhewes that are now vſed about the apparell of the Maſſe, were neither ſeene nor heard of in whole or part, for aboue 400. yeares after Chriſt.

6 And for 800. yeares after Chriſt, there were but eight veſtures vſed in all the whole myſteries of religion, as the ſaid Walfrid, cap. 24. and Amalarius, l. 2. c. 22. de offic. eccleſ. doe both teſtifie: whereas now there are fifteene, ſixe Prieſtly veſtures, and nine of the Biſhops.

7 The clergy of antiquitie, as well in the Weſterne as Eaſtern Church did vſe to haue the head polled, but not ſhauen as the Papiſts haue now, and which the Fathers reprooue. The haires of the head (ſaith Clemens Alexandrinus,pedag.l.3.c.11.) are to bee cut,not with a razor,but with barbers ſizzers. Shew you (ſaith Optatus to the Donatiſts, l.2.contr.Parm.) where you are commaunded to haue the Prieſts head ſhauen : whereas contrariwiſe, innumerable examples ſhew that it is vnlawfull to bee done. Wee learne here (ſaith Hierome vpon the 44 of Ezechiel) that wee neither ought to bee ſhauen to the bare,with a razor, nor to be cut ſo neere, that wee ſeeme as ſhauen: but let our haire grow ſo, that it doe couer our ſkinne. As for the ſhauing vſed nowadaies,the Church thought not of it for many ages after Chriſt : for the firſt mention that was euer made of the ſhauing of the crowne like a circle is in Germanus of Conſtantinople his Theoria; The ſhauing of the prieſt (ſaith hee) and the cutting of his haire round vpon the crown,is in ſigne of the crowne of thorne which Chriſt bare vpon his head. This alſo is ſpoken of by Hugo,Sanct,De Sacram.lib.2.part.3.cap.1. Lumbard,lib.4. diſt.24.Thomas, and Bonauenture, beeing indeed all one with the ſhauing of the lay-penitents,as the Councell of Agatha,*ca.2.*and the third Councell of Toledo,cap.12. doe both record. As for the Prieſts moderne ſhauing, it is abſolutely condemned by the fourth Councel of Toledo,canon 40.in theſe words: Let all clearkes or readers, as the Leuites and Prieſts, polling their haire all their head ouer aboue, leaue but a circle like a crowne below,[about their eares.] Not as the readers do in ſome part of Galacia,who wearing their haire long,like lay-men, doe onely clippe a little circle in the top or crowne of the head: for this the heretikes in Spaine do vſe vnto this day. The Greeks vſed no round polling, as Bede in two places teſtifieth, viz. hiſt.Eccl.lib.4 cap.1.& lib.5.cap.22.

8 The crowne in the Fathers ſignifies the Epiſcopall glory, dignity and reuerence: or the hoarines of their haire, which to old men is as a crowne. Or,it may be,the polling vſed in thoſe daies,not the wearing of the haire about the temples, and the crowne ſhauen as the center of that circle. And ſo muſt that Epiſtle of Hierome to a certaine Prieſt, bee vnderſtood: the crowne vpon the clearks head ſignifieth the kingdome they haue in God. And that of Auguſtine, epiſtol. 26. I pray thy crowne to ſalute thy two brethren, my Lords Alipius and Euodius,in my name.

9 The Prieſts cut,and the Monkes,in ancient time (for all Baronius his talking, annal. tom.1.p.631.) was both one: for both vſed to cut all their haire,leauing but a ring round about their eares,Tolet.Conc.4.cap.40.

10 The beginning of this cleargy-clipping was thus: the people at the firſt were delighted with long haire: which afterwards the Cleargy vſed to cut for ſoberneſſe and modeſty ſake. And this in proceſſe of time, through a growne generall vſe, became a ſignificant ceremony. So ſaith Iſid. de of. eccleſ. l.2.cap.4 the cutting of the haire, and leauing a circle below, I take to ſignifie prieſthood,& the rule of the Church in them. And Amalar. de of.lib.2.c.5. ſaith, We beare our crowne vpon the lower part [of our head] when we doe equalize with reaſon thoſe neceſſaries of the world, which we ought to gouerne. Thus of ceremony ſuperſtition is growne.

11 Organs were erected about the yeare 660.as Platina ſaith, in Vitaliano,about 820.as Amonius ſaith,*de geſt.Fran.lib.4. cap.*114. not vntill after Aquinas his time, as Nauarre witneſſeth,*in lib.de orat.& hor.cano.cap.*16. As for Church-muſicke, in ſet ſongs, Gregorie in his 4. booke epiſt. 44. de geſt. Syn. habitæ in vrbe, diſalloweth it.

12 In the auncient Church, ſuch ſincere ſimplicity was accepted, that they neuer vſed any ceremony in their ordinatiō of Biſhops, but only impoſing of hands vpon him. Afterwards crept in the ceremonies of deliuery of a booke,and annoyling of the hands of the prieſt with chriſme. The Hierarchie vnder Areopagita his name ſpeaketh of impoſition of hands,but not of vnction at all.

Penance ſacramentall, and Satisfaction.

1 THe Sacrament of penance aroſe from theſe beginnings: firſt,in the primitiue Church,the publike penance with his rites was in vſe: not any priuate penance vſed, or at leaſt not impoſed : afterwards about Gratians time, anno 1130. entred the diſputations of the neceſſity of priuate confeſſion, and ſatisfaction, getting footing, but not foundation vntill Peter Lombard, and he was the firſt that durſt auerre it to bee a proper Sacrament. And the ſucceeding Schoolemen could not agree about the matter and forme thereof, for all his determination. But in the Councell of Laterane,anno 1215. they made a iudiciall proceeding of confeſſion and abſolution.

2 The Fathers ſatisfaction was an eccleſiaſticall and publike mulct impoſed vpon the offenders,as this,that they ſhould be put in ſome ſeparate corner of the Church, and there that in abſtinence of meate,drinke,and raiment,and alſo in teares and ſorrowes,they ſhould at an appointed time acknowledge their offence, teſtifie their repentance, and thereby ſatisfie the Church whome they had offended, and which doubted of their repentance. This Saint Auguſtine teſtifieth,*Enchir.*65.

3 The ſatisfactions which are ſaid to bee made vnto God, were no redemptions of temporall paine, but actions and rites, whereby the ſinner thought to ſatisfie Gods precept, commanding true and vnfained repentance, and the fruite thereof, according to the manner and meaſure of the ſinne: whereby the actions became not onely pleaſing to the Church, but euen to God alſo. In this ſenſe Radulph. Ardens, In feria 4. in cap. ieiunij, ſaith, Satisfaction for ſins done, conſiſteth in three things, in ſatisfaction of worke, compunction of minde, and confeſſion of mouth. And in this ſenſe are almes called ſatisfaction, not that they are the price of our ſinnes before God, but becauſe they are ſignes of true and vnfained repentance. This the Fathers doe approoue, and Auguſtine for one, de Dogmat. eccl. cap. 54. in theſe words; The ſatisfaction of repentance, is to cut off all cauſes of ſinne, and not to dally with the entrance of their inſtigations.

You ſhall mortifie your in-borne vices, (ſaith Bede, in Pſal. 4.) by bringing forth fruits worthy of penitence: euery one afflicting himſelfe for euery ſinne, as farre as true and worthy repentance doth exact. And how confeſſion aboliſheth our ſinnes, the Canon declareth, ca. Omnis qui, De pœnitentia, diſtinct. 1. in theſe words, Confeſſion is made to ſhew repentance, not to obtaine pardon. And in the ſame diſtinction, c. 1. Medicine, the gloſſe expoundeth theſe words, [Almes do redeem ſinnes] thus, [doe ſhew them to be forgiuen.] Paludanus, in 4. diſt. 15. denyeth that workes can ſatisfie for ſinne, beeing otherwiſe due of themſelues. And this phraſe, [redeeme your ſoules] is reprooued by Optatus, lib. 3. contra Parm. And Mark the Heremite, in his booke de baptiſmo, denyeth that our ſinnes can be aboliſhed by prayer, faſting, gifts, humility, &c. but that ſuch things are meanes to preſerue vs from relapſe: and his reaſon for the firſt, is, becauſe ſinnes are taken away onely by the croſſe of Chriſt. Here it is not amiſſe to recite a ſaying of Lanſpergius a Carthuſian, not ſo tedious as it is true and religious. I would not haue thee thinke (ſaith hee) that thou canſt doe penance for thy ſinnes: doe not dreame of it: Why? Becauſe thy ſinnes are in number aboue the ſands of the ſea: too too many, and all too great. Thou art not able to ſatisfie for one, what canſt thou do for many, for innumerable? thinke not therefore that thou canſt doe workes ſatisfactory for thy ſinnes. For what alas canſt thou account of theſe, in reſpect of the many mountaines of thine enormities? They that do great good workes, and commit but ſmall offences, they ſatisfie for their ſinnes: but what euer thou doeſt, refer it to Gods glory: and what good ſoeuer thou doeſt, thinke and reſolue thou haſt done it for his pleaſure. Let the honour, the loue, and the good will and pleaſure of God, be the motiues vnto al thy good workes. Do all things to pleaſe him, to win his fauour, to purchaſe his friendſhip, to honour him, A that fulfilling his pleaſure, thou be not offenſiue to him. And yet thinke all thy workes of farre ſmaller moment then able to ſatisfie for thy ſinnes: for, for them thou muſt offer vnto God the workes of Ieſus Chriſt, his ſorrowes, wounds, death, in the vnion of that loue wherein hee endured all theſe for thee. Theſe are the meanes of thy ſatisfaction; but whatſoeuer thou doe, or ſuffer, offer it not vnto God for thy ſinnes; but for his loue & good pleaſure, either do, or ſuffer, ſtill wiſhing increaſe of grace from him, whereby thou maiſt performe greater, more and more acceptable workes. Wherefore let the loue of God be the cauſe of thy good life, and the ſcope and leuell of all thy good workes. Thus B ſaid a Fryar.

4 Amongſt the Latines, the word [Satiſfacere] is ſometimes vſed for to pleaſe another in executing of ſome office. I (ſaith Tully, l. 1. epiſt. 1.) in all duty and zeale, doe rather ſatisfie, or pleaſe all others, but not my ſelfe at all. Beſides, ſatisfaction among men is the recompence made for an iniury, either in retribution of dammage, or in obtaining of pardon by ſubmiſſion. And after this ſecond way, are workes of repentance tearmed ſatisfactorie before God, beeing reall ſupplications for pardon, which God in Chriſt approueth. It behooueth the Deacon whom you write of, —— to ſatisfie the Biſhop that gouerneth him, with perfect humility, (ſaith C Cyprian, l. 3. cap. 9. And lib. 1. epiſt. 3. they pray that Chriſt would be intreated with prayers and ſatisfactions. And, I embrace with ready & perfect charity, thoſe that turne from their ſinnes with repentance, and confeſſe them with humble and ſimple ſatisfaction. And, ad Demetrianum, he exhorteth the faithfull to ſatisfie God, whileſt they haue time here vpon earth. But this can be nothing but to beſeech Almighty God for remiſſion of ſinnes, and to acknowledge them: and the effect of this ſatisfaction he affirmeth to be the attaining of pardon. The acknowledging of ſinne, and entreaty of pardon is a ſatisfaction not vnto the ſtrictnes of the Iudge, but vnto his mercy, (as Cyprian ſaith very well in another D place) that is vnto Gods merciful acceptāce. And very rightly: for theſe acts of the penitent, doe include in themſelues, a faith laying hold vpon Chriſts ſatisfactiō, by which they haue their acceptāce. And in this ſenſe Chryſoſtome, hom. de B. Philogonio, ſaith, that If thou returne from thine olde ſinnes wholly, and promiſe vnto God truly, that thou wilt neuer turne againe vnto them, God requires no more for a further ſatisfaction.

5 So then the workes of Pietie are called ſatisfactions, as they are referred vnto our prayers. God taketh away the ſinne (ſaith Marke the Heremite, lib. De baptiſmo.) which wee intreate for by almes, prayers, and patience. Our ſighes and ſorrow (ſaith Climacus, de memor. mortis grad. 7.) doe crie out vnto

God, and our teares do goe the embaſſage of feare. Gods mercy is obtained by the intreaty of almes, ſaith Radulph. Ardent. homil. in domin. 1. Quad. So that ſatisfactions are ſuch, by the meanes of obtaining in prayer. Wherefore it behoooueth vs to beleeue that we muſt repent (ſaith Ambroſe, de pœnitent. libro 1. capite 8.) and ſhall obtaine pardon; and yet to hope for pardon out of faith, not as of debt: It is one thing to deſerue, and another thing to preſume: faith obtaineth as it were from couenant in writing, but preſumption is neerer the arrogant then the ſuppliant.

6 In proceſſe of time the doctrine of ſatisfaction began to bee deliuered and taught in vnfit and ill applied tearmes: as when the B Fathers ſay, that hereby our ſinnes are redeemed, expiated, purged, and purified, &c. The Generall Lord of vs all (ſaith Chryſoſtome, Homil. 1. in Geneſ.) ——— deſiring to purge away all that euer wee haue offended, hath found out a cure thereof, which is performed by faſting. Almeſ-deeds do clenſe the whole man, ſaith Proſper, lib. de promiſſ. & præd. part. 2. cap. 7. If we be contaminate with any ſpotte (ſaith Leo, Serm. 2. de Collectis,) by conuerſing in this earthly habitation, it may bee wholly waſhed out by the power of almeſ-deedes. The man that hath vndone himſelfe, by his own ſatisfaction may redeeme himſelfe, ſaith Cæſarius, Hom. 1. And Chryſologus, Hom. 42. holdeth, that faſting doth open the gates of heauen, and letteth vs in vnto God. C Almes extinguiſheth ſinne (ſaith Maximus Taurinenſis, Homil. de diuerſis,) euen as baptiſme doth, and putteth out the fire of hell. So that almes is as a ſecond fount of purgatiō for the ſoule. But here we muſt note, that the Fathers ſpeak not in the papiſticall ſenſe of remiſſion of any temporall paines: but ſpeake wholly and abſolutely of the whole crime, and whole puniſhment together, ſo that they ſpeake both in theſe and in other like caſes, after a figuratiue metonymy, by which that is giuen to the meanes, way, inſtrument, and occaſion, which in it ſelfe is due and proper vnto another. For it is the onely blood of Chriſt, which is the ſatisfaction and purgation of all the ſinnes of the world, as the Fathers themſelues acknowledge. D There is but one expiation for ſinne (ſaith Baſil, In capite primo Eſay,) namely, that blood which was offered and ſhedde for the ſaluation of all the world. And Ambroſe, In Luc. 22. & Serm. 46. ſaith, that teares doe waſh away and purge our ſinnes: and yet hee addeth in expreſſe tearmes: I reade of Peters teares, but not of his ſatisfaction. It is a common phraſe with vs to ſay, this iourney hath made mee rich; and the pardoning of an iniurie is not the cauſe of the forgiueneſſe, but the article and condition vpon which the pardon is giuen. So ſaid Adrian vnto Frederik, wee haue giuen thee the enſigne of the Imperiall crowne, that is, our hands haue conſecrated and crowned thee, Sigon. de Regno Italiæ, libro ſecundo.

vulgare.

7 The Fathers ſay in like manner, that the works of penitence do take away our ſinnes, but not by themſelues; but onely in reſpect that they are annexed vnto that faith which apprehendeth and laieth holde vpon Chriſt, for the remiſſion of ſinnes: (Looke the place of Ambroſe, cited in the 5. ſection of this article.) I do not deny, (ſaith the ſame Saint, De pœnit. lib. 2. c. 9.) that ſinne may be diminiſhed by extending often our bounty vnto the poore, but then muſt thy faith approoue thine almes and expenſes. Looke alſo his 1. booke, and 30. chapter of his offices.

8 Sometimes the Fathers vſe a hyperbolicall metaphor in their phraſes. As oft as we giue almes after our ſinnes, (ſaith Gregory, In Iob 12. cap. 24.) ſo often we doe as it were pay a price for our euill deedes. And libro 6 in 1. Regum, cap. 15. The third kinde, that is reuenge (for ſinne) is as a neceſſary medicine, that the impoſtume of guilt which we lance in our conuerſion, bee purged by confeſſion, and cured by the ſalue of affliction. Thus will the Fathers haue almes to obtaine vs iuſtice and ſaluation, but this is figuratiuely ſpoken, not properly: for ſuch things as we beſtow vpon the poore, they ſay wee lend vnto God, after the Scripture phraſes and that hee becomes our debtour, who payeth backe the whole ſumme with profit an hundredfolde, as Chryſoſtome ſaith, Hom. 3. in Gen. And Gregory, lib. 7. epiſt. 20. ſaith, Whatſoeuer is giuen vnto the poore, if it be well conſidered, is not giuen, but lent: becauſe that which is laid out, is doubtleſſe returned with a multiplied gaine.

9 Againe, our ſinnes are taken away after a double manner: firſt in reſpect of the guilt, and fault, and this is called Remiſſion, beeing peculiar vnto God alone: ſecondly, in reſpect of the exerciſe of ſinne, which is tearmed purgation, wherein the exerciſe of ſinne is ceaſed. To haue our ſinnes abſolued, and to haue them remitted (ſaith Hieronim, In Iſai. 40.) are two ſeuerall things: for hee that hath his ſinnes remitted, needes no abſolution: ——— but hee that hath them abſolued, hath them ſo, becauſe they are purged and looſed by puniſhment. And in this ſenſe ſaith the ſame Father, In Ierem. 2. that ſinnes are purged by warnings. The expiation (ſaith Rodolphus, In Leuit. lib. 12. cap. 2.) belongeth vnto Chriſt, but the clenſing to our ſelues. So that there is a double ſatisfaction in the Fathers, expiatorie, which belongeth vnto Chriſt alone, & amendatory, or approbatory, which they will haue to belong vnto our ſelues. Turne vnto your Father with true ſatisfaction, ſaith Pacianus parænoſ. de pœnit.) running no further in errours, heaping no more vnto your olde ſins, and in ſaying ſome lamenting and mournefull prayer, as this, Wee haue offended before thine eies. In this ſenſe ſaith Hugo, de Sanct. Victore de ſacramentis, lib. 2. part. 14. cap. 2. that ſinne is puniſhed & corrected by ſatisfaction: and that ſatisfaction is the correction of the offence. Eucherius, In libros Regum, l. 2. ſaith, that both Dauids guilt and ours (for the fault already pardoned) is purged and aboliſhed by afflictions: becauſe God doth endeauour to wipe away all ſpots of iniquity from his elect, by temporall afflictions. It is a worthy ſatisfaction to correct our offences, and hauing corrected them to beware of them, &c. ſaith Bernard, De domo interiore, cap. 1. And in this ſenſe they do take redemption.

10 The Fathers will haue great ſinnes taken away by publike penance, & ſmall ſinnes by ſaying of the Lords prayer, Auguſt. Enchir. cap 71. And Auguſtine likewiſe will haue this prayer to take away great ſinnes alſo, de ciuit. Dei, l. 22. c. 27. So that this kinde of ſpeech is to be vnderſtood cōparatiuely, that it ſhould not bee thought requiſite to vſe publike penance for all ſinnes: The difference is in the exterior diſcipline, which ſetteth downe a diuerſity of penance in great and ſmall offences. And if that veniall ſinnes be taken away by the Lords prayer, to what end ſerueth the puniſhment of Purgatory after death?

11 Secret ſatisfaction for ſinnes, was neuer vſed but in the corrupted eſtate of the Church. Beſides, ſatisfaction in the Fathers goes before abſolution, by which the ſinners by impoſition of hands, receiued libertie to communicate, & remiſſion of ſins. But at this day it is otherwiſe in the church of Rome.

Wherefore ſatisfaction, taken as the redemption of the temporall paine onely, after the remiſſion of the guilt of the ſinne, and following the abſolution, was vnknowne to the Fathers.

Purgatorie.

1 T*ertullian* a Montaniſt, and Origen, were the firſt that euer talked of Purgatory in the Church: and yet Origen will haue Purgatorie to be in this life, In Leuit. lib. 8. apud Cyrillum: and alſo to remaine euen after the reſurrection, hom. 14. in Luc. In ſumme, ſaith Tertullian, de anima, capite 55. & vltimo, ſince wee vnderſtand that priſon that the Goſpel ſpeaketh of, to be hell, and do interpret, that to pay the very laſt peny, euery ſlender ſinne ſhall bee there puniſhed during the ſtay of the reſurrection, none neede to doubt that the ſoule ſhall pay any thing in hell by the body alſo, after the fulfilling of the reſurrection. This alſo the comforter* hath often commended. If any man doe admit his ſpeeches, by the acknowledging of his promiſed graces---. Roffenſis againſt Luther, artic. 18. confeſſeth, that Purgatorie was long vnknowne, and lately knowne and receiued into the Church: and ſo after men began to be afraid of the fire of Purgatorie, in crept Indulgences.

2 Afterwards the Fathers fell to ſpeake, both of the manner of the paine, and of Purgatory it ſelfe, but not as of an article of faith, but onely of a probable thing probably. It is not incredible (ſaith Auguſtine, Enchirid. c. 67. & 69.) that ſome ſuch thing ſhould bee after this life, it may be demaunded whether it be ſo or no, and it may either be knowne or vnknowne, that ſome of the faithfull, as their loue to temporall things hath beene more or leſſe, ſo are ſaued either ſooner, or later, by a certaine purging fire. And, de ciuit. Dei, lib. 21. cap. 26. But whether it bee there alone, or there and here, or here alone, that theſe parts of the worldly building, pardonable from dānation, ſhall finde a burning fire of tranſitory tribulation, I do not diſpute againſt it, it may bee, it is true. And, de fide & op. cap. 16. whether therefore ſome ſuch iudgements follow vs in this life onely, or after this life alſo, it doth not (as I thinke) diſagree from truth, if wee vnderſtand this ſentence in this manner. Hierome, in Iſa. libro 18 capite vltimo, ad finem, would haue ſuch things left wholly vnto the knowledge and iudgement of God: and yet he ſaith, that hee thinketh that there is a moderate and gentle ſentence of the Iudge concerning the burning away of the ſinnes of Chriſtians. Doeſt thou leaue no puniſhment for the ſoules (ſaith one in Boetius, in Proſ. 4. libro 4. de conſolat. Philoſophiæ.) when the bodies are dead? Yes, and that great (ſaith another) part whereof is exerciſed in penall bitterneſſe, and part (I thinke) in purgatory clemency.

3 But contrariwiſe, the Fathers do expreſly raze the foundation of the Popiſh Purgatory. There is no middle place (ſaith Auguſtine, lib. de pec. mer. & rem. cap. 28.) that a man may bee any where, but with the diuell, who is not with Chriſt. And the author of Hypognoſt. l. 5. ſaith, we acknowledge no third place at all. When wee once depart from hence (ſaith Cyprian, tract. ad Demetr.) there is no more place of penance, nor no more effect of ſatisfaction. The guilt beeing taken away (ſaith Tertullian, De Baptiſmo.) ſo is the puniſhment. Sinne is ſo vtterly aboliſhed in the remiſſion (ſaith Chryſoſtome, De pœnit. Serm. 3.) that no print of it is left remaining. And, in Geneſ. hom. 5. Hee that hath not purged away his ſinnes in this life, ſhall finde no comfort in the life to come.——This is the time of acting, and of wreſtling, and ſtriuing, that is for coronation and reward. And hom. 69. ad pop. Ant. the Iuſt that depart hēce, are altogether happy, for they are gone to Chriſt,---they are with the King, & there moſt neere him,---not by faith, but face to face. And again, hom. 16. in ep. ad Ro. Death ſeuereth not vs from Chriſt, but ioynes vs vnto that quiet which is with him, and maketh vs partakers of that glory. Heere onely is the place for mercy (ſaith Bede, in Pſal.6.) after this world is place only for iuſtice. After the departure of ſoule out of the body (ſaith the author of the queſtions in Iuſtine, queſt. 75.) preſently diſtinction is made of the good and the euil: and both are led by angels to the places prouided for them: the ſoules of the good vnto Paradiſe, where they inioy the bleſſed company of Angels, and of their Sauiour Chriſt. The Saints are in honour, they reſt in glorie, and their departure from hence is into perfection, (ſaith Epiph. Her. 79. ſub finem.) The preachers of the Church (ſaith Anſelmus, in 2. Cor. 5.) departing from their bodies, are not deferred from the enioying of their heauenly countrey, by ſpacious delaies; as the olde Fathers were; but inſtantly vpon their leauing of the fleſh, they doe reſt in heauenly faith. What is it to thee (ſaith Bernard, epiſt. 266. and thine earthly veſtures, that beeing about to go to heauen, haſt the robe of glory to put on inſtantly? And Otho Friſingenſis, in his Chron. lib. 8. cap. 26. ſaith, that ſome affirme that there is a purgatory place in hell, wherein the ſoules of thoſe that are to bee ſaued, are either puniſhed with darkneſſe only, or with the fire of expiation alſo. If we looke vpon him with a right faith, that for our ſins hung vpon a tree (ſaith Lumbard, Sen. 3. diſt. 19. lit. A.) wee are looſed from the bands of the diuell, that is, from our ſinnes; and we are ſo looſed, that he ſhall find nothing in vs puniſhable after this life: becauſe by that his death as the onely true Sacrifice, what fault ſoeuer we had in vs whereby the diuell might binde vs to puniſhment, Chriſt ſo extinguiſhed, that the diuell cannot preuaile ouer vs by tempting, no not in this life.

* Tertull. paracletus.

See the Section of Interceſſion, §.3.

4 The auncient Greeke & Latine Fathers beleeued that the ſoules of the dead were kept all in one common receptacle out of heauen, vntill the reſurrection. So holdeth Lactantius, in his worke de diuino præmio, lib. 7. cap. 21. And Irenæus, In fine lib. 5. Tertullian likewiſe againſt Marcion, libro 4. capite 34. and in his booke de anima, capite 55. where hee ſaith, that euery ſoule is ſequeſtred in the loweſt places, vntill the Iudgement day. So holdeth Iuſtine: and euen the canon of the Maſſe, which prayeth for the region of light and peace vnto all men. So that theſe admitted not this Purgatory.

5 The Fathers ſay that all ſinnes, euen mortal, are purged and remitted by this Purgatory fire. So ſaith Origen, In Hierem. homil. 13. If our ſinne be mortall, wee cannot bee purged with nitre, or borith, (which is a kinde of hearb) but with the ſpirit of iuſtice, the ſpirit of burning and puniſhment. And homil. 24. in Num. he ſaith, that all that we carry with vs, is to be tried by fire or water. That prayer (ſaith the booke that is called Dionyſ. Hierarch. Eccleſiaſt. p. 3. c. 7.) doth intreate Gods clemency to pardon the dead for all ſinnes committed through humane infirmitie. The offerings for the dead (ſaith Theophyl. in Luc. 12.) are of no ſmall value for thoſe that died euen in great ſinnes. Some (ſaith Bede, in Pſal. 37.) commit greater veniall ſins, & ſome leſſer: and therefore it is meet-- to haue them put into the fire of Purgatory, now in the ſpace betweene this and the iudgement.

6 The Fathers teach alſo, that all are to be purged by fire, as well the Saints of God, as the infidels. Al muſt come to the fire, al muſt come to this furnace, ſaith Origen, in Exod. homil. 6. And, In Pſal. 36. hom. 3. (as I thinke) It is neceſſary for vs all to come to that fire. The ſonnes of Leui (ſaith Ambroſe, in Pſalm. 36.) ſhall be purged with fire, and ſo Ezechiel likewiſe with fire, and Daniel alſo. But although that theſe ſhall bee tried by fire, yet they ſhall ſay; we haue paſſed by fire and water. And, in Pſal. 118. oct. 20. Whileſt we liue here, let vs keepe our humility, that when any of vs doe come vnto the iudgement of God, and vnto thoſe fires which wee are to paſſe thorough, he may ſay; —— beſides, a little before: It behoooueth all men to paſſe thorough theſe flames; whether it be Iohn the Euangeliſt,--or Peter.——

7 The place wherein there is no water, which Zacharie ſpeaketh of cap. 9. ſignifieth the paines eternall, after Hierome, and the depth of humane miſerie, after Auguſtine, de ciuit. Dei, lib. 18. cap. 35.

8 The Fathers alſo ſpeake very often of a purgatorie in the laſt iudgement, that is, of the pains which are to be ſuffered not immediatly after death, but after the reſurrection: for they affirme, that all men except Chriſt, are to be tried, and in ſome ſort to bee fried with the fire of burning in the day of iudgement. I thinke (ſaith Origen, In Luc. hom. 14.) that after the reſurrection from the dead, we ſhall all need a purging, and purifying Sacrament, for none can ariſe againe without ſome ſtaines. And this alſo he affirmeth in diuers other places of his workes, viz. In Pſalm. 36. homil. 3. In com. in epiſt. ad Rom. lib. 8. in fine. In Hier. hom. 13. And Lactantius, de diuin. præm. lib. 7. cap. 21. ſaith, that there is a triall to bee made by the fire, when God hath iudged all men. Out of this which is alreadie ſpoken (ſaith Auguſtine, de ciuit. Dei, libro 20. capite 25.) we doe plainely ſee, that there are ſome that in that iudgement ſhall bee puniſhed with certaine purging fires. After the ende of the world (ſaith Ambroſe, in Pſalm. 118. Serm. 3.) this ſhall bee the future baptiſme, when iniquitie ſhall bee burned away by the furnace, that the iuſt may ſhine as the Sunne in the kingdome of God. Looke alſo the other places of this Father, viz. in Pſalm. 118. Serm. 20. in Pſalm. 36. ad verba, Framea peccatorum: As alſo Hierome vpon Iſaias in fine, and alſo vpon Amos, capite 3. who neuertheleſſe vpon the ſame later Prophet, cap. 9. ouerthrowes the ſame point of Purgatorie. Looke alſo Hilarie, in Pſal. 118. vpon the words (Concupiuit) animæ meæ iuſtitiam. And Baſil, in Iſay, cap. 4. vpon the words Expurgauit Hieruſalem.

9 Although Gregorie by his apparitions and viſions doe make for Purgatorie, yet in his Dialogues, (or rather ſome others) hee ſpeakes not confidently, as the Papiſts doe, but with a plaine doubtfulneſſe. Herein (ſaith he, Dialog. libro quarto, cap. 58.) we muſt conſider that it is a ſafer way for a man to doe that good himſelfe in his owne life, which he hopes to obtaine at others hands after his death. And indeede Gregorie in his vnforged workes, doth flatly ouerthrow Purgatorie. Becauſe we are redeemed by the grace of our Creatour (ſaith he, In Iob, lib. 13. cap. 20.) wee haue this heauenly gift beſtowed vpon vs, that when we leaue our carnall habitacle, incontinently we are carried vnto our heauenly rewards, becauſe ſeeing that our Maker & Redeemer breaking vp the gates of hel, took thence all the ſoules of the elect, ſurely hee ſuffereth not vs to goe thither from whence he brought all the reſt in his deſcenſion.

10 That place of Paul which ſpeaketh of the triall by fire, 1. Corinthian. 3. verſ. 13. 15. by the common conſent of the auncient Fathers, was neuer ſpoken nor intended of Purgatory. For firſt of all by the builders, Auguſtine vnderſtandeth all Chriſtians, Enchirid. 68 Others, the Miniſters and Preachers of the Goſpel, as doe Ambroſe, Sedulius, Anſelme, Thomas, Lyra, and Caietane, al vpon this place. Secondly, by the name of ſtraw or ſtubble, ſome doe vnderſtand mortall ſinnes: as Chryſoſtome and Theophylact. Others, hereſies, as Ambroſe, vpon this place, and Hierome in Iſay 5. Others, bad hearers, as Theodoret and Oecumenius: others carnall affections, as Auguſtine in his booke de fide & operibus, the 16. chapter. Thirdly, by that day, they doe vnderſtand the day of the laſt iudgement, no middle day: and ſo doth Theodoret, Theophylact, and Anſelme vnderſtand it. Fourthly, by the fire ſome vnderſtand the tribulations of this life preſent: ſo doth Auguſtine, de fide & operibus, cap. 16. and ſo doth Gregorie in his Dialogue, libro 4. capite 39. Others take it for the fire eternall, as Chryſoſtome and Theophilact: others for the fire that ſhall conſume the world, and others for the fire of Gods iudgment, which they affirme ſhall not purge and afflict, but prooue and trie, as the Ieſuites holde.

11 But the foundation of the Popiſh Purgatorie, (namely, that the guilt beeing aboliſhed, ſome penall ſatisfaction is to be vndergone) was neuer receiued by the learned teachers of the Church, for at leaſt 1100. yeares after Chriſt. Lombard indeede teacheth, that there is paines of Purgatorie to be endured after this life, but not after the full and plenarie remiſſion of the fault. For he will haue ſuch a falt as is remitted in part, to be reſerued for the temporall paine to aboliſh, Lib. 4. d. 20.

Wherefore a Purgatorie, ſuppoſed to bee betweene death and the laſt iudgement, ſeruing onely for the purgation of veniall ſinnes, by temporall paines, was vnknowne to the Fathers of the firſt 600. yeares.

Sacramentall Confeſſion.

1 AVricular confeſſion, that is, the ſpeciall recitation of all mortall ſinnes, neceſſary for the remiſſion thereof, made in ſecret vnto a Prieſt, beganne to be vrged and commanded in the Church about 800. years after Chriſt. Alcuine, De diuin. offic. cap. 13. in cap. ieiun. taught it in theſe words: Being willing to forgiue all that haue offended againſt him, let him confeſſe all his ſinnes which he can remember. We finde this thing needfull of reformation (ſaith the 2. Councel of Chalons, ca. 32.) that many confeſſing their ſinnes vnto the Prieſts, doe it not fully, nor perfectly. Wherefore, becauſe that a man is made of two ſubſtances, ſoule and body, and ſinneth ſometimes by the motion of the minde, and otherſometimes by the frailty of the fleſh; both theſe kindes of ſinne ought to be very narrowly ſearched after, that a plenarie confeſſion may bee made thereof accordingly. Namely, that both the ſinnes that haue been committed by the body, be confeſſed, as alſo by the ſole cogitation. Wherefore he that is to confeſſe his ſinnes, is to bee inſtructed to make his confeſſion of the eight principall ſinnes, without which, wee can hardly liue in this world. The Prieſts muſt call thoſe parties to confeſſion, that are in danger of death, ſaith the Councell of Mentz, in Gregorie the fourth his time, cap. 26. Now wee haue indeede ſome examples of this priuate confeſſion before theſe times, but no precept at all. Audoenus in the life of Saint Eligius, libro 1. capite 7. ſaith, that hee—deſiring to make himſelfe a ſanctified veſſell vnto God, and fearing leſt ſome of his ſinnes might darken his ſoule, hee confeſſed all his acts from his very youth, before the Prieſt. But indeede this vſe had his firſt inuention in Monaſteries. Before all things (ſaith Climacus, in Scala paradiſi grad. 4. circa ann. 580.) let vs confeſſe our faults vnto our worthy Iudge alone, and if hee command vs, let vs be readie to confeſſe them vnto all men. And Studites in his funeral oration vpon the death of S. Plato, cap. 8. ſaith, And (which was more laudable) hee did often confeſſe his ſecreteſt thoughts and deeds vnto one that was his ſuperiour, which was a great ſigne of his religion. And truly the moſt ſtrict manner wherewith he did it, made him that heard his confeſſion to be amazed with admiring of him.

But to ſpeake truly, this vniuerſall law enioyning to confeſſion, as to a neceſſarie act of ſaluation, was not promulgate vntill the Councell of Laterane vnder Innocent the 3. Pope.

2 That this kind of confeſſion had the inſtitution from God, diuers learned men haue either denied, or doubtfully affirmed. Chryſoſtome refuſeth it flatly, Homil. 4. de Lazaro. Take heed (ſaith he) how thou telleſt thy defects vnto a man, leſt hee caſt thee in the teeth withall: thou art nut to confeſſe vnto thy fellow-ſeruant, that he may divulge it, but vnto him that is thy Lord, to him that careth for thy ſoule, to him that is moſt courteous, to him that is thy phyſitian doeſt thou ſhew thy wounds. And indeed this Father toſſeth this doctrine of confeſſion in many places, viz. homil. 2. in Pſal. 50. homil. 31. in Epiſt. ad Heb. homil. 5. de in comprehenſib. nat. Dei. hom. 8. de pœn. hom. de pœnit. & confeſſione. And ſo doth Caſſian in his Collations, 20. cap. 8. And Auguſtine alſo, Confeſſion. l. 10 c. 3. And indeede priuate confeſſion of great crimes was abrogated about the yeare 396. by reaſon of the diſcouery of an whoredome committed betweene a Deacon and a noble woman, as hiſtory doth teſtifie, Hiſt. tripart. lib. 9. c. 35.) But if the Fathers had thought it to haue beene a diuine ordinance, doubtleſſe it ſhould neuer haue beene diſanulled by them. And the gloſſe, de Pœnit. diſt. 5. cap. 1. §. In Pœnitentia, ſaith, that it is better to ſay that it was inſtituted by a tradition of the Vniuerſall Church, rather then by the authority of the old or new Teſtament. And Gratian himſelfe doth ſtagger in this queſtion, De Pœnit. d. 1. q. 3. c. 89. Quamuis. Vpon what authority, or vpon what grounds of reaſon both theſe opinions of ſatisfaction or confeſſion do rely, we haue briefly laid down, but which of them to ſticke vnto, I leaue vnto the readers choice: for there are both wiſe & religious men on both opinions. Here hee allowes euery man his iudgement free, therefore he thought it not to be of diuine inſtitution. And, Diſt. eadem cap. Conuertimini. Here may wee vnderſtand that wee may obtaine pardon though our mouthes bee ſilent, and——our Lord doth ſhew that a ſinner is not clenſed by the iudgement of the Prieſt, but by the bounty of the diuine grace. And yet farther, Cap. Quis aliquando. Hence it is moſt euidently apparent, that our ſinnes may bee taken away without the confeſſion of the mouth. Panormitane, De pœnit. & remiſſ. c. Omnis vtriuſq; ſexus, liketh that opinion very well, that ſaith that confeſſion aroſe from a certaine generall tradition of the Church: and that the Greekes doe not ſinne in not vſing of it, becauſe this cuſtome ſprung not vp among them. And Scotus, In ſent. 4. diſt. 17. quaeſt. 1. is very doubtfull to ſay it is of diuine inſtitution: Either wee muſt hold the firſt member, that is, that it is of diuine inſtitution publiſhed by the Goſpell,——or if that be not ſufficient, we muſt A ſay——that it is of the diuine poſitiue law publiſhed by Chriſt, vnto the Apoſtles: and vnto the Church, by the Apoſtles, without all Scriptures, as the Church holdeth many other things from the Apoſtles mouthes without any Scripture. Amongſt the writers of the Popes law (ſaith Rhenanus in argumentum in Tertull. de pœnitent.) there are ſome, (and thoſe famous men) which doe draw this confeſſion, which at this day we vſe vnto the Prieſt, and euery litle circumſtance thereof, from the inſtitution of the Church. For firſt, Publike confeſſion, that is, the act of penance done before the whole Church, as taken out of the old Teſtament, of publike ſeemes to haue bene made priuate:——for which it was B neceſſarie——to make certaine lawes for penances,——for ſatisfaction, and obſeruation of which lawes, it was fit (for the Laytie eſpecially) to make a Prieſt partaker of their ſecrets and counſell. And againe, This ſecret confeſſion (as farre as wee can coniecture) ſprung out of that publike one, through mens voluntary piety;——for wee reade no precept of old for it. And like vnto this hath he another place, in admonitione de Tertullian. Dogmatis, where he ſaith: Concerning ſecret confeſſion, you ſhall ſcarcely finde any of the Fathers ſpeake of it as of a thing commaunded. Thus ſaid he. Caietane vpon the 20. of Iohn affirmes, 1. That Chriſt inſtituted but a voluntary confeſſion, and therefore not as C neceſſarie to ſaluation, and 2. That Chriſt inſtituted no auricular confeſſion.

3 By confeſſion in the Fathers, is generally meant confeſſion before God (onely) or a publike acknowledgement of ſome publike crimes incurring the cenſure of excommunication, and that in an eccleſiaſticall conuention: of the neceſſitie of this they ſpeake very often. Yea Origen, in Pſal. 37. hom. 2. and Cyprian, De lapſis Serm. 5. doe exhort the people to make a publike recitation of all their ſmall, and ſecret ſinnes, and of all their euill intentions. Leo alſo, epiſt. 80. mentioneth this cuſtome, of writing downe the ſecrets of their conſciences that made confeſſion, into a little booke, and rehearſing of it publikely D in the audience of the people; and holds this fulneſſe of faith to be laudable, which for the feare of God, ſticks not to bluſh before men: but yet he diſalowes the cuſtome, and aboliſheth it in theſe wordes: Let the guilt of the conſciences be ſhewen onely vnto the Prieſts in ſecret confeſſion. And by and by after: Let that confeſſion ſuffice which is firſt offered vnto God, and then vnto the Prieſt, who becommeth an Interceſſor vnto God for the ſinne of the Penitents. But there is no proofe to ſhew that this ſecret confeſſion was vniuerſall, of all the ſinnes, but it rather ſeemes to concerne ſuch offences onely as did trouble the conſcience. Let vs open the vncleanneſſe of our fouler leproſie vnto the Prieſt, as the law commands vs (ſaith Bede In Iacob. 5. And whereſoeuer the Fathers doe vrge this ſame ſpeciall confeſſion, they doe not teach it to be neceſſarie vnto ſaluation, nor as a meane vniuerſally neceſſarie vnto the remiſſion of ſins: but propoſe it freely, and exact it as a good and commodious courſe for the obtaining of conſolation for the ſoule: yea they make mention of confeſſion vnto Laymen: for ſuch were the Fathers of the Egyptian Monkes, and yet they did abſolue. Theon ſaid vnto Serapion confeſſing his ſinne of theft, Be of good courage ſonne, thy confeſſion abſolueth thee from thy bondage, though I hold my peace.

Therefore ſecret confeſſion, wherein is neceſſarily required a reconning of all a mans mortall ſinnes, together with the circumſtances that alter the kinde: and wherein the Prieſts alone that are the Confeſſors, doe ſit as ſpirituall Iudges, and impoſe ſatiſfaction vpon the penitents according to the qualitie of the ſinnes, was neuer receiued of the Church vntill theſe later times.

Confirmation. Chriſme.

1 THe Chriſme, or anointing of the baptiſed, (which was vſed in antiquitie) had his inſtitution from Sylueſter, as Platina ſaith in his life. He it was that firſt made a law of the vſe of Chriſme in Baptiſme, which before, was either free, or none. Athanaſius Contra Arian. orat. 2. telleth the Arians, that Chriſt was neuer anointed with externall oyle, and infuſeth the ſpirit into vs without any ſuch ceremonie. And Euſebius lib. 1. cap. 4. ſaith, that the Chriſtians are no more anointed by types and figures, but by the vertues themſelues alone. And indeed in Iuſtine the Martyrs time there was no vſe of Chriſme in baptiſme. Auguſtine Aduerſ. Iudæos, cap. 4. ſaith that Chriſt was he that changed the carnall (or reall) vnction into ſpirituall: And Hierome Aduerſ. Luciferianos, dialog. 4 ſaith that confirmation by vnction was rather inſtituted for the honour of Prieſthood, then for any bond of neceſſitie.

2 There be ſome of the Fathers, as Cyprian, and Tertullian, which doe either fall flatly into Montaniſme, or at leaſt doe fowly erre, in aſcribing more vnto this Chriſme then vnto the water of baptiſme: for they will haue it to conſummate the worke that Chriſt hath begun in Baptiſme. Cyprian ep. 70. 72, 73. And what they giue to this vnction, they giue in like manner to the ſigne of the croſſe. Cyprian epiſt. 73. ſaith, that the baptiſed are conſummate, and perfected, by this ſigne. And Tertullian de reſur. carnis, ſaith, that the fleſh is ſigned that the ſoule may be fenced.

3 As for the vſe of oyle, in antiquitie it was common and vulgar, in bathes after waſhing, whence perhaps it crept into Baptiſme. Yea they vſed to powre oyle into their water. Celſus preſcribeth to ſweate in the hote houſe, and there to annoint, and by and by to goe downe into the bath.

4 This Chriſme now, that the Fathers mention, is quite different from the Papiſts confirmatorie vnction. The Fathers was common oyle, and ſo often called and mentioned by that name: the Papiſts muſt haue balſame therein mixt, Fabianus epiſt. 2. which is a ſubſtance now not to bee had vncounterfeite. Looke Plinies naturall hiſtorie, libro 12. cap. 25.

5 The Fathers vſed their Chriſme not onely in the forehead, but in other parts of the bodie alſo. This holy oyle (ſaith Cyrill Catech. 3. myſtagog.)——is the gift of Chriſt and the holy Spirit, made powerfull by the preſence of his diuinity, wherewith the forehead, and the organs of the ſenſes are figuratiuely anointed, and the bodie in like maner with this viſible vnction, but the ſoule is ſanctified with the holy and quickning ſpirit. That it was vſed vpon the noſe, eares, and eies, the Trullan ſynode doth teſtifie, cap. 95.

6 This vnction (in the Fathers times) belonged vnto baptiſme as an appendix and a ceremonie, ſometimes vſed before baptiſme, ſometime after, as it was in the Eaſt Church for many yeares after Chriſt. By Chriſme are repreſented the gifts beſtowed in baptiſme, ſaith Baſil De ſpir. ſanct. cap 28. Thoſe that are to bee baptiſed are anointed like Champions, ſaith Chryſoſtome In Coloſſ. 2. homil. 6. Remember the myſterie of holy Baptiſme, (ſaith Theodor. In Cant. c. 1.) wherein thoſe that are to receiue it——beeing anointed with the Chriſme of ſpirituall vnction, vnder that viſible forme of anointing, do receiue the inuiſible grace of the holy Spirit. Nazianzene orat. 40. In ſanct. Baptiſ. ſaith, that in Baptiſme, the ſoule and the body are ſealed with the vnction and the ſpirit. And ſo ſaith Damaſcene, De fide lib. 4. cap. 10. We admitte (ſaith the Synod in Trullo, cap. 95) the Arians, Macedonians, & Nouatians——that giue vp a bill of their faith, and curſe and abiure all hereſie, and all doctrine which the holy Catholike and Apoſtolike Church alloweth not of: and firſt of all, ſigning their forehead, eyes, noſe, mouth, & eares with holy Chriſme, we ſay, The ſeale of the gift of the holy Ghoſt. Holy Baptiſme, and vnction (ſaith Theophylact, In Naum. cap. 2.) are great and ſolide monuments, vnto which all are to make haſt, that are not yet endued with the bleſſing of Chriſtianitie. Becauſe Baptiſme is a type of the buriall and reſurrection of our Lord (ſaith Theodorus Balſamon, ad ca. 48. Syn. Trul.) therefore thoſe that are baptiſed are iuſtly annointed with chriſme, that they may be buried and riſe againe together with Chriſt. It is neceſſarie (ſaith Simeon of Theſſalonica, De Myſteriis, lib. 2.) that euery faithfull Chriſtian be ſigned herewithall in his baptiſme, that he that is baptized, may haue his baptiſme moſt diuine and conſummate.

7 This vnction (we ſpake of now) pertained vnto baptiſme in the Weſt, vntill aboue 300. yeares after Chriſt. For then was there another confirmatory vnction deuiſed by Melchiades, or as ſome ſay, before him by Vrban the firſt. Howſoeuer it was before vſed, as we haue ſaid. After their baptiſme he ſigneth his ſouldiours in their foreheads, ſaith Tertullian, De præſcript. cap. 36.40. We are to know (ſaith Bede, in Pſal. 26.) that that vnction which is done by the Biſhops; with impoſition of hands, as different from the other two, and called by the name of confirmation, is indeede all one with the ſecond (to wit, wherby we become profeſſors of Chriſt) but becauſe of arrogancie, it is not granted vnto euery one of the Prieſts, no more then many other like things. Hierome, Contra Lucifer. cap. 4. ſaith, that neither Prieſt nor Deacon hath power to baptize without Chriſme, and the Biſhops commandement.

8 The annointing in Baptiſme was vſed by the Fathers as a ſignificant ſigne of the preparation vnto the fight and contention with the diuell: whereas now the vnction that the Papiſts vſe, is a ſigne of a Sacrament diſtinct from Baptiſme, and yet vnto the ſame end and vſe. Your breſts are annointed (ſaith Cyrill, Catecheſ. 3. Myſtag. that beeing armed with the breaſtplate of righteouſneſſe, you may reſiſt the diuels aſſaults more ſtrongly. By Baptiſme (ſaith Nazianzene, Orat. 40.) thou haſt fortified thy ſelfe, and haſt prouided thee of a moſt firme and during helpe, ſigning thy body and ſoule with the vnction and the ſpirit. They that are to bee baptized (ſaith Chryſoſtome, In Coloſſ. homil. 6.) are annointed like champions, or as thoſe that are to runne a courſe. The annointing of the baptized with oyle——(ſaith Germanus, In Theoria,) is to this end, that the diuell ſhould not ouercome vs with his power of ſinne and death. Looke alſo the ſaying of Theophylact cited 5.6. By the benefit of this vnction (ſaith the Author de vnctione Chriſm. apud Cyprian:) both wiſedome and vnderſtanding is giuen vs from aboue, and counſaile and fortitude commeth downe vpon vs from heauen.

We come vnto the fount (ſaith Ambroſe, de Sacram. lib. 1. cap. 2.) thou entreſt——: and art annointed as a champion of Chriſt, as one that art to vndergoe the fight of this world, &c. The name of Chriſt (ſaith Proſper, In ſententent. Auguſt. Sent. 342.) is deriued from Chriſme, that is from vnction: Wherefore becauſe of this, euery Chriſtian is ſanctified; ſo that he may vnderſtand that he is not onely partaker both of prieſtly, and of kingly dignity, but alſo made a warriour againſt the diuell. By the annointing of Chriſme in Baptiſme (ſaith Rabanus Maurus, Inſt. Cleric. l. 1. c. 28.) the holy Spirit giueth vigor of heauenly grace vnto all the faithfull: therefore, ſaith he, that Chriſme is well vſed in baptiſme. Now the Schoolemen will haue Chriſme in confirmation vſed to the ſame effect and end. The perfection of confirmation (ſaith Thomas) is to make a man ſtand ſtrongly in himſelfe: and a litle after: The child is made fit for the conflict, with this Sacrament, In Sent. 4. diſt. 7. q. 3. And Soto, In Sent. 4. diſt. 7. art. 7. ſaith, that by confirmation a man is made a Warriour.

9 The Fathers did not hold their Chriſme and impoſition of hands to giue grace by the worke wrought, or by doing of the bare action, but vſed it as a ſigne, ſignifying the powerfulneſſe of the Spirit which is giuen in baptiſme: Calling him out that is (thus) annointed, vnto theſe ſacred conflicts, in type or figure, ſaith the booke of the Hierarchie, cap. 2. part. 3. The gift of the holy Ghoſt (ſaith Origen hom. 8. in Leuit.) is ſignified by the figure of oyle. Thy forehead and thine other ſenſes are annointed, typically, ſaith Cyrill, Catech. 3. But this annointing was accounted of ſmall effect, without the inuocations which they vſed therewithall, as the Fathers themſelues doe teſtifie. The hands are put vpon them by benediction, with inuocation, and calling vpon the holy Ghoſt, ſaith Tertullian lib. De baptiſmo. Impoſition of hands (ſaith Auguſtine De bapt. lib. contra Donat. cap. 16.) what is it but prayer ouer the perſon? I doe not deny (ſaith Hierome Aduerſus Lucifer.) but that it is a cuſtome in ſome Churches for the Biſhops to goe, and with inuocation of the holy Spirit, put his hands vpon thoſe that are baptized, by the Prieſts and Deacons, in ſmaller cities a farre off. But now adaies it is held a true doctrine, that this vnction doth giue grace, and confirme truly and properly, whereas in auncient times there was no ſacramental confirmation vſed without baptiſme, and the Lords ſupper.

10 It was once a cuſtome to giue the Infants this confirmatorie Chriſme immediately after their Baptiſme, as witneſſe Innocent the firſt epiſt. 1. Auguſtine De eccl. dogmat. cap. 52. Ordo Romanus, & Amalarius De eccl. off. lib. 4. cap. 29. Now it muſt be differred (at leaſt it is ſo in the generall practiſe of popery) for fiue, ſixe, or ſeuen yeares after. Nay moreouer they confirmed (the baptized) by giuing the holy communion as Alcuinus himſelfe De offic. eccle. cap. de ſabb. Sanct. Paſcha. doth teſtifie.

11 The ſchoolemen cannot agree vpon the originall of this ſuppoſed ſacrament. Alexan. Ales In Sent. 4. quæſt. 14. memb. 1. will needes haue it inſtituted by the Councell of Meld. (Meldenſ.) Bonauenture In Sent. 4. diſt. 7. art. 1. quæſt. 1. ſaith, it was not of Chriſts ordaining: and ſo ſaith Marcilius in 4. quæſt. 14. Melanus ſaith, that concerning the forme of this Sacrament, it is no marueill if the Fathers make but ſmall mention thereof, ſeeing Innocentius the firſt ſaith: I dare not ſet downe the words, leſt I ſhould ſeeme to bewray (a ſecret myſterie).

myſterie). The Maſters of the Church of Rome are the firſt that publiſhed the forme hereof in their booke called Ordo Romanus, where we reade theſe wordes: I confirme thee in the name of the Father, &c. de Sacra. tract. 4. cap. 6. Bellarmine De ſacram. confirmat. lib. 2. cap. 10. confeſſeth that the Fathers haue not ſet downe the forme of confirmation, nor of diuers other Sacraments, becauſe they were alreadie knowne vnto euery one: he had ſpoken more truly if he had ſaid, vnknowne vnto euery one: for they doe ſet downe both the forme of Baptiſme, and of the Supper in diuers places: what reaſon had they then to keepe the formes of the reſt from our knowledges? but this is but one of Bellarmines conuaiances. Of the forme of confirmation (ſaith Suarez. In 3. part Thomæ.) we finde nothing in Scripture: and if we betake our ſelues to tradition, we ſhall finde great ambiguitie and varietie hereof in the Fathers. Thus ſaith he. Ergo.

Marriage.

1 IN the pureſt times the Canonicall account of the degrees of conſanguinitie as it is called, was neuer heard of. For Ambroſe l. 8. epi. 66. ſaith, that brothers children are foure degrees diſtant in legall ſupputation, not canonicall. But this legall ſupputation alſo crept into the Church by degrees, and was free without bonde of law vntill 1070. yeares after Chriſt, and then Alexander the 2. decreed that the degrees were to be reckned after this canonicall ſupputation, and that vnder paine of excommunication cap. 35. q. 5. cap. 2. Ad ſedem.

2 The forbidding of the fourth degree (and much more of the ſeauenth) according to Canonicall ſupputation, remained vnknowne in the moſt pure and auncient Churches, vnto at leaſt 500. yeares after Chriſt. About the 300. yeare of Chriſt there was no degree at all prohibited, but onely ſuch as were expreſly named in the written word of God. But afterwards, was marriage of couſin-germaines forbidden, as Ambroſe lib. 8. epi. 66. and Auguſtine alſo De ciuit. Dei, lib. 15. cap. 16. with Petrus Diaconus doe teſtifie. But this prohibition was abrogated by the lawes of Honorius & Arcadius, and by Iuſtinian alſo, though afterwardes it was renewed in the Church by the Councell of Epaune, cap. 30. about the yeare of our Lord 490. And afterwards ann. 500. began theſe prohibitions to extend vnto the third degree incluſiuely: for the third Councell of Aurelia cap. 10. and the ſecond of Turwin. capite 22. doe forbidde marriage of the brother or ſiſters children, and ſo doth Altiſiodor. cap. 34. circa ann. 614.

Thus ſtood theſe Prohibitions, in this third degree, for a long time, in the Latine Church, but about the 600. yeare, the Popes Gregory, Nicholas, &c. decreed that all the degrees of conſanguinitie ſhould bee kept vnto the ſeauenth generation. Gratian. 35. q. 2. But afterwards, Innocent the 3. in the Councell of Lateran, ann. Dom. 1215. limiteth this prohibition at the 4. degree incluſiuely, and alloweth all matches without this 4. degree. But by this allowance of his are many vnlawfull marriages made: for example, Peter and Paul are brethren, & their ſtocke deſcendeth thus: Here Peter may not be ioyned in marriage with Leah, though 6. degrees diſtant, becauſe that beeing the brother of Paul, he is as father vnto all that deſcend in Pauls line, and ſo in that reſpect vnto Leah alſo.

Iohn
Peter Paul
Rachel Suſanna
Ioanna
Lea

3 The Fathers doe ſometime reprehend the ſecond marriage of either perſon in caſe of Diuorce vpon fornication, but yet they doe hold ſuch marriages to be true & firme: this all hold for 400. yeares after the incarnation. So that they held, that in caſe of adulterie the marriage (amongſt the faithfull) is diſſolued, not onely in reſpect of bed, but alſo of bond: wherefore they were not acquainted with the diſtinction of a double diuorce. Origen Homil. 7. in Matth. ſaith, that theſe marriages (after ſeparation) are againſt Scriptures, but yet not without cauſe hee alloweth them for auoiding of a greater euill, and holdeth them no otherwiſe permitted. And theſe doth Ambroſe, in 1. Corinthian. 7. allow vnto a man: and ſo doth Epiphanius alſo, contra Cathar. hæreſ. 59. Hieronime, epiſt. 30. ad Oceanum, diſalloweth them in Fabiola, but he goeth not ſo farre as to diſanull the marriage which hee himſelfe excuſeth. It was an vſe to inioyne a publike penance vpon this act, and that was vſed alſo vpon ſmaller faults. The Fathers vſed to note ſuch ſecond marriages as they held lawfull with penance: and they puniſhed the husband that kept his wife after her adultery, with three yeares penance. 32. q. 1. cap. Si quis. The Councell of Arles, cap. 10. counſelleth the guiltleſſe perſon of the two, to abſtaine, but doth not compell or commaund him to it. And this the Church afterwardes did for one while allow of and follow. For in one place of the Decretals, 31. q. 7. c. Concubiſti, it is appointed as lawfull for the innocent perſon to ioyne with another, after that his firſt yoake-fellow hath polluted the marriage bed. And this is alſo allowed, 31. q. 1. cap. Si qua mulier, if either party haue endeauoured to kill the other.

4 Afterwards, Auguſtine and others held theſe marriages of no force at all: and yet Auguſtine De fide & operibus, cap. 19. writeth, that he that findeth his wife in adulterie and putteth her away, ſeemes not to bee equalled with him, that putteth her away for ſome other cauſe, and marrieth againe. And it is ſo doubtfull in the Scriptures themſelues, whether he (who doubtleſſe may put away his wife for adulterie) be an adulterer if he marry againe, that ſurely I am of opinion, that any man may herein bee pardonably miſtaken. Thus ſaith Auguſtine.

Prieſts mariage, and ſingle life.

THe mariage of the Cleargie for the ſpace of 300. yeares after Chriſt was a thing alwaies freely allowed, without prohibition or vow of perpetuall continencie. If there were any that liued ſingle, it was out of ſome priuate and vnbinding purpoſe, or elſe for ſome custome taken vp out of a good and honeſt end. This cannot be diſprooued out of any lawfull authoritie, whereas there are theſe teſtimonies to confirme it. There are many of the Biſhops (ſaith Athanaſius, Ep. ad Dracont.) that haue not married, and contrariwiſe many Monkes we ſee daily become fathers of children: Againe, you may obſerue many biſhops to bee fathers of children, and many Monkes that haue not ſought to ſee their owne generation:—for this is lawfull, & the other is not forbidden, but euery one as hee liketh, let him vndertake to liue. Whereas we reade (ſaith the Decretals, diſt. 26. cap. Canomanenſem.) that the ſonnes of prieſts haue come to the honour of the Papacy, wee muſt not vnderſtand them to be begotten by fornication, but by lawfull marriage, which was lawfull for the prieſts euery where, vntill the time of prohibitiō, & in the Eaſt Churches is allowed vnto them as lawfull vntill this day. And Cyprian (or the author of the Sermon, de nat. Chriſt.) ſaith, that there is neither command nor neceſſitie to compell vs vnto continency or virginity. And Caſſiodorus, in Pſal. 57. ſaith, it is free to vow virginitie, or not to vow it. We impoſe no neceſſity hereupon (ſaith Epiph. hæreſ. 4.) but out of good will we counſell it: exhorting him that is able to take it vpon him, but not compelling him that is not able, nor reiecting him from ſaluation. Virginity onely (ſaith Ambr. exhort. ad virgines) is to bee perſwaded; not to be commanded, being a thing rather of vow, then of precept. In the Eaſt (ſaith Socrates, Hiſt. Tripart. l. 9. cap. 38.) all, euen the Biſhops, doe abſtaine of voluntary choice, not of any neceſſitie: and many of them in the time of their beeing Biſhops, haue had children by their lawfull wiues.

2 But in theſe aforeſaid ages, there were promiſes of continency vſed to be made publikely in the Church. For Clement, Stromat. lib. 3. (who wrote in the yeare 170.) ſaith, that continencie is a deſpiſing of the body [illegible], according to the promiſe, or couenant made vnto, or with God. Their manner of couenant, was thus: It was asked of thoſe that were to take Eccleſiaſticall Orders, whether they would abſtaine from marriage or no? if they ſaid they would, it was not thence lawfull for them to marrie, Diſt. 27. cap. diacon, if they ſaid they would not, it was allowed them after their election to take them wiues, Concil. Ancyr. cap. 10. But the election was deferred, that if it might be poſſible, they might haue a ſingle man to elect, Diſt. 28. cap. de Syracuſ. Now theſe promiſes were exacted, not that marriage in this caſe was held an vncleane thing, or that the Clergy were bound from it by vow, but eſpecially becauſe of the pouerty of the Churches, wanting ſufficient meanes to maintaine ſo may families of Biſhops, Prieſts, and Deacons, D. 28. c. de Syrac. where Pelagius the firſt ſaith, that the ſingleneſſe of Prieſthood was inſtituted becauſe that the goods of the Church ſhould not bee diſperſed amongſt the Prieſts wiues & children. This is to be marked diligently. But Leo ſaith very wel in theſe words, Novel. 2. I ſometimes haue occaſion to wonder much that ſome are not afraid vtterly to abrogate many holy & diuine lawes, & inſtitute others, as though theſe were not abſolute: for whereas the holy Canons treating of the election of Biſhops, doe ordaine that hee that hath children by lawfull matrimony (if there bee no impediment in other of his actions) may bee made an Archbiſhop: Theſe men dare ſet downe the contrary, that it is not poſſible for theſe encūbrances, that any that haue childrē (though they be the bleſſing of lawfull marriage) ſhould vndertake the dignity Epiſcopall: It may be theſe lawgiuers ſuppoſed, that the naturall affection vnto their children (for what other thing can be alleadged for them?) would be a great annoyance to their eccleſiaſticall maintenance. But this reaſon is founded vpon falſe grounds, for if it were ſo, the like reaſon might conuince, that none that hath either brethren or other kinſmen aliue, ſhould be made Biſhops: for conſanguinity begetteth the ſame vnion of loue betweene them. Moreouer the holy Canons foreſeeing this, gaue the Biſhops authority, that if they had any poore alliance, they might releeue their miſeries out of the renewes of their Biſhopricke. Wherefore our Imperiall Maieſtie (which is of God, if wee keepe our ſelues to Gods commandements) perceiuing that to be farre more conuenient, maketh a law agreeable to the holy Canons: that as it ſeemed good vnto them, that he might bee promoted to bee Biſhop, who in other reſpects was worthie of that honour, although he had children, (prouided they were legitimate) ſo it ſhalbe lawfull now: and that with this reſolution, that we doe from henceforth abrogate for euer, to puniſh their boldneſſe, any law that gainſaith hereto. This he. Now if the Prieſts, or Biſhops broke theſe promiſes (we ſpoke of before) they were depoſed, and put to penance amongſt the twiſe married, but their marriages ſtill did continue indiſſoluble. And in this ſenſe are the Councells of Ancyra, and of Neocæſarea to bee vnderſtood. VVherefore at the beginning, marriage was not forbidden the Prieſts by reaſon of any vow annexed vnto their order, but by reaſon of the greater freedome, and conueniencie.

3 The Perpetuity, & neceſſity of this vow of continence was eſtabliſhed firſt in the Weſterne Church, and annexed vnto Orders, about the three hundreth and eightie yeare after Chriſt. It was vſed before, but out of priuate and particular deuotion, not by any publike and decretory iudgement of the Church. But then, by a common decree (if that decree be not a counterfeited forgerie) Prieſts marriage was prohibited in all the Weſterne Churches, as a thing impure and vnſanctified: and that by Pope Syricius, Diſt. 82, which decree, Innocentius the firſt, Diſt. 82. c. Propoſuiſti, renewed, but yet with graunt of Pardon to all ſuch as had not ſeene the epiſtle of Syricius. So that the gloſſe, diſt. 82. c. 3. Cum in præterito, ad gloſſ. verb. qui ſacramentis, ſheweth plainely that Syricius was the firſt Author of this prohibition in the Church of God, in theſe words. They ſay that theſe chapters were made before Gregories time, who inioyned continency vpon the Miniſters) 31. diſt. cap. Ante triennium) that is vnto the ſubdeacons. But Syricius commanded the Prieſts and Deacons to obſerue it. Nay, they ſay that before Syricius his time the Prieſts might marrie, and ſo did Moſes. Wherefore they expound it thus: the Apoſtles taught this doctrine of continencie in worke, example, and counſell, as Hugo ſaith: not in conſtitution: and ordinance, as others ſay. Now the cenſure of Frier Thomas Mauriq. publiſhed by commaund of Pius 5. Pope in the yeare 1572. commands this gloſſe to bee raſed out, together with the marginall note, which ſaith that Prieſts might once marrie. And indeede Auguſtine lib. 6. confeſſ. 3. greatly admireth the ſingle life of Ambroſe, ſo that ſingle life was more rare amongſt the Prieſts of thoſe times then marriage. Gratian alſo Diſt. 28. c. de Syracuſa. yeeldeth that before the Ancyran Councell ann. 308. the vow of continencie was neuer propoſed vnto the Prieſts. Wherefore the decree was neither of Calixtus, Nor Lucius his framing.

4 Now as for this decree, it had no vniuerſall admiſſion vntill the time of Pope Hildebrand, in the yeare 1070. for hereof ſpeaketh Auentine in hiſtor. Boier. lib. 5. in theſe wordes: The Prieſts at that time as other Chriſtians, had wiues in publike, and begot children, as appeareth in the inſtruments of the Donations which they gaue to the Churches, Prieſts, and Monkes, where theſe wiues and their husbands are named as witneſſes: and they are called by the graue and honeſt A name of Presbytereſſes. Sigebert alſo teſtifieth the ſame in his Chronicle vpon the yeare 1074. Pope Gregory (ſaith he)—— forbad the married Prieſts to vſe their function, & prohibited the laity to here their Maſſes, a deede without example, & (as many thought) done vnaduiſedly againſt the opinion of the holy Fathers, who haue written, that whether the Sacraments bee miniſtred by good or euill perſons, yet they are neither amplified by the merits of the good Miniſter, nor leſſened by the ſinnes of the euill.——By which act aroſe ſuch a ſcandall, that neuer in the heate of any hereſie was the Church rent in ſunder with a greater ſchiſme and diuiſion. And truly it is B a thing of worthie memorie that Florentius a Monke of Worceſter hath recorded in his Chronicle, ad ann. 1106. of this Gregorie, that beeing vpon his death bed, he confeſſed vnto almightie God, and Saint Peter and vnto the “whole Church, that he had offended greatly in his Paſtorall charge, and by the perſwaſion of the diuell, had ſtirred vp anger and wrath amongſt mankinde: and that he ſent his confeſſour to the Emperour and to the whole Church to pray for pardon for him, that he did looſe the bands of all that were outlawed, & al his excommunications againſt the Emperour, and all other Chriſtian people, clergie and laity, quicke and dead——&c. C And indeed mariage of Prieſts was allowed here in England vntill 970. yeares after Chriſt, as the hiſtorie of Iornall recordeth in the life of Edgar: Alfer king of Mercia (ſaith it) and many others, caſting forth the Monkes out of the great Monaſteries which king Edgar had lately founded, brought into them the Clergie and their wiues. And Fabian in Chron. Pag. 263. relateth, that Biſhops and Prieſts were married for a thouſand yeares together, no law enioyning the contrarie. And Florentius aforenamed teſtifieth, that the Engliſh clergie married for 997. yeares together, which marriages were neuer forbidden by law or edict, vntill Anſelmes time. In the ſame yeare [1100.] (ſaith Henrie Huntington lib. 7.)—— Archbiſhop Anſelme D held a councell at London, wherein hee forbad the Engliſh Prieſts to marrie, who were neuer forbidden before. Which law, ſeemed moſt pure vnto ſome, but moſt dangerous vnto otherſome, leſt that in endeauouring continencie aboue their power, they ſhould fall into more horrible and more vnchriſtian impurities. Now at the promulgation of this law, thoſe Prieſts that were already married, were not diuorced. Nay they continued marrying for all this, two hundred yeares after Anſelmus, as M. Foxe ſheweth in his hiſtorie, publiſhing the very conuaiances of thoſe contracts then vſed.

The ſame is in Matth. Paris, word for word ad ann. 1074.

5 Now this prohibition of marriage there are many Fathers that do not approoue nor allow of: and namely theſe that follow. 1. Theodoret. It is affirmed, ſaith he, In 1. Tim. 3. 1 that the holy Apoſtle ſaith, that hee that li-ueth chaſtly with one wife alone, is worthie to bee elected a Biſhop, & In 1.Tim.4. Rightly did the Apoſtle warn, [forbidding to mary:] for hee doth not diſlike of continencie & ſin-gleneſſe of life, but hee accuſeth thoſe that will commaund and enioyne them by a law.

2 2. Ambroſe. Hee ſaith, Offic.lib.1.cap.vltimo, that vnto the Miniſters of the Altar it is allowed once to marry, not the ſecond time.
3 3. Chryſoſtome. Hee ſaith, In Tit.hom.2. that marriage is ſo honorable, that vnder it a man may come to aſcend vnto the holieſt prefer-
4 ment and dignity. 4. Iſidore. The Clergie (ſaith he, Reg.de vita Cleric.diſt.23.c.His igitur.) ought to keepe their bodies chaſte and vnpolluted for euer, or elſe to ioyne them-5 ſelues in one band of matrimony. 5. Bernard.
Take honorable marriage out of the Church
(ſaith he, In Cant.Ser.66.) and the vnpolluted bed, and do you not fill the Church with fornicators, inceſtuous, vncleane, effeminate, &
Sodomiticall perſons, & finally with all man-
6 ner of vncleanneſſe? 6. Theophylact. Husband vnto one wife (ſaith he, in 1.Tim.3.) is taken in this ſenſe, that hee that is to vndertake the function of a Biſhop, ſhould not haue many 7 wiues, but one. 7. Saluian. Men of religion (ſaith he, De prouident.l.5.) doe abſtaine from carnall copulation, but not from rapine and ſtealth: How are wee deluded by fooliſh perſwaſiō? it is iniquity, & not matrimony, which 8 God doth prohibite. 8. Gregory the third:
Let no man maintaine either harlot or concubine (ſaith he, writing to the Biſhops of Boi-aria, libro 3.pag.290.) but let him either liue chaſtly, or take him a wife, whome it ſhall bee lawfull no way to refuſe. Beſides, the whole Councel of Nice doth call the Prieſt accompanying of his proper wife, chaſte, lawfull, & honorable. And Gratian ſaith, that this Coũcell commended Paphnutius his opinion, and determined of marriage after euery mans will, not impoſing any neceſſity thereupon, or on the contrary; and citeth the teſtimony of Socrates, diſt.31.cap.Nicæna. Now whereas it is obiected, that the Synode ſaith, that ab-ſtinence from marriage is a tradition of the Church: I anſwer, that there was indeed ſuch a tradition, but neuer vniuerſall, but particular onely: for the vniuerſality got firſt head in the Councell of Ancyra, c.10. which was twenty yeares before the Nicene Councell.
And the Councel of Gangren following that of Nice, condemneth their opinion, that held that the Prieſts might not celebrate the di-uine myſteries, by reaſon of their marriage.
And it is apparent out of the firſt Councell of Toledo, c.4.&.7. that the Prieſts then married. And Patronus commandeth the Inſtitu-tions of the Nicene Councell, to be kept vn-uiolate for euermore; in his preface to the ſaid Councell. Pope Syluester decreed, that a Prieſt ſhould content himſelfe with one order, and with one wife alſo. This doth Phi-
A lippus Bergomenſ, record in his chronicle; and ſo doth Sabellicus alſo, Ennead.7.libro 8. The firſt Councell of Terwin, Ca.3. Anno 460. after the prohibition of marriage, addeth this:
Notwithſtanding we beeing willing to moderate this ſtrictneſſe, and rightly to mollifie it, doe decree that a Prieſt, &c. abiding ſtill in fleſhly concupiſcence, and ceaſing not to beget children, bee not capable of any higher preferment.——But let it bee ſufficient for thoſe, not to bee ſeparated from the communion. Now the 2. Councell of Terwin, c.8.&
9. alloweth a Biſhop to haue a wife as a ſiſter, and calleth her Episcopa, a Biſhoppeſſe. And Innocentius the third ſaith thus of married
B Prieſts, about the yeare 1200. Decretal.lib.3. tit.1.cap.vt clericorum. Thoſe that (according to their countries cuſtome) haue not abſtained from the bond of wedlocke, if they doe fall, let them bee ſeuerely puniſhed, becauſe they may vſe their lawfull matrimony: and here are two worthy obſeruations: firſt, that neither all Prieſts, nor all places had then admitted this ſingleneſſe: ſecondly, that marriage of Prieſts was then held lawfull for ſuch as pleaſed to vndergoe it. Pius the ſecond, Pope, did determine (as Platina ſaith) that euen as matrimony was forbidden the Prieſts for great reaſons, as he thought, ſo it ought to be permitted them againe for farre greater reaſons. Wee thinke (ſaith the ſaid Pius, or Æneas Syluius, Epiſtol. 308.) that you follow no badde counſell, if you take your ſelfe to C marriage, being not able to containe: though that this were to bee conſidered of before your admiſſion vnto holy orders. But wee are not all Gods, that we ſhould haue knowledge in things to come. Since it is come to this, that you cannot reſiſt the law of the fleſh,
It is better to marry then to burne.——*Leo,
Nouell.Conſtit.3.* ſaith, that there is a tradition of the Church, which commaundeth that thoſe that are to bee elected Prieſts, let them either vow ſingleneſſe for their whole life (if they think to be able to keep their promiſe,) or if they thinke it impoſſible to bee kept, let them firſt marry lawfully, and then enter into the order of the Miniſtery. Epiphanius
maketh for this vowe of perpetuall ſingle-D neſſe, but he cannot prooue it out of Scriptures, but is faine to flie vnto traditions. And the ſixt Synod of Conſtantinople, capite 13.
condemnes whatſoeuer the Romane church hath ſet downe concerning the ſingle life of Prieſts. And this Synod was held 50. yeares after Gregory the great, and is approoued by the Decretals of the Canon, the words are theſe, diſt.31.c.Quoniam. Becauſe wee know that it is taught in the order of the Romane Canon, that thoſe that are thought worthy to bee ordained Prieſts or Deacons, ſhould profeſſe, that from thenceforth they would not vſe any more the fleſhly cōpany of their wiues: wee following the auncient Canon of Apoſtolike diligence, and the Conſtitutions of holy men, will haue theſe lawfull marriages from henceforth to bee of force, by no meanes diſſoluing their wedlocke with their wiues, or depriuing them of familiar reſort together, at conuenient times. By this Canon wee vnderſtand, that for aboue 700. yeares together, the Churches of the Eaſt did not approoue, (at leaſt did not eſtabliſh) this ſingleneſs of life in the Miniſters of the Church. And hereunto adde the teſtimony of Theodorus Balſamon, In Can. 5. Apoſtol. Before the ſixt Synode in Trullo, it was lawfull for the Biſhops to marry, & haue wiues, yea after they had receiued that dignity. Beſides, this interdiction is reprooued by * Voluſianus, or (as others will haue it) by Huldricus, in his anſwer vnto Nicholas the firſt: Whether he be Prieſt, Deacon, or Subdeacon, ſaith Gratian in the decree, diſt. 28. cap. de Syracuſ. it is plaine (by the opinion of Pope Pelagius,) that beeing inueſted in the aforeſaid orders, they may vſe matrimony lawfully. And diſt. 31. cap. 1. about three yeares before, the ſubdeacons throughout all the Churches of Sicilie were according to the vſe of the Romane church, forbidden to haue any medling at all with their wiues, which ſeemeth vnto mee to bee a very hard and vncompetent thing, that he that hath not attained vnto the vſe of continencie, nor made any former promiſe of chaſtity, ſhould be compelled to forſake his wife, and by this meanes to fall more perniciouſly, (which God forbidde.) And Cauſa 26. q. 2. c. Sors: Before the Goſpel came to the luſtre and brightneſſe, many things were permitted, which in the ariſing of more perfect diſcipline were vtterly aboliſhed: As the marriage of Prieſts, and of couſin-germanes, which is not prohibited by any authority either of the Law, Goſpel, or Apoſtles; and yet is abſolutely taken away by Eccleſiaſticall conſtitution. Leo, epiſt. 87. willeth the Prieſt to chooſe him a virgin to his wife, not a widow; ſo that thereby he alloweth Prieſts to marry. And Panormitane ſaith, * that continencie is but of the poſitiue law, and that the Greekes allow not that inſtitution. Thomas, in 2. 2. queſt. 88. art. 11. affirmes this, that the vow of continency is not added as an eſſentiall part of the ſolemnity of ordination, but onely accidentally, by a ſtatute of the Church. Durand, In 4. ſent. diſt. 37. queſt. 1. ſaith, that Holy Orders doe hinder the ſolemnization of marriages, and aboliſheth thoſe that are already conſummate, not abſolutely, as they are orders, but as they are holy, and herein by diſpoſing ſo of them:--but it hindreth theſe marriages fully, out of the Inſtitution of the Church. It is neither probable by reaſon nor authority, ſaith Caietane, in opuſc. tom. 2. tract. 31. de cœlib. Sacerd. that a Prieſt in marrying doth commit ſinne abſolutely: nay, reaſon doth rather drawe a man to the contrary, becauſe as wee reade in Lombard his ſentences, diſt. 37. lib. 4. Neither orders as they are orders, nor holy orders as they are holy, doe hinder matrimony: and in the Weſterne Churches, diſt. 28. cap. Diaconi. it was once lawfull for the Deacons to marrie.—Beſides, it is manifeſt—that the Prieſts & Miniſters of the Eaſtern Churches doe marry, diſt. 31. cap. Aliter. Neither doth Prieſthood take away contract in marriage, whether precedent or ſubſequent, if wee ſeclude all conſtitutions Eccleſiaſticall, and ſticke onely vnto that which wee had taught vs by Chriſt and his Apoſtles. This teacheth Caietane: and ſo doth Medina alſo, de Continentia, libro ſecundo, capite primo, and Soto, de Iure, libro 7. queſt. 6. artic. 2. And this prohibition, the whole Clergy of Germany, diſallowed of in the yeare 1074. ſaith, Schafnaburgenſis. Pope Hildebrand---decreede in many Synods, that according to the auncient Canons, no Prieſt ſhould haue a wife: ſuch as had, ſhould either put them away, or bee put from their dignities: nor ſhould any bee admitted hereunto that would not vow perpetuall continency and ſingleneſſe of life.—Againſt this decree, the whole Clergy-men bent themſelues extreamely, calling him an hereticke abſolutely, and a man of a damned opinion, who (hauing forgotten the Lords word, that ſaith: All cannot take this vpon them: he that can take it, let him: and the Apoſtles that ſaid, hee that containeth not, let him marry, for it is better to marry then to burne) with a violent exaction, would conſtraine men to liue like Angels: and by denying them the accuſtomed courſe of nature, openeth the way to fornication and vncleanneſſe: but if he proceeded in confirming this decree, they had rather leaue their Prieſthoods, then their wiues, and then they ſhould ſee, where hee that deſpiſed men, could get Angels to gouerne the people throughout the Church of God. And afterwards hee declareth, that it held a long time as a cuſtome, that the Prieſts ſhould take them wiues.

* A very ancient copie of this epiſtle is extant in Corpus Chriſti Colledge library in Cãbridge, vnder the name of Voluſianus, to Nicholas the firſt.

De clericorum Coniug. c. cum olim. & de pœnit. & remiſſ. §. Omnis vtriuſq;.

6 The hiſtorie of Paphnutius, deliuered in writing by Socrates, libro 1. cap. 8. and Sozomene, libro 1. cap. 22. and approoued by Nicephorus, libro. 7. cap. 19. Suidas in verbo Paphnutius, and Gratian, diſt. 31. c. Nicena, the Papiſts of theſe times doe reiect and contemne moſt boldly, as if it were falſe and forged. Sotus for one, de Iure, libro 7. queſt. 6. art. 2. Melchior Canus for another, in loc. comm. lib. 5. cap. vlt. and Bellarmine for a third, de clericis, libro 1. capite 20. Their firſt reaſon is this, Sozomene (as Gregorie ſaith, lib. 6. epiſtol. 31.) doth faine many things: And Socrates doth lie flatly in the hiſtorie of his time. I anſwer, Gregory accuſeth not Sozomene of forgerie in this thing by name: and in ſo famous a thing as this was, they could not erre vnwittingly. Their ſecond reaſon is this: It is the common conſent of the Greeke Fathers, that none ſhould be miniſters of Gods myſteries, but the chaſt and continent: ſo ſaith Origen, homil. 17. in Luk. & 4. in Leuit. Euſebius, lib. 1. de Demonſt.

A Euang: cap. 9. Epiphanius, in compend. doctr. & hereſ. 59. cont. Catharos, Cyril, catechiſ. 12. Nyſſenus, de virginitate, cap. vlt. Chryſoſtome, hom. 2. de patientia Iob. Baſil in Iſay, cap. 3. & Hieron. contra Vigill. What ſhall the Churches of the Eaſt doe? what of Egypt, and of the Apoſtolike ſea, who receiue either virgin Prieſts, or continent; or if they haue wiues, they leaue to bee husbands? I anſwer two waies; firſt, That the Greeke Prieſts did abſtaine from the vſe of their wiues, but only at ſuch times as their courſe came to celebrate, not continually: and ſo ſome of theſe aforeſaid Fathers doe require this temporall continency, not perpetuall. Secondly, in the Eaſt their B eccleſiaſticall cuſtomes were diuers: in ſome places the Clergie contained, and in other ſome they married: So ſaith Socrates directly, lib. 5. cap. 21. thus are the aforeſaid Fathers reconciled with this hiſtory of Paphnutius.

7 The teſtimonies of the auncient writers concerning the ſingle life of Prieſts, were but priuate opinions and coniectures. Me thinketh (ſaith Origen, Hom. 23. in Numer.) that it is his part alone, to offer ſacrifice, that hath vowed himſelfe vnto endleſſe and perpetuall chaſtity. Neither do they confirme theſe opinions out of the word of God, beſides the great difference amongſt them. Againe, what they ſpeake of ſingle life, they ſpeake it but of thoſe that haue this gift, and while they haue it. And therefore they require it not C of thoſe that are not willing, but of thoſe that willingly promiſe continencie: And by thoſe that are willing, they doe meane them that know ſurely that they haue this gift of continencie. And in this manner was it that Cyprian kept his virginity free without vow, or monaſticall life.

8 The Fathers doe permit thoſe that haue made ſuch vowes, to marry notwithſtanding, if they cannot containe, Cypr. libro primo, Epiſtol. 11. Neither doe they acknowledge any vow of continencie, wherein marriage is abiured, or by which it is annihilated. Auguſtine, De bono viduit. capite 9, 10, 11. ſaith, that the breach of the vow is worſe then adultery, but yet hee will haue theſe marriages that are made after the vow to be firme and lawfull: D ſuch as doe thus contract, doe herein (as hee ſaith, capite 10.) offend, not in the marriage, but in the breach of vow. Some anſwer, that Auguſtine ſpeaketh not of the vow ſolemnely made, but of a ſimple vow: But I ſay, that this diſtinction is friuolous, a tricke of the Schoole-men, vnknowne to the Fathers: neuer found but in the Schoole-mens writings: and in the ſixt of the Decretals, Boniface the eight, libro 3. Tit. 15. ſaith, that the ſolemnitie of vow hath the originall only vpon the conſtitution of the Church. So ſaith Scotus, Petrus de Palude, In 4. diſt. 38. Caietane, in 2. 2. q. 88. art. 7. and Panormitane, in cap. Rurſus: all theſe thinke, that it is onely a decree of the Church, whereby the ſolemne vowe doth diſſolue the contract of marriage made after the vow.

9 For 200 yeares after Chriſt, there was no receiued opinion in the Church concerning the excellencie and merit of ſingle life aboue marriage. Hee that hath attained vnto true perfection (ſaith Clement Alexandrinus, Stromat. 7.) hath the Apoſtles for his patternes, and is truely counted a man, not in that hee hath made a choice of Monaſticall life; but hee conquereth and excelleth men, that exerciſeth himſelfe in matrimony and increaſe of children, and in care and gouernance of his family, without either pleaſure or ſorrow.

10 But afterwards, the moſt of the ancient writers began to defend the excellency of virginity before mariage, & ſpeake ſomwhat hyperbolically (beyond meane) in praiſe thereof. So ſaith Cyprian, De bono pudicit. that virginity is equall vnto Angels, nay if we ſeek it willingly, it doth exceede them, becauſe in ſtriuing in the fleſh, it obtaineth a victory againſt nature, which the Angels haue not. And Athanaſius, De virginitate, crieth out: O Continencie the Prophets ioy, the Apoſtles glory! O Continency the life of Angels, and the crowne of ſanctity! But for all this, ſometimes they ſpeake more moderately of virginity. Becauſe we ſee (ſaith Origen, l. 8. in Rom.) that diuers of the Saints, yea and ſome Apoſtles, haue had wiues, wee cannot thinke thus of virginity only.

Vſe thy marriage with modeſty and moderation (ſaith Chryſoſtome, Hom. 7. ad Hebr.) and thou ſhalt be the chiefe in the kingdome, and enioy the fulneſſe of bleſſings. Now the Fathers did ſometimes aſcribe this exceſſe vnto virginity, to make choice of the extreame which was moſt oppoſite vnto the vice then predominant, for the heathen polygamies (hauing of many wiues) were not as yet vtterly caſheered from amongſt the people: and beſides, they did it to eſchew the ſuſpition of diſorderly copulation together: as alſo becauſe that the ſingle men had the leaſt encombrances, and ſo endured perſecution with leſſe greefe.

11 Beſides, the Fathers tooke ſuch paines in the praiſe of virginitie, not becauſe of it ſelfe, but by reaſon of the offices and duties of godlines: and hence ſprung all theſe commendations of virginity. And this is hereby apparent, becauſe that they will haue matrimony (already contracted) to be diſſolued by the entrance into religion. Looke Iuſtinians inſtitutions, cap. de Epiſcopis & Cleric. lib. finali. Baſil in quaeſt. fuſius explicatis, qu. 12. Caſſianus Collat. 21. cap. 9.

12 The Fathers vrging the ſingleneſſe of the Prieſts, doe ſometimes detract from the praiſes of marriage, and ſometimes reproue it as an vncleane thing. Syricius, epiſt. ad Hym. Epiſc. Tarra: ſtucke not to ſay, that thoſe that are in the fleſh, that is, in matrimony, cannot pleaſe God. And in like manner Tertullian, l. de monogamia, ſaith, that it is euill to contract matrimony, and by the word euill, hee meaneth ſinne. And Hierome, Contra Ionin. libro 1. goeth thus farre, that he ſaith, In the fulfilling the duty of an husband, I fulfilled not the duty of a Chriſtian, and it is an euill thing to touch a woman. And Athanaſius, libro de virginitate, ſaith, that the womans body is polluted by her husband. To the ende (ſaith Leo the firſt, Epiſtol. ad Anaſtaſium) that wee may bring continency vnto his perfect purity, we doe not permitte any carnall marriage ſo much as to the ſubdeacons. Gregor. in Paſto. part. 3. admonit. 28. I ſpeake this as permitting:——It is intimated to be a fault, which is forbidden to be fauoured. And Ambroſe, Offic. libro primo, cap. vltimo, will haue the Prieſts to bee pure from marriage, and to bee contaminated by marriage. Let thoſe that meddle with the holy myſteries (ſaith Iſidore, De offic. diuin. lib. 2. cap. 10.) be chaſte, and continent, and free from all fleſhly vncleanneſſe. Arator, In Acta Apoſtol. ſaith, that

The Churches pureſt faith commaunds that all the Prieſts liue euer chaſt, &c.——

And Origen, Homil. 23. in Numb. maketh chaſtity and marriage directly oppoſites; Looke his words in the ſeauenth ſection before. Now Rhenanus, In Argumento libri Tertullian. de exhortatione ad caſtitatem, doth acknowledge, that all the Fathers as wel as Hierome were no equall Iudges in the value of matrimony.

Sacred virgins.

13 The Originall of the Popiſh ſingleneſſe was thus: Firſt, the Votareſſes that married after their vowe, were found fault with for their inconſtancie, but yet their marriages were not diſſolued. If that out of faith they haue dedicated themſelues vnto God (ſaith Cyprian, Epiſt. 11. libro 1.) Let them perſeuere in chaſtity and pureneſſe, without any let or moleſtation, and ſo beeing ſtrong and conſtant, let them expect the reward of virginity: but if they will not continue ſo, or cannot, they had better for to marry, then to fall into the fire by their ſinnes. And the Councell of Ancyra, Ca. 19. appointed but a very light penance vpon thoſe that brake this vow, namely, in ranking them amongſt the twiſe married. Epiphanius ſaith, that marrying after a vow is a ſinne, and commendeth repentance for it: but yet holdeth it better to marry ſo, then to burne. And in like manner doth Hierome, and Auguſtine, de bono viduit. cap. 19. But afterwards theſe marriages began by ſome to bee held for more heauy offences, after 380. yeares Baſil calleth them inceſts, and the ſinnes of whoredome and adultery, lib. de virginit. And the Councell of Calcedon, ca. 15. doth excommunicate the parties thus marrying, yet commandeth the Biſhops forthwith to abſolue them, neither willing the diſſolution nor ſuſpenſion of theſe marriages, which were not fruſtrate and broken off vntill after-ages.

Extreame Vnction.

1 THe Fathers neuer ſpeake of this Extreame Vnction, that is, of a ceremony of annointing in manner of a Sacrament without the gift of healing, vntill Innocentius the firſt, in the yeare 402. For Sigebert in an. 404. aſcribeth the decree of annointing the dead, vnto Innocentius the firſt, who howſoeuer he call it a kinde of Sacrament, yet he will haue it miniſtred by all Chriſtians: It is lawfull (ſaith he, epiſt. 1. ad Decentium, cap. 8.) not only for the Prieſts, but alſo for al Chriſtians to vſe the oyle of Chriſme, made by the Biſhop, and to annoint therewith in their owne or their friends neceſſity. And Bede, In Luc. 9. thinks, that it belõgs not only to thoſe that are weak in body, but alſo vnto the weak in faith: And in Iacob. c. 5. he will haue the miniſtring thereof free vnto all Chriſtians, not binding it only to the Prieſts. And this is the opinion of Alcuine alſo, de diuin. offic. cap. 40. that wrote about the yeare 750.

2 The Fathers vſed this vnction in the beginning of ſickneſſe, and in the parts that were moſt affected. Vnto the deafe & dumb, they powred oyle into the mouth & crowne of the head, Greg. Turon. hiſtor. Franc. lib. 6. c. 7. And in the peſtilence they annointed the arme with this holy oyle, Fortunat. in vita S. German. But this vnction was not inſtituted as then, whereby to giue ſpirituall grace. The oyle (ſaith Victor of Antioch, ad Marci, cap. 6.) which we vſe in this holy vnction, doth ſignifie both the mercy of God, the cure of the ſickneſſe, and the illumination of the heart: but it may be ſaid, that the prayer doth effect all theſe, and that the oyle is but an outward ſigne only of all theſe effects. This oyle (ſaith Theophylact; In 6. Marc.) beeing of great vſe in labour, and a nutriment of light, and an increaſer of mirth, doth ſignifie the mercy of God, and the grace of the ſpirit, by which we are freed from labour, and obtaine light, ioy, and ſpirituall gladneſſe. But the caſe is altered now adaies; for now it is not giuen as a cure to the ſicke, but as a neceſſary purueyance for the dying.

The Primacie of the Biſhop of Rome.

1 THe primacie of dominion, or (as Turrecremata calleth it, Summa de Eccleſ. lib. 3. c. 23.) of authoritie, was not acknowledgeded to bee in the Romiſh Biſhop, but was vnheard of, and vnknowne vntill the yeare of Chriſt 600. and began to be publike and manifeſt in Boniface, about the yere 607. for he obtained of Phocas the Emperor, that the Apoſtolike Sea of Rome ſhould bee the head of the Church, whereas the Sea of Conſtantinople would needes write it ſelfe the firſt or cheefe of all. So ſaith the Chronicler Sigebert. In the yeare 607. Boniface (ſaith he) obtained of Phocas the Emperour, that the Romiſh Church ſhould bee the head of all Churches: theſe bee his words, and the very ſame in effect are to bee found in Marianus Scotus, Martinus Polonus, Otto Friſingenſis, and Hermannus Contractus. And Phocas decreed this, not as affirming, declaring, or pronouncing any thing that was before, but as founding and eſtabliſhing a new thing, which before was not. For this primacie thus by him eſtabliſhed, was but ſeauen yeares before reprooued, yea euen condemned by Gregory the firſt, then Biſhop of Rome. I confidently affirme (ſaith he lib. 6. epiſt. ex Regiſtro, cap. 194.) that whoſoeuer cals himſelfe, or is willing to be called Vniuerſall Prieſt or Biſhop, in this loftineſſe and pride of his, he is the fore-runner of Antichriſt. And the Biſhops of Conſtantinople tooke in very ill part this ordinance of Phocas, as Sabellicus affirmeth, lib. 6. Ennead, 8. And to the ſame purpoſe Æneas Syluius, epiſt. l. 1. epiſt. 288. (who himſelfe was afterward Pope) ſaith thus: Otherwiſe, (ſaith he) diuerſitie of opinions would diuide the Church, and looſe the knot of vnity, as wee may ſee was done before the Councell of Nice, whileſt euery one depended on themſelues, and but a little regard was had to the Church of Rome.

But the Papiſts here obiect, that Iohn of Conſtantinople was therefore reprooued by Gregory of Rome, becauſe hee would bee accounted the onely Biſhop, ſo that no other were to be ſo called or eſteemed, but onely as his Suffragans or Vicars: and this they would faine prooue out of the words of Gregorie in the fourth booke of his Epiſtle, ep. 38. to Iohn of Cōſtantinop. where thus he ſaith: Thou that once confeſſedſt thy ſelf vnworthy the name of a Biſhop, art now (in time) come to this paſſe, that deſpiſing the reſt of thy brethren, thou deſireſt to bee called the only Biſhop, or thou alone ſeekeſt after the name of a Biſhop: The like words to theſe are in the ſame booke the 34. Epiſt. vnto Conſtantia the Empreſſe. Hereunto I anſwer in two points. 1. Gregory in that very ſame 38. Epiſtle, and in the 36. and elſewhere, affirmeth, that that very name or title which Iohn of Conſtantinople did thus arrogate to himſelfe, was offered to his own predeceſſours in the ſea of Rome, by the Councell of Chalcedon: But is it either poſſible, or likely, that that reuerend Generall Councell, eſpecially thoſe 150. Biſhops therein aſſembled, ſhould yeeld that honour to the Romane Biſhop, that hee ſhould bee A deemed the onely Biſhop of the world, and themſelues to bee no more but his vickars or ſubſtitutes? hardly can any man perſwade this, eſpecially ſeeing it is certaine that thoſe ſame Biſhops in that Councell did yeeld vnto the ſea of Conſtantinople, that it ſhould bee equall in priuiledges vnto the ſea of Rome. 2. I ſay, it was not the title of only Biſhop, but of Oecumenicall Biſhop which hee ſought after; hee deſired not to be Biſhop alone, or the only Biſhop in the world, but vniuerſall Biſhop, or the Biſhop of all other Biſhops. And this to bee true, appeareth out of Gregories owne words, in diuers places, viz. Epiſtol. libro 4. epiſt. 39. & libro 7. B epiſt. 69. But then (you will ſay) how doth that ſtand with thoſe other words of Gregory, out of which the Papiſts ground their obiection: I anſwer, Gregorie beeing as hee was, had indeede more cauſe then any to be mooued at this arrogancie of Iohn, and therefore in aggrauation and deteſtation of his ſo great pride and ambition, fell into theſe hyperbolicall tearmes, and yet not much improperly; for hee who amongſt equals ſeekes a ſuperioritie, and will vſurpe power ouer thoſe that be as good as himſelfe, doth after a ſort take away all place and power from the reſt, in as much as hee will needes bee alone that which they are as well as himſelfe. And euen ſo ſaith Gregorie, explaning himſelfe, epiſt. libro 4. capite 36. If one be called vniuerſall C Patriarke, the name & honour of Patriarke is taken from all the reſt: but farre bee this, farre bee it from a Chriſtian minde, that any man ſhould bee willing to arrogate that to himſelfe, by which the honour of his brethren ſhould ſeeme in the leaſt meaſure to be diminiſhed. And ſomewhat after he reproueth Iohn, for that he endeuoureth to aſcribe all things to himſelfe, and to ſubdue all the members of Chriſt vnto his owne yoke, who are knit onely to one head, namely to Chriſt: ——And in the 38. Epiſtle of the ſame booke, hee thus ſpeakes to Iohn, Patriarke of Conſtantinople. What wilt thou anſwer to Chriſt, the head of the vniuerſall Church, thou that goeſt about to put vnder thy feete by the title of vniuerſality, all the members D of his body? And it is very conſiderable that hee ſaith: Iohn deſired to bee deemed and named the only Biſhop, by deſpiſing, not by depoſing his brethren Biſhops, by putting them vnder, not putting them downe.

2 Secondly, the power of making lawes, and of diſpenſing with them, the Biſhop of Rome had not, nor exerciſed out of his owne Prouince, for 600. yeares after Chriſt; Gregory indeede Epiſt. libro 12. capite 31. diſpenſed with the Engliſh men, touching degrees of marriage forbidden, but hee did this as a Patriarke: alſo he did it as directing, not as commanding, out of a directiue, not a coactiue power: for they doubting, and asking of him, beeing both a Patriarke, and a learned man, he gaue counſell what were to bee done in that difficult point, namely of two euils put together, what were beſt to be choſen: And lib.7.epiſt.30. he ſaith, This word of commanding, or I command, I pray you take it away, let me heare no more of it; for I know who I am, and who you are; for by your places you are my brethren, in vertues and good examples, my Fathers: I haue therefore cōmāded nothing, but I haue laboured to ſhew what in my opinion is moſt profitable or cōuenient. Furthermore, Gregorie vſed no other Canons for lawes, but the Imperiall Eccleſiaſticke, namely, ſuch lawes of the Emperours, as concerned Eccleſiaſticall matters and perſons.

3 During the foreſaid time of 600. yeares, ſuch of the Fathers as be of vndoubted credit, ſpeake nothing of any Primacy of power, dominion, iuriſdiction, or authority. See Chryſoſt. in his third Homilie on the Acts. And Cyprian, de Simpl. Prelat. whoſe words are theſe: The reſt of the Apoſtles were euen the very ſame that Peter was, partakers of the ſame fellowſhip with him, both of honour & power. Hierome, againſt Iouinian, l.1.c.14. ſaith, that the Church was built vpon all the Apoſtles, & euery one of them receiued the keies of the kingdome of heauen; and the ſtrength of the Church was founded on thē al equally: yet that amongſt the twelue one was choſen, that a head or chiefe beeing appointed, the occaſion of ſchiſme might be taken away. Cyril on Iohn, lib.3.cap.20. ſaith, God gaue the Apoſtles and their ſucceſſours, full and plenarie power in the Church. Therefore it is apparent, that the Fathers ſpeake of the primacie of * order, dignity, vocation, maieſtie, or reſpect: for they acknowledge a certaine excellency or preheminence, both of Peter, and of the Biſhop of Rome: but that was in reſpect of the glory and authority of the Citie, which beeing the chiefe of all, therefore purchaſed that honour to her Biſhops: for this point ſee the Councell of Calcedon, cap. 28. act. 15. And thence was it that many ſought to him for aide and aſſiſtance in ſome wrongs, but not expecting any commaundement or edict from him. Couarruuias a Doctor of both lawes, one of great account amongſt them, 1. tom. 2. part. Relect. §. 9. pag. 421. col. 4. edit. Frankofurt: ſaith, By the authorities and teſtimonies of Catholike Fathers, and the traditions generally receiued of all, it is cōcluded, that the Apoſtles receiued from the Lord Ieſus equall power with Peter, of order or iuriſdiction, in ſo much as euery one of the Apoſtles had from God equall power with Peter, ouer the whole world, and that to all ends and purpoſes, and for all acts whatſoeuer that Peter could do: Wherby it is cleare that he afterwards fights with himſelfe, when he ſaith, that this power of theirs was ſubordinate and ſubiect to Peters. The ſame alſo in effect is to bee found in Gratian in the A decrees, in the Popes old Canon law, diſt.21. cap. In nouo, ex Anacleto. And if euer the Fathers ſpeake of a Primacy of power or dominion, it is plaine enough, they meant not any vniuerſall power ouer the world, but of that abſolute power, which hee might exerciſe in his owne limited Prouince; and ſo are they to be vnderſtood. Likewiſe ſubiection is either in regard of power, or of order; and in this ſecond ſenſe it is, namely, in reſpect of order, that ſome Fathers write, that Biſhops and all things are ſubiect to the Romane ſeate. See Gregorie in his Epiſtles, l.7.c.63.

* In this ſēſe are the Fathers to be taken when they call Peter the head: or yeeld him the Primacy in the Church.

4 Sometime euen Biſhops for their painfulneſſe, faithfulneſſe, and heedful care of the Churches, were preferd before others. Thus B Baſil was accounted the Doctor of the world, as Theodoret cals him, l.4.c. 19. and Polycarpus the Apoſtolicall and Propheticall teacher of thoſe times, as Euſebius reporteth, l.4.c,15. and Cyprian is ſaid to haue beene as it were a Biſhop, and to haue had authority in euery Church. For ſo ſaith Nazian. in his ſermon of him. For ſaith hee, hee was not ſet ouer the Church of Carthage only, no nor only ouer the Churches of Africke, all which haue receiued much honour and renowne by him & from him: But he was as it were a Biſhop, euen ouer all the Weſterne Churches, yea almoſt ouer all the Eaſterne alſo, and ouer the Southerne and Northerne Churches, euen as far as his name and admiration could ſpread it C ſelfe. Baſil alſo ſaith of Meletius, epiſt.50. that he was ſet ouer, or gouerned the whole bodie of the Church. And of Ambroſe the ſaid Baſil, ep.55. ſaith, that the Maſterſhip or gouernmēt of the great Ship, meaning the Church, was committed vnto him. Nicephorus, l.14.c. 34. ſaith, that the Biſhops of Alexandria, after the Epheſine Councell were wont to bee called Popes, and Iudges of the whole world. And in reſpect of their care it was that Biſhops of Rome had their vickars or legates in forraine prouinces of other Biſhops; but no vickars of power, vntill theſe later ages.

5 The ſpeeches of the Fathers concerning Peter, are to be vnderſtood incluſiuely, of the other Apoſtles: and their ſpeeches of the D Pope of Rome are alſo to be taken of other Biſhops. Cyprian, epiſt.27. ad lapſos, ſaith, the Church was conſtituted vpon Biſhops, & not vpon Peter onely. Nicephorus, l.14.c.34. reports that Cyrill was called a Pope and Iudge of the whole world. Auguſtine on the 36. Pſalme calleth al the Apoſtles and Prophets foundations. Hierome againſt Iouinian, l.1.c. 14. ſaith, thou wilt ſay, The Church is founded vpon Peter, although the ſame in another place is done vpon all the Apoſtles: and equally on them all is the ſtrength of the Church eſtabliſhed.

6 Peter is called of ſome of the Fathers, a rocke, and the foundation of the Church, not properly, but by a Metonymie, becauſe by his doctrine he laboured greatly in founding the Church, and for that he firſt of all in the name of all the Apoſtles, confeſſed the churches faith. Nazianzene in his oration De modera. in diſp. ſaith, Peter is called a rocke, and hath the foundations of the Church committed to his truſt. If hee ſeeme harſhe, let Ambroſe Ser. 47. explane him: Peter, ſaith he, is called a rocke, for that he firſt laid the foundation of faith in the nations. And in the ſame manner and meaning in the Fathers, is Peters ſeate called alſo a rocke: ſo ſaith Auguſtine in Pſal. contra partem Donati: Number the Prieſts, euen from the very ſeate of Peter, that is the rock which the gates of hel cannot ouercome. So likewiſe the confeſſion of Peter, or his faith is often by the ſame Fathers called a rocke: namely by Auguſtine on Saint Iohns firſt Epiſtle tract. 10. by Hilary in his 6. booke of the Trinitie: by Chryſoſtome in his hom. 55. on Matth. Ambroſe lib. 6. cap. 9 on Luke ſaith, Thy faith is the rocke. And with Origen, He is a rocke, whoſoeuer is an Imitator of Chriſt. And that Peter himſelfe was the rocke, ſeemed to Auguſt. after good deliberation ſo harſhe a ſpeech, that he recanted it in his retractations, lib. 1. cap. 21. It is alſo to bee noted that the Fathers doe oft times ſpeake too hyperbolically of the Biſhop of Rome, as when they call him the head and ſpouſe of the Church. And ſo Bernard; de conſid. ad Eugeni. lib. 2. cap. 8. ſaying, he is Chriſt by his anointing: and Leo, ſaying, that Peter was aſſumed into the fellowſhip of the vndiuided Trinitie: in his 89. Epiſtle. See alſo his third ſermon of the aſſumption to the ſame purpoſe.

7 By the rocke in that ſpeech of Chriſt, Mat. 16. [Vpon this rocke I will build my Church] all the auncient Fathers doe not vnderſtand Peter, but many of them Chriſt, as Tertullian againſt Marci. lib. 4. cap. 13. Gregory Nyſſen in teſtim. de Vet. Teſtam. de Trinitate contra Iudæos. Hilarie in his ſecond booke of the Trinitie. Chryſoſt. in his hom. of the croſſe of Chriſt. Ambroſe Serm. 84. Hierome in Matth. lib. 1. cap. 7. Auguſt. in three places, viz. Serm. 13. De verb. Dom. & tract. 120. in Ioan. & lib. 2. de Trinitate cap. 17. Theodoret in 2. viz. in Pſal. 47. & in 1. Cor. 3. And to theſe auncients adde ſome of the chiefe later, Bede, Anſelme, Lyra, the Interlinear Gloſſe in Matth. 16. Further many vnderſtand by the rocke the faith and profeſſion of Peter, whereby he ſaid, Thou art the Chriſt the ſonne of the liuing God: ſo ſaith S. Iames his lyturgie, Ambroſe in Epheſ. 2. & de Incarnat. Domin. Sacram. cap. 5. Hilary lib. 6. de Trinit. Epiphanius her. 59. Chryſoſt. hom. 55. in Matth. & hom. de Pentecoſt. tom. 3. Cyrill dialog. 4. de Trinit. Bede in Ioh. 21. and Theophylact in Mat. 16.

8 The Fathers vrge a communion or fellowſhip with the Biſhop of Rome as farre fourth as he ſate in Peters chaire, that is, as far as hee taught the true doctrine of Chriſt, which now adaies he doth not at all: for Peters chaire is the Church, where not ſo much the perſon of Peter, or his perſonall ſucceſſour, as his doctrine is reſident; ſo ſaith Cyprian lib. 1. epiſt. 3. The auncient Emperours aſcribed to the Biſhop of Rome a power to diſcerne and Iudge of matters eccleſiaſticall, becauſe then they followed the written word of God, and iudged out of it.

9 That Peter was euer at Rome at all, is vncertaine: Indeede, moſt of the Fathers ſay ſo: and ſome of them ſay more too, namely, that of an Apoſtle hee was made Biſhop of Rome: but all this is affirmed, but not prooued: and it is affirmed onely by ſuch as liued not till the age after Peter.

10 The Biſhop of Rome exerciſed honourable authoritie and power; but it was not properly belonging to him and his owne by perpetuall right. In this manner hee was oft times in ſome ciuill cauſes made an honourable arbitrator: Thus he viſited Churches, thus he confirmed and depoſed Biſhops, thus he made Canons, and diſpenſed with them againe within his owne Prouince. And if at any time hee did any of theſe out of his Prouince, he did it not by office or authority, but either at the entreatie and requeſt of others, or in the name and authoritie of the Emperour: or if otherwiſe, it was tyrannicall vſurpation. And the place and power of Iudging which ſome of the Fathers ſometime giue him, was onely directiue as of diſcretion, not coactiue as of authoritie.

11 Appeales were ſometime made to the Biſhop of Rome, but not as to the Iudge to whome it belonged to giue the determining and concluding Iudgement: but as to an able and honourable helper, who by his place and power was able to procure their wrongs redreſſed. And ſo oftentimes men vpon wrongfull ſentences, appealed to other Biſhops of the Weſt, that ſo by procuring their conſent, they might make their cauſe the ſtronger: Nether did they of old take any more vpon them; for Marcion being excommunicated in Pontus, came to Rome to be abſolued: but they returned him this anſwer, We cannot, we may not doe this without the permiſſion or ſufferance of thy reuerend Father, meaning his owne Biſhop; ſo reports Epiphanius, Her. 42. And Chryſoſtome epiſt. ad Innocent. 1. tom. 5. in his wrongfull perſecution craueth helpe, not onely of Innocentius the 1. then Biſhop of Rome, but of all the other Biſhops of the Weſt: and therefore (as Socrates in his ſtory, lib. 6. cap. 14. ſaith) he appealed to a Councell: But Chryſoſtome receiued this anſwer from the Pope, that (alas) it lay not in his power to helpe him, neither might he call a Councell for his helpe. Baſill writing to Athanaſius thus counſelleth him in his troubles, ep. 52. It ſeemes to me the beſt courſe (ſaith he) that Letters bee written to the Biſhop of Rome, deſiring him to conſider how theſe matters bee here carried, and to giue his aduice what were beſt to be done. To this purpoſe ſee alſo his Epiſtles to the Biſhops of Italy & France, epiſt. 70. Ioan. de Terra-rubea, a Doctor of the law, in a treatiſe of his touching the gouernement of the kingdome of France, ſaith, If the Pope haue at any time intermedled in the premiſſes, he did not thruſt in himſelfe as with authoritie, but came in as beeing thereto requeſted, or called in for aſſiſtance; and this conferred not any power of Iuriſdiction vnto him; euen as when a Iudge requireth the aduice and aſſiſtance of another Iudge in matter of law or Iudgement, he doth not hereby conferre vnto him any Iuriſdiction which afore he had not, but onely makes vſe of, or intreateth the vſe of that hee hath.

12 Furthermore, euen thoſe appeales that were made to Rome, were oftentimes diſallowed and reiected by the auncient Fathers. Thus writes Cyprian, lib. 1. ep. 3. to Cornelius then Pope; It altogether behooueth that thoſe who be vnder our Iuriſdiction, keepe themſelues at home, and gadde not abroad vnto forraine Iuriſdiction: but here to let their cauſe be tried, where both the accuſers and the witneſſes are ready at hand, & where the crime beeing committed may be iudged. And in his 4. Epiſtle he ſaith, that thoſe who doe communicate with Baſilides, doe neglect that diſcipline and gouernment which God hath eſtabliſhed in his Church. The African Councell, cap. 92. thus concludeth. If any thinke they haue cauſe to appeale from their owne Biſhops, or the Iudgement they receiue at home, they ſhall not appeale but vnto the Councels of Affricke, and if any doe appeale to any authority forraine, beyond the ſeas, or if any hold that men ſhould ſo appeale, let none of the Churches of Affricke hold him fit for their communion. The Mileuitane Councell, Can. 22. almoſt in the ſame words, inhibiteth all Biſhops and Clerks, from appealing to any authoritie beyond the ſeas. Zozomene, lib. 3. cap. 8. reporteth, that the Biſhops of the Eaſt wrote to the Biſhop of Rome, that it was not lawfull for him by any cunning deuiſe, nor vnder pretence of any appeale, to fruſtrate, or annihilate that which they had acted and concluded. Damaſus, as we may ſee in Ambroſe, ep. 79. beeing himſelfe Pope, ſaith that after a Prouinciall Councell haue concluded any thing, he hath nothing to doe to meddle with the Iudgement. Theſe be his words; Seeing the Councell aſſembled at Capua hath thus pronounced, that Bonoſus and his accuſers ſhall haue ſuch Iudges appointed them, as be neere vnto them, as eſpecially the Macedonians, who together with the Biſhop of Theſſalonica, ſhould examine his doings, and conſider of the whole matter: We aduertiſe you therefore, that it cannot belong to vs to deale with the iudgement of this matter, neither is any thing to bee attempted againſt your ſentence, who haue decreed that which you thought moſt agreeable to Iuſtice, and to whome the Synode had giuen authoritie for that they did; therefore the firſt thing to bee done is, that they giue Iudgement to whome the power of Iudging (in this caſe) is committed, for your determination is in the place and roome of the whole Synode; and it is no reaſon that wee ſhould take vpon vs to Iudge (as it were) of the authoritie of the Synod. Thus farre Damaſus. To conclude, Iuſtinian in the Imperiall lawes, col. 9. tit. 6. c. 22. appointeth, that the laſt appeale bee made to the Patriarcke of the Dioceſſe.

13 In England appeales were prohibited till Henry the 2. of whome, and whoſe times, Matthew Paris in his Chronicle or hiſtory, in Henrico. 11. ann. 1164. ſaith thus; Concerning appeales, if they fall out, they muſt bee made from the Arch-deacon to the Biſhop, &c. and laſtly, they muſt come to the king himſelfe, from and beyond whome, no man may proceede further, without the aſſent of their Lord the King. The ſame was done in France by Lewis the 9. (who was called Lewis the godly) about the yeare 1278. in that edict (called the Pragmaticall ſanction) of S. Lewes: The words are theſe: We will not by any meanes that thoſe heauie actions, and huge ſummes of money bee leuied or collected, which the Court of Rome hath impoſed, or which hereafter it may impoſe vpon the Church of our kingdome, it beeing a meanes whereby our kingdome is miſerably impoueriſhed. Nor will wee that any ſuch ſummes be leuied at all, but onely vpon a moſt reaſonable, godly, and vrgent cauſe, or els vpon ſome ineuitable neceſſitie, and that alſo to be vpon our willing aſſent, & expreſſe commaundement, together alſo with the voluntarie conſent of our Church in this kingdome. The ſame was alſo afterward done by Philip the faire, about the yeare 1296. and afterward by Charles the fifth ſurnamed the wiſe, and after by Charles the ſixt, as Aimonius reporteth, de geſtis Francorum l. 5. c. 25.

Further, Hildebertus thus writeth to Honorius. It hath not beene heard on this ſide the Alpes, that all maner of appeales ſhould thus be receiued and maintained in the Court of Rome, neither doe wee finde it deliuered as a tradition from the holy and auncient ordinances. But if ſuch nouelty as this haue ſprung vp, that you will accept indifferently of euery appeale, ſurely the pontificall authoty and cenſure will come to nought, and all force of Eccleſiaſticall diſcipline will vtterly be daſht and broken in pieces. What Prieſt or Clergie man, if hee be wickedly diſpoſed will not doe any miſchiefe, in hope to haue releife by theſe defrauding appeales, and ſo will they lie as it were buried in the filth of their ſinnes? and what Biſhop ſhall haue in readineſſe any power at all to puniſh (not all as indeede he ſhould) but any diſobedience at all, if this may be admitted?

14 In the Councell of Nice the cuſtome and faſhion of the Church of Rome was made equall to others, and no way ſuperiour, namely, that as the Biſhop of Rome hath a power ouer all his Biſhops, that is, all in his Prouince; ſo by the ſame cuſtome the Biſhop of Alexandria ſhall haue ouer the Biſhops of Egypt: for in the authoritie of Patriarks the auncient cuſtome muſt be obſerued: 9. q. 3. Conqueſtus: To this purpoſe are the words of the Councell, as Cuſanus himſelfe a Papiſt takes them, l. 2. de concor. cath. c. 12. And euen ſo doth Ruffinus an auncient writer expound the Councels meaning in his hiſtorie, lib. 10. cap. 6. and ſo doth Theodorus Balſamon, in his explication of theſe Canons, and alſo Nilus in his booke of the Primacie.

15 The Popes temporall Iuriſdiction and dominion was partly ſnatcht by violence, partly ſtolne by fraud, and partly grew by other mens liberalities and donations: and by theſe meanes it grew vp to that intollerable height it was of late. Vrſpergenſis himſelf a Popiſh Chronicler, reporteth that in the yeare 753. Pope Stephen beſought King Pipin of helpe againſt the King of Lumbardie, and King Pipin came with his armie into Italie, and beſieged him in Papia, and compelled him by the ſtraightneſſe of his ſiege to performe what afore he had promiſed, and ſo hauing receiued of him Rauenna, & Pentapolis, with the whole Exarchie belonging to Rauenna, he gaue them to S. Peter, and hauing thus diſpatched theſe matters hee returned into France. And againe ſpeaking of the yeare, 1228. he ſaith; In the ſame yeare & the yeare following, there was a treatie of peace betwixt the Emperour and the Souldan, and their countries: But the Pope taking the opportunitie of the Emperours abſence, had ſent a ſtrong army into Apulcia, & tooke by plaine force (a moſt horrible thing to report) the lands of the Emperour beeing then in the warre and ſeruice of Chriſt, and the Church, and hauing ſubdued them to himſelfe, and ſigned them with the Croſſe, he prohibited by all meanes, both them in Apulcia and in Lumbardie, that they ſhould paſſe ouer the ſea: who is it that rightly conſidering ſuch facts as this, doth not deplore & deteſt them as being tokens portending and forerunning the ruine of the Church? And a little after. Whilſt theſe things were thus a doing, in the parts beyond the ſeas, the Pope with his complices, as men reported, made a rumour to be raiſed and diuulged ouer all Apulcia, that the Emperour was dead, whereupon ſuch ſtrong Cities as had yet reſerued themſelues for the Emperour (which for their ſtrength the Pope could not ſo eaſily ſubdue) did now prepare to diſpoſe and yeeld themſelues to the Popes dominion, and moſt cruelly and wickedly to kill all the Almaines returning from the holy land, and abiding in Apulcia. Otto Friſingenſis lib. 7. in præfatione tels vs; that no man doubts but the Church was exalted and inriched by the ſtrength of kingdomes, and beneficence of Kings, and that it is apparent, that the Church could not ſo farre bring vnder the ſtate and ſtrength of kingdomes, or the ciuill ſtate, vntill the ciuill ſtate, for the loue and honour it bare to Prieſthood, had as it were vnbowelled it ſelfe, and exhauſted all it owne ſtrength: and ſo the Ciuill ſtate of the kingdome ſaith hee, ruined and fell, ſmitten not onely with the ſpirituall ſword of the Church, but eſpecially by it owne, namely, with the materiall ſword. Thus farre Otto. Auguſtinus Stenchus, l. 2. writing againſt Valla touching the donation of Conſtantine, hath theſe words: Gregory the third excommunicated Leo the Emperour; & ſo withdrew Rome and Italy from his Empire, abſoluing al their ſubiects from their oth and fealty of obedience. And that confeſſion of Bellarmine is notable, in his 5. booke of the Biſhop of Rome, c. 4. where hee ſaith, Chriſt as he was man, whileſt he liued on the earth, accepted not, nor would haue any temporall Lordſhip or dominiō: now the Biſhop of Rome is Chriſts Vickar, and repreſents Chriſt vnto vs, as hee was when hee liued here amongſt men on earth; therefore the Biſhop of Rome as beeing Chriſts Vickar, and conſequently as Biſhop of Rome, or as higheſt Biſhop, hath no temporall dominion nor authoritie: But Bellarmine, whether checked for this ſpeech, or vpon more conſideration thinking hee had gone too neere the truth, in his laſt edition ſeemes to recant this, or at leaſt to mitigate it; for thus he corrects it: Therefore the chiefe Biſhop as Chriſts Vickar, and conſequently as chiefe Biſhop, hath no authoritie or dominion meerely temporall ouer any City or Prouince.

16 The Engliſh Nation for 1000. yeares after Chriſt, were not ſubiect to the Popes authority in cauſes Eccleſiaſticall. Thom. Becket the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury was the firſt that durſt offer to caſt off or refuſe the Kings authority in cauſes ſpirituall, he indeed denied his obedience to the King, further then with this condition, Saluo ordine ſuo, ſauing alwaies his owne order: & by this meanes hee infringed the liberties of the Engliſh Church. Anſelmus Archbiſhop of Canterbury, long afore Becket in his Epiſtle to Pope Paſchal, ep. 36. ſaith; The King would not ſuffer the Popes Nuntio, or Apoſtolicall Legate to be receiued into England, without his leaue and expreſſe commandement, neither would ſuffer me to write or ſend any letters to him, nor to receiue any ſent from him, nor to obey any of his decrees. And a little after: In all theſe, and in matters of like nature, if I asked counſell of others what I might doe, all the ſubiects of that Kingdome, yea euen my owne Suffragane Biſhops, denied to yeeld me any aduiſe or aſſiſtance, but according to the will and pleaſure of the king. Matthew Paris in his ſtory of Henry the 1. reporteth that William the King of England Proctor or Agent at Rome, confidently alleadged amongſt other things before the Pope, that the King his Maſter, Henry of England, would not, (no not for the loſſe of his kingdome) loſe the right of preſenting to his Churches: and this he boldly affirmed, and vrged it with great and threatning words. The ſame Author in his ſtory of Henry the ſecond about the yeare 1164 amongſt many other cuſtomes and liberties of the former Kings of England, recounteth this for one. Concerning the Aduouſons or Patronages of Churches, or preſentations to Benefices, if there ariſe any queſtion either amongſt lay men, or betwixt laymen and Clerks, or betwixt Clerks themſelues: it ſhall be heard, debated, and determined, in the Court of our Lord the King. And in the ſame place in the Kings Letters to his Iuſtices, he ſaith: Let no man appeale either to the Pope, or to Thomas the Archbiſhop, neither let any Plea be holden at their commaundement, neither let any mandate or commandement of theirs be receiued within England, and if any man either receiue, or retaine, or haue any thing to doe with any ſuch, commandement, let him bee apprehended and ſafely kept. Indeede King Iohn did homage to Pope Innocent, reſigning vp his Crowne and kingdome to the Church of Rome, but for his ſo doing all the Barons of his kindome oppoſe themſelues againſt him, and chuſe for their King, Lewis the King of France, as Matthew Paris reporteth in his ſtorie of King Iohn. And Ieffrey of Monmouth reporteth in his hiſtorie, l. 11. c. 12. that the Engliſh Churches, being well conſtituted and excellently ordered, would not bee ſubiect to Auguſtine the Popes Legate, in the yeare, 600. Indeed England made it ſelfe tributary to the Pope, by taxing euery houſe at a piece of ſiluer to bee paid to the Pope: and this was firſt begun about the yeare 847. But the inueſtitures of Biſhops, and authority to receiue appeales, the Pope obtained not, till Henry the ſecond, much againſt his will was brought to ſubiect himſelfe, and his kingdome to the Court of Rome, which was done 300. yeares after, namely, about the yeare 1172. Therefore the decretall Epiſtle of Adrian the 4. to Thomas the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury. (which is to bee found in the Popes decretals) lib, 3. tit. 30. cap. Commiſſum, is but a baſtard: for the Pope had no dominion nor power at all in matters ſpirituall, ouer the Engliſh Church, but after Thomas was dead. And of no better ſtuffe is that other decretall of Alexander the 3. vnto the Arch-biſhop of Yorke, (which is alſo there extant in the decretall,) l. 2. tit. 16. c. à memoria: for there hee ſaith, that Honorius his Predeceſſor by his Apoſtolicall authoritie granted a certaine priuiledge to the Arch-biſhop of Yorke, ouer whom as yet he had no power nor authority.

17 The Pope hath not a determining Iudgement infallible, more plainely, he hath no power to Iudge or determine, ſo as hee cannot erre: ſo taught all that euer wrote of it for 1400. yeares: yea euen Papiſts themſelues. The auncient Fathers as well Greeke as Latine did hold and cenſure Honorius the 1. to be a Monothelite heretike, that is, one who held that Chriſt had one will onely. So doth alſo the ſixt generall Councell, Act. 12, 13. 18. where he is condemned by the name of an heretike, and his Epiſtles burnt. The ſecond Councell of Nice act. vlt. doth curſe or layeth Anathema on Honorius. So doth alſo the eight Synod of Conſtantinople, Act. 7. And Leo the 2. in his Epiſtle to the Emperour at the end of the Councel: and Tharaſius in his Epiſtle to the Patriarkes, which is to be ſeene in the 3. Acte of the ſeauenth Synod. And Pſellus in his Poeme of the ſeauen Synods. And Epiphanius the Deacon in his diſputation with Gregorie the heretike, which alſo is extant in the 6. Acte of the ſeauenth Synod. And Bede in his booke of the ſixe ages of the world, about the yeare 4639. And the Pontificall it ſelfe in the life of Leo the 2. And Anaſtaſius the keeper of the Popes Librarie in the life of the ſame Leo the 2. And ſuppoſe that all theſe ſo many Councells and Fathers were deceiued in theſe their reports and teſtimonies, by taking it from the 6. generall Synod, whoſe decree in that point ſuppoſe alſo to be corrupted, notwithſtanding it followeth, that all the ſaid Fathers and Councells, affirming Honorius to bee an heretike, did therefore vndoubtedly beleeue that the Pope, euen as he is Pope, might erre. But to put this matter out of all queſtion, that they thought ſo of him, looke the Epiſtle of Leo the 2. to Conſtantine, at the end of the Councell, wherein he doth execrate and curſe Honorius, as not hauing illuſtrated the Apoſtolicall Church with Apoſtolicall doctrine, but rather had defiled it with his hereſie. And the 6. generall Councell Act. 13. doth curſe the ſaid Honorius by the name of Pope of old Rome, for his decretall Epiſtle which he had ſet fourth: nay euen Gratian himſelfe the compiler of the decrees, d. 40. c. Si Papa. takes it as a thing granted, that the Pope may erre from the faith. And Robert Groſted an auncient Biſhop of Lincolne ſaith, that the Pope may be an heretike, and Antichriſt, and he addeth further, that the Decretall ſaith, that vpon ſuch a fault as hereſie is, the Pope may and ought to bee accuſed. Thus reporteth Matthew Paris in his ſtory of Henry the 3. about the yeare 1253. Lyra on the 16. of Saint Matthew ſaith, that many principall & chiefe Biſhops haue beene found to haue bene apoſtataes from the faith. Gerſhon (in his treatiſe intituled, whether it bee lawfull to appeale from the Pope in matters of faith,) ſaith, that as well the Pope, as a Biſhop, may erre from the faith, and is therefore inferiour to a Councel. Antoninus in his ſumme, par.3.tit.22. c.4.§.3. ſaith, that it is lawfull and reaſonable that the Pope ſhould ipſo facto, be depoſed for hereſie: Panormitan a great Canoniſt, de Elect. §.ſignificaſti. ſaith, that the Councell may depoſe the Pope for hereſie, and alleadgeth a chapter * out of the Canon law for it, where it is ſaid that the Pope may be an heretike, and be iudged for hereſie. Yea further (ſaith Panormitane) in matters concerning faith, the word or affirmation of one priuate man, is to be preferred before the Popes, if he ſpeake vpon better grounds out of the old and new Teſtament then the Pope doth. The Councell of Conſtance, ſeſſ.37. calleth Pope Benedict a ſchiſmatike, and an heretike, and ſuch a one as hath erred from the faith, and not much otherwiſe ſpeake they of Iohn. the 23. in the 11. ſeſſion of the ſame Councell. The Councell of Baſil in the 3. of their Synodall Epiſtles, hath words to this effect, The holy Church is indowed of Chriſt our Sauiour with ſuch priuiledges that we beleeue firmely ſhe cannot erre: and beſide the Church, we do not reade that any other (ordinarily) had at any time the ſame or ſo great a gift giuen vnto the, to no Angels, to no men, to no Popes or chiefe Biſhops, whereof many are reported, (and ſo alſo we reade) that they haue fallen into errours and hereſies. And AEneas Syluius after he was Pope himſelfe, relating the acts of the Councell of Baſil, ſaith, that the opinion of ſuch as hold that Councels may not bee called without the Popes conſent, if it may ſtand, will bring with it the very ruine of the Church: for (ſaith he) if that may be ſo, what remedy or helpe will there be, if a ſcandalous Pope, or one whoſe life is tainted with foule crimes doe trouble the Church, if he deſtroy ſoules, &c, if he ſet forth doctrines contrarie to the faith, and inſtill hereticall opinions into their minds that are vnder him. Catharinus a great Papiſt in his Commentaries on the 2. to the Galathians ſaith, There is nothing againſt it, but that the Pope may erre, yea euen in faith, and fall from it, howſoeuer certaine late Writers and young vpſtarts haue preſumed to defend the contrary, contrarie to the common and auncient opinion of the Doctors. Alphonſus de Caſtro in his firſt booke againſt hereſies, cap.2. ſaith, The Pope by himſelfe without the aſſembly and aſſiſtance of a Councell, may erre euen in ſuch things as belong to faith, by the opinion of many Diuines of great authoritie, who haue ſo affirmed and taught. Yea it is found by experience, that diuers Popes haue erred in the faith. And in the 4. chapter of the ſame booke, Euery man may erre in faith although he be the Pope himſelfe: for Platina reporteth of Liberius the Pope, that hee held with the Arrians. And to conclude, this truth is ſo cleare, that Bellarmine himſelfe, de Ro. Pont. lib.4. cap.9. confeſſeth, that Liberius the Pope did after a ſort, namely, in his mind and iudgement, conſent to the Arrian hereſie, inaſmuch as he ſuffered Athanaſius to bee condemned, whom he knew to be perſecuted for that cauſe of faith onely, & becauſe hee communicated with Valens and Vrſatius that were Arrians, for which cauſe he was put from the Popedome by the Clergy of Rome.

Cap.ſi papa diſt.40.

18 Touching Antichriſt the eldeſt Fathers held no certainty, becauſe he was not as then reueiled, therefore they bring coniectures: yet ſometime they doe as good as ſay, that he is to be found in the Romane church. Chryſoſtome vpon the 2. to the Theſ.2. Hom.4. directly affirmeth, that Antichriſt is to ſucceed the Romane Emperour, namely, after that the Empire is taken out of the way. Hilary in his Epiſt. to Auxentius, Ierome vnto Algaſia, queſt.11. and Oecumenius on the 2. Theſ.2. doe all hold that Antichriſt ſhall not ſit in Ieruſalem, but in the Church of God. Abbot Ioachim implieth plaine enough, that the Pope of Rome is the very Antichriſt. Many (ſaith he in his Reuel. lib.10. part.5.) vnder the pretence of Gods ſeate, that is, of the ſea of the vniuerſall church, are become indeed the ſeate of the beaſt, which is the kingdome of Antichriſt, who reigneth euery where in his members from the beginning of the church, and namely in the cleargie, Monkes and Monaſteries. And againe, we haue plainly taught and deliuered, that Rome in the ſpirit is Babylon. And a little after: The merchants of the earth (ſpoken of in the Reuelation) are the Prieſts themſelues, who ſell prayers and maſſes for money, making the houſe of prayer a ſhop of merchandiſe. And againe: We ſee that not onely many Biſhops and cleargie men are enſnared in the buſineſſes of Babylon, to make themſelues rich thereby, but euen many Abbots, and Monkes, and religious perſons: and yet why doe I call them religious? for they are not ſo, but ſeeme to be. Otto Friſingenſis in his Chronicle, lib.7. cap.3. ſaith, There ſhineth a certaine reſemblance betwixt Babylon and Rome, inaſmuch as that which here with vs in the city of Rome, is giuen to the Pope our chiefe Biſhop by the Chriſtian Emperours, the very ſame is there by the Pagan kings of Perſia (to whome for a long time Babylon hath bene ſubiect) granted vnto their high Prieſt: and the kings of Perſia themſelues leauing the Imperiall citie, as our Emperours make their ſeate at Aquiſgraue, &c. So they at Ecbatane, and ſo tranſlating the ſeate of the kingdome, they held nothing of Babylon for themſelues, but the bare name of an Empire. And againe, l.8. c.2. Some (ſaith he) doe interpret this departure ſpoken of in the Theſ. and that whereof the Apoſtle ſaith, [that which withholdeth, will withhold vntill it bee taken out of the way,] and doe referre it to the kingdome or Empire: and thereupon they alſo ſay, that the Apoſtle purpoſely deliuered his meaning vnder this couering and obſcurity of words, leſt hee might ſeeme to ſlander by this preſage, or weaken the ſtate of the Romane Empire, which to the Stateſmen and Emperors of thoſe daies, was thought ſo ſure, that it ſhould neuer haue an end, & to that purpoſe (ſay they) it was, that the Apoſt. ſaid, [& what withholdeth, you know,] as deſcribing it, and yet not naming it. To conclude, Auentinus the Chronicler, lib. 5. & 7. affirmeth, that the moſt both of the Princes & Biſhops of Germany and of Italy held and proclaimed Gregory the 7. and Iohn the 22. plaine Antichriſts and no better.

19 The monarchicall or ſoueraigne authoritie of the Pope of Rome ouer the Church and generall Councels, was of many men euer reproued and condemned, and was not allowed, nor admitted of the Church till very lately, namely, after the yeare 1500. Krantzius a Germane hiſtoriographer in his Metropolis l. 7. c. 45. ſpeaking of the yeare about 1240. In thoſe daies (ſaith he) there needed not any Apoſtolicall confirmation from the Pope, it was ſufficient that the election was approoued by the Arch-biſhop: but now the Church of Rome hath drawne to her ſelfe al the rights, honours, and priuiledges of other Churches. Heare a Frenchman, Duarenus in his 5. booke of Eccleſiaſticall liuings, c. 3. who ſaith thus: In the Apoſtles times whenſoeuer as any were to bee ordained either Biſhop or Deacon, or any thing els of what nature ſoeuer, was to bee conſidered and determined, which concerned the Church, S. Peter did neuer arrogate nor take it vpon himſelfe, but permitted and put the matter to the whole Church: the moſt that he did was this, that as beeing a principall Apoſtle he vſed to aſſemble or call together the reſt, and to them ſo aſſembled to make a ſpeech, declaring the cauſe of their aſſembling, and the particular affaires that were to be handled: euen as with vs at this day (here in France) he that is the Preſident of the Court of Parlament calles together the whole Senate, and ſpeaking firſt in the aſſembly, &c. Neither for all this is he greater or ſuperiour then the whole Court, neither hath he any iuriſdiction or eminency of power ouer the whole Parlament, neither may he iudge or determine any thing againſt their iudgements and opinions, &c. Thus indeede ſtood the caſe in times paſt. But I know not how it is now come to paſſe, that ſupreme and ſoueraigne power ouer all Chriſtians is aſcribed to one: and that he ſhall be (euen like an Emperour) free, exempted and diſcharged from all lawes, edicts, canons, & ſynodall conſtitutions. For Pope Paſchall in a decretall Epiſtle hath expreſly taken order or decreed, that no Councels may preſcribe or cõmand the church of Rome, nor make any law to binde the Romane church: and they brought the matter to that paſſe, that in diuers ſynodal decrees or canons of Councels the authority of the Romane Biſhop is excepted and prouided for. Glaber Rodulphus in his hiſtories l. 2. c. 4. reporteth, that one Fulco erected a goodly church in a village about Tours, and hauing finiſhed the whole worke, he ſent to Hugh the then Arch-biſhop of Tours, that hee would come & conſecrate the church hee had built: but the Archb. prolonged his comming, and made no great haſt to do it, for that Fulco had taken from the church diuers lands & Lordſhips. Fulco therefore, ſeeing himſelfe ſo anſwered by the Archb. furniſhed himſelfe with a great maſſe of gold and ſiluer, went ſtraight to Rome to Pope Iohn that then was, and with great complaint laid open the matter before him, who forthwith ſent one of thoſe whome they call Cardinals, with the ſaid Fulco to conſecrate the foreſaid church, and gaue the ſaid Cardinall in ſtreit charge & commandemẽt, that he ſhold there take vpon him the authority of the Biſhop of Rome, & by him, & vnder that authoritie, without feare or delay performe whatſoeuer the ſaid Fulco thought expedient to be done touching the premiſes: which when the reſt of the Biſhops and prelats of France did heare of, they knew well enough, that this ſacrilegious preſumption proceeded from blind & filthy couetouſnes, to wit, that while one would ſteale, and another receiue, amongſt them they brought it to paſſe, that a madde ſchiſme and diuiſion was riſen in the Romiſh church. All of them therefore together diſliked and deteſted this dealing of the Romiſh biſhop, iudging it a very vnworthy and vnſeemely thing, that hee who tooke vpon him to gouerne the Apoſtolicall ſeate, ſhould firſt of al himſelfe tranſgreſſe the tenour and rule of Apoſtolicall order, and of the auncient Canons, eſpecially it beeing a thing notorious, and confirmed with manifold authorities of antiquity, that no Biſhop preſume to exerciſe any authority within another mans Dioceſſe, vnleſſe the Biſhop of that Dioceſſe doe either vrge him to it, or giue him leaue to do it, &c. For although the Biſhop of the Romiſh church, in reſpect of the dignity of the Apoſtolicall ſeate, be eſteemed of more reuerently then the Biſhops of the other ſeats, which are conſtituted in the world, yet may not he, for all that, tranſgreſſe the order eſtabliſhed by the Canons, but in euery thing, is to be ruled by them as others are: for as euery Biſhop of the true and Orthodoxall Church, beeing as it were the husband of his proper and peculiar flocke, doth beare the perſõ of our Sauior in that charge, as well as any one doth, ſo it cannot poſſibly belong to any one, to intermeddle preſumptuouſly in another Biſhops Dioceſſe: thus farre Rodulphus. All which is ſo much the more remarkable, ſeeing theſe things were ſaid and done, not of late, but aboue 600. yeares agoe, namely, about the yeare after Chriſt 1000. Cuſanus in his 2. booke of Catholike concord, c. 13. ſaith, That the Dioceſſes are diſtinct, and one Biſhop is ſet ouer

In pago Turonico.

many

A many paſtours for the conſeruing of vnity, that is,ſaith he,of a poſitiue law,and humane conſtitution. And againe: The Pope is not the vniuerſall Biſhop, but the firſt aboue or among others. And we do build and found (ſaith he) the vigor of holy Councels, not in the Pope, but in the conſent of all. And againe,in the 20.chapter. It is cleare(ſaith he) that Pope Leo, in certaine points did neuer receiue, nor allow the conſtitutions of the Councell of Chalcedon (as for one eſpecially, that the Church or Sea of Conſtantinople ſhould haue the precedence before that of Alexandria,) but he alwaies ſpake againſt them, as alſo did ſome others after him, and B yet for all that the decree of the Councell e-uer tooke place. But if the Pope had it in his power to bee able to abrogate or nullifie the decrees concluded by generall Councels, certenly Pope Leo,or ſome of his ſucceſſours, would haue preuailed in this point, which it is apparent they did not,as I ſaid afore. And a litle after: Though Pope Leo oppoſed him-ſelfe mightily againſt 3.chapters or conſtitutions of the Chalcedon Councell,&c.yet hee made not this reſiſtance out of his owne authority onely,but by and from the authority of the Nicene Councell. And againe, in the 34.chapter. An vniuerſall Councell of the Catholike Church hath the ſoueraigne,moſt
C abſolute,and higheſt power in all things, yea euen ouer the Biſhop of Rome. And in the ſame booke and 12.chapter,We ſee (ſaith he) how far the Biſhop of Rome is gone,or how much hee hath encroched beyond the holy and ancient obſeruations,out of the cuſtome and practiſe of ſubiectionall obedience. In the yeare 1337.all the Prelats and Princes of Almaign concluded and agreed on this, that a Councell is aboue the Pope in matters of faith and ſtate, and therfore that the appeale from the Pope to the Councell was good.
Thus reporteth Nauclerus,generat.45. And as for this abſolute, ſoueraigne, and indeter-mined power of the Pope,it was firſt of al ap-prooued & granted in the 2.Councell of La-D teran, in the time of Leo the 10. within theſe 100.yeares,namely,about the yeare 1516.

Of Buls, or Indulgences.

1 THeſe Indulgentiall Buls of the Romane Biſhop, wherein is giuen abſolution from the guilt of tēporal puniſhment, by application of the merits of Chriſt, & of the Saints, were not known to the Catholike church for 1000.yeares & more after Chriſt. Alexan. the 3. who began to ſit at Rome about the yeare 1159. in an Epiſtle to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, thus writeth, as is yet extant to be ſeene in the Popes owne decretals, *l.5.tit.*38.*c.*4. And for the point wherein you demanded my counſell, whether the remiſſions which are wont to be made at dedicatiōs of Churches, or to ſuch as contribute to the building of bridges, bee auaileable to any other then thoſe who be of the pariſh and dioceſſe of thoſe that grant them, we would haue your brotherhood to know thus much, that ſeeing no man can either be bound,or abſolued of him that is not his proper Iudge, wee therefore are of opinion,that the foreſaid remiſſiōs are profitable only to thoſe,to whom & whoſe good their owne proper Iudges that graunted them, did ſpecially intend them. Theſe be his words. And hēce I gather theſe concluſions, 1. that it then pertained to al Biſhops, to giue and grant Indulgences or remiſſions. 2. That theſe Indulgences were skarce known in thoſe daies of Pope Alexan. which appeares thus: in that the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, held it a matter ſo rare & difficult, that he ſent to Rome to know the vertue & valor of them, and to whom they were eſpecially auaileable: whereupon it is cleere, that euē the great Maſters & Prelats of England, were but litle or not acquainted with them: although ſome 60.yeares before, Pope Vrban the 2. granted to them that vndertook a Pilgrimage to the holy land, about the yere 1095. releaſement of all penances for their ſins,(as Nauclerus hath it, *gen.*37.) or as Mat. Paris in Willielmo II. ſaith; hee granted them pardon of all their ſinnes, and in the retribution of the Iuſt at the laſt day, he promiſed thē an increaſe of glory. Out of the Councell of Laterane vnder Innocent the 3. *can.*62. it appeareth that al Biſhops, had authority to giue Indulgences. And as for the great Indulgences of the yeare of Iubile, they came in practiſe ſome 300. yeares agoe, viz. about the yeare 1300. as Platina reports in the life of Bonif. the 8. And that theſe kinde of Indulgences were not knowne in the Primitiue Church, Roff. himſelfe, (that is, our owne countryman, Fiſher the biſhop of Rocheſter) confeſſeth in his book againſt Luther, art. 18. I anſwer (ſaith hee) that it is not ſufficiently manifeſt, by whom theſe Indulgences were firſt giuen out. And concerning Purgatory he ſaith: there is very little or no mention at all among the ancient Fathers of it. But after the ſame Purgatory begā to feare the world, and men trembled at the torments thereof, then Indulgences began to be in requeſt. Durandus alſo thus ſaith concerning Indulgēces, in his commentaries on the ſentences lib.4. d.20.*q.*3. Little can be ſaid of them, with any certainty, foraſmuch as the ſcripture ſpeakes nothing at al expreſly of thē: As for the holy Fathers, namely, Ambroſe, Hilary, Auguſtine, Ierome, there is not a word to be found in thē that toucheth Indulgences. Alphonſus de Caſtro vpon this matter, *li.*8. ſaith: Amongſt all the queſtiōs or points which we diſpute of in this book, there is none at all, which hath ſo little footing in the holy Scriptures, and whereof the auncient Fathers haue ſpoken leſſe.

2 For the ſpace of a thouſand yeares after Chriſt, the Indulgences (that were) were relaxations or releaſements of Canonicall ſatiſfaction, that is, of the diſcipline or correction of the Church: but they were not ordained, nor vſed as ſatiſfactions before God for temporall puniſhment: and the Fathers and Councels ſpeaking thereof, are thus to be vnderſtood, as namely, the I. Nicene, c. 11. the II. at Arles, c. 10. that at Ancyra, c. 2. Sometime alſo they be declarations of the forgiueneſſe or remiſſion of ſinnes, and in this ſenſe the word Indulgences is often taken: for in the letters of Indulgences, we may reade that abſolution is granted, ſometime from the fault and puniſhment both together, & pardon of all ſin, ſometime the halfe, ſomtime the third part of their ſinnes: ſuch were the Indulgences granted within a 1000. yeres after Chriſt, by Gregory the 1. Leo the 3. Sergius the 2. And it is worth the obſeruing, that in the writings of Burchardus, and Gratianus, there is nothing to be found concerning Indulgences: No nor in Peter Lumbard, who liued about the yeare 1150.

3 In auncient times, the Indulgences, remitted 3. or 7. or more yeares of Penance, becauſe ſo many or more yeares were ſet down, wherein the penitents were to giue full ſatiſfaction to the church of the ſincerity of their repentance. Now after the ſame manner Indulgences are graunted for certaine yeares: but in the other point they are fallen farre from the iuſt ſeuerity of the ancient Church, for penances are not enioyned for certaine yeares.

4 The ancient Fathers do not teach that Indulgences were profitable to the dead: and no leſſe is both auouched and taught by Biel, lect. 57. vpon the Canon of the Maſſe, and by Hoſtienſis in his ſumme, l. 5. tit. de remiſ. nu. 6. two famous Papiſts.

5 The power of looſing and binding in the Church, or which the Church hath, is not proper, but is exerciſed onely by declaring or publiſhing that it is ſo: ſo ſaith Hierome, lib. 3. Comment. in Mat. on thoſe words: To thee wil I giue the keyes, &c. Prieſts haue no power of binding or looſing, but to ſhew and declare that ſinners bee bound or looſed. Radulphus Ardens, about the yeare 1050. in Dominic. 1. poſt. Paſc. ſaith; In what authority muſt Prieſts abſolue? not in their owne, but in Gods: for the power to remit or releaſe ſinnes, is onely Gods: but the Miniſtery of it (which alſo we ſometime improperly call a power) hee hath granted to his Vickars or deputies on earth, who after their manner, or in a ſort, do binde, and looſe, that is, ſhew & declare them bound or abſolued. Hugo the Cardinall on the ſame place of S. Matthew, ſaith; As for the bond of ſinne or guilt and due penance, the Prieſt neither can binde a man in it, nor looſe a man A from it, but only ſhew and declare that a man is bound and looſed: as the leuiticall Prieſt, neither made a man a leaper, nor healed him beeing a leaper, but only or pronounced that hee was polluted or healed. Durandus vpon the ſentences ſaith, that the power of the keyes worketh nothing to the forgiueneſſe or taking away of the fault or blotte of mortall ſinne.

6 The treaſure of the Church is ſuppoſed to conſiſt in the merits of Chriſt and the Saints, the diſpoſing and diſpenſing whereof is committed to the Pope, was altogether vnknowne in the Church of God for many ages after Chriſt. For the auncient Fathers neuer ſaid nor ſignified, wrote nor imagined B that Indulgences were giuen out of the treaſure of ſatiſfactions. Franciſcus de Mayrone, in 4. d. 19. q. 2. and Durand. in 4. d. 20. q. 3. do both of thẽ teach, that the treaſure of the Church doth not conſiſt vpon the merits of Saints. Angelus their great Lawyer hath theſe words vpon the matter of Indulgences, par. 9. The cõmon opiniõ that is holden both by diuines and Canoniſts, is, that Indulgences ariſe from the abundance of merits which Chriſt & the Saints haue performed beyond the meaſure of their owne demerits. But I holde for my part with Franciſcus de Mayrone, that whereas the merits of Saints are already rewarded of God beyond their deſert, and thereby are exhauſt, therfore they come from the merits of C Chriſt alone and his paſſion.

Of the Power of Kings.

1 THe Pope of Rome was ſubiect to the Emperour, or to the Imperiall lawes in al matters or cauſes (as they ſay) concerning perſons and things eccleſiaſticall, for at leaſt 850. yeares after Chriſt. Tertull. ad Scapulam, ſaith, We honour the Emperour, &c. as a man next to God, and inferiour onely to God. Optatus contra Parme. libro tertio. D There is none aboue the Emperour, but onely God, who made the Emperour. Leo in his Epiſtle to the Emperour, epiſtol. 59. Becauſe wee are by all meanes to obey your godly authoritie, and your religious will, I haue therefore willingly yeelded my opinion and conſent to the ſynodall conſtitutions concerning the confirmation of the Catholike faith, and damnation of herétickes, which did very much like mee. Gregorie in an Epiſtle to the Emperour, Epiſtol. libro 2. capite 100. I (ſaith he) being ſubiect to your commaund, haue cauſed that your law or edict to bee ſent and publiſhed in diuers parts of the world. And afterward: I haue yeelded obedience to the Emperour, and yet haue I not holden my tongue in the cauſe of God,but haue ſpokē what I thoght. And l.4.c.76. I for my part do perform obediēce to the princely commandement of his Highnes. *Nauclerus,generat.*23.of his Chronography,ſpeaking of the yeare 605.or thereabouts,ſaith, Conſtantine the Emperour,conceiuing a great opinion of the holines of Benedict,made a decree and ſent it to him,granting thereby,that hereafter whomſoeuer the Romane Clergie,people, & ſouldiers ſhould chuſe for their Pope,al men ſhould forthwith eſteem and take him for Chriſts true Vikar, without waiting for any further authority or allowance,either from the Emperour of Conſtant. or the Prince of Italy:for till that time, it was vſuall & approued, that when a new Biſhop of Rome was to bee created,either the Prince himſelfe, or elſe his Leiutenant of Italy,did confirme him. Sigonius in his 4,book of the kingdome of Italy, ſaith, Charles the great challenged to himſelfe the kingdom of Italy, as being his owne by Victory & Conqueſt. The Exarchy of Rauenna,Pentapolis,the Dukedomes of Peruſia,Romania,Tuſcia,& Campania,he permitted to the Pope,yet reſeruing to himſelfe the right,principality, and dominion,the reſt he retained to himſelfe in name of the kingdome. And afterward in the 7. booke, about the yeare 973. The Biſhop of Rome held Rome, Rauenna, and ſome other Prouinces,rather by authority,then dominion. For the Cities reſpected the Pope as a Prince of the Country,but the King or Emperour as their ſoueraigne Lord, and vnto him they did their homage, and paid their tributes. Leo the fourth writing to Lotharius the Emperour as is yet to bee ſeene in the Canon law, apud. Grat. diſtinct. 10.capite 9. ſaith, concerning thoſe the Royall commandements, and Imperiall decrees of your Highneſſe, and your Biſhops our predeceſſours, wee promiſe and profeſſe, that by the helpe of Chriſt, as farre as wee were, and are able, wee haue and will inuiolably keepe and obſerue them, and ſo will doe for euer hereafter. Againe,the ſame Leo ſubmitteth himſelfe to bee cenſured by the iudgement of the Emperour, and his Commiſſioners, or Delegates ſent from him to that purpoſe, as may appeare in the Canon law, cauſâ 2. queſt. 7. cap.Nos ſi. To conclude, Bellarmine himſelfe, de Pontif. libro ſecundo, capite 29. yeeldeth, that as long as the Princes of the world were heathen, the Pope was not their Iudge, but contrariwiſe was ſubiect to them in all ciuill cauſes, as well as other men: Well ſaid, Then vpon this I affirme thus: But they loſt nothing either of their power, or honour by becomming Chriſtians, therefore they ought ſtill to haue that ſoueraigntie ouer Biſhoppes in ciuill cauſes.

2 The Pope depoſed not Princes eſpecially the Romane, till a thouſand yeares and more after Chriſt, Hildebrand was the firſt that durſt offer to depoſe the Emperour: ſo teſtifieth Otto Friſingenſis, libro 6. capite 35. I reade (ſaith he) ouer and ouer againe,the ſtories of the Romane Kings and Emperours, and I neuer finde any one of them,to bee excommunicated or depriued of his kingdome by the Biſhop of Rome, before this Henrie the fourth,vnleſſe peraduenture ſome would iudge it an excommunication, that Philip the Emperor was for a litle time placed amongſt the Penitents by the Romane Biſhop; and Theodoſius for that cruel maſſacre and ſlaughter of Chriſtians, was by Ambroſe forbidden for a time to enter the Church. Likewiſe Sigebertus,about the yere 1088.Let me ſay thus much with the leaue of all good men,this nouelty,not to call it an hereſie,was not knowne in the world,as yet,(that is,before Hildebrād, Victor,& Vrban, as he ſaith in the yeare 1111.) that the Clergy ſhould teach the people,that they owe no ſubiection vnto euill kings; and though they haue made them an oth of fealty,yet that they owe no fealty vnto them,and that they are not periured,who in this caſe do holde againſt the King: yea,that he who ſhall obey the King, or ſtand with him, is to bee held for excommunicate, and hee that ſhall take againſt the King,is to be abſolued from all crime of iniuſtice, diſobedience, and periurie. And Onuphrius himſelfe confeſſeth in his booke of the dignities of the Romane Church, that in the time of Alexander the third, the Romane Church was lifted vp to the height of worldly honour, Fredericke the Emperour beeing troden vnder foote. Auentinus in his Coronicles, *lib.7 pag.*684. reporteth that one Eberhardus the Archbiſhop of Iuva, now (called Saltzburgh,) ſpake thus, Hildebrand (ſaith he) about 170.yeares agoe, firſt of all vnder the pretence of religion,laid the foundation of Antichriſts Empire: He firſt of all began that vngodly warre, which by his Succeſſours is hitherto continued. Theſe Popes firſt of all thruſt out the Emperours from their aſſemblies, and tranſlated them vnto the people and the Prieſts, afterward they skorned, and as it were hiſſed out them alſo: and now what intend they but euen to reſtraine vs alſo, and to bring vs into ſlauery,that ſo they may raigne alone? Thus ſaith Eberhardus. And againe,He that is the ſeruant of ſeruants,coueteth to bee the King of Kings,and Lord of Lords, as though hee were God himſelfe,-he ſpeakes huge things, and high matters,as though he were God: He imagineth new deuices continually, and is euery day hammering new things in his head, and that he may erect to himſelf an Empire, and bring all power into his owne hands,hee changeth lawes at his pleaſure, abrogates the olde,and eſtabliſheth his owne; All this doth that man of perdition,whom men vſe to call Antichriſt, in whoſe forehead is written the name of blaſphemie, and in whoſe mouth are theſe words of preſumption, I am God, I cannot erre; he ſitteth in the Temple of God, and domineereth ouer all farre and neere. And Auentinus himſelfe againe, libro 7. pag. 675. reporteth, that the Pope ſent his Buls and Breues to all the Biſhops of Germany, but none of them obey him, therefore hee writes to the* Abbots, and commands them to curſe the Biſhops, but neither will they yeeld vnto him. What doth he then? he ſends to the Prieſts, and commands them to chuſe them new Biſhops, & to the Monkes to chuſe them new Abbots, ſuch as themſelues pleaſed, vnleſſe theſe would yeeld and obey. Euery one was amazed at the ſtrangenes of this courſe, beeing without all former example: nay the like was neuer heard to haue beene attempted; no maruell therefore though this commaundement and embaſſage of his diſpleaſed all that heard it, for in no place had it any acceptance. ——Conrade, the Biſhop of Frieſingen, appealed to the Emperour, and taught openly, that the great Prieſt of Rome had no power in Germany without the conſent of the Biſhops of Germany. Let the Romiſh Prieſt (ſaith he) keepe him at home, and feede his owne Italians, as for vs, though hee holde vs dogges, yet wee are ſuch dogges, as ſeeing God hath conſtituted vs ouer our flockes, we will barke at the Wolues, and will eſpecially keepe ſuch Wolues from our flockes, as ſhroud themſelues vnder ſheepes clothing. But what will this fellow (ſaith he) this vſurping Vickar do to others, and ordinary men, iudge by this, when he dare ſo take vp, and ſo euil intreat vs that are his brethren, and his companions? And againe, the ſame author elſwhere relateth, that Gerochius, who was Gregories aduocate, ſaid thus: the Roman Biſhops vſurp to themſelue diuine honor, refuſe to giue account or yeild a reaſon of their doings, and thinke it vnreaſonable that any man ſhould ſay vnto them, why doe you ſo? In a word, they haue alwaies both in their words and practiſe that of the Poet, Sic volo, ſic iubeo, ſtat pro ratione voluntas. Thus farre Auentinus.

*Monachorum Patribus.

3 The Empire was tranſlated from the Grecians to the Germanes, not by the Popes power, but by the counſell, voice, and decree of the Senate and people of Rome, and the Biſhop of Rome was onely a counſeller or aſſiſtant of this change, or as it were, the Interpreter: For Sigebert in his Chronicle, an. 801. thus writeth; The Romanes hauing long agoe fallen from the Emperour of Conſtantinople in their thoughts and reſolutions, --did now with one conſent chuſe king Charles for their Emperour, giuing him the ſalutation, applauſe, and acclamation of an Emperour, and did crowne him by the hand of Leo their Pope, calling him Cæſar and Auguſtus. Auentine alſo in his hiſtorie, lib. 4. fol. 344. ſaith, that the Biſhop of Rome, what alone? no, but the Biſhop, the Senate, and the people of Rome, decreede to transferre the Empire from the Greekes vnto the Germanes, and that by their owne right, or as beeing a thing in their power to doe, and by a free and quiet choice, gaue it to Charles, with the voices both of the Senate and the people. Yea Æneas Syluius himſelfe, c.9. (afterwards a Pope) ſpeaking of the authority of the Romane Empire, ſaith, that the people of Rome, who with their liues and much blood, had wone to themſelues ſuch an Empire, did alſo with their blood make Charles the great (king of France) the Emperour, together with the conſent of the Romane Biſhop. Nay this point is ſo cleere to all that are not too partiall, that Onuphrius a late and learned Papiſt, ſaith, Charles beeing crowned and conſecrated King of France, in a towne of France called Cariſiaco, by Pope Stephen the ſecond, about the yeare of Chriſt 752. was alſo choſen and ſaluted Emperour of Rome, in the Church of Saint Peter in the Vaticane, by the conſent of the Clergie, Senate, and people of Rome, and was there crowned by Leo the third, in the yeare of our Lord 801. Therfore from theſe it is apparent, that where the hiſtories or Chronicles ſay that Charles was crowned, or annointed, made, called, ordained, or deſigned Emperour by the Pope of Rome, they are to be vnderſtood, not of the power of conferring the authority and iuriſdiction Imperiall, but of the ceremonie of Coronation or Inauguration, and of the publike renunciation, and ſolemne ſignification of the Emperours place, power, and dignity. That alſo which a man ſhall often meet in hiſtories, namely, that Leo gaue or conferred the Empire to Charles, is to bee vnderſtood, that he conſented to them that gaue it. For beſides all before alleadged, euen Adrian the Pope doth confeſſe it in his Epiſtle to Fredericke, to whome hee wrote thus: I doe not beleeue (ſaith hee) that you haue forgotten——how great honour I gaue you, & how carefully and willingly I beſtowed on you the Royall Crowne of the Empire; and I am nothing ſorry for that I haue done, but would much reioyce if I had giuen you farre greater fauours: But after perceiuing the Emperour to be offended at theſe phraſes, and that he would by no means acknowledge his Empire to be the Popes benefit or gift, he therefore expounds himſelfe, and ſaith, by benefit he meanes bonum factum, a good deede: and by conferred or beſtowed, nothing elſe but I put vpon you, or put you into poſſeſſion: for thus hee writeth, I ſaid I conferred or beſtowed on you the Imperiall Crown, becauſe in this word beſtowed or conferred, I meant nothing els, but I ſet it vpon your head, or I crowned you with it. Sigonius ſpeaking of the kingdom of Italy, l.12. writes that Charls obtained the Empire by right of warre, by his owne proweſſe, & at laſt by plaine bargaine and couenant with Irene and Nicephorus. Otto Friſingenſis lib.2. cap.21. reporting the deedes of Fredericke the firſt, writeth that Fredericke thus (amongſt other things) ſpake to the Romane Embaſſadours: Thou boaſteſt (ſaith he) that I was called by thee, that thou firſt madeſt me a Citizen, and then Emperour of Rome, that the honour I haue, was firſt in thee, and that I receiued it from thee, but the noueltie of theſe vnuſuall tearmes, how farre from reaſon, and how void of truth they bee, I leaue it to the venter of thy credit, and the iudgement of the wiſe. Let vs ouerlooke the deedes of the late Emperours, and wee ſhall ſoone finde that thoſe heroicall Princes of ours, Charles and Otho, tooke poſſeſſion of Rome and Italie, and annexed them to the Crowne of France, receiuing them of no mans gift, but euer recouering them by force and valour out of the vſurping hands of the Greekes and Lumbards. If thou doubt of this, thou maieſt ſoone ſee it by Deſiderius & Berengarius (thoſe tyrants of thine) in whom thou diddeſt boaſt, and to whome thou diddeſt truſt as vnto great Princes: For we haue it from vndoubted relation, that they were not only conquered and captiuated by our French nation, but that they euen grew olde, and at laſt ended their daies in that captiuity. And their very aſhes which are laid vp with vs, and which wee keepe to this day, do yeeld vnto vs a moſt euident argument of this truth. But thou wilt ſay vnto mee, thou cameſt hither being called by me? I confeſſe I was called, but tel thou the reaſon why, and the manner how I was called. Thou waſt aſſaulted, and euen beaten by thy enemies; and neither by thine owne power, nor much leſſe by the effeminate Grecians couldeſt thou be deliuered; therefore the French power and proweſſe was thy refuge, vnto them thou fleddeſt, and earneſtly inuited him to thy help: thus was I called: but is not this rather an imploring, then a calling? ſurely I ſhould ſo eſteeme it. For thou didſt not call or inuite me, as not needing me, or being in good caſe to doe me honour, but thou being in miſerie, imploredſt helpe of me being in happineſſe, thou weake, of me being then ſtrong; thou doubtfull, of me being then ſecure. On this manner being called, if this may bee tearmed a calling, I came vnto thee. Thus farre Fredericke in that place. As for the depoſing of Childericke the king of France, it was done by the Peers & people of the land, but the Pope onely deuiſed the way, and gaue counſell how to doe it: to which ende Sabellicus in his Ennead. 8. lib. 8. thus writeth; The Peeres and people of the Kingdome perceiuing and honouring the proweſſe of Pipin, asking aduice firſt of all of Zacharie the Biſhop of Rome, took away the name and title of King from Childericke, and beſtowing it on Pipin, created him their King. Blondus in his Decads 1. lib. 10. I finde (ſaith hee) in Alcuinus, Paulus, and very many other writers, that the nobles and communaltie of the French nation, waighing with wiſedome the valour and vertue of Pipin, and contrariwiſe the childiſhnes and vnworthines of Childericke, conſulted with Zachary thē the Biſhop of Rome, whether they had reaſon any longer to tolerate ſo fooliſh a king, and whether hee held it reaſon that Pipin ſhould bee any longer defrauded, and kept from the poſſeſſion of the royall Crowne, which hee ſo well deſerued: and the Pope anſwering that hee were to bee accounted the King, who knew better, & was better able to diſcharge the dutie of a King, they forthwith by the generall conſent of the whole nation, declared Pipin for their king, and tooke Childericke, & ſhauing his crowne, they put him into a cloyſter. Nauclerus alſo reporteth, almoſt to the very ſame purpoſe, generat. 26.

4 The power of depoſing Kings and Princes, was firſt eſtabliſhed by Innocentius the third, in the Councel of Laterane, about 1215 yeares after Chriſt: and yet as I haue ſhewed, it was often reprooued and ſpoken againſt. To this end ſee Nauclerus in the chronicle of thoſe times, generat. 42. anno 1242. who reporteth theſe words of Fredericke to the king of France, touching the ſentence of depoſition, giuen out againſt him: Although (ſaith he) the Romane Biſhop hath plenarie power in matters ſpirituall, in as much as he can binde and looſe any ſinners at his pleaſure, yet it is no where to bee read, that either by Gods or mans law, hee may tranſlate kingdomes as it pleaſeth him, or iudge and diſpoſe of Kings and Princes temporally, or depriue them of their kingdomes.

5 The Auncients would haue temporall princes debarred from medling in matters eccleſiaſticall, not ſimply and euery way, but in regard firſt of abſolute iudging and determining of holy things: ſecondly, in regard of miniſteriall actions, in reſpect whereof, euen kings themſelues are ſheep of the flocke. But not in regard of the ordering or gouerning of the Church and Miniſtery eccleſiaſticall. In which reſpects they are aboue all perſons and cauſes, euen eccleſiaſticall, within their owne Dominions.

6 The annointing or annoyling of kings, and the Chriſme or oyle with which they were annointed by Prieſts, were not in vſe in the Churches of Greece for 400 yeares and more, as appeares in the Decretals, lib. 1. decret. 15. tit. De ſacra Vnctione, cap. 1. In the Weſterne Church, the firſt that vſed this ceremony, was the Emperor Iuſtine the ſecond. In France, Pipin father of Charles the great, was the firſt that was annointed, and it was done by Boniface Archbiſhop of Mentz.

Cardinals.

1 THe office of Cardinals was common with Prieſts, Biſhops, and Deacons, from the time of the Apoſtles downewards for many hundred yeares: and there was not any office properly belonging to them, till long time after the Apoſtles: the firſt that makes mention of them, is Gregory the Great: for (as Bellarmine himſelfe confeſſeth, de Cler. lib. 1, cap. 16.) in the firſt 800. yeares, the Biſhop of Rome for determining the great & waightieſt affaires of the Church, vſed to call his Councell of the Biſhops of Italy, and for theſe 6, or 700. yeares paſt, they began (by little and little) to lay downe thoſe Epiſcopall Councels, & reduced all buſines to the Conſiſtory of Cardinals, and that the rather, becauſe in the times of Pipin and Charles the Great, there was an acceſſe of much temporall principality vnto that Sea. Further, Nicholas Clemangis, in his bookes of the not paying of Annats, ſaith, that the Cardinals haue of olde a double duty or charge: the firſt, to heare confeſſions, preach and baptize. But the ſecond (ſaith he) they tooke vpon themſelues when the Romane church got wealth, authority, and worldly preheminence.

5 The Cardinals that now are, are foully degenerated from their originall ſtate & firſt condition. Gregorie in his time (600. yeares after Chriſt) ſpeaketh of them as though they were pariſh Prieſts in Rome, or Curates of Churches. And in olde time, all Biſhops whatſoeuer tooke place of any Cardinals, if they were not Biſhops. In the ſixt Councell of Carthage, the Prieſts of Rome ſate after the Biſhops. And in elder ages a Cardinalſhip was but a ſteppe to a Biſhoppricke. See Onuphrius in his book of Cardinals, and Iohn Diaconus, libro primo, capite ſeptimo, in the life of Gregorie.

Therefore the office or place of Cardinals, is not moſt auncient, nor begun in the times of the Apoſtles, and ſince then continued.

Monkes.

1 THe Fathers are very vncertaine of the originall of Monaſticall life. Sometime they referre it to Elias and Elizeus. Elias is our prince (ſaith Hierome, Epiſtol. 13. ad Paulinum) and Elizeus ours, the ſonnes of the Prophets that liue in the Forreſts and Wilderneſſes, are our captaines. Sometime vnto Iohn Baptiſt. Iohn Baptiſt the prince of the Monkes (ſaith Chryſoſtome, Homil. prim. in Marc.) Otherwhile vnto one Paul a Thebane. Amathas and Macarius (ſaith Hierome, in prolog. ad vitam Pauli Heremitæ) the Diſciples of Antonie, doe affirme euen now, that one Paul a Thebane, was the firſt authour thereof, which wee alſo allow of, not ſo much in name, as in opinion. Otherwhile vnto the Apoſtles. The diſcipline of the cloyſterers (ſaith Caſſianus, Collation. 18. cap. quinto,) had the beginning from the time of the A Apoſtles preaching. But Chryſoſtome, Homil. 25. in Hebræos, counteth this for a plaine vntruth, ſaying, that in Pauls time, there was no ſigne nor ſteppe of any Monke. And Hierome ſaith, In vita Hilarionis, that there was no Monke in Syria, before Hilarion, who was the founder of that profeſſion in that Prouince.

2 Monaſticall profeſſion beganne in the Church about the 260. yeares after the Redemption, by Paul a Thebane, or rather about the 300. yeare by Antonie. For the firſt was the firſt patterne of Heremiticall life, and the ſecond was the firſt maſter or teacher thereof. In thoſe daies (ſaith Friſingenſis, libro quarto, cap. quinto,) liued the two moſt B famous Princes of the kingdome of Chriſt, Paul and Antonie, the two firſt Heremites. Nazianzene In Monodia, ſaith, that Baſil firſt inuented Monaſteries, and was the head of the Monkes. And Baſil himſelfe, Epiſtol. 63. ſaith, that the Neo-Cæſarians obiected the nouelty of Monaſticall life againſt him.

3 But as for Cowles, Copes, and other monkiſh habites, as alſo Quire-ſinging, vowed Faſts, choice of meates, and other ſuperſtitions now vſed, theſe were in thoſe daies farre to ſeeke.

4 That which Euſebius, libro ſeccundo, capite decimoſeptimo, and after him Epiphanius, Hereſ. 29. and Hieronimus, De vir. illuſtr. in Marco, doe ſay, namely, that Philo Iudeus, De vita contemplatiua, C ſpeaketh of Chriſtian Monkes, which Saint Marke ordained in Egypt, is to bee thus taken, that they meant that thoſe Monkes (whome they call Chriſtians) were by birth Hebrewes, that as yet liued like Iewes, and followed the orders of the Eſſeni. For thus Hierome, In Epiſtola ad Euſtochium, ſpeaketh of the Monkes of Egypt. Such doth Philo (Platoes imitatour,) ſuch doth Ioſeph (that Grecian Liuie) in his ſecond booke of the Iewes captiuitie, report the Eſſeni to haue beene. Caſſiodorus in Hiſtor. Tripartit. libro primo, capite vndecimo, ſaith, that the conuerſation which Philo writeth the Egyptian Monkes to bee of, is not to be found in any profeſſion elſewhere. D And that which Euſebius, libro 3. capite 17. ſaith in his hiſtorie of the Monkes, the very ſame almoſt hee in another place, viz. De præparatione Euangel. libro 8. capite 4. aſcribeth to the Eſſeni. Sozomene, libro 1. capite 12. ſaith, that they were Chriſtians liuing like Iewes. But it is very likely, that Euſebius herein erred firſt, and miſledde others alſo that followed him. For Philo writeth profeſſedly of the old Sect of the Eſſeni, not of any other newer one: and I can hardly beleeue, that he being a Iew, would write in the commendations of Chriſtians.

5 Neceſſitie was firſt parent vnto Heremeticall life, for ſhunning of perſecution. Some record (ſaith Sozomene, libro primo, capite 13.) that the ſtormes of perſecution, by which Chriſtian religion was diuerſly toſſed, did compell men at the firſt to vndertake this kinde of life. And ſo it is ſaid of Paul the Heremite, that he flying from the perſecution of Decius, & deſiring to keepe himſelfe ſecret in the deſerts, turned neceſſitie into willingneſſe, Otto Friſing lib. 4. cap. 2. This made Baſil ſo earneſt in the praiſe of this Monaſticall life.

6 The auncient Monkes differ from our Popiſh Monkes in the very fundamentall points of their profeſſion: for firſt, they liued
1 ſolitary of neceſſity, to be the ſafer from per-2 ſecution. 2. They were not conſtrained to giue all they had vnto the poore. Thirdly, 3 they were not bound by any ſolemne & perpetuall vow to a certaine rule or to Monaſticall life, but might alter their maner of liuing when they thought good. In that writing (which was brought from heauen by an Angell vnto Pachomius) there were lawes (ſaith Nicephorus, lib. 9. cap. 14.) ſet downe, that eue-ry man ſhould be permitted to eate, drinke, and worke as much as he could, or would: and in like manner to faſt and not faſt according to euery mans liking. And that thoſe that fedde the more ſtrongly, ſhould vſe greater labours, and thoſe that were but of ſparing diet, or more readie to exerciſes of pietie, thoſe ſhould haue leſſe labour enioyned thē.
And amongſt theſe (ſaith *Auguſtine de morib.
eccl. cap. 33.*) no man is vrged with more ſeuere impoſitions, then he can beare, none burdened with that he refuſeth to doe, nor deſpiſed of the reſt, for confeſſing his inſuffi-ciencie in ſuch performances. For they remember how greatly the Scriptures do commend charitie, they remember that to the pure all is pure, and nothing that enters in at the mouth defileth the man, but that which commeth forth. So that their induſtry is not employed in reiecting ſorts of meate, as vncleane, but in taming concupiſcence, & pre-ſeruing brotherly loue. Others of theſe (ſaith Sozomenus lib. 3. cap. 15.) liuing in the frequented cities, do ſhew themſelues abiects in mens conceite, and nothing different from the vulgar. And Athanaſius epiſt. ad Dracontium, ſaith, that he knew many both Monkes and Biſhops that were married, and had children.
4 Fourthly, the Monkes at the firſt, were laymen, not of the clergie, much leſſe Prieſts or Deacons. Hieronimus Ad Heliodor. maketh the Monkes of the moſt ſtrict orders, to bee laymen: The Clergie are one ſort (ſaith he) and the Monkes another. The clergie are Pa-ſtors, but I am the ſheepe. And the Councell of Chalcedon cap. 4. doth decree that no Monkes ſhould put themſelues any way in the affaires of the Church. Leo Epiſt. 62. for-biddeth the Monkes, and the laytie (though men be proud of their learning) to be admitted either to teach or preach. Vide. Auguſt. de moribus eccleſ. c. 31. Gregory l. 3. epiſt. 11. Fifthly, 5 there was no merit ſet downe for Monaſticall life, vntill theſe later times.

7 There were no Nunnes, vntill aboue 200. yeares after Chriſt, but ſome virgins deſpiſing the worlds wickednes, liued ſolitarie, but without vow ſolemne, or perpetuall: knowne by their veyle, nor when they went forth of their Monaſteries, but in going out of their Fathers houſes, or their owne. Many ſuch there were before Hieronimes time, that liued continent, out of Monaſteries, priuately, and freely; yea and ſome of them were noble women, liuing in their owne houſes, attended vpon by many maide ſeruants. Hieronim. ad Demetriad. But in Rome, Marcella was one of the firſt of all the Nunnes; At that time viz. circa an. 400. ſaith Hieronim in Epitaph. Marcellæ: none of all the noble women at Rome were priuie vnto the intent of the Monkes, nor durſt they aduenture, becauſe of the ſtrangeneſſe thereof, to take ſo baſe and reprochfull a name vpon them, as the people then held it. About that time (ſaith Nancler. generat. 41. ad ann. 1215. ſpeaking of Helene and Conſtantines times) the holy virgins were choſen by Helen, Conſtantines mother, who were nouriſhed by the common ſtipend, for the celebration of the praiſes of God in puritie of life, and frequency of prayer.

8 But as for the Monaſticall life now profeſſed, it is abſolutely condemned by the Fathers. Auguſt. doth not like their idlenes, but reprehendeth it in diuers places of his worke de opere Monachorum, cap. 17. The ſolitarie life (ſaith Iuo Carnutenſis, epi. 258.) is inferiour vnto the common and ordinarie life, becauſe it is full of importunate cogitations, which riſing like flies out of the mudde, doe buzze about the eies of the heart, and interrupt the Sabbath of the minde.——Neither doe wee ſpeake this out of bare coniecture, but haue learned it of thoſe that haue tried it to bee true. In Baſils Aſcetica, Tom. 2. c. 7. it is taught that the ſolitarie life doth contradict the law of charitie: & he citeth that of the Preacher: Woe vnto the man that is alone, for if he fall he hath none to raiſe him againe. What doſt thou command vs to doe (ſaith Chryſoſtome Hom. 8. in Matth. 2.) to goe into the deſert mountaines, & become Monkes? Alas, what is it that I greeue at, but onely that you think that none doe liue a pure and honeſt life, but onely thoſe men?

9 The Monaſteries of antiquity, generally were the ſchooles of learning, and communities, Colledges of teachers and learners. What? ſhall we call our children (ſaith Chryſoſtome Contra vituperat. vitæ Monaſt. l. 3.) from the habitations of the deſart? No, but let vs ſuffer them to haue the diſcipline of heauen ſoundly founded, and deepely rooted in them, and although they ſtay ten, yea twenty yeares in the Monaſteries, let vs not be any whit moleſted thereat.

10 But Concerning the vow of Regular obedience, it was not admitted, nor exacted in the Church vntill foure ages after Chriſt.

11 Voluntarie pouertie, that is, either without neceſſity, calling, or limit, made neceſſarie by vow, ioyned to the opinion of ſupererogation, and annexed vnto Monaſtical profeſſion, was not receiued into the Church vntill many ages after Chriſt. Let any man giue an inſtance to the contrary. Origen ſeemes to require the forſaking of earthly poſſeſſions of his auditours, Euſeb. hiſt. eccleſ. lib. 6. cap. 3. and preſcribeth the ſame vnto all Prieſts. Let vs haſten from the Prieſts of Pharao (ſaith he, hom. 16. in Geneſ.) who haue earthly poſſeſſions, vnto the Prieſts of the Lord who haue no portion of liuings vpon earth. Now Chryſoſtome homil. 9. in Matth. doth preſcribe it vnto all men in generall. Shall not wee caſt all things away (ſaith hee) and leaue all things that wee may goe vnto heauen with a cleare and free countenance? He that poſſeſſeth the Lord (ſaith Hierome ſpeaking of all the clergy, Ad Nepotian. & habetur ca. 12. q. 1. apud Gratianum, c. Clericus.) can poſſeſſe nothing but the Lord: but if he haue any thing beſides the Lord, he hath no part in the Lord. Euſebius lib. 3. cap. 31. writeth, that ſome Apoſtolike perſons did diſtribute their goods to the poore, but they did it to the end that they might bee more free to exerciſe their Euangelicall function throughout the world. Paul the firſt heremite, did vndergoe this pouertie, becauſe he loſt all his goods for confeſſion of his faith. And Paulinus of Nola ſould all his goods to nouriſh the poore in time of perſecution, warre, and hunger.

Marie.

1 IT was the common opinion of the Fathers and writers vntill Lumbards time, (which was in the yeare 1150.) that the Virgin Marie was conceiued in originall ſin. Witneſſe Auguſtine Ser. 2. in Pſa. 35. & de Bapt. paru. lib. 2. cap. 24. & de Geneſ. ad liter. lib. 10. cap. 18. Ambroſe Octo. 6. in Pſa. 118. Chryſoſtome In Matth. hom. 45. Euſebius Emiſſenus de nat. Dom. ſer. 2. Maximus Ser. de Aſſumpt. Bede ſup. homil. Miſſus eſt. Remigius In Pſal. 21. Anſelme in li. cur. Deus homo. ca. 16. Rupertus in Cant. lib. 1. ad fin. and Lumbard. himſelfe in 3. ſent. d. 3. Bernard Ad Lugdun. canonicos epiſt. 174. ſaith, that Mary were equall vnto Chriſt if that ſhee were conceiued without originall ſinne. And that this was the more common opinion, Bonauentura in 3. Sent. diſt. 3. q. 1. art. 2. Thom. 3. part. q. 27. art. 2. Antonine par. 3. tit. 8. c. 2. and Lyra (ſup. Luc. 1.) doe confeſſe. Turrecremata De conſecrat. diſt. 4. cap. Firmiſſime, quaeſt. 3. num. 11. auoucheth, that he had gathered an hundred authors for this opinion, in his booke of the truth of the conception of Mary. And very many are alleadged by Melchior Canus in his Common places, l. 7. c. 1.

2 Againe, ſome of the Fathers ſay, that Mary was guiltie of actuall ſinne. For example, Chryſoſt. homil. 20. in Iohn. cap. toucheth her with ambition and raſhneſſe. So doth Theophylact and Euthymius ibid. Athanaſius contra Arianos Serm. 4. and Ireneus contra hereſes lib. 3. cap. 18. Origen In Luc. homil. 17. Tertullian lib. de carne Chriſti. cap. 7. and the Author of the booke of the queſtions of the Old and New Teſtament quaeſt. 73. in Auguſt. accuſe her of infidelitie.

3 But afterwards there aroſe an opinion, that Mary was by a ſingular and extraordinarie priuiledge preſerued from originall ſinne. Scotus was the firſt ſchooleman that euer held thus: yet hee ſpeakes but in doubtfull manner of it, in 3. diſt. 4. q. 1. ſaying, that it is probable, that this ſame excellencie ſhould be aſcribed vnto Mary, if it bee not againſt the authoritie of the Scripture and the Church. And of this opinion afterwards, was Francis Mayro in 3. diſtinct. 3. q. 1. art. 4. whome notwithſtanding Bonauenture in 3. ſent. diſt. 3. art. 1. q. 2. Thomas in par. 3. q. 27. artic. 2. Caietane ibid. & in tract. de concept. virginis. Antonine part. 1. tit. 8. c. 2. Ales in 3. part. q. 9. Hugo de S. Victore de Sacra. lib. 2. part. 1. cap. 5. Richardus in 3. diſtinct. 3. Capreolus ibid. Albertus ibid. Ariminenſis in 2. diſtinct. 30. 31. & 5. qu. 2. art. 1. and Durandus in 3. diſt. 3. q. 1. expreſſely contradict: to whom wee may adde very many Dominicans, & B. Medina in 3. part. Thomae q. 27. So that it is no ſuch Catholike doctrine to hold, that Mary was conceiued & borne without original ſin.

4 Now whereas Ireneus calleth her Eues Aduocate libro quinto, capite decimo ſexto, this is an hyperbolicall ſpeech, and if you take it ſimply, altogether vntrue. For it is in the conception and birth of Chriſt, that ſhee is Mediatrix vnto Eue (or in bringing forth her redeemer) not in praying for her. And in that reſpect there were ſome called her, their onely helpe, Lady, Queene of heauen, and hope, as Fulgentius, Cyrill, & Damaſcene doe.

5 In the yeare of our Lord 1096. Vrban the ſecond decreed in a Councell at Claremount, that the houres of the Bleſſed Virgin ſhould be ſaid euery day, and that her office ſhould be ſolemnely ſung vpon the Sabbath. Rad. Tungrenſ. Propoſit. 20.

6 As for the Romane office of theſe times, dedicated vnto her, it is moſt impious, for the honour of their Sauiour is transferred vnto her. But Bonauenture In tertia, diſt. 3. quaeſt. 2. giueth other counſell, when he ſaith, that wee muſt beware leſt wee doe not diminiſh the Sonnes glorie in amplifying of the mothers, and therein prouoke the mother to wrath, who had rather haue her Sonne honoured then her ſelfe, as the Creator ought to be before the creature. Vrbane the 2. did firſt appoint the office of the virgin Mary to bee ſung, an. 1077. Vide Durand. ration. lib. 5. cap. 1. num. 9. & lib. 6. cap. 2.

Feaſt daies.

1 ABbat Panormitane In cap. 3. de feriis. Angelus In verbo feria. 5.43. and Sylueſter verbo, Dominica. q. 1. verſe. 77. doe hold that the Lords day, or Sunday was inſtituted by the diuine law, and doe affirme that this was the common opinion in their daies, which is moſt true, for it hath beene obſerued from the Apoſtles time, 1. Cor. 16.

2 The firſt day of the Sabbath (which is our Sunday) is accounted for the Lords day, by Chryſoſtome, Ambroſe, and Remigus, as alſo by Primaſius In 1. Corinth. 16. and ſo thinketh Auguſtine alſo, epiſt. 119. cap. 13. The Lords day (quoth he) was declared by the reſurrection of the Lord, and hath the feſtiuall inſtitution from him: And ep. 86, ad Caſulan. Looke Iſidore alſo, lib. 1. de officiis, ca. 2 & Waldenſis de ſacramental. tit. 16. cap. 140.

3 Whereas Conſtantine decreed by a law, that the Lords day ſhould be obſerued & kept (as Euſebius de vita Conſtant. lib. 4. cap. 18. & Sozomene l. 1. cap. 8. affirmeth, therein he gaue but a generall law vnto the whole Empire of the Romans, imitating the Apoſtles: and this was no beginning of the keeping of this day, but a renewing of an Apoſtolike tradition, for the more diligent and heedy obſeruation thereof. For before him, Origen againſt Celſus, and Tertullian de coro. mili. & lib. 2. ad vxor. make mention of this day, and Hierome cont. Vigilan. Iuſtine quaſt. 115. ſaith that it was obſerued from the Apoſtles ages. See alſo his ſecond Apologie. Baſil de Spiri. Sanct. cap. 27. ſaith, that it is an Apoſtolike tradition.

4 Theophylus In edict. cum Theophan. is one of the firſt that mentioneth the feaſts of the birth, and Epiphany of Chriſt; and Chryſoſtome another, orat. in Sanct. Philogon. And Nazianzene orat. in S. Lumin. putteth them both for one; and that vſe the Greeke Church did follow and practiſe, though the VVeſterne Church made two diuers feaſts. The feaſt of the Circumciſion was vnknowne in the church for at leaſt 1000. yeares after Chriſt. The feaſt of the Trinitie was knowne before indeede, but not allowed of publikely, but reprooued. Alexander the third, c. Quoniam, de feriis, Decretal. lib. 2. cap. 9. ſaith, that in his time it was not vſed at Rome. Micrologus De eccleſ. obſeru. c. 60. and Pothon Prieſt, De ſtat. dom. dei. l. 3. doe both reprehend the keepers of this feaſt. Corpus Chriſti feaſt was of Vrban the fourths creation, after the 1200. yeare of our Lord. And Potho Prumienſis findeth fault with the feaſt of the transfiguration, ann. 1160. ibid.

5 In the pureſt times of the Primitiue Church there were no vigils in honour of the Saints. Baſil In Pſal. 114. is the firſt that mentioneth them: & now they are laid aſide.

6 The feaſt daies of the Saints were firſt inſtituted for the worſhipping of God, obſerued diuerſly and freely without band, or puniſhment for breach thereof: for in the moſt auntient Fathers was neuer read of any feaſt but of Eaſter, nor were they counted holy in thẽſelues, but becauſe of the myſteries of God miniſtred at ſuch times; not a feaſt can bee prooued for 200. yeares after Chriſt, Socrat. lib. 5. cap. 21. As for Eaſter, and other feaſts, men did keepe them of cuſtome at there owne pleaſures.

7 The Martyrs ſuffring daies, were called their Birth daies, and their yearely Eaſter, Durand. Rational. lib. 7. capite primo, num. 38. Becauſe then they were truly borne againe, and paſſed from this miſerable life to immortalitie. We call the Martyrs paſſions, their Birthdaies, ſaith Emiſſenus, Ser. de. S. Geneſio, and ſo doth Polydore Virgil, lib. 6. cap. 8.

8 Iuſtinian inſtituted the feaſt of Simeons meeting of Chriſt, vpon the ſecond of Februarie, to the honour of Chriſt for the ceaſing of the plague, about the yeare 540. Paulus Diacon. lib. 16. Niceph. li. 17. cap. 28. But afterward the Popes changed it into the feaſts of Maries purification.

Feſtum ὑπαπαντῆς.

9 The feaſt of the Annunciation, was firſt ordained for the honour of God, not of Mary: as it appeareth in a ſermon ſaid to bee Athanaſius his, De Sancta Deipara. This feaſt (ſaith he) is one, and the firſt of the Lords. And hereupon the auncient writers called it the Annunciation of the Lord, vide Durand. Ratio. lib. 7. cap. 2. num. 2.

10 Vrban the ſixth inſtituted the feaſt of Maries viſitation: Bellarmine. And the feaſt of her Natiuity was not kept in the Church of old, Durand. lib. 7. cap. 28. n. 2. but had the originall by a nights reuelation. Gregory is the firſt that nameth it.

11 The feaſt of the Pentecoſt was no Chriſtian feaſt in the Apoſtles time, for they followed the Iewes manner in keeping of theirs, Francolinus de horis canon. cap. 84.

12 The Fathers tooke not Pentecoſt for the laſt day of the Quinquageſima, but for the whole time betweene Eaſter and the fiftieth day. Take all the heathens ſolemnities (ſaith Tertullian) and place them in a ranke, they wil not make vp one Pentecoſt. And againe, De coro. milit. We hold it a ſinne to faſt, or to pray kneeling vpon the Lords day. And the like priuiledge we haue from Eaſter day through the whole Pentecoſt. Our Fathers taught vs (ſaith Ambroſe, In Luc. 17.) that all the 50. daies of Pentecoſt are to be celebrated as Eaſter is, becauſe the beginning of the eighth weeke maketh the Pentecoſt, the ſame ſaying he hath, Serm. 60. But now the fiftieth day is the feaſt onely.

13 The Feaſt of the aſſumption of Mary was neuer vniuerſally receiued, by place and perſon: Nay, in Charlemaines time it was doubted whether this feaſt ſhould be kept.

We haue left the feaſt of the Aſſumption of S. Mary to bee inquired of, ſaith hee in his Conſtitutions, lib.1.cap.158. And Ludouicus Pius his ſonne, added it vnto the other feaſts. *Ann.*818. witneſſe Auentine, l.4.

14 That Mary was aſſumed bodie and ſoule, it is not certaine in the Fathers. How, or at what time, or by what perſons, her ſacred body was takē thence, or whether it was tranſlated (ſaith the Author Serm. de Aſſump. ad Paul. & Euſtoch.) or whether it be riſen againe, it is vnknowne ——. But although ſome ſeeme to haue erred (ſaith Epiphanius, Hereſ. 78.) let them ſearch the Scriptures, and they ſhall neither find the death of Mary, nor whether ſhe were buried or not buried. I cannot confirme this of her (ſaith the Author of the booke, de Aſſump. Mariæ, fathered vpon Auguſtine,) by any ſpeciall teſtimonie. And, If I haue ſpoken as I ſhould, Chriſt and his Saints approoue it: if otherwiſe, Chriſt & his Saints pardon it. Now all that hee affirmes is but this, that it is not vngodlineſſe to ſay that her body ſaw no corruption. Auguſtine Serm. de ſanctis 35. dares not define whether ſhee were aſſumed with her body or without it, no more dare others: as Breuiar. Quignonii pag. 231. Ado, In Martyrologio ſaith, that the Church doth celebrate her ſleeping, but not her Aſſumption: And againe: What is become of her holy body, the Churches ſobriety hath choſen rather to bee ignorant with godly zeale, then to teach any friuolous or Apochryphall doctrine thereupon. So ſaith Vſuard alſo. Durandus, Rational. libro 7. cap. 24. num. 1. affirmeth that her bodily aſſumption into heauen is vncertaine, and thoſe that hold it, haue but their opinion from common report. Orat. Apud Damaſc. de dorm. deipare.

15 The feaſt of the Exaltation of the croſſe was not ordained before the yeare 630. Otto Friſing. libro quinto, capite nono. But Nicephorus, libr. octauo, capite 29. ſaith, that Helene inſtituted it. Manuel Comnenus, Varior. Impp. miſcell. conſtit. capite ſeptimo, de feriis, makes mention of ſuch a feaſt, and ſo doth Balſamon, In Photii Nomocan. titul. ſeptimo.

16 The feaſt of Maries Conception was not ordained at firſt, becauſe of her Immaculate conception. Petrus de Natalibus, ſaith it began to be inſtituted becauſe of her ſanctification in the wombe. But Bernard, epiſt. 174. reprooueth this feaſt: and Pothon Prieſt ſaith, that it is an abſurd thing to celebrate it, De ſtatu. dom. dei, libro tertio, ad finem. Nor was it generally receiued vntill the decree of Sixtus quartus, in the yeare 1470. as appeareth, ex Extrauag. Cum praeexcelſa. De reliquiis.

17 The feaſt of her Purification was inſtituted in Iuſtinians time. Nicephor. lib. 17. cap. 28. P. Diacon. lib. 10. rerum Rom.

The Church, Succeſſion, Antiquitie.

1 BY the Catholike Church, the Fathers meane the company of the elect, by faith grafted into Ieſus Chriſt. So doth Auguſtine, In Pſa. 92. & 62. de catech. rud. cap. 20. & Pſal. 36. Cyprian, lib. 1. ep. 3. & de vnit. eccleſ. Hierome, In ep. ad Galat. cap. 4. & In Iob. cap. 26. Epiphanius, Hereſ. 35. Chryſoſtome, hom. de Turture; & in Pſal. 114. Ambroſe, In Eph. cap. 1. and Bernard, ſup. Cantic. Ser. 76. vnderſtand it. Now in acknowledging a viſibilitie thereof, they ſpeake of the outward eſtate, & parts thereof, or of the particular Church: and in ſaying that the wicked are of the Church, they ſpeake of the externall ſtate of the particular Church of their times.

2 They vſed alſo to appeale vnto the Church, but no farther then they thought ſhee did follow the Canonicall Scriptures: for thereby, & onely thereby, is the Church knowne, as Auguſtine ſaith, contra lit. Petil. lib. 3. cap. 11.

3 They praiſed the Romane Church (ſome of them) by a ſuppoſition, becauſe it had kept the faith in greateſt purity vnto the times wherein they wrote: not becauſe the holy Ghoſt was bound or tyed to that ſeat. Note this ſuppoſition.

4 They hold that the Church is not alwaies viſible vpon the earth. The whole congregation of the Saints ſhalbe hidden (ſaith Abbot Ioachim, in Reuelat. pag. 2.) for ſo ſhall the elect of God (beeing wiſe,) be wiſe vnto themſelues, ſo that they ſhall not preſume to preach openly, becauſe that the darkeneſſe ſhall preuaile: not that they ſhall leaue to animate and exhort the faithfull in ſecret, but becauſe they dare not aduenture to preach publikely.

5 In the Fathers writings ſome particular Churches are called Catholike, yea vniuerſall, becauſe of their Catholike faith. So that Catholike and vniuerſall Church is verie often taken for the Orthodoxal Church: and hereby diſtinct from the conuenticles of heretikes. Theodoſius made a law, ſaith Sozomen, lib. 7. cap. 4. that their Church onely ſhould be called Catholike, that did worſhip the holy Trinity with equall honour, that all others ſhould be called heretikes, noted with ignominy, and puniſhed for their iniquitie. And hence it is that the Orthodoxal Biſhops were often called the Biſhops of the Catholike or vniuerſall Church.

6 The Fathers doe acknowledge a ſucceſſion, and appeale thereunto, becauſe they liued before any ſchiſme, when it ſtood without breach in the Romane Church, and becauſe the truth of Apoſtolike doctrine was withall reſerued. Eleutherius for his order and doctrine hath the twelfth place from the Apoſtles (ſaith Nicephorus lib.4.cap.15.) Tertullian, De præſcript.cap.32. ſpeaketh of ſome Churches which cannot produce their originall from the Apoſtles or their ſchollers, becauſe they were begun long after:—and yet holding the ſame faith, are called Apoſtolike alſo, becauſe of the vnitie of their doctrine. And this ſucceſſion they vrge againſt the ſchiſmaticks onely, or thoſe that mangled the Scriptures, and inuented others, as Valentinus, &c. They haue not Peters inheritance (ſaith Ambroſe, de pœnit.lib.1.cap.6.) for they haue not his faith. The ſucceſſion of faith (ſaith Nazian, Orat.de laud. Athanaſii.) is the true ſucceſſion: for thoſe that profeſſe the ſame doctrine of faith, are partakers of the ſame Throne. Auguſtine, De vnit.eccl.c.18,19. will haue the Church prooued by the Scriptures, not by ſucceſſion of Biſhops, nor authorities of Councels. And Bellarmine, De notis Eccleſiæ, graunteth, that it is no neceſſary conſequent that the Church ſhould bee where there is ſucceſſion.

7 The Fathers noted the ſucceſſion of the ſea of Rome, becauſe the Biſhops were then famous, and the placed renowned, and more knowne to the Doctors by reaſon of the neereneſſe of it. Tertul.de præſcript. aduerſ. hæretic.

8 This ſucceſſion of Romane Biſhops drawne from Peter, is but vncertaine, and of humane inſtitution. Hierome De ſcript.eccleſ. putteth Linus the ſecond, and Clement the fourth: Ireneus, lib.3.cap.3. puts Linus the firſt. But Clement ſucceeded Peter, as in the epiſtle to Iames vnder his name he affirmeth. Now the great Councell of Chalcedon, Action.15. held that the Church of Rome had the Primacy with the Fathers, becauſe that city ruled all the world. We decree (ſaith Iuſtinian, Nouell.131.cap.2.) according to the auncient Canons, that the holy Biſhop of Rome bee eſteemed the Primate of all Prieſts. This is to be well noted (ſaith Canus, Loc.comm.lib.6. cap.8.) that the Biſhops of Rome ſucceeding of Peter, is not reuealed in Scriptures, but hath the authoritie from moſt graue hiſtories.—But if this bee not ſufficient to the learned, we haue another,——that is, that though wee haue no Scriptures for this ſucceſſion of the Romane Biſhops from Peter, yet it is a tradition of the Apoſtles vnto the Church, from hand to hand as it were. And thus alſo ſaith Couarruuias Tom.1.2.part. Relect.§.9.pag.242.Col.1. that it is plaine by Catholike doctrine, that Peters ſucceſſors had their primacie giuen them by Chriſt. D.à Soto 4.diſt.24.q.2. ſaith that the ſaid ſucceſſion is annexed to this ſea of Rome by an Eccleſiaſticall law: and like to this hath Caietane opuſc.de Rom.Pontif.inſtitut.cap.13. And Bellarmine De Pontif.lib.2.cap.12. ſaith, that the Biſhop of Rome, in that he is ſo, is Peters ſucceſſor, this he hath from Peters deede, not from Chriſts firſt ordinance.

9 The Fathers vrge ſucceſſion of other ſeas indifferently, as well as of the Romane Church. We can recken them (ſaith Ireneus lib.3.cap.3. & lib.4.cap.63.) that were made Biſhops in the churches by the Apoſtles. Looke Euſebius l.4.c.19. & Auguſtine Contra lit.Petil.lib.2.cap.51.

10 The Fathers vrged antiquitie againſt the heretikes, not reſpecting it for it ſelfe, as it conſiſteth of yeares and ages, but in beeing ioyned with the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles: And beginning at leaſt at the Apoſtles times. This good hath the antiquitie, which was adorned with diuine knowledge and doctrine, done vnto me, (ſaith Tertullian in his Apolog.in fine.) Cuſtome without truth, is but an antiquitie in errour, ſaith Cyprian epiſt.74.ad Pomp.

Councels.

1 THe Fathers prayſing of Councels, meane onely thoſe that prooue the doctrine of faith by the Scriptures.

2 The appeale from a Councell vnto the Biſhop of Rome, was not becauſe hee was a Iudge ouer the Councels, but becauſe of his credite and authoritie with the Emperour. And oftentimes this was out of Africa by reaſon of the ſmall diſtance of place.

3 Emperours and Kings in the Primitiue Church called Councells by their owne authoritie, not by the Popes, for aboue 800. yeares together. The Emperour (ſaith Theodoret lib.1.cap.7.) called that noble Councell of Nicea. The Emperour (ſaith Sozom.lib.1. cap.16.) called a Councell at Nicea in Bythinia, ſetting downe a day for all the rulers of euery church in all places, to be there preſent. And hee reckneth Pope Iulius for one that was commaunded thither. The King (ſaith Epiphan. Hæreſ. 69.) hauing a care of the Church, called a generall Councell. And againe: We biſhops, aſſembled from diuers Prouinces, at Seleucia in Iſauria, at the command of our high and mightie Prince Conſtantine. The Emperour (ſaith Socrates lib.5. cap.8. ſpeaking of Theodoſius) without delay called a Councell of the Biſhops that imbraced his faith. By the Emperours commaund (ſaith Zonaras Annal. tom.3.) the ſecond Councell was called becauſe of Macedonius. Innocent biſhop of Rome (ſaith Sozom.lib.8. cap.28.)—ſent fiue Biſhops and two Prieſts vnto Honorius and Arcadius Emperours, to intreate a Councel of them, and the time and place thereof,—who notwithſtanding obtained it not. Tell me (ſaith Hierome in his Apologie againſt Ruffin.lib.2.cap.5.) who were Conſulls that yeare? what Emperour commanded this Councell to be called? We went vnto his ſacred Maieſtie (ſaith Chryſoſtome epiſt. ad Innocent. 1.) and intreated him to call a Councell. I cannot finde (ſaith Æneas Syluius De actis Conc. Baſil lib. primo) neither in ancient hiſtorie, nor in the Actes of the Apoſtles, that it was an vſe at any time for the Popes alone to call Councells.—And if we ſo proceede through all times, we ſhall finde nothing in the Primitiue Church approuing this authoritie of calling Councells, to belong onely to the Popes of Rome. Nor was the aſſent of that Biſhop ought eſteemed in Conſtantines time, and other Emperours after that. And therefore the Councell of Chalcedon ſaith thus of it ſelfe: The holy, great, and Generall Councell, which by the grace of God, and the decree of the moſt holy and Chriſtian Emperours, Valentinian & Martian, was gathered at Chalcedon the Metropolitane citie of Bythynia, &c. but maketh no mention of the Pope, though it had his aſſent alſo. Leo the 1. epi. 9. deſireth of Theodoſius to grant his entreatie and ſupplication, that there might be a Councell of the Biſhops called in Italie. Although we know (ſaith Frederike the Emperour in the Councell to the Biſhops: Apud Radenicum de Geſtis Frederic. 1. Imperatoris, l. 2. c. 64.) that by the place and dignitie of the Empire, the calling of Councels is in our power, but eſpecially in ſuch great dangers of the Church; for ſo it is recorded that Conſtantine, Theodoſius, Iuſtinian, and of later times, Charlemaine, and Otto, all Emperours haue done before vs: yet doe we leaue the authoritie of deciding this great and weightie buſineſſe, vnto your power, and prudence. VVe reade (ſaith Cardinall Cuſanus) that the general Councells were often called by the Emperours, yea all of them (as wee ſee by the records) vntill the eight, called at Conſtantinople in Baſil the Emperours time: And againe: De concord. catholica, lib. 3. c. 2. & 25. All the eight Generall Councells,—were called by the Emperours. So that hee confeſſeth this power to be in the Emperours hand, and not in the Popes for aboue eight hundred yeares after Chriſt. Now Turrecremata Summa de eccleſ. lib. 3. c. 23. maketh a double preſidencie in Councels, to wit, of honour or ſitting, and of Authoritie: and that of Seſſion & honour the Pope ſometimes had vouchſafed him, but this other of authorizing, neuer vntill later times, and namely about the yeare 1516. in the Laterane Councell vnder Leo the 10. cap. 11. condemned before, in the Councells of Conſtance ſeſſ. 4. & 5. and Baſil ſeſſ. 2. & 18. and by Gerſon alſo in his treatiſe, whether it be lawfull to appeale from the Pope in matters of faith or no.

Benedictions, Hallowings.

1 THe Benedictions or Hallowings of water, aſhes, ſalt, candles, oyle, and Palmes are neuer ſpoken of in the Fathers, but only of the water of Baptiſme. Auguſtine De tempore, ſer. 37. ſaith that all the waters of Iordan were conſecrated by Chriſt. Ambroſe de ſacram. lib. 2. cap. 5. And the faithfull were wont to take of the water of Baptiſme home with them, & ſprinckle it about their houſes, Alcuin. de diu. officiis, cap. de Sabbato Paſch. Bellarmine plainely confeſſeth, that holy water is but a humane inuention, De extrem. vnctione lib. 1. cap. 6. Becauſe (quoth he) in Baptiſme men were cured of their bodily infirmities, as Auguſtine witneſſeth epiſt. 23.— & de Ciuit. Dei. l. 22. c. 8. therefore ſome began to vſe holy water, beſides Baptiſme, for curing diſeaſes.

2 Sometimes there were miracles done by this ſanctified water, as Theodoret Hiſt. lib. 5. cap. 22. and Bede Hiſt. Anglor. lib. 1. cap. 17. doe relate. But that prooueth not the ordinarie vſe thereof in the Church, nor that it was therefore hallowed, that it might haue power to worke ſupernaturall effects.

3 It is a profane noueltie to ſay that it is a medicine for veniall ſinne, and in it ſelfe powerfull againſt diuells. This Molanus Practic. Theologia, tract. 1. de pœnit. capite 17. prop. 24, 25, 26. perceiued, when hee ſaid that the ſprinckling of holy water, and ſuch other like actes haue there reference vnto the publike prayers, (then made,) for I dare not ſay as ſome doe, that holy water hath any effect againſt any thing, by vertue of the worke done.

4 They vſed alſo to bleſſe men, with prayer, and the Ceremonies of chriſme and impoſition of hands. What els is the laying on of hands (ſaith Auguſtine De Baptiſ. contra Donat. lib. 3. cap. 16. Et habetur apud Gratian. Cauſ. 1. q. 1. cap. Manus.) but a praying ouer a man?

5 It was called holy-bread, becauſe it was giuen in ſigne of the diuine bleſſing, which is to bee receiued by the bodie and blood of Chriſt of them that were not as yet permitted to receiue thoſe myſteries, or receiued them but ſeldome. There is diuers kindes of ſanctification (ſaith Auguſtine De Pecc. merit. & remiſſ. lib. 2. cap. 26.) for I thinke the Catechumeni haue one kinde of ſanctification by the ſigne of Chriſt and the prayers made with putting of hands vpon them; and that which they receiue, though it be not the bodie of Chriſt, yet it is holy, and holyer then our ordinary meate. Hence it appeareth that this hallowed bread was then giuen to the Catechiſts to whome the Euchariſt was denyed: but now adaies it is giuen vnto all that doe not communicate. In the 3. Councell of Carthage it is recorded that they vſed to giue ſalt in ſtead of the Euchariſt, vnto the Catechumeniſts.

6 It was called the bleſſing, or benediction, becauſe it was giuen, as a token of commendation and vnitie, from one to another. The bread which we ſent you (ſaith Paulinus, Apud Aug. epiſt. 31. & ipſe Aug. epiſt. 34.) ſhall become a more fruitfull bleſſing, by the loue of your goodneſſe that receiueth it. And againe, in his epiſtle to Alipius, epiſt. 35. note that hee ſaith: You ſhall make this bread a benediction, by vouchſafing to receiue it. For hence it ſeemes, that it was not ſanctified before by the ſender: And againe, alſo in his Epiſtle vnto Romanianus, apud Auguſt. epiſt. 36. & epiſt. 31. ad Auguſt. hee ſaith, wee pray you to ſanctifie this bread by receiuing it, which wee ſend vnto your loue, to ſignifie our vnity and accord. And in like manner, they vſed to ſend money, apparell, and keyes to hang about their neckes, with their letters, for a bleſſing, Greg. l. 1. epiſt. 29. & 30. & l. 8. epiſt. 31.

7 The Benediction of this bread for health of ſoule and body, againſt all diſeaſes, and ſnares of the enemy, began in the Councell of Nantes, cap. 9. and was neuer mentioned before Auguſtines time.

8 There were many hundreds of yeares paſſed before that euer the Romane Church knew how to conſecrate an Agnus Dei. Alcuine, ca. de Sabbato Paſch. and Amalarius de eccl. offic. lib. 1. cap. 17. are the firſt that mentioned it.

The Clergie, and Laytie.

1 THe Fathers diſtinguiſh the Clergy from the Laytie, becauſe the one bare a publike charge in the Church, which ſpecified them from the other which bare none. Againe, in reſpect of the puniſhment inflicted vpon either: the Clergie had the greater impoſed vpon them; the Laytie the leſſer. So that it is an abuſe of this diſtinction to ſay that the people are prophane, and that the Clergie ſhould bee exempted from ciuill gouernance.

2 The exemption of the Clergie from politike iudgement, in ciuill cauſes, began to bee in common vſe about the yeare 536. for Iuſtinian ordained that in cauſes meerely ciuill, the Biſhops alone ſhould heare and determine of the caſes of Monkes and Nunnes. Conſt. Nouell. 79. cap. 1. And that the Clergie ſhould firſt bee examined before their Ordinaries: but if that the nature of the caſe, or ſome other difficultie ariſing, be ſuch, that the Biſhop cannot poſſibly decide the buſineſſe; then let it be lawfull for them to goe vnto the ciuill Iudges, Conſt. Nouell. 83. in præfat. & 123. cap. 21. I ſay in cauſes meerely ciuill: for in criminall cauſes, the ciuill Iudge is by him appointed to inquire & cenſure thereupon: and if hee finde the Clergie man worthie of puniſhment, then ſhall hee bee by the Biſhop deſpoyled of his Prieſtly dignitie, and ſo become puniſhable by the law. Conſt. Nouell. 83. cap. 1. & 123. cap. 21. Nor is it any wonder that the Clergie had not this exemption before; becauſe that the Clergie beſides that their function, are cittizens and members of the politike bodie, and in that reſpect ought to bee in all things ſubiect to the politike power. I adde; In common vſe, for before Iuſtinians time in ſome peculiar Churches this exemption was practiſed before. Let no man preſume (ſaith the Councell of Agatha. cap. 32. Et habetur apud Gratian. Cauſ. 11. queſt. 1. cap. 17.) to ſummon a Clergie man before a ſecular Iudge, without the licence of the Biſhop: If any ſuch bee ſummoned, let him not appeare, or defend, or dare to propound a criminall cauſe vnto a ſecular iudgement. Now before Iuſtinians time, the Biſhops ordinarie iuriſdiction was but a power of inquirie and reſtraint for violating and corrupting the Eccleſiaſticall diſcipline, Conc. Chalced. cap. 9. Carthag. 3. cap. 9. Tolet. 3. ca. 13. Matiſcon. cap. 8.

3 About the 400. yeare after Chriſt, the Clergy of ſome Churches were free from paying tribute vnto ſecular Princes, Euſeb. libro 10. capite 7. Hieron. in Matth. 17. and in otherſome it was not ſo. The Churches liuings doe pay their tribute, ſaith Ambroſe, in orat. de tradend. Baſilicis, againſt Auxentius. The Emperours Valentinian, Valens, & Gratian, doe exhort the Aſian Biſhops that were ſuſpect of hereſie, to returne vnto them that were of ſound iudgement, whome they commend in this amongſt other things, that they refuſed not to pay the taxe that was exacted of them, Theodoret, hiſt. lib. quarto, cap. ſeptimo. Neither is this meant onely of the Patrimoniall tributes for euery inheritance, but of the perſonall alſo, for euery head. If the Sonne of God paid his taxe (ſaith Ambroſe, In 5. Luc. lib. 3. & citatur. cap. magnum. cauſ. 11. quæſt. 1.) who art thou that thinkeſt it ſhould not bee paid? But ſome will ſay, that this aroſe out of cuſtome, and not out of law: then let him know that there is no diuine law, that exempteth the Clergie from paying dues vnto ſecular Princes, if their neede ſo require. Chryſoſtome, Homil. 23. in Roman. will haue that ſubiection exacted euen of the Prieſts and Monkes, which Paul ſpeaketh of, Romanes 13. And paying of taxe is no little part thereof, as Couarruuias, in l. practic. quæſt. cap. 31. obſerued very well. Thomas, In Roman. 13. ſaith, that it was the Princes gift to exempt the Clergie from theſe taxes, and therefore an humane law: and ſo ſaith Couarruuias in the place afore-named; and Iohn Medina, tract. de Reſtitutione, quæſt. 15.

4 The right of aſſent and ſuffrage (in elections of the churchmen) was taken from the people about the yeare 870. Diſtinct. 63.

Additions.

1 THe moderne Papiſts holde theſe poſitions: firſt, lawfulnes of equiuocation in oathe, or to ſweare equiuocally that hee did not that which he did, though he had done it. 2. that to pray for their enemies in ſpeciall, is no command, but a counſell. 3. That in a faſt, it is lawfull to drinke often, and to take medicines. 4. that many atheiſtical thoughts, and filthy imaginations are no ſinnes. 5. that to take away any ſmall thing whoſe loſſe brings no great dammage to the owner, is no mortall ſinne. But theſe are ſtrangers to the Fathers eares, yea vntill of late, vnto all Chriſtians.

2 Not a Father of the firſt 400. yeares taught nine quires of Angels: but contrariwiſe ſome doe ouerthrow this diſtinction. I thinke (ſaith Theodoret, in 1. ad Coloſſ.) that he calleth the Cherubim the thrones: (for the Prophet Ezechiel ſaw the throne of the deity placed vpon them,) and by dominations, principalities, and powers, hee meanes thoſe that gouerned the nations. Auguſtine calleth them all by the generall name of Angels, Enchir. cap. 58. Whether the Archangels be called vertues (ſaith he)——or what the difference is betweene theſe 4. words, [Thrones, Dominations, Principalities, and Powers,] let them tell that can, that they prooue what they ſay; I confeſſe plainly, that I am altogether ignorant. Hence may the Antiquity of the bookes vnder Dionyſius Areopagita his name, bee gathered, that teach nine orders of Angels ſo vndoubtedly.

3 The Fathers holde generally, that the firſt precept of the tenne commandements, concerneth the hauing or chooſing of God, the ſecond is of idols; the tenth of concupiſcence: ſo teacheth Philo Iudæus, De decalog. Ioſephus Antiq. lib. 2. cap. 6. & 8. Origen, in Exod. homil. 8. Athanaſius, In Synopſ. Nazianzene, in verſ. de Decal. Ambroſe and Hierome, in Epheſ. cap. 6. Procopius and Rupertus, in Exod, cap. 20. with others, viz. Author operis imperfect. in Matth. homil. 49. Auguſtine is variable, one while affirming it, and another while denying it, vide Quæſt. vet. & nou. Teſt qu. 7. Quæſt. ſuper Exod. lib. 2. cap. 71. Epiſt. 119. capite vndecimo.

4 The Fathers generally either denie, or ſuppreſſe in ſilence, that the ſoules of the dead can returne vnto the liuing. Chryſoſtome De Lazaro, hom. vltim. Tertullian, lib. de anima. Iſidore, Etymolog. lib. 8. cap. 9. Theophylact, In Matth. 8. and others, viz. Author quæſt. ad Antioch. quæſt. 11. & 13. apud Athanaſ. doe all deny this. Auguſtine ſeemes to be of another opinion, in his booke of the care for the dead, c. 15. & 16.

The Conſequent.

No Apoſtle, no holy Father, no ſound Catholike, for 1200. yeares after Chriſt, did euer holde or profeſſe that doctrine of all the Principles and grounds of Religion, that is now taught by the Church of Rome, and authorized by the Councell of Trent.

SOLI DEO GLORIA.

24 DE59

A
CHRISTIAN AND PLAINE TREATISE OF THE MANNER AND ORDER OF PREDESTINATION, AND OF THE LARGENES OF GODS GRACE.

Firſt written in Latine by that Reuerend and faithfull ſeruant of God, M^r^. W. PERKINS, late Preacher of the Word in Cambridge.

AND

Carefully tranſlated into Engliſh by Francis Cacot and Thomas Tuke.

ROM. 8. verſ. 29,30.

For thoſe which he knew before, he alſo predeſtinate to be made like to the Image of his Sonne, that hee might be the firſt borne among many brethren.

Moreouer, whome he predeſtinate, them alſo he called, and whome he called, them alſo he iuſtified, and whome he iuſtified, them he alſo glorified.

HINC · LVCEM · ET · POCVLA · SACRA ·
ALMA MATER
CANTA
BRIGIA

Printed at London by IOHN LEGATT, Printer
to the Vniuerſitie of Cambridge.
1613.

To the Right Worſhipfull

SIR PETER BVCK, Knight: And to the vertuous Ladie his wife, Grace [illegible] from God our Father, and from [illegible] Chriſt.

RIGHT Worſhipfull, amongſt the manifolde points of Chriſtian Religion, the truth of the Doctrine concerning Predeſtination, is worthy ſerious and ſober ſtudy, for the ſound vnderſtanding thereof. For firſt, it is ſomething difficult and obſcure. Secondly, becauſe it is by ſome eagerly impugned, as a friuolous and forged inuention of mans braine. Thirdly, diuers opinions haue paſſed frō diuers men diuerſly, about this one point; whereas notwithſtanding there is but one truth, and one definite & conſtant ſentence to be ſound in holy writ concerning it. Fourthly, this one doctrine doth giue very good euidence, and an ample Demonſtration of Gods infinite mercie, and exact iuſtice. Fiftly, it affordeth ſome taſte of his profound and impenetrable counſel. Sixtly, it doth notably manifeſt his admirable wiſedome and policie, and the incorruptible purity of his nature, who wiſely diſpoſeth al things, and vſeth euen euils without iniuſtice; and the leaſt receipt or infuſion of corruption; and all for the manifeſtation of the glory of his Name, and of the ſplendour of his renowned properties. Seauenthly, it confoundeth the common cauill of many deſperate and infatuated Atheiſts, who would make Gods Predeſtination the pillar of their ſenſuall ſecurity, and ſecure ſenſuality. Laſtly, it miniſtreth exceeding comfort vnto thoſe, who renouncing the kingdome of Sinne, doe liue like Saints in the kingdome of Grace. Firſt, becauſe it is not poſſible for any ſuch to ſinne with full conſent of heart. Secondly, becauſe no perſonall merits are required of them. Thirdly, becauſe the Spirit of God abideth in them, who is buſie within the hiue of their hearts as a Bee, & worketh them like waxe. Fourthly, becauſe God hath eternally predeſtinated them to eternall ioyes, and thoſe alſo incomprehenſible & ineffable. Fiftly, becauſe God hath in abundance vouchſafed that to them beeing but an handfull, which he hath denied to whole heapes beſides. Sixtly, for that they being elected, can in no wiſe periſh, For the counſell of the Lord ſhall ſtand for euer, *Pſal.*33.11. And he loueth them with an euerlaſting loue, *Ierem.*3.4. Though a Mother ſhould forget her Childe, yet he will not forget them, for he hath grauen them vpon the palme of his hand, *Iſa.*49.15,16. Therfore he will confirme them vnto the end, 1.*Cor.*1.8. And by his power keepe them vnto ſaluation, 1.Pet. 1.5. He will loue them conſtantly, though he viſit their tranſgreſſions with rods, *Pſal,*89.32,33. He will neuer turne away from them, though he take them by the necke (as Iob ſpeaketh) and beat them, though he cut their reines and breake them, and though he powreth their gall vpon the ground, and runneth vpon them like a Gyant. Ioſeph did affect his brethren entirely, though he ſpake roughly to them. He may alſo ſometimes let them fall, as a louing Nurſe may her childe, but he will lift them vp againe; therefore howſoeuer they may fall, yet they ſhall not fall away. Indeede they may leaue their firſt loue, as the Church of Epheſus did; but they ſhall neuer leaue to loue at all, if euer they loued truly. For (as Paul ſaith) Loue doth neuer fall away, it may be leſſened, but it cannot be loſt. In like manner, their faith may bee couered, as the Sunne with a duſkie cloud in a gloomy day: or as the trees are with ſnow ſometimes in winter; but yet it continueth firmely fixed (though now and then eclipſed) in the ſphære of the heart, and keepeth ſap in the roote. For the righteous man is as a tree planted by the riuers of waters, *Pſal.*1.3. And is built by that great builder of heauen and earth vpon a rocke, *Mat.*16.18. Theſe comforts will this one doctrine affoord, being throughly pondered and vnderſtood. And no doubt theſe and the like conſiderations mooued that holy and learned man of bleſſed memory, to publiſh this preſent treatiſe for the benefit of the Church, and the ſame haue alſo incited vs to turne it out of the tongue wherein he wrote it, into the Engliſh, for their profit who are ignorant in the other; and the rather, becauſe it is contriued and penned very plainely, ſoundly, and ſuccinctly, as the ſubiect will permit. The which (Right Worſhipfull) aſſuring our ſelues of your vnfaigned loue vnto the truth, we do preſent and dedicate vnto you, in token of deſerued gratitude, for vndeſerued kindneſſe, not doubting of your courteous and kinde acceptance. And thus wee humbly take our leaues, recommending you, and all yours to the protection of Iehoua, Rocheſter, this 19. of February, 1606.

Ier.41.40,
Iob 16.12.

Piptein,
Ecpiptein

Reu.2.4.
1.Cor.13.8.

Your Worſhips in all dutie,

FRANCIS CACOTT, and

THOMAS TVKE.

MASTER PERKINS HIS
Epiſtle to the Reader.

THE Doctrine of Predeſtination and Gods grace is to be founded vpon the written Word of God, and not vpon the iudgements of men. For as Hilarie ſaith well, God can not bee vnderſtoode but by God: And againe, We muſt learne of God, that we are to vnderſtand of God, becauſe he is the onely Author of our knowledge of him. It is alſo requiſite that this doctrine agree with the grounds of common reaſon, and of that knowledge of God which may be obtained by the light of nature; and ſuch are theſe which follow.

De Trin.l.5

1 GOD is alwaies iuſt, albeit men doe not vnderſtand how he is iuſt.

2 GOD is not gouerned of, much leſſe doth he depend vpon ſecond cauſes, but doth iuſtly order them, euen then when they worke vniuſtly.

3 GOD worketh wiſely, to wit, propounding vnto himſelfe a certaine end: he is ignorant of nothing: he doth not will or decree that which hee can not effect: he doth not idely behold what ſhall be, or what may bee done, but he diſposeth all things vnto his glorie; and therefore he hath decreed to doe ſo.

4 GOD is not changed: and thoſe things which are changed, are not changed without his vnchangeable decree, all circumſtances being certaine and ſure.

5 The ſecret and vnſearchable iudgements of GOD are to be honoured and acknowledged. Auguſtine. It moueth me (thou ſayſt) that he periſheth: and another is baptized: it moueth me, it moueth me as a man. If thou wilt heare the truth, it alſo moueth me, becauſe I am a man. But if thou beeſt a man, I am alſo a man: let vs both heare him that ſaith, O man! Verily, if we be therefore moued, becauſe wee are men, the Apoſtle ſpeakes to humane nature it ſelfe being weake and feeble, ſaying: O man, who art thou which pleadeſt againſt GOD! Shall the thing formed ſay to him that formed it, Why haſt thou made me thus? If a beaſt could ſpeake, and did ſay to God, Why haſt thou made him a man, and me a beaſt? mighteſt thou not iuſtly be angry, and ſay, O beaſt, who art thou? And thou art a man, but in compariſon of God, thou art a beaſt.

De verb.Apoſt.ſer.11.

Rom 9.20.

6 No good thing can be done, vnleſſe GOD doth abſolutely will and worke it: and we do that which is good, ſo farre forth as God doth worke in vs more or leſſe.

7 No euill can be auoyded, vnleſſe GOD do hinder it: and we auoyd euill, ſo farre foorth as God doth more or leſſe hinder it.

8 The will of GOD is knowne, not only by the written word, or by reuelation, but alſo by the euent. For that which commeth to paſſe, doth therfore come to paſſe, becauſe God hath willed that it ſhould come to paſſe.

9 A man doth not that good thing which by grace he is able to doe, vnleſſe God make him doe it, as hee hath made him able to doe it if he will.

10 Not a part only, but the whole gouernement of the world, and the execution of iuſtice, is to be aſcribed to God, as to the Author.

*I doe now exhibite vnto thee a view and picture of this doctrine, compoſed of theſe principles, and do publiſh the ſame, that I might to my power, helpe out * thoſe that ſticke in the difficulties of this doctrine of Predeſtination: and that I might cleare the truth, that is (as they call it) the* Caluiniſts doctrine, of thoſe reproches which are caſt vpon it: and that I might mitigate and appeaſe the mindes of ſome of our Brethren, which haue bin more offended at it then was fit. For I do willingly acknowledge and teach vniuerſall redemption and grace, ſo far as it is poſſible by the word. My mind is to purſue after peace, which is departing from vs: and I would haue all men ſo interprete my fact.

* Theologiæ ſtudioſus.

I alleadge the teſtimonies of the Auncient euery where, not but that euen one euident and perſpicuous ſentence of ſacred Scripture, concerning any point of Doctrine and Faith, is of more value and force, then all the teſtimonies of the Doctors and Schoolemen: but becauſe I holde it neceſſarie, that there ſhould be had an example of conſent and concord in that doctrine, which is expounded in holy bookes, and is propagated to all poſterity. And I hope, I ſhall ſufficiently perſwade an indifferent Iudge, that theſe things haue not bin lately hatched at home, which we deliuer in our Congregations and Schooles, but that we haue alſo deriued and fetched them from the Fathers themſelues.

William Perkins.

THE ORDER OF PREDESTINATION IN THE MINDE OF GOD, AS NEERE AS the Author could collect it out of the Scriptures.

PRedeſtination is the counſell of God touching the laſt end or eſtate of man out of this temporall or naturall life. For as touching naturall life wee are all alike: and this kinde of life is in the counſell of God onely a preparation and ſtep vnto the ſpirituall and heauenly life. The ſupreme ende of Predeſtination is the manifeſtation of Gods glory, partly in his mercy, and partly in his iuſtice. And this hath beene the doctrine of the Fathers. Saint Auſten ſaith, that one of theſe two ſocieties of men, which we myſtically call two cities, is that which is predeſtinated to reigne eternally with God: and the other to ſuffer eternall puniſhment with the deuill. Fulgentius ſaith alſo, That in Gods predeſtination there is prepared either a mercifull remiſſion of ſinnes, or a iuſt puniſhing. And Gregorie ſaith, That God being a iuſt Creator vnto all after an admirable manner, hath fore-elected ſome, and forſaken others in their corruptions. And the more learned School-men vſe to ſay, that God for the moreful manifeſtatiō of his perfection, hath predeſtinated ſome in manifeſting his goodnes by the rule of mercie; and damned others, in repreſenting his perfection by the rule of iuſtice.

1.Cor.15.46

De Ciuit. Dei, l.15. c.1

Ad Monymum, lib.1.

Comment. in 1.Reg. Cap.4.

The common meanes of accompliſhing this counſell is two-fold; the creation, & the permiſſion of the fall. Creation, is that by which God made the whole man of nothing according to his owne image; but yet changeable, and endued with a naturall life. The permiſſion of the fall is, whereby God did iuſtly ſuffer Adam and his poſterity to fall away, in that he did not hinder them when hee was able, as beeing indeed bound to none to hinder. And God is ſaid not to hinder euill, when he ceaſeth after a ſort from his operation, not illuminating the minde, and not inclining the will to obey his voice. This permiſſion of the euil of fault is by Gods foreknowledge and will, but yet onely for the greater good of all: which would be hindred if God did not ſuffer euill. For if there were not ſin, there ſhould bee no place for the patience of Martyrs, and for the ſacrifice of Chriſt offered vpon the croſſe, which doth infinitely exceede all the ſinne of the whole world. Auguſtine ſaith well: God hath iudged it better to doe good with euils, then to permit no euill to be. In A like manner Gregory ſaith: In his ſeuere iudgement hee ſuffereth euill to be done, but withall hee doth in mercy fore-caſt, what good things hee may bring to paſſe by theſe euils, which he doth ordaine by his iudgement. For what greater ſinne is there then that by which we doe all die? and what greater goodneſſe then that by which we are deliuered from death? And doubtleſſe but that Adam ſinned, our Redeemer ſhould not haue taken our fleſh vpon him....Whiles God was to bee borne man, the Almighty did foreſee that wee would make of that euill, for which they were to die, a good which ſhould bee greater then that B euill. The greatneſſe of which good what faithfull man is there who doth not ſee how wonderfully it doth excell? Surely great are the euils which we ſuffer by the deſert of the firſt fault: but what faithfull man would not rather endure worſe then to be without ſo great a Redeemer? And in this reſpect elſewhere he calleth the fal of Adam, fœlicem culpam, a happy fault. That which I haue ſaid of the permiſſion of the fal, I do alſo ſay of the fall permitted, ſauing that the permiſſion is a meanes of the decree by it ſelfe, but the fall is a meanes (of accompliſhing the decree) onely by the ordination of C God, who drawes good out of euill.

Enchir. c.27

Expoſ.1. Reg. cap.4.

In Benedict. Cerei Paſc.

This fall permitted commeth not to paſſe but God willing it, neither doth it come to paſſe contrariwiſe or otherwiſe then God permitteth, neither can it any further be then hee doth permit. Yet the will of God is not the cauſe of the fall, but the will of man left vnto it ſelfe by God, and mooued by the ſuggeſtion of Sathan; which will appeare by this ſimilitude: I build a houſe ſubiect to change and falling, which notwithſtanding would continue many yeares, if it might bee free from the annoyance of D windes: yea, if I would but vnderproppe it, when the ſtorme commeth, it would continue ſtable. But as ſoone as the windes begin to rage, I doe not vnderproppe it, and it is my will not to vnderproppe it, becauſe it is my pleaſure ſo to doe; thereupon the houſe beeing weatherbeaten falleth downe. I ſee the fall, and in part I wil it, becauſe now when I could very eaſily haue hindered the fall, yet I would not. And although thus farre I doe will the fall, in ſo much as it is my will not to hinder it: yet the cauſe of the fall is not to bee imputed vnto mee, that did not vnderproppe it, but to the windes which caſt it downe. So God leauing Adam vnto himſelfe, that he might be prooued by tentation, and that it might appeare what the creature is able to doe, the Creator ceaſing for a time to helpe and guide, is not to be accounted the cauſe of this fall. For he did not encline the mind to ſinne, hee did not infuſe any corruption, neither did hee withdraw any gift, which hee did beſtow in the creation: onely it pleaſed him to deny or not to conferre confirming grace. The proper cauſe of the fall was the diuell attempting our ouerthrow, and Adams will, which when it began to bee prooued by tentations, did not deſire Gods aſſiſtance, but voluntarily bent it ſelfe to fal away.

De ſummo bo. l. 2. c. 6.

Predeſtination hath two parts, the decree of election, and the decree of reprobation. So Iſidore ſaith: There is a double predeſtination, either of the elect vnto reſt, or of the reprobate vnto death: and both are done by God, that he might make the elect alwaies to follow after heauenly and ſpirituall things, and that he might ſuffer the reprobate, by forſaking them, to be delighted alwaies with earthly and outward things. And Angelome ſaith: Chriſt by his ſecret diſpenſation hath out of an vnfaithfull people predeſtinated ſome to euerlaſting liberty, quickning them of his free mercy: and damned others in euerlaſting death, in leauing them by his hidden iudgement in their wickedneſſe.

In li. 2. Reg. cap. 8.

Eph. 1. 5.

The decree of election is that whereby God hath ordained certaine men to his glorious grace, in the obtaining of their ſaluation and heauenly life by Chriſt.

These acts are vſually called the decree and the execution of the decree.

In the decree of election according to Gods determination, there is (as we conceiue) a double act. The former concernes the end, the latter concernes the meanes tending to the end. This the holy Ghoſt ſeemeth to me to haue taught very euidently, Rom. 9. 11. That the purpoſe which is according to election might remaine. Here wee ſee that Paul diſtinguiſheth Gods eternall purpoſe and election, & placeth in his decree a certaine election in the firſt place before the purpoſe of damning or ſauing. And in Rom. 8. 29, 30. Thoſe which he knew before, hee alſo predeſtinated to be made like to the image of his ſonne——. Whom he predeſtinated, them alſo he called. In which words Paul diſtinguiſheth betweene the decree, and the execution thereof, which hee maketh to be in theſe three, Vocation, Iuſtification, and Glorification. Moreouer hee diſtinguiſheth the decree into two acts, foreknowledge, whereby he doth acknowledge ſome men for his owne before the reſt, and predeſtination, whereby he hath determined from eternitie to make them like vnto Chriſt. In like maner Peter teacheth. 1 Pet. 1. 2. where he ſaith, that the faithfull are elected according to the foreknowledge of God the father vnto ſanctification of the Spirit. If any man ſhall ſay that by foreknowledge in theſe places wee muſt vnderſtand (as many would) the foreknowledge or foreſeeing of future faith, he is manifeſtly deceiued. For whom God foreknew, them he did predeſtinate that they ſhould bee like to Chriſt, that is, that they ſhould be made iuſt, and the ſonnes of God: for Paul addeth, Rom. 8. 29. That he might be the firſt borne among many brethren. But thoſe which are predeſtinated to be iuſt, and to be the ſonnes of God, are alſo predeſtinated to beleeue, becauſe Adoption and Righteouſneſſe are receiued by faith. Now wee cannot rightly ſay, that God doth firſt foreknow that men will beleeue, and afterwards predeſtinate them to beleeue; becauſe that God hath therefore foreknowne that thoſe ſhall beleeue, whome he did foreknow would beleeue, becauſe hee did decree that they ſhould beleeue. So Iuſtin Martyr calleth thoſe elect, who were foreknowne that they ſhould beleeue. And Lombard. Whome hee hath foreknowne, them he hath predeſtinated, that is, by grace conferred he hath prepared that they ſhould beleeue the word preached. Moreouer, the word (know) when it is giuen vnto God ſpeaking of the creature, doth very often ſignifie to imbrace or approoue. Pſal. 1. 6. The Lord knoweth the way of the righteous, but the way of the wicked ſhall periſh. Matth. 7. 23. Depart from me ye workers of iniquitie, I neuer knew you. Furthermore, the preſcience & purpoſe of God are by the holy Ghoſt put for one and the ſame thing. 2. Tim. 2. 19. The foundation of God remaineth ſure, The Lord knoweth who are his. Rom. 11. 2. Thoſe whom God foreknew are ſaid to be elected according to the election of grace, verſ. 5. And therefore the foreknowledge mentioned by Paul doth not ſignifie the foreknowledge of faith, or of any other vertue in thoſe which are to be elected. It is alſo the iudgement of Auguſtine, that predeſtination is ſometimes vnderſtood by preſcience, euen in the foreſaid place. Hath God caſt away his people which he knew before? And he ſaith that, Thoſe that are ſonnes in Gods foreknowledge, whoſe names are written in their fathers regiſter, ſo as they ſhall neuer bee raſed out. Cyril ſaith alſo that Chriſt knoweth his ſheepe, electing and foreſeeing them vnto euerlaſting life. As the Apoſtle ſaith, Rom. 11. 12. God hath not caſt away his people which he knew before. For as the Lord is ſaid not to know thoſe whome he doth reiect: as when he anſwered the fooliſh virgins ſaying, Matth. 25. 12. Verily I ſay vnto you, I know you not: ſo he is rightly ſaid to know thoſe, whome he doth predeſtinate and foreappoint vnto ſaluation. And Thomas expoundeth that place in the 8. to the Romanes after this ſort: Whom he foreknew in his knowledge of approbation, thoſe hee hath alſo predeſtinated: And he will alſo haue an effectuall will of conferring grace to be included in the knowledge of approbation.

Cont. Triph.

Comment. in cap. 8. ad Rom. Cognoſco, ſcio.

De perſeu. Sanct. li. 2. c. 18. Rom. 11. 1. 2.

De corrept. & grat. c. 9.

Expoſ in Ioh. 7. ca. 6.

Idem Hugo de ſanct. Vict in annot. in Rom. & Ioachim. in Reu. par. 1.

In the decree of election the firſt act is a purpoſe, or rather a part & beginning of the diuine purpoſe, wherby God doth * take certaine men which are to be created, vnto his euerlaſting loue and fauour, paſſing by the reſt, and by taking maketh them veſſels of mercy and honour: and this act is of the ſole will of God, without any reſpect either of good or euill in the creature. And God doth wrong none, although he chuſe not all; becauſe he is tied to none: and becauſe he hath abſolute ſoueraigntie and authoritie ouer all creatures. We that are but men giue leaue vnto men, eſpecially vnto our friends, to doe at their pleaſure in many things as they themſelues liſt, and to vſe their owne diſcretions. The rich man is kind to which poore perſon he pleaſeth; and of beggers hee doth adopt one, and will not adopt another, and that without offering any iniurie. Now that libertie, which wee yeeld vnto man, muſt much more be granted vnto God.

*1. Pet. 2. 9. People, which God challengeth vnto himſelfe. λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν.

The ſecond act is the purpoſe of ſauing or conferring glory, whereby he doth ordaine or ſet apart the very ſame men, which were to fall in Adam, vnto ſaluation and celeſtiall glory. This act is in no wiſe to bee ſeuered from the former, but to bee diſtinguiſhed in the minde (for orders ſake, and for the better vnfolding of it:) for as by the former men were ordained vnto grace, ſo by this latter the meanes are ſubordained whereby grace may be conferred and manifeſted: and therefore this latter maketh a way for the executiō and accompliſhing of the former. Moreouer, this act hath no inward impulſiue cauſe ouer and beſide the good pleaſure of God: and it is with regard to Chriſt the Mediator, in whom all are elected to grace and ſaluation; and to dreame of any election out of him, is againſt all ſenſe: becauſe he is the foundation of election to be executed, in regard of the beginning, the meanes, and the end. Laſtly, this act is not of men to be created as was the former, but of men falne away. Therefore in this act God reſpecteth the corrupted maſſe of mankind.

Furthermore, in this ſecond act there are fiue degrees, the ordaining of a Mediatour, the promiſing of him beeing ordained, the exhibiting of him beeing promiſed, the applying of him beeing exhibited, or to bee exhibited, and the accompliſhment of the application. It is not vnlike which Bernard ſaith, The kingdome of God is granted, promiſed, manifeſted, receiued. It is grannted in predeſtination, promiſed in vocation, manifeſted in iuſtification, inioyed or receiued in glorification.

De verbis libri Sapientiæ,

The ordaining of a Mediatour is that, whereby the ſecond perſon beeing the Sonne of God, is appointed from all eternitie to bee a Mediatour betweene God himſelfe & men. And hence it is, that Peter ſaith, that Chriſt was foreknowne before the foundation of the world. And well ſaith Auguſtine, that Chriſt was predeſtinated to bee our head. For howſoeuer as hee is (λόγος) the ſubſtantiall word of the Father, or the Sonne, he doth predeſtinate with the Father, and the holy Ghoſt, yet as hee is the Mediatour, he is predeſtinated himſelfe.

1.Pet.1.10. προεγνωσμένου.

The promiſing is that, whereby Chriſt beeing from eternitie ordained for the ſaluation and ſpirituall life of men, is reuealed and offered vnto them, together with grace to be obtained by him: this promiſe is vniuerſall in reſpect of all and euery one that do beleeue: Ioh.3.16. God ſo loued the world, that he hath giuen his onely begotten Sonne, that euery one that beleeueth in him ſhould not periſh. Ioh.6.47. He that beleeueth in me hath life euerlaſting. Matth.11.28. Come vnto me all ye that are wearie and laden, and I will eaſe you. Mark.16.16. He that ſhall beleeue, and be baptized ſhall be ſaued: but he that will not beleeue ſhall be damned, Act.10.43. That through his name all that beleeue in him, ſhall receiue remiſſion of ſinnes. Act.13.39. By him euery one that beleeueth, is iuſtified. Rom.1.16. The Goſpell is the power of God to ſaluation to euery one that beleeueth. Rom.10.4. Chriſt is the end of the law for righteouſnes vnto euery one that beleeueth. Gal.3.22. The Scripture hath concluded all vnder ſinne, that the promiſe by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt ſhould be giuen to them that beleeue.

With the promiſe there is ioyned an exhortation; or commaundement to beleeue: which is more generall then the promiſe; becauſe the promiſe is made onely to beleeuers; but the commaundement is giuen to beleeuers & vnbeleeuers alſo. For the elect are mingled with the wicked in the ſame aſſemblies: and therefore the Miniſters of the Goſpell ought indifferently to exhort all and euery one to repent, conſidering that they are altogether ignorant, who, and how many be elected, and bee to be conuerted; Moreouer, God by exhortations to repentance, meaneth to leaue thoſe without excuſe, whome he doth ſee will neuer repent. So Abbot Ioachim ſaith: It behooueth them to preach for the elects ſake, and to declare vnto men the words of life, that their light may ſhine before men, and that they may fatten the hearts of the elect, by annointing them with the oyle of ſpiritual doctrine: but for the reprobate, ligare aquam cœlo, to tie the water in the clowdes. And againe, Leſt the reprobate ſhould haue excuſe, and for the elect which are among them, the meſſenger himſelfe ſhall be ſent, who doth not onely preach this in ſecret as it were for feare, but cryeth alſo with a loude voice, which may bee heard farre off, and of all men alſo. Some are wont to ſay, that Gods commaundement by this meanes doth ouerthwart his decree: becauſe he commaundeth that, which he willeth not to effect. But I anſwer, firſt, that God in his commaundements and promiſes doth not vtter whatſoeuer he hath decreed, but doth in part onely ſo farre forth propound his will, as he knoweth it expedient for the ſaluation of the elect, and the gouerning of all. By his commandements, therefore he ſheweth what hee liketh, & what he willeth that we ſhould do to him,

In Reuel. p.3.1.2.

Part.4.c.7.

not

A not what he will do to vs or in vs. And God who willeth not all things alike in all, doth will conuerſion in ſome onely in reſpect of approbation, exhortation, and meanes: in others he willeth it alſo as touching the decree of working it. Here is no diſagreement in the wils, but ſundry degrees of willing in regard of vs, according to which God is ſaid both to will and to nill.

[illegible] Secondly I anſwer, that the reuealed will is neuer contrary to the will of his good pleaſure, or to the decree of God, (with the which it doth alwaies agree, both for the beginning, as alſo in the end and ſcope) but that it is notwithſtanding often diuers, and that in ſhew it B ſeemeth ſometimes contrarie, if wee conſider the manner wherein it is propounded. God Iſa.38. commaunded Iſaiah to declare vnto Ezechiah Ion.3.4. his death; and hee did alſo denounce deſtruction vnto the Niuiuites within fortie daies: and yet he had decreed to put neither of them both in execution. The humane will Mat.26.39. of Chriſt did with an holy diſſention in ſome ſort wil deliuerance from the agony of death, which notwithſtanding the diuine willed not. Gen.18. Abraham prayed without doubt by diuine inſpiration, and therefore with faith, that the Sodomites might be ſpared, and yet he knew that in Gods decree they were appointed to deſtruction. Neither muſt this ſeeme ſtrange; C for one good thing as it is and remaineth good, may be different from another thing that is good. Thirdly, thou bidſt thy debter pay his debt, though in the meane time thou doeſt not make him able: why may not God therefore for iuſt cauſes commaund that, which he himſelfe will not doe?

Λύτρον. The exhibiting of the Mediatour is that, whereby the Sonne of God being borne man in the fulneſſe of time, doth pay the price of redemption to God for the ſinnes of men. The vertue and efficacy of this price beeing paid, in reſpect of merit and operation is infinite; but yet it muſt be diſtinguiſhed, for it is either potentiall or actuall. The potentiall efficacie is, whereby the price is in it ſelfe ſufficient to redeeme euery one without excep- D tion from his ſins, albeit there were a thouſand worlds of men. But if wee conſider that actuall efficacie, the price is payd in the counſell of God, and as touching the euent, onely for thoſe which are elected and predeſtinated. For the Sonne doth not ſacrifice for thoſe, for whom he doth not pray: becauſe to make interceſſion and to ſacrifice are conioyned: but hee prayeth onely for the elect and for beleeuers, *Ioh.*17.9. and by praying he offereth himſelfe to his Father, verſ. 19. For (as Illyricus hath well obſerued) this whole prayer in the 17. chapter is indeed (as he ſpeaketh) an oblatorie & expiatorie prayer, or (as the Papiſts call that blaſphemous forme) a Canon or rule of ſacrifice, by which Chriſt hath offered himſelfe a ſacrifice to the Father for the ſinnes of the world. Therefore A the price is appointed and limited to the elect alone by the Fathers decree, and the Sonnes interceſſion and oblation. Secondly, Chriſt bare their perſon, and ſtood in their roome vpon the croſſe, for whome hee is a Mediatour: and conſequently, whatſoeuer Chriſt did as a Redeemer, the ſame did all thoſe in him, and with him which are redeemed: Chriſt dying, riſing againe, aſcending, & ſitting at the right hand of the Father, they Eph.2.6. alſo die with him, riſe againe, aſcend, and ſit Coloſ.3.1. at the right hand of God. Now that all theſe things can be truly ſaid of the elect only, and of ſuch as beleeue, I prooue it thus. To ſay that any one of the wicked, which are to periſh B for euer, is raiſed vp in Chriſt riſing againe, is flat againſt the truth; becauſe the raiſing vp of Chriſt is (that I may ſo ſpeake) his actuall abſolution from their ſins for whome he died; for euen as the Father by deliuering Chriſt to death, did in very deede condemne their ſinnes imputed vnto Chriſt, for whome he died; ſo by raiſing him vp from death, euen ipſo facto hee did abſolue Chriſt from their ſins, and did withall abſolue them in Chriſt; but beeing abſolued from their ſinnes, they ſhall not periſh, but be ſaued. Therefore that wicked man which periſheth for his ſin, cannot be ſaid to haue riſen againe with Chriſt; and therefore Chriſt did not beare his perſon C vpon the croſſe. Thirdly, the expiatorie ſacrifice ſanctifieth thoſe, for whome it is a ſacrifice, as the holy Ghoſt plainly and abſolutely auoucheth, *Heb.*9.13.14. The ſacrifice and ſanctification appertaine to the ſame perſons: and Chriſt is their perfect Sauiour, whom he ſaueth, not onely by meriting their ſaluation, but alſo by working it effectually. But Chriſt doth ſanctifie onely the elect and ſuch as beleeue, therefore hee was a ſacrifice onely for them. And this was the iudgement of the auncient Church in this point. Auguſtine ſaith, In Iohan. tract.45 He which ſpared not his owne Sonne, but gaue him for vs all, how hath he not alſo with him giuen vs all good things? but for what vs? for vs Tract.2. which are foreknowne, predeſtinated, iuſtified, and D glorified. Againe, Thoſe whome he pleaſed to De recta fide ad Regin. make his brethren, he hath releaſed and made fellow heires. Cyrill ſaith, If God who is moſt worthy, was in the fleſh, he was of right ſufficient to re- In Ioan.l.11. deeme the whole world. cap.14. Againe, The Lord Ieſus ſeparating his owne from thoſe which were not his, ſaith, I pray onely for thoſe which keepe my word, and carrie my yoke. For he doth make them alone, and that iuſtly, partakers of the benefit of his mediation, whoſe Mediatour and high Prieſt he is. Gregory ſaith, 1.Hom.in Ezek.lib.1. The Author of life gaue himſelfe to death for the life of the elect. Againe, The Lord In Pſal.33. will redeeme the ſoules of his ſeruants, to wit, with his pretious blood, becauſe hee which beleeueth rightly in him, is redeemed from the due thraldome of his ſinnes. Sedulius: In Eph.c.1. All things are reſtored which are in the earth, ſeeing that the men themſelues, who are predeſtinated vnto eternall life, are renewed from the corruption of the old man.

m.u. Hom. in ſab. poſt. reminiſc. Bede: The fleſh of the Lord is furniſhed with ſpirituall vertue, that it might be a ſweete ſauour ſufficient for the ſaluation of the whole world. Hom. in vigil. Paſc. Againe, Our Lord and redeemer to the elect—whom he knew to be placed in his fleſh: yea and to vs alſo, whom he foreſaw ſhould beleeue in the laſt times, he hath procured the remedy of ſaluation by his death and reſurrection. In reu. par. 1. Ioachim the Abbat: The word All, which for the moſt part is vniuerſall, doth not alwaies ſignifie ſo much as it ſeemeth, as in that place, When I ſhall be lift vp I will draw all things to my ſelfe. Col.1.19.20. And by him it was pleaſed that all things ſhould be reconciled in him. It ſeemeth that in theſe places Elect Things only are vnderſtood. In 2. Reg. cap.7. Angelomus: What other nation is there in the earth beſides the elect people, for which God the Sonne of God vouchſafed to come into this world, as it were into AEgypt? that taking vpon him the forme of a ſeruant, he might with the merchandize of his blood redeeme vnto himſelfe an acceptable people zealous of good workes. In Exod. l. 2. cap.6. Rupertus; In that houre he waſhed thoſe onely from ſinne, whome his death findeth faithfull, whether dead or liuing. In Ioan. cap.12. Againe, The paſſion of Chriſt is the iudgement of the world, that is, ſaluation ſeuering the whole number of the elect, which were from the beginning of the world to the houre of the ſame paſſion, from the reprobate. And the caſting out of the Prince of this world, is the reconciliation of the nations of the elect. Againe, I will draw all things to my ſelfe: what all things? namely, All Elect Things, as all the members follow their head. In ca.5. ad Rom. Haimo: Chriſt hath taken away in the Elect not onely originall, but all actuall ſinnes alſo, and hath ouer and beſides giuen them eternall life. In Leuit. li. 17. cap.2. li. 4. de Myſt. Miſſæ. cap.4. Radulphus: The blood of the high Prieſt Chriſt, was the purgation of all beleeuers. Innocentius: Chriſts blood was ſhed effectually for thoſe onely who are predeſtinated, but for all men in regard of ſufficiencie: for the ſhedding of the blood of that iuſt one for the vniuſt was ſo rich in price, that if euery one had beleeued in the redeemer, none at all had bin held captiue of the diuell. Bona vallis tract.7. de verbis Domini. Arnoldus Carnotenſis: He redeemeth none but thoſe whome hee calleth and waſheth by grace; neither doth the Spirit ſanctifie any but thoſe, who are cleanſed and dead to ſinne: Redemption, waſhing away, and ſanctification are combined together.

The application is, when as Chriſt is giuen vnto vs of God the Father by the Spirit, in the lawfull vſe of the Word and Sacraments; and is receiued of vs by the inſtrument of a true faith. And Chriſt beeing giuen, is made vnto vs of God wiſedome, righteouſnes, ſanctification and redemption. 1. Cor.1.30.

The accompliſhment of the application is Glorification, whereby God ſhall be all in all by Chriſt in all the elect.

By this which hath beene ſaid, it is apparent, that the decree of election is the cauſe and foundation of all ſauing gifts and workes in men. From hence is true faith. Act. 13.48. As many as were ordained vnto eternall life, beleeued. And calling: Rom. 8. whome he predeſtinated, them he called. And, Who are called of his purpoſe. Hence Adoption: Eph.1. predeſtinated to Adoption. And ſanctification: Eph.1. He hath choſen vs that we ſhould bee holy and blameleſſe. Hence good workes: Ephe.2. Which he hath prepared, that wee ſhould walke in them. And perſeuerance: Ioh.6.37.39 Ioh.6. All that the Father giueth me, ſhall come vnto me, and him that commeth to me I caſt not away. Againe, And this is the Fathers will, that of all which hee hath giuen me, I ſhould loſe nothing. 2.Tim.2.19. The foundation of God remaineth ſure, and hath this ſeale, the Lord knoweth who are his. Cont. Iul. Pelag. lib.5. cap.3. Excellent is that ſaying of Auguſtine: He did chuſe no man worthy, but by chuſing he made him worthy. In Pſal.41 Againe, It is the grace of God, whereby he doth elect me, not becauſe any worthineſſe is in me, but becauſe it doth vouchſafe to make me worthie. Againe, And did not they alſo afterwards chuſe him, and preferre him before all the good things of this life? but they did chuſe him becauſe they were choſen; they were not choſen, becauſe they chuſed him. And thus much of the decree of election.

The decree of reprobation is a worke of Gods prouidence, whereby he hath decreed to paſſe by certaine men, in regard of ſupernaturall grace, for the manifeſtation of his iuſtice and wrath in their due deſtruction: or, it is his will, whereby he ſuffereth ſome men to fall into ſinne, and inflicteth the puniſhment of condemnation for ſinne.

It hath in like manner two acts. The firſt is the purpoſe to forſake ſome men, and to make knowne his iuſtice in them. This act hath a finall cauſe, but no impulſiue cauſe out of God. For it ariſeth of Gods meere good pleaſure, no reſpect had of good or euill in the creature. For the will of God is the cauſe of cauſes: therefore we muſt make our ſtand in it, and out of or beyond it no reaſon muſt be ſought for: yea indeed there is nothing beyond it. Moreouer, euery man (as Paul auerreth) is vnto God, as a lumpe of clay in the potters hand: Rom.9.21. and therefore God according to his ſupreme authoritie doth make veſſels of wrath, he doth not find them made. But he ſhould not make them, but finde them made, if we ſay that God willed in his eternal counſell, to paſſe by men only as they are ſinners, and not as they are men for cauſes moſt iuſt, though vnknowne to vs. Thirdly, if God did reiect men, becauſe hee foreſaw that they would reiect him, reprobation ſhould not depend vpon God, but vpō men themſelues. And this is all one, as if a man ſhould ſay, that God foreſaw that ſome would chuſe him, and others refuſe him. And the contempt of the Goſpell doth not befall infants, which die out of the couenant of the Goſpell. Fourthly, Paul, who was a moſt skilfull defender of Gods iuſtice, doth exclude all workes in the firſt place, out of this wonderfull election of one from another, made in the counſell of God: Rom.9.11. Not by workes, ſaith he, and therefore excludeth al reſpect of ſinne; then afterwards being rauiſhed with admiration, he quieteth

Rom 9. 19. 20.
Rom. 11. 33.

himſelfe in the alone will of God, Who hath reſiſted his will? But, O man, who art thou which pleadeſt againſt God? Againe, O the deepeneſſe of the riches, both of the wiſedome and knowledge of God: how vnſearchable are his iudgements, and his waies paſt finding out? To conclude, if it be demaunded, why God created this world and no more, we muſt haue recourſe to the meere will of God: and why muſt we not doe ſo, if it be demaunded why God electeth this man, and forſaketh that man or another? Author De vocatione gentium: A part of mankind is redeemed, a part periſheth. But who can tell, why God doth not pitie them, and pittieth theſe? the reaſon of the diſtinction is vnknowne, but the diſtinction or ſeparation it ſelfe is not vnknowne.

Mat. 20. 15.

The ſecond act is the ordaining of them to puniſhment or due deſtruction. This ordination in reſpect of the diuerſe conſideration thereof, may be diſtinguiſhed: and ſo it is either ſimple or comparatiue. The ſimple ordination is that, whereby this man, ſuppoſe Peter or Iohn, is ordained to puniſhment. And this ordination is of the moſt iuſt wil of God, yet not without reſpect of originall and actuall ſinnes. For as men are actually damned for ſinne: ſo God hath decreed to damne them for the ſame ſinne. Yet notwithſtanding ſinne is not the cauſe of the decree of reprobation, but in regard of order it goeth before in Gods fore-knowledge, not that former, but this latter act. The ordination which ſtands in compariſon is that, whereby one man and not another, and this man rather then that, beeing in the like condition, is ordained to puniſhment. This ſerueth to ſhew the libertie of Gods will, in the diſpenſation of ſupernaturall benefits. For in that God chuſeth this man, and not that, it declareth the liberty and very great perfection of God: and therefore vnder the name of an houſholder, hee challengeth the ſame vnto himſelfe, when hee ſaith: May I not doe with mine owne what I liſt? And verily though God deſtroy and condemne all thoſe whome hee doth forſake, yet ſhould he not be iniuſt. For we our ſelues in the daily killing and ſlaughtering of beaſts will not bee counted vniuſt, neither indeed are we: and yet in compariſon of God we are not ſo much woorth, as a flie is in reſpect of vs. If it be lawfull for thee to receiue in, or to thruſt out any out of thine houſe, becauſe thou wilt; it were a point of deſperate boldneſſe to take the ſame right from God in his houſe.

The cauſe of this comparatiue ordination is the ſole will of God, yea euen without reſpect of any ſinne at all, So Auguſtine: God deliuereth no man but of his free mercie, and condemneth no man but moſt righteouſly. Now why he deliuereth this man rather then that, let him ſearch, who can diue into the great depth of his iudgements. Againe, Why is it thus to this man, and otherwiſe to this? O man, who art thou that thou dareſt diſpute with God? And Gregorie. Let no man deſire to ſearch, wherefore one ſhould be elected when another is reiected, becauſe his iudgements are vnſearchable, and his waies paſt finding out. In this ſecond act of reprobation there be two degrees, a iuſt deſertion or forſaking, and damnation for ſinne. So Fulgentius: In ſuch (ſaith he) God begins his iudgement by forſaking, and ends it in tormenting. Diuine deſertion is two-fold. The firſt is, that whereby God doth forſake man, onely in regard of his aſſiſtance and ſtrengthening, by omitting the confirmation of the creature, and not conferring the ſecond grace, whereby the firſt might be made effectuall to reſiſt temptations, and to perſeuere in goodneſſe. This is the deſertion of triall, and may happen to them, who haue not themſelues as yet forſaken God. For it was in the firſt man Adam, who receiued of God power to doe that which he would, but not will to do that which he could. So Auguſt. He receiued (ſaith he) power if he willed: but hee had not will anſwerable to his power for if hee had had, he ſhold haue perſeuered. Again, He was able alſo to perſeuere; if he would: and in that he would not, it proceeded of free-will, which then was ſo free, that he was able to will well and ill. The cauſe of this deſertion was, that Adam and his poſteritie might know that they could fall by themſelues, but that they could not ſtand, much leſſe riſe againe: & therefore that they ſhould wholly depend on Gods mercy. Here alſo it muſt be remembred, that betweene this deſertion and Adams ſinne, there came alſo Adams will, whereby he beeing left to his owne ſtrength, did by and by perceiue the very ſame, his conſcience telling: and yet for all that he willed his owne fall by the free motion of his will.

Lib. 1. ad Simpl q. 2.
Expoſ. in Ioan. c. 37.
Lib. ad Mon.
Deſertio exploratíonis.
De correp. & grat. c. 11.

Deſertio pœnæ.

The ſecond deſertion is a priuation and leeſing of the gifts, wherewith the minde is adorned, and a deliuering into the power of Sathan, that he may ſeduce men, and more and more leade them into ſinne. This is a deſertion of puniſhment, and therefore it followeth ſinne. And of this deſertion, and not of the former, is the rule to be vnderſtood, A Deo deſerti Deum priores deſerunt, thoſe which are forſaken of God, doe themſelues firſt forſake God.

And this is our doctrine of Predeſtination, which ſauoureth neither of the errors of the Manichees, Stoicks, Pelagians, nor of Epicuriſme, but is (as I am perſwaded) agreeable to the truth, and orthodoxall: but yet it is oppugned by ſundry criminations, or falſe accuſations, which I will ſtriue with all my ſtrength to ouerthrow, and that briefly.

The firſt Crimination is,

That we teach, that certaine men, and thoſe but few, are elected.

Anſwer.

Certaine men we ſay. For all the elect are knowne vnto God, and their number can neither be increaſed nor diminiſhed. Few we doe

A doe not ſay, but after a preſcript and certaine manner. For (to omit the Angels) if you conſider the elect by themſelues, they are many, Matth. 8. 11. I ſay vnto you that many ſhall come from the Eaſt, and Weſt, and ſhall ſit downe with Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob in the kingdome of heauen. Reuel. 7. 9. I beheld, and loe a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, kindreds, people & tongues ſtood before the throne, and before the Lambe, cloathed with long white robes, and palmes in their hands. Yea there is as it were a world of elect. Auguſtine: The church which is without ſpot and wrinkle, and gathered together out of all nations, and which ſhall reigne with Chriſt for euer, euen ſhee is the land of the bleſſed, and the land of the liuing. Againe, B The reconciled world ſhall bee deliuered out of the maligning world. Euſebius: Chriſt ſuffered for the ſaluation of the world, of thoſe which are to be ſaued. The author of the booke De vocat. Gentium, lib. 1. In thoſe which are elected, foreknowne and ſeuered from the multitude of men, there is a certaine ſpeciall vniuerſalitie counted, that the whole world may ſeeme to be deliuered out of the whole world, and that all men may ſeeme to be taken out of all men. Beda calleth thoſe a world to be enlightened & healed, who were predeſtinated to eternall life. Thomas: The true light enlightneth thoſe, who come into the world of vertues, not thoſe which come into the world of vices.

De doct. chr. l. 3. c. 34.

Tract. in Ioan. 11. 1.

Hiſt. l. 4. c. 15

In Tobiam.

In Catena In 1. Ioan, ex Orig.

C Neuertheleſſe, if thoſe ſame elect be compared with them that are iuſtly damned, wee ſay according to the Scriptures, that they are few, Mat. 7. 13, 14. The gate is narrow, and the way ſtreight which leadeth vnto life, and few there be which finde it. Againe, Many are called, but few are choſen, Matth. 20. 16.

The ſecond Crimination is,

> That we teach, that God ordained men to hell fire, and created them to the end that he might deſtroy them.

Anſwer.

Here the diſtinction of the double act in reprobation muſt be repeated and retained. First therefore I anſwer, that reprobation in regard of the former act is abſolute, that is, D in regard of the purpoſe to forſake the creature, and to manifeſt iuſtice in it: ſo we teach and beleeue. For we cannot ſo much as imagine a cauſe in the creature, why it was Gods will to paſſe by it, and to ſuffer ſome to fall finally from their bleſſed eſtate. Yea ſinne is it ſelfe after the deſertion and iuſt permiſſion of God: and therefore it can by no meanes be the cauſe of the permiſſion and deſertion. Whence it is that Lumbard the Maſter of all the Schoolemen ſaith, that God hath reiected whom he would, not for any future merits which he did foreſee, but yet moſt righteouſly, though wee cannot conceiue the reaſon thereof. And Hierome long before him doth thus expound that place of Paul, Rom. 9. 11. (Ere the children were borne, and when they had neither done good nor euill) If Eſau (ſaith he) and Iacob were not yet borne, neither had done good or euill, whereby A they might winne Gods fauour or offend him, and if their election and reiection doth not ſhew their ſeuerall deſerts, but the will of the Elector and Reiector, what ſhall we ſay? Afterwards: If we graunt this, that God doth whatſoeuer he will, and that he either chuſeth or condemneth a man without deſert and workes: it is not therefore in him that willeth, nor him that runneth, but in God that ſheweth mercie. Againe: Therefore it is in vaine asked, —— ſeeing that it is in his power and will either to chuſe or to refuſe a man without good and euill workes. Anſelmus: It is not ours to know why God denieth grace to them which would gladly receiue and conſent to grace. But this thing onely we dare affirme, That God dealeth iuſtly, if he doe reiect offenders. But God onely knowes the B reaſon why hee doth elect one that would not conſent to grace, and neglect another, that would ſo well conſent vnto it. Againe, No creature is able to ſearch out why hee is mercifull to this man rather then to another. *Thomas: Why hee electeth theſe vnto glory, & reiecteth thoſe, hee hath no reaſon but the diuine will. Againe, The difference of thoſe which are to bee ſaued, from them that are to be damned, proceedeth C from the principall intention of the firſt Agent. Againe, We muſt not enquire why hee conuerteth theſe, and not thoſe. For this commeth of his owne meere will. And Auguſtine vpon Iohn: Why he draweth this man, and not that, doe not deſire to iudge, if thou wouldſt not erre.

Lib. 1. diſt. 41.

Ad Hebid. quæſt. 10.

Comment. in Math. c. 11.

In Rom. c. 11.

*Summ. 1. par. qu. 23. art. 5.

Contra. Gen. l. 1. c. 44.

Neuertheleſſe reprobation in regard of the ſecond act, that is, in reſpect of the D purpoſe to damne, is not abſolute, but for ſinne. For no man periſheth but thorough his owne default; and no man is abſolutely ordained to hell or deſtruction, but for his ſinne; hauing alſo receiued before in Adam power, whereby hee was able to liue holily and happily, if ſo be that hee would. And therefore I ſay that that which they alleadge is a very calumnie.

Secondly I anſwer

* The ſame doe other Schoolemen affirme in the middeſt of Papacie. Gregorius Ariminenſis layeth downe ſixe concluſions concerning Predeſtination. Firſt, that there is no body predeſtinated for the well vſing of Free-will, which God foreknew that hee ſhould haue. Secondly, that no man is predeſtinated, becauſe hee was foreknowne to continue to the end without any let of habituall grace. 3. That whomſoeuer God predeſtinated, him he did predeſtinate freely, purpoſely, and of his pure mercie. Fourthly, that no man is reiected for the euill vſing of Free-will, which God foreſaw hee would be tainted with. Fiftly, that there is not any reiected, becauſe hee was foreknowne to haue finally an impediment of diuine grace. Sixtly, that whomſoeuer God reiected, him hee did reiect without any cauſe in him. The very ſame concluſions hath Petrus de Alliaco, lib. 1. ſent. qu. 12. art. 2. and Marſilius of Ingben, lib. 1. diſt. 42. q. 4. Some of whoſe words I wil ſet down: He is predeſtinated (ſaith he) to whome God hath purpoſed to giue euerlaſting life. And he is reiected, on whom God hath determined not to beſtow the ſame, as the Apoſtle teacheth, Rom. 9. Againe: No man, that is predeſtinated, is predeſtinated for any thing, which ſhould be in him in time to come: ſo alſo there is no reprobate reiected for any cauſe, which was to bee in him in time to come. And euery one that is predeſtinate, is predeſtinated onely by grace, and by Gods mer- that God did not ſimply create man to deſtroy him, but that he might manifeſt his iudgement by the iuſt deſtruction of the ſinner. Now it is one thing to will the deſtruction of a man as he is man; & another thing to will the deſerued deſtruction of a man as he is a ſinner. Here alſo the iudgement of Cameracenſis, a iudiciall Schooleman is to bee heard & obſerued. According to the Scripture (ſaith hee) although God ſhould puniſh or afflict ſome creature eternally, or vtterly aboliſh it without any ſinne in it, yet hee ſhould not deale vniuſtly or cruelly with it. Whence it is, Wiſd. 12. 12. Who dare accuſe thee, if the nations periſh vvhich thou haſt made? God is not bound to lavves created, as if any thing vvere iuſt before God did vvill it, whereas indeed the contrary is true.

In ſent. l. 1 q. 22. art. 2.

ceſſull diſpoſition, not for any cauſe either actuall or primatiue to be found in him, whileſt hee liueth. Againe, To reiect is to nill to ſhew mercie, and this is not for the euill workes of any creature, for how holy ſoeuer the workes were, God would ſhew mercy as he liſted. So alſo Francis. Mar. lib. 1. q. 31. art. 2, 3. ſaith, that there are foure ſignes neceſſarie for the vnderſtanding of the proceeding of predeſtination and reprobation: Firſt, in which Peter and Iudas are offered to the diuine will, as to neither of them both. And then the diuine will did pre-ordaine Peter vnto glorie, it had no poſitiue act about Iudas, according to Auguſtine. The ſecond ſigne is, in which hee preordained Peter to grace: and then hee had no poſitiue act as yet about Iudas. The third ſigne is, in which they are left to themſelues, and both of them doe fall into ſinne. The fourth ſigne is that, in which Peter riſeth againe, for hee cannot continue, becauſe he is predeſtinated by the firſt ſigne, But Iudas riſeth not againe, becauſe he hath not God to raiſe him vp, therefore he is reiected. D. Bannes. in 1. Thom. q. 23. The cauſe and reaſon of the whole worke of reprobation cannot be ſaid to bee in the reprobates, for ſinne it ſelfe cannot bee the cauſe of that permiſſion of ſinne, for which a man is damned, whether it be originall or actuall, as it appeareth in infants, who die onely with originall ſinne: which verily, howſoeuer it may be the cauſe why infants are forſaken in it, yet neuertheleſſe it cannot bee the cauſe and reaſon, why the whole nature of man ſhould bee ſuffered to fall in Adam. And Ferrarienſis (in Thom. con. Gent. pag. 603.) ſaith, that foure things are found in a reprobate; to wit, a ſufferance to fall into ſinne, the ſinne it ſelfe, Gods forſaking not raiſing him from ſinne, and the puniſhment or damnation. Now reprobation is not alike, but diuerſly affected to all theſe. For if wee conſider ſinne in it ſelfe, reprobation is not cauſed by it. Although nothing on our parts, to wit, no worke of ours be the cauſe of the whole worke of reprobation (for of all theſe together, namely, of the permiſſion, forſaking, and puniſhment, the manifeſtation of Gods iuſtice is the alone cauſe, conſidering that no worke of ours is the cauſe of the permiſſion) yet notwithſtanding our wicked working or ſinne is the cauſe why we are damned and puniſhed. Againe, We denie that God is cruell, for we ſay that God doth not puniſh and torment the reprobate for the fulfilling (as it were) of his owne fantaſie, but for ſinne eternally fore-knowne, which he determined ſo to diſpoſe of by puniſhing of it, that his iuſtice might be made manifeſt.

The third Crimination is.

That the Stoicall predeſtination and Fate is brought in by vs, becauſe (as they ſay) wee teach that all things come to paſſe by the neceſſarie & energeticall decree of God, yea euen the fall of Adam, the which (ſay they) God according to our opinion did decree and will.

ἐνεργητικὸς. Powerfull in working.

Anſwer.

Wee ſay that Adams fall came to paſſe, God not onely foreknowing, but alſo willing and decreeing it: and that without blaſphemy, if thou wilt friendly and curteouſly giue leaue to ſhew how far forth, and in what manner. The will of God is twofold, generall and ſpeciall. The ſpeciall will (which the ſcripture calleth, Cephets) is that by which God doth both approoue and effect a thing: or elſe it is Gods good pleaſure, whereby taking delight in ſomething hee doth will it ſimply, both as touching the doing of it, as alſo in reſpect of approbation. The obiect of this will dependeth on the will, and followeth it as the effect followeth the cauſe. And by this will our iudgement is, according to the word of God, that God willeth that which is good, and nilleth that which is euill as it is euill. Pſal. 5. 4. Thou art a God vvhich vvilleſt not iniquitie. And of this kinde, or rather manner of will, are theſe ſentenences of Auguſtine, to be vnderſtood. God hath foreknovvne, but he did not foreappoint the vvorkes of vngodlines. And, He doth onely foreknovv, and not preordaine euils. And, It is all one to ſay, God is the author, and God vvilleth. The generall will is that whereby God willeth a thing not to bee, (for that, which is not, therefore is not, becauſe he willeth it ſhal not be) and for certaine cauſes alſo he willeth not to hinder ſome things, and conſequently, willeth that they ſhall come to paſſe; which things notwithſtanding hee doth not ſimply approoue. Or, it is the decree of God, whereby hee willeth ſomething, not in reſpect of approbation and effecting of it by himſelfe, but only in reſpect of ſuffering it to be done by others. And here the thing which is to be done, doth not depend vpon Gods will, but only vpon the will of the creature which falleth away: and with this will we ſay that God willed the fall of Adam, yet not ſimply, but onely that it ſhould come to paſſe. Now it is one thing to will a thing by it ſelfe, and another thing to will it as touching the euent. Moreouer he willeth the euent of ſinne, not by effecting it himſelfe: but by forſaking or not hindring when hee might if hee would. And if we enquire of the order of willing, it is this, firſt and properly God doth wil not to inhibit, and not to hinder ſinne: and by conſequent onely hee willeth the euent of ſinne. For that which God doth not hinder, doth therefore come to paſſe, becauſe he doth not hinder it: and as no good thing can either be or come to paſſe, vnleſſe God maketh it: ſo no euill thing can bee auoided, except God doe hinder. And there is not the leaſt thing which may be done without this will; vnleſſe we will ſay that Gods prouidence is idle, which to ſay were wicked. The reaſons of this our iudgement are many. The firſt reaſon I will draw out of moſt euident teſtimonies of Scripture. Act. 2. 23. Him I ſay, being deliuered by the determinate counſell and foreknowledge of God, after you had taken, with wicked hands you haue crucified and ſlaine. Act.4.27,28. They gathered themſelues together, to do whatſoeuer thine hand and thy counſell had determined before to be done. Here it is to be obſerued, that not only Chriſts paſſion, but alſo the workes which in reſpect of the Iewes, were wicked, doe come vnder the decree and will of God: to wit, ſo farre forth as God willed that they ſhould come to paſſe for iuſt ends. This very thing Auguſtine ſignifieth, when he ſaith, When the Father deliuered the Sonne, and Chriſt his bodie, and Iudas his Maſter: In this deliuering, wherefore is God iuſt and man guiltie, but becauſe in one thing which they did, there is not one cauſe for which they did it? And there is no reaſon that it ſhould ſeeme harſh vnto any, if ſpeaking of Adams fall wee follow the holy Scripture on this manner. When Adam did eate of the forbidden fruite, hee did eate that, which the hand and counſell of God had determined before to bee done. This is that very thing which wee ſay: This is the language of the Apoſtles, and of the Church, which therefore wee may vſe without the leaſt ſuſpition of blaſphemie. But to the former teſtimonies I will adde one place out of Peter, 1.Epiſt.3.17. It is better (if the will of God bee ſo) that ye ſuffer for well doing then for euill doing. But to puniſh men for well doing, in reſpect of men, it is flatly to tranſgreſſe the Law of God. Furthermore, God is ſaid to bidde Shimei to curſe Dauid, 1.Sam.16.10. that is, to haue ordained or decreed: for God biddeth and commaundeth a thing two waies, firſt by his reuealed will; and this hee doth by his word deliuered vnto men. Secondly, by his ſecret will, which is his prouidence or hidden decree, by which hee ſo gouernes all things, that nothing can bee done without it or againſt it: as in theſe places: Ierem.34.22. I will commaund and call backe the Aſſyrians againſt this cittie. Lament.3.37. Who is hee then that ſaith, and it commeth to paſſe, and the Lord commaundeth it not? Iob 37.6. Hee ſaith to the ſnow, bee thou vpon the earth: likewiſe to the ſmall raine, and to the great raine of his power. By which it appeareth, that it may well bee ſaid, that God decreed that Shimei ſhould curſe Dauid, and it is the like kinde of ſpeech to ſay, that God did not decree Adams fall ſimply, but in ſome reſpect. The ſecond reaſon followeth: it is the common opinion of all men that God doth will ſo ſuffer ſinne, but to will to ſuffer it, is to will not to hinder it, and to will not to conferre grace. Now he which foreknoweth ſome future euill, and willeth not to hinder it when hee might, and not to conferre confirming grace, hee doth indeede will that the ſame ſhould come to paſſe. Therefore we doe not place that will, wherby we ſay that God doth will that ſinne ſhould come to paſſe, and be in nature, either without or beyond the diuine permiſſion, but we doe inwrap and infolde it in it. And this is that which Caluin ſaith, and no other: It often offendeth ſome mens eares to heare that God willed the fall of man. But I pray you what other thing is his permiſſion beſides will, who hath authoritie to hinder, and in whoſe power the matter ſtandeth? The ſame affirmeth Beza, If any man heare that ſome things come to paſſe, which indeede are done againſt his will, that is, againſt his liking, not becauſe hee cannot, but becauſe hee will not hinder them. I anſwer, that it is all one, as if a man ſhould ſay, that they come to paſſe hee beeing willing they ſhould. For thoſe things which hee could ſurely hinder if he would, muſt needes come to paſſe, becauſe by not hindring of them, he willeth that they ſhould come to paſſe. And whatſoeuer God doth not hinder, hee doth therefore not hinder it, either becauſe hee willeth, that it ſhould be done, or becauſe hee doth vtterly nill that it ſhould bee done, or becauſe he doth not will it ſhould be done, or elſe becauſe hee cares not: that is, hee neither willeth nor nilleth that it ſhould come to paſſe. If you graunt the firſt, I haue my deſire. The ſecond is abſurd; namely, that God doth not hinder euill, becauſe hee doth vtterly nill that it ſhould be done. For this is to make God inconſtant. The third, Lumbard and the Schoole-men affirme. For they ſay, that God in reſpect of ſinne hath no poſitiue act, neither of willing nor of nilling, but onely a negatiue act of not willing to hinder it. But by this meanes a great part of thoſe things, which are done in the world, ſhould come to paſſe God being either ignorant or negligent. The very permiſſiō alſo is a certen will, & not a pure negation: for not to will to hinder, that is, to ſuffer, is indeed to wil not to hinder. If thou wilt ſay the fourth, thou doeſt wickedly make an idle and Epicuriſh God, therefore we muſt needs retire vnto the firſt, viz. that God doth decree that euill ſhould come to paſſe in ſuch ſort as I haue declared. Yet the fault muſt not be for all that tranſlated vnto him, becauſe he doth iuſtly and holily decree that which men doe wickedly.

Hypognoſt. lib. 6. lib. 80. queſt. 9. 2.

Epiſt.ad Vinc.48.

ἁπλῶς, κατά τι,

In Geneſ. cap.3.ver.1.

Ad acta colloq. Mõpelg. pag. 152.

Thirdly, wee know that Adams reuolting is now paſt and done: therefore we muſt ſay, that God did will that it ſhould be done, vnleſſe we ſhall ſay that his prouidence is not in all and euery thing. Thou wilt ſay, that an euill worke is ordained of God, that is, diſpoſed to Gods glory, the ſaluation of the godly, and the deſtruction of the wicked. I graunt it, but not this only. For the prouidence of God is ouer the world, and euery thing therein: both in reſpect of the end, alſo of the beginning of euery action: Sathan and the wicked doe not onely not finiſh, that which they would, but they doe not ſo much as begin it, vnleſſe God willeth and giueth leaue. It ſeemeth impious to think that any thing, thogh as little as may be, doth either exiſt or come to paſſe beſides that, which God beeing alwaies holy and iuſt, hath willingly from all eternity decreed.

Fourthly, let vs heare the iudgement of De præd. & grat. c. 15.

Enchir. c. 95. 101.
In Pſal. 148.
Cont. Marcel. lib.
In Abacuc. cap. 1.
In Ierem. 12 cap.
Lib. de ſacra. 1. c. 12. par. 14.
Lib. 1. c. 7. par. 4 de ſacr.
In ep. Paul. ad Rom.

the auncient Church. Auguſtine, Wee muſt know that all things are either perfited the Lord helping, or permitted the Lord forſaking, that thou mayeſt know that nothing is at all admitted, the Lord being vnwilling. Againe: There is nothing done but that which the Almightie willeth to bee done, either by ſuffering it to bee done, or by doing it himſelfe. Againe: Sometimes a man willeth a thing with a holy will, which God willeth not. Againe: It is poſſible that a man ſhould will that with an euill will, which God willeth with a good will. So much difference is there betwixt what is fitting for man to will, and what is fitting for God to will, and to what ende euery one referreth his will, ſo as that it may bee allowed or diſapproued. And againe: Know that whatſoeuer falleth out here contrarie to our will, happeneth not but by the will of God, his prouidence, ordinance, appointment and decree. Tertullian: God hath foreknowne all things by diſpoſing them, and diſpoſed them by foreknowing them. Ierome: Shall I ſay that any thing is done without thee, and that the wicked can doe ſo much againſt thy will? Surely it were blaſphemie ſo to imagine. And againe: What good or euill things ſoeuer are in the world, they happen not by caſuall chance, and without the prouidence of God, but by his pleaſure. Hugo ſaith: Men may well endure the hearing of this, and it may be ſaid without any ſcruple or trouble of conſcience, God willeth that which is good. But if it bee ſaid, God willeth that which is euill, it is a thing very grieuous to bee heard, and a godly minde doth not eaſily conceite of him which is goodneſſe it ſelfe, that hee willeth euill: for then it ſeemeth to bee ſaid that the good loueth that which is euill, and approueth that which is bad, and therefore a godly minde reiecteth this not becauſe that which is ſaid is not well ſaid, but becauſe that which is well ſaid, is not well vnderſtood. But after what ſort it ought to bee vnderſtood, hee himſelfe in the ſelfe ſame place explaneth. This (ſaith hee) is onely ſaid, and yet another thing is ment and vnderſtood, becauſe God willeth that euill be, and yet willeth not the euill. And againe: Hee willeth that euill bee, and yet hee willeth therein nothing but that which is good. And againe: When hee doth good and ſuffereth euill, his will appeareth in this, becauſe hee willeth that to be, which hee doth or permitteth. And againe: The will of God is his good pleaſure, and his will is his working, and his will is his Permiſſion. Catharinus ſaith: Wee neede not be afraid to confeſſe that God willeth ſinne, as bleſſed Auguſtine ſaith alſo, not becauſe hee willeth ſinne as it is ſinne and euill, but as it is good, to wit, as as it is the puniſhment of ſinne and vengeance in the reprobate; (for that is Gods purpoſe, and it is good, and not euill) or as ſinne it ſelfe is an occaſion vnto good in his beloued and elect.

Enchir. c. 98

But they vſe to obiect thus: To will that euill be done is proper and belonging to an euill will which is delighted with euill, or would vſe them to good contrary to the rule: That no euill ſhould bee done that good might come thereof. To this I anſwer: That here are two grounds to be laid. The firſt is, that the obiect euen of mans will is good, and therefore much more of Gods will, and the obiect of the will cannot bee euill by it ſelfe, but by accident: for if the will willeth euill, it willeth it not as it is euill, but as it is good. The ſecond ground is, that there is a certaine ſummum bonum or ſoueraigne Good, with which there is no euill conioyned; becauſe there is a certain thing infinitely good, namely God: but there is not any abſolute euill, becauſe there is nothing ſo euill, but it hath ſome good ioyned therewith, and therefore it is good that ſinne ſhould bee, and come to paſſe. So ſaith S. Auguſtine: Although therefore thoſe things which are euill, ſo farre forth as they are euill, are not good, neuertheleſſe it is good that there ſhould be not onely good things, but alſo euill. For vnleſſe this were good, that there ſhould be alſo euils, they ſhould by no meanes bee ſuffered by the Almighty, who is goodneſſe it ſelfe. Thus therefore I anſwer: That ſinne in the cauſes and circumſtances thereof fully and exactly weighed, is two waies to bee conſidered. Firſt, we conſider ſinne not as it is ſinne, but ſo farre forth as it hath ſome reſpect vnto good with God which decreeth it. And this way taking ſinne, although God willeth it not ſimply and by it ſelfe, yet hee decreeth it and willeth it as touching the euent. Moreouer, ſinne hath reſpect vnto God two manner of waies, firſt, becauſe it is in that which is good: ſecondly, becauſe it tendeth to that which is good. I ſay it is in that which is good; becauſe euery will is in that which is good as in the ſubiect. Now in reſpect of the ſubiect, that is, as ſinne is a motion, an inclination, or an action, God both willeth and effecteth the ſame. Moreouer, ſinne tendeth to that which is good, becauſe God ordaineth it to good, and from thence draweth the good either of triall, chaſtiſement, or puniſhment. And we ſay that God is ſo far forth willing that ſinne ſhould come to paſſe, as he is able, and will by his wonderfull wiſedome from thence to draw forth that which is good.

God did not decree the fall of Adam, nor any ſinne as it is ſinne vnto God.

Secondly, wee conſider ſinne according to the property and naturall being thereof, that is, ſinne as it is ſinne; And this way alſo wee conſider ſinne, eyther ſo farre foorth as it is ſin in it ſelfe in regard of men, or as it is ſinne to God. But God himſelfe neyther willeth, nor approoueth, nor effecteth ſinne as it is ſinne in it ſelfe in regard of the creatures that offend; and yet hee willeth it as touching the euent, not ſimply, as thoſe things that are good in themſelues, but onely by willing to permit that it may bee. For there is a threefolde action of Gods will, the firſt is that whereby God willeth any thing by willing it, that is, when hee willeth it with his whole and abſolute will, as Tertullian ſaith, and this way hee willeth that which is good in it ſelfe. The ſecond action is that, whereby hee nilleth any thing by nilling it, as that which ſhall neuer come to paſſe, becauſe God doth vtterly nill the beeing thereof. The third & laſt action is remiſſe, and in the middeſt betweene both, whereby he willeth ſome thing by nilling it ſlackely or remiſſely, that is, when hee partly willeth it, and partly nilleth it, or elſe ſo farre forth wils it, as that for iuſt cauſes he nils it. And after this ſort wee ſay, that God willeth the euent of euill, as it is euill in it ſelfe in reſpect of men; becauſe euill as it is euill after this ſort, is not abſolutely euill: and God draweth good out of euill, as it is euill in the nature thereof, or in it ſelfe: as he brought forth light out of darkeneſſe, euen as it was darkeneſſe in it ſelfe. And if ſo be that euill were abſolutely euill, as God is abſolutely good, hee would in no wiſe will the euent of euill, neither ſhould there be any euill exiſtent at all. For that which God vtterly nilleth, hath not any being or exiſtence.

But ſinne as it is ſinne to God, (that is to ſay, God conſidering ſinne, which is in it ſelfe ſin, in his decree wherein al things are ordained, as ſinne) hee neither willeth it, nor approoueth it, nor worketh it, no in this reſpect hee doth not ſo much as permit it. I doe not denie, but that God permitteth and ſuffereth euill, as it is euill in it ſelfe, (otherwiſe there ſhould not be euill properly in nature,) but I denie that hee permitteth it, becauſe it is euill. For God neuer ſuffereth euill for it ſelfe, but for the good that is therwith conioyned. And this is the meaning of that ſaying of Beza, The Lord neuer permitteth ſinnes, as they are ſinnes, yea rather hee euermore forbiddeth and hindreth them. And againe: Sinnes ſo far forth as they are permitted by God, beeing thereto willing, are not ſinnes, but the puniſhment of ſinnes. And thus vſing this expoſition is the minde and iudgement of Maſter Caluin of bleſſed memory, to bee vnderſtood, where as hee ſaith, that all the ſonnes of Adam did fall away by Gods will: And againe, that it was decreed by God, that Adam ſhould periſh by his owne falling away. And againe, It was the ſecret counſell of God, in which the fall of man was ordained. And againe: Adam did not fall away but according to Gods knowledge and ordinance. In theſe and ſuch like maner of ſpeeches his purpoſe was to ouerthrow the opinion of the Schoolmen, who would haue his permiſſion ſeuered from his will: It were good therefore for them better to conſider of the matter, who without either charity or humanity, doe with the blaſphemies of the Manichees, ſlaunder and bely this holy man.

Lib cont. Caſtel. de prædeſt.

Inſtit. lib. 3. cap. 23. ſ. 4. & ſ. 7.

Opuſ. 68 5. 8, 616.

Secondly they vſe to obiect, that God willeth things contrary, if he wil that that ſhould come to paſſe which he forbiddeth in his law. Anſwer. It is true indeede, if hee ſhould will one and the ſame thing to come to paſſe, and not to come to paſſe in one and the ſame reſpect and manner: but God forbiddeth euill as it is euill, and willeth it to come to paſſe as it hath reſpect vnto good. Hereupon Aquinas ſaith, That euils be, and that euils be not, are contradictorily oppoſed; but that God willeth euils to bee, and that God willeth euils not to bee, are not cōtradictorily oppoſed, ſeeing both are affirmatiue.

Summ. q. 19. art. 9.

Thirdly they obiect thus: That thing which beeing graunted, another thing neceſſarily followeth, is the cauſe of that ſelfeſame thing that doth follow, but this being graunted, that God willed the fal of Adam to come to paſſe, the ſame came to paſſe neceſſarily and infallibly. Therefore the will of God was in this reſpect the cauſe of ſinne. Whereto I anſwer, that the firſt propoſition of this argument is not generall; for in admitting the creation of the world, both the place and the time or continuance thereof, are infallibly and without doubt alſo to bee admitted, and yet the creation of the world is not the cauſe of the continuance thereof, and of the place, where it now conſiſteth. And that this propoſition may be true, it is thus to bee framed: That thing which beeing graunted, another thing infallibly followeth (no other cauſe comming betweene) is the cauſe of the very ſame thing that followeth, And the ſecond propoſition alſo fitted to this former is vntrue. For this being graunted that God willeth ſinne to come to paſſe, ſinne ſhall not come to paſſe immediately, but by the meanes of mans free will, although it come to paſſe infallibly on Gods part which decreeth it, yet it comes to paſſe freely on mans part, for it had beene poſſible for man not to haue ſinned when hee did ſin, if hee had would. As may appeare by this ſimilitude: God forſaketh man by not conferring and beſtowing on him neceſſary and ſufficient helpe for the auoiding of ſinnes; now man being forſaken by him, ſinneth neceſſarily; And yet the fault is not to bee laid on God, becauſe that in this his forſaking him the will of man commeth betweene. For God forſaketh man beeing willing to be forſaken, and not againſt his will and minde.

Secondly, I anſwer to the aforeſaid reproch of our doctrine, that wee ſay not, that ſinne is from the decree, or of the decree of God, as from the efficient, materiall, formall, or finall cauſe. But we do teach and auerre, that ſinne commeth to paſſe according to the prouidence or decree of God, as the ſole conſequent thereof. For wee aſſuredly thinke and iudge, that the decree of God doth ſo goe before the ſinne of man, as that it hath no reſpect of any cauſe, vnleſſe it bee of ſuch a one as is a falling and deficient cauſe. So ſaith Auguſtine: Therefore truely the great workes of the Lord are exquiſite in all his wils, ſo that after a wonderfull and vnſpeakable manner, that is not done beſide his will, which notwithſtanding is done contrary to his will.

Enchir. c. 101.

Againe it is obiected, He that ſaith that the decree of God is the energeticall operatiue beginning of all things, neceſſarily maketh the decree of God, the beginning alſo of ſinne. Whereunto I anſwer, that the holy Ghoſt himſelfe ſaith, that the decree of God is the beginning of all things beeing and exiſtent, Eph. 1. 11. God worketh all things after the counſell of his owne will. And againe, in the 17. of the Acts, In him wee liue, wee mooue, and haue our beeing. Auguſtine ſaith: The will of God is the very cauſe of all things which are. Hugo de S. Vict. ſaith: There is no cauſe of the will of God, which is the cauſe of all things. And this very thing common reaſon will teach vs, becauſe there muſt firſt ſome certaine ground be laid, from whence euery thing ſhould haue or take his beeing and exiſtence; and this ground is euen the very will of God. For a thing is not firſt, and then afterward God willeth it to come to paſſe; but, becauſe God hath decreed that a thing ſhould come to paſſe, or be done, therefore it is; And yet ſhall not God therefore be the cauſe of ſinne; becauſe ſinne is not properly a thing, action, or beeing, but a defect only: and yet neuertheleſſe it is not therefore nothing. For whatſoeuer hath a beeing, is either Really and Poſitiuely, or elſe in reaſon onely. And vnder thoſe things which are in reaſon, are contained not onely notions and relations, but alſo priuations: becauſe they haue not a reall matter and forme out of the vnderſtanding. But ſinne hath not a poſitiue and reall being, and yet it hath a beeing in reaſon (as they tearme it.) For ſo farre forth it is in the nature of things beeing, as it may cauſe a true compoſition in the minde: and although it doe not exiſt poſitiuely, that is, by matter or forme created; yet it is priuatiuely, becauſe that by the remooue or taking away of originall righteouſnes, that doth immediatly and truly follow & exiſt. Neither doth it follow, as ſome other naturall habit, or as a pure negation, but as a certen thing between both, that is, a want and abſence of the contrary good.

De gene. cont. Manic. l. 1. c. 2.

Ens Reale & Rationale.

[illegible] ſτερητικῶς.

Some vſe to obiect, that we doe teach, that God doth incline vnto ſin, and that he doth poſitiuely harden the heart. Whereto I anſwer, that wee allow not a bare permiſſion ſeuered vtterly from his will, neither doe we attribute a poſitiue or naturall actiō vnto God, as though hee did infuſe corruption & ſinne; and yet wee ſay that he doth actiuely harden the heart. The action of Gods prouidence, (as ſaith Suidas) in the works of men, is threefolde. The firſt is, according to his good pleaſure, whereby God willeth any worke, alloweth it, effecteth it, and is therewith delighted: this action is onely in good workes, which haue their beginning in vs from the holy Ghoſt. The ſecond action of Gods prouidence is of ſuſtaining, whereby God vpholdeth and maintaineth, the beeing and all the faculties, motions, actions, and paſſions of nature which offendeth. Act. 17. 28. In him wee liue, and mooue, and haue our beeing. And although God do ſuſtaine nature offending, κατ᾽ εὐδοκίαν.

κατὰ συντήρησιν.

A and the action of nature, yet is hee free from fault, becauſe hee vpholdeth the creature, onely as it is a creature, not as it is euill. For the ſecond cauſe, as the will of men can by it ſelfe doe euilly and corruptly: yet it can doe nothing by it ſelfe, vnleſſe the effect thereof bee reduced to the firſt cauſe. As may appeare more plainely by this ſimilitude: A man doth hault by reaſon that his legge is out of ioynt: now here are two things to be conſidered: the very walking or motion it ſelfe, and his haulting; the haulting proceeds onely from his legge out of ioynt, the walking both from his legge, and alſo from the facultie of moouing. In like manner a man ſinning, in that hee doth, it is of God, but in B that hee doth euilly, it is of himſelfe. Wee muſt therfore here know that God doth vpholde order as it is of nature, but furthereth not the will violently breaking out againſt the order of the morall law. The third action of Gods prouidence, is according vnto conceſſion, whereby God in the euill worke of man, worketh ſome things holily; and this laſt action is threefolde. The firſt is permiſſion; whereby God forſaketh eſpecially the wicked, by withdrawing from them his grace, and by leauing them according to their deſerts, vnto their owne wickedneſſe, which he had before reſtrained, that it might not break forth to ſo immoderate liberty. And we vſe commonly to ſay, that he which permitteth, C doth and effecteth ſomething; as when the rider giueth the reines vnto his wanton and ſporting horſe, wee ſay that hee doth mooue and encourage him, and we ſay, that the hunter doth put his dogge on the game, when as he letteth him ſlippe. The ſecond action (as I may ſo tearme it) is occaſionall, whereby God by proffered occaſions, in themſelues good or indifferent, outwardly drawes forth, ſtirres vp, and brings out ſinne in thoſe who of themſelues openly runne into wickednes; to the intent that hee may iuſtly either puniſh their knowne impietie, or elſe diſcouer it beeing cloſely ſhrouded. The like haue we ordinarily euen among our ſelues, for the Phyſitian by his preſeruatiue medicine, ſtir- D reth vp, inflameth, and draweth forth the humours out of the corruption of the body. Admitte a houſe bee weakely timbred, which beeing almoſt now already falne, will ere long fall; and that I doe not with any engines or inſtruments throw or beate downe the ſame, but onely take away the outward hinderances, and on euery ſide as it were open a way for the downfall, to the intent, that when it falleth, it may by the greater fall bee broken in peeces. After this ſort dealeth God with the wicked: and hereupon is it that the law is ſaid to ſtirre vp and increaſe ſinne in Paul, Rom. 7. 8. This action is done many manner of waies, as when the hinderances of ſinne are taken away; when as the way is opened to the committing of one eſpeciall ſinne, κατὰ συγχώρησιν.

and not of another; when as obiects are offered, which the vngodly vſe as inſtigations vnto ſinne. Theſe obiects are commaundements, threatnings, exhortations, and cogitations either good or indifferent, put by God in the mindes of vngodly men, from the which, the wicked by reaſon of his wickedneſſe, doth greedily take an occaſion to doe ill. And this is the manner and way truely, whereby we ſay that God ſtirreth man vnto euill, without infuſing the leaſt drop or lot of euill. For as in the middle region of the aire, the heat groweth ſtronger by the Antiperiſtaſis or repulſiō on euery part, from whence proceeds the thūder & lightning; and by the heat round incompaſſed, the clowds are condenſated and made thicke; euen ſo the wicked and vngodly when they are ſtirred vp by wholeſome precepts, doe grow more vngodly; and euill doth ſo much the more begin to delight them, by how much the more they know that it is leſſe lawfull for them; according to the ſaying of the Poet: Nitimur in vetitum ſemper cupimuſq; negata; Wee ſtill endeauour things forbid, and couet that is denied. The third action is a diſpoſing, whereby God through the euill worke of an euill inſtrument, finiſheth his owne worke iuſtly and holily. As for example: The ſale of Ioſeph in his brethren was ſinne; the iuſt action of God in this euill worke, was the fore-ſending of Ioſeph into Egypt, for the common good and benefit of Iacobs family. And from this diſpoſing proceedes it, that God vſeth the ſinnes of men holily, that he prouoketh them holily, and ordereth them as the Phyſitian for a medicine ordereth poyſon, contrary to the nature thereof. That hee ordereth them holily, both according to the cauſes and beginnings, and alſo according to the endes and iſſue: as when hee diſpoſeth the worke of the diuell infuſing corruption, either to the puniſhment of correction, vengeance, or triall. But concerning theſe, let vs rather giue eare to auncient Writers. Clemens Alexandrinus ſaith, It belongeth to Gods wiſedome, vertue, and power, not onely to do good, which is the nature of God, but alſo eſpecially to bring vnto ſome good and profitable ende, that which hath beene inuented by thoſe which are euill, and vſe profitably thoſe things which doe ſeeme euill. Auguſtine ſaith, God maketh and ordaineth iuſt men; but hee maketh no ſinners as they are ſinners, but ordereth them onely. And againe, As God is the moſt excellent Creatour of good natures; ſo is hee the moſt iuſt diſpoſer of euill wils. Againe, God verily fulfilleth certaine of his good wils, by the euill wils of euill men. Againe, God by thoſe men which doe thoſe things which he will not, doth himſelfe thoſe things which hee will. And againe, God vſing well euen thoſe that are euill, as beeing himſelfe abſolutely good: ſo far forth as in them lay, they did that which God would not. In this very thing that they did that which was contrary to Gods will, euen by them his will is done. And againe: Who would not tremble at theſe iudgements of God, whereby God doth in the hearts of euill men whatſoeuer he will, giuing vnto them according to their deſerts? And again, It is plaine that God worketh in the hearts of men to incline their wils whitherſoeuer hee will, either vnto thoſe things that are good for mercie, or elſe vnto thoſe things that are euill for their deſerts: ſometimes verily in his open iudgement, ſometimes in his ſecret iudgement, but euermore in his iuſt iudgement. And againe, God maketh not euill wils, but vſeth them as he liſt, becauſe hee cannot will any thing that is vniuſt. Fulgentius ſaith, Although God be not the author of euill thoughts; yet he is the diſpoſer of euill wils, and out of the euill worke of euery one, he doth not ceaſe to worke that which is good.

Stom lib. 1.

De Gen. ad lit. imperf. c. 3.

De ciuit. Dei lib. 11, cap. 17 Enchir. ad Laur. c. 101 De cor. & grat, c. 14.

De grat. & l. arb. c. 21.

Cont. Iul. l. 3. cap. 3.

In reſpect of theſe diuers actions concerning ſinne, it commeth to paſſe that we finde it ſaid in the Scripture, That God doth harden, doth make blinde, doth deceiue, doth command a worke that is euill, yea and doth the ſame, and that he deliuereth ouer to beaſtly affections, &c.

2. Sam 12. 12 & 16, 10. & 24. 1.

Thirdly, I anſwer to the aforeſaid reproch of this our doctrine, that wee doe vtterly abhorre and deteſt the Stoicall Fate, becauſe it maketh a neceſſitie inherent in things themſelues, which ſhould binde euen God himſelfe, and al other things, and make them ſubiect thereunto. For howſoeuer wee doe beleeue that the very decree of God is immutable, and therefore neceſſarie, yet in Gods ſelfe it was moſt free (for he could either not haue decreed that which hee did decree, or elſe otherwhiles haue decreed it:) and it addeth to the ſecond cauſes placed out of God a certaine neceſſitie, but yet ſo free a one, as that it is rather to bee tearmed a libertie, then a neceſſity. And this ſhall eaſily appeare to bee as I ſay, if I ſhall firſt ſhew what ſorts of neceſſity there be, and how farre forth it is agreeable vnto things. Firſt therefore a thing is neceſſary two wayes, abſolutely and conditionally. That is abſolutely neceſſary which cannot be otherwiſe, or elſe whoſe contrarie is impoſſible, as that God is omnipotent and iuſt. And that is conditionally neceſſarie, which cannot be otherwiſe, but yet not ſimply, but by the graunting of one or many things: and this kinde of neceſſity is either by nature, or the commandement, or decree of God. That is neceſſary by nature, which cōmeth to paſſe conſtantly, and immutably, by reaſon of the order which God hath ſet in the nature of things: after this ſort is it of neceſſity, that fire doth burne, that the earth is carried downeward, and the heauen mooued. That is neceſſary by commandement, which is neceſſarily to be done, becauſe God hath commaunded it. After this ſort it is of neceſſitie that one vndergoe the office of a magiſtrate, Rom. 13. 5. That is neceſſarie by the decree of God, which is ſo, becauſe God hath fore-knowne it, and willed either to effect it, or at the leaſt to permit it. After this

De ciuit. Dei lib. 5. c. 8. 9. 10. & de Geneſi ad lit. l. 5. c. 15.

Tull. de Finibus.

ſo, euery thing in reſpect of God is neceſſarie, and the will of God (as Auguſtine ſaith) is the neceſſity of things. Secondly, neceſſitie is either of compulſion or infallibilitie. Neceſſitie of compulſion, is that which inferreth violence to things by ſome cauſe working without, and forcibly conſtraineth that they do either this or that. And this indeede is the Stoicall neceſſity, that a man ſhould doe any thing againſt his will beeing compelled by force and neceſſitie. There is alſo ſuch a like kinde of neceſſitie of the Manichees, condemned by the Fathers, who taught that there was no violence or neceſſitie offered vnto the will by God, nor that it was forced by neceſſity to ſinne. The neceſſity of infallibilitie is that whereby a thing according to the euent ſhall certainely and immutably come to paſſe: yet ſo, as if we conſider the cauſe of a thing by it ſelfe, it may either not come to paſſe, or elſe come otherwiſe to paſſe. Of this manner of neceſſitie we muſt vnderſtand that principle: Euery thing that is, when it is, is of neceſſitie. And thus is neceſſitie diſtinguiſhed: now will I ſhew how farre forth it is agreeable to ſeuerall things. The euents of all things haue reference either to the ſecond cauſes, or to God, who is the firſt cauſe. Now ſome things in reſpect of the ſecond cauſes are neceſſarie, otherſome contingent. From cauſes which are neceſſarie, muſt needes proceede that which is neceſſarie, from thoſe that are free, that which is free, from thoſe that are naturall that which is naturall; and to bee briefe, ſuch as are the next cauſes aforegoing, ſuch alſo is the euent of things. But in reſpect of God, al things whatſoeuer, are partly changeable, and partly neceſſarie. In reſpect of Gods libertie, which doth that which it doth freely, all things are contingent and mutable: howſoeuer according to nature and the order of the next cauſes, they be neceſſarie and immutable. In reſpect of Gods decree, the ſecond cauſes and the effects of them are all neceſſarie, howſoeuer in themſelues they bee vncertaine and contingent. And yet they are not abſolutely neceſſary, but by the ſuppoſition of Gods decree; neither are they neceſſary by the neceſſitie of compulſion, but of infallibilitie only, becauſe God ordained before, that thoſe things which ſhould come to paſſe ſhould be. And this kind of neceſſitie taketh not away the contingencie and libertie of ſecond cauſes, but rather eſtabliſheth and confirmeth it. For that which is free worketh freely, and that which is contingent, worketh contingently, by the neceſſarie decree of God. Neither doth liberty and neceſſitie mutually ouercome each other, but libertie and compulſion. It is manifeſt therefore that Gods decree cauſeth an immutabilitie to all things, of which notwithſtanding ſome, in reſpect of the next cauſes, are neceſſarie, and otherſome contingent; but all of them in reſpect of Gods libertie mutable. And as the mutabilitie which things haue from Gods power, taketh not away the neceſſitie which they haue from the ſecond cauſes: ſo the neceſſitie of immutabilitie by Gods decree conſequently comming to paſſe, taketh not away the contingencie which they haue from the next cauſes and from Gods libertie. Moreouer we ſay, that Gods decree ordaineth the ſecond cauſes, & the very libertie it ſelfe alſo of mans will, not by compulſion, as if a man ſhould violently throw a ſtone; but by inclining and gently bending them, by obiects outwardly offered to the vnderſtanding (euen as a ſheepe is ſaid to be drawne, when graſſe is ſhewed her beeing an hungred) that a man may chooſe by his owne free motion, or refuſe that which God hath iuſtly decreed from all eternitie.

Auguſt. de verb. Apoſt. ſer. 2.

Theſe things beeing graunted, it is manifeſt alſo what wee ought to thinke concerning the fall of Adam. Which truly according to the euent is neceſſarie by the neceſſity of infallibility, by reaſon of the foreknowledge and decree of God: yet ſo as that God is not guilty of any fault; becauſe the decree of God howſoeuer it was neceſſarie in it ſelfe, yet it planted nothing in Adam, whereby hee ſhould fall into ſinne, but left him to his owne liberty, not hindering his fall when it might; and the ſame fall in reſpect of mans will (which doth that freely that it doth) came to paſſe contingently and moſt freely. But you wil ſay, that Adam could not withſtand Gods will, that is, his decree; whereto I anſwer, that euen as he could not, ſo alſo hee would not. But you will ſay againe, he could not will otherwiſe. Which I confeſſe to be true, as touching the act and euent, but not as touching the very power of his will, which was not compelled, but of the owne free motion conſented vnto the ſuggeſtion of the diuell. But to the intent that theſe things may more plainely be vnderſtood, wee muſt make diſtinction betweene three times, the time going before his fall, the preſent time of his fal, and the time after his fall. In the firſt moment of time the fall of Adam was neceſſary in a double reſpect: Firſt, by reaſon of the foreknowledge of God: for that which hee foreknew would come to paſſe, muſt needs of neceſſitie come to paſſe. Secondly, by reaſon of the permiſſiue decree of God, that fall was according to the euent neceſſarie immutably. Honorius Auguſtodunenſis ſaith, It cannot otherwiſe be, but that all things muſt come to paſſe, which God hath predeſtinated and foreknowne, ſeeing that he onely either doth all things, or permitteth them to be done. Hugo de S. victore ſaith: Sinne followeth of neceſſitie vpon the withdrawing of grace. And the reaſon hereof is very eaſie, becauſe euill permitted muſt come to paſſe, and cannot otherwiſe come to paſſe then God permitteth. For to permit euill, is not to ſtir vp the will, & not to beſtow on him that is tempted the act of reſiſting,

Dial. de præd. citat. in Catalogo Illyrici.

Quæſt. in Rom. 44.

but to leaue him as it were to himſelfe: and he whoſe will is not ſtirred vp by God, and to whome the act of reſiſting is not conferred, howſoeuer he may haue power to withſtand: yet can he not actually will to withſtand, nor perſiſt for euer in that vprightneſſe wherein he was created, God denying him ſtrength. I confeſſe truly that this kinde of neceſſity as touching the libertie of mans will, was altogether euitable and to be auoided: and yet according to the euent of the action it was ineuitable. Yet I would not that any man ſhould thinke that this neceſſitie did any way proceede from the decree of God, which did onely follow the decree beeing graunted and admitted; and Adam in his temptation being deſtitute of the helpe of God; caſt himſelfe of his owne accord into this ſame enſuing neceſſitie of ſinning. In the ſecond time, his fall beeing preſent, there was another neceſſitie thereof: becauſe when it was, it was of neceſſitie. In the third time, man drew vnto himſelfe by his fault, his nature being now corrupted, another neceſſitie of ſinning, inſomuch that he made himſelfe the ſeruant of ſinne. Bernard ſaith; I know not after what euill and ſtrange manner, the will it ſelfe corrupted or changed to worſe maketh a neceſſitie to ſinne: and yet the neceſſitie although it be voluntarie, is not able to excuſe the will: nor the will, although it be intiſed, to exclude neceſſitie.

If any man ſhall ſay, that by this our platforme many are tyed by an ineuitable neceſſitie to be damned; I would haue him giue eare to Auguſtine, who ſaith: Hold this moſt ſtedfaſtly, and doubt not in any wiſe that any can periſh whome God before the creation of the world, hath of his free goodneſſe made veſſels of mercie, ——or that any of them whome he hath not predeſtinated to eternall life, can by any meanes bee ſaued. And yet I ſay that the decree of reprobation doth not cauſe a neceſſitie of damnation in any man. For the firſt act thereof, which is a purpoſe not to ſhew mercy, cauſeth not this neceſſitie in men, but goeth before it as an antecedent: & man himſelfe verily hath brought vpon himſelfe this neceſſity with his owne moſt free, yet rebelling will. Now the ſecond act of Reprobation, which is a purpoſe of condemning, cauſeth not any neceſſitie of damnation, but by the ſinne of man comming betweene. Moreouer, the neceſſitie of damnation followeth after the ſame manner by the foreknowledge of God; and yet this neuer ſeemed a thing ſtrange vnto any one. But ſome will ſay, that the foreknowledge of God doth neuer cauſe in men any neceſſitie of damnation, although it do aſſuredly foreſee the ſame. And I ſay alſo, that Reprobation doth either not at all cauſe damnation in man, or that it doth not cauſe it, but for ſinne. But it may be obiected: They that are predeſtinated vnto damnation, cannot be freed by repentance, although they would. Whereto I anſwer with Auguſt. As they did fall by their will, ſo by their will they are content to lie; and he that turneth himſelfe away from God, hath both depriued himſelfe of will to do that which is good, and alſo of power. It doth not therefore follow (as they imagine which obiect ſuch things) that God hath taken repentance from thoſe to whom he gaue it not, and hath throwne downe thoſe, whome he hath not taken vp.

De fide ad Pet. cap. 35.

Art. 15.

Moreouer, the ſelfe ſame neceſſity followeth of their hypotheſis, who affirme a bare permiſſion. For that which God permitteth, the ſelfe ſame thing will he not hinder: and euill, if God hinder not, cannot be auoyded, & that which cannot be auoyded, ſhall come to paſſe infallibly. And therefore euill, permiſſion beeing once graunted, of neceſſitie commeth to paſſe, although moſt freely on mans part. Whereupon it is plaine, that the decree of God is not more ineuitable, then is the very permiſſion ſeparated from the decree. I do wiſh that they would well weigh and conſider this; who obiect vnto vs either the Stoicall fate, or the dotages of the Manichees. For wee differ from them as much in certaine iudgement and opinion, as whoſoeuer do differ moſt. For firſt, the Stoickes doe tie God vnto the ſecond cauſes, ſo that hee cannot do otherwiſe, then the nature of them will ſuffer: we on the other ſide, doe hold that all ſecond cauſes doe depend vpon and are ordered by God. Secondly, the Stoickes ſay, that neither God nor ſecond cauſes can doe otherwiſe by their nature then they doe: we ſay that ſome ſecond cauſes, are by Gods ordinance mutable, otherſome immutable; and that God himſelfe, can either not doe, that which hee doth, or elſe doe it otherwiſe. But now to come to the Manichees, who make two coeternall Gods; we but one. They of their two Gods, make one good, and another euill: we ſay, that there is one abſolutely good and iuſt God. Thirdly, they will haue one of their Gods to bee the cauſe and worker of good things, and the other of euill: we make one true God the Creator and ruler of all things, and working nothing but that which is moſt good and moſt iuſt. Fourthly, they ſay that they which are created by their good God cannot ſinne: we ſay, that God doth moſt freely conuert whom he will, and when they are conuerted, they can neuer in this life perfectly be free from ſinnes, but doe ſometimes runne into ſuch ſins, as doe grieuouſly wound the conſcience. Fiftly, they ſay, that they that are created by the euill God ſimply cannot be conuerted: we ſay, that the vnclean ſpirits and men were created both good and holy, but yet they fell by their owne will and fault, and not by any foule but the iuſt permiſſion of the Creatour, and brought vpon themſelues a neceſſitie of ſinning. And although it be true, that man cannot withhold himſelfe from ſinning, vnleſſe God giue him that grace, yet doth he not ſinne of neceſſity, that is, of compulſion, but willingly.

And the will hath ſufficient liberty, if by it ſelfe or the nature thereof it be inclinable to the contrary of that which it chooſeth, and doth of the owne accord chooſe that which it chooſeth, although the ſame libertie bee gouerned and one way limited by God. Wherefore I am flat of Anſelmus opinion, who ſaith: Although it bee of neceſſitie that thoſe things doe come to paſſe which are foreknowne and predeſtinated, yet ſome things foreknowne and predeſtinated doe not come to paſſe by that neceſſitie which goeth before a thing, and cauſeth it; but by the ſame neceſſitie which followeth a thing. For God doth not cauſe, although hee doth predeſtinate them, by forcing the will, as by reſiſting it, but by leauing them in the power thereof. And I am alſo of Gaudentius his opinion; who ſaith: The Iewes were willing to doe that euill which they did. And verily, if they had bin vnwilling to doe it, they had not done it. And it is a horrible ſacriledge euen to thinke that God, who is not onely good and righteous, but alſo goodneſſe and righteouſneſſe it ſelfe, doth either command, or compell any thing to bee done, which hee condemneth when it is done. But that I may in a word fully deliuer my opinion, if it be demaunded, how the will of God carrieth it ſelfe to good or euill, I anſwer: that in a good act God carrieth himſelfe poſitiuely. For firſt hee determineth the euent of good, by willing effectually to worke it; and ſecondly, he inwardly inclineth the will of the creature, to doe that good which it doth. Thirdly, he ſometimes layeth a neceſſitie of immutabilitie on him that doth well, but yet it is ioyned with an exceeding freedome. After this ſort the elect Angels doe neceſſarily obey God, yet not by conſtraint, but greatly coueting, and with all the ſtrength of their will deſiring it, not beeing thereunto compelled. In an euill act, I ſay that God carrieth himſelfe priuately, not by a logicall, but a naturall priuation foregoing the habit. For firſt he willeth that euill come to paſſe, not by doing it himſelfe, but by willing not to hinder it to be done by others. Secondly, he doth not inwardly incline the will to doe euill, but hee forſaketh, and outwardly offereth obiects which are good in themſelues. Thirdly, God layeth not on vs any neceſſitie, but a deſertion, or want of grace, which once beeing, there followeth the neceſſitie of ſinning, not as the effect doth his cauſe, but as the defect doth him that forſaketh. And this I am reſolued on, that Gods decree doth altogether order euery euent, partly by inclining and gently bending the will in all things that are good, and partly by forſaking it in things that are euill: and yet the will of the creature left vnto it ſelfe, is carried headlong of the owne accord, not of neceſſitie in it ſelfe, but contingently that way which the decree of God determined from eternitie. We therfore (thanks bee giuen vnto God) doe with all our hearts renounce the doting follies of the Stoickes and the Manichees.

Lib. de concor. grat. & l. arbitr.

Ser. 3 ad Neophy.

The fourth Criminatiõ is,

That wee doe teach, that the greateſt part of mankind is depriued of Chriſt and all ſauing grace.

Anſwer. 1.

It might haply ſeeme a rigorous courſe that ſome ſhould bee depriued of Chriſt, if ſo be that they had neuer at any time nor any where receiued ſauing grace. But all and euery one receiued holineſſe and happineſſe in Adam, together with abilitie to perſeuere and remaine in the ſame holy and happie eſtate, if they had would. But Adam would not, but did of his owne accord caſt away that grace which was beſtowed on him by his Creator: for which beeing loſt, it is a wonder, that all without exception are not damned. And therefore it may ſeeme the leſſe ſtrange to any one, if grace by Chriſt be againe beſtowed vpon one, and not vpon another.

Secondly I anſwer, that wee doe very willingly acknowledge that Chriſt died for all (the Scripture auerring ſo much): but we vtterly deny, that he died for all and euery one alike in reſpect of God, or as well for the damned as elect, and that effectually on Gods part. For firſt let vs weigh wel the words of Chriſt: I neuer knew you; depart from me yee workers of iniquitie. Now to know with God is to acknowledge; and therefore, whome Chriſt neuer knew, hee neuer acknowledged for his. And thoſe whome he hath not ſometime acknowledged, he neuer bought or redeemed with the price of his blood. And therefore well ſaith Gregorie: Not to know with God is to reiect. Againe, if all and euery one be effectually redeemed, all and euery one are reconciled vnto God: becauſe that the forgiueneſſe of ſinnes, and the ſatisfaction for the ſame, are inſeparably ioyned together. Yea and Paul placeth redemption in the remiſſion of ſinnes, where he ſaith: By whome wee haue redemption through his blood, euen the forgiueneſſe of ſinnes. Very well therefore ſaith Proſper: As it is not ſufficient for the renewing of men, that Chriſt Ieſus was borne man, vnleſſe they be renued alſo in the ſame ſpirit, whereof he was borne: ſo it is not ſufficient for mans redemption that Chriſt Ieſus was crucified, vnleſſe we die together and be buried with him in baptiſme. Of theſe premiſes therefore I frame this aſſumption: But al are not reconciled vnto God, neither doe all receiue remiſſion of ſinnes: for then all men were bleſſed, and it were not poſſible, for them to periſh: which thing to affirme of all and euery one, is very groſſe. Thirdly, Chriſt gaue himſelfe that hee might ſanctifie vnto himſelfe a people peculiar, that is, as a pretious treaſure and his owne gotten good ſelected and choſen from among other: therefore it was not Chriſts purpoſe, to giue himſelfe for a ranſome for al and euery one alike. Fourthly, for whome redemption is ordained, to them alſo is giuen on Gods part the making of them ſonnes by Chriſt: but the making of Math. 7, 23.

Eph. 1.7. & Col. 1, 14.

Lib. 1. reſp. pro Aug. obiect. 9.

Pſal, 32.1.

Tit. 2 14. λαὸς περιούσιος καὶ εἰς [illegible] [illegible].

ſonne.

ſonnes, or Adoption is not granted to all and euery one, euen on Gods part. For the power of the Adoption whereby a man is made of the child of wrath the child of God, is only giuen to theſe that beleeue and apprehend Chriſt. They are (ſaith Auguſtine) the children of God, who are not as yet ſo vnto vs, and yet they are ſo vnto God; becauſe that by beleeuing they ſhould afterwards be ſo through the preaching of the Goſpell: and yet before this was ſo, they were engrauen the children of God, by a ſtedfaſt and immutable ſtabilitie, in the regiſter of their father. And againe, there are ſome which in reſpect euen of ſome preſent or temporall grace which they haue receiued, are ſaid by vs to bee the children of God, and yet are they not ſo vnto God. Fiftly: None are truly redeemed on Gods part, but they who are freed from ſinne, both according to the power that it hath to cauſe damnation, and alſo according to the power that it hath to reigne in them. In this doe the auncient Fathers agree: for Auguſt. ſaith, By this Mediatour God ſheweth that he doth make them of euill men eternally good, whome he hath redeemed with his blood. And againe: Thoſe whome he would make his brethren, he freed and made them fellow heires. And againe, Chriſt will haue no partaker in that which he hath bought, but will poſſeſſe it wholly to himſelfe, and to that end gaue he ſo great a price, that he might onely poſſeſſe the ſame. Iſychius ſaith, Chriſt who ſuffered for vs, hath freed vs from ſinne and the bondage thereof: Remigius ſaith: Thou art the reconciler, thou art the reconcilement, and bleſſed ſhall they bee for whome thou ſhalt make reconciliation. Out of theſe I thus conclude: all and euery one are not redeemed according to both the aforeſaid powers of ſinne. For let vs graunt that on Gods part they are freed from damnation: yet they are not in ſuch meaſure indued with grace, as that ſin ſhall no more reigne in them. Chriſt therefore is but onely the halfe redeemer of theſe, and for that cauſe not a redeemer. Laſtly, let vs diligently conſider the iudgement of ancient writers. Ambroſe ſaith: If thou beleeueſt not, Chriſt came not downe for thee, Neither did he ſuffer for thee. Auguſtine ſaith: Euery one that is generated is damned, and no one is freed vnleſſe he be regenerated. And againe: It is well ſaid, I will haue mercy on whome I will haue mercy. For if the whole world beeing in thraldome, and in the power of ſinne, and moſt iuſtly ordained to puniſhment, be neuertheleſſe in part by Gods mercie freed: who can ſay vnto God, why doſt thou condemne the world? And againe: He that hath bought vs at ſo deere a price, wil not that we whom he hath bought ſhould be deſtroyed. God hath giuen a great price and bought thoſe whome hee quickneth. And againe: Of whoſe mercie is it but of his who hath ſent Ieſus Chriſt into this world to ſaue ſinners, whome he hath both foreknowne and predeſtinated, and called, and iuſtified, and glorified? Bernard ſaith: Chriſt needed none of theſe, neither did hee any of theſe things in regard of himſelfe, but rather in regard of the elect [illegible]: they were not directly the Iewes to whome he was ſent, but the Elect for whome hee was ſent. Haimo ſaith: Euen as by one man death and ſinne came generally to our condemnation: ſo by one iuſtice of man, that is, of Chriſt, to all men elected and predeſtinated to eternall life, came grace to the iuſtification of life. And againe: He tooke not away in the elect onely originall, but alſo actuall ſinnes: and therefore grace and the gift through grace did redound vnto the elect. Aquinas ſaith: Chriſt his merit according to the ſufficiencie thereof carrieth it ſelfe indifferently to all, but not according to the efficacie. Which commeth to paſſe partly by Gods election, through which the effect of Chriſts merits is mercifully beſtowed on ſome, and partly by the iuſt iudgement of God withdrawne from other ſome.

Ioh. 1. 12.

De correp. & grat. c. 9.

De correp. & grat. c. 11.

Tract. in Ioh. 2. & 7.

In Leuit. li. 6. cap. 23.

In Pſal. 64.

De fide ad Gratian.

Ser. 44. de verb. Apoſt. & ſer. 20. de verb. Apoſt.

Serm. 109.

De nat. & grat. cont. Pel. cap. 5.

Ser. 4. de natali.

Comment. in Rom. ca. 5.

Ibid.

Summa de verit. Math. 26. q. 7.

Obiect. 1. Againſt this it is thus obiected: The Scripture affirmeth that Chriſt redeemed the world. Whereto I anſwer: That this word (world) in the writings of the Apoſtles doth not ſignifie both all and euery man that deſcended from Adam, but all nations in this laſt age of the world. God (ſaith Paul) was reconciling the world vnto him in Chriſt. What meaneth this word world in this place? Surely not all men of all ages, but the Gentiles which were to bee called after the aſcenſion of Chriſt, as Paul plainely explaining his owne minde ſheweth, Rom. 11. 12. Wherefore if the fall of them be the riches of the world, and the diminiſhing of them the riches of the Gentiles, how much more ſhall their abundance be? And againe in the 15. verſ. If the caſting away of them, (that is, of the Iewes) bee the reconciling of the world, what ſhall the receiuing be but life from the dead? In theſe very words he plainly ſheweth, that the reconciliation of the world is the reconciliation of the Gentiles after the caſting away of the Iewes. And hereby it is moſt manifeſt, that all the like places of Scripture, which many doe thinke to make for the vniuerſall redemption of all and euery one, are to be vnderſtood of ſome men to bee called out of euery nation and countrie after the death of Chriſt. And hereunto alſo let vs ioyne the anſwer of Auguſtine: He calleth oftentimes euen the Church it ſelfe by the name of the world: according vnto that, God was reconciling the world vnto himſelfe in Chriſt: And againe, the Sonne of man came not to iudge the world, but that the world might be ſaued through him. And Iohn ſaith in his Epiſtle, We haue an aduocate with the Father Ieſus Chriſt the iuſt, and hee is the reconciler of our ſinnes, and not onely of ours, but alſo of the whole world. Therefore the whole world is the Church, and the whole world hateth the Church. Therefore the world hateth the world; the malignant world the reconciled world, the damned the ſaued, and the defiled that which is cleanſed. But this world, which God in Chriſt reconcileth vnto himſelfe, and which by Chriſt is ſaued, and to which all ſinne is through Chriſt pardoned, is elected out of the malignant, damned, and defiled world. Rupertus ſaith: The

2. Cor. 5. 19.

Tract. 87. in Ioan.

Comment. in Ioan. lib. 3. cap. 3.

In 2. Cor. 5.

world [illegible]: which God loued, we vnderſtand to be all mankind, that is, the liuing and the dead: the dead, which in faith looked for his comming; the liuing, who ſhould beleeue in him, whether they were of the Iewes or of the Gentiles. For ſo he ſaith without any diſtinction either of Iew or Gentile vniuerſally, that euery one that beleeueth in him ſhall not periſh, but haue life euerlaſting. And the common gloſſe expoundeth the world, thoſe that be the elect of this world.

Obiect. 11. Saint Paul ſaith, that God will that all men be ſaued, and come to the knowledge of the truth. I anſwer, firſt, that the place is not to be vnderſtood, of all the poſteritie of Adam, but properly of thoſe which liue in the laſt age of the world. This I prooue by conferring of the like places, wherein Paul doth plentifully ſhew his meaning. Act.17.30. And the time of this ignorance God regarded not, but Now he admoniſheth all men euery where to repent.* Rom.16.25. By the reuelation of the myſtery which was kept ſecret ſince the world began. 26. But, Now is opened and publiſhed —for the obedience of faith among all nations. Coloſſ.1.26. The myſterie which was hid ſince the world began and from all ages, is now made manifeſt vnto the Saints. 27. To whome God would make knowne Chriſt —, whom we preach, admoniſhing euery man and teaching euery man, that we may preſent all men perfect in Chriſt Ieſus. And in the 2. epiſtle to the Corinthians the 6. chapt. and the 2. verſe, he expoundeth that place of Iſaias, where it is ſaid: In an acceptable time haue I heard thee, and in a day of ſaluation haue I helped thee, and I will preſerue thee: and will giue thee for a couenant of the people that thou maiſt raiſe vp the earth, —that thou maiſt ſay to the priſoners, goe forth; after this faſhion: Behold, Now ſaith he, the accepted time, (that is, the time of the new Teſtament) behold, Now the day of ſaluation. Saint Peter ſaith: Saluation ordained to be declared in the laſt times: concerning which the Prophets which did propheſie of the grace which ſhould afterward come to you, haue ſearched and inquired. And Chriſt himſelfe ſaith moſt plainely of all, When I ſhall be lifted vp from the earth, I will draw all things vnto me. I therefore graunt, that God willeth that all ſhould be ſaued: but that God both willeth, and that he hath alwaies willed that all men in all ages ſhould bee ſaued, I vtterly denie, neither hath Paul ſaid ſo much: and among the auncient writers they which ſeeme to affirme ſo much, doe notwithſtanding in theſe kinde of ſpeeches doubtfully affirme it: I doe imagine that it may with reaſon and religion bee beleeued: I doe not thinke it irreligion to beleeue it: It may probably and religiouſly be beleeued.

1.Tim.2.4.

*Marke well the reſtraining forme of ſpeech, for it is as much as if he had ſaid, God now willeth that al men ſhould repent.

1.Pet.1.20.

verſ.10.

Ioh.12.32.

Auth.de vocat.gent. l.2.cap.8. Bellarm.de grat.& lib. arb.l.2.c.5.

Secondly I anſwer: That God wils that all men bee ſaued, that is to ſay, of thoſe that are ſaued. So ſaith Auguſtine: Euen as it is ſaid that all ſhall be quickned in Chriſt, although very many be puniſhed by eternall death: becauſe all whoſoeuer they are that doe receiue eternall life, doe not receiue it but in Chriſt: ſo is it ſaid, that Epiſt.107. ad Vitalem.

A God will haue all men to be ſaued: although hee will haue many not to be ſaued, becauſe all who are ſaued, are not ſaued but by him willing it. And againe: When we reade in the holy Scriptures, that God will haue all men to bee ſaued, although we know aſſuredly that all men are not ſaued, yet ought we not therefore to derogate any thing from the omnipotent will of God, but thus to vnderſtand that which is written, Who will haue all men to bee ſaued, as if it ſhould be ſaid, that no man was ſaued, but he whom God would haue to bee ſaued; not that there is no man whome he will not haue ſaued. Haymo ſaith: God will haue all men to be ſaued. Let vs then aske what is the reaſon why all men are not ſaued. To which, anſwer muſt be made, that that
B ſaying in the Pſalme is true. He ſpake the word and they were made. In like manner he will ſaue all men who are ſaued, and who by his mercie ſeeke to bee ſaued. For the Apoſtle put the whole for the part, as it is in the Goſpell, where the Lord ſaith, If I be lifted vp from the earth, I will draw all vnto me. For he hath not drawne, neither doth he draw all men vnto him, but All that are elect, both of all ſorts, and nations.

Enchir.ad Lau.ca.103.

In 2.c.Epiſt. 1.ad Tim.

Thirdly, I anſwer, that God will not haue euery one of euery kinde, but the kinds of euery one to be ſaued; that is to ſay, of euery eſtate and condition ſome. Auguſtine ſaith: This very ſaying, Who will haue all men to be ſaued: is ſo ſaid, not becauſe there is no man whome he would haue damned, who would not doe any
C powerfull miracles among them, who he ſaith would haue repented if he had: but that we by all men, may vnderſtand euery ſort of men, by what differences ſoeuer diſtinguiſhed, whether they be kings or ſubiects, noble or ignoble, high or low, learned or vnlearned, ſtrong or weake, wittie, dull ſpirited or fooliſh, rich, poore or meane, men or women, infants or children, youths or yong men, middle aged men or old men, in all languages, in all trades, in all conditions, in all profeſſions, in the innumerable varietie of wils and conſciences, and what other differences ſoeuer there is among men. Theſe things ſaith he, very truly and rightly, for this word, All, is ſometime taken diſtributiuely, and then it ſignifieth euery ſeuerall and particular perſon; and Paul to the D intent that he might ſignifie this, ioyneth the word euery one with the word all. It is alſo often taken collectiuely, and then it ſignifieth any, and not euery one: as when Chriſt is ſaid to haue healed euery diſeaſe, that is, any diſeaſe. The double ſignification of this word Ariſtotle alſo obſerued. This word All (ſaith he) is taken two waies, firſt for euery one —and ſecondly the word All is vſed, when it doth not ſignifie euery one. It is plaine therefore that the word All hath a doubtfull ſignification. And of this minde alſo is Saint Hierome: It is like vnto that (ſaith he) which is in the Pſalme —euery man is a lyer. If euery man be a lyer, then is he alſo a lyer which ſpeaketh it, and if he be a lyer which ſpeaketh it, then is not that true which he ſpeaketh, namely that

Enchir.ad Lau.c.103

2.Theſſ.1.3.

ἑκάστου πάντων,

Math.9.35.

Pol.lib.2. cap.2. ὡς ἕκαστος, καὶ οὐχ ὡς ἕκαστος ἅπαντες.

Comment. ad Eph. c.1.

euery man is a lyer. But, if this ſaying be true, theſe words Euery man doth lie, are (as I ſaid before) to be vnderſtood after this ſort. A great part of men are lyers. And the Apoſtle writeth elſewhere: Teaching euery man: and againe, admoniſhing euery man: not that he taught all men, (for how many are there yet at this day which haue neither heard of the Apoſtles doctrine, nor yet ſo much as his name?) but that he ſhould teach and admoniſh all that are in the Church. Sedulius alſo ſaith: Many and all in Paul are one.

Comment. ad Rom. c. 5.

In Epiſt. ad Rom. 5. 5.

Fourthly, Saint Paul ſpeaketh in this place according to the charitable iudgement of Chriſtians: and not according to the iudgement of ſecret and infallible certaintie. Like vnto this, is that alſo that he calleth the faithfull in ſeuerall Churches men elected; amongſt whom there were many which afterward fell away from the faith. And yet is not the Apoſtle deceiued; for it is one thing to ſpeake according to his owne affection: and another thing to ſpeake according as the matter is indeede. Auguſtine ſaith: We ought ſo charitably to be affected, as to wiſh that all men be ſaued: as men that know not who appertaine to the number of thoſe that are predeſtinated, and who doe not. And againe: We muſt as much as in vs lieth, beeing vnable to diſtinguiſh thoſe that are predeſtinated, from thoſe that are not, deſire that all men bee ſaued, and vſe ſharpe correction vnto all with an intent to heale them that they periſh not.

De Correp. & grat. c. 15.

cap. 16.

Hence it appeareth what wee ought to thinke of Damaſcene his opinion, who diſtinguiſheth the will of God into his precedent and conſequent will. He calleth that his precedent will, whereby God, as he that is abſolutely good, willeth to beſtow all good things, yea bleſſedneſſe it ſelfe vpon the creatures: and by this will hee affirmeth, that God willeth that all men ſhould be ſaued, and attaine vnto his kingdome: becauſe he made vs not to puniſh vs, but that he might make vs partakers of his goodneſſe, as being good himſelfe. But this conſequent will is that, whereby for ſome certaine circumſtances of the creature, he abſolutely willeth this or that: and by this will, he ſaith, that God willeth that man ſhould be damned for ſinne, becauſe he is iuſt. And indeede this diſtinction of will in it ſelfe is to be allowed, but that is not a very fit example, which hee hath propounded concerning his precedent will. For there ſeemeth not to be in God ſuch a wil, or (as they vſe to terme it) ſuch a wiſhing will, whereby hee will indefinitely or vpon condition that all and euery man of all ages ſhould be ſaued. For firſt it argueth a finite power and inſufficiencie in him that willeth. For whatſoeuer any one deſireth and earneſtly willeth, that will he bring to paſſe, vnleſſe he be hindered. As for example: The merchant deſireth and earneſtly willeth to ſaue his ware: but being forced by a tempeſt, to the intent that himſelfe may eſcape, hee doth abſolutely will to caſt them into the ſea. Yea indeede this kinde of will ſeemeth to argue weakeneſſe, becauſe God ſhould will that which ſhall not come to paſſe. But you will ſay, that this will is conditionall; that is, that God will that they bee ſaued, if they ſhall beleeue. And I ſay firſt, that the will of God ſtands doubtfull, vntill the condition bee fulfilled, and that the firſt cauſe is by this meanes held in ſuſpence by the ſecond cauſes: Moreouer there is giuen vnto men a free will either to beleeue or not to beleeue; that is, flexible and inclinable both waies, either by grace, or by nature, both which things are falſe, as I will afterwards ſhew. And therefore, this will is rather a humane will then a diuine. Heare what Anſelmus ſaith. The will of God is taken foure manner of waies by the principall Doctors, firſt for the knowledge of God; then for the will of the Saints, who will in charitie that euen the vniuſt ſhould be ſaued; againe for humane reaſon: and laſtly for Gods Commandements. Secondly, this conditionall will ſeemeth idle and vnneceſſarie, eſpecially in him whoſe power is infinite; becauſe if he earneſtly willeth, he would verily doe a thing, when hee might without hindrance. Thirdly, Gods will is not ſuch concerning the Angels, whereby he willeth that all of them ſhould be ſaued: therefore, it may well be demanded, whether his will bee ſuch concerning man. Fourthly, if God will that al men, as they are men, be ſaued: in like manner he will, that all ſinners, as they are ſinners, be damned, which is abſurd. Fiftly, that will which cannot bee reſiſted, is abſolute: but Gods Antecedent or firſt will cannot bee reſiſted: Rom. 9. 19. For there Paul ſpeaketh of the will that goeth before al cauſes. Therefore, the precedent will is abſolute. And this will I make manifeſt after another manner; the wil of God is, that ſome ſhould beleeue and perſeuere, and that otherſome ſhould bee forſaken either not beleeuing or not perſeuering. You will aske me haply how I know this. I anſwer, by the euent. For as touching the euent ſome beleeue, and ſome do not beleeue. But to beleeue and to perſeuere is a certaine kinde of good action; and on the contrarie, not to beleeue, or not to perſeuere is an euill action. And euery thing that is good, is, through the effectuall will of God; and ſo farre forth as there is, or exiſteth that which is good, ſo farre forth God willeth it, and maketh it to exiſt by willing it. And that euill, which commeth to paſſe, commeth to paſſe God not hindering it; and becauſe God will not hinder it, therefore conſequently it commeth to paſſe. Hereupon, it is certaine, that God willeth that ſome ſhould beleeue, and perſeuere vnto the end, and that otherſome doe not ſo, yea euen without any condition: and no reaſon can be rendred, wherefore hee willeth this. Therefore this will is both abſolute and firſt: and therefore that vniuerſall precedent will concerning the ſaluation of al and euery one in Chriſt, is counterfeit and Optatiua voluntas.

Lib. de voluntat. Dei.

fained. Sixtly, the ground of this opinion, is that ſore ſaid place of Paul, which I haue already ſhewed to be miſunderſtood. And yet, that place laieth not downe vnto vs any conditionall, but an abſolute will. For there it is firſt affirmed, that God will haue al men to be ſaued: afterwards, that he wil haue all mẽ to come to the knowledge of the truth, that is, vnto faith, becauſe by applying faith to the word of God, wee acknowledge the truth. Where is now then that condition of faith? Laſtly, againſt Damaſcene I oppoſe Auguſtine: who to the Pelagians vrging this place of ſcripture, God willeth that all men be ſaued, maketh a double anſwer: firſt he denieth that it is not generally to be vnderſtood of the vniuerſality of men, and that by this argument: That which God willeth he effecteth: but he doth not generally ſaue all men, therefore he willeth not. Secondly, he ſaith, that the place is to be vnderſtood of them which are actually ſaued: becauſe all men which are ſaued, are ſaued by the will of God. Againe, I oppoſe againſt him Proſper alſo, who ſaith: If the will of God concerning the vniuerſall ſauing of mankinde, and the calling of them to the knowledge of the truth, is to bee affirmed ſo indifferent throughout all ages, as that it ſhall bee ſaid to ouerpaſſe no man in what place ſoeuer, Gods impenetrable and deep iudgements receiue a great blow. And againe: Wee cannot ſay that there is the calling of grace, whereas as yet there is no regeneration of the mother the Church. And againe: Hee forbad the Apoſtles to preach the Goſpell vnto ſome people; and now as yet hee ſuffereth ſome people to liue out of his grace. Alſo I oppoſe Thomas Aquinas againſt him, who ſaith: But ſaith ſome man, God loueth all men: whereto I anſwer, that it is true ſo farre forth as hee willeth ſome good to all: and yet hee willeth not euery thing that is good to all, that is, eternall life: and therein he is ſaid to hate and reiect them. To conclude, I oppoſe againſt him Hugo de Sanct. Victore, Who will (ſaith hee) that all men be ſaued, according to Ambroſe, if they themſelues will. But are there not many who would be ſaued, and yet are not ſaued?—or thus, Hee offereth grace vnto all, by which, if they will, they may bee ſaued. But how is this ſolution true, are there not, and haue there not beene many, which neuer heard ſo much as a word of preaching?

Hypog. lib. 6, cap. 8.

Reſpon. pro August. l. 1. obiect. 8

Quæſt. 23. in ſum, art. 3

Annot. in 1. Tim. cap. 2.

Obiect. III. That which euery one is bound to beleeue, is true: but euery one is bound to beleeue that he is effectually redeemed by Chriſt: therefore it is manifeſt, that euery one, euen the reprobate is effectually redeemed by the death of Chriſt. Whereto I anſwer, that the termini or parts of the propoſition are to bee diſtinguiſhed; that which euery one is bound to beleeue, is true according to the intention of God that bindeth; but it is not alwaies true according to the euent. Ionas preached, and therefore hee was bound to beleeue, Yet forty daies, and Niniue ſhall be deſtroyed; but this was not true according to the euent. The aſſumption alſo muſt be diſtinguiſhed. Euery one in the Church, by Gods commandement (Beleeue the Goſpell) is bound to beleeue that he is redeemed by Chriſt; yea euen the reprobate as well as the elect; but yet notwithſtanding in a diuers and different reſpect. The elect is bound to beleeue, that by beleeuing hee ſhall bee made partaker of election: the reprobate, that by not beleeuing, he may be made vnexcuſable, euen by the intention of God. For God ſometimes giueth a commaundement not that it ſhould bee actually done, but that men may bee tried, that they performe outward diſcipline, and that they may be conuicted of their naturall infidelity, and be made vnexcuſable of al their ſinnes before God in the laſt iudgement. For thus I diſtinguiſh of Gods commaundement: there is a certaine commaundement of obedience, the performance wherof God willeth in all: hither are referred the commaundements of the morall law. There is alſo a certaine commaundement of triall, as the commaundement of ſacrificing Iſaack: whereas God willeth not the act it ſelfe, but onely the manifeſtation of obedience. And therefore God muſt not bee ſaid to mocke men, if by the word preached he do outwardly call thoſe, whome he will not haue to be ſaued: for by this meanes he ſhewes vnto them the riches of his grace, and declares that they periſh by their owne fault, becauſe they will not receiue ſaluation offered. But you will ſay they cannot: I confeſſe as much, but that inability whereby they cannot, is voluntary, and borne together with vs, not inſuſed into vs by God: and therefore it cannot bee excuſed. Very well therefore ſaith Bernard. The maſter knew well, that the weightineſſe of the commaundement exceeded the ſtrength of man: but he thought it expedient euen in this, that it put them in remembrance of their owne inſufficiencie.——Therefore by commaunding things impoſſible, hee makes not men ſwaruers from the truth, but humbleth them, that euery mouth may bee ſtopped. So ſaith Auguſtine, de grat. & lib. arbit. cap. 43. Secondly, I anſwer: that that which euery one is bound to beleeue, is true, vnleſſe any one ſhall by his owne vnbeleefe hinder himſelfe; this doth the reprobate by his owne inborne infidelity. Thirdly, I anſwer, that the argument doth follow twice affirmatiuely in both propoſitions. For the termini or parts of the propoſition are thus to be turned: That is true, that euery one is bound to beleeue; but euery one is bound to beleeue that hee is redeemed by Chriſt. Therefore that is true.

Gen. 22. 7.

Serm. 40. in Cant.

Obiect. IV. The Fathers which beleeued aright, doe affirme that Chriſt redeemed all and the whole world. Anſw. Whereas they write, that Chriſt redeemed all men, and the world, their meaning is, that hee did it according vnto ſufficiency, and the common cauſe, and common nature of all, which Chriſt did

A take vpon him : and not effectually on Gods part. This very thing doth Proſper make plaine: All men (ſaith hee) are rightly ſaid to be redeemed, in reſpect of the one nature of all, and the one cauſe of all, which our Lord did truely take vpon him: and yet all are not deliuered from captiuitie: The propriety of redemption without doubt belongeth vnto them for whome the Prince of the world is ſent abroad: ——whoſe death was not ſo beſtowed for mankinde, as that it ſhould alſo pertaine vnto the redemption of them, who were not to be regenerated. And againe hee ſaith: Our Sauiour may fitly bee ſaid to be crucified for the redemption of all the world, both in reſpect that he truely tooke vpon him the nature of man, and alſo B in reſpect of the common or generall perdition in the firſt man: and yet hee may bee ſaid to bee crucified onely for thoſe, vnto whome his death was auaileable. Moreouer, the Fathers ſpeake of the vniuerſality, and of the world of beleeuers. So ſaith hee that is the Author of the calling of the Gentiles. The people of God (ſaith he) haue their fulneſſe.

Reſp. ad obiect. vin. l.2, obiect. 1.

Ad capit. Gal, cap. 9.

*Lib.*1. cap. 3.

And thus much for the efficacy and greatneſſe of Chriſts death; Now as concerning grace; I ſay, that that is diuerſly diſtinguiſhed. For firſt, it is either reſtraining, or renewing. The reſtraining grace is that, whereby the inbred corruption of the heart, is not thereby vtterly diminiſhed and taken away, but in C ſome is reſtrained more, in ſome leſſe, that it breake not violently forth into action: and it is giuen onely for a teſtimony vnto man, and to preſerue order amongſt men in a politicke ſociety: and this kinde of grace is generall, that is, belonging to all and euery man, amongſt whome ſome doe exceede otherſome in the gifts of ciuill vertues: and there is no man, in whome God doth not more or leſſe reſtraine his naturall corruption. Now renewing or Chriſtian grace (as ancient writers doe vſually call it) is that whereby man hath power giuen him to beleeue and repent, both in reſpect of will, and power: and it is vniuerſall in reſpect of thoſe that beleeue, but indefinite in reſpect of all and euery man. D Thus we teach, thus we beleeue.

Secondly, Grace is either naturall, or ſupernaturall; as Auguſtine himſelfe teacheth. Naturall grace is that, which is beſtowed on man together with nature: and this is either of nature perfect or corrupt. Perfect, as the Image of God, or righteouſneſſe beſtowed on Adam in his creation. This grace belonged generally vnto all, becauſe wee all were in Adam: and whatſoeuer hee receiued that was good, hee receiued it both for himſelfe and his poſterity. The grace of nature corrupted, is a naturall inlightning (whereof Iohn ſpeaketh: He enlighteneth euery man that commeth into the world,) yea and euery naturall gift. And theſe gifts truly by that order which God hath made in nature, are due and belonging vnto nature. But that grace which is ſupernaturall, is not due vnto nature, eſpecially vnto nature corrupted, but is beſtowed by ſpeciall grace, and therefore is ſpeciall. This the auncient writers affirme. Auguſtine ſaith: Nature is common to all, but not grace: and hee only acknowledgeth a two-fold grace: namely, that common grace of nature, whereby we are made men: and Chriſtian grace whereby in Chriſt we are againe borne new men. And hee is of opinion, that ſome that doe not beleeue in Chriſt, do not ſinne: which is a thing notwithſtanding very vngodly and vntrue, if grace bee as generall as nature. Let vs well weigh his words: In that he hath (ſaith he) added: Now they are inexcuſable for their ſinne: it may moue men to aske, whether thoſe vnto whom Chriſt hath not come nor ſpoken, may haue any excuſe for their ſinne.—To this queſtion, according to my vnderſtanding, I make anſwer: that they cannot bee inexcuſable for euery ſinne which they haue committed, but for this ſinne, that they haue not beleeued in Chriſt vnto whome Chriſt did not come, and vnto whome hee did not ſpeake. But they are not in this number vnto whome he hath ſpoken in his diſciples, and by his diſciples, which hee alſo now doth. For hee came vnto the Gentiles by his Church.——It remaines for vs to demaund, whether they can haue this excuſe which haue beene or are preuented by death before Chriſt came in his Church to the Gentiles, and before they heard his Goſpell. I anſwer, that without doubt they may, but they cannot therefore eſcape damnation: for whoſoeuer hath ſinned without the law, ſhall alſo periſh without the law. Againe hee ſaith: Onely grace diſtinguiſheth thoſe that are ſaued, from thoſe that are damned, who were enwrapped in one lumpe of corruption by one common cauſe from the beginning. Chryſoſtome ſaith: The grace of God commeth vnto euery one, but it remaineth with them who doe worthily fulfill thoſe things which are in their power: departing quickely from them, which doe not well behaue themſelues: neither doth it at all come vnto thoſe, who doe not ſo much as beginne to turne vnto the Lord. Gregory ſaith: The Gentiles did not any way worſhippe God, neither ſhewed they any ſigne or token of any good worke, for indeede they were forſaken. Amongſt whom, becauſe there was no law-giuer, nor no one that did according to reaſon ſeeke after God, there was not as it were a man, but all liued as it were like beaſts.* And afterwards hee ſaith: When our Redeemer came, hee ſo receiued the calling of grace, as that there was not before in it the life of prophecie. And againe: Teachers holding their tongues, the diuels goe into their place: becauſe none doe periſh by the ſilence of the paſtours, but they who are not predeſtinated vnto eternall life. For they are places for the diuels, becauſe in Gods fore-knowledge they are not preordained vnto Gods Tabernacle. Hereupon is it ſaid, that when the Paſtours did preach, as many as were predeſtinated vnto eternall life did beleeue. And hereupon ſaith Paul, whome he hath predeſtinated, thoſe hath hee called. Hereupon it is, that the Apoſtles deſirous to goe into Aſia, were forbidden by the De præd. ſanct. cap. 5.

Ioh. 1. 9.

De verb. Apoſt, ſer. 11.

Tract. 89. Iohan.

Enchir. c. 99

Lib. de cōpunct. cord.

* But if grace be vniuerſall, there had alwaies bin ſōe Church among the Gentiles, although ſecret and hidden: for it is not likely that all had caſt away grace: or that they had vſed it euilly.

Expoſ. in 1. Reg. cap. 14.

holy Ghoſt. They therefore which are not predeſtinated, whether they heare the words of the preachers, or whether they doe not heare them, cannot be called vnto Gods Tabernacle. And againe: Some times the preachers are ſilent by Gods diſpenſation, that they holding their peace, they which are not the Lords, may be deceiued of euill ſpirits. Beda ſaith: He goeth to viſit and enlighten their hearts, whome hee hath predeſtinated to eternall life, forſaking thoſe whome he knoweth to be none of his owne. (Lib. 1. in Iſa. cap. 1.) Anaſtaſius ſaith: The Church in the former ſtate of error, beeing without eyes, and blinde, did neither ſee from the beginning, neither was it ſeene at all by God. (Lib. 1. contemp. in Hexam. l. 10) And againe: All other kindes of faith which are in the world, are dead, as alſo the motions of thoſe people and Gentiles which are dead, as they which had not in them him who ſaid, I am the life. Neither doe they regenerate and quicken their people and children, by the wombe of water and the ſpirit; but are fruitleſſe, and bereft of the well of life, and not enioying the water which is liuely, and ſtreameth vnto eternall life. Therefore that Church which is his, is onely tearmed the life and mother of all the liuing. Hugo de Sanct. Vict. ſaith: Some of thoſe, who were before the comming of Chriſt, if they had not had ſome other ſinne, they ſhould not haue beene damned, for that they did not beleeue in Chriſt, becauſe they haue an excuſe for that ſinne. (In Ioh Elucid. 15.) And againe: What if thou ſhouldeſt enter into conſideration how many, and how excellent in compariſon of thee are caſt-awaies, who could not attaine vnto this grace which is giuen vnto thee? Surely thou haſt heard how many generations of men from the beginning euen vnto this day, haue paſſed away, who are all without the knowledge of God, and the price of his redemption, tumbled downe into the gulfe of euerlaſting deſtruction. Thy Redeemer and louer hath preferred thee before all thoſe, in as much as he hath giuen thee this grace, which none of them was worthy to receiue. And what wilt thou ſay? wherefore doeſt thou thinke that thou art preferred before them all? haſt thou beene more valiant? haſt thou beene more wiſe? haſt thou beene more noble? haſt thou beene more rich then they all? becauſe thou haſt obtained this ſpeciall fauour aboue them all? how many valiant men? how many wiſe men? how many noble men? how many rich men haue there beene, and yet they are all forſaken, and haue periſhed like caſt-awaies. Thou onely art receiued before them all, and yet thou canſt not finde out any cauſe why thou ſhouldeſt thus bee dealt withall, beſides the free fauour of thy Sauiour.

Hitherto I haue opened and defended our opinion of predeſtination. I will now breefly examine another, diſſenting with this in many things, hauing taken it with as much diligẽce as I could, out of the publike writings of many men: and to this end I do thus briefly propound it.

Firſt, God created all and euery man in Adam to eternall life.

Secondly, he fore-ſaw the fall.

A Thirdly, becauſe he is by nature gentle and good, he doth ſeriouſly wil that all men after the fall ſhould be ſaued, & come to the knowledge of the truth: and therefore wils to giue all the furtherances both of nature & grace, that they may be ſaued, but yet indefinitely, if they themſelues ſhall beleeue. This will of God (they ſay) is predeſtination, & the ſame with the written Goſpel: The rule of this will is; Whoſoeuer ſhall beleeue, ſhall be ſaued; He that will not beleeue, ſhall be damned.

Laſtly, Election is according to the fore-knowledge of future faith, which notwithſtanding may bee loſt vtterly for a time, as ſome ſay; or finally and for euer, as ſome others wil: and reprobation is according to the B fore-knowledge of infidelity, or the contempt of the Goſpel.

This platforme is in very truth (ſo farre as I can iudge of it by the Scriptures) a meere inuention of mans wit: which will appeare by the manifolde errors therein contained.

Error 1. Firſt, by this platforme or ground-worke there followes a certaine vniuerſall reprobation, and that a very abſurd and ſtrange one. For if there bee (as they doe affirme) an vniuerſall election, whereby God willeth that all men ſhall be ſaued indefinitely, if they do beleeue; he willeth alſo by the like reaſon, that all and each one ſhould bee damned if they doe not beleeue. But this reprobation is no where to bee found in the Scriptures. Yea C hence it followeth, that God being alike affected to all, and ſeriouſly willing the conuerſion and ſaluation of all, doth neither chuſe nor refuſe any man.

Error 2. From hence alſo it followeth, that God hath in vaine propounded with himſelfe the ſupreme and abſolute ende of his counſels, which is to communicate his goodnes in true felicity euen to euery man. For if we conſider the euent, hee doth not communicate his goodneſſe and eternall life vnto very many, which is otherwiſe then he purpoſed, namely, vnto thoſe that are damned. But wee are in no caſe to ſay, that the ſupreme end of Gods counſels, either haue an vncertaine euent, or are in vaine propounded.

Error 3. D Thirdly, this platforme attributeth vnto God a certaine ordered and fitted will, which doth wholly depend on mans will. Thou ſaiſt that God willeth that all men whatſoeuer ſhould bee ſaued by Chriſt. Very well: Tell mee therefore why they are not ſaued: They themſelues will not, thou ſaiſt? Yea wis. What is this but to ſet the creature in the throne of Almighty God the Creatour, againſt the order of nature, and of all cauſes? For the firſt cauſe, which indeed is Gods will, ought to order and diſpoſe the act of the ſecond cauſe. And therefore we muſt not giue vnto God a will that is ordered by the will of the creature; eſpecially conſidering that all order in heauen and in earth whatſoeuer, proceedeth from him. That which ordereth all things, is ordered of none. Moreouer, men after this ſort are elected of themſelues, by receiuing of Gods grace, beeing offered by the aſſiſtance of common grace: and are alſo reiected of themſelues, by refuſing of grace offered: and men themſelues ſhall bee the makers and framers of their owne election and reprobation: and God who chuſeth is not ſo much to be praiſed, as the men that doe receiue and embrace the bleſſing offered.

Error 4.

Fourthly, this platforme laies downe a determinate fore-knowledge about the the euil of fault, without any decree going before, cōcerning the euent of the fault; which cannot be. A definite fore-knowledge is not the cauſe of that thing which is to bee, but the thing which ſhall be is the cauſe of the fore-knowledge thereof. For the thing which ſhall bee, followes not the fore-knowledge of it, but fore-knowledge followeth the thing which ſhall be, as Iuſtinus taught. For God doth firſt decree a thing as touching the euent: then afterwards hee doth fore-know by his definite fore-knowledge, that it ſhal be. And Anſelme: In that (ſaith he) a thing is ſaid to be fore-knowne, it is by that pronounced that it ſhall be. And Auguſtine before his time affirmed, That God doth fore-know that which ſhall be. Hence it followes, that a thing muſt exiſt with God, before it can be preciſely & definitely known before. And euery thing exiſteth & is, becauſe God did wil and decree to do it if it be good, or to ſuffer it to be done if it be euill, hauing reſpect alwaies to the good that is ioyned with it. Vnleſſe we ſhall holde and grant this, it will follow that ſomething hath beeing of it ſelfe, that is, that ſomething is a God. Therefore the exiſtencie or beeing of things, doth not goe before, but out of all doubt followes the decree of God. For firſt of all, there is a fore-knowledge, or (as it pleaſeth others) a knowledge of beholding, whereby God beholdeth and ſeeth what is poſſible to bee, and what not: Then followeth the decree either of Gods operation, or of his voluntary permiſſion; and conſequently of the euent of the thing. And this decree beeing once laid downe, the definitiue fore-knowledge is conceiued, whereby it is knowne what ſhal come to paſſe infallibly.

Quæſt. 58. Orthodox.

De præd. ſanct. c. 14.

Scientia intuitiua.

Error 5.

The fifth defect in this platforme is, that it teacheth that Chriſt for his part hath redeemed and reconciled all and euery man to God, and that very many of them for al that, as touching the euent are damned, which is very abſurd. For if this were ſo, ſinne, Satan, death, and hell ſhould bee more mighty then Chriſt the Redeemer, and (as Auguſtine ſaith) Vitio humano vincitur Deus: God is ouercome by mans ſinne. If thou wilt ſay, that God is not ouercome; yet I ſay, and that according to this platforme, that he is altered: for he hath decreed, and ſeriouſly willed to ſaue all men, and yet notwithſtanding, another ſentence being giuen, he willeth to deſtroy thoſe which will not incline and bend themſelues to this counſell.

De cor. & grat. cap. 7.

Error 6.

This platforme maketh ſauing grace (which indeede is ſupernaturall) to bee altogether vniuerſall. But this opinion (to ſpeake no hardlier of it) is a plauſible deuice of mans braine. For firſt of all, hereby the ſpeciall couenant made with Abraham, and the greatneſſe of Gods mercies towards the Gentiles is aboliſhed. And there is no myſtery of the vocation of the Gentiles, if all and euery particular man were by certaine meanes called vnto Chriſt from the beginning. For thoſe, which ſhall by the helpe of common grace, which they ſhall receiue, giue aſſent vnto God calling them, whether it be by extraordinary inſtinct, or by the miniſtery of the word preached; they ſhal be accoūted among the members of the Church, and ſhall belong to the ſpeciall couenant of the Goſpel. Moreouer, if the firſt grace be vniuerſall, it is either faith actually, or in power. For without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God, and to attaine ſaluation. But actuall faith is not common to al. The power of faith is double; the firſt is that whereby thou haſt receiued power to be able to beleeue, if thou wilt. But this is not ſufficient vnto ſaluation: becauſe now after Adams fall, free will in ſpirituall things is wanting, eſpecially in the conuerſion of a ſinner: and therefore further grace is required, whereby a man may bee able to will to beleeue. No man can come to Chriſt, but hee which is drawne of the Father, Ioh. 6. 44. Now, they are not drawn which receiue power to beleeue, if they will, but thoſe who of men nilling, are made actually willing. The ſecond power, is that whereby a man hath receiued power to wil to beleeue: but this is not common to all men. To you (ſaith Chriſt to his diſciples) it is giuen to know the myſteries of the kingdome of heauen, but not ſo to them, becauſe the Father hath hidden thē from the wiſe, Matth. 13. 11. Againe: Therefore could they not beleeue, becauſe Iſaiah fore-tolde this, Ioh. 12. 39. Furthermore, if this power were common to all and to each perſon, faith were common to all. For the will & the deed floweth from one and the ſelfe ſame grace. Philip. 2. 13. It is God who worketh in you the will and the deede, euen of his good pleaſure. Ioh. 6. 45. Whoſoeuer hath heard and learned of the Father, commeth vnto Chriſt. But whoſoeuer hath power to will to beleeue, hath heard and learned, as beeing drawne of God: therefore whoſoeuer hath power to will to beleeue, cōmeth vnto Chriſt. Well ſaith Auguſtine: It followeth not, that he which can come, doth come, vnleſſe he will it, and doe it: but euery one that hath learned of the Father, hath not onely power to come, but alſo hee doth come: where now there is (& poſſibilitatis profectus, & voluntatis affectus, & effectus,) a poſſibilitie, a ſetting forward, a deſire to come, and comming indeede. So it appeareth, that to will to beleeue, and actually to beleeue, are moſt neerely conioyned,

Propoſition

Aſſumption

De nat. & grat. cont. Pelag. cā. 5.

yea

you ſeriouſly to will to beleeue, is in very deed to beleeue. The publicans and harlots, and thoſe which are held captiue at the diuels wil, do repent and are conuerted: and therefore they doe not onely receiue power if they wil, but of nillers and ſtubborne repugners they are made actually willing.

Thirdly, there are and haue beene many nations, which haue had no knowledge of the faith, or which haue not kept it, & without this knowledge, there is not any ſauing grace. Anſwer is wont to be made, that man receiuing naturall light is not to bee excuſed for the want of ſupernaturall knowledge: becauſe if he would do by Gods aſſiſtance that which lieth in him, God would inlighten him with ſupernatural grace. For thus the ſchoolmen doe vſually ſpeake: Greg. de Val. Although no man is able by the miniſterie of men to know the nature of faith, if hee neuer heard any thing of it; yet hee may by Gods helpe, if hee liue morally according to Gods law ſo much as in him lieth to doe. For then God will ſuccour him either by himſelfe, or by ſome other, to wit, either man or Angel, by propounding of faith vnto him. For as in naturall things, ſo in ſupernaturall God doth miniſter grace when man is not wanting to himſelfe. I anſwer, that this is falſe. For if grace be giuen to him which doth that which lieth in him to doe by the ſtrength of nature; it is giuen either by merit or promiſe. Not by merit, becauſe there is no merit before faith; and we do nothing acceptable vnto God before wee haue faith. Cont. Iul. Auguſtine: Thou bringeſt in a kinde of men, which can pleaſe God without the faith of Chriſt, by the law of nature. This is the cauſe why the Chriſtian Church doth eſpecially deteſt you. And it is not giuen by promiſe, becauſe there is no promiſe or diuine law to be found in the Scriptures, that grace ſhould by and by be giuen vnto him that doth that which lieth in him to doe. It is alſo falſe to ſay, that God doth miniſter all things that make for the felicity of nature, or this preſent life. For ſome are borne leproſe, blinde, fooliſh, very poore, vnmeete for this temporarie felicitie; neither doe they euer attaine vnto it. This opinion alſo is againſt experience: becauſe many die in their infancie, and many are fooliſh and madde all their life long, vpon whom we cannot ſay that this vniuerſall grace is beſtowed. It is alſo contrary to moſt plaine places of Scripture. Rom.9.18. Saluation is not in him that willeth, nor in him that runneth, but in God that ſheweth mercie. Mat.13.11. And, he hath mercy on whom he will, and whome he will he hardeneth. It is giuen to the diſciples to know the ſecrets of the kingdome of heauen, but to them it is not giuen. Ioh.3.8. The winde bloweth not on all, but where it liſteth. Mat.11.27. The Sonne doth not reueale the Father vnto all, but to whome he will. Ioh.6.44. All doe not beleeue, but thoſe which are drawne and predeſtinated vnto life. Act.13.49. All doe not heare, but thoſe to whom eares are giuen for to heare. Furthermore it is ſome impayring of effectuall and Chriſtian grace, ſo to place it in mans power, that hee may, if hee will, receiue it: and that he may alſo, if he will not, refuſe and deſpiſe it: and to ſay, that God hath giuen vnto men no other grace, then that againſt which the fleſh or peruerſe will may preuaile in all men, and againſt which it doth preuaile indeede in the greateſt part of mankinde, becauſe God will not reſtraine it. To conclude, let vs alſo heare the teſtimonies of the Fathers. The author of the calling of the Gentiles, ſaith thus: If ſo be that the ſauiours grace do paſſe by ſome (as we ſee it doth) it is to be referred to the hidden iudgments of diuine iuſtice. Auguſtine: Lib. de pec. merit. c.21. Nothing deliuereth vs from this wrath whereby we are all vnder ſinne, ſauing the grace of God by Ieſus Chriſt. Why this grace commeth to that infant, and not vnto this, the cauſe may be vnknowne, but not vniuſt. Againe, In Exod. quæſt.18. It was by diuine diſpenſation, that Pharaoh did not tractably conſent, but obſtinately reſiſt, becauſe that there was not onely a iuſt puniſhment, but a iuſt puniſhment euidently prepared for ſuch a heart, whereby thoſe which feare God may be corrected. Againe: Lib. de bon. perſ. cap.8. The iudgements are vnſearchable, wherefore of two wicked men being of yeares aged, one ſhould be called ſo, as that hee ſhould follow the caller, and the other ſhould either not bee called at all, or not called ſo as that hee ſhould follow him that cals him: And againe; Cap.12. He giueth to whom he will, becauſe he is mercifull, which though hee ſhould not giue, yet he is iuſt. Againe, hee doth not giue to them to whome hee will not, that he might make knowne the riches of his glorie vpon the veſſels of mercy, for by giuing vnto ſome, who deſerue not, he will haue it to be his free, and by this alſo, his true grace and fauour. Againe; Ibid. cap.7. Whoſoeuer are ſet apart from originall damnation through the bountie of Gods grace, it is no doubt, but that it ſhall bee procured for them to heare the Goſpell, and to beleeue when they heare it. Againe; Epiſt. ad Vital. 107. We know that Gods grace is not giuen vnto all men. And againe: Lib. de ſpirit. lit. c.34. Why one man is ſo exhorted that he is perſwaded, and why it is not ſo with another, O the depth of the riches! Thomas, Cont. gent. lib.3. c.161. As hee doth not open the eyes of all that are blinde, nor cure all that are crazie: that in thoſe his power might appeare, and that in the other the order of nature might be preſerued: euen ſo he doth not by his help preuent all that hinder grace, but ſome in whome hee willeth that his mercie ſhould appeare: ſo alſo that the order of iuſtice ſhould bee manifeſted in others. Iſidore, Sent. lib 2. cap.5. & 6. Spirituall grace is not diſtributed to all, but is onely giuen to the elect. Againe, It is giuen to him, becauſe hee is euill that would be good: another neither willeth, neither is it giuen him that he might be good. Cameracenſis: In lib. ſent. 1. q.12. art.2. Although God bee an vniuerſall agent ouer all, ſo as that hee giueth vnto all ſome gifts of grace, as beeing, life, knowledge, &c. yet he giueth ſome gifts of ſpeciall grace vnto one, which he giueth not to another, as namely faith, and the grace which makes vs gracious, and ſuch like which are the effects of predeſtination. Finally Auguſtine, & almoſt al the Schoolmen make two kindes of infidelitie, the one negatiue in thoſe which neuer heard the Goſpel: the other priuatiue in thoſe that refuſe and contemne the meſſage, which they haue heard of Chriſt. And it is to be noted, that by this diſtinction they doe confeſſe that God hath not vouchſafed ſo much as an outward calling to euery man.

Obiect. I. The promiſe of the ſeede of the woman is made in Adam to all and to euery man. Anſwer, It is made to Adams poſterity, indefinitely, not vniuerſally. When ſaluation is promiſed to all men, all men are named for a part of men. The heads of the nations Cain, Cham, Eſau, &c. knew the Meſſiah was promiſed, but thoſe which came after, knew him not, neither had they the meanes how to know him. So ſaith Iſaias: Me haue they not knowne, of me haue they not heard. The nations alſo next adioyning to the Iewes, peraduenture heard ſomething of the Meſſiah, & had proſelytes, but the nations afarre off, ſeated in the vttermoſt parts of the earth, had no affaires with the Iewes, and no proſelytes. And therefore it is falſe which ſome affirme, to wit, that the chuſing of the people of Iſrael, was onely a kinde of greater curteſie ſhewed to this nation, or a more gentle entreating of it, and no peculiar & diuerſe fauour, whereby he ſhewed himſelfe to bee their Father and Redeemer onely. And to make or maintaine a hidden and inuiſible Church among the Gentiles, before the comming of Chriſt, is altogether to contend againſt the word. God is onely knowne in Iudah. The Iſraelites onely are called my People in Hoſea: And they onely were Chriſts ſheepfold: becauſe Chriſt when hee came, made one ſheepfolde of the Iewes and Gentiles.

De vocat. gent. ſtatuit. lib. 1. c. 3.
Iſa. 52. 66.
Pſal. 76.
Hoſ. 1.
Epheſ. 2. 14.
Ioh. 16. 16.

Obiect. II. There is infolded in Gods prouidence, that care of God touching all thoſe things which concerne the bleſſedneſ of man. But the Gentiles knew this prouidence of God, and that his goodneſſe was ſo great, that hee would paſſe by nothing which might make for the happineſſe and ſaluation of man. Therefore the Gentiles did after a ſort, obſcurely and by an infolded knowledge, know the doctrine concerning the redemption of mankinde. Anſw. This faith of things vnknowne is a meere fiction. For faith of it owne nature is a certen knowledge. Moreouer, although the generall doe include in it ſelfe the ſpecies or kindes, and the whole his members, yet he which knoweth the generall and the whole, doth not by and by know all the kinds and parts thereof. The mind may ſo know the generall, that yet for all that it may in the meane time be ignorant of the ſpeciall kindes thereof. We muſt therefore beware of the Schoole-mens opinion, who ſay, that ſaluation was giuen before Chriſts comming, for the implicite or infolded faith concerning the Redeemer in generall, namely, when men did beleeue that there is a God, and that he is a rewarder, and A the giuer of all gifts which concerne the good either of ſoule or body, eſpecially the remedy of ſinne. But this is nothing elſe then to imagine a certaine ſauing faith and Church, which hath no word of God at all, either written, or any other way reuealed. Furthermore, this is to accuſe Paul of falſhood, who teacheth the contrary in theſe words: Seeing the world by wiſedome knew not God in the wiſedome of God, it pleaſed God by the fooliſhnes of preaching to ſaue them that beleeue. It is alſo moſt certaine, that we ought to know Chriſt the redeemer in ſpecial. This is life eternal, that they know thee to be the only very God, and whom thou haſt ſent Ieſus Chriſt. The ſame affirme B the ancient Fathers. Irenæus: They being ignorant of that Emmanuel, who is borne of the Virgin, are depriued of his gift, which is life eternall. Hierome: We cannot be his ſonnes before, vnleſſe wee receiue the faith and vnderſtanding of his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt. Auguſtine ſaith, that thoſe which were iuſt in olde time, whatſoeuer they were, were deliuered onely by that faith, whereby wee are deliuered; to wit, by the faith of Chriſts incarnation. Againe: What truth ſoeuer thou ſaieſt was in thoſe which were iuſt in olde time, the faith onely of the Mediatour ſaueth them, who ſhed his blood for the forgiueneſſe of ſinnes.

1. Cor. 1. 21.
Ioh. 17. 3.
Lib de hæreſ. 3. c. 21.
In Eph. 1.
Lib. 2. cont. 2. epiſt. Pel. cap. 21.

Obiect. III. [a] The power of God is knowne vnto the Gentiles. Rom. 1. [b] Chriſt is the C power of God. 1. Corinth. 1. 24. [c] Therefore Chriſt is knowne to the Gentiles. Anſw. I diſtinguiſh of the propoſition. The power of God is either the power of creation, or of redemption: The power of God in the creation was knowne vnto the Gentiles: but not the power of God in the redemption, which is Chriſt himſelfe, the preaching of whom is fooliſhnes vnto the world.

[a] Propoſitiō
[b] Aſſūption
[c] Concluſiō

Obiect. IV. The Fathers ſay that ſauing grace is vniuerſall. Firſt, I anſwer, that the ſayings of the Fathers are to be vnderſtood of the grace of the laſt time, which is common to all men and nations. Irenæus. The Lord hath reconciled vs in the laſt times by his incarnation, being made a Mediatour betweene God and D man, reconciling the Father vnto all:--- giuing vnto vs that conuerſion which is to our Creator. Origene ſaith: God hath a greater care to ſaue men, then the diuell hath to deſtroy them.--- The onely begotten Sonne of God himſelfe (I ſay) is preſent with vs, he defendeth, keepeth, and draweth vs vnto himſelfe.--- for he ſaith in another place, When I ſhall be lifted vp I will draw all things vnto mee. Chryſoſtome: Grace is ſhed abroad ouer all: it paſſeth by, and diſdaineth neither Iew, nor Grecian, nor Barbarian, nor Scythian; it is alike affected vnto all, it ſheweth it ſelfe gentle vnto all, it calleth all with equall honour; and let thoſe, who neglect the helps of grace, aſcribe this their blindneſſe vnto themſelues. For conſidering that a way to enter in lieth open vnto all, and is forbidden to none, ſome deſperately wicked doe refuſe to enter, through their owne corruption. Cyril ſaith: He is the true light, and ſendeth forth his brightneſſe

De hæreſ. l. 5. cap. 17.
Hom. 20. in Num.
Hom. 7. in Ioh.
Lib. 1. in Ioh. cap. 11.

Serm. 8. in Pſal. 118.

In Iob. l. 35. cap. 14.

Comment. in Rom. c. 3.

vnto all: but (as Paul ſaith) the God of this world hath blinded the mindes of vnfaithfull men, that the light of Gods knowledge may not ſhine in them. Ambroſe: The earth is full of the mercie of God, becauſe pardon of ſinnes is giuen vnto all. The myſticall ſunne of righteouſneſſe is riſen vnto all, is come vnto all, hath ſuffered for all, and hath riſen againe for all.] And if any beleeue not in Chriſt, he depriues himſelfe of this generall benefit. He ſhutteth out the grace of common light from himſelfe. Gregorie ſaith: The medicine which is from God meeteth vs in euery place; becauſe he hath both giuen vnto man commandements not to ſinne, and hath alſo giuen remedies to him that ſinneth, leſt he ſhould deſpaire. Theodulus Presbyter. He hath ſaid that both Iewes and Gentiles ſhould be partakers of Grace, yet not all, but thoſe that beleeue: and becauſe grace is common to all, not without cauſe.

Anſwer 2.

Lib. 2. c. 14.

Lib. 2. c. 4.

Lib. 2. c. 6.

Secondly, they ſpeake of naturall vocation, or of the grace of nature conſiſting in the relikes of naturall light and vnderſtanding, in the common gifts of vertues and outward bleſſings, which are teſtimonies of Gods prouidence and goodneſſe. The author of the calling of the Gentiles: For this cauſe verily the nations may be excuſed, which beeing aliens from the common wealth of Iſrael, voide of hope, and without God in this world, haue periſhed vnder the darkeneſſe of ignorance, becauſe this abundance of grace, which doth now water the whole world, did not flow ſo plentifully before: For there is euermore ſhewed vnto all men a certaine meaſure of doctrine from (a) aboue, which albeit it proceed from a more ſparing and hidden grace, yet it is ſufficient (in the Lords iudgement) for a (b) remedie vnto ſome, and a witneſſe vnto all. Againe, who may not eaſily perceiue that he neuer denied his diuine goodneſſe to the poſteritie of this brother-ſlayer, if he conſider how profitable ſo long patience of God, ſuch plentifull ſtore of temporall bleſſings, and ſuch an vniuerſall increaſe of multiplied fruitfulneſſe might haue beene vnto them? which benefits, although they wrought no cure and amendment in thoſe whoſe hearts were hardened, yet they prooue that their apoſtaſie was not cauſed by God. Againe, In the fartheſt parts of the world there bee ſome nations, vnto which the light of ſauing grace hath not as yet dawned: ——vnto whome that parcell of generall aſſiſtance is not denied, which is alwaies from aboue granted vnto all men; Although the nature of man hath receiued ſo ſharpe a wound that it is not poſſible for any man to come to the knowledge of God by the helpe of his owne voluntarie contemplation, vnleſſe the true light diſpell the darkeneſſe of the heart, which the iuſt and good God in his vnſearchable iudgement hath not ſo ſheddе abroad in times paſt, as he doth in theſe laſt daies.

De præd. cap. 5.

Cont. Iul. l. 2.

De gen. contra Manich lib. 1. cap. 3.

Ad art. ſibi falſo imp. 6.

III. The Fathers ſpeake of the vniuerſall aptneſſe, whereby mans will beeing by Gods ordinarie diſpenſation preuented and helped by the holy Ghoſt, may beleeue and bee conuerted; which notwithſtanding, a ſtone, ſtocke, or beaſt cannot. Auguſt. A poſſibilitie to haue faith is giuen of nature. Againe he ſaith, that mans nature is capable of iuſtification by the grace of the holy Spirit. Againe: Men may keepe Gods commandements and beleeue in God if they will; becauſe that light enlighteneth euery man which commeth into this world. Proſper: To be able to haue faith is the nature of men, but to haue faith, is the grace of the faithfull. Auguſtine: This difference there is betwixt wicked men and the diuels, that men though they bee exceedingly wicked, may be reconciled, if God will ſhew mercie; but there is no conuerſion reſerued for the diuels.

A

B

Now as concerning Chriſtian grace, whereby a will to be conuerted, and to beleeue actually in Chriſt is giuen vnto men; the Fathers haue not ſo much as dreamed, that it is common vnto all, and euery one: which notwithſtanding ſome are not (c) now afraid to affirme in their writings.

* Error 7.

Aug. de cor. & grat. c. 10. & 12.

Lib. de præd. c. 17. c. 5.

* This plat-forme teacheth that Gods foreknowledge of our faith and infidelitie is the rule of predeſtination; which is vtterly falſe. For firſt of all, the very will is a rule vnto it ſelfe, and the diuine counſels. Eph. 1. 5. 11. We were predeſtinated according to his purpoſe, who worketh all things after the counſell of his owne will. Secondly, Gods election is the rule of faith that is to be giuen or not giuen. Rom. 11. verſ. 5. A reſeruation is made according to the election of grace.

C

Thirdly, the foreknowledge of faith and infidelitie doth not extend it ſelfe ſo far as predeſtination, which belongs vnto all men whatſoeuer, many of whome notwithſtanding neuer ſo much as heard of Chriſt: now theſe cannot haue faith nor * priuatiue infidelitie, but only a negatiue. The ſame I ſay of thoſe which die in their infancie beeing within the couenant, who we beleeue are ſaued by the tenour of the ſame couenant: who for all that are neither elected for faith, nor according to faith, which they as yet had not. But if the foreſeeing of faith were the rule or ſquare of election or reprobation, the thing foreſeene ſhould belong to all men without exception; for the rule muſt not bee ſtraiter than that which is ruled by it. Fourthly, foreſeene faith is the effect of election, therefore it is not the rule of it. Eph. 1. 5. Who hath predeſtinated vs vnto Adoption by Chriſt: and therefore alſo to faith; which receiueth the benefit of adoption. Auguſtine: Let vs therefore (ſaith he) vnderſtand [m] that calling whereby they are choſen, who are choſen not becauſe they did beleeue, but that they ſhould beleeue: for if they were for that cauſe choſen becauſe they did beleeue, they themſelues verily had choſen him before by beleeuing in him, that they might deſerue to be choſen. Againe: Leſt any man ſhould ſay, My faith or ſome ſuchlike thing, doth diſtinguiſh me from other men, the teacher of the Gentiles meeting with ſuch conceits asketh: What haſt thou that thou haſt not receiued? and of whome

[a] Chryſoſtome ſaith, that the preſeruing in the Arke is ſuperna gratia, grace from aboue. Hom. 25. in Gen.

[b] For the outward reformation of the life.

[c] For they ſay that God hath giuen euery man without exception power to beleeue if he wil himſelfe.

* contempt of the Goſpell.

[m] Gods will is the firſt rule in contingents. Cling in loc. com. l. 3. c. 6. And Francis Maronis ſaith, that Gods will is the principall in contingents, and that it is ruled and directed of none. Lib. 1. diſt. 42. q. 4. Lib. 1. diſt.

A but of him, who diſtinguiſheth thee from him, to whom he hath not giuen that which he hath giuen to thee. Lumb. God hath elected theſe whom it pleaſed him to elect of his owne free mercie, not becauſe they would bee beleeuers, but that they might be beleeuers: and to them hee hath giuen grace, not becauſe they were faithfull, but that they might be made faithfull: Againe; Grace is the effect of predeſtination. Fiftly, if God did elect according to foreſeene faith, tell me why hee did foreſee faith in one man rather then in another, tell me I ſay? for here whether thou wilt or no, thou muſt haue recourſe to the meere will of God. For God doth foreſee nothing which is good in any beſides that which he himſelfe of his pleaſure wil firſt make. And what is the cauſe why hee foreſeeth faith in B one man rather then in another? but onely becauſe it is his will to giue one man faith, and not an other. Laſtly, this rule is vncertaine; for faith, as appeareth by this platforme, may be vtterly loſt; and therefore the thing ruled, to wit, predeſtination is made vncertaine. This a certaine Author plainely confeſſeth in his expoſition of the Epiſtle to the Romanes, where hee teacheth vnaduiſedly that Gods decree may bee changed, and that election and reprobation haue recourſe one to another; becauſe (as he ſaith) they depend vpon the condition of faith and infidelitie.

In epiſt. ad Rom. ca. 8

Error 8.

Furthermore, this platforme teacheth that true and ſauing faith, may periſh and be loſt C either wholly or for euer, which notwithſtanding is not true. Reaſon. I. Math. 16. 18. Vpon this rocke will I build my Church, and the gates of hell ſhall not preuaile againſt it. Here three queſtions muſt be asked; what the rocke is? what is meant by building on the rocke? and what is that which is promiſed to thoſe which are built vpon it? The rocke is faith it ſelfe, or Chriſt apprehended by faith. Chryſoſtome. Vpon this rocke, that is (ſaith he) vpon the faith of confeſſion. Againe. He ſetteth our feete vpon the rocke, that is, vpon faith, for faith in Chriſt, may well be ſaid to be that which cannot be broken. Againe: Chriſt being wiſe hath built his houſe, that is, his Church vpon a rocke, that is, vpon the fortitude of faith, or a ſtrong faith. Now if faith bee a D rocke, it remaineth conſtant and immoueable. To bee built vpon the rocke, is to perceiue the doctrine of the Goſpel, to embrace Chriſt our Sauiour with a true faith, and to cleaue faſt to him with the heart. For the Corinthians are ſaid to bee Pauls building, becauſe he brought them to the faith. And the Epheſians are ſaid to be built vpon the foundation of the Apoſtles and Prophets, becauſe Paul came and preached vnto them the Goſpel of peace. The certaintie and firmeneſſe of the doctrine of the Goſpel may alſo be called a Rocke. Epiphanius: They ſhall not preuaile againſt the rocke, that is to ſay, againſt the truth. Hilarie: This is thy bleſſed rocke of faith, which Peter hath confeſſed with his mouth. Auguſtine: Vpon this rocke which thou haſt confeſſed, I will A build my Church. Now no man can bee built vpon the confeſſion and vpon the truth, but by faith. Hence I doe conclude thus: Thoſe that are built vpon the rocke cannot fall away vtterly: but thoſe which truly beleeue are built vpon the rocke: therefore thoſe which truly beleeue doe not vtterly and wholly fall away. Thirdly, the promiſe made to them that are built vpon the rocke is, that the gates of hell ſhall not preuaile againſt them. From hence it followeth neceſſarily, that the Diuels can but make a floriſh, and ſhew their ſtrength and power againſt the faith, and that they ſhall neuer bee able to ouercome and conquer. Let vs here alſo weigh the iudgements of the Fathers. Cyprian: Lord to whome B ſhall we goe?——ſignifying that the Church, which beleeueth in Chriſt, and which keepeth that which it hath once knowne, doth at no time altogether depart from him, and that they are the Church who doe abide in Gods houſe. But that they are not of God the fathers planting, whome we doe ſee to bee void of the ſtedfaſtneſſe, and maſſie ſolidneſſe of corne, and like to chaffe vanned or blowne about with the wind of the winnowing enemie: of whome alſo Iohn ſpeaketh in his 1. Epiſtle ſaying, They went out from vs, but they were not of vs: for if they had beene of vs, they had ſurely remained with vs. Auguſtine: Loue which may bee loſt was neuer true. Againe: To beleeue truly, is to beleeue conſtantly, ſtedfaſtly, valiantly, and firmely, ſo as that thou maiſt not now returne vnto thine, and forſake C Chriſt. Againe: Thoſe which are truly Saints being predeſtinated to reigne with God by his grace, haue not onely giuen them now a power to perſeuere if they will, but perſeuerance it ſelfe. Againe: He which makes men good, maketh them to perſeuere in that which is good. And againe: The Church loſeth none on the earth, but thoſe which are wicked, and admitteth none into heauen but thoſe that are good. Againe; As the arke was built of foure-ſquare timber, ſo the Church is built of Saints; for that which is foure-ſquare will ſtand ſtedie on which ſide ſoeuer you ſet it. And the Saints continue ſtedfaſt in euery temptation. Chryſoſtome; This is the propertie of faith, that howſoeuer things may fall out contrarie to the promiſes, yet it neuer falleth away vtterly, and is neuer D wholly confounded. Againe, Let vs keepe faith which is a firme and ſure rocke, for neither the floods, nor the windes can doe vs any hurt, though they driue hard againſt vs, becauſe we ſtand ſtedfaſt vpon a rocke; ſo alſo if in this life we will chooſe that true foundation, we ſhall abide without any detriment or loſſe. Againe, Thou canſt not ouercome one faithfull man: O Diuell, thou knoweſt not what the Martyrs haue done vnto thee,——the fleſh often fainteth in the torments, and the ſtrength of faith faileth not. Hence it is that in the ſame place he ſpeaketh after this ſort. If thou makeſt warre with man, thou ſhalt, it may bee, ouercome, or perhaps thou ſhalt bee ouercome, but no might can ouercome the Church. Furthermore: The Church is farre ſtronger then the earth, yea and ſtronger then heauen. Againe, κατισχύσουσιν.

Homil in Math. 55. & Pſal. 32.

In com. imperfect. in Math. c. 7.

Lib. hær. 74.

De Trin. lib. 3.

κατισχύσουσιν, καλισχύουσιν.

Epiſt. 1. 3.

1. Ioh. 2. 19.

Decr. de pœnit. d. 2. c. 2. Tract. 116. in Ioh.

De cor. & grat. c. 12.

Epiſt. 163.

Quæſt. 52. ad Oroſiũ.

Hom. 1. in 2. Tim. 1. Penitus. omnino.

Hom. de expulſ. Chryſ.

Hom. 25. in Gen.

the earth, yea and ſtronger then heauen. Againe, In 7.c.Iob. Faith in God is a certaine ſecure anchor. Gregory: Becauſe the light of the elect is not extinguiſhed by temptation, we doe not ſay there is a night made but an euening; namely, becauſe temptation doth oftentimes hide the light of righteouſneſſe in the hearts of the elect, but it doth not put it quite out: it maketh it as it were twinkle and looke wanne, but it doth not extinguiſh it. Angelom. In lib.3. Reg.cap.7. The obſeruation of Gods commandements, beeing eſtabliſhed in the hearts of the elect by faith, hope, and loue of that heauenly recompence, can by no let of temporall things bee diſſolued. Againe: Ibid, cap.5. The hearts of the elect are compared to a foure-ſquare figure which haue learned ſo to remaine in the ſtrength of faith, that they cannot be remooued from the certaintie of their eſtate, by any repugnancie of thoſe things they meete with, no not by death it ſelfe. Andreas: Epiſc. Capp in Apoc.com. cap.32. Thoſe are found to be abortiue or vntimely borne children, who haue departed from the true light, which is Chriſt. Thomas: Catena in 16.Mat.ex Orig. If we by the reuelation of our heauenly Father ſhall then confeſſe, namely, when our conuerſation is in the heauens, that Ieſus Chriſt is the Sonne of the liuing God, and if it ſhall be ſaid vnto vs, Thou art Peter,——for euery one that followeth Chriſt, is a rocke; but he, againſt whome the gates of hell preuaile, is neither to bee tearmed the rocke whereon Chriſt doth build his Church, neither the Church, nor a part of the Church which Chriſt buildeth vpon the rocke. And againe: In Luc. 22. Theoph. Although thou muſt be ſifted a little, yet thou haſt the ſeede of faith hidden in thee: though the leaues be blowne downe with the tempters winde, yet the roote is freſh.

Second reaſon: Matth.6.13. Leade vs not into temptation, &c. that is, doe not vtterly forſake vs and deliuer vs vp to Satan. Auguſt. De temp. ſerm.36. God leadeth a man into temptation, when hee ſuffers him to be tempted, that he may trie him, and not deſtroy him ——: And he deliuereth from euill, when he ſuffers vs not to be tempted beyond our power. Gregory: In Iob.1,39. The grace of the holy Ghoſt qualifies the temptations of the aduerſarie by diſpenſation, that thoſe which may bee, may but ſcorch with their heate, and not burne vp with their fire. Hence I thus reaſon: Whatſoeuer we aske according to Gods will, it ſhall be giuen vs: but we aske according to Gods will, that we may not bee vtterly forſaken in temptation: for our Aduocate taught vs ſo to pray. Therfore that we bee not vtterly forſaken in temptation, ſhall be giuen of God. Now whome God doth not vtterly forſake, he doth not vtterly fall away. And this Chriſt taketh for granted in the elect. Matth. 24.24. So as that, if it were poſſible, they ſhould deceiue the very elect.

Third reaſon: If there bee a totall or vtter falling away from a true faith, then is there alſo required a ſecond ingrafting into Chriſt, and conſequently a ſeale of the ſecond ingrafting, baptizing anew, that is to ſay, anabaptiſme: for ſo often as we are borne againe, we are to be baptized. This is Auguſt. ground: A As the carnall generation is one, neither can a man enter into the wombe againe: euen ſo is ſpirituall regeneration: for we are once borne, and we are alſo once borne againe. Therefore alſo it is requiſite, that the Sacrament of regeneration bee once receiued. If it chance to fall out by ſinne, that ſome are weakened who are regenerated, they haue neede of cure by repentance, and not by baptiſme. Tract. in Ioh. 11.cap. 12. But thoſe that doe vtterly or wholly fall away from faith and grace, are the ſecond time to be ingrafted into Chriſt: and conſequently, they are not once regenerated but againe: and therefore they are oftner then once to be baptized.

Fourth reaſon: 1.Ioh.3.9. Whoſoeuer is borne of God committeth not ſinne, becauſe his ſeede re- B maineth in him. We muſt here marke that he ſaith his ſeede remaineth in him, that is to ſay, that it doth not depart nor vaniſh away; And this ſeede is the very word of God, which remaineth in vs by faith, & doth not remaine, faith beeing vtterly loſt. This ſeede alſo is immortall, becauſe it will neuer periſh, if it bee truly ſowne in our hearts.

A fift reaſon is taken out of the ſixt to the Romanes,* If Chriſt hauing once died cannot die any more, then wee which are his members being dead together with him, ſhall not die any more in ſinne. * Propoſition. *But Chriſt hauing once died cannot die any more. * Aſſumption. *Therfore wee which are his members ſhall not die any more in ſinne. * Concluſion. The propoſition is in the C eight verſ. and hath a manifeſt ground. For by the vertue of the myſticall communion, which is h[illegible] with Chriſt by faith, his ſpirituall life, which cannot periſh, flowing into his members, maketh them in like manner that they die no more in ſinne. The Aſſumption is in the 9. and 10. verſe; the concluſion in the eleuenth. Moreouer, thoſe which are the members of Chriſts body, ſhall grow vp vnto a perfect man: Eph.4.12,13. and 1.Ioh.2.29. but all thoſe which haue a true faith are members of Chriſts body, therefore thoſe which haue a true ſauing faith ſhall grow vp vnto a perfect man: and therfore thoſe which doe truly beleeue ſhall not periſh, but obtaine ſaluation.

D For the better vnderſtanding of this doctrine, two things muſt be ſought for; firſt, whence it is that faith periſheth not? Anſw. If we conſider faith by it ſelfe, that is, in the owne nature, it may periſh and bee loſt; but if wee conſider the confirming grace, which God hath promiſed to them that beleeue, ſauing faith doth not periſh. It is by reaſon of the ſecond grace freely promiſed, that the firſt grace doth not periſh. Phil.1.29. To you it is giuen for Chriſt, that ye ſhould not onely beleeue in him, but alſo ſuffer for his ſake. One of theſe (ſaith Auguſtin) belongs vnto the beginning, the other to the end: but both are Gods gift, becauſe both are giuen. A Chriſtian mans beginning is to beleeue in Chriſt, and the beſt end hee can make is to ſuffer for Chriſt. Ier.32.40. I will make an euerlaſting couenant with them, that I will neuer depart from them, to doe them good; (loe the euerlaſting forgiueneſſe of ſinnes) and I will put my feare in their hearts, that they ſhall not depart from mee (behold the perſeuerance of faith, and regeneration that ſhall neuer be loſt.) Phil. 1. 6. He that hath begun this good worke in you, will finiſh it vnto the end.

Secondly: it may be demanded how farre foorth the faithfull loſe grace and the holy ſpirit? Anſwer: Diſtinguiſh the faithfull, and diſtinguiſh grace: There bee foure ſorts of beleeuers; The firſt are they which heare the word and vnderſtand it. The ſecond are they which doe heare, vnderſtand, and for a time approoue it. The third, are thoſe who doe heare, vnderſtand, approoue, and bring forth ſome fruits; The fourth are ſuch as doe heare, vnderſtand, approoue, bring foorth ſome fruits, and lay hold vpon Chriſt the Redeemer by the hand of a liuely faith vnto ſaluation. Theſe are true beleeuers and cannot vtterly either fall away from God, or periſh: howſoeuer all other beſides theſe, both may, and vſe to fall away and periſh. Furthermore, Grace is either the firſt, or ſecond. The firſt, is the free fauour of God who embraceth thoſe that are his beeing in Chriſt vnto euerlaſting life. From this grace the faithfull are ſaid to fall after this faſhion. As ſoone as they haue committed ſome haynous ſinne againſt the law of God, they doe grieuouſly offend him: God beeing offended, changeth the effects of grace, into the effects of a certaine hatred, not againſt the faithfull themſelues, but againſt their ſinnes, and this both within, and without. Within, when he maketh them to feele an accuſing conſcience, and witneſſing that God is diſpleaſed, and that they are made guilty of death by their ſin. Without, when they taſte of Gods anger againſt them in the outward chaſtiſements of the bodie. And thus farre they fall from his fatherly loue, and are become the enemies of God after a ſort: I ſay, After a ſort, becauſe God doth not lay downe his fatherly affection: & doth not alter his purpoſe of adoption and eternall life. Although the faithfull do fall away, ſo much as lieth in them, yet God remaineth a Father in Chriſt; and they as touching right vnto eternall life, remaine ſonnes. Ioh. 10. 28. They ſhall neuer periſh, neither ſhall any plucke them out of my hand. Here ſome doe ſay, that the ſheepe cannot be pluckt out, but yet they may of their owne accord ſlinke away; but without reaſon: for the ſheepe which reuolteth is pluckt away by the diuell, when it doth reuolt. And as he which continueth in Chriſts Ioh. 8. 31. word is verily his diſciple, ſo hee that doth not fall away, but abides a ſheepe, is verily a ſheepe. Rom. 8. 35. Who ſhall ſeparate vs from the loue of Chriſt? Rom. 11. 29. The gifts and calling of God are (ἀμεταμέλητα) without repentance. 2. Tim. 2. 19. The foundation of God remaineth ſure, and hath this ſeale, the Lord knoweth who are his.

The ſecond grace is either imputed or inherent: imputed is in iuſtification, a part whereof is remiſſion of ſinnes. And this remaineth and ſhall for euer remaine ſure as touching ſinnes paſſed. That ſaying of the Schoolemen is moſt true: Sinnes once forgiuen continue ſo alwaies. But when that any faithfull man ſhall fall grieuouſly, the pardon of that fall is granted in Gods decree, notwithſtanding no pardon is actually giuen of God, nor receiued of man vntill he doe repent: yea if he ſhould neuer repent (which notwithſtanding is impoſſible) he ſhould be damned as beeing guiltie of eternall death by this offence. For there is no pardon of any new ſinne, without a new act of faith and repentance.

Inherent grace, is either faith, or the gift which followeth faith; In ſauing faith wee muſt conſider, the act, and the habit. The act of faith is the very action of apprehending, or an vnfained apprehenſion of Chriſt. ἀνυπόκριτος. Now this faith may be loſt according to ſome act. The very habit alſo or power of faith, may in it ſelfe bee loſt; but by reaſon of confirming grace, faith doth not periſh as touching the eſſence thereof, but it is leſned and abated according to ſome degree. And hence it followeth that our communion with Chriſt may be diminiſhed, but that our vnion cannot be diſſolued. There remained in Dauid after his fall, the ſeede of true faith and regeneration: as appeareth by his words, Pſal. 51. 11. Take not thy holy ſpirit from me. It is alſo the iudgement of the ancient Fathers, that the roote Greg. li. 29. in Iob & in Ezec. Homil. 15. Tertull. lib. de Perſec. Chryſoſt. hom. 26. in Matth. of faith in Peters fall was not taken away and aboliſhed, but onely mooued, and that it did as it were waxe drie, that it was but onely ſhaken and troden on, and that it did not vtterly vaniſh. Here alſo we are to giue eare a while to Gratian, who conſenteth with vs, and to this purpoſe hath gathered many teſtimonies together out of the Fathers. Hath loue (ſaith he) taken roote? be ſecure: no euill can proceede. Againe: Loue doth vtterly eſtrange the minde, Decret. 2. pars. ca. 33. q. 3. ſine de pœnit. diſt. 2. wherein it hath once taken poſſeſſion, from the delights of the world. Loue is ioyned to God and vnited inſeparably; and is alwaies inuincible in all. Againe: Loue is an inuiſible vnction; which ſtands as it were in ſtead of a roote to him, in whomſoeuer it ſhall be; which cannot wither though the ſunne doe parch: whatſoeuer is rooted is nouriſhed with the heate of the ſunne, and doth not wither. Againe: He lookes backe after the plough, who after that hee hath begun to doe good workes, returnes to euill, which he did forſake. Which in no wiſe befalleth to the elect. Againe: All the elect doe ſo goe forward vnto good things, that they doe not returne to the committing of euill. And againe: The ſitting and mouing of the Spirit may be thus vnderſtood. For as touching ſome vertues it doth alwaies abide in the hearts of the Saints: but according vnto other it comes as that which will returne, and returnes, as purpoſing to come. For as concerning faith, hope, and charity, and other graces, without which it is not poſſible to come to that heauenly countrie, (as namely, humility, chaſtity, iuſtice, and mercie,) it neuer forſaketh their hearts that are vpright. But as touching the vertue of prophecie, the eloquence of doctrine, and working of miracles, it is ſometimes preſent with the elect, and ſometimes it withdrawes it ſelfe.

De cor. & grat. cap. 6. & 8.

The Schoolemen alleadge Auguſtine to the contrarie opinion, where he ſaith, That doubtleſſe if the man which is renewed and iuſtified doe fall backe by his owne will vnto an euill life, he cannot ſay, I haue not receiued; becauſe he hath by his owne free will vnto euill, loſt the grace of God, which he did receiue. And againe: That God doth not giue the gift of perſeuerance vnto ſome of his children whome hee did regenerate in Chriſt, and to whome he gaue faith, hope, and loue. But hee ſpeaketh not theſe things of thoſe which are indeede the ſonnes of the promiſe, but of thoſe which are ſo called of vs, and which beare the name and profeſſion of ſonnes. Furthermore: he ſpeaketh of ſuch as haue faith and loue in opinion and imagination, and truly alſo as touching outward practiſe. For Auguſtine in the ſame place hath ſo expounded his meaning: We muſt beleeue that ſome of the ſonnes of perdition —— doe[a] beginne to liue, and for a time faithfully and iuſtly in the faith that worketh by loue, and afterwards fall ——. Thirdly, hee ſpeaketh of faith and loue as they are imperfect vertues, and as it were lately ſprung vp: and not as they are ſound, perfect, and true, to wit, as touching the truth of their eſſence. So Auguſtine: Loue is ſprung vp within thee; but it is not yet perfited: doe not deſpaire, but nouriſh it leſt it be ſtifled. And Gratian: This loue which was an herbe in Peter before his deniall, and which ſpringeth vp in euery one, is loſt and repaired, before it be ſtrengthned and made perfect. And indeede for the manifeſting of the truth of faith and loue there is required perſeuerance, by which it might bee knowne that theſe and ſuch like vertues haue taken deepe roote in the heart, and are grounded vpon an earneſt and conſtant affection, that they may neuer be ouercome of temptations.

Cap. 9.

κατὰ δόκησιν.

Cap. 14.

[a] He ſpeaketh of the iuſtice of life, and not of the inward righteouſneſſe of the heart.

Tract. 5. in Ioh. epiſt. ibid. ca. 24.

Obiect. I. Sinne and the grace of the holy ſpirit cannot ſtand together. Anſ. This is true of the ſin that reigneth, or which is committed with full conſent of wil, but the regenerate do not ſin with a whole or full will. And I lay this foundation of this iudgement. In tentation wee muſt conſider two things, the beginning or ground, and the degrees. The ground is our owne concupiſcence, that is, our inbred corruption. The ſubiect thereof is the whole man, but eſpecially the faculties of mans ſoule, the mind, will, and affections. And in theſe it doth immediatly exiſt and reigne alone before a ſinner bee conuerted. And a man beeing not regenerated, be hee what hee will be, he is fleſh euery iot of him. But after that a man is regenerated, the fleſh is no more alone, or ſeuered by it ſelſe, but mixed with the ſpirit, and the ſpirit with the fleſh: although both theſe qualities remaine as touching nature diſtinct in one ſubiect: as in the twilight the light doth not appeare alone, but with darkeneſſe, and darkeneſſe is not alone but with the light. And the man that is regenerated is not onely fleſh, nor onely ſpirit, nor fleſh in one part, and ſpirit in another, but the whole man is fleſh in euery part, & the whole man is ſpirit in euery part. And becauſe thoſe things which are contrarie cannot conſiſt together in the higheſt degrees, therefore albeit the whole man be fleſh, yet hee is not fleſh in the higheſt degree, nor ſpirit in the higheſt; but in remiſſe and lower degrees, partly fleſh, and partly ſpirit: as luke-warme water is remiſſely and indifferently colde thoroughout, and remiſſely alſo hot thoroughout. Hence it followeth that concupiſcence may exiſt and be with the grace of the holy Spirit, ſo that it beare not rule. The degrees of tentation are, as Iames teacheth in number fiue.

A

B

Iam. cap. 1. 14. 15.

τὸ ἐξέλκειν.

The firſt, abſtraction or drawing away, when the minde receiueth a thought caſt into it about the committing of euill, and by this meanes ſuffers herſelfe to bee drawne away from her duty to other things.

τὸ δελεάζειν.

The ſecond is ineſcation or entiſing, when the minde receiueth a moroſe and wayward thought for the committing of ſinne, together with a certaine delectation of the affection: as when fiſhes delight themſelues with the baite hanging vpon the hooke. Thus far all Diuines thinke a regenerate man may come: and it is moſt certaine. For hence it is that Paul complaineth that he was held captiue of ſinne.

C

Rom. 7. 23.

τὸ συλλαμβάνειν.

The third degree is conception, namely, when there is a will, conſent, and a purpoſe to commit euill. And when corruption doth come thus farre, there bee ſome that ſay that all repentance and faith is driuen out & gone: but not truly. There is indeede in the vnregenerate in whome ſinne reigneth, a full conſent: but in the regenerate, in whome the fleſh and the ſpirit are two contrarie foundations of actions, the conſent is more remiſſe and vnperfect: for they do ſo will, as that they nill, & ſo nill as that they wil. As Paul hath taught by his owne example.

D

τὸ τίκτειν.

The fourth degree is birth of ſinne, when after conſent an euill worke is actually committed. And in this act the ſame man beeing regenerate, doth at the ſame inſtant both ſin and not ſinne. He ſinneth onely according vnto the fleſh: and in that part, wherein he is renewed, he doth not ſinne, but before and after the fact deteſteth his ſinne. And as when the ſpirit preuaileth, the action is not free from all pollution of the fleſh: ſo when the fleſh preuaileth the action is not ſo corrupt in the regenerate, as it is in thoſe, in whome ſinne reigneth. Neuertheleſſe I confeſſe that in euery grieuous fall the fleſh doth get the maſterie,and that the gift of true faith, after the receit of the wound, lyeth flat and in a ſwoone for a time,but that it is not for all that aboliſhed and quite put out.

τὸ ἀποτελεῖν.

The laſt degree is perfection, namely, when ſinne beeing perfited and ripened by often iteration and cuſtome, groweth as it were vnto a habit. So ſaith Gregory: Sinne alwaies is finiſhed in a worke by thoſe ſame foure waies. For firſt the ſinne is committed cloſely: after that it is diſcouered in the ſight of men without bluſhing at the fault: then it is brought into a cuſtome. And at the laſt either it is nouriſhed with the deceit of vaine hope, or with the obſtinacie of wretched deſpaire. And Iſidore: Action bringeth forth cuſtome, and cuſtome neceſſitie: And ſo a man beeing fettered with theſe linkes: lieth faſt bound as it were with a chaine of vices. This laſt degree befals not the regenerate,and if it did, faith and the holy Spirit ſhould bee ſhaken out and baniſhed.

Moral.li. 4. cap.27.

Obiect. II. Adam when he was voide of corruption fell wholly away: therefore much more they, who beeing borne and regenerated after Adam ſhall beleeue. Anſwer. The reaſon is vnlike: For we haue (ſaith Auguſt.) by this grace of God, in the receiuing of that which is good,and in the conſtant keeping of the ſame, not onely power to doe that which we will,but alſo will to doe that which we can, which Adam wanted. For one of theſe was in him, but the other was not. For to receiue good he wanted not grace, becauſe as yet he had not loſt it. But to continue in it hee wanted the helpe of grace, without which hee was not able at all to doe it: and he receiued power if he would, but hee had not will anſwerable to his power. for if it had beene in him he ſhould haue perſeuered.

De cor.& grat.ca.11.

Obiect. III. *The member of an harlot cannot be the member of Chriſt. *But a true beleeuer who is actually a member of Chriſt, may bee the member of an harlot: *Therefore one that truly beleeues, may come to be no member of Chriſt. Anſw. The member of Chriſt is diuerſly diſtinguiſhed: for there is either a true or an apparent member. An apparent member is that, which is not a member according to election, nor in it ſelfe, but in ſhew onely, that is, iudged by meanes of outward profeſſiō to be in the viſible church. And it is like a woodden legge faſtned to the bodie by art. A true member is either by deſtination and appointment, or now actually one. Members by appointment are all thoſe who are elected: although they bee not as yet regenerated or borne. An actuall member is either one that is liuely, or halfe dead. A liuely member is that, which is according to election,and in very deede ingrafted into Chriſt,and ruled by his ſpirit. That is an halfe dead member: which doth indeede belong to Gods election, and is ingrafted into Chriſt: but yet beeing hurt by ſome grieuous fall, hath ſo much as in it is, loſt the grace of the holy Spirit. Now I anſwer to

* Propoſition.
* Aſſumption.
* Concluſion.

A the propoſition. Firſt,a member of Chriſt in ſhew may bee the member of an harlot, as a woodden foote, which is indeede the member of ſome image, may bee an apparant member of a mans bodie whereto it is fitted by art. Secondly,a member of Chriſt by appointment (in Gods decree) may bee the member of an harlot,as Paul who was ſeparated from the wombe, was for a time a member of Satan perſecuting the Church. Thirdly,he which is a liuely and actuall member of Chriſt, and ſo continueth, cannot bee the member of an harlot: but a member that is crazie and halfe dead may be. For howſoeuer he remaineth in Chriſt in reſpect of incorporation and the myſticall vnion, yet hee is B out of him as touching the force and efficacy of the ſpirit, which for a time through his owne default he doth not perceiue, vntill he doe repent. A legge that is troubled with the palſie, or receiueth no nouriſhment, is a true legge, becauſe in reſpect of vnion it is incorporated into the bodie, howſoeuer it hath almoſt loſt all communion and fellowſhip with the reſt of the members. Neither muſt this which I ſay ſeeme ſtrange, that the member of Chriſt may in ſome ſort bee the member of an harlot: becauſe the coniunction is not of the ſame kinde. The coniunction with Chriſt is ſpirituall, but that which is with an harlot is corporall.

Gal.1.15.

παραλυτικὴ ἀτροφία.

C This platforme giueth vnto euery man a free-will flexible and inclinable to both parts by grace, and teacheth that it is in mans will to apply himſelfe to grace beeing giuen, by the helpe of vniuerſall grace, or to reiect the ſame through the weakeneſſe of corrupt nature. But this is falſe: for the firſt vniuerſall grace is not effectuall,vnleſſe it be confirmed by the ſecond grace following it. As for example: If a man ſhall receiue power to beleeue if he will,yet he ſhall neuer actually and indeede beleeue, except there bee alſo giuen the helpe of the other grace, which bringeth the former into act. But this ſecond grace is not giuen to all and euery one. Moreouer, this opinion is repugnant to very plaine places of Scripture. D Ier. 32.40. I will make an euerlaſting couenant with them, that I will not turne away from them to doe them good, and I will put my feare in their hearts, that they ſhall not depart from me. Againe, 1.Cor. 1.8 9. God ſhall confirme you vnto the end blameleſſe: God is faithfull by whome ye are called vnto the fellowſhip of his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt our Lord. It is alſo contrarie to Chriſts ſpeech: Ioh. 6.45. Euery man that hath heard and hath learned of the Father, commeth vnto me. This grace (ſaith Auguſtine) which is ſecretly infuſed into mens hearts by Gods liberalitie, is refuſed of no hard heart. And afterward: If it had pleaſed the Father to teach them to come vnto Chriſt, who accounted the word of the croſſe fooliſhneſſe, without all doubt, they alſo would haue come:——why doth hee

Error 9.

Cant.13.

De præd. ſanct.ca.8.

not

A

not teach all? If we ſhall ſay, becauſe they will not learne, whome he doth not teach: it will be anſwered vs: and where is that which is ſaid vnto him, Thou O Lord, conuerteſt and quickneſt vs? Again:

Ad Simplic. lib. 1. quæſt. 2.

The effect of Gods mercy cannot bee in mans power ſo, as that he ſhould ſhew mercy to him in vaine if a man be vnwilling, becauſe if he would haue mercie on them, he could call them ſo, as they ſhould be fitted to mooue, vnderſtand, and follow. And againe: God ſheweth mercie to none in vaine, but vnto whome he ſheweth mercie, him he calleth ſo, as he knoweth to be fitting for him, that hee may not reiect him who cals him.

B

Neither do I here reſpect the diſtinction of ſufficient and effectual grace: for I acknowledge no grace ſufficient for the conuerſion of a ſinner, which is not effectuall, as I haue already ſaid before: becauſe free will is altogether wanting in ſpirituall things. We are ſtarke dead in ſinnes, and our ſufficiencie is wholly from God, ἀδυναμία.

Therefore there is in vs beſide the want of originall righteouſneſſe, a three-fold impotencie. The firſt is that, whereby we are vnable to receiue or deſire ſupernaturall grace offered by God. The ſecond is that, whereby we are vnable to vſe it lawfully. The third is that, whereby we are vnable to retaine and keepe it.

C

And therefore there are certaine degrees of grace to be beſtowed in the true conuerſion of a ſinner, in reſpect of which, Auguſtine makes a fiue-folde grace; preuenting, preparing, working, coworking, and the gift of perſeuerance.

De grat. & l. arb. c. 17.

Præueniens.

Preuenting grace is that, whereby God inſpireth into the minde of the ſinner that is to be conuerted, good thoghts, a good purpoſe, and a deſire of ſupernaturall grace. The meanes whereby preuenting grace is giuen, is the voice and preaching of the Goſpel, by the which beeing heard and thought vpon, the holy Ghoſt doth ſhew forth his efficacy and power. For hence it is that the Goſpel is called the miniſtery of the Spirit, 2. Cor. 3. 6. And that faith is ſaid to be by hearing, Rom. 10. 17. Therefore they which are out of the Church doe want the preuenting grace, vnleſſe it be extraordinarily conferred, which yet is very ſeldome done.

D

Præparans.

Preparing grace is that, whereby it is giuen vs to conſent vnto God offering grace, or whereby the minde and will are prepared, that they may yeeld aſſent and obedience to the holy Spirit. For as all ſupernatural grace in reſpect of Gods donation, is altogether from him: euen ſo we obtaine our conſentment and power to receiue grace conferred no otherwiſe then by the gift of God.

Operans.

Working grace is that, wherby wee are deliuered from the dominion of ſinne, and are renewed in minde, will and affection, hauing receiued power to obey God.

Cooperans.

Co-working grace is that, whereby God conferreth and perfiteth the grace of renewing being receiued. And without this grace following, the firſt is vnprofitable. For when grace is giuen by God, and receiued of vs by the ſecond grace, wee doe not vſe it lawfully, but by this third grace. Auguſtine ſaith well:

De cor. & grat. c. 12.

If in ſo great weakeneſſe of this life the will renewed ſhould be ſo left vnto the regenerate, that they may remaine in Gods help, if they themſelues will, and if God ſhould not make them for to will, among ſo many and ſo mightie temptations, the will would faint by reaſon of the weakeneſſe thereof. Mans weakeneſſe therefore is releeued, that through the grace of God, there ſhould bee will inſeparably annexed to the power: and therfore the will though it be but weake, yet ſhould not for all that faint and bee ouercome by aduerſitie. Againe:

De grat. & l. arb. c. 17.

Therefore that wee may will hee worketh without vs; but when wee will, and ſo will, that wee doe alſo, hee co-worketh with vs. Yet notwithſtanding without him working that we may will, or co-working when wee doe will, wee haue no power to performe the good workes of godlineſſe.

Donum perſeuerandi.

The gift of perſeuerance is that, wherby, after that wee haue receiued the grace of renouation, we do alſo receiue a will to perſeuere and continue conſtantly in that good which we can do. Hierome:

Epiſt. ad Creſiph.

That ſufficeth me not, which hee hath once beſtowed. I aske that I may receiue, and when I ſhall receiue, I aske againe. Theſe fiue graces ſpoken of euen now, beeing taken ſeuerally and aſunder by themſelues, are not ſufficient vnto ſaluation (for the preuenting grace is nothing auaileable without the preparing grace, and the working grace, without the co-working grace) yet being ioyned together they are ſufficient. And hence it plainely appeareth, that there is not any grace truely ſufficient vnto the ſaluation of a ſinner, that is ſtarke dead in ſinnes, the which is not alſo effectuall. If ſo much ſtrength were giuen to one, that would lift vp a mighty burthen, as were ſufficient, that is, ſo much as did exceede the weight of the thing that is to be lifted vp, out of all doubt motion would follow, it would come vp: ſo if God doe giue ſo much grace, as is ſufficient, that is, as would ouercome the hardneſſe of the heart, the corruption thereof could not poſſibly hinder it from beeing conuerted. Moreouer, if theſe fiue graces doe concurre in the conuerſion of a ſinner, the regenerate perſon ſhall not haue free will flexible alike either to good or euill: neither ſhall it bee in our choice to obey or reſiſt the motion of the ſpirit. Yea from hence it followeth, that it multiplieth grace, and that the will is ſo effectually ruled by it, in thoſe that are truely conuerted, as that they follow faith and godlineſſe with an inflexible and ſtedfaſt affection. The Spirit promiſed vs of God doth not enable vs to walke if wee will, but makes vs walke indeede. Thoſe which are drawne, haue not onely power to runne if ſo be that they themſelues will, but they runne indeede after Chriſt. Hee which is borne of God ſinneth not: yea he cannot ſinne. Furthermore, perſeuerance in faith doth wholly depend vpō Gods will, as theſe words of Paul doe ſhew: I haue reſerued vnto my ſelfe ſeauen

Ezec. 36. 37.
Cant. 1. 3.
1. Ioh 3. 9.
Rom. 11. 4.

thouſand men, which haue not bowed the knee vnto Baal: And thoſe which doe truly beleeue, haue receiued of God both power to perſeuere in grace, if they will, and alſo will to doe that which they haue power to doe. So Auguſtine: There is in vs by this grace of God (which is by Chriſt) in receiuing of good, and in the conſtant keeping of the ſame, not onely power to doe that which we will, but will to doe that which wee haue power to do. Therefore thoſe that do truly beleeue, cannot but perſeuere.

Obiect. I. Iſa. 5. 3. O Inhabitants of Ieruſalem, and ye men of Iudah, iudge betweene me and my vineyard: what could I haue done any more vnto my vineyard, that I haue not done vnto it? Why haue I looked that it ſhould bring forth grapes, and it bringeth forth wilde grapes? Theſe Iewes therefore had the helpe of God which was throughly ſufficient vnto conuerſion, and the leading of a life acceptable to God. Anſw. God ſpeaketh in this place of the* ſufficiencie of outward meanes, that is, of the preaching of his word, of his benefits, & chaſtiſements whereby they were ſufficiently inuited and led vnto ſaluation, but that they were of ſuch peeuiſh and peruerſe diſpoſitions. God therfore did that to this wicked vineyard, which if he had done in a good vineyard, it would haue brought forth the fruit of obedience. And here he ſpeaketh not of the ſufficiencie of inward grace, whereby an euill vineyard might be changed into a good vineyard. Thou wilt ſay, that God then hath no iuſt cauſe to expoſtulate with the Iewes, that they brought not forth fruit; becauſe hee gaue them not grace to repent and bring forth fruit which could by no meanes be had, if he do not giue it. I anſwer, that God could not iuſtly haue expoſtulated with the Iewes, if hee had owed them grace, and beeing bound to giue it, had not giuen it, if they had not caſt away the grace which they receiued in their firſt parents, by which they might haue brought forth fruit beſeeming repentance: If he had denied them beeing anew deſirous to receiue the grace which now is loſt: But God is boũd to no man: and we haue caſt away that grace which was beſtowed in Adam; And wee doe not deſire nor care for it beeing caſt away: therefore God doth moſt iuſtly expoſtulate with vs, if we bring not forth fruit.

* So Hierome on this place, Loquitur de ſufficientia externorum mediorum, non internæ gratiæ, Obiect. II. Math. 23. 37. How often would I haue gathered thy children together, and thou wouldeſt not? How did Chriſt will, and ſo will that he complaines of thoſe who would not, if he had not through his helpe made them able to will, whome hee knew could not will? Anſwer. Chriſt is here ſaid to haue willed to gather them together, not by the will of his good pleaſure, which may neuer bee reſiſted, but by his ſignifying or reuealed will. For he is ſaid to will to gather all vnto himſelfe, becauſe by the preaching of the word he calleth all in common vnto ſaluation, and prefixeth to himſelfe this ende of preaching, that they ſhould commit themſelues to his protection and fidelitie. By this will therfore hee may will to gather the Iewes together, though in the meane time hee doe not helpe them, that they themſelues may bee able to will. And hee doth alſo iuſtly complaine of thoſe that will not, becauſe mens impotencie to that which is good, and their bondage vnder ſinne, whereby they are made to nill, and vnable to will that which is good, commeth not from the Creator, but from him who of his owne accord fell away from the Creator. Secondly, I ſay that Chriſt is here ſaid to haue willed, not as he is God effectually mollifying and conuerting the hearts of men, but as he was a miniſter of the circũciſion, while he ſought the conuerſion of the Iewes by preaching. A place altogether like is in Act. 7. 51. where the Iewes are ſaid to haue ruſhed againſt, or reſiſted the holy Ghoſt. But theſe words are to be vnderſtood, not in regard of the inward and effectuall operation of the ſpirit, but in reſpect of the outward miniſterie of the Prophets. It pleaſed Lumbard alſo thus to interpret this place: How often vvould I haue gathered thy children, and thou vvouldeſt not? that is, So many as I haue gathered together, I did it by my effectuall will, thou being vnwilling.

Voluntate beneplaciti. volun. ſigni.

Rom. 15. 8.

ἀντιπίπτετε.

Lib. 1. diſt. 46.

Obiect. III. Reuel. 3. 20. I ſtand at the dore and knocke, if any ſhall open it vnto me, I vvil come in vnto him. Therefore all, at whoſe doore Chriſt knocketh, haue ſufficient grace wherby they are able to open if they will. Hee is vnwiſe that knocketh at the dore, if he know aſſuredly that there is no body within that is able to open it. Anſvver: This place fauoureth not vniuerſall grace, for theſe at whoſe doore Chriſt knocketh, are thoſe which beleeue and are conuerted: and hee knocketh at their hearts, partly by his word, partly by afflictions, that hee might ſtirre vp their languiſhing faith, and increaſe and confirme his fellowſhip with them. You may reade the like in Cant. 5. 1, 2. Open vnto me my ſiſter, my loue, my doue.

Tenthly, this platforme diſagreeth with it ſelfe. For it ſaith that God doth conferre vnto all men all the helpes of nature and grace, and that he is not wanting to any ſo, but that he may obtaine ſaluation. But I ſay, and that out of this platforme, that God is wanting to ſome offendours; becauſe hee giueth them onely a power to perſeuere in faith if they will: or (if you had rather) a power to will to perſeuere, and makes them not to perſeuere actually and indeede. And vnleſſe this grace be giuen, it is not poſſible that any ſhould obtaine ſaluation by perſeuering. For it is a moſt ſure rule: A man doth not that good thing, which by grace he is able for to do, vnleſſe God make him to do it, as he hath made him able to doe it if he will. Therefore hee, to whome the very act of perſeuerance is not giuen, being ſmitten with the violence of ſome grieuous temptation, without delay wil fall away from faith, and ſhall be damned.

Error 10. Poſſe velle perſeuerare

Error 11.

Aug. cont. Iul. Pelag. lib. 3. cap. 3.

Lib. de gra. & lib. arb. 1. cap. 16.

Cont. Iul. lib. 3. cap 3.

[a] Concil. Valent. Ann. 855. cap. 4.

Laſtly, this hypotheſis or platforme is but the varniſhing and freſh trimming ouer of certaine opinions, which the Church in former ages did condemne. The Pelagians taught that al men were redeemd by Chriſt, but not made free: becauſe God diſtributed his gifts according to the capablenes of them which came to receiue them. The ſame did Fauſtus the Pelagian alſo affirme: How hath God (ſaith he) redeemed all the world? do we not ſee men to liue ſtill in their ſinnes? How ſhall wee thinke that they are ranſomed, whome wee doe ſee ſtill to continue captiues? Let vs gather that which is here ment by vſing a ſimilitude; as for example: If any embaſſadour or prieſt purpoſing to make interceſſion for a citie taken by warre, ſhall beſtow a very great ranſome, and ſet free from his ſeruitude who is the chiefe Commaunder, all the multitude which is in captiuity, inſomuch that they are altogether deliuered from all conſtraint or neceſſitie of bondage: and then if happely either their vſuall delight, or ſome ſoothing ſlaue, ſhall ſo inſtantly vrge ſome of the captiues, as that euery one turning ſeruant and ſlaue to his own will, ſhal refuſe that freely beſtowed benefit: ſhall we ſay that the contempt of the vnthankefull captiue hath leſſened the eſtimation of the ranſome? or that hee which refuſeth liberty, doth any way diminiſh the good wil of him that ranſometh? ſurely no. For euen as he which returnes may be well accepted with him that doth ranſome him, ſo is he guilty of contempt who did not returne. Thus we ſee that the Pelagians did forge or frame a redemptiō through Chriſt, without deliuerance. And what elſe do they who publiſh in their pamphlets, that all and euery one on Gods part are redeemed, but not ſaued, becauſe they will not beleeue? And now let vs heare the confutation of this opinion. Auguſtine ſaith: You ſay they are redeemed, but they are not deliuered, they are waſhed, but they are not cleanſed---: theſe bee your monſtrous opinions---: theſe are the paradoxes of the Pelagian heretickes, &c. but I pray thee tell mee how can this redemption bee vnderſtood, if he doe not redeeme from euill, which redeemed Iſraell from all their ſinnes? for whereſoeuer wee make mention of redemption, there alſo is vnderſtood a ranſome: and what is that but the precious blood of the immaculate lambe Chriſt Ieſus? and concerning this ranſome, why ſhould wee aske any other, wherefore it was giuen? let him that paid the price, make the anſwer. This is, ſaith he, my blood which is ſhed for many, for the remiſſion of ſinnes. Proceede, I pray proceed, and as you ſay in the Sacraments of our Sauiour, men are baptized, but they are not ſaued: they are redeemed, but they are not deliuered:---ſo ſay you alſo; Chriſt his blood is ſhed for them for the remiſſion of ſinnes, but they are cleanſed by the remiſſion of no ſinne. They are wonderfull, ſtrange, and vntrue things which you affirme. [a] Concerning the redēption of Chriſts blood, by reaſon of the exceeding errours which haue growne in reſpect thereof, inſomuch that ſome, euen as their owne writings doe witneſſe, doe holde that it was ſhed euen for thoſe vngodly ones, who from the beginning of the world, vntill the paſſion of our Lord, were dead in their vngodlineſſe, and puniſhed with eternall damnation, contrary to that ſaying of the Prophet: O death, I will be thy death, and thy ſting O Hell: we doe decree that it ought ſimply and faithfully to be held and taught, according to the Euangelicall and Apoſtolicall truth, that we iudge that this ranſome was giuen for them, of whome the Lord himſelfe ſaith: Euen as Moſes lifted vp the Serpent in the wilderneſſe; ſo muſt the Sonne of man be lifted vp, that euery one which beleeues in him may not periſh, but haue eternall life. So God loued the world, that he gaue his only begotten Sonne, that euery one that beleeued in him might not periſh, but haue euerlaſting life. And the Apoſtle ſaith, Chriſt was once offered for the taking away of the ſinnes of many.

Epiſt. ad Auguſt.

Loc. Com. claſſ. 3. ca. 1

Proſper aſcribes this platforme of vniuerſall grace vnto the Pelagians. This is (ſaith hee) their very opinion and profeſſion: That Adam ſinning, euery man ſinned, and that no man is ſaued by his owne workes, but by the grace of God in regeneration. And yet that the reconcilement which is in the Sacrament of Chriſts blood, is without exception offered vnto all men, ſo that whoſoeuer will come vnto faith and baptiſme, may be ſaued, and that God did foreknow before the creation of the world, who ſhould beleeue, or who ſhould remaine in that faith, which muſt afterward bee propped and helped by his grace, and that he predeſtinated them vnto his kingdom, who being freely called, he foreſaw that they would be worthie of election, and that they would depart out of this life, making a good end. And that therefore euery man is prouoked to beleeue and doe good by godly inſtitutions, that no man may deſpaire of the attainement of eternall life, ſeeing that there is a reward prepared for a voluntarie deuotion. The difference I confeſſe conſiſts in this, that the Pelagians do either wholly aſcribe vnto nature the ability to do well, or els partly to nature, & partly to grace; but this platforme aſcribes all things wholly vnto grace, which indeed is very right: but whileſt they goe about to ordaine vniuerſall grace, they do not free themſelues, but are rather more entāgled. For moſt true is that ſaying of Peter Martyr: Whilſt theſe men make grace ſo common to all, they turne grace into nature. And I would willingly be certified, whether they who haue receiued this grace, be regenerate or no: if they bee regenerate, then all men are regenerate: if they be not regenerate, then haue al men power to beleeue, & to attain ſaluatiō if they will, yea euen whileſt they remaine vnregenerate. But this power, if it bee in man before his conuerſion, will not ſuffer much frō nature. And if ſo be that grace extēd as far as nature, we muſt not pray more for grace then for nature: neither need wee any more pray for the conuerſion of vnbeleeuers, becauſe it is in their owne power, by reaſon of generall grace, to be conuerted

Lib.car.de ingratis.

if they will. Proſper alſo aſcribeth this platforme to the Pelagians in theſe verſes:

Thus we determine of that grace that makes
Vs Gods owne people, and to him full deere:
But yee affirme that no man it forſakes,
But that the world from ſinne it freeth cleere,
And paſſing none, doth proffer meere ſaluation,
To all without exception; yet they come
Guided by their owne liſt to this vocation,
And motions of the minde, directing ſome
To the embracing of that offered light,
Which vnto all that will, doth cleere the ſight.

But afterwards he condemneth it in this ſort:

Lets ſee how you can prooue that Chriſt his grace
Proffers Gods kingdome and true bleſſednes
To all men borne, letting none ouerpaſſe,
To whome it granteth not this happineſſe,
When euen at this time through the whole worlds frame,
And compaſſe of the earth, wherein we liue,
Chriſts Goſpell is not knowne, nor yet his name;
I cannot ſay but that he could it giue
Euen at the firſt, to all that breathe on earth,
Or euer in this world receiued breath.

And againe he ſaith:

If no man be whome he will not redeeme,
No doubt but that his will ſhall be effected,
But of a great part he makes no eſteeme,
Who in infernall darkeneſſe liue reiected.
Now if the diuers motions of the minde,
And a peculiar perfect libertie,
Doe make a different cauſe, to all mankinde,
Gods will muſt free from inability,
Either receiueth ſtrength from humane pleaſure,
Or wanteth ſtrength, when will attaines that trea-ſure.

And againe, he anſwereth the Pelagians, who ſay that by willing it we are able to attaine Gods grace, or elſe to reſiſt it by nilling it, after this manner:

How fals it out that this almighty grace
Which ſaueth all, reiects the worke it wrought,
When neither cauſe, condition, time, nor place,
Can for a hinderance thereunto be brought?

And againe:

What would you ſay when you doe plainely ſee,
How Chriſt his grace in twins a difference makes,
And thoſe who at one time conceiued be,
And whome the world into her boſome takes,
It doth diſtinguiſh, granting one heauens bliſſe,
The other hell, where greefe and horror is?
To ſay the will directs, you ſpeake amiſſe.

And againe:

No man can holde them iuſtly culpable,
Or guilty of this ſinne to whome Gods might Did neuer ſhew it ſelfe ſo fauourable
As to appeare, no not in glimmering light.

Lib.1. de l. arb.c.19.

Fauſtus the Semipelagian accuſed the Catholikes, in that they ſaid that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt did not take vpon him mans fleſh for all men, nor died generally for all. And on the other ſide the Catholikes accuſe the Pelagians, in that they ſay, that God repelleth none from A *eternall life, but is willing, indifferently that al men ſhould be ſaued, and come vnto the knowledge of the truth. And againe: that they ſay that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt died for all mankinde, and that no man is vtterly exempted from the redemption of his blood, although he leade all this his life eſtranged from him: becauſe that the ſacrament of Gods grace appertaineth vnto all men: wherby many are not therefore regenerated; becauſe they are foreknowne, that they haue not a wil to be regenerated; and that therefore on Gods part, eternall life is prepared for all men: but in reſpect of the freedome of the will, they ſay that they only attaine euerlaſting life, who do of their owne accord beleeue. And againe they ſay, that they wil not admit of that expoſition of that ſaying which is alleadged out of B Auguſtine: which is, that vnleſſe hee will haue all men to bee ſaued. And againe: not onely thoſe which appertain vnto the number of the ſaints: but all men altogether, without exception of any.

* Proſper. epi. ad Auguſt.

1.Tim.2.

Hilar. epiſt ad Auguſt.

I wiſh alſo that thing were marked: namely, that the Catholikes are accuſed by the Pelagians, that vnder the name of predeſtination, they did eſtabliſh a certaine fatall neceſſity: and that they made a kinde of violent preordination. Which accuſation hath alſo beene laid againſt vs. And the like crime ſheweth the like cauſe.

Laſtly, this platforme doth paſſing well agree with that doctrine concerning predeſtination, which is generally maintained in the Schooles, & Synagogues of the Papiſts: yea C verily to ſpeake the truth, it ſeemes to be borrowed euen from thence. For if we well conſider of the matter, what elſe hath Pighius taught? What elſe hath Catharinus maintained? and what els at this day do the groſſe fat Monkes maintaine? who imparke Gods actions in the caſe of predeſtination, within theſe pales. Firſt, ſay they, God foreſaw the natures and ſins of all men. Then prepared he Chriſt the Redeemer; Afterward, he willed for the merit of Chriſt foreſeene, to beſtow ſufficient helps of grace vpon all men, whereby they might bee ſaued through Chriſt: and in this willed for his part, by his antecedent wil, that all ſhould be ſaued. Laſtly, he did mercifully predeſtinate thoſe, whome hee did ſee would D end their liues in Gods fauour: and hee did iuſtly reiect otherſome, either for original or actuall ſinnes, in which he foreſaw they would end their liues.

A Corolarie, or addition.

A moſt certaine theoreme, or vndoubted truth.

GOD HATH NOT REVEALED Chriſt vnto all and euery man.

The proofes.

This is euident by Scriptures and experience. Iſa.52.14. That which hath not beene tolde them, ſhall they ſee, and that which they haue not heard, they ſhall vnderſtand. Iſa. 55. 5. Beholde thou ſhalt call a nation, which thou haſt not known: and nations that knew not thee ſhall run vnto thee. Iſa. 65. 1. I haue beene ſought of them that asked not, I was found of them that ſought me not. Oſea 1. 10. And in the place where it was ſaid vnto them, ye are not my people, it ſhall be ſaid, ye are the ſonnes of the liuing God. Oſe. 2. 23. I will haue mercy vpon her that was not pittied, and I will ſay to them which were not my people, thou art my people. Act. 14. 16 God in times paſt ſuffered all the Gentiles to walke in their owne waies. Act. 17. 30. And the time of this ignorance God regarded not, but now hee admoniſheth all men euery where to repent. Roman. 16. 25, 26. To him now that is of power to eſtabliſh you according to my Goſpell & preaching of Ieſus Chriſt, by the reuelation of the myſterie, which was kept ſecret ſince the world began, but now is opened. Coloſſ. 1. 26, 27. Which is the myſterie hidde ſince the world beganne, and from all ages, but now is made manifeſt to his Saints, to whome God would make knowne what is the riches of this glorious myſterie among the Gentiles. Epheſ. 1. 12. Ye were at that time without Chriſt, and had no hope, & were Atheiſts, or without God in the world. Epheſ. 3. 5. The myſterie of Chriſt in other ages was not opened vnto the ſonnes of men, as it is now reuealed vnto his holy Apoſtles. Pſal. 147. 19, 20. Hee ſheweth his word vnto Iacob, his ſtatutes and his iudgements vnto Iſrael: Hee hath not dealt ſo with euery nation, neither haue they knowne his iudgements.

ἄθεοι.

The moſt wiſe Philoſophers among the Gentiles haue indeede ſmattered many things of God: but in the meane time what ſay they of Chriſt? why ſhould they be ſo exceeding ſilent in this point, if Chriſt were reuealed vnto all? Socrates beeing ready to die, ſaid, I depart out of this life, and they before whome I pleade my cauſe, do liue. Whether may be better the immortall Gods doe know: but I think that no man knoweth. And we owe (ſaith he) O Crito, a Cocke to Æſculapius to performe rites for the potion. It is reported that Ariſtotle A beeing ready to die, cried out, O thou which art the cheefeſt thing of all things which are, haue mercy vpon me.

Lact. l. 7. c. 2.

Ens entium miſerere mei.

The Gentiles knew not God, that great benefactour, and therefore fained vnto them ſelues certaine ſauiours, Caſtor, and Pollux, and Hercules, called Ἀλεξίκακοι, that is, a helper in diſtreſſes, or repeller of euils, and Æſculapius the Phyſitian. Solinus ſaith, that there is not as yet any of the Gentiles found, who hath attained vnto the height of felicity, and may iuſtly bee accounted happie. Albinus ſpeaketh thus: When ſuch like queſtions are propounded, why one is iudged thus, and another after another manner, why this man is blinded, God giuing him ouer, and another enlightened through Gods aſſiſtance; let not vs preſume or take vpon vs to iudge of the iudgement of ſo great a Iudge, but with trembling let vs crie out with the Apoſtle, O the depth!

Collectar. 5. c. 7.

Conſectarie I.

The promiſe concerning the ſeede of the woman belongs not to all and to euery one: For a promiſe to whome it is not reuealed, is not actually a promiſe.

Conſectarie II.

Howſouer the redemption, that is by Chriſt, belongeth vnto all, yet it belongs not to all and to euery one. For a benefit to be perceiued or receiued by a ſupernaturall faith, if it be not reuealed, is no benefit.

Conſectarie III.

Vocation and vniuerſall ſauing grace belongs not to all and euery particular perſon; for God calleth vs by reuealing and offering Chriſt to vs.

Conſectarie IV.

The foreknowledge of faith in Chriſt, and of (a) priuatiue infidelitie, is not the ſquare & rule according to which God hath ordained and diſpoſed his predeſtination: becauſe there bee very many that neuer ſo much as heard of Chriſt; in whome therefore there is neither faith in Chriſt, nor priuatiue infidelity, or contempt of the Goſpell.

a Contempt of the Goſpell.

Trin-vni Deo gloria.

24 DE59

THE ARTE OF PROPHE-cying.

OR,

A TREATISE CONCERNING THE SACRED AND ONELY TRVE MANNER AND METHODE OF PREACHING.

Firſt written in Latine by Mr. William Perkins: and now faithfully tranſlated into Engliſh (for that it containeth many worthie things fit for the knowledge of men of all degrees)
By Thomas Tuke.

Nehem. 8. 4, 5, 6.

And Ezra the Scribe ſtood vpon a pulpit of wood, which he had made for the preaching. And Ezra opened 1 the booke before all the people: for he was aboue all the people: and when he opened it, all the people ſtood vp. Moreouer, Ezra praiſed the Lord the great God, and all the people anſwered, Amen, Amen. 2 verſ. 7. In like manner Ieſhua, and Bani, &c. verſ. 8. And they read in the booke of the law of God 3 diſtinctly, and gaue the ſenſe, and cauſed them to vnderſtand the reading. 4

HINC LVCEM ET POCVLA SACRA
ALMA MATER CANTABRIGIA

Printed at London by Iohn Legatt, Printer
to the Vniuerſitie of Cambridge.
1613.

TO THE RIGHT WORSHIPFULL SIR WILLIAM ARMIN KNIGHT.

SIR, many and excellent benefits hath the Lord in mercy vouchſafed to vs theſe eight and forty by-paſt yeares together: of which this is not the leaſt, if not the greateſt, that he hath diſpelled the duskie cloudes of Popiſh darkeneſſe as palpable as that of AEgypt; and hath cauſed the Sun-light of the Goſpell to ſhine cleerely in all our coaſts. He ſheweth his word vnto vs, as he did vnto Iacob, his ſtatutes and his iudgements, as he did ſometimes to Iſrael. He hath giuen vs his Prophets and Embaſſadours, which doe ſerue like that cloude and pillar of fire to direct vs in our pilgrimage through the wilderneſſe of this wicked world into the celeſtiall Canaan. He hath thruſt forth many faithfull and induſtrious labourers into his Vineyard to prune and to dreſſe the vines of our ſoules, that we may bring forth the grapes of pietie and the cluſters of iuſtice; (vnleſſe we will needes be like to the Cypreſſe, which, as Plinie ſaith, can endure no husbanding, but maketh that her maladie, which is a medicine to other trees.) Amongſt whome the Author of this learned Tractate did ſhew himſelfe with the formoſt; carrying alwaies with him a Light of learning, and a Lampe of godly liuing. And, qualis vita, finis ita; As he was a Lampe whiles he liued, ſo like a Lampe, aliis inſeruiens ſeipſum conſumpſit. His whole life was labour, ſcribenda dicens, & legenda ſcribens. One whereof was this preſent diſcourſe and platforme concerning the true vnderſtanding and vſing of the Scriptures, written in his yonger yeares: which I am bold to preſent and dedicate to your Worſhip in this plight you ſee; partly becauſe it is a Theſaurus and ſtore-houſe of excellent precepts, (as Domitius Piſo ſaith that bookes ſhould be ſuch) hauing in it κέρας ἀμαλθείας, ſufficient furniture to further perfection in that ſacred ſcience: and partly to demonſtrate my gratitude, and deuoted affection to you, who haue alwaies beene a conſtant patron (etiam minitante Fortuna) to my neereſt and deareſt friends.

Exod. 10. 21

Pſal. 147. 19.

Exod. 13. 22.

Thus I take my humble leaue, deſiring your kind acceptance, and ſo commend your Worſhip with your whole progenie to the protection of the Lord. London, Ian. 1. 1606.

Your Worſhips in all dutie,

THOMAS TUKE.

To

TO THE FAITHFVLL MINISTERS OF THE GOSPELL: AND TO ALL THAT ARE desirous of, and doe labour for the knowledge of Holy learning.

THat common place of diuinitie, which concerneth the framing of Sermons, is both weightie and difficult, if there be any other throughout all that sacred ſcience. For the matter, which it is to explicate and treate on, is Prophecie; an excellent gift indeed whether we conſider it in reſpect of dignitie or of vſe. The dignitie thereof appeareth, in that like a Ladie it is highly mounted and carried aloft in a chariot: whereas all other gifts, both of tongues and arts, attend on this like handmaides aloofe off. Anſwerable to this dignitie there is alſo a two-fold vſe: one, in that it ſerueth to collect the Church, and to accompliſh the number of the Elect: the other, for that it driueth away the Woolues from the foldes of the Lord, for this is indeede that Flexanima, that allurer of the Soule, whereby mens froward mindes are mitigated and mooued from an vngodly and barbarous life vnto Christian faith and repentance. This alſo is that Engine, which as it hath ſhoken the foundation of auncient hereſies, ſo it hath in theſe few by-paſt yeares, cut a ſunder the ſinews of that great Antichriſt. Wherefore if it bee demanded which is the moſt excellent gift of all, doubtleſſe the praiſe muſt be giuen to Prophecying. Now by how much the more excellent euery thing is, by ſo much the more diligently it ought to be adorned with varietie and plentie of precepts. Therefore, when I ſaw this common place ſo handled of many, as that it would remaine naked and poore, if all other arts ſhould call for thoſe things, which are their owne: I peruſed the writings of Diuines, and hauing gathered ſome rules out of them, I haue couched them in that methode, which I haue deemed moſt commodious: that they might be better for vſe, and fitter for the memorie. I doe alſo publiſh them, that they might be approoued, if they bring with them that which is good: if any euil, that they may receiue their deſerued puniſhment. And whoſoeuer thou art that pleaſeſt to reade them, where thou art perſwaded of this order of Preaching, which here I handle, walke on with me: where thou ſtandeſt at a ſtay, inquire with me, * where thou perceiueſt thine owne errors, returne to me: where thou ſeeſt mine, call me backe to thee. For that, which now liketh me, ſhall diſlike me, if it like not godly and moderate minded men. But if any man ſhall carpe at this my trauaile, though very ſmall, let him know, that my onely meaning is to benefit the Church of God: and that the conſcience of my fact is a ſufficient muniment againſt all calumnies, I doe now betake you to God, and this (tractate of the) art of Prophecying, both to you and to God. Ann. 1592. Decemb. 12.

*or when

WILLIAM PERKINS.

THE

THE ARTE OF PROPHECYING.

CHAP. I.

THe Arte or facultie of Prophecying is a ſacred doctrine of exerciſing Prophecie rightly.

Prophecie (or Prophecying) is a publike and ſolemne ſpeech of the Prophet, pertaining to the worſhip of God, & to the ſaluatiō of our neighbor. 1. Cor. 14. 3. But he that prophecieth, ſpeaketh vnto men to edification, to exhortation, & to conſolation. Verſ. 24. But if all prophecie, & there come in one that beleeueth not, or one vnlearned, he is rebuked of all men, and is * iudged of all men, Rom. 1. 9. God is my witneſſe, whom I ſerue (or worſhip, λατρεύω*) in my ſpirit, in the Goſpell of his Sonne.*

* ἀνακρίνεται.

CHAP. II.

Of the Preaching of the Word.

THere are two parts of Prophecie: Preaching of the Word, and Conceiuing of Prayers.

For in ſpeaking there are onely two duties of the Prophet, that is, of the Miniſter of the word; to wit, Preaching of the word, and Praying vnto God in the name of the people. Rom. 12. 6. Hauing prophecie, let vs prophecie according to the * proportion of faith. Gen. 20. 7. Deliuer the man his wife againe, for he is a Prophet: and when he ſhal pray for thee, thou ſhalt liue. For this cauſe the word (Prophecie) is giuen alſo to prayers. 1. Chron. 25. 1. The ſonnes of Aſaph, and Heman and Iedutbun, who were ſingers, prophecyed with Harpes, with Vials, and with Cymbals. 1. King. 18. 26. The Prophets of Baal called vpon the name of Baal from morning to noone. 29. And when mid-day was paſſed, and they had prophecied vntill the offering of the euening ſacrifice.

* ἀναλογίαν.

And euery Prophet is partly the voyce of God, to wit, in preaching: and partly the voyce of the people, in the act of praying. Ier. 15. 19. If thou take away the precious from the vile, thou ſhalt be as it were My mouth. Neh. 8. 6. And Hezra bleſſed the Lord the great God, and all the people anſwered, Amen.

Preaching of the word is Prophecying in the name and roome of Chriſt, wherby men are called to the ſtate of Grace, and conſerued in it, 2. Cor. 5. 19. And hath committed to vs the word of reconciliation, 20. Therefore we are Embaſſadours for Chriſt: as though God did beſeech you by vs, we pray you in the name of Chriſt, that ye be reconciled to God. 2. Theſſ. 2. 13. 14. God hath from the beginning elected you to ſaluation, through ſanctification of the Spirit, and faith embracing the truth: whereunto he called you by our Goſpell. Rom. 1. 16. The Goſpell is the power of God to ſaluation to euery one that beleeueth, Prou. 29. 18. When there is no viſion the people are naked. Rom. 10. 14.

CHAP. III.

Of the Word of God.

THe perfect and equal * obiect of Preaching is the word of God. Luk. 16. 29. They haue Moſes & the Prophets, let them heare them. Math. 23. 2. The Scribes and Phariſes ſit in Moſes chaire, that is, they teach the doctrine of Moſes, which they doe profeſſe. 3. All therefore whatſoeuer they bid you obſerue, that obſerue and doe.

The Word of God is the wiſedome of God concerning the truth, which is according vnto godlines deſcending from aboue. Iam. 3. 17. But the wiſedome, which is from * aboue is firſt pure, &c. Tit. 1. 1. Paul a Seruant of God——according to the acknowledging of the truth, which is according vnto godlineſſe.

* Or, the word of God is the whole and onely matter, about which preaching is exerciſed; it is the field in which the Preacher muſt containe himſelfe.

* ἄνωθεν.

Admirable is the excellencie of the Word, which is euident partly by the nature thereof, partly by the operation.

The excellency of the nature is either the perfection thereof, or the eternitie.

The perfection is either the ſufficiencie, or the purity. The ſufficiencie is that, whereby the word of God is ſo compleate, that nothing may bee either put to it, or taken from it, which appertaineth to the proper end thereof. Pſal. 19. 7. The Law of the Lord is perfect, conuerting the ſoule. Deut. 12. 32. Whatſoeuer I command you, take heede yee doe it: thou ſhalt put nothing thereto, nor take ought therefrom. Reuel. 22. 18, 19.

The puritie thereof is, whereby it remaineth entire in it ſelfe, voide of deceit and errour, Pſal. 12. 6. The words of the Lord are pure words, as ſiluer tried in a furnace of earth, fined ſeuen times.

The eternitie of the word is that, whereby it abideth inuiolable, and cannot paſſe vntill all that, which it commandeth, bee fully accompliſhed. Math. 5. 18.

The excellencie of operation is that, wherby it is endowed with vertue; firſt to diſcerne the ſpirit of man, Heb. 4. 12. For the word of God is liuely, and mightie in operation, and ſharper then any two edged ſword, and entreth through euen to the diuiding aſunder of the ſoule and ſpirit, and of the ioynts and the marrow, and diſcerneth the thoughts and intents of the heart. Secondly, to binde the conſcience. Iam. 4. 12. There is one Law-giuer, who is able to ſaue and deſtroy. Eſa. 33. 22. The Lord is our Iudge, the Lord is our Law-giuer, the Lord is our King, he will ſaue vs. To binde the conſcience is to conſtraine it either to accuſe vs or to excuſe vs of ſinne before God.

The word is in the holy Scripture.

The Scripture is the word of God written in a language fit for the Church by men immediately called to be the Clerkes, or Secretaries of the holy Ghoſt. 2. Pet. 1. 21. For prophecie came not in old time by the will of man, but the holy men of God ſpake as they were carried and mooued by the holy Ghoſt.

*φερόμενοι.

It is called Canonicall, because it is as it were a Canon, that is to ſay, a Rule, or Line of the Maſter workman, by the helpe whereof the truth is both firſt to be found out, and alſo afterwardes to be examined. Gal. 6. 16. And as many as walke according to this * Canon or Rule. Therefore the ſupreame and abſolute determination & iudgement of the controuerſies of the Church ought to bee giuen vnto it.

*κανόνι.

The Summe of the Scripture is conteined in ſuch a ſyllogiſme (or forme of reaſoning, as this is which followeth. (a) The true Meſſias ſhall be both God and man of the ſeede of Dauid; he ſhall be borne of a Virgin; he ſhall bring the Goſpell forth of his Fathers boſome; he ſhall ſatisfie the Law; he ſhall offer vp himſelfe a ſacrifice for the ſinnes of the faithfull; he ſhall conquer death by dying and riſing againe; he ſhall aſcend into heauen; and in his due time hee ſhall returne vnto iudgement. But (b) Ieſus of Nazareth the Sonne of Mary is ſuch a one: He (c) therefore is the true Meſſias.

a The Maior or Propoſition.

b The Minor, or Aſſumption.

c The concluſion.

In this ſyllogiſme the Maior is the ſcope or principall driſt in all the writings of the Prophets: and the Minor in the writings of the Euangeliſts and Apoſtles.

The Scripture is either the New Teſtament, or the Old.

The old Teſtament is the firſt part of the Scripture, written by the Prophets in the Hebrew tongue, or at leaſt in the Chaldie, vnfolding chiefly that old couenant of workes. Luk. 16. 29. and 24. 27. And he began at Moſes, and at all the Prophets, and interpreted vnto them in all the Scriptures the things which were written of him.

It is diſtinguiſhed by bookes, which are either Hiſtoricall, or Dogmaticall, or Propheticall.

The Hiſtoricall bookes are ſtories of things done, for the illuſtration and A confirmation of that doctrine which is propounded in other bookes. 1. Cor. 10. 11. Now all theſe things came vpon them for * enſamples: and were written to admoniſh vs. Rom. 15. 4. For whatſoeuer things were written aforetime, are written for our learning.

*τύποι.

Theſe bookes are in number fifteene.

1 Geneſis, which is an hiſtorie of the creation, fall, promiſe, and of the ſtate of the Church conſerued (and ſhut vp) in priuate families.

2 Exodus, which is an hiſtorie of the deliuerance of the Iſraelites from the Egyptians, of their going out of Egypt, of the promulgation of the Law, & of the Tabernacle.

3 Leuiticus, which containeth a ſtorie of B the Ceremoniall worſhip.

4 Numbers, which is an hiſtorie of their martiall marching into the land of Canaan.

5 Deuteronomie, which is a commentarie repeating and explicating the Lawes out of the afore-ſaid bookes.

6 The booke of Ioſhua, which declareth their entrance into, and poſſeſſion of the land of Canaan vnder Ioſhua.

7 The booke of the Iudges, which comprehendeth an hiſtorie of the corrupt and miſerable condition of the Church and Common-wealth of Iſrael from Ioſhua to Eli.

8 The booke of Ruth, which is an hiſtorie concerning the marriages and poſteritie C of Ruth.

9 The firſt and ſecond booke of Samuel, which is a ſtory of things done vnder Eli, and Samuel Prieſts, and vnder Saul and David Kings.

10 The firſt and ſecond booke of Kings, which maketh narration of things atchieued in the daies of the Kings of Iſraell and Iudah.

11 The firſt and ſecond booke of Chronicles, which is a methodicall hiſtorie of the beginning, increaſe, and ruine of the people of Iſrael, ſeruing to explaine and ſhew the Line or Linage of Chriſt.

12 The booke of Ezra, which containeth an hiſtorie of their returne from captiuitie in D Babylon, and of the beginning of the Reſtoring of the citie.

13 The booke of Nehemiah, which ſpeaketh of the reſtoring of the citie which was to be finiſhed.

14 The booke of Heſter, which is an hiſtorie of the preſeruation of the Church of the Iewes in Perſia by Heſter.

15 The booke of Iob, which is an hiſtorie intreating of the cauſes of his tentations, as alſo of his manifold conflicts, and laſtly of his happie iſſue.

The Dogmaticall bookes are thoſe, which teach and preſcribe the Doctrine of Diuinitie.

Theſe are foure in number.

1 The booke of Pſalmes, which containeth ſacred ſongs to bee fitted for euery condition both of the Church and the particular members thereof, and alſo to be ſung with grace in the heart, Col. 3. 16.

2 The booke of Prouerbes, which is a treatiſe of Chriſtian manners, teaching pietie towardes God, and iuſtice towardes our Neighbour.

3 The (a) booke of the Preacher, which diſcloſeth the vanitie of all humane things, ſo farre forth as they are vſed without the feare of God.

[a] Eccleſiaſtes.

4 The (b) Song of Songs, which ſpeaketh of the mutuall communion of Chriſt with the Church, vnder an allegorie of a (c) Bridegroome and his Bride.

[b] The booke of Canticles.

[c] Or husband and ſpouſe.

The Propheticall bookes are Predictions, either of the iudgements of God for the ſinnes of the people, or of the deliuerance of the Church, which is to bee perfitted at the comming of Chriſt.

But with theſe predictions (d) they doe mingle the doctrine of repentance, and doe almoſt alwaies vſe conſolation in Chriſt to them that doe repent.

[d] That is, the Prophets.

It is their cuſtome alſo for the helping of their hearers memorie and vnderſtanding, to propound their ſermons briefly, which they made at large. Eſa. 8. 1. Moreouer the Lord ſaid vnto me, take thee a great rolle, and write in it with a mans pen. Hab. 2. 2. Write the viſion, and make it plaine vpon tables, that he may runne that readeth it.

Prophecies are either greater or leſſer.

Greater are ſuch, as doe more plentifully deliuer all thoſe things that are foretold; as the prophecie of Eſay, Ieremie, Ezekiel, Daniel.

Hitherto belong the Lamentations of Ieremie, touching the miſery of the people of the Iewes about the time of the death of Ioſiah.

Leſſer prophecies are thoſe, which intreat more ſparingly or briefly of all thoſe things that are foretold, or at leaſt of ſome of them; as the prophecie of Hoſea, Ioel, Amos, Obediah, Ionas, Michah, Nahum, Habakak, Zephanie, Hagge, Zacharie, Malachie.

Thus much for the old Teſtament.

The New Teſtament is the ſecond part of the Scripture written in the Greeke tongue by the Apoſtles, or at leaſt approoued of them, propounding plainely the doctrine of the new couenant. Eph. 2. 20. And are built vpon the foundation of the Prophets and Apoſtles.

Peter approoued the Goſpell of Marke, at whoſe motion and appointment it was written by Marke, as it pleaſeth Nicephorus to auerre, Lib. 2. cap. 45. And Iohn, that wrote the Goſpel, approoued the Goſpel of Luke. It is of ſmall moment, which is reported by Euſebius, to wit, that it is apparent by two places (2. Tim. 2. 8. and Rom. 2. 16.) that Paul was the author of that Goſpell, which is called Lukes. For Paul doth not here ſpeake of any one booke, but of his whole miniſterie: for he addeth, In which I ſuffer trouble as an euill doer euen vnto bondes*, 2. Tim. 2. 9.

* 1, 2.

The new Teſtament containeth partly Hiſtories, and partly Epiſtles. The Hiſtories are:

1 The foure Goſpels of Matthew, Marke, Luke, and Iohn: which are an hiſtorie of the life, deedes, and doctrine of Chriſt exhibited vnto the world, continuing from his conception euen vntill his aſcenſion into heauen.

And there are foure writers: two that were hearers, and two that were eye-witneſſes, that they might giue greater aſſurance of the truth of the hiſtorie.

The difference betwixt the Euangeliſts is on this wiſe: Matthew layeth open the doctrines which Chriſt deliuered. Marke ſets down the hiſtory briefly: yet did he not make an abridgement of the Goſpell which Matthew wrote, as Hierome ſuppoſed. For hee beginnes his diſcourſe in a diuers manner, and proceedes in another order, partly intreating of things more largely, and partly interlacing of new matters. Luke aimeth at or frameth a perfect hiſtorie, and deſcribed in a certaine order. Iohn is almoſt wholly taken vp in laying open the Godhead & benefite of Chriſt, which is deriued from his Godhead vnto vs.

Hierome diſtinguiſheth the Euangeliſts by their beginnings or entrance. He ſaith Matthew is like a man, becauſe he begins with the Man-hood of Chriſt. He likens Marke to a Lyon, becauſe he beginnes with the preaching of Iohn, which was like the roaring of a Lyon. He compares Luke to an Oxe, becauſe he beginneth with Zacharie the Prieſt offering his ſacrifice. He compareth Iohn to an Eagle, becauſe he doth (as it were) ſoare vp aloft and begin with the Godhead of Chriſt.

2 The Actes of the Apoſtles, which is an orderly hiſtory, ſpecially relating the deedes of Peter and Paul: that there might be an enſample of gouerning the Church extant. 2. Tim. 3. 10, 11.

3 The Reuelation which is a propheticall hiſtory concerning the condition of the Church from the age in which Iohn the Apoſtle liued vnto the end of the world.

The Epiſtles follow. 1. thirteene Epiſtles of Paul.

1 To the Romanes, of iuſtification, ſanctification, and the duties of Chriſtian life.

2 The firſt to the Corinthes, concerning the reforming of the abuſes of the Church of Corinth.

3 The ſecond to the Corinthes, containing chiefly the defence of himſelfe and of his Apoſtleſhip againſt his aduerſaries.

4 To the Galatians about iuſtification by faith without the workes of the Law.

5 To the Coloſſians,
6 To the Philippians
7 To the Epheſians
8 The 1. to the Theſ.
9 The 2. to the Theſ.
} Which confirme the Churches in doctrine, and in the duties of Chriſtian life.

10 The 1. to Timothie. }
11 The 2. to Timothie. } VVhich preſcribe the forme of ordering the Church aright.

12 The Epiſtle to Titus, of ordering the Church of the Cretians.

13 To Philemon, of receiuing Oneſimus.

The Epiſtle to the Hebrewes, concerning the perſon and offices of Chriſt, and of faith bringing forth fruit in good workes.

The Epiſtle of Iames, concerning workes to be ioyned with faith.

The firſt and ſecond Epiſtle of Peter, touching ſanctification and the workes of new obedience.

The firſt Epiſtle of Iohn, concerning the ſignes of fellowſhip with God.

The ſecond Epiſtle of Iohn to the elect Ladie, about perſeuerance in the truth.

The third Epiſtle of Iohn to Gayus, concerning hoſpitality and conſtancie in that which is good.

The Epiſtle of Iude, of conſtancie in the faith againſt falſe Prophets.

And thus the Canonicall Scripture is diſtinguiſhed by her bookes.

Now there are very ſtrong proofes, which ſhew that ſhee alone is the word of God, and no other beſides.

Of theſe proofes one doth make a man certainely to [a] know the ſame, the other doth but declare or teſtifie it.

[a] Probatio. [illegible]. [illegible].

Of the former kinde there is onely one, namely, the inward teſtimony of the holy Ghoſt ſpeaking in the Scriptures, and not onely telling a man within in his heart, but alſo effectually perſwading him, that theſe bookes of the Scripture are the word of God. Iſa. 59.21. My Spirit, that is vpon thee, and my words which I haue put in thy mouth, ſhall not depart out of thy mouth,——from henceforth euen for euer.

The manner of perſwading is on this wiſe: The Elect hauing the Spirit of God, doe firſt diſcerne the voice of Chriſt ſpeaking in the Scriptures. Moreouer, that voice which they doe diſcerne, they doe approoue: and that which they doe approoue, they doe beleeue. Laſtly, beleeuing, they are (as it were) ſealed with the ſeale of the Spirit. Eph. 1.13. Wherein alſo after that ye beleued, yee were ſealed with the holy Spiri t of promiſe.

The Church alſo may beare witneſſe of the Canon, perſwade ſhee cannot. For by this meanes the voice of the Church ſhould be of greater force then the voice of God: and the whole ſtate of mans ſaluation ſhould depend vpon men; then which what can be ſaid to be more miſerable?

Obiect. The Scripture is the word of God by it ſelfe, but it is not ſo to vs, but by the iudgement of the Church. Anſ. 1. The diſtinction is vaine. For, the firſt part thereof ſheweth the manner, whereby the Scripture is the word of God: the latter part ſhewes not the manner how, but the perſon to whome: 2. The Scripture it ſelfe doth alſo teſtifie of it ſelfe with that kinde of teſtimony, which is ſurer euen then all the oathes of men. For wee haue the voice of the holy Ghoſt ſpeaking in the Scripture: who doth alſo worke in our hearts a certaine (πληροφορίαν,) full perſwaſion of the Scriptures, when wee are exerciſed in hearing, reading and meditating of them. Neither do we beleeue a thing, becauſe the Church ſaith it is to bee beleeued: but therefore we do beleeue a thing, becauſe that which the Church ſpeaketh, the Scripture did firſt ſpeak. Yea the Church cannot ſtand, nor yet be imagined without faith: faith is not without the word, which word is the rule or obiect of faith, & not the iudgement, though it be of moſt holy men. 3. He which doubteth of the Scriptures, will doubt as well of the teſtimony of the Church.

Obiect. 2. The Church hath a iudgement to determine of matters. Act. 15. 28. It ſeemeth good to the holy Ghoſt, and to vs. Anſw. 1. The ſoueraigne or ſupreame iudgement concerning matters of faith, belongeth to the holy Ghoſt, ſpeaking in the Scriptures. The miniſtery of iudgement (or a miniſteriall iudgement) is onely giuen vnto the Church, becauſe ſhee muſt iudge according to the Scriptures: and becauſe ſhee doth not this alwaies, ſhee ſometimes faileth. 2. The Apoſtles were preſent at that Councell which was held at Ieruſalem, who were men that had authority which was * of it ſelfe to be beleeued, which authority the Eccleſiaſticall miniſtery now hath not.

* αὐτόπιστον.

The proofe of declaration or teſtification, is that, which doth not demonſtrate or perſwade, but onely teſtifie, and by certaine tokens approoue the true Canon. This proofe is manifolde.

Firſt, the perpetuall conſent of the Church: of the auncient Church of the Iewes. Rom. 3.2. For chiefly, becauſe vnto them were of credit committed the Oracles of God. And of the new and latter Church. 1. From Chriſt and the Apoſtles, who cited teſtimonies forth of thoſe bookes.

Secondly, from the Fathers.

Firſt, Origen, as Euſebius teſtifieth, lib. 6. 18. & 23.

2 Meliton, as the ſame Euſebius witneſſeth lib. 4.

3 Athanaſius.

4 Cyril, Serm. 4.

5 Cyprian, or rather Ruffine in his expoſition of the Creede.

6 Hilarie, in his preface vpon the firſt Pſalme.

7 Hierome, in Prologo Galeato, and in his preface vpon the bookes of Salomon.

8 Epiphanius, in his booke of weights and meaſures.

9 Damaſcene, in his fourth booke of faith, chap. 18.

10 Gregorie, Moral on Iob, lib. 9. chap. 27.

3 In Councels, the Nicene, and Laodiceane, Can. 59.

With theſe agree Hugo de Sancto Victore in his firſt booke of Sacraments, cap. 7. N. Lyra in his prologue vpon the bookes of Apocrypha. Hugo Cardinalis in prologo in Ioſuam.

Secondly, the conſent in part made by the Gẽtiles, & enemies affirming the ſame things, which are deliuered in holy Scriptures.

1 Of the creation ſpake Homer, and Plato in Timeo.

2 Of Chriſt, Ioſephus, lib. 20. Antiquit. cap. 6. & 8. and in his fift booke of the warre of the Iewes, chap. 8. and booke the 6. chap. 25. 27. 28 47.

3 Of the Redeemer of the world, who was to be exhibited in the laſt times, prophecied the Sybils, as Lactantius recordeth, lib. 4. cap. 6. and Cicero, lib. 2. de Diuinat. and Virgil, in the fourth Eclogue.

4 Of the miracles of Chriſt, Suetonius ſpeaketh in Nero: and Tacitus, lib. 5. & 20.

5 Of the Wiſemens ſtarre, Plin. lib. 2. & 25.

6 Of the ſlaughtering of the infants, Macrobius in Satur.

7 Of the death of Herod Agrippa, Ioſephus in his 19. booke of Antiquities, chap. 7.

8 Of the flood, Beroſus in thoſe fragments which are extant. Ioſephus Antiq. booke 1. chap. 3. And the Poets.

9 Of the tower of Babell, Eupolemus ſpeaketh, as Euſebius teſtifies, De preparat. Euangel.

10 Of the Doue which Noe ſent out, Plutarch ſpeaketh, lib. quod Bruta ſunt rationalia.

11 Of Iaphet, the ſonne of Noe, the Poets fable many things.

12 Of Abrahams ſacrifice, Alexander Polybiſt.

13 Of the miracles of Moſes, Plinie ſpeaketh: though he do wickedly call him a Magitian.

Thirdly, the Antiquitie of the word, for it containeth in it a narration of things done frõ the beginning of the world. But the moſt ancient humane Hiſtory whatſoeuer, was not written by any, before the daies of Ezra & Nehemiah, who were about the yere of the worlds creation, three thouſand aud fiue hundreth.

Fourthly, the moſt certaine accompliſhment of the prophecies: as are theſe, of the calling of the Gentiles: of Antichriſt: of the apoſtaſie of the Iewes, &c.

Fiftly, the matter thereof: which is of one true God, of the true worſhip of God, and that God is the Sauiour.

Sixtly, the conſent of all the parts of the Scripture.

Seauenthly, the miraculous preſeruation of the Scriptures in the perils of the Church, and in the time of generall reuolting.

Eightly, the operation thereof: for it conuerteth men, and though it be flatly contrary to the reaſon and affections of men, yet it winneth them vnto it ſelfe.

Ninthly, it is full of maieſty in the ſimplenes of the words. Laſtly, the holy pen-men ſet downe their owne corruptions: and Moſes commends himſelfe, ſaying, that hee was the meekeſt of all men; which argueth that they were led by the holy Ghoſt. And Chriſt, who is deſcribed in the Goſpell, affirmeth very plainly, that he is the Sonne of God, and that he is one with God the Father, and challengeth all Gods glory vnto himſelfe. Which if it had not bin right and true, he ſhould haue felt the wrath of God with Adam and with Herod, who would needs be like vnto God. But on the contrary, God hath reuenged his death both vpon Herod, and vpon the Iewes, and vpon Pilate, and vpon thoſe Emperours that perſecuted the Church.

And thus wee haue ſeene the * tokens of the Scripture. Whereby it appeareth, that the booke of Tobit, the prayer of Manaſſes, the booke of Iudith, the booke of Baruch, the Epiſtle of Ieremie, the additions to Daniel, the third and fourth bookes of Ezra, the additions to the book of Heſter, the two bookes of Macchabees, the booke of Wiſedome, and Eccleſiaſticus, are not to bee reckoned in the Canon. Reaſon 1. They are not written by the Prophets. 2. They are not written in Hebrew. 3. Chriſt and his Apoſtles alleadged in the new Teſtament, no teſtimonies out of thoſe bookes. 4. They containe ſome feigned things, and contrary to the Scriptures.

* τεκμήρια,

CHAP. IV.

Of the interpretation of the Scriptures.

Hitherto hath beene ſpoken of the obiect of preaching. The parts thereof are two. Preparation for the ſermon, and the Promulgation or vttering of it. Mat. 13. 52. Then ſaid hee vnto them, therefore euery Scribe, which is taught vnto the kingdome of heauen, is like vnto an houſholder, which bringeth forth out of his treaſure things both new and olde.

In preparation, priuate ſtudy is with diligence to be vſed. 1. Tim. 4. 13. Till I come giue attendance to reading, to exhortation, and to doctrine. 1. Pet. 1. 10. Of the which ſaluation the Prophets haue inquired and ſearched, which prophecied of the grace that ſhould come vnto you. Dan. 9. 2. In the firſt yeare of his reigne, I Daniel vnderſtood by bookes the number of the yeare.

Concerning the ſtudy of Diuinity, take this aduice. Firſt, diligently imprint both in thy minde and memory the ſubſtance of Diuinity deſcribed, with definitions, diuiſions, and explications of the properties. Secondly, proceede to the reading of the Scriptures in this order. Vſing a grammaticall, rhetoricall, and logicall [a] analyſis, and the helpe of the reſt of the artes: reade firſt the Epiſtle of Paul to the Romanes, after that, the Goſpel of Iohn,

[a] Opening of the text.

(as beeing indeede the keyes of the new Teſtament) and then the other bookes of the new Teſtament will be more eaſie when they are read. When all this is done, learne firſt the dogmaticall bookes of the olde Teſtament, eſpecially the Pſalmes: then the Propheticall, eſpecially Eſay: Laſtly, the hiſtoricall, but chiefly Geneſis. For it is likely that the Apoſtles and Euangeliſts read Eſay and the Pſalmes very much. For there are no bookes of the olde Teſtament, out of which wee can reade more teſtimonies to bee cited then out of theſe. There are about threeſcore places alleadged out of Eſay: and threeſcore and foure out of the Pſalmes. Thirdly, out of [a] orthodoxall writings, we muſt get aid not onely from the latter, but alſo from the more ancient Church. Becauſe Sathan hath raiſed vp from the dead the olde Heretikes, that he might hinder the reſtauration of the Church; which is begunne to be made in our time. For the Antitrinitaries haue newly varniſhed that opinion of Arius and Sabellius. The Anabaptiſts renew the doctrines or ſects of the Eſſees, Cathariſts, Enthuſiaſts, and Donatiſts. The Swenkfeldians reuiue the opinions of the Eutychians, Enthuſiaſts, &c. Menon followeth Ebion, and the Papiſts reſemble the Phariſies, Encratites, Tatians, Pelagians. The Libertines renew the opinions of the Gnoſticks and Carpocratians. Seruetus hath reuiued the hereſies of Samoſatenus, Arrius, Eutyches, Marcion, and Apollinaris. Laſtly, the Schiſmatickes, that ſeparate themſelues from Euangelicall Churches, reuiue the opinions, facts, and faſhions of Pupianus in Cyprian, of the Audians, and Donatiſts. Therefore in like manner, wee muſt not ſo much ſeeke for new repealing and confutations of theſe hereſies, as wee are for our vſe to fetch thoſe auncient ones out of Councels and Fathers, and to accompt them as approoued and firme. Fourthly, thoſe things, which in ſtudying thou meeteſt with, that are neceſſary and worthy to be obſerued, thou muſt put in thy tables or common place bookes, that thou maieſt alwaies haue in a readineſſe both olde and new. Fiftly, before all theſe things God muſt earneſtly bee ſued vnto by prayer, that hee would bleſſe theſe meanes, and that he would open the meaning of the Scriptures to vs that are blinde. Pſal. 119. 18. Open mine eyes, that I may ſee the wonderfull things of thy Law. Reuel. 3. 18. I aduiſe thee to buy golde for thee,-- and to annoint thine eyes with eye-ſalue, that thou maieſt ſee.

[a] Of ſound iudgement: or ſound, & iudicious, & cõſonant to Gods word.

Hitherto pertaineth the framing of common-place bookes. Concerning which, obſerue this ſlender counſell. 1. Haue in readineſſe common-place heads of euery point of diuinity. 2. Diſtinguiſh the formoſt pages of thy paper booke, into columnes, or equall parts lengthwiſe. In euery one of thoſe pages ſet in the top, the title of one head or chiefe point, the contrary ſide remaining in A the meane while empty, that freſh paper may bee put to. 3. All things, which thou readeſt, are not to bee written in thy booke, but thoſe things that are worthy to be remēbred, and are ſeldome met with. Neither muſt thou put the words of the Author in thy common places, but briefly note downe the principall points of ſtories, & of things, that thou maieſt ſee from what author to fetch thē, when thou ſhalt haue vſe: and make a point in the author himſelfe, that thou maiſt know that the thing is there handled, which thou wroteſt in thy cōmon-place booke. 4. Becauſe ſome things do very often offer themſelues with a doubtfull ſignification, ſo as that thou canſt not tell, if thou write them in thy common places, B from whence to fetch them, therefore to thy common places, thou muſt ioyne an alphabeticall table. 5. Alwaies prouided that thou truſt not too much to thy places. For it is not ſufficient to haue a thing written in thy book, vnleſſe it be alwaies diligently laid and locked vp in thy memory.

Preparation hath two parts; Interpretation, and *right diuiſion or * cutting*.

Interpretation is the * Opening of the words and ſentences of the Scripture, that one entire and naturall ſenſe may appeare.

* ὀρθοτομεῖν.

* ἐπίλυσις.

The Church of Rome maketh foure ſenſes of the Scriptures, the literall, allegoricall, tropologicall, and anagogicall, as in this her example. Melchizedek offered bread and wine. C The literall ſenſe is, that the King of Salem with meate which he brought, refreſhed the ſouldiers of Abraham, beeing tyred with trauell. The allegoricall is, that the Prieſt doth offer vp Chriſt in the Maſſe. The tropologicall is, therefore ſomething is to be giuen to the poore. The anagogicall is, that Chriſt in like manner beeing in heauen, ſhall bee the bread of life to the faithfull. But this her deuice of the foure-folde meaning of the Scripture muſt be exploded and reiected.

There is one onely ſenſe, and the ſame is the literall. An allegorie is onely a certaine manner of vttering the ſame ſenſe. The Anagogie and Tropologie are waies, whereby the ſenſe may be applied.

D The principall Interpreter of the Scripture, is the holy Ghoſt. 2. Pet. 1. 20. *So that ye firſt know this, that no prophecie in the Scripture is of any priuate * interpretation.* Moreouer, hee that makes the law, is the beſt and the higheſt interpreter of the law.

* ἐπιλύσεως.

The ſupreame and abſolute meane of interpretation, is the Scripture it ſelfe. Nehem. 8. 8. And they read in the booke of the Law of God diſtinctly, and gaue the ſenſe, and cauſed them to vnderſtand by the Scripture it ſelfe, per Scripturam ipſam.

The meanes ſubordinated to the Scripture, are three; the analogie of faith, the circumſtances of the place propounded, and the comparing of places together.

The analogie of faith, is a certaine abridge- ment or ſumme of the Scriptures, collected out of moſt manifeſt & familiar places. The parts thereof are two. The firſt concerneth faith, which is handled in the Apoſtles Creede. The ſecond concerneth charity or loue, which is explicated in the tenne Commaundements. 2. Timothie 1. 13. *Keepe the true * patterne of the wholeſome words, which thou haſt heard of me, with faith and loue which is in Chriſt Ieſus.*

* ὑποτύπωσιν.

The circumſtances of the place propounded are theſe: Who? to whome? upon what occaſion? at what time? in what place? for what ende? what goeth before? what followeth?

The collation or comparing of places together, is that, whereby places are ſet like parallels one beſide another, that the meaning of them may more euidently appeare. Act. 9. 22. But Saul increaſed the more in ſtrength, and confounded the Iewes, which dwelt at Damaſcus, confirming (συμβιβάζων,) that is, (conferring or conioyning of places of Scriptures, as Artificers, beeing about to compact or ioyne a thing together, are wont to fit all the parts amongſt themſelues, that each one of them may perfectly agree with other,) that this was that Chriſt.

Collation of places is two-folde. The firſt is the comparing of the place propounded with it ſelfe, cited and repeated elſewhere in holy writ. Eſay 6. 10. Make the heart of this people fat make their eares heauie, and ſhut their eyes, leſt they ſee with their eyes, and heare with their eares, and vnderſtand with their hearts, and conuert, and he heale them. This place is ſixe times repeated in the new Teſtament. Math. 13. 14 Mar. 4. 12 Luk. 8. 10. Ioh. 12. 40. Act. 28. 27 Rom. 11 8.

Places repeated haue often alterations for ſundry cauſes. Theſe cauſes are, firſt exegeticall, that is, for expoſition ſake: as,

Pſal. 78. 2. compared with Mat. 13. 35.

*I will open my mouth in a parable: I will declare * things hidden from of olde.*	I will open my mouth in parables, and will vtter the things which haue beene kept ſecret from the foundation of the world.

* occulta.

Pſal. 78. 24.	Ioh. 6. 31.
He gaue them of the wheate of heauen.	He gaue them bread from heauen to eate.

Iſa. 28. 16.	Rom. 9. 33.
Beholde, I will lay in Sion a ſtone, a tryed ſtone, a precious corner ſtone, a ſure foundation. Hee that beleeueth, ſhall not make haſt.	Beholde, I lay in Sion a ſtumbling blocke, and a rocke to make men fall, and euery one that beleeueth in him, ſhall not be aſhamed.

Pſal. 110. 1.	1. Cor. 15. 25.
Sit thou at my right hand vntill I make thine enemies thy foot-ſtoole.	Hee muſt raigne till hee haue put all his enemies under his feete.

A

Pſal. 116. 10.	2. Cor. 4. 13.
I beleeue, [a] becauſe I did ſpeake.	I beleeued, and therfore haue I ſpoken.

[a] quia.

Gen. 13. 15.	Gal. 3. 16.
All the land which thou ſeeſt, will I giue vnto thee, and to thy ſeede for euer.	Now to Abraham & to his ſeede were the promiſes made. Hee ſaith not vnto the ſeedes, as ſpeaking of many: but, and to thy ſeed, as of one, which is Chriſt.

A ſecond cauſe is diacriticall, or for diſcerning ſake, that places, and times, and perſons might be mutually diſtinguiſhed.

B

Mich. 5. 2.	Matth. 2. 6.
And thou Bethlehem Ephrathah art little to be among the Princes of Iudah: out of thee ſhall he come forth to me, that ſhall bee the ruler in Iſrael.	And thou Bethlehem in the land of Iudah, art not the leaſt among the Princes of Iudah: for out of thee ſhall come the gouernour, that ſhall feede my people Iſrael.

Thirdly, theſe cauſes are circumſcriptiue: or for limitation ſake, that the ſenſe and ſentence of the place might bee truely reſtrained, according as the minde and meaning of the holy Ghoſt was.

C

Deut. 6. 13,	Mat. 4. 10.
Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and ſhalt ſerue him.	Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him onely ſhalt thou ſerue.

Iſa. 29. 13.	Matth. 15. 8.
This people draweth neere with their mouth, & honour me with their lips: but their heart they remooue farre from me: and their reuerence towards me is by the commandement of men.	When this people draweth neere vnto mee, they honour mee with their mouth, and with their lippes, but they remooue their heart farre from me. 9. In vaine doe they worſhip me, teaching for doctrines the commaundements of men.

D

Gen. 2. 24.	Matth. 19. 5.
Wherefore a man ſhal leaue his father and his mother, and ſhall cleaue vnto his wife, and they ſhall be one fleſh.	Wherefore a man ſhal leaue father & mother, and ſhall cleaue vnto his wife, & they which were two, ſhall be one fleſh.

Iſa. 59. 20.	Rom. 11. 26.
And the Redeemer ſhall come vnto Sion, and vnto them that turne from iniquity in Iacob, ſaith the Lord.	The deliuerer ſhall come out of Sion, and ſhall turne away the vngodlineſſe from Iacob.

A fourth cauſe is for application ſake, that the type might be fitted vnto the truth: and the generall to a certaine ſpeciall, and ſo contrariwiſe:

Ionas 1.17.	Matth. 12.39.
Now the Lord had prepared a great fiſh to ſwallow vp Ionas. And Ionas was in the bellie of the fiſh three daies, and three nights.	An euill and adulterous generation ſeeketh a ſigne, but no ſigne ſhall be giuen vnto it, ſaue the ſigne of the Prophet Ionas. 40. For as Ionas was three daies and three nights in the whales belly: So ſhall the Sonne of man be, &c.

Eſay 61. 1.	Luke 4.18.
The Spirit of the Lord God is vpon me: therfore hath the Lord anointed me: hee hath ſent mee to preach good tidings vnto the poore, to binde vp the brokē hearted, to preach liberty to the Captiues, and to them that are bound, the opening of the priſon: 2. To preach the acceptable yeare of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God.	The Spirit of the Lord is vpon me, therefore he hath anointed mee that I ſhould preach good tidings to the pore, he hath ſent mee to heale the broken in heart, that I ſhould preach deliuerance to the Captiues, &c. 21. This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your eares.

Pſal. 69,27.	Ioh. 19.28.
They gaue mee gall for my meate, and in my thirſt they gaue mee vineger to drinke.	That the Scripture might bee fulfilled, hee ſaid, I thirſt. 29. Therefore there was ſet a veſſell full of vineger: and they filled a ſponge with vineger, and put it about an hyſſope ſtalke, and put it to his mouth.

Exod. 12.46.	Ioh. 19.36.
Neither ſhall yee breake a bone thereof.	Theſe things were done, that the Scripture might be fulfilled, which ſaith, there ſhall not a bone of him be broken.

Pſal. 69. 25.	Act. 1.20.
Let their habitations bee void, and let none dwell in their tents.	It is written in the book of the Pſalmes; Let his habitatiō be void, & let no man dwell therein.

Fiftly, ſome things are omitted for breuitie ſake: or becauſe they doe not agree with the matter in hand.

Zach. 9.9.	Matth. 21.5.
Reioyce greatly O daughter Sion: ſhout for ioy O daughter Ieruſalem, beholde thy King commeth vnto thee: He is Iuſt, & hauing ſaluation, poore, and riding vpon an Aſſe, and vpon a colt, the foale of an Aſſe.	Tell ye the daughter of Sion, behold thy King comes vnto thee, meeke and ſitting vpon an Aſſe, and a colt the foale of an Aſſe vſed to the yoke.

The ſecond collation is of the place propounded with other places: and thoſe againe are either like or vnlike.

Places that are alike are ſuch, as by certaine waies, or in ſome ſort agree one with another. And places doe agree either in their phraſe and manner of ſpeech, or in ſenſe.

Places that agree as concerning the phraſe, are ſuch as theſe:

Gen. 28.12.	Ioh. 1.51.
Then hee dreamed, and behold there ſtood a ladder vpon the earth, and the top of it reached vp to heauen, and loe, the Angels of God went vp and downe by it.	And he ſaid vnto him, Verily, verily, I ſay vnto you, hereafter ſhal ye ſee the heauen open, and the Angels of God aſcending and deſcending vpon the Sonne of man.
Gen. 3.15.	Rom. 16.20.
I will alſo put enmity between thee & the woman, and betweene thy ſeed & her ſeed. He ſhal breake thine head, and thou ſhalt bruiſe his heel	The God of peace ſhall breake (συντρίψει) Sathan vnder your feete.
Gen. 8.20.	Epheſ. 5.2.
Then Noah built an altar to the Lord, and tooke of euery cleane beaſt, and of euery cleane fowle, and offered burnt offerings vpon the altar. 21. And the Lord ſmelled a ſauour of reſt, and ſaid,	Chriſt hath loued vs, and giuen himſelfe for vs, an offering and a ſacrifice of a ſweete ſmelling ſauour to God.

For the finding out of theſe places, the Greeke and Hebrew concordances ſerue very fitly.

Places which agree in ſenſe, are thoſe that haue the ſame meaning. Here excelleth the comparing of a generall place with a ſpeciall example in the ſame kinde: as,

Prou. 28.13.	Pſal. 32.3,4.
Hee that hideth his ſinnes, ſhall not proſper, but he that confeſſeth & forſaketh them, ſhall finde mercy.	When I held my tongue my bones conſumed, &c. 5. I acknowledged my ſinne vnto thee, neither hidde I mine iniquitie. I ſaid, I will confeſſe againſt my ſelfe my wickedneſſe vnto the Lord, and thou forgaueſt the puniſhment of my ſinne.

2.Sam. 15.25. The King charged Zadok ſaying, carry the Arke of God againe into the citie; if I ſhall finde fauour in the eies of the Lord, he will bring mee againe, and ſhew mee both it, and the tabernacle thereof. 26. But if hee thus ſay; I haue no delight in thee, Beholde, here am I, let him doe to mee, as ſeemeth good in his eies.	1.Pet. 5.6. Humble your ſelues therefore vnder the mightie hand of God, that hee may exalt you in due time.

Thou ſhalt haue ready very many places of this kinde in the common places of Marlorate gathered together with diligence. And thus much for places that are alike.

Places that are vnlike, are thoſe, which in ſhew doe not agree, either in reſpect of the phraſe, or in regard of the meaning. As,

Rom. 3.28. Therefore wee conclude, that a man is iuſtified by faith without the workes of the Law.	Iam. 2.24. Ye ſee therefore how that of workes a man is iuſtified, and not of faith onely.
1.Kin. 9.28. And they came to Ophir, and they fetched from thence foure hundred and twenty talents of golde, and brought it to King Salomon.	2.Chron. 8.18. And they went with the ſeruants of Salomon to Ophir, and brought from thence, foure hundred and fiftie talents of golde, and brought them to King Salomon.
Act. 7.14. Then ſent Ioſeph, and cauſed his father to bee brought, and all his kindred, euen threeſcore and fifteene ſoules.	Gen. 46.27. All the ſoules of the houſe of Iacob, which came into Egypt, are threeſcore and ten.
Act. 7.16. And were remooued into Sychem, and were put into the Sepulchre, that Abraham had bought for money of the ſonnes of Emor, ſonne of Sychem.	Gen. 48.22. I (that is, Iacob,) haue giuen vnto thee one portion aboue thy brethren, which I gat out of the hand of the Amorrite by my ſword, and by my bow.
Zach. 11. 13. And I tooke the thirtie peeces of ſiluer, and caſt them to the potter in the houſe of the Lord.	Matth. 27.9. Then was fulfilled that which was ſpoken by Ieremie the Prophet, ſaying, and they tooke thirtie ſiluer peeces, &c.

CHAP. V.

Of the waies of expounding.

THe manner or waies of interpreting, are according to the places of Scripture, which are to be handled.

Places are either Analogicall and plaine, or Crypticall and darke.

Analogicall places are ſuch as haue an apparent meaning agreeable to the analogie of faith, and plaine at the firſt view. Concerning theſe places, receiue this rule:

If the naturall ſignification of the words of the place propounded, doe agree with the circumſtances of the ſame place, it is the proper meaning of the place. As for example:

Act. 10.43: To him alſo giue all the Prophets witneſſe, that through his name, all that beleeue in him, ſhall receiue remiſſion of ſinnes. The ſignification of the words of this place, is very manifeſt, to wit, that Ieſus Chriſt doth giue righteouſneſſe and euerlaſting life to thoſe that doe beleeue in him. And this ſenſe we doe preſently admit without any delay, becauſe wee ſee that it doth agree with the analogie of faith, and with the holy Scriptures.

We muſt further know, that euery article and doctrine concerning faith and manners, which is neceſſarie vnto ſaluation, is very plainely deliuered in the Scriptures.

Crypticall or hidden places are thoſe, which are difficult and darke: for the expounding of them, let this be thy rule and leader.

If the natiue (or naturall) ſignification of the words doe manifeſtly diſagree with, either the analogie of faith, or very perſpicuous places of the Scriptures: then the other meaning, which is giuen of the place propounded, is naturall and proper, if it agree with contrary and like places, with the circumſtances and words of the place, and with the nature of that thing which is intreated of. As for example, 1. Corin. 11.24. This is my body, which is broken for you.

The ſenſe that is giuen by ſome:

This bread is indeed and properly the body of Chriſt, namely by conuerſion. Or, the body of Chriſt is in, vnder, or with the bread.

The vnfitneſſe of this ſenſe.

The * letter or words vſed in this place, beeing retained (or expounded accordingly without any alteration) doth diſagree with an article of the faith, He aſcended into heauen, and with the nature of a Sacrament, which ought to be a * Memoriall of the body of Chriſt abſent. Therefore a new expoſition is to bee ſought for.

A new or ſecond ſenſe.

In this place the bread is a ſigne of my body: by a Metonymy of the ſubiect for the adiunct.

The fitneſſe of this expoſition.

Firſt, it agrees with the analogie of faith:

* τὸ ῥητόν.

* μνημόσυνον.

1 He aſcended truly into heauen, that is, he was taken vp out of the earth into heauen locally and viſibly. Therefore his bodie is not to be receiued with the mouth at the Communion, but by faith apprehending it in the heauen. 2. Borne of the Virgin Marie, &c. Therefore he had a true and naturall bodie, beeing long, broad, thicke, ſeated and circumſcribed in ſome place. Whereby it appeareth that the bread in the Supper cannot bee properly his very bodie, but onely a ſigne or pledge thereof.

Secondly, this ſenſe conſenteth with the circumſtances of the place propounded.

1 He tooke, he brake it. Here it is not likely that Chriſt ſitting amongſt his diſciples did take and breake his owne bodie with his hands: Therefore the bread is no more then a ſigne and ſeale.

2 Deliuered (or giuen) for you. The bread can in no wiſe be ſaid to be giuen for vs, but the body of Chriſt: therefore the bread is not properly the bodie, but ſymbolically or by way of ſignification.

3 The Cup is the new Teſtament, not properly, but by a Metonymie: therefore nothing hindreth, but that a Metonymie may be as well in theſe words, This is my bodie.

4 Chriſt himſelfe did eate of the bread; but he did not eate himſelfe.

5 Doe ye this in remembrance of me: therefore Chriſt is not corporally preſent to the mouth, but ſpiritually to the faith of the heart.

6 Vntill he come: therefore Chriſt is abſent in his bodie.

7 Chriſt ſaid not, Vnder the forme of bread, or in the bread: but he ſaid, This, that is, This bread is my bodie.

Thirdly, this ſenſe accords with the nature of a ſacrament: in which we muſt make a proportion and reſemblance betweene the ſigne and the thing ſignified: which here can be none, if the bread be properly the bodie.

Fourthly, it agrees with the like places.

Gen. 17. 10. This is my couenant, which ye ſhall keepe betwixt you and me——11. Ye ſhall circumciſe the fore-skin of your fleſh, and it ſhall be a ſigne of the couenant betweene me and you.

1. Cor. 10. 4. They dranke of the ſpirituall Rocke, that followed them: and the Rocke was Chriſt.

Rom. 4. 11. He receiued the ſigne of Circumciſion, which might ſeale the righteouſnes of faith.

Exod. 12. 11. The Lambe is the Lords Paſſeouer. Verſe 13. It is a ſigne of his paſſing ouer.

Act. 22. 16. Be baptiſed and waſh away thy ſinnes.

Ioh. 6. 35. And Ieſus ſaid vnto them, I am the bread of life: hee that commeth vnto me ſhall not hunger, and hee that beleeueth in me ſhall neuer thirſt.

1. Cor. 10. 16. The cup of bleſſing which wee bleſſe, is it not the Communion of the blood of Chriſt? The bread which we breake, is it not the communion of the bodie of Chriſt? that is, a ſigne of the communion.

Fiftly, it agreeth with the lawes of Logicke: For one diſparate is not ſpoken or predicated of another but by a borrowed ſpeech.

Sixtly, it is agreeable to the common cuſtome of ſpeaking. So wee put the Faſces, or bundle of rods (vſed to be carried before magiſtrates) for gouernment it ſelfe: the ſcepter for the kingdome: the gowne we put for peace: and the Laurell garland for a triumph as in Tully.

Cedant arma togæ, concedat laurea linguæ.

Therefore this other ſenſe is proper.

Now from this fruitfull Rule doe ariſe many conſectaries or concluſions neceſſarie for the vnderſtanding of the Scriptures.

Conſectarie 1. The ſupply of euery word which is wanting, is fitting for the place propounded, if it agree with the analogie (or ſquire) of faith, and with the circumſtances and words of the ſame place. As for example.

Eph. 3. 1. For which cauſe, I Paul the priſoner of Ieſus Chriſt for you Gentiles. The ſentence is defectiue there a ſupply muſt be made. And let this be the ſupply [I will be an Embaſſadour] for you Gentiles. This is not fit, becauſe Paul was not an Embaſſadour for the Gentiles, but for Chriſt. Let another be giuen [haue boaſted] for you Gentiles. But this ſeemeth to be ſomething too bold, nether is any ſuch like ſpeech to bee mette with in any part of the Scripture. Therefore the ſentence may bee fitly ſupplied after this manner; For which cauſe I Paul am the priſoner of Ieſus Chriſt for you Gentiles.

The ſame may be ſaid of the reſt.

Defectiue Speeches.	Their Supply.
Eſay. 1. 13. I cannot iniquitie.	I cannot (beare) iniquitie.
Luk. 13. 9. And if it beare fruit: if not, then after thou ſhalt cut it downe.	And if it beare fruit (thou ſhalt let it ſtand) if not, then after thou ſhalt cut it downe.
Exod. 4. 25. Then Zippora tooke a ſharpe, and cut away the fore-skin of her ſonne.	Then Zippora tooke a ſharpe (knife) and cut, &c.
2. Sam. 21. 16. Iſhi Benob, which of the ſonnes of a certaine Giant, the weight of whoſe ſword the weight of three hundred ſhekles of ſteele: and he girded with a new.	Iſhi Benob, who (was) of the ſonnes of a certaine Giant, the weight of whoſe ſword (or ſpeares head, mucronis) [was] the weight of three hundred ſhekles of ſteele, and he was girded with a new ſword.
1. Cor. 9. 25. And euery man, that prooueth maſteries, is continent in all things: and they to obtaine a corruptible crowne, but wee for an vncorruptible.	And they (are continent) to obtaine a corruptible crowne, &c.

Exod. 19. 4. You haue ſeene how I haue carried you vpon Eagles wings.	[as it were] vpon Eagles wings.

Conſect. 2. If that other expoſition giuen of the place propounded doe change one nowne (or name) for another, then the words of the place containe in them a trope, or borrowed ſpeech.

Hence ariſe many cautions concerning ſacred tropes.

1 An Anthropo-pathia is a ſacred Metaphor, whereby thoſe things, that are properly ſpoken of man, are by a ſimilitude attributed vnto God. Hence it is, that the ſoule of God is put for his life or eſſence, Ier. 5. 29. Or ſhall not my ſoule bee auenged of ſuch a nation as this? Head is vſed for Prince, or aboue. 1. Cor. 11. 3. God is the head of Chriſt. His face is put for fauour or anger. Pſal. 30. 7. Thou didſt hide thy face, and I was troubled. Pſal. 34. 16. The face of the Lord is * angrie at thoſe that doe euill. His eyes are vſed for grace and prouidence. Pſal. 34. 15. The eyes of the Lord are vpon the iuſt. The apple of his eye ſignifieth a thing very deare. Zach. 2. 8. He that toucheth you, toucheth the apple of mine eye. His eares are put for his accepting of mens prayers. His noſtrils for indignation. His hands for power and protection. His arme for ſtrength & fortitude. His right hand for authoritie and power. His finger for vertue. His foote for gouernment and might. Pſal. 110. 3. His ſmelling for his acceptation of ſomething. Gen. 8. 21. He ſmelled the ſauour of reſt. Repentance is vſed for the alteration of things and actions made by God.

2 A ſacramentall Metonymie is that, whereby the name of the adiunct, as alſo of the helping cauſe is put for the thing repreſented in the Sacrament: or, whereby the ſigne is put for the thing ſignified, or contrarily. Gen. 2. 9. The tree of life: the tree of the knowledge of good and euill, that is, the tree which is a ſigne of theſe. Gen. 17. 10. 11. Circumciſio is called both the couenant, & the ſigne of the couenant. Gen. 22. 14. Abraham calleth the name of that place, The Lord will ſee or prouide, that is, it is a ſigne that the Lord will doe ſo. Gen. 28. 22. The ſtone is called Gods houſe. Exod. 12. The Paſchall Lambe is the paſſing ouer. Exod. 17. 15. The altar is called, The Lord is my ſtandard or banner. Ezek. 48. 35. Ieruſalem is named, The Lord is there. Leuit. 16. The Prieſt is termed a ſatisfier. Ioh. 1. Chriſt is called a Lamb: Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the ſinnes of the world. The paſchall Lamb is called Chriſt. 1. Cor. 5. 7. Our Paſſeouer Chriſt is ſacrificed for vs. And in the ſame place Chriſtians are ſaid to bee vnleauened. Rom. 3. 25. Chriſt is termed the propitiatorie (ἱλαστήριον) or the couer of the Arke of the couenant. 1. Cor. 10. Chriſtians are ſaid to be one * bread. And the Rocke is called Chriſt. Tit. 3. 5. Baptiſme is named the waſhing of the new birth. 1. Cor. 11. The Cup is called the new Teſtament: and the bread is ſaid to be the body of Chriſt.

3 The * communication of the properties is a Synecdoche, by the which by reaſon of the perſonall vnion, that is ſpoken of the whole perſon of Chriſt, which doth properly belong to one of his two natures. Act. 20. 28. To feed the Church of God, which he hath purchaſed with his owne blood. Ioh. 3. 13. For no man aſcendeth vp to heauen, but hee that hath deſcended from heauen, the Sonne of man which is in heauen. 1. Cor. 2. 8. For had they knowne it, they would not haue crucified the Lord of glory. Ioh. 8. 58. Ieſus ſaid vnto them, Verily, verily I ſay vnto you, before Abraham was, I am. Luk. 2. 52. And Ieſus increaſed in wiſedome, and in ſtature, and in fauour with God and man.

This communication of the properties hath place onely in the concrete, and not in the abſtract. Concrete is the name of the whole perſon, as God, Man, Chriſt, &c. Abſtract is a name of either of the two natures conſidered apart, as the Godhead, Manhood.

4 Things ſpoken of God, which carrie with them the ſhew of euill, muſt bee vnderſtood in regard of his operatiue or working permiſſion. Neh. 9. 37. And it yeeldeth much fruit vnto the Kings, whome thou haſt ſet ouer vs becauſe of our ſinnes: and they haue dominion ouer our bodies, and ouer our cattell at their pleaſure, and wee are in great affliction. Iſa. 19. 14. The Lord hath mingled among them the ſpirit of errours: and they haue cauſed AEgypt to erre in euery worke thereof. Exod. 4. 9. and 11. 14. God doth harden the heart of Pharaoh. Deut. 2. 38. The Lord thy God hath hardened his ſpirit, and made his heart obſtinate, becauſe he would deliuer him into thine hand, as appeareth this day. Ioſh. 11. 20. It came of the Lord, that their heart was hardened, that they might come againſt Iſrael in battell, to the intent that they ſhould deſtroy them vtterly, and ſhew them no mercie, but bring them to nought. 1. Sa. 2. 25. They hearkned not to the voice of their father, becauſe the Lord meant to deſtroy them. 2. Chro. 22. 7. The deſtruction of Ahaziah came from God. Pſal. 105. 25. He turned their heart to hate his people, and to worke craftily againſt his ſeruants. Rom. 1. 28. God deliuered them vp to a reprobate minde. 2. Theſſ. 2. 11. God will ſend them ſtrong deluſions, that they may beleeue lies. Ezek. 14. 9. And when that Prophet ſhall be inticed to ſpeake a prophecy, I the Lord will intice that prophet, and ſtretching out mine hand againſt him, I will deſtroy him out of the middeſt of my people.

5 Things ſpoken (completiuè) as if they were alreadie finiſhed, if they be not as yet finiſhed, they are to be vnderſtood (inchoatiuè) as beeing begun, and in the way to be fulfilled. Gen. 5. 32. And vvhen Noah vvas fiue hundred yeeres old, he begat Shem, Ham, and Iapheth, that is, he began to beget them. Gen. 11. 26. Terah liued ſeuentie yeares, vvhen hee begat Abram, Nahor, and Haran. 1. King. 6. 2. 37. Pſal. 119. 8. I vvill obſerue thy ſtatutes, doe not forſake me. It is

---

* irata.

* loafe.

* Κοινωνία ἰδιωμάτων.

to be vnderſtood of his endeauour to doe ſo, as in Phil. 3. 12. Not as though I had alreadie attained to it, or were alreadie perfect: but I follow on, if that I may comprehend that for whoſe ſake alſo I am comprehended of Ieſus Chriſt. Verſ. 15. Let vs therefore as many as be perfect, be thus minded. Luk. 1. 6. And they were both iuſt in the ſight of God, walking in al his commandements and ordinances without blame.

6 Morall cōmaundements or lawes vnder one ſinne by name expreſſed, doe ſignifie and meane all the ſinnes of that kinde, their cauſes, occaſions, and allurements to them, and command the contrarie vertues. For ſo Chriſt expounded morall lawes, Matth. 5. 2. to the end of the chapter. 1. Ioh. 3. 15. He that hateth his brother is a manſlayer.

7 Threats and promiſes are to bee vnderſtood with their conditions. Thoſe are to bee conceiued with the condition of faith and repentance: and theſe, ſpecially if they be corporall, with the exception of chaſtiſement and the croſſe. Ezech. 33. 14. When I ſhall ſay vnto the wicked, Thou ſhalt die the death: if hee turne from his ſinne, and doe that which is lawfull and right,—15. he ſhall ſurely liue, and not die. Reuel. 21. 18. But the fearefull and vnbeleeuers, &c. ſhall haue their portion in the lake, which burneth with fire and brimſtone, which is the ſecond death. But in the ſixt verſe he annexeth a promiſe, ſaying, I will giue vnto him that is athirſt of the well of the water of life freely. Ion. 3. 4. Yet 40. daies, and Niniue ſhall bee ſubuerted. By thoſe things which follow it appeareth that a condition is to be vnderſtood. Ier. 18. 9. 10.

Like to theſe there are particular examples. Eſa. 38. 1. of Hezechiah: Giue commandements to thy family, for thou ſhalt ſhortly die, and ſhalt not liue: The condition of Gods will is to be vnderſtood. Gen, 20. 3. The Lord ſaith to Abimelech, becauſe hee had taken Abrahams wife to himſelfe: Behold, thou ſhalt die for the woman which thou haſt taken; except, vnleſſe thou reſtore her. Hence aroſe the diſtinction in the ſchooles of the * Signifying will, and the will of Gods good-pleaſure. The will of good-pleaſure is that, whereby God doth will ſomething abſolutely and ſimply without any condition, as the creation and regiment of the world, and the ſending of his Sonne. The ſignifying will is that, wherby he willeth ſome things for ſome other thing and with condition, and ſo we ſay, becauſe that the condition annexed is a ſigne of the will, that God doth ſo will.

* Signi. Beneplaciti.

8 A ſuperlatiue or excluſiue ſpeech vſed of one perſon, doth not exclude the other perſons of the Deitie, but only creatures and fained gods: to which the true God, whether in one perſon or in moe, is oppoſed. Ioh. 17. 3. This is life eternall to know thee to bee the only true God, and Ieſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent. He calleth the Father the onely true God, that he might oppoſe him to all falſe gods. Rom. 16. 27. To the onely wiſe God be glorie by Ieſus Chriſt, 1. Tim. 1. 17. Ioh. 10. 29. The Father is greater then all: not then the reſt of the perſons, but than the creatures. Mark. 13, 37. The Father alone knoweth the day of iudgement. All the outward workes of the Trinitie, and all attributes are to bee vnderſtood incluſiuely, that is, without exception of any of the perſons.

9 When God is conſidered abſolutely, or by himſelfe, the three perſons are comprehended: when the word (God) is conferred or ſet with a perſon of the Trinitie, it ſignifieth the Father. 2. Cor. 13. 13. The grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and the loue of God, and the fellowſhip of the holy Ghoſt be with you all.

10 A generall word is taken ſpecially, and ſo on the contrarie; as All (ſaith Auguſt. l. 6. cont. Iulian. ca. 12.) for Many, and Many for All, are oftētimes vſed in the Scriptures. Gen. 33. 11. God hath had mercie on mee, therefore I haue all things. Ier. 8. 6. All are turned to their owne race, that is, the greater part. Matth. 21. 26 All men counted Iohn as a Prophet, that is, the moſt. Phil. 2. 21. All ſeeke their owne things, and not the things of Chriſt. Deut. 28. 64. And God ſhall ſcatter thee among all people, that is, many. 1. King. 12. 18. And all the Iſraelites ſtoned him, that is, all that were preſent. Exod. 9. 6 All the liuing creatures of AEgypt died. Ierem. 26. 9. Then was gathered together all the people, againſt Ieremie in the houſe of the Lord, that is, all wicked people. Math. 4. 23. Healing euery diſeaſe, to wit, that was offered to him. Ioh. 14. 13. Whatſoeuer ye ſhall aske the Father in my name, that is, whatſoeuer ye ſhall aske according to his word. 1. Cor. 6. 12. All things are lawfull for me, that is, all (adiaphora) things that are indifferent and not ſimply euill.

Nothing is put for little or ſmall, Ioh. 18. 20. I haue ſpoken nothing in ſecret, that is, little, Act. 27. 33.

None is vſed for few, Ier. 8. 6. There is none that repenteth of his wickedneſſe, that is, but a few. 1. Cor. 2. 8. Which wiſedome none of the rulers of this world knew, that is, very few.

Alwaies is taken for often or long. Prou. 13. 10. Amongſt the proud there is alwaies contention, that is, often Luk. 18. 1. He ſpake vnto them a parable that they ought to pray alway. Luk. 24. 53. And they were alwaies in the Temple lauding and praiſing of God. Ioh. 18. 29. I alway taught in the Synagogue, and in the Temple.

Eternall is vſed for a long time agreeing with the matter in hand. Gen. 17. 8. All the land of Canaan is giuen vnto Abraham for an euerlaſting poſſeſſion. Leuit. 25. 46. Ye ſhall vſe their labours for euer. Deut. 15. 17. If thy ſeruant be thy brother an Hebrew, and will not goe from thee, then ſhalt thou take an aule, and pierce his eare through againſt the doore, and he ſhall be thy ſeruant for euer, in æternum. 1. Chron. 15. 2. God hath choſen the Leuites, that they might miniſter for euer vnto him. Eſa. 34. 6. And beaſts ſhall poſſeſſe Idumea and Bozra eternally. Dan. 2, 4. O King liue for euer. Ier. 25. 9. I will make Iudea and the regions bordering vpon it an amazement, a hiſſing, and a perpetuall deſolation.

[a] Vbiq; paſſim.

[a] Euery where is vſed for here and there, without reſpect of place, Mark.16.20. And they went out and preached euery where, the Lord coworking. Act.17.30. The Lord admoniſheth all men euery where to repent.

[b] Non. Math.9.13.

[[b] Not] is reſtrained to ſome ſpeciall matter. Pſal.7.4. Iniquitie is not in mine hands, that is, in my cauſe againſt the complices of Saul. Ioh.9.3. Neither haue his parents ſinned, that is, that this man ſhould be borne blind for their ſinnes: I will haue mercie, not ſacrifice. Not is put for ſeldome, ſcarſely, or hardly. 1.King.15.5. Dauid declined not from any of the things which the Lord had commaunded vnto him, ſauing in the matter of Vriah, that is, ſeldome. Luk.2.37. She was a widow, and went not out of the Temple.

Math.9.13.

Conſect. 3. Grammaticall and Rhetoricall proprieties of words ſignifie diuerſly with thoſe words: As,

[c] That is, when one or moe words are wanting.

An [c] Ellipſis ſignifieth either breuitie, or the ſwiftneſſe of the affections. Gen.11.4. Let vs build vs a citie and a tower, whoſe top [may reach] vnto heauen, that wee may get vs a name. Act.5.39. But if it be of God, ye cannot deſtroy it, [ac neſcio, and I know not] whether ye ſhalbe found fighters alſo with God. Pſal.6. And thou O Lord how long? Exod.22.20. He that ſacrificeth to ſtrange gods, let him be deſtroyed as a thing execrable: ſauing him [who ſacrificeth] to Iehouah. Gen.3.22. Now therfore [we muſt looke] leſt that ſtetching out his hand, he take of the tree of life. 1.Chro.4.10. If thou wilt bleſſe me effectually [I will doe this or that] If thou vexe the fatherleſſe child [I will vexe thee.] Exod.22.23.

The Enallage of the preterperfect tenſe, whereby the time paſt is put for the time to come, ſignifieth in the oracles of the Prophets the certentie of the thing that is to come. Gen.20.3. Thou art dead becauſe of the woman, that is, thou ſhalt die. Iſai.9.6. Vnto vs a child is borne, vnto vs a ſonne is giuen. Iſa.21.9. It is fallen, it is fallen, Babylon, &c.

[d] When ſome words abound

[e] It is when words ſignifie more then they ſhew for or ſeeme.

A [d] Pleonaſme, which is manifold, when it is of the ſubſtantiue repeated in the ſame caſe, it doth ſignifie, 1. A force and [e] emphaſis. Pſal.133.2. As the oyntment which deſcended vnto the beard, The beard of Aaron. Luk.6.46. Why call ye me Lord, Lord? 2. A multitude, Gen.32.16. Hee gaue into the hands of his ſeruants droues, droues, that is, many droues. Ioel.3.14. Troupes, troupes in the valley of conciſion, that is, many troupes or multitudes. 3. Diſtribution, At the gate and gate, 1.Chro.26.13. that is, in euery gate. Leuit.17.3. A man and a man, that is, euery man. 2.Chron.19.5. Thou ſhalt appoint Iudges in a citie and in a citie, that is, in euery citie. 4. Diuerſitie and varietie. Pſal.12. They ſpeake with an heart, and an heart, that is, with diuers or a double heart. Prou.20.10. A weight and a weight are abominable vnto the Lord.

There is a Pleonaſme of the Subſtantiue when one is gouerned of another. 1. In the ſingular number it is very ſignificant and argues certentie. Exod.31.15. On the ſeuenth day is the Sabbath of Sabbath. Mich.2.4. And they ſhall lament the lamentation of lamentation. 2. In the plurall number it ſignifieth Excellencie. Pſal.136.2. The God of Gods, that is, the moſt high God. Dan.3. The King of Kings. Eccleſ.1.2. Vanitie of vanities. A Song of Songs. A Seruant of Seruants.

The Pleonaſme of the Adiectiue, & ſometimes alſo of the Subſtantiue repeated, ſignifieth exaggeration or increaſing. Ier.24.3. I ſee good figges, good. Eſa.6.3. Holy, holy, holy the Lord God of hoſts. Exod.34.6. The Lord paſſing before his face cried, Iehouah, Iehouah, the ſtrong God. Ier.7.4. Truſt not in lying words, ſaying, the temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord, &c. Ier.22.29. O earth, earth, earth, heare the word of the Lord. Ezek.21.28. Say thou, the Sword, the ſword is drawne, and furbiſhed for the ſlaughter. Prou.6.10.

The Pleonaſme of the Verbe doth either make the ſpeech more emphaticall and ſignificant, or els ſignifieth and ſheweth vehemencie, or certenty, or ſpeedineſſe. Gen.2.17. In dying thou ſhalt die. Eſa.50.2. Is mine hand ſhortened in ſhortening? Eſa.56.3. By ſeparating God hath ſeparated me from his people. Pſal.50.21. Thou thinkeſt me by beeing to be like thee. Pſal.109.10. Let his children in wandering bee wanderers (or vagabonds) and let them begge: Ier.12.16. And it ſhall come to paſſe if in learning they ſhal learne the waies of my people, &c. 2.Kin.8.10. Prou.27.23. Exod.13.17. Iſa 6.9. Iſa.55.2, 2.King.5.11. Gen.46.4. 2.Sam.15.30. Ier.23.39.

The Pleonaſme of the Coniunction ſometimes argueth earneſtneſſe. Eze.13.10. Therefore, therefore becauſe they haue made my people to erre.

[f] Coniunction.

Wherefore a [f] Coniunction doubled (otherwiſe then it is in Latine) increaſeth the deniall. Exod.14.11. Haſt thou brought vs to die in the wilderneſſe, is it becauſe there were No No graues in Ægypt? that is, None at all: Math.13.14. By ſeeing ye ſhall ſee, and ſhall Not Not (οὐ μὴ) perceiue.

The Pleonaſme of the ſentence ſignifieth firſt, diſtribution. Ezec.46.21. A court was in the corner of the court: a court was in the corner of the court: a court was in the corner of the court; that is, in euery corner of the court there was one court. Secondly, it makes an emphaſis. Exod.12.50. The Iſraelites did as Moſes and Aaron commanded, ſo did they. Pſal.145.18. The Lord is neere vnto all that call vpon him: to all that call vpon him in truth. Pſal.124.1. Vnleſſe the Lord had beene on our ſide may Iſrael now ſay: vnleſſe the Lord had beene on our ſide. Thirdly, the repetition of the ſentence, which is done in other words, is for expoſition ſake. 2.King 20.3. I beſeech thee, O Lord, remember now how I haue walked before thee in truth and with a perfect heart, and haue done that which is good in thy ſight, Pſal.6.9.10. The Lord hath heard the voice of my weeping, the Lord hath heard my prayer: the Lord hath receiued my ſupplication. Eſa.3.9. They haue declared their ſinne, and haue not hidden it: Ioh.1.3. All things were made by him, and without him nothing was made.

All tropes are[g] emphaticall, and beſides delight and ornament they doe alſo affoard matter for the nouriſhment of faith: as when Chriſt is put for a Chriſtian man, or for the Church of God. Math.25.35. 1.Cor.12. As the bodie is one, and hath many members: and all the members of one bodie, though they be many, are yet but one bodie: ſo alſo Chriſt, that is, The Church. Act.9.4. This trope doth comfort a faithfull ſoule, and nouriſh faith.

An[h] Ironie ſignifieth a iuſt reprehenſion of ſinne. Iudg.10.14. And the Lord ſaid to the children of Iſrael: Goe ye, and crie out to your gods, whom ye haue choſē, let thē ſaue you in the time of trouble. Mark.7.9. And he ſaid vnto them, ſurely; Well, ye abrogate the commaundement of God, and obſerue your owne traditions. 1.King.22.15. The King ſaid vnto him, Michaiah, ſhall we goe againſt Ramoth Gilead to battell? or ſhall we not? and he anſwered, Goe vp and proſper: doubtleſſe the Lord ſhall deliuer it into the hand of the King. 1.King.18.27. And at noone Eliah mocked them, and ſaid, Crie aloud, for he is a God: either he talketh, or purſueth his enemies, or is in his iourney: or it may be he ſleepeth, and muſt be awaked. 1.Cor.4.8. Now are ye full, now are ye enriched, without vs ye haue gotten a kingdome.

Figures of a word in the repetition of a word or ſound, haue for the moſt part an emphaſis in them. Pſal.66.7. Let God, euen our God bleſſe vs. Iſa.48.11. For mine owne ſake, for mine owne ſake will I do it. Ioh.1.51. Verily, verily I ſay vnto you. Pſal.67.6. The people ſhall praiſe thee, O God; all the people ſhall praiſe thee. In the 136. Pſalm. there is a repetition made in euery verſe for this cauſe.

An Interrogation ſignifieth, 1. an earneſt affirmation, or aſſeueration. Gen.4.7. Is there not remiſſion, if thou ſhalt doe well? Ioſh.10.13. Is not this written in the booke of the iuſt? Ioh.4.35. Doe ye not ſay that it is yet foure moneths to haruest? Ioſh.1.9. Gen.37.13. 1.King.20.27. Mark.12.24. Ioh.6.7. Secondly, it ſignifieth a deniall: Gen.18.14. Shall any word be hard vnto God? Rom.3.3. Shall their incredulity make the faith of God of none effect? Matth.12.26. If Satan ſhall vanquiſh Satan, how ſhall his kingdome continue? 3. It ſignifies a forbidding. Pſal.79.10. Helpe vs, O God, why ſhall the Gentiles ſay, where is their God? 2.Sam.2.22. And Abner ſaid to Aſahel, depart from mee: wherefore ſhould I ſmite thee to the ground? 4. It argueth ſundry affections, as admiration, compaſſion, complaining, & finding of fault. Pſal.8.10. O Lord, how admirable is thy name in all the earth! Iſa.1.21. How is the faithfull citie become an Harlot! Pſal.22. My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me?

A Conceſſion (or yeelding) ſignifieth a deniall and reprehenſion. 2.Cor.12.16. But be it, that I charged you not, but becauſe I was craftie, I tooke you with guile. 17. Did I pill you by any of them whom I ſent?

Conſect. 4. If the Oppoſition of vnlike places ſhall be taught to be, either not of the ſame matter, but of name onely, or not according to the ſame part, or not in the ſame reſpect, or not in the ſame manner, or not at the ſame time, a reconciliation or agreement is made.

Examples.

B

Pſal.7.8.	Eſa.64 6.
Iudge me, O Lord, according to my righteouſneſſe.	We haue all beene as an vncleane thing, and all our righteouſneſſe is as filthie clouts.

The Reconciliation.

It appeareth by the ſcope and circumſtances of both the places, that this contradiction is not in the ſame reſpect. Diſtinguiſh therefore. There is one righteouſneſſe of the cauſe or action; and an other of the perſon: the firſt place ſpeaketh of the former: and the ſecond of the latter.

C

Matth.10.10.	Mark.6.8.9.
Nor a ſcrip for the iourney, neither two coates, neither ſhooes, nor a ſtaffe.	And commaunded them, to take nothing for their iourney, ſaue a ſtaffe onely, neither ſcrip, nor bread, nor mony in their girdles, but that they ſhould be ſhod with ſandals.

The Reconciliation.

D Diſtinguiſh the reſpects. Matthew meaneth ſuch a ſtaffe, as may be a burthen to the bearers thereof. Marke vnderſtandeth ſuch a one, as may ſuſtaine and eaſe thoſe that trauell; ſuch a one as Iacob vſed, Gen.32.10. Moreouer, the ſhooes that Matthew mentioneth are new, ſuch as are with care and diligence prepared for to trauell in. The ſandals in Marke are not new, but ſuch as are daily worne on the feete.

From this fourth Conſectarie many Prouiſoes or Cautions ariſe meete to be obſerued in the reconciling of places.

1 The holy Writers ſpeaking of things and perſons, that are paſt, doe anticipate, that is, they ſpeake of them according to the cuſtome of that place and time, in which they wrote. Gen.12.8. Afterward remoouing thence vnto a mountaine Eaſt-ward from Bethel. The place was ſo called in the daies of Moſes: but in Abrahams time it was not called Bethel but Luz. Gen.28.19. Gen.13.1. Abraham went vp out of Ægypt—towards the South, not in reſpect of AEgypt, but of that place wherin Moſes was. 1.Pet.3.19. Chriſt in his Spirit

---

[g] They inlarge the ſenſe.

[h] It is when the contrarie to that which was ſpoken is meant, it is vſed in flouting ſometimes.

preached to them that are in priſon. They are ſaid to be in priſon in regard of the time, in which Peter wrote this Epiſtle, & not of that wherein Noah liued. Pſal. 105. 15. Touch not mine annointed. Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob are ſaid to be annointed in reſpect of the manner and faſhion of the time wherein Dauid liued. For they had no externall annointing.

2 Allegories are to bee expounded according to the ſcope or intent of the place. So Chryſoſtome ſaith vpon the 8. of Matth. Parables muſt not bee expounded according to the letter, leſt many abſurdities doe follow. Auguſt. vpon the 8. Pſalme ſpeaketh on this ſort: In euery allegorie this rule is to be retained, that that be conſidered according to the purpoſe of the preſent place, which is there ſpoken of vnder a ſimilitude.

3 Places and perſons in the Scriptures haue very often two names: Gideon was called Ierubbaal, Iudg 6.32. and alſo Ierubeſheth, 2. Sam. 11.21. Abimelech, 1. Sam. 21.3. and Abiathar, Mark. 2.26. Salomon, 1. Sam. 12.24. and Iedidiah, 25. Zimri, 1. Chro. 2.6. and Zabdi, Ioſh. 7.1. Hazariah, 2. Chro. 22.6. and Ahaziah, 1. Chro. 3.11. and Iehoachaz, 2. Chro. 21.17. Iohanan, 1. Chro. 3.15. and Iehoachaz, 2. King. 23.30. and alſo Shallum, Ier. 22. 11. Iehoiachin, 2. King. 24. 6. and Iechoniah, 1. Chro. 3.16. and Coniah, Ier. 22.24. Mephiboſheth, 2. Sam. 4 and Mirribbaal, 1. Chro. 8.34. Abinadab, 1. Chro. 10.2. and Iſhui, 1. Sam. 14. 49. Eliachim and Iachim, 2. King 23.24. Ozias and Azarias, 2. King. 15.1. 2. Chro. 26.1. Heſter, Ediſſa, Heſt. 2.7. Simon, Peter, Ioh. 1.42. and Cephas, and Bariona: Ioſes, and Barnabas, Act. 4 36. Saul and Paul, Act. 13. 6. 8. Matthew and Leui, Hieruſalem is called Iebus and Salem.

Moreouer, the name, which is indeed one, receiueth many times changes and differences. As Salmon, Ruth. 4.21. is called Salma, 1. Chro. 2.11. Abigal. 2. Sam. 17.25. is named Abigail, 1. Chro. 2.16. Tiglath-pilezer, 2. King. 15.29. is tearmed Tilgath-pilnezer, 1. Chro. 5.6. Aram, Math. 1.3. is the ſame with Ram, 1. Chro. 2.9.

Againe, on the contrarie, diſtinct perſons, and diuers places haue one name: Mat. 1. 11. Ioſiah begat Iechoniah and his brethren about the time they were carried away into Babylon. 12. And after they were carried away into Babylon Iechoniah begat Salathiel. Here now, becauſe Iechoniah, doth both finiſh the * ſecond teſſeradecade, and begin the third, one of them wil be wanting to one of thoſe teſſeradecads, vnleſſe wee ſay that there were two Iechoniaſes both father and ſonne. Succoth is a name of three places. The firſt in AEgypt, Exod. 12. 37. The ſecond in the tribe of Gad, Ioſh. 13. 27. The third in the tribe of Manaſſes, 1. King. 7.46.

* That is, the ſecond fourteenth generatiō, mentioned in Mat. 1.17. in which place three fourteene generations are ſet downe.

4 In ſacred accounts, by reaſon of the wickedneſſe of the Prince, either his name, or the number of yeares, in which hee reigned wickedly, are omitted and left out, 1. Sam. 23.1. Saul reigned two yeares ouer Iſrael; that is, lawfully, or as Lyra ſpeaketh, * rightly; but otherwaies he reigned longer. Matth. 1. 8. Ioram begat Ozias. Here three are left out for their wickedneſſe; to wit, Ahaziah, Ioas, and Amaziah.

* De iure, according to law or equitie.

5 The time ſpoken of is taken either * compleatly, or vncompleatly: and the parts thereof are vnderſtood either incluſiuely or excluſiuely: As, 1. King. 15.9. And in the twentieth yeare of Ieroboam Aſa raigned ouer Iudah.

* That is, as fully finiſhed, or as but in the finiſhing.

1. King. 15. 25.	1. King. 15. 28.
Nadab the ſonne of Ieroboam [beganne to reigne ouer Iſrael the ſecond yeare] of Aſa King of Iudah: and reigned ouer Iſrael [two yeares.]	Euen in the third yeare of Aſa king of Iudah] did Baaſha ſlay Nadab, and reigned in his ſtead.

The Reconcilement.

Nadab, who began to reigne in the ſecond yeare of Aſa might reigne 2. yeares, although Baaſha ſucceeded him in the third yeare of Aſa; becauſe the laſt yeares of the Kings of Iſrael and Iudah are not fully expired, but ſome of them (as in this place) doe ſcarcely containe moneths in them: the reſt of the yeares beeing put compleatly.

Math. 17. 1.	Luk. 9. 28.
And the ſixt day after Ieſus tooke Peter, and Iames, and Iohn his brother, and brought them vp vnto an high mountaine.	And it came to paſſe about an eight daies after, that hauing taken to him Peter, & Iames, and Iohn, he went vp into a mountaine.

The Reconcilement.

Matthew puts excluſiuely onely the daies that were betweene, which were altogether accompliſhed, Luke puts in the reckening the two outtermoſt daies alſo.

The parts of ſome are put ſometimes incluſiuely, and ſometimes excluſiuely. 1. That the number may bee more perfect. Auguſt. ſaith, qu. 47. on Exod. In a perfect number oftentimes that, which is either wanting or abounding, is not counted. Iud. 11. 26. Iſrael dwelt in Heſhbon and Aroer and their townes three hundred yeares. Theſe yeares are to bee reckoned from the departure of the Iſraelites out of AEgypt, after this manner. The time of their abode in the wilderneſſe was 40. yeares. The time of the gouernment of Ioſhua was 17. yeares of Othoniel, 40. yeares. Iudg. 3. 11. Of Ehud and Samgar, 80. yeares. Iudg. 3. 30. of Barak, 40. yeares. Iudg. 5. 31. of Gideon, 40. yeares. Iudg. 8. 28. of Abimelech, 3. yeares. Iudg. 9. 22. of Tolah, 23. yeares, Iudg. 10. 2. of Iair, 22. yeares. Iudg. 10. 3. The whole in all is, 305. yeares. Here therefore the fiue odde yeares are not named, it may bee becauſe this euen number of three hundred is fitter both for the computation and the ſpeech. 2. For breuity ſake, Iudg. 20.46. There were ſlaine of the Beniamites twenty fiue thouſand. Here an hundred are not counted, as appeareth, verſ. 35. The Iſraelites ſlew that day of the tribe of Beniamin, fiue and twenty thouſand and a hundred men.

5. The King beeing hindred either with forraine warre, or with olde age, or by reaſon of ſome diſeaſe, doth whiles he yet liueth appoint his ſonne to bee King in his ſtead: and therefore with the computations of the yeares of father and ſonne raigning at one time, the yeares of the raigne are reckoned ſometimes ioyntly, and ſometimes apart.

2.King.1.17.	2.King.3.1.
Ahaziah died, and Iehoram raigned in his ſtead [in the ſecond yeare of Iehoram the ſonne of Iehoſaphat] King of Iudah.	Iehoram the ſonne of Ahab raigned in the [eighteenth yeare of Iehoſaphat. Chap. 8.16. In the [fift yeare of Ioram the ſonne of Ahab] Iehoram the ſonne of Iehoſaphat, began to raigne, & raigned eight yeares.

The Reconciliation.

Iehoſaphat determining in the 17. yeare of his raigne, to help King Ahab againſt the Syrians, appointeth his ſonne Ioram to be Viceroy. In the eighteenth yere of his own reigne, & in the ſecond of his ſonnes, Ioram the ſonne of Ahab raigned. Afterwards in the fift yeare of this Ioram the ſonne of Ahab, Iehoſaphat beeing ſtrucken in age, confirmeth his kingdome to his ſonne Ioram: who is ſaid to haue reigned eight yeares, foure whileſt his father was aliue, and foure alone by himſelfe, after the death of his father.

2.King.15.30.	2.King.15.33.
And Hoſhea the ſonne of Elah wrought treaſon againſt Pekah the ſonne of Remaliah, and ſmote him, and ſlew him, and reigned in his roome [in the 20. yeare of Iotham] the ſonne of Vzziah.	Iotham the ſonne of Vzziah was 25. yeares olde when he beganne to raigne [and hee raigned 16. yeares] in Ieruſalem.

The Reconciliation.

Hee raigned 16. yeares alone after his fathers death: he raigned alſo 20. with his father: for hee gouerned the kingdome for his father, who was diſeaſed with leproſie.

6. The Eaſt-countrey men do diuerſly diſtinguiſh their artificiall day, both into 12. equall houres (commonly called planetary houres) and into quadrants, hauing their name of the houre going next before. Beroald. Chronol.

The Eaſterne mens accounting:

$\overbrace{1.2.3.}^{1}\overbrace{4.5.6.}^{3}\overbrace{7.8.9.}^{6}\overbrace{10.11.12.}^{9}$

The manner of our accounting: 7.8.9.10.11.12. 1.2.3.4.5.6.

Mar. 15.25.	Ioh. 19.14.
And it was [the 3. houre] when they crucified him.	And it was the preparation of the Paſſeouer, [and about the 6. houre,] and hee ſaid vnto the Iewes, Beholde your King.

The Reconciliation.

The oppoſition is not in the ſame reſpect, therefore diſtinguiſh the manner of accompting the houres of the day, and then it will appeare that Chriſt might bee crucified at the third houre, and about the ſixt.

7. The leſſer number is to be counted vnder the greater and the more complete. Iud. 3.11. The land had reſt forty yeares when Othniel died. Vnder this number are all the yeares comprehended from the death of Ioſhua, to the death of Othniel; as alſo the 8. yeares of ſeruitude vnder the Syrians. Iudg. 3.30. The land had reſt 80. yeares. Here from the death of Othniel are numbred alſo the yeares of Ehud & Samgar. For Ehud could not be Iudge 80. yeares: for when theſe yeares are expired, the whole time of man is run out. The like we meete with, Iud. 5.31. and 8.28. and 9.22. and 10.2,3. and 11.26. Where, in the three hundred yeares are included the forty yeares of their tarrying in the deſert.

8. Filiation or Sonſhip, is either naturall, or legall. Naturall is by generation: legall is by adoption, teſtified by education and bringing vp, and by ſucceſſion in the kingdome, & in [a] Leuiration by the law of redemption.

2.Sam.21.8.	1.Sam.18.19.
And the King tooke the fiue ſonnes of Michal the daughter of Saul, whom ſhee bare to Adriel the ſonne of Barzilli the Meholathite.	When Merab Sauls daughter ſhould haue beene giuen to Dauid, ſhee was giuen vnto Adriel a Meholathite to wife.

The Reconciliation.

They are the naturall ſonnes of Merab, and the legall ſonnes of Michal, and therefore (to beare) doth onely ſignifie to bring vp, to feede and to nouriſh. For thus the ſonnes of Machir, Gen. 50.23. are ſaid to be borne (nati) vpon Ioſephs knees, that is, brought vp.

Mat. 1.12.	Luk. 3.27.
Iechonias begat Salathiel.	Salathiel the ſonne of Neri.

[a] To vnderſtand this, reade Deu. 25.5.

The Reconciliation.

Salathiel was the ſonne of Neri by nature: and the ſonne of Iechonias legally in regard of ſucceſsion in the ſame kingdome. After this manner Zedekias is the brother of Iechonias or Iehoiakin. 2. Chron. 36. 10. and vncle, 2. King. 14. 17. and ſonne, 1. Chron. 3. 16. His brother by generation, and his ſonne by the right of ſucceſsion. On this manner Matthew & Luke are reconciled in the genealogie of Chriſt. For, the one followes the naturall order, as Luke, and the other the legall.

Conſect. 5. When the naturall ſenſe of the place (propounded) is giuen by the fore-ſaid helpes, a ſignification of a word ſignifying diuers things (πολύσημον) ſhall be giuen, which is fitting to the place.

Thus the ſignifications of Vau the prefixe or copulatiue are (as Bymerus hath obſerued in his Hebrew Grammer) diſtinguiſhed according to the diuerſity of the places. It ſignifieth, I. At. Iſa. 9. 10. Gen. 42. 10. II. Quoniam, Iſa. 53. 11. III. Quum, Iſa. 9. 11. Pſalm. 73. 6. IV. id eſt, Iſa. 9. 14. 1. Sam. 17. 40. V. Idcirco, Prou. 1. 18. VI. Sicut, Pſal. 18. 39. Iſa. 24. 20. VII. Sic etiam, Iſa. 10. 10. & 51. 12. VIII. Et tamen, 2. Chron. 5. 2. Neh. 9. 19. IX. Atqui, Pſal. 73. & 89. 6. X. Poſteà tunc, Iſa. 16. 12. Gen. 3. 5. XI. Autem, Iſa. 1. 21. Neh. 4. 9. XII. Etiam, 2. Reg. 3. 8. XIII. Nam, Iſa. 37. 11. XIIII. [illegible] ſic, Pſal. 125. 2. Dan. 7. 1. XV. Qui, quæ, quod, Iſa. 43. 8. XVI. Quum, Pſal. 90. 17. XVII. Vt, Iſa. 49. 6. XVIII. Quamuis, Ier. 31. 39. XIX. Inquam, Iſa. 55. 1. XX. Ideo, Pſal. 105. 12. XXI. Atque ita, Prou. 3. 4. XXII. Et vt, Iſa. 58. 5. 6. XXIII. Quoniam ideo, Pſal. 109. 17. XXIV. Ideo, Pſal. 109. 18. XXV. Nec ſolum, Pſal. 72. 16. XXVI. Verum, Pſal. 73. 23. XXVII. Etiamſi, Iob 19. 26. XXVIII. [illegible], Pſal. 139. 8. XXIX. Quid, id eſt, Pſalm. 139. 14. XXX. Et vero, Pſal. 139. 17. XXXI. Tum, Neh. 12. 17. XXXII. Similiter, Ier. 50. 43. XXXIII. Si ſin, 2. Reg. 5. 17. XXXIV. Nec, Iſa. 41. 8. XXXV. Hoc igitur, Prou. 17. 13. XXXVI. Vna cum, Prou. 8. 18. XXXVII. Quid, Gen. 47. 6.

These aduerbs and coniunctions I do of purpoſe not tranſlate, as beeing fitteſt in Latine.

Thus it appeareth that (Berach) ſignifieth contrary things, as to bleſſe and to curſe, Iob 1. 5. 1. King. 21. 10. and 11. 2. 9.

To conclude, hence it is euident, that (Huchal) Gen. 4. 26. doth not ſignifie Prophaned, but Began. Reaſon 1. When Chalal ſignifieth to prophane, it ought to bee ioyned with a nowne, and to gouerne it; but here it doth immediately follow Kara a verb infinitiue. Reaſon 2. Amongſt many cauſes of the Deluge, Moſes reckoneth not the prophanation of Gods worſhip, which notwithſtanding ſhould haue beene chiefly noted, if ſo be that it had raigned among the people of God.

Conſect. 6. If a word giuen in the Bible, whether it be an Hebrew word or a Greeke, if firſt it doe agree with Grammaticall conſtruction, and with other approued copies: if alſo it doe agree in reſpect of the ſenſe with the circumſtances and ſcope of the place, & with the analogie of faith, it is proper and naturall.

I lay downe this rule, not becauſe I thinke that the Hebrew and Greeke text is in all copies corrupted, through the malice of the Iewes, as Lindane doth wickedly calumniate, and after him all Papiſts, but that the diuers readings, which in ſome places haue crept in, either by reaſon of the vnskilfulneſſe, or negligence and ouer-ſight of the Notaries, might bee ſkanned and determined. As, Pſal. 22. 16. In ordinary copies the words run thus, Caari, that is, As a Lion my hands and my feete. In other copies the reading is diuers, after this manner: Caru, They haue digged (or pierced) my hands and my feete. Now the rule propounded, doth teach that this latter reading is to be followed. For it agreeth, 1. with Grammaticall conſtruction: 2. with the circumſtances of the Pſalme: 3. with ſome ancient copies: yea euẽ by the teſtimony of the Iewes.

CHAP. VI.

Of the right diuiding of the word.

Hitherto wee haue ſpoken of Interpreting the word. We are now to come to ſpeake of the * right cutting, or the right diuiding of it.

Right cutting of the word is that, whereby the word is made fit to edifie the people of God. 2. Tim. 2. 15. *Studie to ſhew thy ſelfe approoued vnto God, a workman that need not to be aſhamed, diuiding (or * cutting) the word of truth aright.* It is a metaphor taken it may be from the Leuites, who might not cut the members of the ſacrifices without due conſideration. Iſa. 50. 4. The Lord hath giuen mee the tongue of the learned, that I might know to miniſter a word in due ſeaſon to him that is wearie. The parts thereof are two: Reſolution or partition, and Application.

* Reſolution is that, whereby the place propounded is, as a weauers web, reſolued (or vntwiſted and vnlooſed) into ſundrie doctrines. Act. 18. 28. Mightily hee confuted the Iewes, with great vehemencie publikely ſhewing by Scriptures, that Ieſus was that Chriſt.

Reſolution is either Notation, or Collection.

Notation is, when as the doctrine is expreſſed in the place propounded. Rom. 3. 9. Wee haue already prooued that all, both Iewes and Gentiles, are vnder ſinne. 10. As it is written, There is none righteous, no not one. 11. There is none

* ὀρθοτομία.

* ὀρθοτομοῦντα.

* διάλυσις.

that vnderſtandeth, none that ſeeketh God. 12. All are gone out of the way: they haue beene made altogether vnprofitable: there is none that doth good, no not one. Act. 2.24. Whome God hath raiſed vp, and looſed the ſorrowes of death, becauſe it was impoſſible that he ſhould be held of it. 25. For Dauid ſaith concerning him, I beheld the Lord alwaies before me: for he is at my right hand, that I ſhould not be ſhaken. 26. Therefore did mine heart reioyce, and my tongue was glad, and moreouer alſo my fleſh ſhall reſt in hope. 27. Becauſe thou wilt not leaue my ſoule with the dead, neither wilt ſuffer thine holy one to ſee corruption.

Collection is, when the doctrine not expreſſed is ſoundly gathered out of the text. This is done by the helpe of the nine arguments, that is, of the cauſes, effects, ſubiects, adiuncts, diſſentanies, comparatiues, names, diſtribution, and definition. For example:

A place.	The collection.
Iohn 10. 34. Ieſus anſwered them, Is it not written in your law, I ſaid ye are Gods?	From the compariſon of the leſſer. 35. If he called them Gods, vnto whome the word of God was giuen, and the Scripture cannot be broken: 36. Say yee of mee, whome the Father hath ſanctified and ſent into the world, thou blaſphemeſt, becauſe I ſaid I am the Sonne of God?
A place.	The collection from the leſſer.
1.Cor.9.9. For it is written in the law of Moſes, thou ſhalt not muzzle the mouth of the oxe, that treadeth out the corne. What, hath God care of oxen?	Verſ.4. Haue we not power to eate, and to drinke?
A place.	The collection from the contrary.
Gal.3.10. For ſo many as are of the workes of the law, are vnder a curſe: for it is written, Curſed is euery one that continueth not in all things which are in the booke of the law to doe thẽ. Verſ. 11. For the iuſt ſhall liue by faith.	Verſ. 9. Therefore thoſe which are of faith are bleſſed with faithfull Abraham. Verſ. 11. And that no man is iuſtified by the law before God, it is euident.
A place.	A collection from the Adiunct.
Heb.8.8. For in rebuking them he ſaith, Behold, the daies will come ſaith the Lord, when I ſhal make with the houſe of Iſrael, & the houſe of Iudah, a new teſtament.	Heb. 8.13. In that he ſaith a new teſtamẽt, hee hath diſanulled the olde: now that which is diſanulled and waxed olde, is ready to vaniſh away.

In gathering of doctrines wee muſt ſpecially remember that an example in his owne kinde, that is, an Ethique, Oeconomique, Politique, Ordinary, and Extraordinary example, hath the vertue of a generall rule in Ethique, Oeconomique, Politique, Ordinary, and Extraordinary matters. The examples of the Fathers are patterns for vs, 1 Cor. 10. 11. And vvhatſoeuer is vvritten, is vvritten for our learning. And it is a Principle in Logicke, that the [a] Genus is actually in all the * ſpecies: and a rule in the Optikes, that the generall ſpecies of things, are perceiued before the particular.

A place.	The collection from the Species.
Rom. 9.7. Neither are they all children, becauſe they are the ſeede of Abraham: but in Iſaac ſhall thy ſeede bee called. 10. Neither he onely felt this, but alſo Rebecca, when ſhee had conceiued by one, euen by our father Iſaac.	Verſ.8. That is, they vvhich are the children of the fleſh, are not the children of God: but the children of the promiſe are counted for the ſeed.
Rom. 4. 18. Which Abraham againſt hope, &c. 21. Beeing fully aſſured, that he vvhich had promiſed, vvas alſo able to doe it. 22. And therefore it vvas imputed to him for righteouſneſſe.	Rom. 4. 23. Novv it is not vvritten for him onely, that it vvas imputed to him for righteouſneſſe. 24. But for vs alſo, to vvhom it ſhall be imputed for righteouſneſſe, which beleeue in him, that raiſed vp Ieſus our Lord from the dead.

That alſo I adde, that collections ought to bee right and ſound, that is to ſay, deriued from the genuine and proper meaning of the Scripture: If otherwiſe, wee ſhall draw [b] any doctrine frō any place. Prou. 8.22. the Greek tranſlation of the Seuenty Interpreters is (κύριος ἔκτισέ με,) The Lord hath created me, it is the ſpeech of Wiſedome, that is, of Chriſt ſpeaking of himſelfe. Whence the Arrians collect very wickedly, that the Sonne was created. But in the Hebrew it is (Iehoua kanani,) The Lord hath poſſeſſed me. Now the Father poſſeſſeth the Sonne, becauſe hee begat him from eternity, and becauſe the Father is in the Sonne, & the Sonne in the Father. And ſo, Gen. 4. 1. When a Sonne was borne vnto Adam, hee ſaith, I haue poſſeſſed a man from the Lord. The error perhaps came of this, that * Ectiſe was either through ignorance, or malice, put for * Ecteſe. Auguſtine alſo vpon the tenth verſe of the 39. Pſalme, readeth on this wiſe: I held my peace becauſe thou haſt made mee, feciſti me. From whence he doth wittily gather, that it is a maruaile that hee ſhould holde his tongue, that hath receiued a mouth to ſpeake: whereas (me) is neither in the Hebrew, nor in the Greeke.

[a] Or generals.

* Or ſpecials and particulars of that kinde or generall.

[b] Ad verbum, any thing out of any thing, quidlibet è quolibet.

* ἔκτισε. he hath created.

* ἔκτησε. he hath poſſeſſed.

And vpon the 72. Pſalme, and 14. verſe, hee diſputeth much about vſuries, and prooueth that vſuries are ſins: whereas there is no ſuch matter in that text. For the words are, He ſhall deliuer their ſoule from deceit and violence, ſo precious is their blood in his eyes.

It ſhall be lawful alſo to gather Allegories: for they are arguments taken from things that are like, and Paul in his teaching vſeth them often, 1. Cor. 9.9. But they are to be vſed with theſe cautions: 1. Let them be vſed ſparingly and ſoberly. 2. Let them not bee farre fetcht, but fitting to the matter in hand. 3. They muſt be quickly diſpatcht. 4 They are to be vſed for inſtruction of the life, and not to prooue any point of faith.

Any point of doctrine collected by iuſt conſequence is * ſimply of it ſelfe to bee beleeued, and doth * demonſtrate. Act. 18. 24. And a certaine Iew, named Apollos, borne at Alexandria, came to Epheſus, an eloquent man & mighty (δυνατὸς) in the Scriptures. 28. For mightily hee confuted the Iewes publikely with great vehemencie, demonſtrating (ἐπιδεικνὺς) by the Scriptures that Ieſus was the Chriſt. From hence it followeth:

Firſt, that humane teſtimonies, whether of the Philoſophers, or of the Fathers, are not to be alleadged. Auguſtine vpon the 66. Pſalm. ſaith thus: If I ſpeake, let no man heare: if Chriſt ſpeake, woe bee to him that doth not heare. So againe hee ſaith, (De vnit. Eccleſiæ, Let vs not heare, Theſe things I ſay. Theſe things he ſaith: but let vs heare, Theſe things the Lord ſaith. Yet with this exception, Vnleſſe they conuince the conſcience of the hearer. Thus Paul alleadged the teſtimony of Aratus, Act. 17. 28. For by him we liue, and moue and haue our beeing, as one of your owne Poets hath ſaid; For wee are all his progeny (γένος.) 29. Forasmuch then, as we are the progeny of God, &c. As alſo a ſaying of Menander, 1. Cor. 15. 33. *Be not deceiued, euill * conuerſations corrupt good manners.* And of Epimenides, Tit. 1. 12. As one of their Prophets hath ſaid, the Cretians are alwaies liers, euill beaſts, and ſlowbellies. And then alſo it muſt be done ſparingly, and with leauing out the name of the prophane Writer.

Secondly, that a few teſtimonies of Scripture are to bee vſed for the proofe of the doctrine: and that ſometimes there is neede of none.

Laſtly, hence it followes, that the Prophets deliuering their doctrine thus, are not to be reprooued of other Prophets. 1. Cor. 14. 32. And the ſpirits of the Prophets are ſubiect vnto the Prophets. Yet afterwards he addeth, verſ. 37. If any one ſeeme to be a Prophet, or ſpirituall, let him acknowledge, that thoſe things which I write vnto you, are the commandements of God.

CHAP. VII.

Of the waies how to vſe and apply doctrines.

A*Pplication* is that, whereby the doctrine rightly collected, is diuerſly fitted according as place, time, and perſon doe require. Ezech. 34. 15. I will feede my ſheepe, and bring them to their reſt, ſaith the Lord. 16. I will ſeeke that which is loſt, and bring againe that which was driuen away, and will binde vp that which was broken, and will ſtrengthen the ſicke. Iud. 22. And hauing compaſſion of ſome in putting difference. 23. And ſaue others with terror, pulling them out of the flame.

The foundation of application is, to know whether the place propounded be a ſentence of the Law, or of the Goſpel. For when the word is preached, there is one operation of the Law, and another of the Goſpel. For the Law is thus farre forth effectuall, as to declare vnto vs the diſeaſe of ſinne, and by accident to exaſperate and ſtirre it vp: but it affoards no remedy. Now the Goſpell, as it teacheth what is to be done: ſo it hath alſo the efficacy of the holy Ghoſt adioyned with it, by whom beeing regenerated, we haue ſtrength both to beleeue the Goſpell, and to performe thoſe things which it commandeth. The Law therefore is the firſt in the order of teaching: and the Goſpel ſecond.

It is a ſentence of the Law, which ſpeaketh of Perfect inherent righteouſnes, of eternall life giuen through the workes of the Law, of the contrary ſinnes, and of the curſe that is due vnto them. Galat. 3. 10. So many as are of the workes of the Law, are vnder the curſe; for it is written, curſed is he whoſoeuer abideth not in all things, which are written in the booke of the Law to doe them. Matth. 3. 7. O generation of Vipers, who hath fore-warned you to flee from the anger to come? 10. And now alſo is the axe put to the roote of the trees: therefore euery tree which bringeth not forth good fruit, is cut off (ἐκκόπτεται) and caſt into the fire.

A ſentence of the Goſpell is that, which ſpeaketh of Chriſt & his benefits, and of faith beeing fruitfull in good workes: as, Ioh. 3. 16. So God loued the world, that he gaue his onely begotten Sonne, that whoſoeuer beleeueth in him, ſhould not periſh, but haue euerlaſting life.

Hence it is, that many ſentences, which ſeeme to belong to the Law, are by reaſon of Chriſt, to bee vnderſtood not legally (νομικῶς) but with the [a] qualification of the Goſpell. Luk. 11. 28. Bleſſed are thoſe which heare the word of God, and keepe it. Deut. 30. 11. 14. This commandement which I command thee this day, is not hidden, nor ſet a farre off, but it is by thee in thy mouth, and in thy heart. This ſentence which is legall in Moſes, is euangelicall in Paul. Rom. 10. 8. Pſalme 119. 1. Bleſſed are thoſe that are perfect in the way, who walke in the Law of Iehouah. 2. Bleſſed are they that keepe his teſtimonies, and ſeeke him with their whole heart. Ioh. 14. 21. Hee that hath my commandements, and keepeth them, it is he that loues me: he that loues me, ſhall be loued of my Father. 23. If any man do loue me, he will keep my word: and my Father doth loue him, and we will come vnto him, and wee will dwell with him. Gen. 6. 9. Noah was a iuſt and vpright

* αὐτόπιστος.

* ἀποδεικτικῶς.

* ὁμιλίαι.

[a] Euangelicè.

[illegible] Noah walked with God: continually. Gen. 17.1. I am the strong God omnipotent, walke alway before me, and be upright.

[illegible]

The waies of Application are chiefly seuen according to the diuerse condition of men and people, which is seuenfolde.

I. Vnbeleeuers, who are both ignorant and vnteachable.

These men in the first place are to bee prepared to receiue the doctrine of the word. 2. Chron. 17. Iehosaphat sent Leuites throughout the cities of Iudah, to teach the people, and to bring them from idols.

This preparation is to bee made partly by disputing or reasoning with them; that thou maist throughly discerne their manners and disposition, and partly by reprouing in them some notorious sinne, that being pricked in heart and terrified, they may become teachable. Act. 17.17. He disputed in the Synagogue with the Iewes, and with them that were religious, and in the market-place with whomsoeuer he met. Act. 9.3. Now as he iourneyed it came to passe, that as he was come neere to Damascus, suddenly there shined round about him a light from heauen. 4. And hee fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying to him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou mee? 5. And hee said, Who art thou Lord? And the Lord answered, I am Iesus of Nazareth, whome thou doest persecute: it is hard for thee to kicke against the prickes. Act. 16. vers. 27. Then the keeper of the prison awoke out of his sleepe: and when he saw the prison dores open, he drew out his sword, and would haue killed himselfe, supposing the prisoners had beene fled. 28. Then Paul cried with a loud voice, saying, Do thy selfe no harme: for we are all here. 29. Then hee called for a light, and leaped in, and came trembling, and fell downe before Paul and Silas. 30. And brought them out, and said, Sirs, what must I doe to be saued? 31. And they said, Beleeue in the Lord Iesus, and thou shalt be saued, and thine housholde. Act. 17. *22. And Paul stood in the midst of Mars streete, and said, Ye men of Athens, I see that in all things ye are too superstitious. 23. For as I passed by and beheld your deuotions, I found an altar, wherein was written, Vnto the vnknowne God: whome ye then ignorantly worship, him shew I vnto you. 24. God that made the world, and all things in it, seeing that he is the Lord of heauen & earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands.

* δεισιδαιμονεστέρους.

When now there is hope that they are become teachable and prepared, the doctrine of Gods word is to be declared to them generally in some common tearmes, or ordinary points. Act. 17.30. And the time of this ignorance God regardeth not, but now he commandeth (παραγγέλλει) all men euery where to repent. 31. Because he hath appointed a day in which he will iudge the world in righteousnesse by that man whom he hath appointed, whereof he hath assured all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead.

If they shall approoue this doctrine, then it is to bee opened to them distinctly, and in euery particular; but if they shall remaine vnteachable, without hope of winning them, they are to be left. Matth. 7.6. Giue not that which is holy vnto dogges, neither cast your pearles before swine, lest they tread them vnder their feet, and turning againe all to rend you. Prou. 9.8. Reproue not a scorner, lest hee hate thee. Act. 19.9. But when certaine men were hardened, and would not obey, speaking euill of the way of the Lord before the multitude, he departed from them, and separated the Disciples from them.

II. Some are teachable, but yet ignorant.

To these men the Catechisme must be deliuered. Act. 18.25. Apollos was catechized (κατηχημένος) in the way of the Lord. And he spake feruently in the spirit, and taught diligently the things of the Lord, knowing onely the baptisme of Iohn. 26. And hee beganne to speake boldly in the Synagogue. Whome when Aquila and Priscilla had heard, they tooke him vnto them, and expounded vnto him the way of God more perfectly. Luk. 1.4. That thou maiest know the the truth of those things, whereof thou hast beene catechized (κατηχήθης) or instructed.

The Catechisme is the doctrine of the foundation of Christian religion, briefly propounded for the helpe of the vnderstanding and memory, in questions and answers made by the liuely voice.

The matter therefore of the Catechisme is the foundation of religion.

The foundation is a certaine summe of the principles of Christianity. Heb. 5.12. For when as concerning the time ye ought to bee teachers, yet haue ye neede againe that wee teach you the first principles of the words of God.

A principle is that which doth directly and immediately serue both for the saluation of men, and for the glory of God, which being also denied and ouer-turned, no saluation can be hoped for.

There are especially sixe principles: Repentance, Faith, Baptisme, that is, the Sacraments, Imposition of hands, that is, the ministery of the word by a Synecdoche, the resurrection, and the last iudgement, Heb. 6.1,2,3.

The forme of the Catechisme is, to handle the elements or grounds plainely, by asking and answering. 1. Pet. 3.21. *To the which also the figure that now saueth vs, euen baptisme agreeth (not the putting away of the filthines of the flesh, but the stipulation or interrogation of a good conscience.) Act. 8.37. What doth let me to be baptized? And Philip said vnto him, If thou beleeuest with all thine heart thou maist. Then he answered, saying, I beleeue that Iesus Christ is the Sonne of God. Tertul. de resur. car. saith: The soule is not purged with washing, but with answering.

* ἐπερώτημα.

And here wee must holde a difference betweene milke and strong meate, which are the same indeed, but do differ in the manner and fashion of deliuering.

Milke is a certaine briefe, plaine and generall explication of the principles of the faith: as when a man doth teach that wee must beleeue one God, and three persons, Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt; and that we muſt rely onely vpon the grace of God in Chriſt, and that wee ought to beleeue the remiſſion of ſinnes; and when wee are taught that, wee ought to repent, to abſtaine from euill, and to doe that which is good.

Strong meate is a ſpeciall, copious, luculent and cleare handling of the doctrine of faith: as when the condition of man before the fall, his fall, originall and actuall ſinne, mans guiltineſſe, free-will, the myſteries of the Trinity, the two natures of Chriſt, the perſonall vnion, the office of Chriſt, the imputation of righteouſneſſe, faith, grace, and the vſe of the law, are deliuered out of the word of God diſtinctly and exactly.

B Moreouer, milke muſt be ſet before babes, that is, thoſe that are rude or weake in knowledge: ſtrong meate muſt bee giuen to ſuch as are of ripe yeares, that is, to them that are better inſtructed. 1. Cor. 3. 1. Moreouer, brethren, I could not ſpeake vnto you as to ſpirituall: but I haue ſpoken vnto you as to carnall, that is, to infants in Chriſt. 2. I haue fed you with milke, and not with meate, Heb. 5. 13.

III. Some haue knowledge, but are not as yet humbled.

In ſuch the foundation of repentance ought to bee ſtirred vp, that is to ſay, a certaine ſorrow which is according to God. 1. Cor. 7. 8. For though I made you ſory with a letter, I repent not, though I did repent: for I perceiue that the ſame Epiſtle made you ſory, though it C were but for a ſeaſon. 9. I now reioyce, not that ye were ſory, but that ye ſorrowed to repentance: for ye ſorrowed according to God (κατὰ Θεὸν,) ſo that in nothing ye were hurt by vs. 10. For ſorrow, which is according to God (or godly) cauſeth repentance vnto ſaluation not to bee repented of: but worldly ſorrow cauſeth death.

Sorrow according to God, is a griefe for ſinne, euen becauſe it is ſinne.

To the ſtirring vp of this affection, in the firſt place a man muſt vſe the miniſtery of the Law which may beget contrition of heart, or the horrors of conſcience, which though it be not a thing wholeſome and profitable of it owne nature, yet is it a remedy neceſſarie for the ſubduing of a ſinners ſtubborneſſe, D and for the preparing of his mind to become teachable.

Now, that this legall ſorrow may bee wrought, it is fit to vſe ſome choice parcell of the Law, which may reprooue ſome one notable ſinne in men that are not as yet humbled. For ſorrow for, and repentanceᵃ euen of one ſinne, is for ſubſtance ([illegible]) ſorrow for and repentance of all. Act. 8. 22. Repent therefore of this thy wickedneſſe, and pray God, that if it be poſſible, the thought of thine heart may bee forgiuen thee. Act. 2. 23. Him haue ye taken by the hands of the wicked, being deliuered by the determinate counſell and foreknowledge of God, and haue crucified and ſlaine, Pſal. 32. 5.

Yea further, if any man beeing afflicted A with the croſſe, and with outward calamities haue onely a worldly ſorrow, that is, if hee mourne not for ſinne as it is ſinne, but for the puniſhment of ſinne; hee is not by and by to bee comforted, but firſt this ſorrow is to bee turned into that other ſorrow, which is ᵇ according to God: as is the counſell of Phyſitians in the like caſe. For if a mans life be in danger, by reaſon of blood guſhing out at his noſe: they command alſo that blood bee let out in his arme, or in ſome other place as the caſe requireth, that they might ſtay the courſe of the blood which ruſheth out at the noſtrils, that ſo they might ſaue his life, who was readie to yeeld vp the ghoſt.

B Then let the Goſpell be preached, in the preaching whereof, the holy Spirit worketh effectually vnto ſaluation. For whileſt he reneweth men, that they may begin to will and to worke thoſe things that are pleaſing to God, he doth truly and properly bring forth in them that ſorrow which is according to God, and repentance vnto ſaluation.

To the hard-hearted the Law muſt bee vrged, and the curſe of the law muſt bee denounced with threatning, together with the difficulty of obtaining deliuerance vntil they be pricked in their heart. Mat. 3. 7. *And when he ſaw many of the Phariſes, and of the Sadduces come to his baptiſme, he ſaid vnto them, O*ᵃ progeny of Vipers, who hath forewarned you to flee from C the wrath to come? Mat. 19. 16. Good Maſter, what ſhall I doe that I may haue eternall life? 17. And he ſaid vnto him,—If thou wilt enter into life, keepe the commandements. Mat. 23. 13 Woe vnto you Scribes and Phariſes, hypocrites, becauſe ye ſhut vp the kingdome of heauen before men: for ye your ſelues goe not in, neither ſuffer ye thoſe that are entring in (εἰσερχομένους,) to goe in, &c. v. 33. O Serpents, and progeny of Vipers, how ſhall ye eſcape the damnation of hell?

But when the beginning of compunction doth appeare, they are preſently to bee comforted with the Goſpell.

IV. Some are humbled.

Here wee muſt very diligently conſider whether their humiliation be compleate and D ſound, or but begun and but light or ſlight: leſt that hee or they, receiuing comfort ſooner then is meet, ſhould afterwards wax more hard, like yron, which being caſt into the furnace, becomes exceeding hard, after that it is once colde.

Let thy proceeding bee after this manner with thoſe, that are humbled in part. Let the Law bee propounded, yet ſo diſcreetly tempered with the Goſpell, that beeing terrified with their ſinnes, and with the meditation of Gods iudgement, they may together alſo at the ſame inſtant receiue ſolace by the Goſpel. Act. 8. 20. Then Peter ſaid vnto him, thy money periſh with thee, becauſe thou thinkeſt that the gift of God may be obtained by money. 21. Thou haſt neither part, nor fellowſhip in this buſineſſe, ᵃ Or, though but.

ᵇ Godly.

ᵃ [illegible]

for thine heart is not right in the ſight of God. 22. Repent therefore of this thy wickedneſſe, and pray God, that if it be poſſible, the cogitation of thine heart may be remitted. 23. For I ſee, that thou art in the gall of bitterneſſe, and in the bond of iniquity. Gen. 3. 9. And the Lord God cried vnto Adam, and ſaid vnto him, where art thou? And God ſaid, who hath ſhewed thee that thou art naked? What, haſt thou eaten of the fruit of that tree, of which I forbad thee to eate? 13. And the Lord God ſaid to the woman, what is this which thou haſt done? And the woman ſaid, this Serpent hath ſeduced me, and I haue eaten. 15. Moreouer, I will put enmitie betwixt thee and this woman, and likewiſe betweene thy ſeede and her ſeede: this ſhall breake thine head, and thou ſhalt bruiſe his heele. 2. Sam. 12. Nathan beeing ſent from God, by a parable which he doth propound, hee recalleth Dauid to the conſcience of his fact, and pronounceth pardon to him beeing penitent.

The doctrine of faith and repentance, and the comforts of the Goſpell ought to be promulged and tendred to thoſe that are fully humbled. Luk. 4. 18. The ſpirit of the Lord is vpon me, therefore hee hath annointed me to preach glad tidings to the poore: he hath ſent me to heale the contrite heart, to preach deliuerance to the captiues, and to the blind the recouerie of their ſight, and to ſet at libertie thoſe that were broken. Act. 2. 37. When they heard theſe things, they were pricked in heart, and ſaid vnto Peter, and the reſt of the Apoſtles, Men and brethren, what ſhall we doe? 38. And Peter ſaid vnto them: Repent, and be baptized euery one of you in the name of Ieſus Chriſt for the remiſſion of ſinnes. Matth. 9. 13. I came not to call the iuſt, but ſinners vnto repentance.

V. Some doe beleeue.

To theſe muſt bee propounded. 1. The Goſpel touching iuſtification, ſanctification, and perſeuerance. 2. The law without the curſe, whereby they may be taught to bring forth fruits of new obedience beſeeming repentance. Rom. 8. 1. There is no condemnation to thoſe that are in Chriſt Ieſus. 1. Tim. 1. 9. The law is not appointed for the righteous. Let the Epiſtle of Paul to the Romans bee the example. 3. Howſoeuer the curſe of the law is not to be vrged againſt the perſon that is righteous and holy in the ſight of God, yet it is to be vrged againſt the ſinnes of the perſon, which are remaining. And as a father doth oftentimes ſet his yron rods that are appointed for the ſeruants before the eyes of his ſonnes, that they may be frayed: ſo the meditation of the curſe is to bee ſtirred vp very often in the faithful themſelues, leſt they ſhould abuſe the mercie of God to licentious liuing, and that they may bee more fully humbled. For ſanctification is but in part: therefore that the remainders of ſinne may be aboliſhed, wee muſt alwaies beginne with the meditation of the law, and with the feeling of ſinne, & make an end in the Goſpell.

VI. Some are fallen.

Thoſe that are fallen are they, which doe in part fall from the ſtate of grace.

Falling is either in faith or in manners.

Falling in faith is either in the knowledge of the doctrine of the Goſpell, or in the apprehending of Chriſt.

Falling in knowledge is a declining into error, whether lighter or fundamentall.

Now vnto thoſe that fall thus, that doctrine which doth croſſe their error, is to bee demonſtrated and inculcated (or beaten vpon them) together with the doctrine of repentance, and that with a brotherly affection. Take for an example the Epiſtle of Paul to the Galatians. 2. Tim. 2. 25. Inſtructing them with meekneſſe that are (τοὺς ἀντιδιατιθεμένους) contrarily affected: if God at any time will giue them repentance that they may know the truth.

The fall which is in apprehending Chriſt, is deſperation.

For the reſtoring of thoſe that doe deſpaire, there are to be vſed a triall, and the remedie.

The triall or ſearch is either of the cauſe of the temptation, or of their eſtate.

The triall of the cauſe is made fitly by priuate confeſſion. Iam. 5. 17. Confeſſe your ſinnes one to another, and pray for one another, that ye may be healed. But leſt that confeſſion ſhould bee made a kind of racke or torture, it muſt be limited with theſe prouiſoes. 1. It ought to bee free, and not compelled: becauſe ſaluation depends not vpon it. 2. It muſt not bee of all ſinnes, but of thoſe onely which wring the conſcience, which vnleſſe they doe reueale, greater danger may hang ouer their heads. 3. Let it chiefly be made to Paſtours, yet ſo, as that wee muſt know that it may bee ſafely made to other faithfull men in the Church.

The triall of their eſtate is, whereby wee make diligent inquirie whether they bee vnder the law, or vnder grace.

That this may manifeſtly appeare, we muſt by asking of queſtions firſt draw out of them, whether they be diſpleaſed with themſelues, becauſe they haue diſpleaſed God, that is to ſay, whether they hate ſinne as it is ſinne: which is the foundation of repentance vnto ſaluation. Secondly, wee muſt demand of them, whether they haue or doe feele in their heart a deſire to bee reconciled with God, which is the ground of a liuely faith.

When Triall is made, the Remedie muſt bee applied vnto them out of the Goſpell, which is double. Firſt, ſome Euangelicall meditations are to be often inculcated and preſſed vpon them: as 1. That their ſinne is pardonable. 2. That the promiſes are generall in reſpect of beleeuers, and that they are indefinite in reſpect of particular men, and doe exclude no man. 3. That the will to beleeue is faith, Pſal. 145. 19. Reu. 21. 6. 4. That ſinne doth not aboliſh grace, but rather (God turning all things vnto the good of thoſe that are his) doth illuſtrate it. 5. That all the works of God are done by contrarie meanes. Secondly, they must be intreated to stirre vp in them in the very bitternesse of the temptation, their faith which hath lien in a swoune, and bin * couered (as it were with ashes) and that they would certainely set downe with themselues, that their sins are forgiuen them, & that it would please them to struggle manfully in prayer either alone or with others against carnall sense and humane hope. And that they may performe these things, they must be very earnestly beaten vpon, & those that are vnwilling must in a manner bee constrained. Psal. 130. 1. Out of the depths haue I called to thee, O Lord. 2. Lord listen vnto my voice: let thine eares attend to the voice of my prayers. Psal. 77. 1. My voice came to God when I prayed, my voice went to God, that he would turne his eare (vt aduertat aurem) vnto me. 2. In the day of my distresse I besought the Lord. Rom. 4. 18. Who (Abraham) against (παρ') hope beleeued vnder hope, that he should be the father of many nations.

A

* Sopitam fidem.

B

Now that these medicines may be of force, that ministeriall power of binding and loosing is to be vsed according to the forme prescribed in the word. 2. Sam. 12. 13. Then Dauid said to Nathan, I haue sinned against the Lord. Wherefore Nathan said to Dauid, God hath also forgiuen thy sinne: thou shalt not die. 2. Cor. 5. 20. Therefore we are Embassadours in the name of Christ, God as it were beseeching you by vs: We pray you in the name of Christ, that ye would bee reconciled to God. And if perhaps Melancholy trouble the minde, the helpe of the medicine must be in priuate sought for.

C

Falling in manners is, when any faithfull man falleth to the committing of some actuall sinne in life. As Noahs drunkennesse, Dauids adulterie, Peters deniall, &c.

To those that are fallen thus, forsomuch as grace remaining in respect of her vertue and habit may bee lost for a time in respect of sense and working; the law must be propounded beeing mixed with the Gospell: because a new act of sinne requires a new act (or worke) of faith and repentance. Isa. 1. 4. Ah, sinfull nation, a people laden with iniquitie, a seede of the wicked, corrupt children: they haue forsaken the Lord: they haue prouoked the holy one of Israel to anger, they are gone backward. 16. Wash you, make you cleane, take away the euill of your workes from before mine eyes, &c. 18. Come now, and let vs reason together, saith the Lord; though your sinnes were as crimson, they shall bee made white as snow: though they were red like scarlet, they shall bee as wooll.

Isa. 1. 1, 2, 3, 4.

D

VII. There is a mingled people.

A mixt people are the assemblies of our Churches. To these any doctrine may bee propounded, whether of the law or of the Gospel: if the [a] limitation and circumscription of the doctrine be made to those persons, for whome it is conuenient. Ioh. 7. 37. Now in the last and great day of the Feast, Iesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come vnto me and drinke. And this was the manner of the Prophets in their Sermons; to denounce iudgements and destruction to the wicked: and to promise deliuerance in the Messias to those that doe repent. A * doubt. If any man shall despaire in the publike congregation, when the rest are hardened, what ought to be done? * Answ. Let those that are hardened, heare the Law circumscribed within the limits of the persons, and of the vices: and let the afflicted conscience heare the voice of the Gospell applied in speciall manner vnto it.

[a] 1. If it be limited and meant to them.

* ἀπορία.

* λύσις.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the kindes of Application.

APplication is either * Mentall, or * Practicall.

* νοητική.
* πρακτική.

Mentall is that, which respecteth the minde: and it is either doctrine or * Redargution. 2. Tim. 3. 16. The whole Scripture is giuen by Gods inspiration, and is profitable for doctrine (πρὸς διδασκαλίαν) for Redargution or improouing, (πρὸς ἔλεγχον) for correction (ἐπανόρθωσιν) and for instruction (παιδείαν) in righteousnesse. 17. That the man of God may be perfect, beeing perfectly instructed vnto euery good worke.

* Improouing, confuting.

Doctrine is that, whereby doctrine (or teaching) is vsed for the information of the minde to a right iudgement concerning things to be beleeued.

Redargution is that, whereby teaching is vsed for the reformation of the minde from error.

In confutations, which are made publikely before the assembly, these cautions must bee vsed. 1. The thing that is determined (τὸ κρινόμενον) or the state of the question that is to be discussed must bee throughly vnderstood. 2. Let those errors onely be reprooued, which trouble the Church, in which we liue: all other beeing altogether let alone, which doe either lie dead, or are externall: vnlesse some danger be readie to ensue of them. Mat. 16. Beware of the leauen of the Pharisees and Saducees. Mark. 9. Take heede, and beware of the leauen of Herod. Reuel. 2. The men of Pergamus are warned to beware of the Nicolaitans, to whome some of them did assent. 3. If the error bee out of the foundation of faith, the confutation must not onely be Christianlike, as it should be euer: but also a friendly, a gentle and brotherly dissention.

Practicall application is that which respecteth the life and behauiour. And it is Instruction (παιδεία) and correction, ἐπανόρθωσις.

Instruction is that, whereby doctrine is applied to frame a man to liue well in the [b] family, common-wealth, and Church. To this place belong consolation and exhortation, Rom. 15. 4.

[b] Or gouernment of the family, oiconomia.

Correction is that, whereby the doctrine is applied to reforme the life from vngodlinesse and vnrighteous dealing. Hitherto belongs admonition. This muſt be done, firſt generally, the circumſtances of the perſons beeing omitted. 2.Sam.12. Nathan bringes Dauid to the knowledge of his ſinne by the helpe of a generall parable. Act.19.26. Ye ſee and heare that not onely at Epheſus, but almoſt throughout all Aſia, this Paul hath perſwaded and turned away much people (becauſe he ſaith that thoſe are not Gods which are made with hands.) 35. Then the Towne Clerke, when he had ſtayed the people, ſaid, Ye men of Epheſus, &c. 37. Ye haue brought hither theſe men, which haue neither committed ſacriledge, neither [doe blaſpheme] your goddeſſe. Afterwards, if the former reproofe preuaile not, it muſt bee vrged after a more ſpeciall manner. 1.Tim.5.20. Them that ſinne, rebuke openly, that the reſt may alſo feare. But alwaies, in the very hatred of ſinne, let the loue of the perſon appeare in the ſpeeches: and let the Miniſter include himſelfe (if he may) in his reprehenſion, that it may be more milde and gentle. Dan.4.16. Then Daniel——ſaid, My Lord, the dreame bee to them that hate thee, and the interpretation thereof to thine enemies. 17. The tree, which thou ſaweſt——it is thou, 19. Gal.2.15. We that are Iewes by nature, and not ſinners of the Gentiles. 1.Cor.4.6. Theſe things, Brethren, I haue by a kinde of figure tranſlated to my ſelfe, and to Apollos for you, that yee might learne by vs not to bee wiſe aboue that which is written.

Now theſe foure kinds of application doe offer themſelues in euery ſentence of the Scripture. I will alſo ſet downe that example, which Illyricus hath propounded.

Illyricus in his booke of the way to vnderſtand the Scriptures. Tract.1.

Math.10.28. Feare yee not them which kill the bodie, but are not able to kill the ſoule: but rather feare him, which is able to deſtroy both ſoule and bodie in hell. 29. Are not two ſparrowes ſold for a farthing, and one of them ſhall not fall on the ground without your Father? 30. Yea, and all the haires of your head are numbred. 31. Feare ye not therefore, ye are of more value then many ſparrowes.

It were eaſie to draw from hence many doctrines: partly of the confeſſion of the faith: and partly concerning (Gods) prouidence.

*Διδαſκαλία.

Doctrine* 1. That it is needfull for vs publikely to profeſſe the doctrine which wee know, ſo often as there is need. 2. That wee muſt make confeſſion alſo with the hazzard of goods and life. 3. That our life ſhould be contemned in compariſon of Chriſt and his truth. 4. That eternall puniſhments to be ſuffered both in ſoule and bodie are prepared for thoſe that are not affraid to denie Chriſt, and his truth. 5. That God is intent and readie to gouerne vs, that wee might make our confeſſion aright. 6. That the prouidence of God is not onely generall, but alſo ſpeciall, which is diligently occupied about all our ſmalleſt matters, yea euen the haires of our head.

*Ἔλεγχος.

Redargution.* 1. Thoſe doe erre, who thinke it to be ſufficient, if in heart they do embrace the faith and a right opinion concerning religion: and that it is at a mans choiſe in the meane ſeaſon to graunt or affirme any thing before men, as the condition of the place, time, and perſons requireth; eſpecially when the life ſeemeth to be in imminent danger to be loſt. 2. The Epicures erre, in that they deny the diuine prouidence: becauſe they think it too baſe for the Maieſtie of God to take care of humane affaires. 3. The Stoickes doe erre, who imagine that all things are gouerned by the fate, (or an vnreſiſtable and violent neceſſitie.) 4. They doe erre who make chance and fortune, without any wiſe ordination of the diuine prouidence. 5. The Pelagians doe erre in giuing more then is due to mans ſtrength, as if it were put in mens power to embrace the faith at their pleaſure, to continue conſtant in the ſame, and to confeſſe it to the end without feare. 6. They doe erre, who doe leane more vpon outwards things and inconſtant riches, then vpon the power and goodneſſe of God.

*Παιδεία.

Inſtruction.* 1. Thou muſt to the vtmoſt of thy power labour to haue the true feare of God before thine eyes: becauſe thou now heareſt that one God is to bee feared aboue all men.

2 Thou muſt learne ſuch a contempt of humane things, as that thou mayeſt alwaies deſire, hauing forſaken thē, to depart hence, and to be ioyned together with Chriſt in the heauens. 3 The conſideration of (Gods) ſpeciall prouidence doth cauſe thee to thinke of the preſence of God that Beholder, to craue his helpe, and alſo to beleeue that thou art helped in all things, and finally that there is no danger ſo terrible, but he both can and wil deliuer thee from, when it is fit.

*Ἐπανόρθωσις.

Correction.* 1. Theſe words of Chriſt correct their negligence, who in their prayers doe not craue of God ſincere loue, that beeing inflamed with it they may not refuſe to lay downe their life for his name. 2. The negligence of thoſe men is alſo taxed, which doe not acknowledge and behold the prouidence of God ſhewing it ſelfe in all things. 3. Thoſe are reproued, who giue not God thankes for vouchſafing to gouerne and defend vs in all things that belong vnto vs by his prouidence. 4. Thoſe are reprooued, that abuſe the good creatures of God, ſeeing that it is manifeſt that God hath care of all things.

Thus any place of Scripture ought to bee handled; yet ſo as that all the doctrines bee not propounded to the people, but thoſe onely, which may bee fitly applied to our times and to the preſent condition of the Church. And they muſt not onely be choice ones, but alſo few, leſt the hearers bee ouercharged with their multitude.

CHAP. IX.

Of Memorie in Preaching.

BEcauſe it is the receiued cuſtome for preachers to ſpeake [a] by heart before the people, ſomething muſt be here annexed concerning memorie.

[a] Memoriter.

Artificiall memorie, which ſtandeth vpon places and images, will very eaſily without labour teach how to commit ſermons to the memorie: but it is not to bee approoued. 1. The animation of the image, which is the key of memorie, is impious; becauſe it requireth abſurd, inſolent and prodigious cogitations, and thoſe eſpecially, which ſet an edge vpon and kindle the moſt corrupt affections of the fleſh. 2. It dulleth the wit and memorie, becauſe it requireth a threefold memorie for one: the firſt of the places: the ſecond of the images: the third of the thing that is to bee declared.

It is not therefore an vnprofitable aduice, if he that is to preach doe diligently imprint in his minde by the helpe of diſpoſition either axiomaticall, or ſyllogiſticall, or methodicall, the ſeuerall proofes and applications of the doctrines, the illuſtrations of the applications, and the order of them all: in the meane time nothing carefull for the words, Which (as Horace ſpeaketh*) will not vnwillingly follow the matter that is premeditated. Verbaq; prouiſam rem non inuita ſequentur.*

Their ſtudie hath many diſcommodities, who doe con their written ſermons word for word. 1. It asketh great labour. 2. He which through feare doth ſtumble at one word, doth both trouble the congregation, and confound his memorie. 3. Pronunciation, action, and the holy motions of affections are hindred; becauſe the mind is wholly bent on this, to wit, that the memorie fainting now vnder her burthen may not faile.

CHAP. X.

HItherto hath beene ſpoken of the preparation or prouiſion of the ſermon: the Promulgation or vttering of it followeth.

In the Promulgation two things are required: the hiding of humane wiſedome, and the demonſtration (or ſhewing) of the ſpirit.

Humane wiſedome muſt be concealed, whether it be in the matter of the ſermon, or in the ſetting forth of the words: becauſe the preaching of the word is the Teſtimony of God, and the profeſſion of the knowledge of Chriſt, and not of humane skill: and againe, becauſe the hearers ought not to aſcribe their faith to the gifts of men, but to the power of Gods word. 1. Cor. 2. 1. When I came vnto you brethren, I came not with the eminency of eloquence or of wiſedome, declaring vnto you the teſtimonie of God. 2. For I did not decree to know any thing among you but Ieſus Chriſt, and him crucified. 5. That your faith ſhould not conſiſt in the wiſedome of men, but in the power of God.

If any man thinke that by this meanes barbariſme ſhould be brought into pulpits; hee muſt vnderſtand that the Miniſter may, yea and muſt priuately vſe at his libertie the arts, Philoſophy, and variety of reading, whileſt he is in framing his ſermon: but he ought in publike to conceale all theſe from the people, and not to make the leaſt oſtentation. Artis etiam eſt celare artem; it is alſo a point of Art to conceale Art.

The Demonſtration of the ſpirit is, when as the Miniſter of the word doth in the time of preaching ſo behaue himſelfe that all, euen ignorant perſons & vnbeleeuers may iudge, that it is not ſo much he that ſpeaketh, as the Spirit of God in him and by him. 1. Cor. 2. 4. Neither was my ſpeech and my preaching in the perſwaſiue words of mans wiſedome, but in the demonſtration of the ſpirit and of power. And 14. 24. If all propheſie, and there enter in an vnbeleeuer, or one that is ignorant, he is reprooued of all, he is iudged of all. 25. And ſo the ſecrets of his heart are diſcloſed, & ſo falling vpō his face, he wil worſhip God, returning word that God indeed is amōg you. And 4. 19. I will come vnto you ſhortly—and I will know not their * words that are puffed vp, but their power. 20. For the kingdome of God is not in words but in power. Mich. 3. 8. I am filled with power by the ſpirit of the Lord, and with iudgment and might to ſhew to Iacob his defection, and to Iſrael his ſinne. This makes the miniſterie to be liuely and powerfull. Luk. 11. 27. And it came to paſſe, when he had ſpoken theſe things, that a certaine woman of the multitude lifting vp her voyce ſaid vnto him, Bleſſed is the wombe that bare thee, and the breaſts that gaue thee ſucke.

* Non verba ſed virtutem.

This demonſtration is either in ſpeech or in geſture.

The ſpeech muſt be ſpirituall and gracious.

That ſpeech is ſpirituall, which the holy Spirit doth teach. 1. Cor. 2. 13. Which things alſo we ſpeake, not in the words, which mans wiſedome teacheth, but which the holy Ghoſt teacheth, comparing ſpirituall things with ſpirituall things. And it is a ſpeech both ſimple and perſpicuous, fit both for the peoples vnderſtanding, and to expreſſe the Maieſtie of the Spirit. Act. 17. 2. Paul diſputed with them three ſabbath dayes out of the Scripture. 3. Opening ( διανοίγων*) and ſhewing that Chriſt muſt ſuffer and riſe againe.* Gal. 3. 1. O yee fooliſh Galatians:—to whome Ieſus Chriſt before was deſcribed in your ſight, and among you crucified. 2. Cor. 4. 2. But we haue caſt from vs the clokes of ſhame, and walke not in craftineſſe, neither handle wee the word of God deceitfully: but in declaration of the truth we approoue our ſelues to euery mans conſcience in the ſight of God. 3. If our Goſpell be then hid, it is hid to them that periſh. 4. In whome the God of this world hath blinded the mindes, that is, of the infidels, &c.

Wherefore neither the words of arts, nor Greeke and Latine phraſes and quirkes muſt be intermingled in the ſermon. 1. They diſturbe the mind of the auditours, that they cannot fit thoſe things which went afore with thoſe that follow. 2. A ſtrange word hindreth the vnderſtanding of thoſe things that are ſpoken. 3. It drawes the minde away from the purpoſe to ſome other matter.

Here alſo the telling of tales, and all profane and ridiculous ſpeeches muſt bee omitted.

The ſpeech is gracious, wherein the grace of the heart is expreſſed. Luk. 4. 22. And all bare witneſſe of him, and wondred at the gracious wordes which proceeded out of his mouth. Ioh. 7. 46. The Officers anſwered, neuer man ſpake like this man.

Grace is either of the Perſon, or of the Miniſterie.

Grace of the perſon is the holineſſe of the heart, and an vnblameable life: Which howſoeuer it makes not a Miniſter, yet is it very neceſſarie. 1. Becauſe the doctrine of the word is hard both to be vnderſtood and to be practiſed, therefore the Miniſter ought to expreſſe that by his example, which hee teacheth, as it were by a type 1. Pet. 5. 3. Not as though ye were Lords ouer Gods heritage; but that yee may bee examples (τύποι types) to the flocke. 1. Tim. 4. 12. Be an example to the faithfull, both in word and conuerſation. Phil. 4. 8. Furthermore, brethren, whatſoeuer things are true, whatſoeuer things are honeſt—thinke on theſe things. 9. Which ye haue both learned, and receiued, and heard, and ſeene in me, theſe things doe, and the God of peace ſhall be with you. 2. He that is not godly, howſoeuer hee may vnderſtand the Scriptures, yet doth he not perceiue the inward ſenſe and experience of the word in his heart. Pſal. 25. 8. The Lord is good and right, therefore hee teacheth ſinners his way. 9. He maketh the meeke to walke in the Law, and teacheth the meeke his way. Amos 3. 7. Surely the Lord God will doe nothing, but he reuealeth his ſecret to his ſeruants the Prophets. Gen. 18. 17. And the Lord ſaid, Shall I hide from Abraham the thing which I am about to doe? 18. Seeing that Abraham ſhall bee indeede the Father of a great and mightie nation, &c. 19. For I know him that he will command his ſonnes and his houſhold after him, that they keepe the way of the Lord to doe righteouſneſſe and iudgement. 3. It is a thing execrable in the ſight of God, that godly ſpeech ſhould bee conioyned with an vngodly life. Pſal. 50. 16. 17. Vnto the wicked God ſaith, what haſt thou to doe to declare mine ordinances: and to take my couenant into thy mouth, ſeeing thou hateſt to be reformed? It is a ſtrange ſight to ſee him, that is the guide of the way to others, to wander out of the way himſelfe, and to ſee a Phyſitian of others to be ful of botches himſelfe in the meane while, as Nazianzene ſpeaketh. 4. It is an eccleſiaſticall ſecret; That the Miniſter ought to couer his infirmities, that they be not ſeene. For the ſimple people behold not the miniſterie, but the perſon of the Miniſter. Herod heard Iohn Baptiſt willingly, not becauſe he was a good Miniſter, but becauſe he was a good man. Mark. 6. 20. Well ſaith Nazianzene, He that teacheth ſound doctrine, and liues wickedly, teacheth that with one hand, which hee taketh away with the other. Chryſoſtome vpon the twentie of Matthew ſaith: The doctor of the Church by teaching well and by liuing well inſtructeth the people how they ought to liue well: but by liuing ill hee doth inſtruct God how to condemne him. And in his 30. Hom. in Act. It is an eaſie matter to ſhew wiſedome in words, teach me to liue by thy life, this is the beſt teaching. For words make not ſuch an impreſſion in the ſoule as workes doe. 5. A Miniſter, that is wicked either openly or ſecretly, is not worthy to ſtand before the face of the moſt holy, and the almightie God. Ier. 15. 19. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord, If thou returne, then will I bring thee againe, and thou ſhalt ſtand before me. Iſa. 6. 6. Then flew one of the Seraphims vnto me with an hot coale in his hand, which he had taken from the Altar with the tongues. 7. And he touched my mouth and ſaid, Loe, this hath touched thy lips, and thine iniquitie ſhall be taken away, and thy ſinne ſhall be purged. 8. Alſo I heard the voice of the Lord, ſaying, Whome ſhall I ſend? and who ſhall goe for vs? Then I ſaid, Here am I, ſend me. Leuit. 10. 3. Then Moſes ſaid to Aaron, This is that which the Lord ſaid, I will bee ſanctified in them that come neere vnto me, and I will be glorified before the ſight of all the people. And hence it is, that the iudgements of God remaine for wicked Miniſters to tremble at. 1. Sam. 2. 17. Therefore the ſinne of the young men was very great before the Lord: for men abhorred the offering of the Lord, &c. verſ. 25. They obeyed not the voyce of their Father, becauſe the Lord meant to ſlay them.

The parts of ſanctitie are eſpecially, 1. A good conſcience. 2. Cor. 1. 12. For our reioycing is this, the teſtimonie of our conſcience, that in ſimplicitie & godly ſincerity, & not in fleſhly wiſdome, but by the grace of God, we haue had our conuerſatiõ in the world. 1. Tim. 1. 19. Keeping faith & a good conſcience, which ſome hauing put away, as cõcerning the faith haue made Ship-wracke. Act. 24. 16. And herein I endeauour my ſelfe to haue alway a cleere conſcience towards God & towards men. If this be wanting, the mouth of the ſpeaker is ſhut. Iſa. 56. 10. Their watchmen are all blind: they haue no knowledge, they are all dumbe dogges, they cannot barke, they lie and ſleepe, and delight in ſleeping. 2. An inward feeling of the doctrine to be deliuered. Wood that is capable of fire, doth not burne, vnleſſe fire be put to it: and he muſt firſt be godly affected himſelfe, who would ſtirre vp godly affections in other men. Therefore what motions a ſermon doth require, ſuch the Preacher ſhall ſtirre vp priuately in his owne minde, that he may kindle vp the ſame in his hearers. 3. The feare of God, whereby, beeing throughly ſtrucken with a reuerent regard of Gods Maieſtie, he ſpeaketh ſoberly and moderately. 4. The loue of the people. 1. Theſſ. 27. But were gentle among you, as a nurſe that cheriſheth her children. And that affection may appeare, the Miniſters duty is to pray ſeriouſly and feruently for the people of God. 1. Sam. 12. 23. God forbid, that I ſhould ſinne againſt the Lord, and ceaſe praying for you. 5. The Miniſter muſt alſo be ([illegible]) venerable, that is, ſuch an one as is to be reuerenced for conſtancie, integritie, grauitie and truth-ſpeaking, who alſo knoweth how to performe reuerence to others either priuately or publikely, as is befitting the perſons of all his hearers. 6. He muſt be ([illegible]) temperate, who reſtraineth inwardly his ouer vehement affections, & hath his outward faſhions and geſtures moderate and plaine, by the which dignitie and authoritie may be procured and preſerued. Therefore he muſt be neither couetous ([illegible] a louer of ſiluer) nor ([illegible] a follower of wine,) nor litigious, nor a ſtriker, nor wrathfull: And let the young men exerciſe themſelues to godlineſſe, and flie the luſts of youth. 1. Tim. 4. 7.

The grace of the Miniſterie is 1. to bee apt to teach ([illegible]) 1. Tim. 3. 2. Now Pauls meaning is, that it is not only decent and laudable if this gift be had, but alſo that it is ſo neceſſarie, as that it may not be wanting. For this conſideration Nazianzene refuſed a biſhopricke: and Theophylact vpon this place ſaith, that this duty of teaching is eſpecially of all other neceſſarie to be found in Biſhops. In the Nicene and Miletian Councell, this was impoſed in ſtead of a puniſhment, to hold the name of a Miniſter, but not to preach the Goſpell. 2. Authoritie, whereby he ſpeaketh as the Embaſſadour of the great Iehouah. Tit. 2. 15. Theſe things ſpeake and exhort, and rebuke with all authoritie, 1. Pet. 4. 11. If any man ſpeake, let him ſpeake as the oracles of God. 3. Zeale, whereby being moſt deſirous of Gods glorie he doth endeauour to fulfill and execute the decree of election concerning the ſaluation of men by his miniſterie. Iob 32. 18. I am full of matter, and the ſpirit within me compelleth me. 16. Behold my belly is as the wine which hath no vent, and like the new bottles that breaſt. 2. Tim. 2. 25. Inſtructing them —— prouing if God at any time will giue them repentance, that they may know the truth. Col. 1. 28. 29. Admoniſhing euery man —— that wee may preſent euery man perfect in Chriſt Ieſus.

Geſture is either in the action of the voice or of the bodie.

The voice ought to be ſo high, that all may heare. Iſa. 58. 1. Crie aloud, and ſpare not: lift vp thy voice like a trumpet. Ioh. 7. 37. In that laſt and great day of the Feaſt Ieſus ſtood vp and cryed. Act. 2. 14. And Peter ſtanding with the eleuen lift vp his voice and ſaid.

In the doctrine hee ought to be more moderate, in the exhortation more feruent and vehement.

A Let there be that grauitie in the geſture of the bodie, which may grace the Meſſenger of God. It is fit therefore, that the trunk or ſtalke of the bodie being erect and quiet, all the other parts, as the arme, the hand, the face and eyes haue ſuch motions, as may expreſſe and (as it were) vtter the godly affections of the heart. The lifting vp of the eye and the hand ſignifieth confidence. 2. Chron. 6. 13. Salomon made a braſen ſcaffold, and ſet it in the middeſt of the court —— and vpon it hee ſtood, and kneeled downe vpon his knees before all the congregation of Iſrael, and ſtretched out his hands towards heauen. 14. And ſaid, O Lord God of Iſrael, &c. Act. 7. 55. And Steuen beeing full B of the holy Ghoſt, bending his eyes vp to heauen beheld the glorie of God. The caſting downe of the eyes ſignifieth ſorrow and heauineſſe. Luk. 18. 13. But the Publican ſtanding a farre off would not ſo much as lift vp his eyes to heauen, but he ſmote his breaſt ſaying, God be mercifull to me a ſinner.

Concerning the geſture, other precepts cannot be deliuered, onely, let the enſample of the graueſt Miniſters in this kinde be in ſtead of a Rule.

CHAP. XI.

C

Of conceiuing of Prayer.

Hitherto hath beene ſpoken concerning Preaching of the Word: it remaineth now to ſpeake of the conceiuing of prayers: which is the ſecond part of Prophecying, whereby the Miniſter is the voice of the people in calling vpon God. Luk. 11. 1. One of his Diſciples ſaid vnto him, Lord, teach vs to pray, as Iohn alſo taught his Diſciples. 1. Sam. 14. 24.

Here are to be conſidered:

1 The matter thereof, firſt the wants and ſinnes of the people: and then the graces of God and the bleſſings they ſtand in neede of. 1. Tim. 2. 1. I exhort therefore aboue all things, that ſupplications —— be made for all men. 2. D For Kings and thoſe that are in authoritie. Tertul. Apolog. ſaith, We doe all pray for all Emperours, that they may obtaine a long life, a quiet raigne, a ſafe family, couragious armies, a faithfull Councell, loyall ſubiects, a peaceable world, and whatſoeuer things are deſired of a man and of Cæſar. Againe, We pray for Emperours, for their miniſters and powers, for the ſtate of the time, for the quietneſſe of their affaires, and for the delaying of their death. The Lord prayer reduceth this matter to ſixe heads, which are Gods glorie, kingdome, and obedience, the preſeruation of the life, the remiſſion of ſinnes, and the ſtrengthening of the ſpirit.

2 The forme thereof. 1. Let there be one voice, and that the Miniſters alone, the people being in the meane while ſilent, and ſhewing their aſſent at the end, by ſaying, Amen. Act. 4. 24. Who when they had heard theſe things,

A they lift up their voice with one accord vnto God, and ſaid, &c. Nehem. 8. 6. And Ezra praiſed the Lord the great God, and all the people anſwered, Amen, Amen, 1. Cor. 14. 16. Elſe, when thou bleſſest with the ſpirit, how ſhall he that ſupplieth the place of the vnlearned, ſay Amen, at thy giuing of thankes? Iuſtine in his 2. Apol. to Antoninus, ſaith: When the (προεστὼς) Preſident hath finiſhed his prayers and thanks-giuings, all the people that are preſent, cry out with a fauourable approbation, ſaying, Amen. Athanaſius Apolog. ad Conſtant. Imp. Euſeb. libro 7. capite 8. Ierome Proœm. 2. in Gal.

2 Let the voice bee vnderſtood. 1. Cor. 14. 15. I will pray with the ſpirit; I will pray alſo with the vnderſtanding: I will ſing with the ſpirit, I will ſing with the vnderſtanding alſo.

3 Let the voice be continued, not iagged and abrupt, that idle repetitions may be auoided, (βαττολογία) Mat. 6. 7.

4 The parts, which are three: Conſideration, Ordering, and Vttering of it.

Conſideration is that, whereby fit matter for the framing of prayers is diligently ſearched for.

Ordering is that, whereby the matter being found out, is diſpoſed in the minde in a certaine order.

Prolation or vttering of it is that, whereby it is orderly pronounced in publike to the edifying of the people.

Trin vni Deo gloria.

THE ORDER AND SVMME of the ſacred and onely methode of Preaching.

1. To reade the Text diſtinctly out of the Canonicall Scriptures.
2. To giue the ſenſe and vnderſtanding of it being read, by the Scripture it ſelfe.
3. To collect a few and profitable points of doctrine out of the naturall ſenſe.
4. B To apply (if he haue the gift) the doctrines rightly collected, to the life and manners of men, in a ſimple and plaine ſpeech.

The Summe of the Summe.

Preach one Chriſt by Chriſt to the praiſe of Chriſt.

The Writers which lent their helpe to the framing of this Art of Prophecying, are:

Auguſtine, Hemingius, Hyperius, Eraſmus, Illyricus, Wigandus, Iacobus Matthias, Theodorus Beza, Franciſcus Iunius.

Soli Deo gloria.

A

DIGEST OR HARMONIE

OF

the bookes of the old and new Testament.

ALMA MATER CANTABRIGIA

Printed at London by IOHN LEGATT, Printer
to the Vniuersitie of Cambridge.
1613.

TO THE VVORSHIPFVL SOCIETIE OF CHRISTS COLLEDGE IN CAMBRIDGE, CHIEFLY TO THE Reuerend Maſter, D. EDMVND BARVVELL, and the thirteene fellowes of the ſame.

IT was a cuſtome among the Gentiles euery yeare to ſend new-yeares gifts one to another, which thing Suetonius doth declare, [a] where hee ſaith, that Tyberius did by an edict forbid the entercourſe of new-yeres gifts. This cuſtome the Church hath condemned of impiety, and for that cauſe hath thought good to aboliſh it. Tertulian [b] ſaith, it is a wicked thing among brethren, that the feaſts of Saturne, of Ianus, of Bacchus, and Goſſipings ſhould be frequented, that preſents ſhould runne, that new-yeares gifts ſhould goe and come, and bankets ſhould ring of ſporting. After him Alcuinus [c] called them diueliſh new-yeares gifts. To both theſe agreeth a Canon of a certaine olde [d] Councell, which ſaith, that it is not lawfull to obſerue the carrying about of diueliſh new-yeares gifts vpon the firſt day of Ianuarie: but let all gifts be giuen on that day ſo, as they are on other daies. No maruell if theſe new-yeares gifts bee condemned, ſyth they were conſecrated in the names of Ianus and Saturne, after a curſed maner.

Therefore (excellent Sirs) I doe not ſend vnto you a new-yeares gift after the olde cuſtome; yet I ſend. For that very day, which ended the laſt yeare, hatched this my young brood: which now I dedicate to you to bee cheriſhed and nouriſhed, and I pawne it to you as a pledge of my thankfull minde, for your manifolde benefits.

It remaines then, that ye alſo vouchſafe me your new-yeares gifts; what may they be, will ye ſay? truly that ye rub ye ouer this my little worke with the file of Atticke iudgement, that yee frame it anew where neede is, that ye defend it with a Chriſtian conſent ſo farre as it is meete, and that yee accept of this ſmall teſtimony of my good will. Theſe things if yee ſhall performe, I will make account that I haue receiued backe againe not a ſingle new-yeares gift, but a double one, yea a [e] Tyberian, that is, one foure-folde, nay an hundred-folde. Fare ye well, moſt reuerend Preſident, and yee thirteene worthy fellowes, fare ye well. God grant that ye may alwaies haue your Colledge well knitte together. This laſt of December, the 97. of the olde ſtyle.

Your VVorſhips moſt deuoted,
William Perkins.

24 DE 59

---

[a] In Tiberio cap. 34.

[b] lib. de idolat. cap. 14.

[c] lib. de offic. diuin. cap. 4.

[d] Concil. Antiſiod. cap. 1.

[e] Sueton. in Tyberio, cap. 34.

An admonition to the Reader.

CHRISTIAN Reader, I ſet before thee a Tablet or little Brieſe of the holy and heauenly Hiſtory. I call it a Digeſt following Tertullian, and the example of the Romane law, becauſe in the vnfolding it rehearſeth the orders of times and deedes done. In it I haue endeauoured according to my ſmall power, to ſet theſe fiue things before thine eyes.

Lib de Baptiſ. cap. 1.

1. An harmony or Chronicle of the times.
2. An harmony of the auncient Hiſtory, and of the Prophets.
3. An harmony of the Goſpell.
4. An abridgement of the whole ſacred Hiſtorie.
5. *The notable hyſteroſes of euery chapter.

* See the proem, Col. 1.6.

I would that thou ſhouldeſt ſee and iudge what I haue performed.

This alſo I warne thee of, that ſome of theſe things which I write are called into doubtfull queſtion, becauſe I am deſtitute of teſtimonies out of holy Scripture, on which I might relie. As for example: I aſſigne the Hiſtory of Iob, to the times of Ioſeph and Iacob, onely vpon probable coniecture; becauſe there bee ready reaſons to proue that he liued before the law was giuen, and after Abraham. The like iudgement there is for the reſt.

If any where thou ſeeſt me diuert from the receiued and common opinion of Chronicles, know that there is great controuerſie and diſagreeing about that place: know that there are ſome of the moſt learned, which are on my ſide; and know that it is not my minde to limit, to detract, or to accuſe any man. In all things as neere as I can, I ayme at the truth, at leaſt at that which is next to the truth. There is ſtrife too much already, and theſe are not times for ſtriuing, but for praying.

If this my Digeſt doe ſet before thee any thing vndigeſted, pardon it: for I ſend it forth into the light for this cauſe onely, that I may trie the iudgement of thoſe that both can and will gently and truly cenſure, and that I my ſelfe might be directed, warned, corrected.

The

The Proem, or Introduction.

A Digeſt or ſacred Harmony is the order and tenour of the bookes of the olde and new Teſtament, plainly deſcribed and laid forth. This order muſt needes be moſt excellent, and of all men moſt worthy to be known, which the Author of all order himſelfe hath obſerued in his writings.

A Digeſt doth afford two things: the order of deedes done, and the order of the times.

The order of deedes is threefolde, of Nature, of Dignity, of Wiſdome.

The order of Nature is, when that which is formoſt in nature and exiſtence, is propounded in the firſt place: as for example. In the booke of Geneſis, firſt the Creation is tolde, then the fall, afterward the promiſe of the Meſſias is reuealed.

The order of Dignity is when that which is moſt worthy obtaineth the 1. place, although in Nature it be latter: So Gen. 5. 2. 32. Noah begat Sem, Ham, and Iapheth. Here Sem is the firſt in worth, though not the eldeſt by birth: For Noah began to get children when he was 500. yeares olde. But Sem was borne 2. yeares after, for he was an hundred yeares old in the 600. & ſecond yere of his fathers age, Gen. 11.

The order of Wiſedome is, when things are placed in that tenour and dependance which ſerueth beſt for the compoſing of a ſhort, plaine, and continued narration.

This order doth often admit his hyſteroſes.

Hyſteroſis is an inuerſion or (as I may ſay) a miſplacing of the order of nature for ſome iuſt cauſes: and it is twofolde; Anticipation, and Recapitulation.

Anticipation is that, by which ſomething is tolde as if it were done, which notwithſtanding was not done in that time and order as it is tolde, but afterward: or, it is a narration of a later thing in a former place.

The Anticipation of names is, when thoſe names are vſed in former hiſtories, which were giuen to things or places afterwards. Gen. 14. 7. Thence they returning, came vnto the fountaine Miſpah (which is Cades.) Ierome vpon this place ſaith, that it is ſpoken by Anticipation, being not then, but a good while after ſo called: For the place at the rocke in the wildernes is named the [a] fountaine of iudgement, becauſe there God iudged the people, Queſt. Hebr. in Gen. So Agar is ſaid to haue wandred about Beerſheba, that is, the Well of the oth, which name notwithſtanding was giuen to the Well afterwards. Gen. 21. 14. A Anticipation of things is, when things done later are mingled with former hiſtories, as Iſa. 38. 22. What is the ſigne that I ſhall goe vp into the Lord? This ſaying ought to be ſet before the ſeauenth verſe. This ſigne ſhalt thou haue—— and ſo it is ſet. 2. King. 20. verſe 8.

Recapitulation is that by which ſome things which belong to former times, are recounted ſo as if they followed in order of time. By this meanes the ſtory of Michah, and the warre of the Beniamites, which happened when Phineas was Prieſt, are annexed to the hiſtories of Eli and Sampſon. Phineas beeing B dead long afore, vnleſſe wee will haue him to haue liued 300. yeares, Iud. 18. 19. 20. c.

And thus far of the order of things in the holy Bible; now followeth the order of times which the Chronologie doth declare.

Chronologie is a doctrine of the time of ages. This the holy Ghoſt hath reuealed in the Scriptures ſo farre forth as it belongeth to the Church of God to know it: But the full knowledge thereof, God hath reſerued vnto himſelfe, Act. 1. 6.

The parts of Chronologie are two: Notation, and compoſition.

C Notation is that which determineth the quantity and meaſure of the parts of ſecular time, ſo farre forth as they are conſidered by themſelues.

The parts of time are fiue; houre, day, week, moneth, yeare.

An houre is a certen part of the day deuided: and it is either ſimple or compound.

A ſimple houre is either naturall or temporary.

A naturall houre is the foure and twentieth part of a naturall day.

A temporary houre is the twelfth part of an artificiall day. Iohan. c. 11. Are there not D twelue houres of the day? And Mat. 20. in the Parable of the houſholder, there is mention made of the morning, the third, the ſixt, the ninth, and the eleauenth houre.

A compound houre is a quarter, or the fourth part of an artificiall day.

There are foure quarters therefore of euery artificiall day, euery one of which quarters conſiſteth of three houres, and taketh his name from the laſt. The firſt quarter from the morning to the third houre, is called the third houre. The ſecond from the third houre, to the ſixt houre, is called the ſixt houre. The third, from the ſixt houre, vnto the ninth, is called the ninth houre. The fourth,

[a] Hen-miſpa.

fourth, from the ninth houre, to the Sunne ſetting, is called the euening. Of theſe kinds of houres thoſe places ſeeme to bee vnderſtood. Mark. 15.25. And it was the third houre when they crucified him. Ioh. 19. 14. It was the preparation of the Paſſeouer, and about the ſixt houre.——Then deliuered he him to be crucified. Luk. 23.44. And it was about the ſixt houre, and there was a darkneſſe ouer all the land. The ſum is, that Chriſt was crucified at the third and the ſixt houre: the third houre beeing ended and gone, the ſixt houre going, but not ended.

If any one ſhall ſay that this partition of the day is fained and nouell, let him heare Cenſorine lib. de die Natal. c. 10. Some, ſaith he, doe deuide the day and likewiſe the night into foure parts. Let him know alſo that among the Iewes the night was parted into foure watches. Matth. 14.25. And in the fourth watch of the night, Ieſus went vnto them walking on the ſea.

An Hebrew day is either Naturall or Artificiall.

A naturall day, is the ſpace of foure and twenty houres, containing alſo both the morning and the euening.

The morning and the euening are the bounds of euery day; and the euening is of two ſorts. The firſt, is from the ninth houre to the ſetting of the Sunne. The ſecond, is from the Sunne ſetting vnto the ſhutting in of the night. Leu. 23.5. In the firſt moneth and the fourteenth day of the moneth betweene the two euenings ſhalbe the Paſſeouer of the Lord.

A naturall day according to the diuerſe vſes thereof, is either a * workie-day, or a holy-day.

* Ciuilis aut Sacer,

A workie-day is that which is appointed for our ciuill buſineſſes, and (as it ſeemes to me) this day among the Iewes laſted from Sunne riſing to the Sunne riſing, that is, it began at the morning. Exod. 18.14. why ſitteſt thou thy ſelfe alone, and all the people ſtand about thee from morning to euen? Matth. 28.1. In the end of the Sabbath when the firſt day of the weeke began to dawne. It is not likely that Matthew ſpake theſe things after the manner of the Romanes, ſeeing that hee wrote his Goſpell eſpecially for the Hebrewes.

An holy-day is that which is appointed for holy vſes. An holy day is onely made by God to whome onely it belongeth to bleſſe and hallow the times.

An holy day beginneth at the euening, and endeth at the euening. Leuit. 23. verſ. 32. From euen to euen ſhall ye celebrate your Sabbath.

The holy day common to all ages is the Sabbath, which according to the morall law is a certaine ſeauenth day ſet apart for diuine worſhip. Here is to be noted that ſometime the word Sabbath is put for the whole weeke, I faſt twice a Sabbath. Mark. 16. and the firſt of the Sabbath. 1. Cor. 16.1.

An Artificiall day is the ſpace of time from the riſing of the Sunne, to the ſetting. Ioh. 11. 9. wherefore it is longer in ſommer and ſhorter in winter.

A weeke is the ſpace of ſeauen daies, ſometime alſo of ſeauen yeares. Dan. 9.24. Seauentie weekes are determined vpon thy people.

An Hebrew moneth is of two kindes: of the Sunne, or of the Moone.

A Sun-moneth was in vſe about the time of the flood, and it contained 30. daies. For (as Moſes witneſſeth Gen. 8.) from the ſeauenteenth day of the ſecond moneth vnto the ſeauenteenth day of the ſeuenth moneth, there are an hundred and fiftie daies, which is fiue whole monethes of thirtie daies a peece.

Moone-moneths were chiefly in vſe after the departure out of AEgypt. Some whereof were full monethes of thirtie daies; ſome other were ſcant monethes of 29. daies and a halfe. Hereupon euery yeare for the complement of the courſe of the Sunne, the Epact was of eleauen daies, and euery third yeare, yea and ſometime the ſecond was Emblimæus, hauing the thirteenth moneth called Veadar.

The Hebrew yeare is the time of the ſunnes courſe through both Tropickes, and it containeth 365. daies, 5. houres, and 59. minutes. This Moſes doth plainly declare in the hiſtorie of the flood. Geneſ.

In Noah his 600. yeare the 2. moneth, and 17. day began the flood—7.11.
The raine was 40. daies & 40. nights—7.27.
The water preuailed 150. daies——7.24.
The 150. daies being paſt, the Arke reſted
    the 17. day of the 7. moneth——8.4.
The waters were a decreaſing to the firſt day of the 10. moneth——8.5.
After the 40. daies the window was opened.——8.6.
Noah waited 7. daies——8.
He waited other 7. daies——8.
In the yeare 601. the 1. day of the firſt moneth the earth was dry——8.13.

All theſe beeing conſidered and laid together it will appeare that the yeare did comprehend 12. monethes, ſo that euery moneth did conteine 30. daies, whereby alſo it is gathered, that before Moſes the Epact did not conſiſt of eleuen daies, but onely of fiue.

The naturall beginning of the yeare is in the moneth Abib or Niſan. For the world doth ſeeme to haue bin created in the ſpring time, not in Autumne. For Noah entred into the Arke, in the firſt moneth, and the yeare being ſpent he came out at the end of the ſecond moneth. But this firſt & ſecond moneth cannot accord with Autumne, becauſe after the 2. moneth Noah could not prouide victuall enough to ſerue himſelfe and the creatures for the whole yeare following, the ſecond harueſt beeing now paſt, and the winter comming on. To this opinion do agree Theodoret, *queſt.*72.vpon Exod. Ambroſe lib. 1. Hexam. c. 4. Leo Serm. 9. de Paſſion. Bede de ratione Temporum. But it is wont to be obiected, that hearbs and trees were brought foorth with ripe fruit, and therefore the creation was in Autumne. But I anſwer that God gaue euery tree power to bring foorth his fruite in his time: but that the fruits (I doe not deny but ſome, for that is moſt certaine,) but that all, were ripe in the creation it is not certaine, whether you ſay the world beganne in the ſpring or in Autumne. For euen the ſpring doth ſeeme to bring forth ſome ripe fruits as wel as Autumne, eſpecially among the Iewes and them of the Eaſt, which haue their harueſt not much off from Eaſter. Exo. 9.31.32. Luk. 6. 1.

The common beginning of the yeare was at the ſeuenth moneth, Thiſri. Exod. 23.16. The feaſt of gathering fruits ſhalbe in the end of the yeare, when thou haſt gathered in thy labours out of the field. Here beganne the date of their bargaines, buyings, ſellings, bondages, releaſe of land, the yeare of reſt, and Iubilies.

There was alſo beſide the naturall yeare a propheticall yeare which by the like is to bee vnderſtood to bee of the ſpace of 360. yeares, and the Propheticall moneth in like manner conſiſteth of thirtie yeares. Reuel. 11.

Thus farre we haue declared the Notation of times, the computation followes.

Compoſition is the ſecond part of Chronologie concerning the ioyning of time with time, to which there belongeth foure things.

1 Duplication of time, by which the Scripture doth mingle the laſt part of the time ſpent with the firſt part of the time to come. Hence it is that the yeares of the kings of Iuda and Iſrael doe often fall one within the compaſſe of the other, which cannot iuſtly bee reckoned, but by a certaine doubling. Chriſt was in his ſepulcher ſixe and thirtie houres or thereabout; but the Euangeliſts ſay that he roſe againe after three dayes, and on the third day. How comes this to paſſe? why, double the middle part of the time, and you haue your wiſh.

2 Rotundation of time, by which either through adding vnto, or taking away ſomething from the ſet number giuen, the account thereof is made more eaſie in ſpeaking or writing. Very well ſaith Auguſtine, queſt. 47. vpon Exod. The Scripture is wont ſo to call the times, as that which is ſomewhat ouer or vnder the iuſt number, is not reckoned. Let that bee an example. Numb. 14. verſ. 34. You ſhall beare your iniquitie for fourtie yeares. These words were ſpoken to the Iſraelites in the ſecond yeare after their departure, and therefore they ſuffered puniſhment full 38. yeares, and about 40.

3 The third is, that time is taken in accounts either for the time alreadie ſpent, or for the time now in ſpending, and not yet paſt. Matth. 27. After three daies I will riſe againe. 1. King. 15. In the eighteenth yeare of Ieroboam raigned Abia three yeares: and yet afterward it is ſaid, that his ſonne began to raigne in the twentie yeare of Ieroboam.

4 The fourth is, that the beginning of the time in computation is put ſometime excluſiuely, ſometime incluſiuely.

A compound time is that which is made of ages, yeares, dayes, or moneths, ioyntly together: and it is either of the old world, or of the new.

The time of the old world is the continuance of the yeares from the beginning of the world to Chriſt crucified, which is about 4000. yeares.

The Sabbath of the old world is the ſeuenth day from the creation, which was conſecrated for diuine ſeruice in Paradiſe before the fall.

The preparation of the ſabbath, is part of the day going before, wherein chiefly after the law was giuen, prouiſion of victuals was made for the approching ſabbath. Therefore whereas it is ſaid, Ioh. 19. verſ. 14. It was the preparation of the Paſſeouer, it is not for the Paſſeouer it ſelfe, but for the ſabbath in the Paſſeouer, or Eaſter. Mark. 15. It was the preparation which is before the ſabbath. And Luk. 23. And that day was the preparation, and the ſabbath drew on. Againe the whole day of the Paſſeouer was not holy, but the euening only, in which the Lambe was ſlaine, for it ſeemes the reſt was workie day. Mark. 14. verſ. 12, 13, 14. Hence it appeares that the Paſſeouer had not his Eue properly.

The time of the old world hath 2. parts, the 1. without the law, the 2. with the law.

The time without the law is from the beginning vnto the time when the law was giuen, and it hath three particles.

The firſt is from the creation to the flood, and it conſiſts of 1656. yeares.

The ſecond is from the flood to the promiſe made vnto Abraham 367. yeares and no more. For I thinke (ſauing a better iudgement) that Abraham was borne the 70. yeare of Terah, and not in the 130. yeare. Reaſon 1. The Teſtimonie of Moſes, Gen. 11. 26. Terah liued 70. yeares and begat Abraham, Nahor and Haran. Now the ſcope of the chapter is to declare the genealogie of Chriſt from Adam vnto Abraham. Therefore hee pointeth at Abrahams yeares not at Nahors or Harans, eſpecially hauing done ſo in all the precedent generations vnto Abraham. Reaſon 2. Vnleſſe it be taken for graunted that Abraham was borne the 70. yeare of Terah, it will be altogether vncertaine when hee was borne. For if any one ſhall ſay Abraham was borne the 130. yeare of his father, & that it is plaine out of the Scriptures; I anſwer, that it cannot be ſhowne throughout the Scriptures that Abraham was borne the 130. yeare rather then the 131. or the 132. yeare of Terah. For Moſes ſaith not any where, that Abraham departed into Canaan preſently the ſelfe ſame yeare wherein Terah died. All things which are ioyned together in the order of hiſtorie, are not like waies conioyned in time. 3. Abraham did account it for a miracle that himſelfe beeing 100. yeare old ſhould haue a ſonne: how then could he bee borne in the 130. yeare of his father? and it is not likely that Abraham was borne 60. yeares after Terah had got Nahor, and Haran. 4. Abraham beeing commaunded to goe into Canaan did not delay his obedience, but went preſently without delay ſo ſoone as hee had receiued the command, not tarrying for his fathers death, becauſe by faith hee made that iourney. Heb. 11. But the charge & promiſe he receiued in Vr of the Chaldes before hee went to Haran. 5. The iudgement of the primitiue Church aſſenteth to me, and I thinke it worthie to be followed, vnleſſe it be manifeſt that it hath declined out of the way. Aug. de ciuit. Dei, l. 16. c. 15. To him agreeth venerable Bede, alſo Ioſephus, and Iſidorus, Hiſpal. orig. lib. 5. If any obiect that Moſes doth tell the ſtorie of Abrahams going into the land of Canaan after the death of Terah. I anſwer, that it is done by Recapitulation, that he might finiſh the hiſtorie of Terah in a continued narration. If any vrge the words of Stephen, Act. 7. After that his father was dead God brought him into this land. I anſwer, that there was two goings of Abraham into Canaan. The firſt was before the death of his father, which going was rather on progreſſe, then for to dwell, and of this ſpeaketh Moſes. The ſecond was to place and ſettle his habitation in the land of Canaan of which ſpeaketh Stephen, for the Greeke word which he vſeth μετῴκισεν, ſignifieth that God brought him to dwell in the land of Canaan. And that it was ſo this may be an argument, that Abraham did not buy one plot of ground vntill a yeare or two after his fathers death. Thus S. Auguſtine in the forenamed place hath taught to anſwer, neither doe I ſee what can be ſaid againſt it.

The third particle is from the promiſe to the Law, and is 430. yeares, Exod. 12. 40. The dwelling of the children of Iſrael in Egypt was 430 yeares. Gal. 3. 17.

The abode of the children of Iſrael in AEgypt was onely 210. yeares. For from the departure out of Vr to the birth of Iſaac was 30. yeares, from thence to Iacob was 60. from thence to the going downe into AEgypt 130, now if you take theſe numbers from 430. there will remaine 210. yeares in which the Iſraelites dwelt in AEgypt. If any ſay that 600000. armed men within the ſpace of two hundred yeares could not bee propagated out of the family of Iacob: I anſwer that they might, becauſe then polygamie was in vſe, and then they did beget children from twentie yeares of age vntill they were fourescore and more, and then was the multiplication of ſeede promiſed. If any one vrge me that Abraham was not the ſonne of Iſrael, and therefore the 430. yeares of bondage is not to bee ſtretched vnto Abrahams time: I ſay the ſonne of Iſrael doth comprehend not onely the ſeed of Iacob, but all the poſteritie of Abraham. Gen. 48. Iacob ſaith of the ſonnes of Ioſeph, Let my name bee named vpon them, and the name of my fathers Abraham and Iſaac. Therefore the ſonnes of Iſrael are the whole nation and familie of Abraham, no not excluding the head.

The time of the Law is from the promulgation thereof vnto Chriſt crucified, and it hath fiue particles.

The firſt is from the law to the Temple 480. yeares, 1. King. 6. 1. At the beginning of this particle the Iewes neglected the true firſt entrance of the yeare, and ſo it was renued by God. Exod. 12. 2. Then were feſtiual daies appointed, the Paſſeouer, Pentecoſt, the feaſt of Trumpets: of Expiation, and the feaſt of Tabernacles, &c.

Of the Paſſeouer there are two parts, firſt the killing of the Lambe, which was done the 14. day of the firſt moneth, at the euen which ſhutteth in the day. Exod. 12. verſ. 6. The other part is the feaſt or the ſolemnitie wherein the Paſchall ſacrifice was offered. Deut. 16. Thou ſhalt offer the Paſſeouer vnto the Lord thy God, of ſheepe and bullocks in the place which the Lord ſhall chuſe. See an example 2. Chron. 35. This feaſt laſted ſeauen daies, which were called the dayes of vnleauened or ſweet bread. The firſt day of ſweet bread began at the euen which ſhuts in the 14. day, for which cauſe this fourteenth day was called of his latter part the firſt day of ſweete bread. Mark. 14. 12. yet the ſacrifices were not killed before the 15. day. The laſt day of the feaſt was the ſabbath which was as ſolemne as any of the reſt, and for order ſake it was called the ſecond ſabbath after the firſt. Luk. 6. 1.

The feaſt of Pentecoſt was excluſiuely the 50. day from the end of Eaſter, becauſe the Iſraelites departed out the 15. day, and the beginning of the 50. dayes muſt be reckoned from the 16. day. Leuit. 23. 16.

There was alſo two holy yeares appointed: a Sabbatarie and a Iubilie.

The Sabbatarie was euery ſeuenth yeare, wherein reſt was giuen to the earth.

The Iubilie was 49. yeare excluſiuely from the former Iubilie, that is, if you exclude the former Iubilie yeare: but it is the 50. yeare from the former incluſiuely, Leu. 25. 10. This is the common ſaying, but perhaps the Iubily yeare is euery fifty yeare diſtinctly numbred.

Moreouer in this particle was the gouernment of Iudges for 357. yeares, which by computation will eaſily appeare. And therefore whereas, Act. 13. verſ. 20. it is ſaid that God gaue them Iudges for the ſpace of 450. yeares, it ſeemeth thus to bee taken: From the diuiſion of the land, vnto Samuel there are (as I ſaid) but 357. yeares, and this number Saint Luke ſeemes to haue ſet downe, reiecting the latter ſeuen, that the number might bee rounder: But afterward ſome body reading ouer the booke of Iudges for [illegible] ſubſtituted [illegible] of meere ignorance: For indeede out of the yeares of the Iudges, and the yeares of the oppreſſours diſtinctly and ſeparately numbered, there doe ariſe iuſt 450. yeares. But thoſe yeares muſt not bee ſeparately numbred, but it is to be held for a ſure rule of compoſition, that the yeares of the oppreſſours bee reckoned in the yeares of the Iudges.

The ſecond particle is from the founding of the Temple vnto the deſtroying of the ſame. 427. yeares. In this particle there are theſe rules of compoſition; 1. It often fals out that the yeares of the kings of Iuda and Iſrael are incomplete. 2. The ſonne beeing Viceroy did raigne with his father which was buſied in forraine warres. 3. Sometimes the yeares wherein they gouerned wickedly are left vncounted as if they neuer were. 1. Sam. 13. 1. 4. The yeares wherein the ſonne raigned the father being aliue, but ſpent with age or diſeaſe, are reckned alſo to the gouernment of the ſame father.

The third particle is the time of the captiuitie in Babylon, of 70. yeares, Ierem. 25. verſ. 11. The beginning of this particle ſeemes to bee at the burning of the Temple in the yeare of Nabuchad. 19. For this captiuitie was not onely the deſolation of the people, but alſo of the land, which alſo muſt keepe her ſabbaths, 2. Chron. 36. verſ. 21. But the land could not reſt all the time before, hauing in her a king, prieſts, citizens, and husbandmen.

The fourth is from the returne out of Babylon to the beginning of Daniels weekes, and is about fourescore yeares. Reaſon. 1. Dan. 9. 25. he ſpeaketh of ſuch a going forth of a commandement as by which not onely the re-edifying of the Temple, but the inhabiting likewiſe and repairing of their citie was allowed: Now we reade of no ſuch Edict in all the Bible, before the 7. yeare of Artaxerxes Longimanus. For the edict of Cyrus, and the edict of Darius Hiſtaſpis, both of theſe ſpeake onely of building the Temple, but not of the citie. 2. The conuerſions of the heauens, & the diſtances of the Eclipſes doe make the like ſpace. The Eclipſe in the fift yeare of Nabopollaſar, or Nabuchadneʒar, is diſtant from that which happened the nineteenth yeare of Tiberius, 653. Iulian yeares: and leſt any one ſhould thinke that this Nabopolaſar in Ptolemie was not the ſame with Nabuchadneʒar; I adde this one thing, that the Eclipſe of the Moone in the 7. yeare of Cambiſes doth differ from that which happened eleuen daies before the monarchie of Alexander, 192. Iulian yeares, and 64. daies, and that this is diſtant from that which happened in the ninteenth yeare of Tiberius, 363. Iulian yeares. Moreouer, from that Eclipſe in the 31. yere of Darius Hiſtaſpis, to the Ecclipſe in the laſt yeare of Darius Codoman there are 151. Iulian yeares. Theſe things to be ſo as I ſay, Ptolemeus his account doth plainly declare, who reckoneth 126. Egyptian yeares from Nabonaſſar to the Ecclipſe in the fift yeare of Nabopolaſar, and 224. yeares to the Ecclipſe in the ſeauenth yeare of Cambiſes, and 424. yeares to the death of Alexander, and 718. to the raigne of Auguſtus. Almegiſt. lib. 3. c. 8. and 5. 14. With this agreeth the calculation of [illegible], whoſe accounts for beginnings and ends of times are moſt certen, which runne thus.

From Nabonaſſar to the beginning of the yeares	Iul. yeares.	daies.
Of the death of Alexander	423.	169.
Of Iulius Caeſar	701.	309.
Of our Sauiour Chriſt	746.	319.
From the death of Alexander to the beginning of the yeares.
Of Iulius Caeſar	278.	50.
Of our Sauiour Chriſt	323.	151.
From Iulius Caeſar to the beginning of Chriſt	45.	1.

He which will thinke theſe things to bee fained, he muſt vtterly ouerthrow all logiſticall Aſtronomie. And truly this ſeemeth to me to be a notable argument to prooue the truth of the holy Scriptures, becauſe the ſacred hiſtorie in the order of her narrations doth moſt exactly agree with the conuerſions of the heauens. And on the other ſide this is vnto me a proofe, that the beginning of the weekes is not to be fitted to the yeares of Cyrus or Darius Hiſtaſpis, becauſe then almoſt all humane hiſtories, and all aſtronomicall obſeruations are to bee denyed as counterfeit.

All the kings, of whome there is mention made in Esdras, Nehemia, Heſter, and Daniel, for the moſt part did raigne in this time, whome I (following the iudgement of M. Gualter, and Tremelius) doe diſtinguiſh after this ſort.

They were either Medes, or Perſians.

The Medes were two. The firſt, Aſſuerus the father of Darius Medus. Dan. 9. 1. This is that Aſtiages the Emperour of the Medes & Perſians extending his gouernment from India to AEthiopia in Arabia: neuer was this depriued of his kingdome by Cyrus King of the Perſians as ſome hiſtorians doe falſly ſay. It is probable that hee was the husband of Heſter, and not Darius Hiſtaſpis nor Xerxes. Reaſon. 1. In Darius Hiſtaſpis there was grauitie and prudence ioyned with a certaine pietie, but in Aſſuerus luſt and leuitie. 2. Mardochaeus in the firſt yeare of Cyrus, the captiuitie beeing ended, came againe into Iewrie. Ezr. 2. Therefore he did not liue in Perſia vnder Cambyſes, Darius Hiſtaſpis, or Xerxes: and it is not credible that hee who was moſt carefull of the true worſhip of God, would returne againe into the Eaſt, when hee might vſe the benefit of his libertie. 3. Xerxes in the 7. yeare of his raigne was out of Perſia in Sardis or in Greece, not returning home vntill the eight yeare. Amaſtris alſo his wife was a moſt wicked woman. The obiection of the Palace of Shuſhan, is of ſmall force; for ſay that it was the Palace of the Kings of Perſia while Cyrus reigned, (as Strabo ſaith, libr. 15.) yet the Palace of the Medes might be in the ſame place before Cyrus his time. For Strabo ſaith in the aforeſaid booke, that the Pallace of the Perſians was not there before the Medes were ouercome. If any one thinke otherwiſe, he ſhall vſe his owne iudgement by my good leaue. In theſe and ſuch like things I will not contend.

The ſecond is Darius Medus, hee was the chiefe in the ſacking of Babylon, Iſa. 13.17. Ier. 51. 11. and the Babylonian Empire was in his hand for the ſpace of a yeare, Dan. 6.1. This ſame is Aſſuerus, Ezr. 4.6.

The Kings of the Perſians are theſe,

1. Cyrus, yeares 30. but after the conqueſt of Babylon 7. and from hence the Scripture beginneth the yeares of Cyrus: he (as Xenoph. witneſſeth) acknowledged Darius to be Emperour of the Medes and Perſians, when hee led the armie againſt the Babylonians, ouer which kingdome he ruled together with Darius Medus, Dan. 5.28.

2. Cambyſes 7. he is Artaxerxes, Ezra. 4. verſ. 5.

3. Darius Hiſtaſpis 36. By this mans edict the Temple was builded, and not by the Edict of Darius Nothus, vnleſſe we will ſay that there were ſome ſuruiuing in the ſecond yeare of Darius Nothus, which were almoſt 200. yeares old. For* Agge in this very yeare of Darius doth take for graunted, that there were ſome of the people yet left who had ſeene and knew the beauty of Salomons Temple.

*Cap. 2, 3.

4. Xerxes, 21. Dan. 11.2.

5. Artaxerxes Longimanus 40. Ezra. 7. 1. and 6. 14.

6. Darius Nothus or Ochus. 19.

7. Artaxerxes Mnemon 43.

8. Darius Ochus. 23.

9. Darius Arſes. 3.

10. Darius Arſamis. 6.

Of theſe vntill Alexander, the holy Scriptures ſpeake nothing, nor Ioſephus.

The fift particle containeth the weekes of Daniell, and therefore it is of 490. yeares. Theſe weekes ſeeme to mee rather to end at the death of Chriſt, and not at the finall deſtruction both of the Temple and citie by Titus. Reaſon 1. The couenant with many was plainly confirmed, partly by the preaching of Chriſt, and partly by his paſſion. But if this laſt weeke bee extended further to the deſtruction of the citie, then in that time alſo ſome ſolemne league ſhould haue beene confirmed: but no league was confirmed in the laſt weeke more then was in the laſt but one. 2. Daniel doth plainly ſay, Seauentie weekes are determined vpon thy people, and vpon thy holy citie, to finiſh the wickedneſſe, and to ſeale vp the ſinnes, and to reconcile the iniquitie, and to bring in euerlaſting righteouſneſſe, and to ſeale vp the viſion & propheſie, and to annoint the moſt holy, which is the Meſſias. Now if the deſtruction of the citie did end thoſe weekes, then not 70. but 65. weekes and a halfe were determined for the finiſhing of theſe things; for in the 65. weeke was made the ſatiſfaction for ſinne, and the Meſſias annointed. 3. If you beginne the weekes from the 2. yeare of Darius Nothus, then Nehemias ſhall haue continued vnto the 32. yeare of Darius Mnemon and ſomewhat longer, and hee ſhall bee an 100. and 90. yeares old, and then alſo fitte for long iourneyes: and Ezra alſo ſhall be farre elder.

In the middle of the laſt weeke began the miniſtry of Chriſt or the time of his going vp and downe. Act. 1. 21. The beginning of his miniſtrie was when hee was baptized of Iohn, and beeing annointed with the holy Ghoſt, was ſent to preach, and it endured vnto the day of his aſſumption, and conſiſts of three yeares and an halfe almoſt.

The firſt yeare was from the firſt paſſeouer, Ioh. 2. 13. vntill the feaſt, Ioh. 5. 1. The ſecond yeare is from that feaſt vnto the paſſeouer mentioned, Ioh 6. 4. The third yeare is from this paſſeouer vnto that whereat Chriſt was crucified, Ioh. 13. 1. This paſſeouer was celebrated the 14. day at euen, both by Chriſt and the Iewes themſelues, Mark. 14. 12. Now the firſt day of vnleauened bread when they ſacrificed the Paſſeouer, and his Diſciples ſaid vnto him, where wilt thou that we goe and prepare that thou maieſt eate the Paſſeouer? Luk. 22. 7. Then came the day of vnleauened bread when the Paſſeouer muſt be offered. The eating of the Paſſeouer was either the eating of the Lambe, or of other cheere made of part of the ſacrifice according to the law. The eating of the Lambe was alwaies on the 14. day, and it is not likely that the Iewes durſt violate ſo plaine a law. The eating of the other cheere was on the 15. 16. and 17. daies, and yet not by any that was polluted; and of this latter is to bee vnderſtood that place of Ioh. 18. verſ. 28. They went not into the common hall leſt they ſhould be defiled, but that they might eate the Paſſeouer.

A The time from the Baptisme of Christ vnto the first Passeouer is almost halfe a yeare.

And thus is the time of the old world; the time of the new followeth, which is from the ascension of Christ vnto the last iudgement.

The Sabbath of the new world is the day of Christs resurrection, which is the eight from the creation; and me thinketh the Scripture seemeth to assigne the Sabbath to the Lords day. 1. Cor. 16. 2. To make gathering B on the first day of the weeke is an Apostolicall institution, therefore the hallowing of this day for the Sabbath is likewise an Apostolicall institution; because gatherings were not made but when the worship of God was

A solemnely performed. Secondly, Iohn the Apostle doth acknowledge this day to bee the Lords. Reu. 1. 10. that is, a day consecrated to the honour of Christ. And the rest of the Apostles haue obserued this same day in stead of the Iewes Sabbath. Act. 20. 7. yea Christ himselfe doth seeme to haue done the same, Ioh. 20. 19. 26. Thirdly, it is the opinion of Cyprian, that circumcision was a Sacrament of the Sabbath to bee kept on the 8. day in B the new Testament. l. 3. epi. ag. ad Fidum. August. de ciu. dei l. 22. c. 30. The Lords day was hallowed by Christs resurrection. And Ser. 251. The Apostles did ordaine the Lords day to be kept with religious worship.

24.DE.59

			IN the beginning of time was created the vtmoſt heauen, and the matter of things viſible.	1
		d.	The ſpirit cheriſheth that matter mouing vpon it.	1
		1	Light riſeth out of darkneſſe.	1
		2	The firmament is made, and ſeparateth the waters.	1
		3	The water being gathered togither, the drie land is fruitfull:	1
			Two trees are created in the garden of Eden.	2
		4	Lights are created in the Firmament.	1
		5	Birds and Fiſhes are made out of the waters.	1
		6	Beaſts and all cattell are framed out of the earth.	1
			Hitherto onely a miſt did water the earth.	2
			The body of Adam was made of the duſt.	1 & 2
			God breatheth into his noſthrils the breath of life.	2
			And man was faſhioned after the likeneſſe of God.	1
			All creatures are brought vnto man to ſee how he would call them.	2
			Euery hearbe and fruit are appointed for meate.	1
			Eua is made out of the rib of Adam ſleeping.	2
			God giueth her to Adam for to be his wife.	2
			Marriage is ordained.	2
			The wedded are brought into the Garden.	2
			The prohibition of trees is enioyned.	2
		7	The inſtitution and ſanctification of the Sabbath.	2
			The firſt ſinne of our firſt parents.	3
			Beeing arraigned and conuicted, they are puniſhed.	3
			Chriſt promiſed of the ſeede of the woman.	3
			Iſcha is now called Henah.	3
			The firſt garment made by God.	3
			The caſting of Adam and Eua out of Paradiſe.	3
			Cain is the firſt that was borne of woman.	4
		1	Abel borne.	4
			Cain and Abel offer ſacrifice to God.	4
			Cain mooued with enuie killeth his brother.	4
			He deſpaireth and is throwne from the preſence of God.	4
			The firſt city built in the world.	4	Chron. 1.
		130	Seth borne in the 130. yeare of Adam.	5	1
		135	Enoſh borne the 105. yeare of Seth.	5
			Then men began to call on the name of God.	4
		325	Kenan borne the 90 yeare of Enoſh.	5
		395	Mahalaleel borne the 70. yeare of Kenan.	5
		460	Iared borne the 65. yeare of Mahalaleel.	5
		622	Enoch borne the 62. yeare of Iared.	5
		687	Methuſalah borne the 65. yeare of Enoch.	5
		874	Lamech borne the 187. yeare of Methuſalah.	5
		930	Adam died being 930. yeares olde.	5
		938	Lamech the firſt author of Bigamie.	4
		987	Enoch is taken vp aliue to heauen, yeare 365.	5
		1042	Seth died beeing 912. yeares olde.	5
		1056	Noah borne the 182. yeare of Lamech.	5
		1087	The inuention of Muſicke and the Smiths craft.	4
		1140	Enos dieth the 905. yeare of his age.	5
		1235	Kenan dieth the 910. yeare of his age.	5
		1290	Mahalaleel dieth the 895. yeare of his age.	5
		1422	Iared dieth the 962. yeare of his age.	5
The yeares of Noahs preaching 120	1	1536	The ſonnes of God marry the daughters of men.	6
			Of theſe were borne Gyants.	6
			Now all fleſh had corrupted his way.	6
			Gods purpoſe concerning the flood, reuealed.	6
			The commandement to build the Arke.	6
			Noah preacheth repentance.	6
	20	1556	Iaphet is borne the fiue hundreth yeare of Noah.	6
	23	1559	Sem is borne the 503. of Noah.	11
	25	1561	Ham is borne.	6
	114	1650	Lamech dieth in yeare of his age 777.	5

Prom.	World.				Geneſis.	Chron.
120	m	6	2	Methuſalah dieth the 969.yeare of his age.	5
	2		10	The commandement to enter into the Arke.	7
			17	The entrance into the Arke.	7
				It raineth forty daies.	7
	3		27	The laſt day of the raine.	7
	7		17	The Arke reſteth on the mountaines of Ararat.	8
				Here end an hundred and fifty daies.
	10		1	The tops of the mountaines appeare.	8
	11		12	The Crow and the Doue are ſent forth, with returne.	8
			19	The Doue is ſent out the ſecond time.	8
				Shee returneth with an Oliue leafe.	8
			26	The third time being ſent ſhee returnes no more.	8
	7
	1		1	The waters are dried from off the earth.	8
				Noah remoouеth the couering from off the Arke.	8
	2		27	God commaunding, Noah goeth out of the Arke.	8
				He offereth ſacrifice vnto God.	8
				The courſe of nature is reſtored.	8
				The Rainbow is the ſigne of Gods couenant with the earth.	9
				Marriage is confirmed.	9
				Mans dominion is reſtored.	9
				The eating of fleſh, except the blood, is permitted.	9
				The office of a Magiſtrate is eſtabliſhed.	9
				The law for murther.	9
				The dreſſing of vines, and Noahs drunkenneſſe.	9
				Ham is puniſhed for mocking his father.	9
				The piety of Sem and Iaphet is rewarded.	9
				The dwelling of Iaphet in the tents of Sem is foretolde.	9
	8			Arphaxad is borne 100.yeare of Sem.	11
	1693			Selah is borne the 35.yeare of Arphaxad.	11
	1723			Heber is borne in the 30.yeare of the age of Selah.	11
	1757			Peleg is borne the 34.yeare of the age of Heber.	11
				The parting of the earth, or the beginning of nations.	10
				Iaphet the firſt king of Europe.	10
				Sem of Aſia.	10
				Ham of Africa.	10
	1787			Reu is borne the 30.yeare of the age of Peleg.	11
				Nimrod buildeth Babel, Erech, Acchad and Calneth.	11
				He was the firſt founder of the Monarchy of Aſſyria.	11
				The tower of Babel is builded.	11
	1819			Serug is borne the 32.yeare of Reu.	11
	1849			Nahor is borne the 30.yeare of Serug.	11
	1878			Terah is borne the 39.yeare of Nahor.	11
	1948			Abram is borne the 70.yeare of Terah.	11
	1957			Sarai is borne.	17
	1996			Peleg dieth the 239.yeare of his age.	11
	2005			Noah dieth in the 950.yeare of his age.	11
	2023			The promiſe of land, and of ſucceſſion is made to Abram.	12
				Terah with Abram goe from Vr of the Chaldes.	11
				They come to Haran and dwell there.	11
				Abrams departure into Canaan.	12
				From thence becauſe of the dearth he goeth into Egypt.	12
				Sarai being taken from him is reſtored inuiolate.	12
				They depart from Egypt ſafe and ſound.	12
	6			Reu dieth the yeare of his age 239.	11
	9			Abram and Lot being come backe into Canaan, are ſeparated.	13
	2030			The promiſe of land and ſucceſſion is renued.	13
	1			Lot is taken priſoner in the ouerthrow of Sodome.	14
				Abram deliuereth him from the hands of the 4.Kings.	14
				The other Kings honour him with the title of Victory.	14
				He offereth Sacrifice vnto God.	14
				He keepeth nothing of the prey to himſelfe.	15
				Abram deploreth the want of children.	15
10				The promiſe of the land and ſucceſſion is renued.	16
	3			Sarai giueth her maid vnto Abram.	16

Hagar

Prom.	World		Geneſis	Chron.
	4	Hagar hauing runne away, returneth to her miſtris.	16
	2040	Iſmael is borne.	16
20	7	Circumciſion is inſtituted the 99. yeare of Abrahams age.	17
		The names of Sarai and Abram are changed.	17
		Abraham and his family are circumciſed.	17
		Abraham receiueth three Angels into his houſe.	18
		Iſaac is promiſed againe.	18
		The deſtruction of Sodome is declared vnto Abraham.	18
		Abraham prayeth for the Sodomites.	18
		Lot receiueth two Angels into his houſe.	18
		The wickednes of the Sodomites.	19
		The ſauing of Lot and his daughters.	19
		The burning of Sodome.	19
		The inceſt of Lot with his daughters.	19
		Abraham goeth from Mamra to Beerſheba.	20
		Abimelech is puniſhed for taking away Sarah.	20
		Abraham prayeth for him, and he recouereth.	20
	8	Iſaac is borne in the 100. yeare of Abrahams age.	21
	2050	Serug dieth in the 230. yeare of his age.	11
30	2	Iſaac is weaned.	21
		Hagar is caſt out with her ſonne Iſmael.	21
		The couenant betweene Abimelech and Abraham.	21
40	2060	Abraham is prooued in offering his ſonne Iſaac.	22
50	1	A Ramme is offered in ſtead of his ſonne.	22
60	2070	The promiſe of the bleſſing is confirmed.	22
	2080	Terah dieth in the yeare of his age 205.	11
	3	Abraham goeth to dwell in Canaan. Act. 7.
	5	Sarah dieth in the yeare of her age 127.	23
		Abraham bewaileth her.	23
		He buyeth a field to bury her in.	23
		The burying of Sarah.	23
	8	Abraham caſteth to get Iſaac a wife.	24
		Rebecca is gotten to be his wife.	24
		Iſaac being 40. yeares olde, taketh Rebecca for his wife.	24
		Abraham hauing married Keturah, getteth children.	25
	2090	He giueth them gifts and ſendeth them from Iſaac.	25
70	6	Arphaxad dieth the yeare of his age 483.	11
80	2100 8	Iacob and Eſau are borne in the 60. yeare of Iſaac.	25
	2110	Abraham dieth in the yeare of his age 175.	25
90	3	He is buried by Iſaac and Iſmael.	25
		Eſau ſelleth his birth-right for a meſſe of pottage.	25
	6	Iſaac going into Egypt ſtayeth at Gerar.	26
		For feare he faineth Rebecca to be his ſiſter.	26
		He goeth to Beerſheba.	26
		The promiſe is againe confirmed to Iſaac.	26
100	2120 8	Eſau taketh wiues of the heathen when he was 40. yeares olde.	26
110	2130 8	Shem dieth in the yeare of his age 600.	11
120	2140 1	Iſmael dieth in the yeare of his age 137.	25
150	2170	Iſaac intendeth his bleſſing to Eſau.	27
160	2180	Iacob by the craft of his mother getteth it from him.	27
		Iacob by the counſell of his mother, fleeth to Haran.	27
		In a dreame by the way he ſeeth a ladder.	28
		The promiſe is made againe vnto Iacob.	28
		Iacob is receiued into Labans houſe.	29
		He ſerueth ſeauen yeares for Rahel.	29
	5	Leah is brought to his bed in ſtead of Rahel, and is accepted.	29
		He couenanteth to ſerue ſeauen yeares more for Rahel.	29
		Rahel is married to Iacob with Leah.	29
	6	Heber dieth in 464. yeares of his age.	11

Prom.	World		Genesis	Chron. 1.
	7	Ruben.
	8	Simeon. } are borne of Leah.	29	2
	9	Leui.
	2190	Iudah.
	1	Dan. } are borne of Bilhah Rahels maide.	30
170	3	Nepthali.
	[illegible]	Gad. } are borne of Zilpha Leahs maid.	30
	[illegible]	Asser.
	7	Issachar. } are borne of Leah.	30
	9	Zebulon.
		Dinah is also borne of Leah.	30
		Ioseph is borne of Rahel in the yeare of Iacobs age 91.	30
		Iacob bargaineth to serue sixe yeares for cattell.	30
		He getteth double wages by his arte and cunning	30
	2200
	1	God commandeth Iacob to returne into Mesopotamia.	31
180	5	He departeth from Laban secretly with all his family.	31
		He being accused of theft, defendeth himselfe.	31
		The couenant of peace betweene Laban and Iacob.	31
		God comforteth Iacob by his Angels.	32
		Fearing his brother he craueth aid of God.	32
		He wrestleth with an Angell.	32
		who nameth him Israel.	32
		Esau receiueth Iacob friendly.	33
		Esau by much intreaty receiueth Iacobs gifts.	33
		He offereth himselfe and his followers to beare him company.	33
	6	Iacob dwelleth in Succoth.	33
	7	He commeth to Sechem where he dwelleth 8. yeares.	33
		There he buyeth a possession and buildeth an Altar.	33
	9	Iudah hauing turned from his brethren, marrieth Shuah.	38
	2210	Er is borne.	38
	1	Onan is borne.	38
	2	Selah is borne.	38
190	3	Dinah is rauished by the sonne of the King of Sechem.	34
		The Sechemites therefore are slaine by Dinahs brethren.	34
		Iacobs iourney into Bethel.	35
		There he payeth his vow.	35
		Deborah Rebeccahs nurse dieth.	35
		God confirmeth the blessing vnto Iacob.	35
	4	Rahel dieth in labour of Beniamin.	35
		Ruben committeth incest with Bilhah.	35
		The finding of Mules.	36
	5	Ioseph telleth his brethrens faults to their father.	37
		His dreames of his authority in his fathers family.	37		Iob
	6	He is solde into Egypt at the yeares of 17.	37		1
		Iob by Satans meanes loseth his wealth and his children.			2
		He is grieuously afflicted in his body.			2
		His friends visit him.			3
		He curseth the day of his birth.			5,32
		He maintaineth his owne iustice against his friends accusations.			32
		Elihu exhorteth him to acknowledge his sinne.			40
		Iob being reprehended by God, he repenteth.			42
		He offereth Sacrifice for himselfe and his friends.			42
		He is made whole, and his wealth is restored double to him.
	9	Thamar is giuen in marriage to Er, who dieth.	38
		Onan hauing married her, perisheth for the same wickednes.	38	4
	2220
208	2	Iudah committeth incest with Thamar.	38
	7	Ioseph made ruler of Potiphars house.	39
		The chastity of Ioseph.	39
		He is cast into prison three yeares.	39
		The keeper of the prison committeth all to Ioseph.	39
		He expoundeth the dreames of the Kings seruants.	40
	8	Isaac dieth in the yeare of his age 180.	35
	9	Pharaohs dreames.	41

Ioseph

Prom.	World			Chron. 1.
		Ioſeph expoundeth them.	41
		He giueth counſell to prouide for the famine to come.	41
		Hereupon himſelfe is made ruler ouer the land of Egypt, being 30. yeares of age.	41
		The marriage of Ioſeph.	41
	2230	The 7. yeares of plenty beginne.	41
	1	Manaſſes is borne.	41
210	2	Ephraim is borne.	41
	4	Ezron is borne.		2
	6	The beginning of the yeares of famine.	41
	8	Iacob ſendeth his ſonnes into Egypt.	42
		Here Ioſeph entreateth them as if they were ſpies.	42
		They promiſe to bring Beniamin with them.	42
		They beare home their corne and the price in their ſackes.	42
		Beniamin is ſent with the reſt.	43
		The cuppe is found in Beniamins ſacke.	44
		Iudah offereth himſelfe to be a ſeruant for Beniamin.	44
		Ioſeph maketh himſelfe knowne to his brethren.	45
	9	Iacob goeth downe into Egypt, being 130. yeares olde.	46
		Accompanied with his family of 70. ſoules.	46
		Ioſeph meeteth his father.	46
		He teacheth his brethren what to anſwer to Pharaoh.	46
		Iacob commeth before Pharaoh and telleth him his age.	47
		The land of Goſhen is giuen him.	47
		Where Ioſeph ſuſtaineth them with food quietly.	47
	2240	The Egyptians for hunger ſell both lands and liuings.	47
220	1	Ioſeph buyeth all the land of Egypt for Pharaoh.	47
	2	He giueth Seede corne to the Egyptians.	47
230	2250	Iacob appointeth his ſepulchre in Canaan.	47
	5	Iacob adopteth the ſonnes of Ioſeph.	48
	2280	By diuine inſtinct he preferreth the yonger before the elder.	48
		The right of the firſt borne is giuen from Ruben to Ioſeph.	48	5
260		He bleſſeth his ſonnes, and telleth them what ſhall come.	49
	2300	He telleth them that Chriſt ſhall come out of Iudah.	49
280		He willeth them to bury him with his fathers.	49
		Iacob dieth in the faith the 147. yeare of his age.	49
	9	Ioſeph dieth the yeare of his age 110.	50
		They keepe his body embalmed.	50
			Exod.
	2310	The Iſraelites are increaſed in number and power.	1
290	3	The new Pharaoh grieuouſly oppreſſeth them.	1
		The Kings commandement to deſtroy the male children priuily.	1
	2320	Leui dieth the 137. yeare of his age.	6
300	5	So dieth all that generation.	1
310	2330	Ram is borne.
	2360	The edict of drowning the male-children	1
340	2370	Aaron is borne.	7
350	3	Cahat dieth.	6
		Moſes is borne of Amram and Iocabed.	2
	2380	He is caſt into the flagges, and taken vp of Pharaohs daughter.	2	6
360	2400	He is brought vp in the learning of the Egyptians. Act. 7.
380	2410	Ioſhuah is borne. Ioſh. 14.
390	3	Moſes killeth an Egyptian.	2
		For feare of Pharaoh, he fleeth to Madian.	2
		He is married to Zipporah.	2
	4	Caleb is borne, Ioſh. 14.
	2420	The men of Gath beat the Ephraites for robberies.		7
400		Amram dieth in the yeare of his age 137.	6
420	2440
	2450
	1
	2
430	3	God heareth the mone of the Children of Iſrael.	2
		God calleth Moſes to bee the deliuerer of his people at the age of 80. yeares.	3

The depart.	World	m. d.		Exod.	Numb.	Chron.
Their departure out of Egypt.			He is taught how to behaue himſelfe.	3
			Moſes drawing backe is confirmed.	4
			Aaron is giuen to helpe Moſes, and he vndertaketh his calling.	4
			He bringeth his wife and children to Iethro his father in law.	4
			God confirmeth his calling vnto him againe.	4
			He asketh leaue of his father, and goeth toward Egypt with his family.	4
			The circumciſion of his ſonne, being neglected, is puniſhed.	4
			He being circumciſed by Zipporah, God is appeaſed.	4
			Moſes ſendeth Zipporah backe to her father.	18
			Moſes and Aaron doe their meſſage to Pharaoh.	5
			They are ſent away as the heads of ſedition.	5
			The labours of the Iſraelites are increaſed.	5
			The officers of the Iſraelites complaine vnto Pharaoh.	5
			They chide with Moſes and Aaron.	5
			God heareth Moſes, and renueth his promiſe.	6
			Moſes ſpeaketh to the Iſraelites, but they beleeue not.	6
			Being bidden to goe againe vnto Pharaoh, he refuſeth through feare.	6
			Moſes and Aaron are emboldened againſt Pharaoh.	7
			The rod is turned into a Serpent.	7
			Pharaoh is hardened by his Sorcerers iuglings.	7
			The waters are turned into blood.	7
			The King is blinded by the Wiſemens ſorceries.	7
			The plagues of Frogges, Lice, and Flies.	8
			Pharaoh faineth to yeeld, but his heart is hardened.	8
			The plagues of Murraine, Botches, and Haile.	9
			Pharaoh confeſſeth his ſinne.	9
			But afterward he hardeneth his heart.	9
			God telleth Moſes of the hardneſſe of Pharaohs heart.	10
			The plague of Graſhoppers is ſent.	10
		m. d.	Abib is made the firſt moneth.	12
		1. 10	The Lord inſtituteth the Paſſeouer, and feaſt of Sweetbread.	12
			A choice lambe is to be ſlaine after foure daies.	12
			The plague of darkneſſe for three daies ſpace.	10
			The threatnings of Pharaoh againſt Moſes.	10
			The death of the firſt borne is ſignified to Pharaoh.	11
			Moſes departeth away very angry.	11
			God paſſeth by the houſes that are marked with blood.	12
		14	The firſt celebration of the Paſſeouer.	12
			The firſt borne of the Egyptians are ſlaine.	12
		1. 15	The Iſraelites are ſent out with great ſpoiles.	12
			Moſes leadeth them vnto their ſecond ſtanding place.	12	33
			They are commanded yearely to keepe the paſſeouer.	13
			Moſes taketh with him the bones of the Patriarches.	13
			Pharaoh purſueth the Iſraelites.	14
			Moſes deuideth the ſea with his rod.	14
			The Iſraelites goe forth through the midſt of the ſea dri-ſhod.	14
			The Egyptians with their King are drowned.	14
			God the Author of their victory is praiſed in a ſong.	15
			They wander three daies in drie places without water.	15
			They pitch their tents in Mara.	15
			The people murmure by reaſon of the bitter waters.	15
			Moſes by caſting in wood maketh the bitter water ſweet.	15
			God teacheth his people obedience.	15
			They come to Elim, where are twelue fountaines.	15
			They come into the deſart of Sin.	16
			For want of meate they mutter againſt God.	16
			They vpbraid Moſes and Aaron with their plenty in Egypt.	16
			The Lord ſendeth Quailes and Manna.	16
			Manna is kept for a remembrance vnto their poſterity.	16
			The Manna kept till next day putrifieth.	16
			The Sabbath day Manna could not be found.	16
			They murmure for lacke of water.	17
			Moſes ſtriketh the rocke, and the waters flow.	17
			Ioſhuah ouercommeth Amaleck.	17
			They are charged to roote out this nation.	17

The depart.	World.		Exodus.	Num.
		Moſes buildeth an altar vnto the Lord.	17	Chron. 1.
		Iethro commeth to ſee Moſes.	18
		He bringeth Zipporah and her children.	18
		Iethro reioyceth and offereth ſacrifice to God.	18
		By his counſell 70. Elders are choſen.	18
		They pitch their tents ouer againſt Sina.	19
		God ſignifieth that he will renew the couenant.	19
		They are bidden to ſanctifie themſelues three daies.	19
		The people are forbidden to touch the hill.	19
		God appeareth on the Mount in thunder and lightening.	19
3	5	The 10. commandements are giuen with the voice of God.	20
		A great prophet to be ſent. Deut. 18.
		The people being afraid deſire that Moſes may ſpeake to them.	20
	7	Moſes goeth to the toppe of Sinai.	20
		He ſtayed with God faſting 40. daies.	20
		God giueth him the lawes which the people ſhould obſerue, ca. 21. 22. 23.
		God telleth him the forme of the tabernacle, cap. 24. to 31.
4	16	Moſes is angrie for the golden calfe.	32
		He breaketh the two tables.	32
		The Leuites ſlay 3000. of the children of Iſrael.	32
	19	Moſes goeth vp into the mountaine to pray for the people.	32
		There he ſtayeth faſting 40. daies. Deut. 9. 18.
		Moſes returning reprehendeth the people.	32
		The people repent changing their garments.	33
		The Tabernacle of the congregation is erected.	33
		There God promiſeth to dwell with his people.	33
		Moſes deſireth to ſee the face of God.	33
		The tables are renued.	34
		Moſes commeth from the Mount and his face ſhineth.	34
		Beeing come to the congregation he couereth his face.	34
		The obſeruation of the Sabbath is againe commanded.	35
		The readineſſe of the people to offer for the worke.	35
		God chuſeth and nameth forth his workmen.	35
		The making of the Tabernacle with all the furniture.	36
2	2454		&c.
1	1	The Tabernacle with the appurtenances is reared vp.	40
		The glorie of the Lord deſcendeth vpon the Tabernacle.	40
		They iourney not, vnleſſe the cloud aſcend from the Tabernacle.	40
			Leuit.
		God giueth charge out of the Tabernacle for the burnt offerings.	1
		Concerning meate offerings.	2
		The Sacrifices of thanſgiuing, or peace offerings.	3
		The offering for ſinne done of ignorance.	4
		A larger declaration of the Sacrifices.	6
		A declaration of the Sacrifice of thanksgiuing.	7
		The conſecration of Aaron and his ſonnes.	8
		They muſt abide 7. daies at the dore of the Tabernacle.	8
8		Aaron ſacrificeth for himſelfe and the people.	9
		Nadab and Abihu are burnt.	10
		The prieſts mourning for them is forbidden.	10
		The Prieſts are forbidden wine and ſtrong drinke.	10
		A law for the eating of holy things.	10
		Of the cleane and vncleane beaſts, birds, and fiſhes.	11
		How women ſhould be purged after their deliuerance.	12
		Obſeruations to know the leproſie.	13
		The cleanſing of euery leproſie.	14
		The purging of vncleane iſſues.	15
		The ordinance of yearely cleanſing of ſinnes.	16
		A law concerning the circumſtances of Sacrifices.	17
		A law concerning matrimonie.	18
		A law for iuſtice in weights and meaſures.	19
		The dutie of the Magiſtrate in puniſhing.	20
		Of the puritie and honour of the Prieſts.	21
		Ordinances for the prieſts and offerings.	22
		Lawes for keeping their feaſts.	23

The depart.	World.		Leuit.	Chron. 1.
		The blaſphemer is ſtoned.	24
		Lawes for keeping the feaſts of yeares.	25
		The reward of obedience.	26
		Lawes concerning vowes and tithes.	27
			Numb.
	14	The 2. paſſeouer kept at Sinai.	9
		They which were vncleane muſt keepe it the 2. moneth.	9
		The reaſon why they wandred ſo long in the deſert.	9
	1	The number of the Iſraelites able to goe to warre 603 550.	1
		The office of Leuites in the ſeruice of the Tabernacle.	1
		The placing of their Tents, and the order of their iourneying.	2
		The number, place, and office of the Leuites.	3
		The Leuites are conſecrated in the place of the firſt borne.	3
		Offices are diſtributed to the Leuites.	4
		The polluted muſt be caſt forth of the hoſt.	5
		A law concerning iealouſie.	5
		A law of the conſecration of the Nazarites.	6
	2	The heads of the tribes offer in their order.	7
		The dedication of the Altar of burnt offerings.	7
		The manner of asking counſell of God is preſcribed.	7
		The office of the high Prieſt about the Lampes.	8
		The Leuites are conſecrated for the firſt borne.	8
		The time of the Leuites miniſtration.	8
		The vſe of the ſiluer trumpets.	10
	20	The cloud aſcending giueth a token to goe forward.	10
		Their three daies iourney from Sinai to Paran.	10
		Hobab is their guide and companion in their iourneies.	10
	24	The people murmure and are puniſhed with fire from the Lord.	11
		At the prayer of Moſes they are deliuered.	11
		They loth Manna.	11
		Their luſt after fleſh is ſatisfied and puniſhed.	11
		Moſes deſireth to be freed from his office.	11
		The 70. elders are choſen.	11
		Aaron and Miriam grudge againſt Moſes.	12
		God preferreth Moſes.	12
		Miriam is ſticken with Leproſie, and is healed at the prayer of Moſes.	12
		They goe from Hazaroth to Rithmah.	33
		From Rithmah to Rimmon-parez.	33
		From Rimmon-parez to Libnah.	33
		From Libnah to Riſſah.	33
		From Riſſah to Kehelathah.	33
		From Kehelathah to mount Sapher.	33
		From Sapher to Haradah.	33
		From Haradah to Makheloth.	33
		From Makheloth to Tahat.	33
		From Tahat to Tarah, thence to Mithkah.	33
		From Mithkah to Haſmunah.	33
		Spies are ſent before into Canaan.	13
		After 40. daies beeing returned they tell the ſtrength of the Cananites.	13
		The people are amazed and angrie with the ſpies.	13
		The people conſpire to returne into Ægypt.	14
		They are barred from entring into the land of promiſe.	14
		They are commanded to goe backe into the wilderneſſe.	14
	2460	They that would goe forward are ſlaine by the enemie.	14
		The lawes are renewed to them beeing about to enter Canaan.	15
10	5	The puniſhment of him that brake the Sabbath.	15
		The conſpiracie of Corah againſt Moſes and Aaron.	16
	7	Dathan, Abiram, and the company of Corah are ſwallowed by the earth.	16
		Corah going about to get the prieſthood is burnt with fire.	16
		They are commanded to couer the Altar with the cenſers of the conſpiratours.	16
	2470	The people murmure the next day for them.	16
20		The plague begun is ſtayed by Aaron.	16
		Aarons rod buddeth and ſo he is confirmed in his office.	17
	2480	The office of the Prieſts, and their wages.	18

		The cleanſing water is deſcribed.
30		Miriam dieth.	19	Chron. I.
	2490	The people murmure for lacke of water, chiding with Moſes.	20
		Moſes is commaunded to ſpeake vnto the rocke.	20
		He ſtriketh with diſtruſt.	20
		Hereupon Moſes and Aaron are barred from entring into the land.	20
		Edom denieth the Iſraelites paſſage.	20
		Aaron dieth in mount Hor at the age of 123. yeares.	20
		Eleazar his ſonne ſucceedeth in his roome.	20
		King Arad fighteth with the Iſraelites.	20
		Iſrael hauing vowed a vow vnto the Lord, vanquiſheth Arad.	21
		They come to Zalmonah.	21
		They depart from Zalmonah and pitch in Punon.	33
		The fierie ſerpents are ſent for the murmuring of the people.	33
		They are cured by prayers and looking on the brazen ſerpent.	21
		They goe from Punon to Oboth.	21
		From Oboth to the mountaines of Abarim.	33
		Afterwards to Sared and Dibon Gad.	33
		From thence to Almon-Diblathaim.	33
		From thence they pitch thei; tents before Nebo.	33
		There they praiſe God for a fountaine of water.	33
		The kings of the Amorites are deſtroyed, and their kingdomes taken.	21
		Og king of Baſan is ouercome.	21
		Moab ſendeth for Balaam to curſe Iſrael.	21
		By the way he is rebuked of an Angell.	22
		Twice he aſſayeth to curſe them.	22
		Beeing changed by inſtinct he bleſſeth them.	23
		Balaam propheſieth of the comming of Chriſt, and the deſtruction of the Nations thereabout.	23
		The people commit fornication with the daughters of Moab.	24
		There periſh for luſting 24000.	25
		The zeale of Phineas ſtayeth the anger of God.	25
		God eſtabliſheth the Prieſt hood to Phineas and his poſteritie.	25
		God commaundeth to kill the Midianites.	25
		The people are numbred the ſecond time.	25
		Moſes is commaunded to diuide the promiſed land.	26
		The heritage of the daughters of Zelophahad.	26
		Moſes is forewarned of his death.	27
		Ioſhua is choſen to be his ſucceſſour.	27
		The law of ſacrifices.	27
		Sacrifices for the latter Feaſts of the yeare.	28
		The law of vowes.	29
		Reuenge is taken on the Midianites.	30
		The Rubenites and Gadites poſſeſſe the land on this ſide Iordan.	31
		The halfe tribe of Manaſſes gets Gilead.	32
		The land of Canaan is diuided to the 9. tribes.	32
		Cities are aſſigned to the Leuites.	34
		The inheritance muſt not be giuen from one Tribe to another.	35
			36
			Deut.
		Moſes about to die readeth ouer the law to the people, á primo capit. ad	28
		God renueth his couenant.	29
		Moſes rehearſeth his ſong to the people.	32
		Moſes dieth in the yeare of his age 120. and is buried by God.	34
		The Iſraelites mourne for him 30. daies.	34
40	3	The Lord encourageth Ioſhua to inuade the land.	1
		Ioſhua ſendeth men to ſpie Iericho.	2
		Rahab hideth them and ſaueth them.	2
		They promiſe to ſaue her and her family.	2
		Ioſhua commandeth the people to prepare themſelues.	1
		They come to Iordane.	3
		The people is ſanctified.	3
		The prieſts are ſent before with the Arke.	3
		Iordane parteth aſunder while the people paſſe.	3
		They ſet vp a monument in remembrance of their paſſage.	4
		Circumciſion commanded in Gilgal.	5

They

The depart.	World.			Iosua.	Chron. I.
			They offer and eate of the first fruits.	5
			Being circumcised they keepe the passeouer.	5
			Manna ceaseth.	5
			Ioshua is confirmed by a vision.	5
			The wals of Iericho fall at the sound of the trumpets.	6
			Ioshua curseth him that shall build them againe.	6
			They of Ai put the Israelites to flight.	7
			The punishment of Achan for sacriledge.	7
			The siege and winning of Ai.	8
			An altar is set vp in Geball.	8
			The law is written vpon stones.	8
			The blessings and cursings are rehearsed.	8
			The craft and league of the Gibeonites.	9
			Their deceit is punished with seruitude.	9
			God haileth, and the Sunne and Moone stand both still.	10
			The fiue kings are slaine at Gibeon.	10
			Their bodies are hanged vpon trees.	10
			Ioshua subdueth that whole countrie.	10
			Caleb asketh Hebron.	14
			Ioshua returneth to Gilgal.	14
	2500		And now the Land had rest.	14
			The commandement for deuiding the land.	13
50			The diuision of the land on this side Iordane.	14
			Hebron is established vnto Caleb.	14
			The lot of the children of Iudah.	15
			Sichem, &c. is giuen to the posteritie of Ioseph.	16
			Ioshua fighteth against the Northerne Canaanites.	11
			The phrase of Ioshua, and a catalogue of his acts.	12
	2510		The tabernacle is remooued from Gilgal to Shiloh.	18
			The rest of the land is distributed to 7. tribes.	18
			The cities of refuge are appointed.	20
			Cities are giuen to the Leuites by lot.	21
			Ruben, Gad, and the halfe tribe of Manasses are dismissed.	22
			There is great adoe for the altar which they built at Iordan.	22
			Ioshua hauing called the Elders together giueth them counsaile.	23
			And hauing called the people he reneweth the league.	24
			They set vp a pillar for a witnesse.	24
			Ioshua biddeth the people farewell.	24
			The Israelites are reprooued for not expelling the Canaanites. Iud. 1. 2.
			Ioshua dieth and is buried in Timnah.	24
			Iosephs bones are buried in Sechem.	24
			Eleazer dieth, Phineas succeedeth him.	24
				Iudges.
			The yeares of. Iudg. Oppr.
			The Israelites aske the Lord who shall be their captaine.	1
	1		Adonibezeck is vanquished by Iuda and Ioseph.	1
			Othoniel yeares 40. the first Iudge of Israel.	3
	2	2
60	3	3
	4	4
	5	5
	6	6
	7	7
	8	8
	9	9
	2520	10
	1	11
	2	12
70	3	13
	4	14
	5	15
	6	16
	7	17
	8	18

The

Depart.	World.	Iud.	Epp.		Iudg.
	9	19	1	The Iſraelites doe wickedly in their marriages and Idols.	3	Chron. 1.
	2530	20		Their bondage vnder Cuſhan eight yeares.	3
	1	21	2	Boaz is borne of Rahab, Matth, 1. 5.
	2	22	3	Michah reſtoreth his theſt to his mother.	17
				His mother dedicateth it to Idolatrie.	17
				An Image is made of it.	17
				He hireth a Leuite to be his Prieſt.	17
				The children of Dan ſend men to ſearch the land.	18
				They take the Gods and Prieſt of Michah away.	18
				They deſtroy Laiſh.	18
				They build it againe.	18
80				They ſet vp the Idoll which they tooke from Michah.	18
				A certaine Leuite fetcheth his wife from Bethleem.	19
				Beeing at Gibeah he is beſet by the citizens.	19
				He is compelled to expoſe his concubine.	19
				She is moſt villanouſly abuſed to the death.	19
				The Leuite cutteth her in peeces.	19
				And ſendeth her to the twelue tribes.	19
				The Iſraelites cite the Beniamites.	20
				They ſend for them that did the villanie.	20
				The Iſraelites are twice ouercome.	20
				At length they get the victorie.	20
				They aske counſell of God for the reſtoring of the tribe.	21
				They ſlay the men of Iabeſh-Gilead.	21
				And giue of their virgins 500. to the Beniamites.	21
				The Beniamites take the daughters of Shiloh.	21
				The reconciliation of the Tribes.	21
	3	23	4
	4	24	5
	5	25	6
	6	26	7
	7	27	8	Cuſham the King of Syria is ouercome.	3
	8	28		The Iſraelites are deliuered.	3
	9	29
	2540	30
	1	31
	2	32
90	3	33
	4	34
	5	35
	6	36
	7	37
	8	38
	9	39
	2550	40
	1	1		Ehud the ſecond Iudge of Iſrael 80. yeares.	3
	2	2		He was left handed.	3
100	3	3
	4	4
	5	5
	6	6
	7	7
	8	8
	9	9
	2560	10	1	The Iſraelites ſinne againe.	3
	1	11	2	Eglon, Amaleck, and Moab oppreſſe them.	3
	2	12	3	The Iſraelites are ouercome and Iericho is taken.	3
100	3	13	4
	4	14	5
	5	15	6
	6	16	7
	7	17	8	The Embaſſadour of the Iſraelites to Eglon.	3
	8	18		Eglon is ſlaine in his parlour.	3
	9	19		The eſcaping of Ehud.	3
	2570	20		The ſuppreſſion of the Moabites.	3

Depart.	World.	Iud.	Opp.		Chron. I.
	1	21
	2	22
120	3	23
	4	24
	5	25
	6	26
	7	27
	8	28
	9	29
	2580	30		The Iſraelites are oppreſſed of the Philiſtims.	3
	1	31		Samgar ouercommeth the Philiſtims with an oxes goad.	3
	2	32
130	3	33
	4	34
	5	35
	6	36
	7	37
	8	38
	9	39
	2590	40
	1	41
	2	42
140	3	43
	4	44
	5	45
	6	46
	7	47
	8	48
	9	49
	2600	50
	1	51
	2	52
150	3	53
	4	54
	5	55
	6	56
	7	57
	8	58
	9	59
	2610	60
	1	61
	2	62
160	3	63
	4	64
	5	65
	6	66
	7	67
	8	68
	9	69
	2620	70
	1	71
	2	72
170	3	73
	4	74
	5	75
	6	76
	7	77
	8	78
	9	79
	2630	80
	1	1	1	The Iſraelites againe ſinne againſt God.	4
	2	2	2	{They are oppreſſed by Iabin King of Canaan.	4
180	3	3	3	{Deborah Iudg. 3. yeares 40. and a Propheteſſe.	4
	4	4	4
	5	5	5

Depart.	World.	Iud.	Opp.		Chr. 1.	Ruth.
	6	6	6
	7	7	7
	8	8	8
	9	9	9
	2640	10	10
	1	11	11
	2	12	12
190	3	13	13
	4	14	14
	5	15	15
	6	16	16
	7	17	17
	8	18	18
	9	19	19
	2650	20	20	Barac is choſen captaine againſt Iabin.	4
	1	21		The battell at the brooke Kiſon.	4
	2	22		Iahel killeth Siſera.	4
200	3	23		Deborah ſingeth a ſong of thanksgiuing for the victory.	5
	4	24		God is acknowledged the author of the victory.	5
	5	25		Shee bleſſeth the Conquerours.	5
	6	26		A propheticall prayer.	5
	7	27
	8	28
	9	29
	2660	30
	1	31		Elimelech by reaſon of the famine, goeth into Moab.		1
	2	32		He dieth there togither with his two ſonnes.		1
210	3	33
	4	34
	5	35
	6	36
	7	37
	8	38
	9	39
	2670	40		Naomi of Bethlehem returneth with Ruth her daughter in law.		1
				Ruth gleaneth corne in the field of Boaz.		2
				The gentlenes of Boaz toward her.		2
				Shee goeth ſecretly and ſleepeth at Boaz feete.		3
				Shee telleth him of his neere kindred vnto her.		3
				He ſpeaketh of her marriage to her next kinſman.		4
				He refuſing, Boaz marrieth her.		4
				Obed the grandfather of Dauid is borne.		4
	1	1		The Iſraelites turne from God.	6
	2	2	1	They are oppreſſed of the Madianites 7. yeares.	6
220	3	-3	2	A Prophet reprooueth them.	6
	4	4	3	Gedeon Iudge 4. yeares 40.	6
	5	5	4
	6	6	5
	7	7	6
	8	8	7	Gedeon called by an Angel is aſſured by ſignes.	6
	9	9		Gedeon deſtroyeth Baal by night.	6
	2680	10		Beeing accuſed of ſacriledge, he is defended.	6
	1	11		He ſendeth backe part of his ſouldiers.	7
	2	12		The 300. that lapped the water are retained.	7
230	3	13		Gedeon is confirmed by a dreame.	7
	4	14		The enemies are put to flight with the trumpets, pitchers, and torches.	7
	5	15		Gedeon doth appeaſe the Ephraimites.	8
	6	16
	7	17
	8	18
	9	19
	2690	20		The citizens of Sucoth deny him victuals.	8
	1	21		Gedeon is reuenged vpon them.	8

Depart.	World.	Iud.	Opp.		Iudg.	Chron. 1.
	2	22		Zebah and Salmunah are ſlaine.	8
240	3	23		He refuſeth to be King.	8
	4	24		Of the ſpoiles he maketh an Ephod, which is the deſtruction of his familie.
	5	25			8
	6	26
	7	27
	8	28
	9	29
	2700	30
	1	31
	2	32
250	3	33
	4	34
	5	35
	6	36
	7	37
	8	38
	9	39
	2710	40		Abimelech Iudge 5. yeares 3.	9
	1	1		He vſurpeth the rule ouer the Sichemites.	9
	2	2		He putteth all his brethren to death except one.	9
260	3	3		Who denounceth his ouerthrow and the Sichemites.	9
	4	1		Hatred betweene Abimelech and the Sichemites.	9
	5	2		Abimelech is wounded to death by a woman.	9
	6	3		His armour-bearer thruſts him through.	9
	7	4		Tholah Iudge 6. yeares 23.	10
	8	5
	9	6
	2720	7
	1	8
	2	9
270	3	10
	4	11
	5	12
	6	13
	7	14
	8	15
	9	16
	2730	17
	1	18
	2	19
280	3	20
	4	21
	5	22
	6	23
	7	1		Iair Iudge 7. yeares 22.	10
	8	2
	9	3
	2740	4
	1	5	1	The Iſraelites fall into idolatry.	10
	2	6	2	God giueth them into the hands of their enemies.	10
290	3	7	3
	4	8	4
	5	9	5
	6	10	6
	7	11	7
	8	12	8
	9	13	9
	2750	14	10
	1	15	11	Eli is borne.
	2	16	12
300	3	17	13
	4	18	14
	5	19	15
	6	20	16	Ieſſe is borne of Obed. Matth. 1.

The dep.	World.	Iud.	Opp.			Chron. 1.
	7	21	17
	8	22	18	They are grieuouſly oppreſſed by the Philiſtims.	10
				They crie vnto God and are rebuked.	10
				They repent and obtaine mercy.	10
	9	1		Iephte Iudge 8.yeares 6.	11
	2760	2		He is made captaine of the warre againſt the Ammonites.	11
	1	3		He voweth a vow.	11
	2	4		Embaſſadours are ſent to the Ammonites.	11
310	3	5		The victory of Iephte.	11
	4	6		His daughter is ſacrificed.	11
				The warre of Iephte againſt the Ephraimites.	12
	5	1		Ibſan Iudge 9.yeares 7.	12
	6	2		The Ephraimites knowne by their tongue are ſlaine.	12
	7	3		Sampſon a Nazarite is promiſed.	13
	8	4		The promiſe is confirmed by ſignes.	13
	9	5		The ſame promiſe is performed Sampſon being borne.	13
	2770	6	1	The Philiſtims oppreſſe the Iſraelites 40.yeares.	13
	1	7	2
	2	1	3	Elon Iudge 10.yeares 10.	12
320	3	2	4
	4	3	5
	5	4	6
	6	5	7
	7	6	8
	8	7	9
	9	8	10
	2780	9	11
	1	10	12
	2	1	13	Abdon Iudge 11.yeares 8.	12
330	3	2	14
	4	3	15
	5	4	16
	6	5	17
	7	6	18
	8	7	19
	9	8	20
	2790	1	21	Sampſon Iudge 12.yeares 20.	13
	1	2	22	He loueth a Philiſtim.	14
	2	3	23	On the day of his marriage he killeth a Lyon without weapon.	14
340	3	4	24	Returning from his nuptials, he taketh hony from the body of the Lyon.	14
	4	5	25	He propoundeth a riddle.	14
	5	6	26	His minde is detected by his wife.	14
	6	7	27	He goeth home without his wife.	14
	7	8	28	He killeth the Philiſtims.	14
	8	9	29	The wife of Sampſon is married to his companion.	14
	9	10	30	His wife thus gone, he burneth the Philiſtims corne.	15
	2800	11	31	The Philiſtims reuenging themſelues, againe he ſlayeth them.	15
	1	12	32	He is bound and brought vnto them.	15
	2	13	33	With the iaw-bone of an Aſſe he killeth a thouſand Philiſtims.	15
350	3	14	34	Beeing thirſtie, God giueth him water.	15
	4	15	35	He goeth to an Harlot at Azzah.	16
	5	16	36	He carrieth away the gates of the city.	16
	6	17	37	Dalilah deceiueth him, and bereaueth him of his ſtrength.	16
	7	18	38	They put out his eyes, and put him in the mill.	16
	8	19	39	He pulleth downe the houſe on the Philiſtims.	16
	9	20	40	And there dieth with them.	Sam. 1.
	2810	1		Eli Iudge 13.yeares 40.	4
	1	2
	2	3
360	3	4		Hannah enuieth Peninnah.	1
	4	5		Shee is derided for beeing barren.	1
	5	6		Shee prayeth to the Lord for a ſonne.	1
	6	7		Shee voweth her ſonne vnto the Lord.	1
	7	8		Her anſwer to Eli reproouing her.	1
	8	9		Samuel is borne.	1

The depart.	World.	Iud.	Opp.		Samuel 1.	Chron. 1.
	9	10		Hannah singeth a song vnto the Lord.	2
	2820	11		The wickednes of the ſonnes of Eli.	2
	1	12		The Iſraelites abhorre their offering.	2
	2	13		Eli his indulgence toward his ſonnes.	2
370	3	14
	4	15
	5	16
	6	17
	7	18		God foretelleth Samuel of the deſtruction of Eli.	3
	8	19		Samuel denounceth deſtruction to Eli and his poſterity.	3
	9	20		Samuel his authority in all Iſrael.	3
	2830	21
	1	22
	2	23
380	3	24
	4	25
	5	26
	6	27
	7	28
	8	29
	9	30
	2840	31
	1	32
	2	33
390	3	34		The Iſraelites are put to flight by the Philiſtims.	4
	4	35		The Arke of the Lord is brought into the campe.	4
	5	36		The Iſraelites are beaten the ſecond time.	4
	6	37		The Arke of the Lord is taken by the Philiſtims.	4
	7	38		At this newes Eli and his daughter in law in childbed die.	4
	8	39		At the preſence of the Arke, Dagon falleth downe, and is broken.	5
	9	40		The men of Aſhdod are plagued with Emerods.	5
	2850	1		Samuel Iudge 14. yeares 40.	7
	1	2		The Arke is ſent backe in a waine after ſixe moneths.	6
	2	3		The men of Bethſhemeſh are ſtricken for looking in the Arke.	6
400	3	4		The Arke is brought into the houſe of Abinadab.	6
	4	5		The manner of the gouernment vnder Samuel.	7
	5	6
	6	7
	7	8
	8	9
	9	10		Dauid is borne.		3
	2860	11
	1	12
	2	13
410	3	14
	4	15
	5	16
	6	17
	7	18
	8	19
	9	20		The Iſraelites by Samuels meanes repent.	7
	2870	21		They are ſaued from the inuaſion of the Philiſtims.	7
	1	22		They recouer the cities which they had loſt.	7
	2	23
420	3	24
	4	25
	5	26		Samuel maketh his ſonnes Iudges ouer Iſrael.	8
	6	27		Who follow not his ſteps.	8
	7	28		The Iſraelites aske a King.	8
	8	29		Samuel diſſwadeth them from their petition.	8
	9	30		Yet at length he yeeldeth vnto them.	8
	2880	31	1	Saul ſeeking his fathers aſſes, commeth to Samuel.	9
		1		He is forewarned of the kingdome.	9
		1		He is bidden to the feaſt.	9
				Sauls ſeruant is ſent away.	9

He

Depart.	World.	Iud.	Kin.		Samuel 1.	Chron. 1.
				He is annointed King priuately.	10
				Saul is among the Prophets.	10
				Saul is choſen King by Lot.	10
				The people receiue him with acclamations.	10
				The Amonites warre againſt Iabeſh Gilead.	11
				They take truce for ſeauen dayes.	11
				Saul deliuereth them.	11
	1	32	2	Saul his calling to the kingdome is renewed.	11
				Samuel teacheth him his duty.	12
				He reprooue the ingratitude of the people.	12
				God by miracle cauſeth them to confeſſe their ſinne.	12
				Samuel exhorteth the people to follow the Lord.	12
				Ionathan vanquiſheth the Philiſtims.	13
				The Philiſtims pitch their tents ouer againſt Gilgal.	13
				Saul muſtereth the Iſraelites.	13
				Saul Sacrificeth without Samuel.	13
				God reiecteth Saul.	13
				The great ſlauery wherein the Philiſtims kept the Iſraelites.	13
				Ionathan putteth the Philiſtims to flight.	14
				Saul would put Ionathan to death.	14
				The people deliuer him.	14
	2	33		Saul deſtroyeth the Amalakites.	15
				Sauls ſinne in too much lenity.	15
				God pronounceth his reiection againe.	15
				Samuel heweth Agag in peeces.	15
				Samuel is ſent to annoint Dauid.	16
				The Spirit of the Lord commeth vpon Dauid.	16
				Saul ſendeth for Dauid.	16
				The Rubenites warre.	17	6
				Goliah challengeth a ſingle combate.	17
				He is ſlaine of Dauid.	17
				The Philiſtims flee.	18
				The Amity of Ionathan and Dauid.	18
430	3	34		Dauid is made captaine of Sauls guard.	18
	4	35		The women in their ſong preferre him before Saul.	18
				Saul therefore hateth Dauid.	18
				He conſpireth his death.	18
				God by his prouidence deliuereth Dauid.	18
				Sauls euill intent is detected by Ionathan.	19
				Dauid is reconciled to Saul by Ionathan.	19
				He warreth againſt the Philiſtims.	19
				Saul ſeeketh his death.	19
				He is deliuered by his wife Michal.	19
				The ſpirit of propheſie commeth vpon Saul and his Embaſſadours.	19
				Dauid fleeth to Naioth in Ramah.	20
				He complaineth to Ionathan of his fathers iniury.	20
				Their counſell for the ſearching out of Sauls minde.	20
	5	36		They renew their league of friendſhip.	20
	6	37		Ionathan deliuereth Dauid.	20
	7	38		Dauid commeth to Ahimelech.	21
				He getteth the ſhewbread and the ſword of Goliah.	21
				Being fled to Gath, the Philiſtims acknowledge him.	21
				He eſcapeth by faining himſelfe madde.	21
				Dauid fleeth to the Moabites.	22
				Beeing warned by a Prophet, he goeth backe to Iudea.	22
				Which beeing heard, Saul feareth treaſon.	22
				Saul ſlayeth Ahimelech and his family.	22
				He raſeth the whole citie.	22
				Abiathar eſcaping, commeth vnto Dauid.	22
				Dauid chaſeth the Philiſtims from Keilah.	23
				He receiueth Abiathar.	23
				Dauid asking counſell of God, learneth all the counſels of Saul.	23
				He hideth himſelfe in the wilderneſſe of Ziph.	23
				There he reneweth friendſhip with Ionathan.	23
				The men of Ziph betray him to Saul.	23

The depart.	World.	King.			Sam. 1.	Chron. 1.
				Sauls enterpriſe is broken in purſuing Dauid.	23
				Saul purſueth Dauid in the wilderneſſe of Engedi.	24
				Dauid hid in a caue ſpareth Saul.	24
				He cutteth off the lap of his garment.	24
				Saul acknowledgeth his owne iniuſtice.	24
				He maketh Dauid to ſweare vnto him to fauour his poſterity.	24
	8	39		Samuel dieth.	25
				Dauid goeth downe into the wilderneſſe of Paran.	25
				He helpeth Nabals heardmen.	25
				Nabal euill-intreateth his meſſengers.	25
				The Lord killeth Nabal.	25
				Dauid taketh Abigail to his wife.	25
				The Ziphims againe diſcouer Dauid to Saul.	26
				Saul bringeth an armie againſt him.	26
				Dauid taketh away Sauls ſpeare.	26
				And a pot of water from his head.	26
				Saul confeſſeth his ſinne.	26
	9	40		Dauid flieth to Achiſh king of Gath.	27
				Who giueth him Ziglag.	27
				Dauid deſtroieth certaine of the Philiſtims.	27
				He maketh Achiſh beleeue they are the ſpoiles of Iſrael,	27
				The Philiſtims ſet vpon Saul.	28
				Dauid promiſeth to Achiſh his aſſiſtance in the battell.	28
				Dauid hath the chiefe charge about Achiſh.	28
				The Philiſtims prepare warre with the Iſraelites.	28
				Saul conſulteth with a witch.	28
				A ghoſt appeareth and declareth his ruine.	28
				With feare and faintnes he falleth downe.	28
				The Philiſtims cauſe Dauid to be ſent backe.	29
				Achiſh is compelled to let him goe.	29
				The Amalekites burne Ziglag.	30
				Dauid purſueth them and recouereth the prey.	30
				Which he deuideth and ſendeth part to his friends.	30
				Saul fighting with the Philiſtims, is put to flight.	31
				His ſonnes being ſlaine in the battell, he killeth himſelfe.	31
				The bodies of Saul and his ſonnes are hanged on the wals.	31
				The mē of Iabeſh take down their bodies, burn thē, & bury their bones	31
					Sam. 2.
				He that tolde Dauid of Sauls death, is puniſhed.	1
				Dauid mourneth for the death of Saul.	1
440	2890	1	1	Dauid is annointed King in Hebron.	2
				Abner maketh Iſhboſheth king ouer Iſrael.	2
				The ſame raigneth two yeares.	2
				The warre betweene Dauid and Iſhboſheth.	2
				Abner and his men are put to flight.	2
	1	2	2	The children of Dauid in Hebron.	3
				Michal is reſtored to Dauid.	3
				Abner and the Iſraelites returne vnto Dauid.	3
				Abner by treacherie is ſlaine and buried.	3
				The king declareth that it was done vnknowne to him.	3
				Baanah and Rechab ſlay Iſhboſheth.	4
	2		3	Dauid commandeth them to be ſlaine.	4
	3		4	The head of Iſhboſheth is honourably buried.	4
	4		5	Dauid is made King ouer all Iſrael.	5
	5		6	He taketh the fort of Zion.	5
	6		7	He maketh amity with the King of Tyre.	5
	7		8	He ouercommeth the Philiſtims twice.	5
	8		9	The Arke is brought from the houſe of Abinadab.	6	13
	9		10	Vzzah for raſhly touching the Arke, is ſtricken dead.	6
	2900		11	It is put into the houſe of Obed Edom.	6
	1		12	It is brought to Ieruſalem.	6
	2		13	Dauid dannceth before it, and is deſpiſed of Michal.	6
450	3		14	Shee therefore is puniſhed with barrennes.	6
	4		15
	5		16
	6		17	Nathan perſwadeth the building of the Temple, and diſſwadeth it.	7	17

The Depart.	World.	King.			Sam. 2.
				God promiſeth to Dauid continuance in his kingdome.	7	Chron. 1.
	7	18		Dauid ouercommeth the Moabites and Syrians, &c.	8	18
				His friendſhip with the king of Camath.	8
				He dedicateth the ſpoiles vnto God.	8
				Dauid maketh officers in church and commonwealth.	8
				The kindneſſe of Dauid to Mephiboſheth.	9
	8	19		Hanun King of Ammon villanouſly handleth Dauids meſſengers.	10	19
				The Ammonites are twiſe ouercome.	10
				The Syrians require peace and become tributaries.	10
	9	20		The time of the warre with the Ammonites Dauid is at home.	11	20
				Dauid committeth adulterie.	11
				Vriah is ſlaine.	11
				Dauid marrieth Bathſheba.	11
				Dauid reprooued by Nathan confeſſeth his ſinne.	12
				The child conceiued in adulterie dieth.	12
				Dauid hauing before faſted and prayed for it then ceaſeth.	12
	2910	21
	1	22		Salomon is borne of Bathſheba.	12
				Rabbah is taken.	12
				The citizens are grieuouſly puniſhed.	12
	2	23		Tamar is ſent in to Ammon by her father.	13
460.	3	24	1	Ammon defileth her.	13
				Tamar is comforted by her brother Abſolom.	13
	4	25	2	Abſolom diſſembleth his hatred two yeares.	13
	5	26		He prouideth that Ammon is ſlaine at a banquet.	13
	6	27	1	Abſolom is baniſhed 3. yeares.	15
	7	28	2
	8	29	3	Dauids heart is toward Abſolom.	14
	9	30	1	He is called home by Ioabs meanes.	14
	2920	31	2	And at laſt he is reconciled.	14
	1	32
	2	33		The practiſe of Abſolom to aſpire to the kingdome.	15
				The people conſpire with him againſt Dauid.	15
				Dauid fleeth out of the citie.	15
				The counſell to hinder Abſolom.	15
				The goods of Mephiboſheth are giuen to Ziba.	16
				Shemei curſeth Dauid.	16
				Dauid abſtaineth from reuenge.	16
				Huſhais counſell to Abſolom.	16
				The counſell of Ahitophel.	16
				Dauids concubines are defiled.	16
				Ahitophels counſell againſt Dauid.	17
				Huſhais counſell is preferred.	17
				Dauid goeth ouer Iordane.	17
				Ahitophel hangeth himſelfe.	17
				Dauid deuideth his armie.	18
				Abſolom is hanged, ſlaine, and caſt into a pit.	18
				Dauid lamenteth the death of Abſolom.	18
				Ioab reproueth him.	19
				The tribe of Iudah bring him ouer Iordane.	19
				Dauid is reſtored.	19
				Shemei confeſſeth his fault, and is pardoned.	19
				Mephiboſheth is reſtored.	19
				The Iſraelites contend with Iudah.	19
				The hoſpitalitie of Barſillai to Dauid.	19
470	3	34	1	The Iſraelites follow the rebell Shebah.	20
	4	35	2	Only the tribe of Iudah bringeth the King to Hieruſalem.	20
	5	36	3	The concubines which were defiled are committed to ward.	20
	6	37		Amaſa followeth after Sheba.	20
				Ioab killeth Amaſa traiterouſly.	20
				Ioab and his brother vanquiſh Sheba.	20
				The famine of three yeares beginneth.	21
				Which was ſent for the ſlaughter of the Gibeonites.	21
				The ſeauen Nephewes of Saul are hanged.	21

Depart.	World.	King.			Sam. 2.
				Dauids battels against the Philistims.	21	Chron. 1.
				The issue of Goliah are slaine.	21
	7	38		Dauid causeth the people to be numbred.	24
	8	39		Dauid hath his chuise of three plagues.	24
				He chuseth to fall into Gods hands.	24
				The repentance of Dauid and the people.	24
	9	40		Dauids song in the praise of God.	23
				The last words of Dauid.	23
				A Catalogue of the captaines ouer Dauids armies.	23	11
				The water fetch from the fountaine of Bethleem is powred out.	23
					King. 1.
				Roboam is borne.	1
				Dauid beeing stricken in yeares, Abishag is appointed to cherish him.	1
				The conspiracie of Adoniah to get the Kingdome.	1
				Salomon is annointed by the commandement of Dauid.	1	29
				Adoniah fleeth to the Altar.	1
				He is pardoned and let to come home.	1
				Dauid about to die, instructeth Salomon.	2
				He commandeth him to cherish the posteritie of Barsillai.	2
				And to kill Ioab and Shemei.	2	Chron.
	2930	1		Ioab and Adoniah are slaine.	2
				Abiathar is deposed.	2
				Salomon marrieth the King of Ægypts daughter.	3
				Salomon prayeth for wisedome.	3	1
				His iudgement concerning the two Harlots.	3
				The peace of the kingdome beeing well ordered.	4	9
	1	2		The fame of Salomons wisedome.	4
	2	3		Hiram greeteth him.	5	2
480	3	4	1	He sendeth him wood to build the Temple.	5
2	4	5	2	Salomon beginning to build the Temple.	6
3	5	6	3
4	6	7	4
	7	8	5
6	8	9	6
7	9	10	7
				A congregation of the Priests and Princes of the people.	8
				The Arke is brought from Sion into the Sanctum Sanctorum.	8	7
				God giueth a signe of his presence.	8
				Salomon blesseth the people.	8	7
				He maketh prayers and Sacrifices.	8
				He consecrateth the house of God.	8
				He celebrateth the feast of Tabernacles.	8
				God confirmeth his promises to Salomon.	9
8	2940	11	1	Now he began to build his owne house.	7
9	1	12	2
10	2	13	3
11	3	14	4
12	4	15	5
13	5	16	6
14	6	17	7
15	7	18	8
16	8	19	9
17	9	20	10
18	2950	21	11
19	1	22	12
20	2	23	13
21	3	24		Salomons pallace was finished.	7	9
22	4	25		Hiram refuseth the cities which Salomon offereth him.	9	8
23	5	26		The Canaanites become tributaries.	9
24	6	27		God will be worshipped after the prescript of his law.	9	9
25	7	28		Salomon sendeth ships to Ophir.	9	9
26	8	29		The Queene of Saba visiteth Salomon.	10
27	9	30		Shee heareth and admireth his wisedome.	10
28	2960	31		Shee giueth and receiueth gifts, and returneth.	10
29	1	32		Salomon is corrupted by his outlandish wiues.	11

Apoſtaſie.	World.	Iuda.		Iſrae.			King. 1.	Chron. 2.
						He falleth into Idolatrie.	11
	30		2	33		Ahia foreſheweth the diuiſion of his kingdome.	11
	31		3	34		And that Ieroboam ſhalbe King of tenne tribes.	11	13
	32		4	35		Salomon ſeeketh Ieroboams life.	11
	33		5	36		Ieroboam abideth in Ægypt till the death of Salomon.	11
	34		6	37		Salomons writings. Prouerbs. Eccleſiaſtes.
	35		7	38
	36		8	39
	37		9	40		Salomon dieth.	11	9
	2970					Roboam by his anſwer alienateth tenne tribes.	12	10
		1		1		Whereupon Ieroboam is the firſt King of Iſrael.	12
						Roboam the firſt King of Iuda.	12
						He ſtayeth his preparation for warre by Gods commandement.	12
						Ieroboam fortifieth himſelfe.	12
						He ſetteth vp Idols in Dan and Bethel.	12
						He exileth the Prophets.	12	11
	1	2		2		A man of God threatneth the Altar in Bethel.
	2	3		3		Ieroboams hand withereth and the Altar cleaueth.	13
						The Prophet departing thence, by deceit returneth.	13
						Afterwards departing a Lion deuoureth him.	13
						Ieroboams wife asketh counſell of Ahiah.	13
						He declareth the deſtruction of Ieroboams houſe.	14
		4		4		The Idolatrie of Roboam.	14
	3	5		5		Siſak ſpoileth the Temple and Iudah.	14
	4	6		6		Semeia doth propheſie.	14	11
	5	7		7
	6	8		8
	7	9		9
	8	10		10
	9	11		11
10	2980	12		12
	1	13		13
	2	14		14
	3	15		15
	4	16		16
	5	17		17		Roboam dieth.	14
	6			18		Abiam the ſecond King of Iudah yeares 3.	15	11
	7	2	1			The warre of Abiam with Ieroboam.		13
				19		Abiam dieth.	15
	9			20		Aſa 3. King, yeares 41. in Iudah.
						Ierbooam dieth.	14
				20		Nadab the 2. King of Iſrael, yeares 12.
20	2990	2		21	1	He is wicked after the example of his father.	15
	1	3		22		Nadab is ſlaine by Baaſa.	15
	2	4		2	2	Baaſa the third King of Iſrael, yeares 24.	15
	3	5		3
	4	6		4		The Prophets flowriſh.		15
	5	7		5
	6	8		6
	7	9		7		Ioſaphat is borne.		22
	8	10		8
	9	11		9		Aſa ouercommeth the king of Æthiopia.		14
30	3000	12		10		Aſa reſtoreth true worſhip.		15
	1	13		11		Azarias flowriſheth.		15
	2	14		12
	3	15		13
	4	16		14
	5	17		15		Baaſa ſinneth like Ieroboam.	16
	6	18		16		A like death is denounced againſt him.	16	10
	7	19		17		He oppugneth Iudah for reſtoring religion.	15	16
	8	20		18		Hanon is put in priſon.		16
	9	21		19		The league of Aſa with the Syrians.
40	3010	22		20
	1	23		21

The

Apoſt. ‡	World.	Iuda.		Iſrael.			King.1.	Chron.2.
	2	24		22		The death of Baaſa.	16
	3	25		23		Ella the fourth king of Iſrael, yeares 2.	16
	4	26		24		He is ſlaine by Zimri.	16
	5	27		1	1	Zimri, Omri, Tibni, Kings of Iſrael, yeares 12.	16
	6	28		2	2	Zimri after ſeauen daies burneth himſelfe.	16
	7	29		3
	8	30		4
	9	31		5
50	3020	32		6		Omri is King alone.
	1	33		7		He buildeth Samariah.	16
	2	34		8
	3	35		9
	4	36		10
	5	37		11
	6	38		12	1	Ahab the 5. King of Iſrael, yeares 22.	16
	7	39			2	In his daies Hiel buildeth Iericho againe.	16
	8	40			3	He is puniſhed.	16
	9	41	1		4	Aſa ſicke of his feete dieth.		16
60	3030		2		5	Ioſaphat the fourth King of Iudah, yeares 25.	22
	1		3		6	Eliah beginneth to propheſie.	17
	2		4		7	Ioſaphat reformeth Iudah.		17
	3		5		8
	4		6		9
	5		7		10	Eliah forewarneth of the famine to come.	17
	6		8		11	The heauens are ſhut by the prayer of Elias. Iames 5.
	7		9		12	The Rauens feede Eliah a whole yeare.	17
	8		10		13	God ſendeth him to Sarepti.	17
						A widdow nouriſheth him two yeares.	17
						Obediah bountifull to the Prophets.	18
	9		11		14	Eliah raiſeth the widdowes child.	18
70	3040		12		15	He goeth to Ahab.	18
						He reprooueth him.	18
						The Prophets meete in Carmel.	18
						Eliah killeth all Baals Prophets.	18
	1		13		16	He fleeth from Ieſebel.	18
						And abideth in a deſert.	18
						And there is nouriſhed by an Angel.	18
						The faſting of Eliah in Horeb.	19
						God appeareth to him before the caue.	19
						He is charged to annoint Elizeus, Hazael, and Iehu.	19
						Elizeus is called to ſucceed Elias.	19
	2		14		17	The King of Syria inuadeth Iſrael.	20
	3		15		18	Ahab vanquiſheth him in two battels.	20
						Ahab honoureth him yeelding.	20
	4	16		19		Ahab his wicked league with the Syrian.	20
	5	17	1	20	1	Ahab beeing denied Naboth his vineyard is ſicke.	21
						Ieſebel giueth him hope to get it.	21
						Naboth is ſtoned.	21
						Deſtruction is denounced to Ahab and his poſteritie.	21
						Ahab repenteth.	21
						Thereupon the puniſhment is deferred.	21
						Ioſaphat maketh peace with Ahab.	22
	6	18	2	21	2/1	They aske counſell of the Prophets.	22
						Michaiah is caſt into priſon.	22
						Ioram is left his fathers deputie.	22
						Ahaſiah the 8. King of Iſrael, yeares 2.
	7	19	3	22	2	Ahab changing his apparell is ſlaine.	22
	8	20	4		3	The ſhipwracke of Ioſaphat in Aſion-gaber.	22	20
						Ioſaphat doth aſſociate himſelfe with Ahaſiah.		20
						Hereupon he is reprooued by the Prophet.	King.2.
						The Moabites rebell.	1
						It raineth fire.	1
						The wickedneſſe of Ahaſiah.	1
						His death is foretold by Eliah.	1
						He dieth of a fall.	1

Ioram

Apoſtaſie.	World.	Iuda.		Iſrael.			King.2.	Chron.2.
						Ioram is the 9. King of Iſrael, yeares 12.
	9	21			4	Eliah deuideth Iordane with his cloake.	2	21
						The taking vp of Eliah.	2
						Elizeus likewiſe deuideth Iordane.	2
						He healeth the waters of Iericho.	2
						He curſed the children which mocked him.	2
80	3050	22	1		5	The Moabites rebell againſt Ahab.	3
						The ſecond election of Ioram at Iudah.	3	20
						Elizeus giueth their hoaſt water.	3
						Victorie is promiſed to Ahab.	3
						A curſe is decreed againſt Moab.	3
	1	23	2		6	The Prophet encreaſeth the widdowes oyle.	4
						The Sunamitiſh woman is Elizeus hoſteſſe.	4
						Of barren ſhee is made fruitefull.	4
						Her child beeing dead is raiſed againe.	4
						The bitter pottage is made ſweete.	4
						He feedeth a 100. with 20. loaues.	4
						Naaman is cleanſed from his leproſie.	5
						Gehezi taketh gifts vnknowne to Elizeus.	5
						He and his poſteritie are puniſhed with leproſie.	5
						The head of the hatchet ſwimmeth.	6
	2	24	3		7	The treaſons of the Syrians are detected.	6
						The fierie charets defend Elizeus.	6
	3	25	4		8	Elizeus deceiueth, taketh, and ſuppeth the Enemie.	6
						A great famine in Samaria beeing beſieged.	6
						A ſuddaine abundance is foretold.	7
						The Syrians hearing a noyſe flee.	7
						The Lepers declare this to the Iſraelites.	7
						The famine is helped by the tents of the Syrians.	7
						A famine of ſeauen yeares is foretold.	8
						Ioſaphat dieth.		21
	4		5		9	Ioram killeth his brethren.		21
	5		6		10	The Edomites rebell.	8
	6		7		11
	7	1	8		12	Ahaſiah King of Iudah one yeare.	8
						Hazael is called to be King.	8
						Elizeus propheſieth againſt Ioram.		21
						Iudeah is ſpoiled.		21
						Ioram dieth of a diſeaſe in his bowels.	8	21
						Ahaziah viſiteth Elizeus beeing ſicke.	8
						Iehu King of Iſrael yeares 28.	10
	8		1	1		He conſpireth againſt Ioram.	9
	9		2	2		He killeth Ahaziah, Iezebel, and Ioram.	9
90	3060		3	3		He killeth the poſteritie of Ahab.	10
	1		4	4		His deede is commended by Eliah.	10
	2		5	5		He ſlayeth the kinred of Ahaſiah.	10
	3		6	6		He taketh away Baal and his Prieſts.	10
						Athaliah getteth the kingdome, and holdeth it ſixe yeares.	11	22
						Shee deſtroyeth the Kings ſtocke.	11
						Ioas is preſerued.	11
	4	1		7		Ioas King of Iudah 40. yeares.	11
	5	2		8		Iehoida killeth Athaliah.	11	23
	6	3		9		He reſtoreth the true worſhip of God.	11
	7	4		10
	8	5		11		Iehu continueth in the ſinnes of Ieroboam.	11
	9	6		12		Therefore God puniſheth him.	11
100	3070	7		13
	1	8		14
	2	9		15
	3	10		16
	4	11		17
	5	12		18
	6	13		19

The

Apost.	World.	Iuda.		Israel.			King. 2.	Chron. 2.	Ionas.
	7	14		20
	8	15		21
	9	16		22		Amasias is borne.	14
110	3080	17		23
	1	18		24
	2	19		25
	3	20		26
	4	21		27
	5	22		28		Ioas repaireth the Temple.	12
	6	23			1	Ioachas King of Iſrael, yeares 17.	13
	7	24			2	The Syrians vexe his kingdome.	13
	8	25			3
	9	26			4
120	3090	27			5
	1	28			6
	2	29			7	Iehoida high Prieſt, died beeing yeares 130.		24
	3	30			8
	4	31			9	Ioas falling away ſuffereth the worſhip of Idols.		24
	5	32			10
	6	33			11
	7	34			12
	8	35			13
	9	36			14
130	3100	37		1	15	Ioas King of Iſrael, yeares 16.	13
	1	38		2	16	He viſiteth Elizeus beeing ſicke.	13
	2	39		1	17	His ſeruants kill him.		24
	3		1	2		Zacharias is ſlaine in the Temple.		24
	4	40	2	3		Amaſiah King of Iudah, yeares 29.	14
	5		3	4		He embraceth the worſhip of God.	14
	6		4	5		Elizeus dieth.	13
	7		5	6		A dead ſouldier touching the bones of Elizeus reuiueth.	13
	8		6	7
	9		7	8
140	3110		8	9
	1		9	10
	2		10	11
	3		11	12
	4		12	13
	5		13	14
	6		14	15		Ieroboam the 13. King of Iſrael, yeares 41.	14
	7		15	16	1	Amaſiah is proud hauing conquered the Edomites.	14
	8		16		2	He is ouercome by the Iſraelites, and fined.	14
	9		17		3
150	3120		18		4	Ionas fleeth from God to Tarſhiſh.			1
	1		19		5	A Whale deuoureth him.			1
	2		20		6	There he prayeth to God.			1
	3		21		7	The Whale caſteth him vp.			2
	4		22		8	Ionas then beeing ſent, preacheth to the Niniuites.			2
	5		23		9	The Niniuites beleeue and repent.			3
	6		24		10	Ionas is angrie becauſe the Niniuites are ſpared.			3
	7		25		11	And againe, for the gourd that withered.			3
	8		26		12
	9		27		13	Vzzias is borne.
160	3130		28		14	Amaſiah is ſlaine by his ſubiects in Lachiſh.	14
	1		29		15
	2	1			16	The kingdome of Iudah is a Democratie, yeares 11.	14
	3	2			17
	4	3			18
	5	4			19
	6	5			20
	7	6			21
	8	7			22
	9	8			23
170	3140	9			24

	1	10			25
	2	11			26
	3		1		27	Vzzias is King of Iudah yeares 52.	15
	4		2		28	Zachariah is Vzzias counſeller.		26
	5		3		29
	6		4		30					Amos
	7		5		31	Amos doth foretell the famine and earthquake.				1.7
	8		6		32	The deſtruction of other countries.				1
	9		7		33	The deſtruction and captiuity of both nations.				2.3
180	3150		8		34
	1		9		35	To the ſtubborne deſtruction is denounced.				4.7
	2		10		36	The aboliſhing of Ieroboams family.				5.6
	3		11		37	Amos is accuſed of conſpiracie.				7
	4		12		38	Amaziah prouideth for his departure.				7
	5		13		39	The deſtruction of Amaziahs houſe is foretolde.				7
	6		14		40	Types of Iſraels ſubuerſion.				8.9
	7		15		41
	8		16	1		The Iſraelites haue Kings not choſen by God, yeares 22.
	9		17	2
190	3160		18	3
	1		19	4
	2		20	5						Oſea
	3		21	6
	4		22	7
	5		23	8		Oſeas ſheweth Iſrael of their idolatry.				1.2
	6		24	9		The ſubuerſion of the Iſraelites is foretolde.				3
	7		25	10		Iudah is taught that ſhee be not like Iſrael.				4
	8		26	11		Their deſtruction is menaced for their wickednes.				6.7
	9		27	12		The elect being conuerted, ſhall embrace Chriſt.				11
200	3170		28	13		The Iſraelites are recalled from their ſinnes.				12
	1		29	14		A remnant ſhall be ſaued.				13
	2		30	15						Iſaias.
	3		31	16		Iſaias reprooueth the back-ſliding of Iſrael.				1
	4		32	17		An exhortation to repentance.				1
	5		33	18		The kingdome of Chriſt, and the idolatry of the people.				2
	6		34	19		The pride of women.				3
	7		35	20
	8		36	21
	9		37	22
210	3180		38	1	1	Zacharias King of Iſrael 6. moneths, and dieth.	15
						Shallum King of Iſrael 1. moneth, and dieth.	15
	1		39		1	Manahen King of Iſrael yeares 10.	15
	2		40		2
	3		41		3
	4		42		4
	5		43		5
	6		44		6	Vzziah getteth the prieſthood.	15	26
	7		45		7	The Prieſts reſiſt him.	15	26
	8		46		8	He is excluded the company of men for a leper.	15	26
	9		47		9					5
220	3190		48		10	The Parable of the Vine.				5 Ioel
	1		49			The famine in Iewrie.				1
	2		50			The drouth and famine.				2
	3		51	1		A publike faſt is commanded.				2.3
						Bleſſing through Chriſt is promiſed.
	4		52	2	1	Pekaiah King of Iſrael 2. yeares.	15
	5	1			2	Pekah King of Iſrael 20. yeares.	15
	6	2			3	Iothan King of Iudah 16. yeares.		27
	7	3			4	Iſaias is confirmed in a viſion.			6
	8	4			5	The ſtubbornnes of the people is foretolde.			6
	9	5			6	Michah denounceth the deſtruction of both kingdomes.				Mich. 1.
230	3200	6			7	The wickedneſſe of the people is reprooued.				1.2.3.4.
	1	7			8	The comfort of the Church.				5.6.7.
	2	8			9

Apoſt.		World.	Iuda.		Iſrael.			Kin 2.	Chr. 2.	Iſaias.
		3	9			10
		4	10			11
		5	11			12
		6	12			13
		7	13			14
		8	14			15
		9	15			16	Achas King of Iudah, yeares 16.	16
The	240	3210	16	1		17	The expedition of Syria, and Iſrael againſt Iudeah.	16		7
yeares of		1		2		18	Achas and his people faint.			7
Eſaias 65		2		3		19	They heare a promiſe of deliuerance.			7
cap.7.							Achas is bidden to aske a ſigne.			7
1							Chriſt is promiſed.			7
							The deſtruction of Syriah and Samariah is fore-tolde.			7
							Ayd is asked of the Aſſyrians.	16
							Syria is inuaded, and the King is ſlaine.	16
							A patterne of the Altar of Damaſcus.	16
							The deſtruction of Iudeah is fore-tolde.			7
							Likewiſe of Samariah, Syriah, and Iudeah.			8,9
							The conſolation of the godly.			11
							The deſtruction of Babylon.			13
		3		4	1	20	Pekah is ſlaine by Oſeah.	16
		4		5	2		Oſeah is King of Iſrael.
5		5		6	3
		6		7	4
		7		8	5
		8		9	6
		9		10	7
10	250	3220		11	8
		1		12	9
		2		13	1		Hoſheah becommeth tributary to the Aſſyrians.	17
		3		14	2		He denieth to pay the tribute, looking for aid from Egypt.	17
		4		15	3
		5	1	16	4		Hezechiah King of Iudah, yeares 29.	18	29
		6	2		5		He reſtoreth the true worſhip of God.	18
		7	3		6		The braſen Serpent is broken.	18
							The deſtruction of Babylon is fore-tolde.			13
							And likewiſe of many other nations.			20
							The captiuity into Babylon is fore-tolde.			21
							Iudeah ſhalbe waſted by the Aſſyrians.			22
							The deſtruction of Tyre within 70. yeares.			23
							The conſeruation of a remnant.			24
							The vaſtation of Iſrael.			28
							Safety is promiſed to the Iewes.			28
							Deſtruction by the Babylonians denounced.			29
		8	4		7		Salmaneſer beſiegeth Samariah.	17
		9	5		8
20	260	3230	6		9		Hoſhea is ſlaine, and Samariah taken.	17
		1	7		Aſſyr.		He and all the people are brought to Aſſyria.	17
		2	8				New inhabitants are ſent from Aſſyria.	17
		3	9				Lyons deſtroy them.	17
		4	10				Their new religions in Samaria.	17
		5	11				Sargon, that is, Senacherib, doth beſiege Aſotus.			20
		6	12				Senacharib commeth vp into the cities of Iudah.	18
		7	13				Hezekiah appeaſeth him with a preſent.	18
		8	14				Senacharib doth not ſtand to promiſe.	18
							His Embaſſadours inuade Iudah.	18
							Their blaſphemie.	18
							They exhort the people to rebellion.	18		37
							Iſaias comforteth Hezekiah.	19
							In the tents of the Aſſyrians are ſlaine 185000.	19
							Aſerhaddon ſucceedeth Senacherib.	19
							Hezekiah is ſicke.	20		38
							His life is prolonged for 15. yeares.	20
							His recouery is ratified by a ſigne.	20
		9	15				He recieueth rewards of Berodach.	20

He

30	270	3240	16		He sheweth his treasures to the Embassadours.	20		39
		1	17		And is reprehended by Isaiah.	20
		2	18		He dieth, and Manasses his sonne reigneth.	20
		3	19		The Simeonites take fields from the sonnes of Chamus.
		4	20
		5	21
		6	22
		7	23
		8	24
		9	25
40	280	3250	26
		1	27		Deliuerance of the captiuity is promised by the meanes of Cyrus.			45
		2	28
		3	29	1	Deliuerance by the Messias.			49
		4		2
		5		3	Manasses King of Iudah, yeares 55.		33
		6		4	Destruction of his house and kingdome.	21
		7		5	He is carried away into Babylon.	21	33
		8		6	Repenting, he is restored to his throne.		33
		9		7	He restoreth the true worship of God in part.		33
50	290	3260		8
		1		9
		2		10
		3		11
		4		12
		5		13
		6		14
		7		15
		8		16
		9		17
60	300	3720		18
		1		19
		2		20
		3		21
		4		22
65		5		23
		6		24
		7		25
		8		26
		9		27
	310	3280		28
		1		29
		2		30
		3		31
		4		32
		5		33
		6		34
		7		35
		8		36
		9		37
	320	3290		38
		1		39
		2		40
		3		41
		4		42
		5		43
		6		44
		7		45
		8		46
		9		47
	330	3300		48
		1		49
		2		50
		3		51
		4		52

Apoſt.		World.	Iuda.	Aſſyr.			Kin.2.	Chr.2.	Ier.	Zeph.
		5		53
		6		54
		7	1	55		Ammon a wicked King ſucceedeth yeares 2.	22	33
		8
	1	9	2	1		Ioſias is King yeares 31.	22
	340	3310		2		Nebuchadnezzars firſt beginning.
		1		3
		2		4
		3		5
		4		6
		5		7
		6		8		Ioſias ſeeketh after God.		34
		7		9
		8		10
		9		11
Ezechiel years 40.	350	3320		12		The reformation of Iudah.		34
		1		13		The calling of Ieremiah.			1
1		2		14		He is confirmed with ſignes and promiſes.			1
		3		15		A recitall of Gods benefits.			2
		4		16		Mercy is offered vnto the Iewes.			2
				17		For their ſtubbornnes they are puniſhed.			2
						The wickedneſſe of all degrees is deciphered in the ſimilitude of the ſiſters.			3
						Iudgement for their ſinnes is fore-tolde.			4
						Ieremie lamenteth for his people.			9
						He warneth all men to lament.			9
						The idolatry of the people is reprooued.			10
						The Law of God is to be expounded to the people.			11
						The deſtruction of the Iewes is denounced.			12
						The expoſtulation of the Prophet.			15
						The iuſtice of God againſt the Iewes.			18
						The deſtruction of the Iewes is prophecied.
						The promiſe of the kingdome of Chriſt.
		5		18		The inſtauration of the Temple is commanded.	22	34
		6		19		Hilkiah findeth the booke of the law.	22
		7		20		Ioſias is aſtoniſhed at the reading thereof.	22
		8		21		He receiueth the ſentence of the deſtruction of Iudea.	22
		9		22		Idols and ſtewes are aboliſhed.	23
10	360	3330		23		The altar of Ieroboam is throwne downe.	23
		1		24		The deſtruction of the Idumeans is denounced.				Obed. 1.
		2		25		Ieremie fore-telleth the ouerthrow of Iudea.			19
		3		26		Paſſur putteth him into priſon.			20
		4		27		The captiuity of Paſſur and his houſe is denounced.
		5		28
		6		29		Ioſias warre raſhly vndertaken againſt the Egyptians.	23	35
		7		30		He is ſlaine in Megiddo.	23
		8		31		The lamentations of Ieremie.		35
						Ioachas is King 3. moneths.	23	36
		9		1		He is led away into Egypt, and there dieth.	23
						Ioachim is made King by Neco, yeares 11.	23
						An exhortation to repentance.			26
						Iudgement againſt thoſe which refuſe.			26
						Hereupon Ieremie is taken.			26
						Ahikam defendeth him from danger.			26
						Ioachim killeth Vriah.			26
						Ieremie is put to ſilence.			26
				2		The rule of Nebuchadnezzar ouer the nations is foretold.			27
						Ieremie perſwadeth to yeeld.			27
20	270	3340				The deſtruction of the King is fore-tolde.			27
		1		3		Ieremie is commanded to write his propheſies in a booke.			36
		2		4	1	He fore-telleth the 70. yeares of captiuity.			25
						The anger of God againſt the nations is declared.			46
						He inditeth his propheſies to Baruc.			36
						Baruc being afraid, is comforted.			45

Apoſt.		World.	Iuda.	Aſſyr.		Kin.2.	Chr.2.	Ier.		Ezec.
					The booke is read before the King and the people.			36
					The King cutteth the booke and burneth it.			36
					Ieremie being ſought for is hidden.			36
					He is bidden againe to write the propheſie.			36
					Ioachim is made tributary to Nebuchadnezzar, and dieth.	24		36
					The example of the Recabites.			35	Dan.
		3	5	2	Daniel with his fellowes are brought into Babilon.				1
		4	6	3	They are taught the learning of the Chaldeans 3. yeares.				1
		5	7	4	They will not eate the kings meate.				1
		6	8	5	Daniel and his fellowes are brought before the King.				1
		7	9	6	Nebuchadnezzar forgetteth his dreame.				2
		8	10	7	The Chaldeans are commanded to expound it.				2
					They not being able to expound it, are ſlaine.				2
					Daniel telleth it and expoundeth it.				2
					He is honoured by the King.				2
		9	11	8	Ioakim is taken by Nebuchadnezzar.			22
					He is bound and carried away, to Babilon.		36
					He dieth in his iourney, and is left vnburied.			22
					Ioachim was King one moneth.
					They conſent to Ieremie who perſwadeth to yeeld.	24
					He, Ezechiel, and Mordecai are carried away captiue.
30	380	3350	1	9	Zidkias king of Iudah, yeares 11.	24
		1	2	10	Ieremy comforteth the captiues.			29
		2	3	11	The fauour of God is promiſed to Ioachim being baniſhed.			24
					The deſtruction of Zidkias is denounced.			24
		3	4	12	Hananiah reſiſteth Ieremy.			28
					He dieth the ſame yeare.			28
					Zidkias is conſtrained to goe to Babylon.		36
					The booke of the deſtruction of Babylon is ſent thither by Seraiah.			51
		4	5	13	The viſion of Ezechiel.					1
					He is commaunded to eate the booke.					3
					He is confirmed by another viſion.					3
					The ſiege of Ieruſalem is pourtrayed in a brick.					4
					The deſtruction of it is ſigned by haires.					5
					The deſolation of the Land is fore-tolde.					6
					He foreſheweth the griefe of the godly.					6
					The ſudden deſtruction of Iſrael.					7
		5	6	14	The idolatry of Iſrael is declared in a viſion.					8
					They that ſhall be ſaued are marked with the letter Tau.					9
					The captiuity of Zidkias and his followers is denounced.					12
					A Sermon againſt falſe Prophets.					13
					The parable of the vine.					15
					The promiſe of Chriſt.					17
					The wicked prouerb is confuted.					18
					A ſerious exhortation to repentance.					18
					A lamentation is preſcribed for the Iewes.					19
		6	7	15	A puniſhment for their ſinnes is fore-tolde.					20
					Comfort for the penitent.					20
					The deſtruction of Zidkias is fore-ſhewen.					21
					The kingdome is to be reſtored by Chriſt.					21
					The deſtruction of the Ammonites by the Chaldes.					21
					Iudgement is giuen againſt Hieruſalem.					22
					The ſiſters Ahala, and Aholiba.					23
		7	8	16
					The parable of a ſeething potte.					24
		8	9	17	Ezechiels wife dying, is not to be lamented.					24
					The word of the Lord againſt Ammon.					25
					Zidkiah denying the tribute, the city is beſieged.			39
					He asketh counſell of the Prophet.			21
					Peſtilence, famine, and ruine is threatned.			21
					Ieremiah perſwadeth to yeeld.			21
					He is bidden to pray for the ſafetie of the people.			37
		9	10	18	Zidkias ioyneth himſelfe to the Egyptians.			37
					The ſiege is raiſed for a time.			37

The yeares of captiuity 70.

										Dan.	Eze.	Hest.
						Ieremiah buyeth a field in Anathoth.			32
						The restitution of the commonwealth is promised.			32
						Ieremiah fleeing, is taken and cast into prison.			37
						The plague and famine inuade the city.
						The word of the Lord against Pharaoh.					29
						Ebedmelec deliuereth Ieremiah.			38
						The iudgement against Iudeah is repeated.			38
40						Zidkiah prepareth to flee.			39
						In his flight he falleth into his enemies hands.			39
The	390	3360	11	19		Hierusalem is taken.	25	36
yeares of		1		20		Zidkiahs sonnes are slaine before his eyes.			39
captiui-		2		21		His owne eyes are put out, and he is brought to Babel.			39
ty,70.		3		22		He dieth in prison.			39
						Nabuzardan returning, burneth the city. 4.d.	25	36	52
						The Temple is burnt.			39
						Nabuzardan carrieth away 832. Iewes.			39
						Ieremiah is suffered to tarry in his countrey.			39
						Godoliah is slaine by Ismael.			41
						Jochanan putteth Ismael to flight.			41
						The Israelites passe into Egypt.			42
						Ieremiah disswading them, is taken away.
						A lamentation for Pharaoh.					32
						Of the duty of Pastours.					33
						Against Pastours that feed themselues.					34
						A promise of deliuerance by the Messias.					34
						The word of the Lord against mount Seir.					35
						Comfort on the mountaines of Israel.					36
						The drie bones are made aliue.					37
						Two sticks are vnited in the hand of the Prophet.					37
						The word of the Lord against Gog, and Magog.					39
						The men of Tyre reioyce for the desolation of Ierusalem.					26
						Their destruction is therefore threatned.					26
						Ieremiah fore-telleth the ouerthrow of diuers nations.			51
	4	4		23		Nabuzardan carrieth 745. Iewes to Babylon.			52
						Nabuchadnezar commands his Image to be worshipped.				3
						Daniel his fellowes obey not.				3
						They are cast into the hot furnace.				3
		5		24		They being not hurt, are called out by the King.				3
		6		25
		7		26
		8		27
		9		28
	10	3370		29
		1		30
		2		31
		3		32		A vision of the restauration of the city and temple.					40
		4		33	1	Astiages King of the Medes yeares 35.
		5		34		The destruction of the Egyptians by the Babylonians.					29
		6		35	2	Assuerus deposeth Vasti.						1
		7		36	3	Nabuchadnezzar groweth proud.				4
		8		37	4	He is astonished with the dreame of cutting down the tree.				4
					5	The Chaldeans cannot expound it, but Daniel doth.				4
		9		38	6	Nebuchadnezzar is to be thrust out among beasts.				4
	20	3380		39	7	Hester is Queene of Persia.						2
		2		41
		3		42		Nebuchadnezzar acknowledging God is restored.				4
		4		43		He proclaimeth the benefits of God.				4
		5		1		Euilmerodach is King of Babylon yeares 29.
		6		2		Ieconias is freed after 37. yeares.	25		52
		7		3		Hamans tyrannie against the Iewes.						3
		8		4		The fast of Hester.						4
		9		5		Mordocheus is brought forth and honoured.						5
	30	3390		6	17	Haman is hanged.						7
		1		7		The feast of Purim.						9
		2		8

Darius

	Captiuitie.	World.	Captai.	Bab.	Medes.		Daniel.	Ezra.	Chron. 2
		3	9
		4	10
		5	11
		6	12
		7	13
		8	14
		9	15
	40	3400	16		27
		1	17
		2	18
		3	19
		4	20
		5	21
		6	22
		7	23
		8	24		35
		9	25		1	Darius Medus.24.
	50	3410	26
		1	27		2	The viſion of the foure beaſts.	7
		2	28			The foure kingdomes that ſhould rule ouer Iudea.	7
		3	29			Antiochus Epiph. will ouerthrow all the other.	7
		4	1			Beltaſhar King of Babylon, yeares 17.
		5	2			The viſion of the Ram and the Goat.	8
		6	3			The eſtates of Media, Perſia, and Grecia.	8
		7	4			The miſerie that Antiochus would bring on the Iewes.	8
		8	5			A time is appointed for their comfort.	8
		9	6
	60	3420	7		12
		1	8
		2	9
		3	10
		4	11			Beltaſhar inuiteth his nobles to a banquet.	5
		5	12			He drinkes in the veſſels of Gods houſe.	5
		6	13			He reprocheth God.	5
		7	14			A hand is ſeene writing on the wall.	5
		8	15			Daniel expoundeth the writing.	5
		9	16
From their returne to the full reſtoring of the commõwealth, is about years 80.	70	3430	17		22	The next night he is ſlaine.	5
			Perſians.
					1 23	Cyrus King of Perſia is King of Babel, yeares 7.
	1		1	24		Darius Medus raigneth with Cyrus yeares 2.
						Daniel prayeth for propheticall reuelation.	9
						His prayer and confeſſion.	9
						The reuelation of the comming of Chriſt.	9
						The returne from Babylon is granted by Cyrus.			36
						Zorobabel is the firſt captaine of the voyage.		1
						Ioſhua the high Prieſt goeth with him.		3
						Beeing returned they offer Sacrifice.		3
						The feaſt of Tabernacles is celebrated.		3
						The foundation of the Temple is laid.		4
						The building thereof is hindred.		4
						The kingdome of the Medes is tranſlated to the Perſians.	5
	2		2	25	2 24	Daniel is aduanced by Darius Medus.	6
						The nobles goe about to murder him.	6
						For 30. daies none muſt pray but to the King.	6
						Daniel doth not obey the edict.	6
						He is caſt into the Lyons denne.	6
						He is ſaued, and his accuſers are deuoured.	6
						An edict for the worſhip of God.	6
						Daniel bewaileth the calamitie of the Iewes.	10
	3		3	26		Their eſtate vnder the Perſians, Grecians, and Seleucians.	10
						The wickedneſſe of Antiochus is foreſhewne.	11
						The times of the preſages are ſet downe.	12
						The death of Daniel.	12

Returne.	World.		Persian.			Ezra.
	4	4	27				Haggeus.
	5	5	28
	6	6	29
	7	7	30		Cambises 2. King of the Persians, yeares 7. moneths 5.
	8		1
20	9		2
	2740		3
		1	4
			5
		2	6		Rhesa is borne. Luk. 3.
		3	7		Darius Histaspis 3. King of Persia, yeares. 36.
		4			Their negligence in building the Temple.	5
		5			Hagge exhorteth them to plie the worke.
		6	2		The glorie of the second house is promised.		1
					The promise of good successe.		2
					A promise of Peace, and of the Kingdome of Christ.		2
					Darius renueth the commandement of Cyrus.	6	2
							Zachary.
					Zacharias exhorteth the people to repentance.		1
					A vision concerning the prouidence of God ouer his Church.		2
					The destruction of Babylon is foretold.		5
		7	3		The vniuersall kingdome of Christ in his Church.		6
		8	4		The fasting of the Iewes is reprooued.		7
					A prophesie of the kingdome of Christ.		9
		9	5		Destruction is threatned against the impenitent.		11
	20	3450
					The building of the Temple is hindred.	6
		1	6		Dedication thereof.	6
	30	3460	7		The keeping of the feast of vnleauened bread.	6
	40	3470	16
	50	3480	26
		1	36		Ianna is borne. Luk. 3.
		3		1	Xerxes is the fourth king of the Persians, yeares 21.
	60	3490		3
	70	3500		10
		1		20
		3		21
Weekes.	80	3510
	1	1	1	7	Artaxerxes Longimanus 5. King of Persia, yeares 40.
	2	2			Iuda is borne. Luk. 3.
	3	3	7		Ezra intendeth a iourney to Ierusalem.	7
	4	4			The fast of the people.	8
	5	5			The vessels are put into the Temple.	8
	6	6			The Edicts of the King are published.	8
	7	7			The people are called together in Hierusalem.	10
	1	8			They cleanse themselues from strangers.	10
	2	9			The beginning of the 70. weekes.
	3	3520
	4	1	17
	5	2
	6	3					Nehem.
2	7	4			The miserie of the Iewes is declared to Nehemiah.		1
	1	5	10		He is sent to Ierusalem to reedifie the walles.		2
	2	6			He buildeth walles and streetes.		6
	3	7			Ezra readeth the booke of the law to the people.		8
	4	8			The next day he expoundeth it to the Princes.		8
	5	9			The couenant with God is renewed.		10
	6	3530	27		Ioseph is borne. Luk. 3.
3	7	1
	1	2
	2	3
	3	4					13
	4	5		32	Nehemiah departeth from Babylon.
	5	6

Weeks.		World	Persia.
	6	7		He is cheiftaine among the Iewes.
4	7	8		He correcteth the Sabbath-breakers.
	1	9		The wedding with outlandish women.
	2	3540	37
	3	1
	4	2
	5	3	40
	6	4
5	7	5	1	Darius Nothus yeares 16.
	1	6
	2	7
	3	8
	4	9
	5	3550
	6	1
6	7	2
	1	3
	2	4	10
	3	5
	4	6
	5	7
	6	8
7	7	9
	1	3560		Semei is borne. Luk. 3.
	2	1
	3	2
	4	3	19
	5	4	1	Artaxerxes Mnemon 43.
	6	5
8	7	6
	1	7
	2	8
	3	9
	4	3570
	5	1
	6	2
9	7	3
	1	4	10
	2	5
	3	6
	4	7
	5	8
	6	9
10	7	3580
	1	1
	2	2
	3	3		Matthias is borne. Luk. 3.
	4	4	20
	5	5
	6	6
11	7	7
	1	8
	2	9
	3	3590
	4	1
	5	2
	6	3
12	7	4
	1	5
	2	6
	3	7
	4	8
	5	9
	6	3600
13	7	1

Nehem.	Weeks.		World.	Persi.
13		1	2
13		2	3	30
13		3	4
		4	5
		5	6
		6	7
	14	7	8
		1	9
		2	3610
		3	1
		4	2
		5	3	40
		6	4
	15	7	5
		1	6		Ochus 23
		2	7		1
		3	8
		4	9		Maath is
		5	3620		borne. Luk. 3.
		6	1
	16	7	2
		1	3
		2	4
		3	5
		4	6
		5	7
		6	8
	17	7	9
		1	3630
		2	1
		3	2
		4	3
		5	4
		6	5
	18	7	6
		1	7
		2	8
		3	9		Arses 3.
		4	3640
		5	1
		6	2		Darius Ar-
	19	7	3		samis 6.
		1	4
		2	5
		3	6	1	The Monarchie of Alexander the
		4	7	2	great, yeares 6. Dan. 10.20.
		5	8	3
		6	9	4	Nagge is borne. Luk. 3.
	20	7	3650	5
		1	1	6	Out of the Monarchie of Alexander
		2	2		arose 4. kingdomes: the Syrian, E-
		3	3		gyptian, Asian, and Macedonian,
		4	4		Dan, 11.4.
		5	5
		6	6
	21	7	7
		1	8
		2	9
		3	3660
		4	1
		5	2
		6	3		Esli is borne. Luk. 3.
	22	7	4
		1	5
		2	6

Weekes.		World.
	3	7
	4	8
	5	9
	6	3670
23	7	1
	1	2
	2	3
	3	4
	4	5
	5	6
	6	7
24	7	8
	1	9
	2	3680
	3	1
	4	2
	5	3
	6	4
25	7	5
	1	6
	2	7
	3	8
	4	9
	5	3690	Nahum is borne. Luk.3.
	6	1
26	7	2
	1	3
	2	4
	3	5
	4	6
	5	7
	6	8
27	7	9
	1	3700
	2	1
	3	2
	4	3
	5	4
	6	5
28	7	6
	1	7
	2	8
	3	9
	4	3710
	5	1
	6	2
29	7	3
	1	4
	2	5
	3	6
	4	7
	5	8
	6	9
30	7	3720	Amos is borne. Luk.3.
	1	1
	2	2
	3	3
	4	4
	5	5
	6	6
31	7	7
	1	8
	2	9
	3	3730
	4	1

Weekes.		World.
	5	2
	6	3
32	7	4
	1	5
	2	6
	3	7
	4	8
	5	9
	6	3740
33	7	1
	1	2
	2	3
	3	4	Mattathias is borne. Luk. 3.
	4	5
	5	6
	6	7
34	7	8
	1	9
	2	3750
	3	1
	4	2
	5	3
	6	4
35	7	5
	1	6
	2	7
	3	8
	4	9
	5	3760
	6	1
36	7	2
	1	3
	2	4
	3	5
	4	6
	5	7
	6	8
37	7	9
	1	3770	Ioſeph is borne Luk.3.
	2	1
	3	2
	4	3
	5	4
	6	5
38	7	6
	1	7
	2	8
	3	9
	4	3780
	5	1
	6	2
39	7	3
	1	4
	2	5
	3	6
	4	7
	5	8
	6	9
40	7	3790
	1	1
	2	2
	3	3
	4	4
	5	5
	6	6

Weeks.		World.
41	7	7
	1	8
	2	9
	3	3800		Ianna is borne.Luk.3.
	4	1
	5	2
	6	3
42	7	4
	1	5
	2	6
	3	7
	4	8
	5	9
	6	3810
43	7	1
	1	2
	2	3
	3	4
	4	5
	5	6
	6	7
44	7	8
	1	9
	2	3820
	3	1
	4	2
	5	3		Melchi is borne.Luk.3.
	6	4
45	7	5
	1	6
	2	7
	3	8
	4	9
	5	3830
	6	1
46	7	2
	1	3
	2	4
	3	5
	4	6
	5	7
	6	8
47	7	9
	1	3840
	2	1
	3	2
	4	3
	5	4
	6	5
48	7	6
	1	7
	2	8
	3	9
	4	3850		Leui is borne Luk.3.
	5	1
	6	2
49	7	3
	1	4
	2	5
	3	6
	4	7
	5	8
	6	9
50	7	3860
	1	1
	2	2
	3	3
	4	4
	5	5
	6	6
51	7	7
	1	8
	2	9
	3	3870
	4	1
	5	2
	6	3
52	7	4
	1	5
	2	6
	3	7
	4	8
	5	9
	6	3880
53	7	1		Matthat is borne,Luk. 3.
	1	2
	2	3
	3	4
	4	5
	5	6
	6	7
54	7	8
	1	9
	2	3890
	3	1
	4	2
	5	3
	6	4
55	7	5
	1	6
	2	7
	3	8
	4	9
	5	3900
	6	1
56	7	2
	1	3
	2	4
	3	5
	4	6
	5	7
	6	8
57	7	9
	1	3910
	2	1
	3	2
	4	3
	5	4
	6	5
58	7	6
	1	7
	2	8		Eli is born,Luk.3.
	3	9
	4	3920
	5	1	1	Iulius Cæsar is by the Senate constituted Emperour of Rome. yeares 5.
	6	2	2
59	7	3	3
	1	4	4
	2	5	5
	3	6

Weekes.		World.	Rom.	Christ.		Luke.	Mat.
	4	7	1		Augustus is Emperour yeares 56.
	5	8	2
	6	9	3
60	7	3930	4
	1	1	5
	2	2	6
	3	3	7
	4	4	8
	5	5	9		Herod King of Iudea.
	6	6	10
61	7	7	11		Now was the ſcepter taken away.
	1	8	12
	2	9	13
	3	3940	14
	4	1	15
	5	2	16
	6	3	17
62	7	4	18
	1	5	19
	2	6	20
	3	7	21		Marie the Mother of our Lord is borne.
	4	8	22
	5	9	23
	6	3950	24
63	7	1	25
	1	2	26
	2	3	27
	3	4	28
	4	5	29
	5	6	30
	6	7	31
64	7	8	32
	1	9	33
	2	3960	34
	3	1	35
	4	2	36
	5	3	37
	6	4	38
65	7	5	39
	1	6.	40		The conception of Iohn Baptiſt is reuealed.	1
					Zacharie is dumbe for his incredulitie.	1
					The genealogie of Chriſt.	3.
					The meſſage of the Angell to Marie.	1
					The conception of Chriſt is foretold.	1
					Marie viſiteth Elizabeth.	1
					The conception of Chriſt is reuealed to Elizabeth.	1
					Marie ſingeth a ſong of Thankſgiuing.	1
					Iohn the Baptiſt is borne and Circumciſed.	1
					The ſong of Zacharie.	1
	2	7	41		The conception of Chriſt is reuealed to Ioſeph.		1
				1	Chriſt is borne of the Virgin Marie.	2
					The Angels reueile it to certaine Iewes.	2
					The ioy of the Angels.	2
					The ſhepheards come to Bethleem.	2
					The cirumciſion of Chriſt in Bethleem.	2
					The Wiſemen come being guided by a ſtarre.		2
					They worſhip the child Ieſus.		2
					The purification of Marie.	2
					The preſentation of Chriſt in the Temple.	2
					Simeons teſtimonie of Chriſt.	2
					Anna giueth the like teſtimonie of him.	2	2
					The flight of Chriſt into Egypt.		2
	3	8	42	2	The ſlaughter of the infants in Bethleem.		2
	4	9	43	3	The returne of Chriſt into Nazareth.
	5	3970	44	4

Weekes.		World.	Rom.	Chriſt.		Luke.	Mat.	Mar.	Ioh.
	6	1	45	5	Chriſt is ſtrengthened in the Spirit	2
66	7	2	46	6
	1	3	47	7
	2	4	48	8
	3	5	49	9
	4	6	50	10
	5	7	51	11
	6	8	52	12	The childe Ieſus diſputeth with the Doctors.	2
67	7	9	53	13	He encreaſeth in wiſedome and fauour.	2
	1	3980	54	14
	2	1	55	15
	3	2	56	16	Tyberius emperour yeares 23.
	4	3	1	17
	5	4	2	18
	6	5	3	19
68	7	6	4	20
	1	7	5	21
	2	8	6	22
	3	9	7	23
	4	3990	8	24
	5	1	9	25
	6	2	10	26	The calling of Iohn Baptiſt to preach.	3	3	1
69	7	3	11	27	The ſumme of his preaching.	3	3	1
	1	4	12	28	His food and rayment.		3
	2	5	13	29	Chriſt is baptized in Iordane.	3	3	1
	3	6	14		The reuelation of the whole Trinity.	3	3	1
					Chriſt is tempted in the Deſert.	4	4	1
			15		The teſtimony of Iohn cōcerning Chriſt in the deſert.				1
	4	7		30	His ſecond teſtimony of Chriſt now manifeſted.				1
					The Embaſſage to Iohn from the Councell.				1
					Chriſts returne from the deſert to Iordane.				1
					Iohns third teſtimony of Chriſt.				1
					Two of Iohns Diſciples follow Chriſt.				1
					Andrew bringeth Simon to Chriſt.				1
					The calling of Philip.				1
					Philip calleth Nathaniel.				1
					The marriage in Cana.				2
					Water is turned into wine.				2
					The firſt Paſſeouer.				2
					The purging of the Temple.				2
					The conference of Chriſt with Nicodemus.				3
					Chriſts Diſciples baptize in Iudea.				3
					Iohn baptizeth in AEnon.				3
					The diſputation of Iohns Diſciples.				3
					Iohns laſt teſtimony.				3
					Iohn is caſt into priſon.	3	14	6
					The Phariſes perſecute Chriſt.				4
			16		His departure into Galile through Samaria.				4
					His talke with the woman of Samaria.				4
					He healeth the rulers ſonne.				4
	5	8		31	His preaching in the Synagogues of Galile.		4	1
					Chriſt commeth into his countrey Nazareth.	4	4
					He is deſpiſed of his owne citizens.	4	4	1
					He departeth thence and dwelleth at Capernaum.	4	4	1
					The miraculous catching of fiſh.	5	4	1
					The calling of foure Diſciples.	5	4	1
					The healing of the poſſeſſed.	4
					Peters mother in law is healed.	4	8
					Diuers ſicke are cured.	4
					Chriſt goeth into the deſert.	4		1
					He walketh through all Galile.	4	4	1
					He cleanſeth a Leper.	5		1
					He goeth aſide into the deſert.	5
					He healeth a man of the palſie.	5	9	2
					He calleth Matthew the cuſtomer.	5	9	2

Weekes.	World.	Rom. 2.	Chriſt.		Luke	Mat.	Mar.	Ioh.
				The ſecond Paſſeouer.	6			5
				The lame is healed at the Poole Betheſda.				5
				The Iewes contend with him about the Sabbath.				5
				Chriſt preacheth in Ieruſalem.				5
				His Diſciples pull the eares of corne on the 2. Sabbath.	6	12	2
				His doctrine of the Sabbath.	6	12	2
				The healing of the withered hand.	6	12	3
				The counſell of Herod for the killing of Chriſt.	6	12	3
				He goeth aſide to the ſea of Galile.	6	12	3
				He goeth vp into a mountaine.	6		3
				He chuſeth twelue Diſciples.	6		3
				He commeth downe from the mountaine to the people.	6
				Beeing preſſed with them againe he goeth vp to the mount.		5
				He preacheth from the mount to the people.	6	5
				Being come downe he healeth a Leper.		3
				The Centurions ſeruant is cured in Capernaum.	7	3
				The widdowes ſonne is raiſed at the gate of Naim.	7
				Iohn ſendeth to Chriſt.	7
				Chriſts ſermon, and his teſtimony of Iohn.	7	11
				A harlot being conuerted, annointeth Chriſt.	7	11
				The women miniſter to Chriſt while he preacheth.	8
				Chriſt returneth to Capernaum.		12	3
				By his word he caſteth out diuels.		12	3
				They blaſpheme Chriſt for caſting out diuels.		12
				The ſigne of Ionas is promiſed.		12
				The mother and brethren of Chriſt.		12
				Going forth to the ſea, he vttereth eight Parables.	8	13	4
				He paſſeth ouer to the Gadarens.	8		4
				He rebuketh the ſea, and the windes.	8		4
				He healeth two poſſeſſed with diuels.	8		5
				The hogges of the Gadarens periſh.	8	8	5
				The people receiue him at Genneſareth.	8		5
				He teacheth the multitude by the ſea ſide.			2
				Matthew maketh Chriſt a feaſt.	8	9	2
				A woman is healed of her bloody iſſue.	8	9	2
				The daughter of Iairus is raiſed from death.	8	9	2
				Two blinde men are cured, and one poſſeſſed.		9
				Chriſt is deſpiſed in Nazareth.		13	6
		17		He ſendeth his twelue Diſciples to preach.	9	10	6
				The beheading of Iohn Baptiſt.	9	14
6	9		32	Chriſt goeth to the further ſide of Iordane.	9	14	6
				Herod his opinion of Chriſt.	9	14
				Chriſts Diſciples returne vnto him.	9	14	6
				He goeth to the further ſide of the ſea of Galile.	9
				His ſermon in Capernaum concerning the bread of life.				6
				The third Paſſeouer.
				They take counſell to kill Chriſt.				7
				His Sermon in Galile concerning traditions.		15	7
				He goeth aſide vnto the borders of Tyre and Sydon.		15	7
				The womans daughter of Syropheniſſa is cured.		15	7
				In the way to Decapolis he cureth the dumb and deafe.			7
				Many ſicke are healed in the mountaine.
				He feedeth 4000. with ſeauen loaues.		15	8
				He goeth into the borders of Magdala.		15	8
				The Phariſes aske a ſigne.		15	8
				In Bethſaida the blinde is cured.			8
				The confeſſion of Peter in Ceſarea.	9	16	8
				The transfiguration of Chriſt in mount Tabor.	9	17	9
				The healing of the Lunatike.	9	17	9
				Chriſt teacheth and healeth in Galile.	9	17	9
				The doctrine of his death.	9	17	9
				He payeth tribute in Capernaum	9	17	9
				He checketh the pride of his Diſciples.	9	18	9
				The Samaritanes receiue him not.	9
				He goeth backe into Galile.	9

Weeks.	World.	Rom.	Christ.		Luk.	Mat.	Mar.	Ioh.
				Some offer themselues to be Christs Disciples.	9
				Christ secretly goeth vp to the feast.				7
				He teacheth openly in the middle of the feast.				7
				On the 8. day he preacheth of the water of life.				7
				He deliuereth the Adulteresse.				8
				The Iewes would stone Christ.				8
				The blinde is healed.				9
				His Sermon of the Shepheard.				10
				Iesus confesseth himselfe to be the Messias.				10
				The sending forth of 70. Disciples.	10
				Christ teacheth the multitude in Bethabara.				10
				Beeing come thence, hee propoundeth the Parable of the man which fell among theeues.	10
				Christ goeth aside to pray.	11
				He teacheth a forme of prayer.	11	6
				He driueth out a diuell.	11
				He eateth with a Pharise.	11
				He refuseth the office of a Iudge.	12
				The murther of the Galileans is tolde him.	13
				He healeth the crooked woman.	13
				Herod would kill Christ.	13
				One sicke of the dropsie in a Pharises house is healed.	14
				The Parable of the great Supper.	14
				The Parable of the towar and warre.	14
				Sinners come vnto Christ.	15
				Three Parables are spoken to the Pharises.	15
				The Parable of the vniust steward.	16
				The example of Diues and Lazarus.	16
				To auoid occasions of offence.	17
				Ten Lepers are cured.	17
				He vttereth two Parables.	18
		18		He returneth into the borders of Iudea.		19
				The reformation of diuorcement.	18	19	10
				The blessing of little children.	18	19	10
				Lazarus falleth sicke.				11
	4000		33	Christ beeing sent for, doth not presently come.				11
				A Prince of the Iewes is reprehended.	18	19	10
				The workemen in the vineyard.		20	10
				Christ foretelleth his passion.		20	10
				The sonnes of Zebede are rebuked.	18	20	10
				The blinde man by the way is healed.	18
				Christ inuiteth himselfe to Zacheus.	19	20	10
				As he went from Iericho he healeth two blinde.		20	10
				Lazarus is raised from the graue.				11
				Christ goeth into Ephraim.				11
				Returning, he stayeth in Bethania.				11
				Lazarus his sisters prouide a supper.				12
				Marie annointeth Christs feete.				12
				Whereupon Iudas findeth fault.				12
				They come about Christ to see him.				12
				Christs entrance into Hierusalem.	19	21
				The money-changers are cast out of the Temple.	19	21
				He tarrieth all night in Bethania.		21
				Returning to Hierusalem, he curseth the fig-tree.			11
				Againe, he casteth out the money-changers.			11
				At euen againe he goeth out of the city.			11
				As they returne, they see the fig-tree dried vp.			11
				He answereth the Pharises in the Temple.	20	21
				The question concerning the paying tribute.	20	22
				The Sadduces are put downe.	20	22
				The summe of the Law.		22
				Christ whose Sonne he is.		22
				He inueieth against the Scribes and Pharises.		23
				The widdow offers, Christ looking on.	21		12
				The ouerthrow of the Temple and city is foreshewen.	21	24

Weekes.	World.	Rom.	Christ.			Luke	Mat.	Mar.	Ioh.	Act.
					The Parable of the 10. Virgins.		25
					The Sermon of the day of Iudgement.		25
					Iudas bargaineth with the Phariſes.		26
					Chriſt is annointed in the houſe of Simeon.		26
					The Apoſtles grudge at it.		26	14
				1/31	The Diſciples are ſent to prepare the Paſſeouer.	22	26	14
70	7
		1/3		3/12	The Paſſeouer eaten at euen.	22	26	14
				6	The inſtitution of the Lords day.	22	26	14
				7	Chriſt waſheth his Diſciples feet.				13
				8	The traytour is deſigned.	22	26	14	13
					The Apoſtles contend for ſuperiority.	22			13
					Chriſt comforteth his ſorrowfull Diſciples.				13
					He exhorteth them to loue.				13
					Peters deniall is foretolde him.				13
					Chriſt comforteth his Diſciples in the dining chamber.				14
					He exhorteth them to conſtancie vnder the croſſe:				15
					To loue: & he ſhewes the hatred of the world to the Church				16
					The profit of Chriſts departure.				16
					Chriſt his prayer for the Church.				17
				9	Hauing ſung a Pſalme, they goe out into mount Oliuet.	22	26	14	18
					He foreſheweth how the Apoſtles ſhould be offended.	22	26	14	18
				10	Chriſt prayeth in the garden.	22	26	14
					He ſweateth blood.	22	26
				11	Chriſt is taken, his Diſciples flee.	22	26	14	18
				12	He is brought to Annas, and then to Caiphas.	22	26	14	18
				1	Peter denieth him.	22	26	14	18
					They enquire of his Diſciples and his doctrine.
				2	Peters deniall and his repentance.	22	26	14	18
				3	Falſe witneſſes are brought forth.
					Chriſt is condemned by Caiphas of hereſie.		26	14
				4	Chriſt is ſpitted on, buffeted, and mocked.	22	26	14
				6	Chriſt is condemned by the aſſembly.	23	27	15
					After this he is brought to Pilate.
					The deſperate death of Iudas.		27
				7	Chriſt is accuſed of ſedition before Pilate.	23	27	15	18
				8	Herod mocketh him.	23
				9	Barrabas is preferred before Chriſt.	23	27	15	18
					He is ſcourged and condemned to the croſſe.		27	15	19
				10	He is brought to the place of execution.	23	27	15	19
	6			11	Chriſt is crucified.	23	27	15	19
					He prayeth for his enemies.	23	27	15	19
					His garments are deuided.	23	27	15	19
				12	He commendeth his mother to a Diſciple.				19
					The people blaſpheme Chriſt.	23	27	15
				1	The conuerſion of the theefe vpon the croſſe.	23
				2	Darkneſſe is ouer all Iudea.	23	27	15	19
				3	He crieth out being about to yeeld vp the ghoſt.	23	27	15
					The vaile of the Temple is rent.	23	27	15
					The dead ariſing appeare to many.	23	27	15
					Chriſts ſide is pierced with a ſpeare.				19
				4	He is buried without enbalming.	23	27	15	19
					Keepers are ſet about the ſepulchre.		27
					The women come to annoint Chriſt the 1. day of the week.		28	16
					Magdalen ſeeth the ſtone rolled away.	24	28	16	20
					The Angel at the ſepulcher telleth of Chriſts reſurrection.	24	28	16	20
					Peter and Iohn ſee the ſepulchre empty.				20
					Magdalen ſeeth Chriſt in the garden.		28	16	20
					He appeareth to 2. Diſciples as they were going to Emaus.	24
					He commeth in to his Diſciples the dores being ſhut.	24	28	16	20
					He appeareth to his Diſciples being on fiſhing.				21
					He foretelleth Saint Peters death.				21
					The apoſtolicall commiſſion is graunted.		28	16
					He aſcendeth locally into heauen.	24		16		1
					The election of Matthias into the place of Iudas.					1

The

World	Rom.E.	Chriſt.	Paul.		Luke	Mat	Mar	Ioh	Act	Gal.
				The ſending of the Holy Ghoſt.					2
				The iudgement of the miracles of the Holy Ghoſt.					2
				The Sermon of Peter whereby 3000. were conuerted.					3
				Peter healeth the ſame man.
				The ſecond Sermon of Peter whereby 5000 were conuerted.					3
				The perſecution of the Apoſtles begun in Hieruſalem.					4
				The Apoſtles are forbidden to preach Chriſt.					4
				They reioyce for their perſecution.					4
				The puniſhment of Ananias and Saphira.					5
	19			The ſecond perſecution of the Apoſtles.					5
				Peter preacheth before the aſſemblie of the Prieſts.					5
1		34		The election of Deacons.					6
				Stephen his contention with the Iewes.					6
				His defence and Martyrdome.					7
				Saul perſecuteth the Church at Hieruſalem.					8
				Hence all was ſcattered except the Apoſtles.					8
				Saul in the way to Damaſcus is made Paul.					9
				Ananias Baptizeth him at Damaſcus.					9
	20			At Damaſcus he preacheth the Goſpel.					9
2		35	1	Thence he goeth into Arabia.						1
				There he preacheth the ſpace of three yeares.						1
				Philip conuerteth Samaria.					8
				The wickedneſſe of Simon Magus.					8
				The conuerſion of the Ethiopian Eunuch.					8
3	21	36	2	Paul returneth from Arabia to Damaſcus.					9	1
4	22	37	3	He is let downe through the wall in a basket.					9
				He abideth with Peter at Ieruſalem fifteene dayes.					9	1
				Thence through Ceſarea he commeth to Tarſus.					9
				Caligula is Emperour yeares 4.
5	1 23	38	4	Peter healeth AEneas of the palſie.					9
				At Ioppa he raiſeth Tabitha which was dead.					9
6	2	39	5	The viſion and conuerſion of Cornelius.					10
				Peter Baptiſeth him and his familie.					10
7	3	40	6	Peter returneth to Ieruſalem.					11
				He excuſeth himſelfe for Cornelius.					11
				At Antiochia they are firſt called Chriſtians.					11
				Barnabas is ſent to confirme them.					11
				The Goſpel of Saint Matthew is written.					11
				Paul preacheth at Antiochia.					11
8	4	41	7	Agabus foretelleth the famine.					11
				Claudius Emperour yeares 14.
9	1	42	8	Almes ſent to Ieruſalem by the hands of Paul and Barnabas.					11
				Herod killeth Iames the Apoſtle.					12
4010	2	43	9	Peter is caſt into priſon.					12
				He is let out by an Angel.					12
				Paul and Barnabas returne to Antiochia.					12
				Paul is ſet apart to teach the Gentiles.					13
				Sergius Paulus is conuerted.					13
				Elymas the ſorcerer is ſtroken blind.					13
				Pauls Sermon concerning the Adoption of the Gentiles.					13
1	2	44	10	Paul and Barnabas tarrie at Iconium.					14
2	3	45	11	Being driuen from Iconium they come to Lyſtra.					14
				At Lyſtra Paul healeth the lame.					14
				He is ſtoned out and goeth to Derbe.					14
				Being returned he ſtrengtheneth the Diſciples.					14
3	4	46	12	They preach in Perga.					14	2
4	5	47	13	A Councel of the Apoſtles in Ieruſalem.					15
5	6	48	14	There was Paul and Barnabas.					15
				Who were ſent with Letters to the Synode of Antiochia.					15
				Paul reſiſteth Peter to his face.						2
6	7	49	15	Paul and Silas goe through Syria.					15
				He circumciſeth Timothie at Lyſtra.					16
7	8	50	16	At Philippos Paul was beaten with rods.					16
				The viſion of the man of Macedonia.					16
				The conuerſion of Lidia, and driuing out of deuils.					16

World.	Rom. 1.	Chriſt.	Paul.		Act.	Gal.
				The Theſſalonians perſecute Paul.	17
				Areopagita is conuerted at Athens.	17
				Paul goeth to Corinth, where he was a yeare and 6. moneths.	18	Theſſ. 1.
				The praiſe of the Theſſalonians.		1
				Timotheus is ſent vnto them.		3
				The reſurrection is plainely deſcribed.		4
				Curious inquiſition of Chriſts comming.		5
						II.
				Apoſtaſie will bee before the laſt day.		2
				The myſterie of iniquitie begunne in Pauls time.		2
				Which ſhould bee reuealed when the Empire ſhould bee put downe.		2
8	9	51	17	Paul goeth from Corinth to Syria with Aquila and Priſcilla.	18
				At the Paſſeouer he ſaluteth the Church of Ieruſalem.	18
				The diligence of Apollo in teaching.	18
				From Antiochia Paul goeth to Laodicea.	18	Timoth. 1.
						1
				Paul writeth to Timothie from Phrigia.		2
				He preſcribeth a gouernement for the Church.		3
	10	52	18	Paul teacheth two yeares at Epheſus.	19	Cor. 1.
9 4020	11	53	19	His fight with the beaſts there.		15
1	12	54	20	There the Corinthians are warned of contentions, Inceſt, whoring ſtriſe.		2. 5.
				The inſtitution of the Lords Supper is repeated.		11
				The confirmation of the reſurrection.		15
2	13	55	21	Paul goeth from Epheſus to Macedonia.	19
				The 2. to the Corinthians is written from Philippos.
				The Epiſtle to the Romanes is written.
				The 1. of Peter.
				Nero is Emperour 14. yeares.
3	1	56	22	Eutichus is reuiued by Paul.	20
				Paul preacheth to the Elders of Epheſus.	20
				His iourney to Ieruſalem.	21
				Agabus prophecieth.	21
				Paul is held captiue in Ieruſalem.	21
				He is brought before Felix.	23
				His anſwere for himſelfe.	22
				The high Prieſt commandeth him to be ſmitten.	23
				His comfort in Chriſt.	23
				The conſpiracie of the Iewes againſt him.	23
4	2	57	23	Paul is 2. yeares priſoner in Ceſarea.	24
				He appealeth to Ceſar.	25
5	3	58	24	The Epicuriſme of Feſtus.	26
				Paul ſaileth to Rome.	27
				He ſhaketh the viper from his hand.	28
				He healeth the father of Publius.	28
6	4	59	25	Paul teacheth two yeares at Rome.	28
				He writeth to the Galathians, Epheſians, Philippians, Coloſſians, and to Philemon.		Tim. 2.
7	5	60	26	All forſake Paul at Rome.		4
8	6	1	27	He is deliuered from the mouth of the Lyon.		4
4030				He writeth to Titus.
9	8	6		Paul is againe brought afore Nero.		4
4040	14	70	36	He writeth his 1. Epiſtle to Timothie.
			37	He is beheaded.
	Chriſt	Nations	Satan			Reuela.
				A woman about to be brought to bed.		12
				A male childe is borne.		12
				The Dragon practiſeth againſt him.		12
				Michael ouerthroweth the Dragon.		12
4062	95	1	1	Iohn is in the Ile of Pathmos.		1
				The woman fleeth into the deſert.		12
4162	195	100	100	The Churches of Aſia are inſtructed.		2
4262	295	200	200	Satan is bound 1000. yeares.		20

World.	Chriſt.	Nations.	Satan.
4362	395	300	300	Two Prophets preach cloathed in ſackecloth.	11
4462	495	400	400	The beaſt with ſeuen heads perſecuteth the Church and the Prophets.	13
4562	595	500	500
4662	695	600	600	Another beaſt helpeth the firſt beaſt.	13
4762	795	700	700	The ſeales are opened, ſlaughter, famine, plague, &c.	6.7
4862	895	800	860	The horſemen that deſtroy mankind.	9
4962	995	900	900	Chriſt defendeth his Church in deede and word.	14
5062	1095	1000		Iudgement againſt his enemies.	15
5162	1195	1100	1009	Satan is looſed.	20
5262	1295	1200
5322	1355	1260		The 2. Prophet are ſlaine.	11
				The beaſt and the whore are ouercome.	17
				The conqueſt ouer the Dragon and death.	20
				The firſt reſurrection.	20
				The laſt iudgement.	20
				The glorie of the Saints.	21 22

FINIS.

24 DE59

An Alphabeticall Table of the chiefeſt points and Queſtions handled in this Second Volume: the firſt number notes the Page, the ſecond the Columne.

A

ABdias workes are counterfeit,490.2.b.

Abnegation of our ſelues, 62.1.d. 207.1.d.

Abraham when hee was borne,680.2.d.

Abrahams faith what it was, 207.2.c.how he was a publike perſon, 243.2.b. 244.2.c. His ſeede twofold,229.2.b. 241.1.d. whether they were before Chriſt, 245.1.d. The true marke of the child of Abraham,229.2.d.

Acception of perſons is not with God,194.1.d all men ſhould follow God herein,194.2.a wherein we ought not to accept perſons, 194.2.b.

Acceſſaries many wayes, 197.2.d.

Accurſed, what it is,168.1.a. and who are, 168.1.b.

Achan: why the people and his poſteritie were plagued for his ſinne,374.2.b.

Acknowledgement of God aright.264 2.d.

Actions priuate and publike diſtinguiſhed, 441.2.d.

Adam fell by Gods fore-knowledge and decree,613.2.a.the cauſe of it was in man not in God, 606.2.c.reaſons to proue it, 613.2.d. obiections againſt it anſwered, 615.1.d.&c. whether it was neceſſarie and how, 619.2.b.Gods permiſſion of it,606.1.c.

Adoption, whence it ſprings,265.1.c.276.2.a two actions of God in our Adoption,253.1.d. faith is the internall meanes thereof, 254.2.a. Baptiſme the outward meanes, 255.1.d. Excellencie of Adoption, 253.1.d. benefits from it,268.1.b.it giues aſſurance of ſaluation,20.1.d.

How to be aſſured of it, 18.2.d. 20.2.b. 44.1.c.178.2.b. All true profeſſors ought to beleeue it, 253.2.c. Comforts ariſing from it, 253.2.d. Duties from Adoption, 254 1.b. Doubts of Adoption anſwered, 255.2.c.

Adoration, 62.1.c. foure vertues therein, 62.2.a. Adoration deſcribed, 61.1.d. 84.1.c. kindes of it, religious and ciuill, 84.1.c. To what thing Adoration is due, 84.2.b. Religious Adoration due onely to the true God, 84.2.c. Adoration due to Angels, 85.2.a to men, 85.1.b. to Saints departed, 85.2.d. Adoring the vnreaſonable creature vnlawfull, 86.1.a. of Adoration of the Sacrament, 86.1.a. 564.1.b. of Images, 86.1.b.

Adulterie deſcribed, 330.1.b. greatneſſe of this ſinne, 330.1.c. puniſhment of it, 252 1.c.

Adulterous thoughts,468.2.d.

Aethiopian Maſſe falſely aſcribed to Saint Matthew,489.1.c.

Affections naturall muſt be mortified and ruled by the word,176 1.d.

Afflictions muſt not ſeeme ſtrange vnto vs, 289.2.b. we muſt ſuffer it for the trueth, 427.1.d.we muſt liue in affliction by faith, 28 2.c. fiue grounds of comfort in affliction, 29.2.b. Seuen fruits of affliction, 30 2.c.

Agar figured Sina two wayes,298.1.b.

Agar figured Ieruſalem two wayes, 298.1.c.

Aged perſons dutie, 225.2.a.

All taken indefinitely for many,59.1.d. 231 1.c. 624.1.a. 657.2.b. taken collectiuely and diſtributiuely,623.2.c.

All-Saints-day,when made a feaſt,502.1.c.

Alchimiſts cenſured,227.1.d.

Alexanders ambitious practiſe when he left Iudea, 368 1.d. his Monarchie,717.

Allegorie; what it is,297.2.d. how expounded,660 1.a. how vſed, 664.1.a.

Almes: who muſt giue Almes, 143.2.a. who are exempted from giuing, 144.1.a. to whom Almes muſt bee giuen, 144.2.a. Almes muſt be giuen with putting difference, 145.1.d.

How much releefe muſt euery man giue, 145.2.c. of Church Almes. 146.1.b. How many wayes may a man giue Almes, 146.1.d. How Almes giuen become a good worke. 146.2.b. Falſe fruits of Almes in merit and ſatisfaction, 147.1.b. Right fruit of giuing Almes, 147.2.c. motiues to Almesgiuing. 198 1.d. Why men are ſlacke herein, 198.2.b.

Altar: how the Communion Table is called an Altar, 553.1.b.

Alwayes for often or long,657.2.d.

Ambroſe: his counterfeite workes, 495.2.b.

Amendment of life, whereon grounded, 163.2.d.

Anabaptiſts oppugning Magiſtrates anſwered: See Magiſtrates. Oppugning the vocall miniſterie by man anſwered, 380.1.d.

Analogie of faith: what it is. 651.2.d.

Anaſtaſius erronicus,504.2 a.

Anathema what it is, 168.1.a. how the Church vſeth it,168 1.b.

Andreas Cretenſis his forged Orations,502.2.d.

Andrewes Paſſion and Maſſe forged, 489 1.d.

Angels how to be adored, 85.1.a. of the orders of Angels, 602.1.b.
Anger; whether any wayes lawfull, 555.1.c. when it is a vertue, 121.1.c. when it is vicious, 122.1.d. 335.1.d. remedie of vniuſt anger, 123.1.b. 335.1.d. cauſes of vniuſt anger, 124.1.c. fruits of vniuſt anger, 124.1.b.
Anſelmes doubtfull workes, 504.2.d.
Anthropopathie, 656.1.a.
Antichriſt: Fathers doubtfull about him, 587.2.a.
Anticipation, 659.2.d. 678.1.c.
Antiquitie, 599.2.a.
Antiquitie of doctrine approoueable, 486.2.a. Papiſts plead Antiquity in vaine, 231.1.b. 302.1.c. 229.2.d.
Apocrypha bookes excluded the Canon of holy Scripture, 650.2.b. by the fathers, 508.1.a.
Apoſtacie or reuolt in religion is of diuers ſorts, 165.1.c. cauſes of Apoſtacie, 174.2.d. 315.2.a. 463.1.c. fiue degrees of Apoſtacie, 300.1.a.
Apoſtles: their honour and authoritie, 290.1.b. how they differ from ordinarie miniſters, 159.2.b. 180.1.a. 185.1.c. 289.2.d. wherein they had immediate aſſiſtance, 193.2.b. 199.2.d. their doctrine is the immediate word of God, 159.2.c. fiue properties of falſe Apoſtles, 410.1.d.
Apoſtles conſtitutions Apocryphall, 489.1.a.
Apoſtles function ceaſed with them, 159.2.d
Apparell: wherefore it was ordained, 137.2.a. right vſe thereof, 135.1.d. care for apparell muſt be moderate, 135.2.a. New faſhions in apparell cenſured, 136.1.a. & 2.d. Seuen rules of decencie in apparell, 136.1.c. rules for the wearing of Apparell, 137.2.a. how to make a Spirituall vſe of it: 139.1.d. That man ſhould not weare womans apparell, is more then Iudiciall, 136.1.c. 252.1.d. Whether coſtly and gorgious apparell may bee vſed, 134.2.a.
Appeales to Rome how made at the firſt, 583.2.c. 598.2.d. prohibited in England, till Henrie the ſecond, 584.2.a. why made from Councels to the Biſhop of Rome. 599.2.b.
Application of doctrine in preaching, 664.2.d. the kindes thereof, 665.1,a. 668.2.b.
Application is of the nature of iuſtifying faith, 219.1.c. how to apply Chriſt with his benefits, 15.1.d. 164.1.a. 308.2.d. Papiſts ſlander vs herein, 308.2.c.
Apprehenſion of Chriſt by faith wherein it ſtands, 208.1.c. three grounds of it, 208.1.d. Degrees of it, 208.2.d.
Approue: how to approue our workes to God, 370.2.d. Whether we may approue our ſelues, and our works to men, 371.1.a. cautions therein, 371.1.c.
Arabia, where it is, 181.1.a.
Arke; it figured Chriſt, 303.2.d.
Arnobius counterfeit bookes, 492.2.a.
Artaxerxes Longimanus his raigne, 716. and Artaxerxes Muemon, 717.
Aſſuerus is Aſtiages, who maried Heſter; his raigne, 682.2.d. 714.
Athanaſius, his counterfeit workes, 494.1.a. his ſuſpected workes, 494.2.d.
Atheiſme in practiſe, 460.2.b. in iudgement 460.2.d. examination of our ſelues touching thoughts of Atheiſme, 461.2.d. puniſhment of Atheiſts, 461.2.c. Their opinion of fortune confuted, 389.2.d.
Auguſtines forged and ſuſpected workes, 498.2.a.

B

Backe-ſliding in religion condemned, 285.1.b. cauſe of it, 315.2.a.
Baptiſme taken ſixe wayes, 256.1.d. phraſes of Scripture touching Baptiſme explained, 256.2.a. how we put on Chriſt in Baptiſme, 256.2.a. matter of Baptiſme, 256.2.c. Signe of it, 256.2.c. Whether it ſhould bee by dipping or ſprinkling, 256.2.c. Thing ſignified, 257.1.a. Analogie in Baptiſme, 257.1.c. forme of Baptiſme, 257.1.b. what it is to Baptiſe into, or in the name of the Father, &c. 257.2.d. whether it may be adminiſtred in the name of God, or of Chriſt alone, 258.2.a. what it done in Baptiſme, 258.1.a. foure ends of Baptiſme, 258.2.b. It admits into the Church, but makes not true members of Chriſt, 191.2.b. It conferres not the firſt grace, but confirmes it, 204.1.d. Efficacie of Baptiſme, 258.2.c. how farre it extends, 79.2.b. 258.2.c. what Papiſts teach hereof, 259.1.a. whether it aboliſh originall ſinne, 259.2.a. How it confers grace, 269.1.d. Whether it imprint an indeleble Character, 261.1.d. 547.1.b. whether it be neceſſary to ſaluation, 74.1.a. 204.1.c. How the Fathers held it neceſſarie, 547.2.b. How it is neceſſarie, 74.1.b. 261.2.c. how not, 74.1.d. 261.2.d. Popiſh errour about the neceſſitie of Baptiſme, 75.2.a. Whether outward Baptiſme be a true note of the Church, 250.1.a. 302.1.b. who are to be Baptiſed, 263.1.c. Whether children of excommunicate perſons, 264.1.d. 78.1.a. Whether children borne in fornication, 79.1.d. Whether children of Turkes and Iewes, 263.2.d. whether children of profeſſed Papiſts, 263.2.d. whether the children of wicked Chriſtians, 264.1.a. Who may Baptiſe: whether lay perſons, 262.1.c. The miniſters duetie or action in Baptiſ, 262.2.d. whether his intention be neceſſarie, 546.2.d. whether Baptiſme by a wicked man, or an hereticke be true Baptiſme, 262.2.b. and by an vnpreaching miniſter, 262.2.c. how oft it is to be adminiſtred, 264.1.c.

Where it is to bee adminiſtred, 264.1.d. 550.1.a. Vſes of Baptiſme,79.2.c.264.2.a. it bindes to holy life, 311.1.b. Whether ſinne after Baptiſme take away the whole benefit of it, 80.2.b. Markes of inward Baptiſme, 255.2.a. It muſt be laboured for, 256.1.b. How Baptiſme is a ſigne of Adoption,255.1.a.
Baruc held Apocriphall,508.2.d.
Baſils corrupted and counterfeit workes,495 1.c.
Beare-baiting diſallowed.141.2.a.
Beare one anothers burdens: ſee Burdens.
Bede his Martyrologium ſuſpected, 503.2.d.
Before God, the forme of an oath, 184.1.c. vnlawfull in common talke,184.1.c.
Beggers of two ſorts, 144.2.d. luſtie beggers are not to bee releeued, 144.2.d. ſaue in caſe of neceſſitie, 145.1.a. going about to begge diſallowed. 145.1.b. Chriſt liued not by begging,143.2.d.
Beleefe: ſee faith. Whether all be bound to beleeue their redemptiō,625.1.d. The Commandement to beleeue and repent is more generall then the promiſe of mercie, 257.1.d. 608.2.b. why its giuen to all, 608.2.b.
Beleeuers conſidered two wayes, 266.2.d. foure kinds of beleeuers,287.2.b.634.1.a. how true beleeuers are knowne, 247.2.d. 308.2.b. they ſerue God freely, 217.1.c. 276 1.b. Their vnion with Chriſt, 216 2.b. other priuiledges: as free from the curſe of euill, 308.1.b. nothing can hurt them,308.1.b. theirs is Chriſtian libertie, 308.2.b. not ſeruants to the law, 329 2.b. theirs is the inheritance, 244.2.c. They muſt be ſufferers, 226.1.a. Their miſeries many, 226.1.d. They muſt hold the promiſe againſt reaſon,228.2.a. They keepe not a practiſe of ſinne,217.1.b.
Belliſarius his great miſerie,417.2.a.
Beltaſhar his raigne,715.
Bernards ſuſpected and counterfeit workes, 504 2.d.
Bind: power of binding in the Church hath foure degrees, 168.1.a.
Blaſphemers ought to die, 252.1.a.
Bleſſing of God: how obteined, 243.2.d. How temporall bleſſings are to be rightly vſed,228.2.a. how to moderate our affections toward them, 313.1.c. A threefold abuſe of them, 320.2.b.
Blood of Chriſt, how it redeemed vs,238.2.c.
Boaſting lawfull and vnlawfull,342.2.d when lawfull, 193.2.c. 418.1.a. reaſons againſt vaine boaſting, 417 2.c.
Body of Chriſt, threefold in the fathers,562.1.c. how the body troubles the mind,45.2.d
Bondage: whether lawfull among Chriſtians, 267.1.b. the Iewes bondage before Chriſt, 270.1.a. Spirituall bondage ſtands in three things, 304.1.a. the ſigne of it, 306.1.c. grieuouſnes of it,308.1.b.
Bonauentures Pſalter of the Virgin forged, 505.2.c.
Brethren taken ſundry waies in Scripture, 181.2.c.351.2.c.
Brotherhood naturall and ſpirituall, the ground of meeke dealing,350.1.c.
Brotherly kindnes,21.2.d.
Bribes, whether they muſt be reſtored to the giuer,198.1.a.
Bul-bayting, how allowed,141.2.a.
Buls of Indulgences, 589. 1.d. accompted bubbles, by the Popes baſtard,415.2.d.
Burdens of two ſorts,359.2.d.373.1.b.
Burdens which may be borne by others,359.2.d. how we are to beare them,360.1.a.442.1.d. how euery one muſt beare his own burden, 373.1.b. Chriſt hath freed vs from a threefolde burden,375.1.c.
Burgeſſes of heauen, their behauiour,300.2.c.

C

Cæſar of Arles, 503.1.c. Iulius Cæſar made Emperour by the Senate, 719. Auguſtus Cæſar, when and how long, 720. Tyberius Cæſar, when and how long,721.
Calamities, what to doe in common calamities,219.2.a.266.2.a.
Caligula Emperor, when and how long,725.
Calling, euery lawfull calling is of God, 159.1.b. A calling neceſſary to Miniſters, 158.2.d. Miniſters calling extraordinary, and ordinary, 171.1.d. how God cals extraordinarily, 171.2.a. how diſcerned, 171.2.b.
Calling of our Miniſters approoued,172.1.a.b. Three kindes of calling in the Church, 159.2.a. Churches power of calling is miniſteriall, 159.1.b.172.1.b. God ordaines euery man for his calling,177.1.b. how to pleaſe God in our callings,271.2.d.322.1.d. faithfulnes in our calling, 177.1.c.389.2.a. patience in the troubles thereof,177.1.d. aſſurance of Gods protectiō therin,177.1.d. Gods calling twofold,320.1.a. time of Gods calling how long,316.1.a. Gods calling to liberty or grace,320.1.b. parts of it two, 320.1.b. How wee muſt anſwer God calling,180.1.c.
Cambyſes his raigne, 683.2.c.716. he is Artaxerxes,683.2.c.
Canon of the olde Teſtament approoued by the Fathers,508.1.c.
Canon taken two wayes in the Fathers, 509.1.a.
Canonicall houres with the Fathers,525.1.d. with Papiſts,68.2.c. Three abuſes therein,68.1.d.
Captiuity of Iſrael into Aſſyria, when,716. of Iuda into Babylon,714.
Cardinals, 593.2.d. fouly degenerate from their ancient eſtate,594.1.b.
Cares of this world vnbeſeeming Chriſtians, 268.1.c.
Carnall men deſcribed, 341.1.b. two ſorts of carnall men, 348.1.d. How to know whether we be carnall,394.2.c.

Carolus Magnus his bookes againſt the Councell of Nice not counterfeit. 504. 1.a.
Caſſianus bookes iuſtly condemned. 502. 1.a
Catalogue of our ſinnes profitable to bee made. 329.2.c.
Catechiſme deſcribed, 665.1.b. neceſſarie, 295.2.b.
Cathariſts and Puritanes confuted. 348.1.c.
Catholique: This word not in vſe in the Apoſtles dayes. 411.2.a. What is to be accounted Catholique. 486.1.a.
Cenſures raſhly reproued, 202.1.c. Too ſharpe cenſures reproued. 444.1.b.
Ceremoniall law, 251.1.b.
Ceremonies of the Iewes remained indifferent till the deſtruction of the Temple 88.1.c.
How they became impotent and beggarly, 283.2.c. how we are to refuſe ceremonies before the aduerſaries of the truth, 192.2.c.
Ceremonies of ſignification and of order: and how abrogated, 251.1.b.
Chalenges vnlawfull to bee giuen or taken, 120.2.b. 216.1.c.
Change belongs to all earthly things. 185 2.c.
Character indeleble with Papiſts, 261.2.b. not knowen to the Fathers, 547.1.b. How the Fathers take Character. 547.2.c. The true indeleble character. 426.2.d.
Charity in Communicants neceſſary. 82.1.b
Charmes cure not but by diabolical operation. 196.2.b. 261.1.d.
How to know charmes, 332.2.b. Charming is a kind of witchcraft, 332.2.a. ſome vſing charmes are no witches, 333.1.a.
Chaſtitie, how preſerued, 321.1.c.
Childrens ſubiection to Tutors and Gouernours, 269.2.d. Parents muſt diſpoſe of their callings, 269.2.a. they are not puniſhed for their fathers ſinnes, 273.2.b. A child of God two wayes, 253.1.c. in a twofold degree, 294.1.d. Markes of Gods children, 278.2.a. 313.2.d. 279.2.d.
Children of Abraham of two ſorts, 229.2.b. How to be indeed the child of Abraham, 230.1.a.
Chriſme in Baptiſme, when it began, 572. 1.c. how it is ſpoken of by the Fathers, 572.1.d.
Chriſt is God, 52.1.d. 173.2.d. Chriſt made man: See incarnation. The union of his two natures, 273.1.b. when he was borne, 720. his birth held ordinary by ſome Fathers, 513.1.d. he is our Lord fiue wayes. 428.1.a. for two cauſes, 163.1.a.
Hee is the ſtorehouſe of all Gods bleſſings, pag. 143.1.d. pag. 418.1.d. 428. 1.a. the matter of the whole Bible, 179. 2.b. how he was made vnder the law, 273. 2.c. his two-fold obedience, Actiue and Paſſiue, 205.2.a. 273.2.d. whether he fulfilled the law for himſelfe, 274.1.d. His death and ſacrifice was voluntary, 163.1.d. Hee died for all, but not for euery one alike, 621.2.b. He is not reuealed to euery particular man, 640.2.d. we muſt behold Chriſt crucified, 223.1.d. The benefits of it, 223.2.a.
Chriſt is the great Prophet and Doctour of his Church, 172.2.b. Hee ſhewes it three wayes, 172.2.c. He hath neither partner, nor deputie as mediatour, 292.2.d. 509 2.c. The time of Chriſts miniſterie, 683. 2.c. He is not the miniſter of ſin, 211.2.b. How Chriſt as man differs from all other men 273.1.b. 274.2.c. Hard ſpeeches of the Fathers about Chriſt humanity expounded. 513.2.b. Chriſt taken for the Church, 242.2.a. 659.1.a.
Chriſtian deſcribed, 340.2.a. Their duties. 340.2.b. 341.1.c. How men ſhew themſelues Chriſtians 44.2.a. triall 423.1.b, Chronologie, what it is, 678.2.b. parts of it. 678.2.b.
Chryſoſtomes baſtard workes. 497.1.b.
Church on earth hath wicked men in it, 191. 1.c. Viſible Churches ſubiect to Apoſtacie. 287.2.b. 290.2.d. Church conſiſts of teachers and hearers. 380.1.a. Shee is troubled three wayes. 317.1.a. Moſt troubled with vnneceſſarie matters of circumſtance. 426.1.b. Three rules of direction in iudging of the ſtate of a Church, 161.1.b. Infallible markes of the Church, 290.2.d. 302.1.d. of Antiquitie and vniuerſalitie. 302.1.c.
Churches Teſtimonie of Scriptures how to be eſteemed. 171.1.a Shee may giue no commandement different from the word 302.1.d.
How the Chriſtian Church is called barren. 303.1.a. Deſolate. 303.1.b. Gods watchfulneſſe ouer his Church. 317.2.d.
Catholike Church. 598.2.a. tearmed the new Ieruſalē for ſixe cauſes. 300.1.d. How it is aboue in heauen dwelling on earth. 300.2.b. Its one in number onely. 300. 2.d. Its inuiſible. 301.1.a. Shee is a mother. 301.1.b. How to finde this mother Church. 301.1.c. Who bee members of it. 302.2.a. its not a viſible company vnder one viſible head. 301.1.a. 303.1.d. Her two-fold eſtate. 303.1.b. How waſted. 175.1.d. Wherefore God ſuffers it. 175.2.a.
Churches for prayer: of their names, conſecration, adorning. 525.1.a.
Circumciſion, when inſtituted, 687. When neceſſarie: indifferent: vnlawfull. 190.1.a. 309.2.a. it had vſe after it was adminiſtred. 259.1.b. falſe Apoſtles made it meritorious. 311.1.a. 413.2.b.
Circumciſion put for the preheminence of the Iew. 420.1.d.
Claudius Emperor, when and how long. 725.
Cleauing vnto God, 63.1.b.
Clemencie: ſee meekeneſſe.

Clements counterfeits workes,489.1.c.

Clergie in the Fathers, 601.1.c. of their exemption from politique iudgement, 601. 1.d.

Climactericall years not to be obſerued,286. 2.d.406.1.c.

Cock-fighting vnlawfull,141.2.a.

Collections for the poore in the primitiue Church; when and how,286 1.b.

Collections of doctrine.663.1.a.2.c.

Combating vnlawfull,120.1.d.

Combate of fleſh and ſpirit, 326.2.d. meanes of it,327.1.b.cauſe of it,327.1.d. in whom it is,327.2.b.wherein it ſhewes it ſelfe, 327. 2. c.effects of it,328.1.a.

Comfort ſpiritual,how gotten,163.2.d.comfort to the diſtreſſed through want of ſanctification,379 1.d.312.2. b. 329. 2.a. for weake faith, 283. 2. a. and vpon conceit of their vnworthineſſe,248. 1.a.

Commandements twofolde; of obedience; of triall,625.2. b. Commandements negatiue more forcible then affirmatiue,86.2.a the diuiſiō of them in the Fathers,602.2.a.

Communication of properties.656.1.a.

Common-place-bookes,651.1.d.

Communion: ſee Lords Supper. Communion vnder one kinde, 554. 2. c. vnworthy Communicants of two ſorts,82.1.c. Communion table,how called an altar,553.1.b.

Communion betweene Chriſt and vs declared, 242.2.c.265.2.a. how to be aſſured of it,20.1.b.

Concealing of a thing is not a lie, but ſometime lawfull,183 1.d.

Conceſſion,what it betokeneth,659.2.a.

Concupiſcence after Baptiſme is a ſinne,328. 1 b. 364. 2. a. what the Father held about the remainders of concupiſcence, 519.1.c. Papiſts make three degrees of concupiſcence,259.2.d.its ſinne in the firſt motion, 260.1.a.

Conference for vnity approoued, 188. 1. d. Conference betweene miniſter and people neceſſary,195.1.d.a rule of Chriſtian wiſedome in conference,443.1.c.

Confeſſion of faith neceſſary,86.1.d.when it is to be made,86.2.a. Chriſtian confeſſion double,89.2.a.

Confeſſion of ſinnes to God containes three things,14. 1. b. priuate confeſſion, how requiſite,2.1.c.Caueats therein,2.1.d.22.2.c. 667.2. b. Auricular confeſſion when it began,570.2.a.what the Fathers ſay of it,571. 1.a.why it is retained,416.1.c.

Confidence and faith differ,208.1.c.

Confirmation with chriſme and impoſition of hands,how vſed of the Fathers,572.1.d. the originall of it doubtfull,573.2.d.

Conformity with Chriſt twofolde, 272. 1.a. 294 1.b.

Confuting errors in preaching,how,668.2.c.

Conſcience deſcribed,11.1.d. two actions of conſcience, 51. 1. d. Gods word alone bindes conſcience,11.2.b.how mens lawes binde it, 11. 2.c. Queſtions of conſcience decided, 12. 2. a. How a ſanctified conſcience is knowne,19.1.d.pacification of conſcience,306.2.d.How to keepe a good conſcience,16.2.d.How to comfort a troubled conſcience, 22. 1. a. 248. 2. d. inſufficient waies,23.1.d.grounds of true comfort, 24. 1.a.See diſtreſſe of minde.

Conſecrate,what it is,561.2.b.

Conſent prepares the heart to beleeue, 160. 1.d.its no certen mark of the Church,160. 2.a.not of truth, 202.1.a. wherein conſent ſtandeth, 160.1.b. where conſent in religion is to be found, 160.2.c. Catholike conſent of beleeuers in matters of religion is not Scripture,160.2.b.

Conſideration ſpirituall, 478. 2.c. of Gods preſence, 479. 1. c. of Gods Iudgements, 479.2.a. of Gods word,480.1.a. of Gods Workes, 480. 2. a. of our ſelues,356.2. a. 481.1.c.

Conſtancy in good things vrged, 212. 2. a. 315. 1.d. 400. 1. a. how attained for the truth,165.2.a.

Conſtantines donation apocryphal,490.2.d.

Conſubſtantiation more approoued then Tranſubſtantiation,563.1.a.

Contentation in a meane eſtate. 421.1.d. vrged on beleeuers,240.1.c.268.1.c.276.1.a

Contentions,lawfull,335.1.d.Sinfull, 335.2. a,contentions hurtfull in the Church,323. 2.c.they are violent.323.2.b.

Contract of matrimony, whether it may bee diſſolued vpon a contagious, incurable, deadly diſeaſe, 242. 1. b. whether parents may nullifie their childrens cōtracts made without their priuity,269 1.d.

Contrary,God workes by contraries, 28.1.d. 240.1.c.

Conuenience in things indifferent deſcribed, 3.1.b.

Conuerſation,how the conſcience is to be pacified about it,307.1.a.

Conuerſion of a ſinner wrought by degrees, 294.2.b. Its a greater worke then creation, 422.1.d.its of two ſorts, 178.2.b. preparation for conuerſion is by humiliation,177. 2.d.whether violence be offered to the will in conuerſion: ſee will. In conuerſion are fiue degrees of grace,637.1.c.Papiſts confuted about cōuerſion of a ſinner,422.1.c.

Co-operation of faith and workes, wherein, 205.1.d.

Corruption in man is exceeding great,453.2. c.hidden corruptions dangerous, 289. 2.c. comforts to Gods children troubled herewith,326.1 c.How we yeeld to the corruptions of the times,193.1.b.

Couenant, See Teſtament: kindes of couenants,299.1.b. legall and euangelicall,392.2. d. How to ſhew a man to be within the couenant,25.1.c.lawfull couenants muſt bee kept with hereticks,242. 2.d. whether loſſes enſuing may cauſe breach of couenant, 242.1.a.

Councels praiſed by the Fathers,599.2.b.approoued for making peace,324.1.a.aſſembled by Emperours. 599. 2. c. Their decrees differ frō Scripture. 159.2.c. Three conditions in a lawfull Councell. 188. 2.a. Councell of Neocæſaria hath 10. forged Canons.492.2.b.firſt Councell of Nice is corrupted. 493. 2.a. ſecond Councell of Nice is idolatrous. 503.2.d. Councell of Sinueſſa forged.493.2.b.Second Councel of Arles depraued.493. 2. b. Councell of Sardica ſuſpected. 493. 2. d. Councels of Rome vnder Conſtantine and Silueſter altogether counterfeit.494.1.a.Councell of Agatha hath no Canons extant. 503. 1. a. Councell of Trent reiected,and why.188.2.d. why Proteſtants ioyned not therein. 324 1.b.

Counterfeit workes aſcribed to ancient Writers.489 1,a.&c.

Creation deſcribed.606,1.c.

Creepers into the Church.191,2.a.

Criticall daies in ſicknes not to be obſerued. 286.2,d.

Croſſe put for the Goſpel of Chriſt crucified. 318.1,a.for Chriſts Sacrifice on the Croſſ. 418.2.c.motiues to beare the Croſſe. 414. 2,a. Comforts vnder the Croſſe. 280.1 d. Popiſh Croſſes tranſient & materiall. 419. 1.d. how Papiſts glorie in them. 419. 2. a. how the ſigne of the Croſſe was vſed by the Fathers.523.2.a. it was not the ſigne ſhewed to Conſtantine.523,2,a. How miracles were wrought by it.524.1.d.

Croſſes wanted Crucifixes long after Chriſt. 514,2.d.

Crucifying as Chriſts action containes three things.341.1.3.How we are crucified with Chriſt.214.2.d.How to carry our ſelues as men crucified.216.1.b.how we crucifie the fleſh.341.1.d.& 2.a. what it is to be crucified to the world.419.2.b, how the world is crucified to vs.419.2.c.Right vſe of Chriſt crucified.215.1.c.

Curſe of the law declared. 232.1.b. 237.2.d. Euery ſinner is accurſed. 232.2.c. how to eſcape the curſe. 232.2. d. how Chriſt is made a curſe for vs.238.1.a.in what nature 238.1.c,how far forth,238.1.d.How God is ſaid to curſe his creature. 456. 1.d. Curſing by priuate perſons condemned.168. 1,d.

Cyprians falſe and counterfeit workes. 491. 2.d.

Cyril of Ieruſalem,wherein ſuſpected to bee counterfeit.495,1.c.

Cyril of Alexandria, his counterfeit and ſuſpected workes.501.2.c.

Cyrus King of Perſia, his raigne. 683. 1. c. 715.

D

Daies treated of, as naturall, artificiall, 679. 1. b. Diuiſion of naturall and artificiall day.679.1.c.& 2.a. Eaſterne diſtinction of the artificiall day.661.1.d.678.2.d.

Day and night before the ſunne.56.2.d.

Dayes put for Iewiſh Sabbaths.285.1.d.Obſeruation of dayes fourefold. 285.2.a. Obſeruation of dayes as good and bad for buſineſſe,is heatheniſh,285.2.b. 286,2.c. ſee time.

Damaſcenes workes doubted of,504.1.b. his diſtinction of Gods will into antecedent and conſequent examined,624.1.c.

Damaſus his counterfeit workes, 494.2.d. Damaſus Pontificall ſuſpected,497.1.b.

Damnation deſcribed, 232. 1.d. Whether God created men of purpoſe to damne them,612.1.c. Whether any be neceſſarily damned,620.1.c.

Daniel,when brought to Babel, 713. When Daniels weekes begin,682.1.d.716.When they end, 683.

Darius Medus his raigne,683.1.b.715.

Darius Hyſtaſpis his raigne,683.1.c.716. he gaue the edict for the Temple,683.1.c.

Darius Nothus his raigne,683.1.d. 717.

Dauids combat with Goliah vndertaken by extraordinarie inſtinct.120.2.c.

Dauncing mixt of men with women condemned, 141 1.a.

Dead in ſinne, the ſtate of moſt men,375.2.c

Dead to the law, what it meaneth,212.2.b.

Death rightly conſidered of,36.1.b.419.1.a. 482.2.a. preparation to death, 34.1.a. Helpes for comfort in the pangs of death, 36.1.b.

Debate,what it is,335.1.b.

Deceitfulneſſe of ſinne,383.1.d.

Deceiuers of themſelues,368.1.b. two wayes 383.1.c. in matters of ſaluation moſt dangerous,368.2.b. Deceiuers make enuie betweene miniſters and people, 292,2.a. they retaine the names of holy things,abuſing the things,311.1,b.

Decree of God,how it makes things neceſſarie, 619.1.c.

Decretall Epiſtles forged.499.2.d.

Defence by force, whether lawfull, 119.1.d. when, 120.1.b. wherein a iuſt defence ſtands,120.1.c.

Deliuerance in diſtreſſe, why God deferres it,32.2.d.how to comfort the mind in ſuch delay,31.2.c. meditations therein,33.2.b.

Deluſion of the ſenſes by Satan.221.1.c.

Deſertion twofold: of triall, 611.2.a. of puniſhment.611.2.c.

Deſire twofold, 24.1.d. Spirituall deſires diſtinguiſhed from carnall, 278.2.d. Deſires of the Spirit are loud cries, 278.2.d. two ſpeciall examples of theſe deſires,279.1.a.

Deſpaire deſcribed. 22.1.b.how ſuch are to be dealt with, 667.2.b.

Deteſtation of things diſhonourable to God, 247.1.a.

Deuill: hee is good by a generall goodnes, 2.2.c. hee caſts into the minde blaſphemous thoughts, 39 2.a. how to diſcerne them, 39.1.d. wee muſt not adore him.85.2.d.he cannot make raine. 227.1.c. his ſtratagems for mans hurt. 395.1.c. Comforts againſt his moleſtations. 37.1.d.

Deuotion toward the miniſterie for maintenance,greatly wanting.382.1.b.
Dicing vnlawfull.141.2.c.
Difference betweene man and man,is in outward reſpects not in ſpirituall. 266.2.d. 420.2.c.It is of grace not of nature. 174.1.b.
Difference in iudgement ſhould not cauſe diuiſion in affection. 241.1.d. Difference of Iewes and Gentiles.203.2.a. &c.
Digeſt,or Sacred harmonie deſcribed. 678.1.a.
Dioniſius Areopagita,his counterfeit works. 489.2.b.
Diſcontent in religion dangerous. 166.1.c.
Diſgracefull thoughts againſt our brethren. 469.1.b.
Diſtinction of a people and no people. 249.1.d.
Diſtreſſe of minde in generall. 22.1.b. two degrees of it. 22.1.b. Generall remedie for all diſtreſſes. pag.22.2.b. How to ſhew the partie diſtreſſed to bee within the Couenant. 25.1.c. Diſtreſſe of mind ariſing from a diuine temptation. 26.1.d.effects of it.27.1.a.remedy.26.1.c.
Diſtreſſe of mind ariſing from outward afflictions.29.1.c.practiſes for comfort in this diſtreſſe. 29.1.d. meditation for comfort. 29.2.b.
Diſtreſſe of mind frō blaſphemous thoughts 39.1.d.cauſe thereof.39.2.a.Remedie.39.2.c.
Diſtreſſe of minde from ſome ſpeciall ſinnes or ſinne. 41.2.d. cure of the violent diſtreſſe.41.2.d. cure of diſtreſſe for want of grace.43.2.b.cure of diſtreſſe for wants in good things. 44.2.b. in conſcience of our vnworthineſſe.248.1.a.266.1.d.remedie. 266.2.a.
Diſtreſſe of mind ariſing from the body. 45.2.c.
Diſtruſt:mans thought of Diſtruſt in God. 466.1.a. when it moſt aſſaults. 466.2.a. fruits of it.466.2.c.how reſiſted. 467.1.a.
Diuination ſuperſtitious, a kinde of witchcraft.332.2.a.
Diuiſion followes the Goſpell through mans corruption.323.2.a.
Doctrines,how to be gathered.663.1.a.how to bee applyed. 664.2.d. what doctrine muſt be deliuered to the people. 312.1.d. peoples duty towards ſound doctrine.312.2.a.316.1.d.Doubtfull doctrine publikely deliuered muſt be tried.188.1.a. How to iudge of doctrine. 315.2.d.316.2.a. Doctrines and reuelations beſide the word are accurſed. 168.2.d. notes of falſe doctrine. 166.2.d.
Donation of Chriſt to vs. 165.2.b.
Dorotheus of Tyrus, his Synopſis is forged. 494.2.c
Doubtfull things ſhould be taken in the better part. 443.2.b. two cautions herein. 444.2.a.
Doubting of faith,how comforted. 255.2.d.
Drowne, why God drowned the old world. 456.2.d.
Drunkenneſſe deſcribed. 336.1.d. Diſſwaſiues from it.336.2.b.effects of it.336.2.c. Arguments for it anſwered. 336.2.d.

E

Eare:what the piercing of it ſignifies,211.1.a.
Earth-quake,Gods worke. 282.2.c. what vſe we ſhould make of it.282.c.d.
Eate to the Lord,how.132.1.b.
Election deſcribed.607.1.c. two acts in that decree.607.1.c. firſt act. 607.2.d. ſecond act. 608.1.b. fiue degrees in this ſecond act.608.1.c.Gods election is free.203.2.b. Its not vpon foreſeene faith or workes. 176.2.d.304.1.d.631.2.b. Its the ground of all ſauing gifts.283.1.b.610.1.d.how we hold,that certen and few are choſen. 611.2.d.
Election is double.235.2.d.aſſurance of election.21.2.b.c.177.1.a.
Eleuation of the Sacrament why vſed. 564.1.c.
Ellipſis,wherefore vſed.658.1.b.
Ember weeke faſts when inſtituted.544.1.c.
Empire how tranſlated from the Grecians. 592.1.c.
Emulation twofold,good and euill. 335.1.b.
Emulation in religion allowed.175.2.d.
Enemies,priuate and publike.65.2.b.publike Enemies of two ſorts.65.2.c.
Enmitie,whether it be a ſinne.334.2.b.what it is.334.2.d.remedie of it. 335.1.a. Its perpetuall betweene true beleeuers and hypocrites,304.2.c.
Enuie,what it doth.292.1.d. Its compounded of carnall griefe and hatred.335.2.d. how to eſchew it.335.2.d.
Ephrems workes not extant in Syriake.494.2.d.
Epicuriſme.460.2.c.
Epiſtle to the Galatians,the largeſt that Paul writ with his owne hand.408.2.a. The author of the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes doubted of.430.2.a.
Epiſtle of the firſt Councell of Nice to Silueſter,counterfeit.493.2.a.
Equitie:Chriſtian equitie deſcribed.436.1.d. Neceſſitie of it. 436.1.b. kinds of it. 426.2.d.publike equitie handled.427.1.a. priuate equitie deſcribed. 442.1.b. foure duties in priuate equitie. 442.1.d. firſt bearing with naturall infirmities.442.1.d. 2. Taking doubtfull things in the better part. 443.2.b. 3. Yeelding of our right. 444.2.d. 4. Forbearing and forgiuing wrongs.445.2.d.
Motiues to practiſe Chriſtian equitie. 1. From Gods dealing with vs. 448.1.d. 2. From his preſence with vs.452.1.b.

Equiuocation in an oth maintained by Papiſts,602.1.a.
Erre: excellent men may erre. 199.2.d.
Errors can hardly be diſcried by their beginning,191.2.a.how to diſcerne them, 316.1.a.
Eſteeme, how to eſteeme of men,194.1.b.
Euangeliſts, how they differ,648.2.b.
Eucherius his counterfeit workes, 501.2.d.
Eue knew not whether the ſerpents could ſpeake,57.2.b.
Euill-Merodach king of Babell his raigne, 714.
Euodius forged workes,501.1.d.
Euſebius taxed for making Peter Biſhop of Rome,25 yeares,195.2.d. his Eccleſiaſticall hiſtorie commended, 492.2.c. his Chronicle corrupted, 493.2.c.
Euſebius Emiſenus homilies, not his,503.1.a.
Examination of our ſelues by that law, 245.2.d.
Example: euill example muſt be taken away, 316.2.b. its contagious, 201.2.c.203.1.a. force of examples,663.2.a.
Excommunication: whether parties excommunicate be members of Chriſt, 78.1.d. who muſt be excommunicate, 317.2.b. whether children of excommunicate perſons haue right to baptiſme,78.1.a. Three iudgements vpon the excommunicate, 78.1.b.

F

Faining or ſembling is not lying: and how lawfull,183.2.a.200.1.d. when vnlawfull, 200.1.a.
Fainting twofold, 399.2.c. faint thoughts, 472.1.d.
Faith taken two waies,224.1.b.228.2.d. faith for the doctrine of the Goſpell, 224.1.b. 249.1.c. for true religion,21.2.c.
Faith iuſtifying deſcribed,63,1.b.208.1.b.
Forme of faith not loue, 227.1.d. 313.2.b. but affiance or application, 219.1.c. 313.2.b. how faith Iuſtifyeth,309.2.d.228.2.d. 236.2.d. Alone,210.1.a.210.1.d.
Its neceſſarie to ſaluation, 15.1.b. how it ſaues, 210.2.b. two things in ſauing faith, 15.1.b. caſes of conſcience touching ſauing faith, 15.1.d. how it is required in the law and in the Goſpell, 236.2.b. when it breeds in the heart,15.2.b.255.1.a. how it is conceiued,255.1.b. Three degrees in faith,185.2.d. rareneſſe of true faith,209.2.b. How true faith may be knowne, 82.1.d.236.2.a. Faith, weake and ſtrong, 208.2.d.254.2.d. how we attaine ſtrong faith, 209.1.c. how faith is preſerued, 186.2.d. great vſe of faith, 244.2.c. 313.2.d. it brings a ſpeciall certentie of Gods mercie,312.2.c.538.2.a. 538.2.a. grounds of particular faith,208.2.b.263.1.b.
Three acts in a particular faith,254.2.a. obiections of Papiſts againſt ſpeciall faith anſwered, 254.2.b. prouocations to get faith,244.2.c. how the fathers ſpeake of faith to iuſtifie, 536.2.d. how faith is renued at the Lords Supper,83.1.c. Satans malice againſt our faith,185.1.d.222.1.a. whether faith may be loſt,185.2.d. true faith cannot, 186.1.a.632.1.c. See fall.
Our dutie in regard of our faith, 186.2.d. 209.2.b.313.2.d. The common faith of the world, 209.2.a.230.1.b. falſe faith, how diſcerned,215.2.d,230.1.b.255.1.d. 314.2.a.339.2.a. A generall faith ſufficient to obtaine a miraculous cure,207.2.d.
Faith with Papiſts what it is, 207.2.b. its a poore faith,209.2.a. how it iuſtifieth with them,209.2.c.227.2.d. Implicite faith a blinde faith, 223.2.a.
Faith towards men, 339.2.b. its rare, 339.2.c.
Faithfull ones ſhould vnite themſelues, 404.1.a. how preached vnto,667.1.c.
Fall of man: See Adams fall, grounds of anſwer to blind queſtions about the fall,248.1.a.
Falling from God in profeſſion eaſie, 227.1.d. kinds of falling,667.2.a.
how they that are fallen ought to be dealt with in the preaching of the word, 667.2.a.
Fals after conuerſion may bee recouered by repentance, 227.1.a.293.2.d. Its dangerous to fall from grace in part, 295.2.d.
Euery ſinne is not a falling from grace, 253.2.b. the child of God cannot wholly fall from grace,217.1.b.311.2.b.400.1.c. 632.1.c. Obiections anſwered, 635.1.d. and 636.
Falſification of authors by Papiſts, 492.1.c.
Family of loue knowne by their opinions, 403.2.b. they abuſe the Scripture in allegories,298.2.d.
Faſt: what a religious faſt is, 102.1.a. how it is to be obſerued, 102.1.c. iuſt cauſes of a faſt, 102.1.c. how long it muſt continue, 102.2.d. of eating during the faſt, 103.1.a. whether all perſons be bound to keepe a ſolemne faſt,103.1.c.
Right ends of a religious faſt, 103.1.d.
Popiſh falſe ends, 104.2.d. whether Popiſh faſts bee approoued of God, 104.1.a. of the ſet faſts in our Church, 104.1.d. faſting on the Sabbath allowed,490.2.d.
of faſting in Lent, Ember-weekes and Eues,542.1.d.
Fathers of the Church: their authoritie and manner of writing,486.2.d. how their writings are to be receiued,487.1.c.
They ſpeake ſometimes vnfitly in Sacred matters, and why,487.2.b. Their counterfeit doubtfull and corrupted workes,489.1.a. They haue their errours,488.2.c.
Faults of others, when and how to be ſpoken of, 149.1.b. leſſening of mens owne faults ordinarie,316.1.c.

Fauour of God how obtained, 13.2.d. 44.1.c.
Fauſtus Rhegienſis condemned by Gelaſius, 502.1.a.
Feare: 3.kinds of feare,201.2.a.natural feare is good, 201.2.d. how it becomes euill, 201.1.d. Feare of God a great part of his worſhip,62.2.b.it ſtands in two things,62.2.b.114.1.d.
Feaſtiuall daies,597.1.a.&c.
Felicitie in this life,290.2.a.
Feeling followes faith,83.2.b.
Fellowſhip with God giues aſſurance of ſaluation,2.0.1.a.foure ſure notes of this fellowſhip,2.1.b.
Filiation naturall and legall,661.2.c.
Fines ſhould be moderate,440.1.b.
Flatterers are lyers,183.1.c.
Fleſh not allowed for meate before the flood, 129.1.d. whether fleſh may bee eaten with good conſcience on times forbidden,130.1.c.Cautions to be obſerued thereabout, 130.1.d.
Fleſh taken for outward things pertaining to the outward man, 224.1.c. Fleſh put for the corruption of all the powers of the ſoule,320.1.d.326.1.d.and 2.d. 341.1.a.it ſignifies more then ſenſuality.334 1.a.it is contrariety to the ſpirit,327.1.d.how they can fight,326.2.d.
Fooles to the world: and to God, 395.1.b. moſt men are fooles in religion, 221.2.a. naturall fooles ought not to bee kept to laugh at, 141.1.d.why impenitent ſinners are called fooles,215.1.a.why Paul called the Galatians fooles,220.2.a. whether we may call another foole, 221.1.a.
For,doth not alwaies ſignifie a cauſe,392.2.a.
Force:whether we may defend our ſelues by force,119.2.d.and when,120.1.b.
Foreknowledge in God: how it goes before his will;and how after. 164.1.d. 230.1.c. 628.1.b.It is ioyned with his will, 230.2.a it is not in reſpect of our faith,176.1.d.
Forfeitures of bondes,how to be moderated, 439.1.b.Forfeitures of leaſes,439 1.b.
Forgiueneſſe of three ſorts,82.2.b.Fourefold,118.1.c. we muſt forgiue thoſe that wrong vs,445.2.d.two cautions in this duty,446.1.d.
Fornication a manifeſt worke of the fleſh, and not indifferent, 330.1.d. motiues to flie it, 331.1.a.
Forſake all,in 3 caſes,127.1.c.
Francis epiſtle to the brethren, forged, 505.2.b.
Freely taken two wayes,219.2.d.
Free ſeruing of God vnder the Goſpel, 252.2.b.307.1.a.
Freedome in good things fourefold,307.1.c.
Freers doe dreame about Chriſts ſufferings, 239.2.a.

G

Galatia: what the Churches of Galatia are, 161.2.a.the principall argument of the Epiſtle to the Galatians,164.2.c. 220.2.b.
Games vſed for recreation of three ſorts, 141.2.b.games of wit allowed, 141.2.b. games of meere hazard condemned, 141.2.c. Mixed games in ſome ſort allowed, 142.1.a.gaming for gaine, vnlawfull.142.2.b.
Gelaſius booke of two natures,counterfeit, 502.2.c.
Gelinar prince of Vandals his miſerie, 417.2.a.
Generation of infants ſhewed, 294.2.b.
Geneſis,647.2.a.
Gentilize:what it is.202.2.d.
Gentleneſſe deſcribed,339.1.a.
Gifts of God of two ſorts, 100.1.b. made ours two waies,43.2.d. the more we haue the more ſeruiceable wee ſhould be to others,349.1.b.
Glaſſe of the Trinitie,a fiction,530.2.a.
Glorie:to glorie comprehends 3.things,416.2.b. wherein we may and ought to glorie, 419.1.a.
Wherein we ought not to glorie,416.2.d. vnlawfull glorying declared, 418.1.d. it may be done three waies,418.2.a. How to glorie in God, 371.2.c.d. of glorying in our ſelues,371.2.c.cautions,372.1.b. How it differs from vaine glorie,371.2.d.
Degrees of glory in heauen,387.1.d. the ground hereof,392.1.b.
How to glorifie God in his workes, 187.1.a.
Gluttonie deſcribed,336.1.d.
God:proofes that there is a God, from the light of nature, 49.1.b. from the ſoule of man,51.1.c.from the common confeſſion of all,51.2.b.by an aſſertorie oath,51.2.c. from the light of grace, 52.2.c. from the light of glorie, 53.1.b. Men by nature denie God,459.2.a.How,459.2.d.falſe gods ſet vp two waies: 281.1.d. How the true God is made an Idol in worſhip, 84.1.d. How God is to be conceiued in our minds when we worſhip him,61.1.c.
